1986 Alumni Medallions awarded to Smiths, Kale

Three people who have been active in the publishing field will receive the Alumni Medallion from the Society of Alumni during Homecoming weekend Nov. 14-15.

Recipients include Willard Sanders "Bill" Smith '44, his wife, Jane Spencer Smith, '48, both of Richmond; and W. Wilford Kale Jr. '66 of Williamsburg.

The Smiths were in the advertising and retail sales business in Detroit until 1982 when they moved to Richmond where Smith is associate publisher and editor of Travelhost, a weekly travel magazine, while Jane Smith works for the magazine as associate publisher/sales service.

Kale is senior bureau chief and senior writer for the Williamsburg bureau of the Richmond Times-Dispatch. He is also the author of two books: Hark Upon the Gale, an illustrated history of the College of William and Mary, published in 1985; and Private Homes in Williamsburg . . . Today, first published in 1964 and reprinted in 1967 and 1972.

Both the Smiths and Kale have invested many years in supporting and promoting their alma mater. In 1979-80 the Smiths became the first husband-and-wife team to co-chair the William and Mary Fund. Kale has served as marshal of the Homecoming Parade since 1972, helping that event grow into one of the premier homecoming parades in the country.

The Smiths have been involved in a number of activities in service to their alma mater. They organized the annual Sandy Kelly Tennis Tournament held each year at Homecoming, helped organize Old Dominion Day for alumni in Detroit and were instrumental in forming the Michigan/Northern Ohio alumni chapter of which Bill Smith was president. The Smiths have also served as hosts to William and Mary faculty, administrators and students visiting Detroit and have assisted the admissions office in recruiting prospective students, including minority students, in the Detroit area.

The parents of four children, three of whom attended William and Mary, Bill and Jane Smith have been a husband-and-wife team in business and in community service. Smith began his professional career in advertising in New York in 1949. Soon after, the couple moved to Detroit where Smith started his own advertising firm of Smith, Paklaian, Bell, Inc. From 1954 to 1967, he was with Willard S. Smith Associated Advertising, followed by Baker and Smith, Inc., Advertising and Public Relations. In 1973 the Smiths founded Mr. Tennis, a retail/mail-order business.

A reporter and bureau chief for the Richmond Times-Dispatch since 1971, Kale has served his alma mater in a variety of ways. In addition to his 350-page illustrated history of the College, he is the author of more than a dozen historical articles on William and Mary.

He has served as chapter adviser to the Society of Collegiate Journalists at William and Mary, as chairman of the College's publications council and as a class agent for the William and Mary Fund.

In 1985 Kale was elected to the national board of the Society for Professional Journalists (SPJ). He has served as a journalist-in-residence at a dozen or more college and university campuses. He served as national president of the Society of College Journalists from 1979 to 1981 and has been a member of its National Council since 1977. He has also held a number of offices including president of the Richmond Professional Chapter of the SPJ.

Kale is a member of the board of the Alumni Association of Park College from which he received his B.A. degree in 1971.

The Alumni Medallion, given for service and loyalty to William and Mary, is the highest honor bestowed by the Society of the Alumni. This year's presentations bring to 183 the number of medallions that have been given in the society's nearly 150 years of existence.

HAIR opens Nov. 14 in PBK

HAIR the popular rock musical of the '60s that had everyone singing "The Age of Aquarius," will be presented by the William and Mary Theatre at 8:15 p.m. Nov. 14-15 and Nov. 21-22 and at 2 p.m. Nov. 16 and 23 in Phi Beta Kappa Memorial Hall. For tickets and information, call the theatre box office at ext. 4272, 1-6 p.m. daily.

Director Leslie Muchmore, is treating HAIR as a period piece. "It's a bit of American history," he says. "The play symbolizes the bizarre counter-culture, the public show, the flamboyant crust. It has a lot to say about being antiwar, about black civil rights, various kinds of establishment repression and the generation gap."

And while "dropping out" was a popular way to describe the reaction to these social uprisings, Muchmore says HAIR doesn't suggest that that is the ultimate answer.

The play was simply meant to be a commercial success, not a political statement about the Vietnam war, says Muchmore. There have been many interpretations of the play since it was first performed in 1968.

"It definitely is a change of pace for William and Mary theatre," he says. "Notoriety, merited or not, goes with the title, and I thought students could get excited about it because of its mythological implications," he says, referring to "Aquarius," a hit tune from the show. The large cast size allows for wide student participation. Music will be provided by an eight-piece band.

The play contains no real character development or story line; rather, it is a collage of themes bound together with rock music. Muchmore says it's a "create-your-own-hippie" style show, and students have been given a fair amount of latitude with costumes. While students weren't expected to use their own wardrobes for costuming, the shorter skirts and big belts and earrings for women are as much in fashion now as they were 20 years ago.

Cast members include Kacey Camp, a senior from Yorktown, as Sheila; Doug Huszti, a junior from Sweet Briar, as

Tabor's book on Paul added to Judaism series

By Wendy Sacket
Editorial Assistant

What is a book about an early Christian leader doing in a prestigious series on studies in Judaism? James D. Tabor, assistant professor of religion, has some definite ideas about how his recently published study of Paul earned this unique distinction.

Tabor's book, Things Unutterable: Paul's Ascent to Paradise in Its Greco-Roman, Judaic, and Early Christian Contexts (Lanham, Md.: University Press of America, 1986) is the latest volume in the series Studies in Judaism, edited at Brown University by Jacob Neusner.

The book focuses on two verses from II Corinthians 12, in which Paul gives a cryptic account of a "journey to heaven." Tabor chose this passage because it provides an entrance into Paul's world and its ancient Jewish, early Christian and Greco-Roman contexts.

In trying to decode the passage, Tabor looked at other texts of the period that report similar experiences in order "to get a hold on the vocabulary and to try to re-create that world." By doing this, Tabor was able to explore Paul's thought and his mission as it might have been seen and understood in the first century. This historical rather than theological approach distinguishes Tabor's book from other 20th-century works on Paul.

One of the big debates that the book addresses is whether Paul was more Jewish or more Hellenistic. Tabor argues for a new interpretation, showing Paul as fully Jewish and trained in that religion, but recognizing "that the very Judaism he learned was already Hellenized for about three hundred years. . . . Paul's religion is his form or understanding of Judaism. Later Christianity is understood as a separate religion, but in the first century the two are the same. If you understand Paul correctly he's advocating an interpretation of Judaism given the validity of Jesus as the Messiah."

Tabor believes the book was accepted in the series "mainly because I do adhere to the idea of understanding Paul in his context, and Paul is certainly a Jew." He admits that this perspective is somewhat uncommon, "therefore it's the only book in the series on a Christian and probably will remain so."

Tabor's larger interest is to investigate how the idea of salvation arose in

Careers Day

Representatives from graduate and professional schools will be in Trinkle Hall of the Campus Center from 1 to 4 p.m., Wednesday, Nov. 12 to talk with students and other interested individuals as part of Graduate and Professional School Day, sponsored by the Office of Career Services.

All students, regardless of academic status, are encouraged to use this occasion to obtain first-hand information about the institutions represented.

Further information may be obtained from the Office of Career Services, ext. 4604.

Law school representatives will present a panel discussion at 8 p.m., Tuesday, Nov. 11 in Morton 341.

the West. In earlier periods of Western history "there was more of a notion that the gods would bless people with good health and prosperity here and now in this life." During the Hellenistic period, salvation came to mean "escaping your mortality and in some way getting out of the world or seeing the world fundamentally transformed. There was always a picture of existence somehow beyond what we experience now, and all religions began to talk like that. . . . I'm trying to document that change," says Tabor.

Tabor feels that it is important to understand the transformation of thought caused by this concept of salvation. By placing the concept of salvation in its historic context, it is possible to avoid reading our modern conceptions back into the past, he explains, since "in the modern world, people have tried to interpret those religions, especially Christianity and Judaism, as pertaining more to this world."

Service held for Mrs. Dorothy Moss

Mrs. Dorothy Moss, 86, died Tuesday, Oct. 28 in Williamsburg Community Hospital.

Mrs. Moss, a resident of Williamsburg since 1937, was the wife of W. Warner Moss Jr., John Marshall Professor of Government and Citizenship emeritus. She was born in Burton-on-Trent, England, and was a member of Bruton Parish Church.

A funeral service was held Thursday at 2 p.m. in the Wren Chapel with the Rev. Ronald Fitts of Bruton Parish Church officiating.

Burial was in Cedar Grove Cemetery.

In addition to her husband, Mrs. Moss is survived by one daughter, Miss Anne Paxton Moss of Alexandria; two sons, W. Warner Moss III, Wellesley, Mass., and Richard Knight Moss, Nicasio, Calif.; a sister, Mrs. Horace Walden, Rockport, Mass.; a niece, Mrs. Barbara Walker, Minneapolis, Minn.; six grandchildren and one great-grandchild.

Free mums

The chrysanthemums currently located in College flower beds will be collected and given away by the buildings and grounds department between 11 a.m. and 2 p.m., Nov. 6-7.

The distribution site will be next to the Campus Police Station.

Interested students, staff and faculty should bring suitable containers to carry the plants.

VTA gives Palmer service award

Richard Palmer, professor of theatre and speech and director of the William and Mary Theatre, received the Virginia Theatre Association's 1986 Distinguished Service Award at the annual meeting of the association in Staunton, Oct. 26.

Richard Palmer

Palmer, who has just completed a two-year term as president of VTA, was cited for contributions to the growth of theatre in Virginia.

During his presidency, VTA worked as a lobbying group to have the certification of drama teachers, removed several years ago, reinstated. The group has also been working to have a fine arts credit included in the requirements for high school graduation.

During Palmer's tenure the organization held a theatre festival for high schools and began to improve the quality and quantity of information about theatre in Virginia available to high school students. The plan, said Palmer, was initiated to help stem the flow of Virginia students going out of state for theatre training.

For several years Palmer has been the VTA representative to the Southeastern Theatre Conference, a 10-state organization.

The program at the Staunton conference included a performance by William and Mary students of "God's Children," an experimental production on rural black America, which was presented on campus in October.

Shakespeare Festival ends season in black

The 1986 Virginia Shakespeare Festival ended its fiscal year with an estimated surplus of over $20,000, according to Richard Palmer, festival general manager.

Preliminary total income for the 1986 festival was $203,738, while expenses were $183,306, said Palmer. He said he intends to use the surplus as a contingency fund.

Palmer gave much of the credit for the festival's bright financial picture to a substantial rise in gifts and contributions. In 1985 the festival received $45,500 from individuals and corporations; this year the total was $83,000. Of that total, Philip Morris contributed $15,000 (not counting $18,000 that was used to fund performances at the company's manufacturing plant in Richmond), and CSX Corporation gave $10,000.

The festival also performed better than projected in ticket sales. Palmer had predicted an income of $78,000 from ticket sales; the actual figure was $88,000.

The rise in ticket sales revenues accompanied a 5 percent rise in total attendance, from 13,661 in 1985 to 14,217 in 1986. Total attendance was still below the 1981 record of 16,295.

Palmer said the end-of-the-season surplus signals a "significant turnaround" for the festival. "It means stability for this organization," he said. "It means that we can operate without a deficit."

He stressed, however, that this year's figures don't eliminate the need for significant gifts and grants from corporations and individuals. "We can never live off the box office receipts entirely and continue to provide quality productions," Palmer said. "Regional theatres across the country require an average of one-third of their income from contributions and grants."

A major priority of the festival next year will be to bolster the artistic side of the productions, according to Palmer. He and artistic director Leslie Muchmore are negotiating with Actors' Equity on "a letter of agreement" that would allow the festival to employ Equity actors at pre-arranged salaries with the understanding that over time, the festival would eventually pay Equity members in its productions the current wage scale.

"In 1986 we maintained the same level of artistic expenditures and cut back on the support areas," Palmer said. "Next year we want to be able to maintain our current support expenditures and increase the artistic areas."

Palmer said the current state of affairs bodes well for the festival as it enters its 10th season, perhaps in a better position financially than ever before. "What we've found is what Shakespeare festivals across the country have found — that it takes a number of years to establish a firm footing," he said. "Our experience hasn't been unusual in that sense."

Debaters win in Boone, Boston

Debaters are back from a winning weekend. The team of Douglas Clarke and Sayoko Blodgett-Ford won the Appalachian State Tournament in Boone, N.C., and Lora Forester and Therese Tracy won the novice division at the Suffolk University tournament in Boston, Mass.

This is the second straight win for Forester and Tracy who were also winners at the U.S. Military Academy tournament at West Point. They were 6-0 in the preliminaries, beat Cornell in the semifinals and Marist College in the final.

In the varsity division in Boston, Rod Satterwhite and Lorette Chaney were 4-2 in the preliminaries. They beat Columbia in the quarterfinals, Yale in the semifinals and lost on a split decision to Cornell in the final round. Satterwhite was named second-place speaker.

At Boone Clarke and Blodgett-Ford were 6-0 in the preliminaries and top seed in the final round of 16. They beat Clemson in the octofinals, Richmond B in the quarterfinals, Richmond A in the semifinals and Duke in the final.

Ron Westfall and Joe Howard were 5-1 in the preliminaries and seeded third going into the final rounds. They lost in the octofinal round to David Lipscomb
