Charter Day: College to honor Baliles, Burger

Virginia Gov. Gerald L. Baliles will receive an honorary degree, and retired Chief Justice Warren E. Burger will be installed as Chancellor during the College of William and Mary's annual Charter Day, Saturday, Feb. 7.

The ceremony will include the formal investiture of Burger as the 20th Chancellor of the College and the awarding of an honorary Doctor of Laws degree to Baliles. Charter Day this year commemorates the 294th anniversary of the granting of the College's royal charter by King William III and Queen Mary II.

Baliles' nomination for the award was approved by the College's Board of Visitors in December. William and Mary's tradition of awarding honorary degrees to governors of Virginia dates back to the 18th century.

Burger was elected by the Board of Visitors last summer to be Chancellor, a ceremonial post established with the College's founding in 1693 and held alternately during colonial years by the archbishop of Canterbury and the bishop of London. The first two American Chancellors were Presidents George Washington and John Tyler. Burger, who received an honorary degree from William and Mary as the 1973 commencement speaker, is the seventh American to hold the post.

Both Burger and Baliles are expected to make remarks during the ceremony, which begins at 10 a.m. in Phi Beta Kappa Memorial Hall. William and Mary President Paul R. Verkuil will preside over the event, and Rector Anne Dobie Peebles will confer Baliles' honorary degree and conduct Burger's investiture.

Members of the College community, including faculty, students and invited guests, will attend the annual convocation, and two members of the faculty will receive the institution's most prestigious academic awards. The Thomas Jefferson Award recognizes a faculty member who exemplifies the principles and ideals of Jefferson, and the Thomas Jefferson Teaching Award recognizes a younger teaching member of the faculty. Both awards are made possible through the generosity of the Robert Earl McConnell Foundation.

President invites seniors to process

President Paul R. Verkuil has extended an invitation to seniors to participate in the academic procession for Charter Day.

In a letter to seniors earlier this month, President Verkuil said he was using the occasion of Charter Day to revive a tradition that existed for many years at the College.

"In recognition of your senior status," wrote the President, you are cordially invited to participate in the academic procession for this occasion. Arrangements have been made to provide you with a cap and gown, and those who process will be seated as a class at the ceremony.

A deadline of Jan. 30 has been set for seniors to respond.

Aquino lecture planned Friday

Philippine Ambassador Nicanor T. Jimenez, former chief of mission and Ambassador to Korea and currently special assistant to the Philippine Ambassador to the United States, will deliver the second Benigno Aquino Memorial Lecture at 6 p.m., Friday, Jan. 30 in Washington Hall.

The first Aquino lecturer was Walter L. Williams, professor of law at the Marshall-Wythe School of Law.

Ambassador Jimenez will discuss the life and character of the assassinated Senator Aquino in the context of the nonviolent revolution in the Philippines.

Ambassador Jimenez has had a varied career. His immediate past assignments include Ambassador to the United Nations, diplomatic assignments in Korea, Indonesia, New Zealand, Australia, Romania and Bulgaria. During the Korean War he was commander of the Philippine Expeditionary Forces. He has also been general manager of the Philippine National Railways and a weekly columnist for Business Day, an influential Philippine newspaper.

During his visit here, the Ambassador will launch the book Anthropolitical Research: Perspectives and Fieldwork, edited by Mario D. Zamora and co-authored by William and Mary faculty members Theodore Reinhart and Ann Reed and others.

All royalties from the book will be donated to a scholarship fund at Saint Mary's College in the Philippines to support deserving Filipino students. "This is part of the serious efforts to help President Corazon Aquino in her bid to promote prosperity and education in the country," said Zamora.

Howard to give Lee Lecture

A. E. Dick Howard, White Burkett Miller Professor of Law and Public Affairs at the University of Virginia and chairman of the Virginia Commission on the Bicentennial of the United States Constitution, will be on campus Feb. 3-5 as Distinguished Lee Fellow at the Marshall-Wythe School of Law.

Howard will present the Lee Memorial Lecture on "The Rehnquist Court" at 4 p.m., Wednesday, Feb. 4.

The public is invited. There is no admission charge.

The speaker will be introduced by Timothy J. Sullivan, dean of the Marshall-Wythe School of Law, John Stewart Bryan Professor of Jurisprudence and director of the Institute of Bill of Rights Law.

While on campus Howard will hold a faculty colloquium on state constitutions Tuesday, Feb. 3 at 3:15 p.m. in Room 239 at the law school. A reception will follow in the staff lounge.

Undergraduates are invited to a program at 10 a.m., Thursday, Feb. 5 on "The Litigious Society," in the Sit 'n Bull Room at the Campus Center.

Howard's lecture is the first of a series of lectures named in memory of Laura Lee and her parents Mary I.W. and Alfred Wilson Lee. The Lee Memorial Trust Fund provid-

Preservation Hall Jazz Band

Number of Jazz tickets limited

When the Preservation Hall Jazz Band performs Monday, Feb. 2 for the William and Mary Concert Series, there will be no listing of program numbers. The musicians themselves don't know what they'll play, beyond perhaps the opening and closing numbers. What they play will be determined in large part by the audience.

As the evening progresses the musicians will decide what comes next, based on their unerring instinct for sizing up each individual audience. And because no two audiences are alike, no two concerts are the same.

The Preservation Hall Jazz Band concert will begin at 8:15 p.m. in Phi Beta Kappa Memorial Hall. The Concert Series is fully subscribed, but a limited number of tickets are available. Reservations may be made by calling 253-4557.

"Oldest of the Living Old" is an apt motto for Preservation Hall, a showcase for the last of the old-time musicians playing traditional New Orleans jazz. Called the "real" article, in contrast to commercial, two-beat, and predominately "white" Dixieland, this jazz is high-spirited yet simple and dignified, sometimes ragged but "uninhibitedly incandescent." Such jazz is offered by oldtimers in one of the seven bands featured at the Hall.

Gregory talk to be rescheduled

Bettina Gregory's talk, scheduled for 8 p.m. Tuesday, Jan. 27, was cancelled because of inclement weather. Her visit, sponsored by the Student Association, will be rescheduled, but as yet no date has been set.

Hooks coming to speak

Benjamin Hooks, director of the NAACP, will give a talk on "Black Americans: Centuries of Struggle and Change" in the Campus Center Little Theatre at 7 p.m. Friday, Feb. 13. Admission is free.

Hooks' appearance, in honor of Black History Month, is sponsored by the Black Law Students Association of the Marshall-Wythe School of Law.

College joins Holmes group

First meeting in D.C. Jan 29

The College has joined more than 90 of the nation's leading research universities that have committed themselves to the reform of teaching and teacher education by joining the prestigious Holmes Group.

The major goals of the Holmes group include the following:

- To make the education of teachers intellectually more solid;
- To recognize differences in teachers' knowledge, skill and commitment in their education, certification and work;
- To create standards of entry to the profession — examinations and educational requirements — that are professionally relevant and intellectually defensible;
- To connect our own institutions to schools; and
- To make schools better places for teachers to work and to learn.

The first national meeting of the Holmes Group will be held Jan. 29-31 in Washington, D.C. Jim Beers, professor of education, has been selected by the School of Education faculty as institutional representative and Ron Giese, professor of education, is alternate. Dean Jack Nagle and Associate Dean Virginia Laycock will also be part of the William and Mary delegation to the meetings.

Institutional representative Jim Beers doesn't see any immediate or sweeping changes in teacher education on campus to result from membership in the Holmes Group.

"We're joining realistically and with reservation, to see what concerns are being articulated and what their impact would be on certification." At present, says Beers, the College is bound by state certification requirements.

Beers also adds that the School of Education for the past two or three years has given a great deal of attention to curricula in elementary and secondary programs and has received commendation from the State Department of Education for their high quality.

"We welcome the opportunity these meetings will afford us to look at alternatives and see ways in which other schools are approaching undergraduate programs, but we don't anticipate making any knee-jerk reactions," says Beers. "We feel we have a very good undergraduate program and excellent students with SAT scores far above the national average. People in the schools, principals and superintendents, tell us that our students make good teachers. We know we are doing something right."

Beers, however, is particularly interested in the Holmes Group's proposal to establish programs in subject areas that would provide what he terms "career ladder steps" for good teachers who want to stay in the classroom and be compensated for their training and experience. At present, he explains, administrative positions are the main option for teachers who wish to advance and be better compensated. Beers would like to see teachers given an option that would permit those who wish to, to remain in the classroom.

He plans to spend time this summer coming up with plans to fulfill the College's commitment to the Holmes Group.

The School of Education faculty, said Beers is looking at membership in the Holmes Group on a year-to-year basis to insure that the College benefits from its participation.

The meetings in Washington will emphasize the Holmes Group's efforts to reach out to practicing professionals. Several key educators have been invited to participate including Mary Futrell, president of the National Education Association, and Al Shanker, president of the American Federation of Teachers.

These meetings, added Beers, will also be an opportunity for representatives from member schools to get acquainted.

The Holmes Group is named in honor of the late Henry W. Holmes, dean of the Harvard University Graduate School of Education from 1920 to 1940 and a leading proponent of efforts to raise the stature and quality of teacher education.

The proposals for reform advocated by the Holmes Group were contained initially in a report released last spring titled "Tomorrow's Teachers." The highly acclaimed report urges America's leading universities to "respond to the crisis in public education" by pooling their considerable research and development expertise.

Substantial external funding will help underwrite the Holmes Group efforts to implement new standards in teacher education. The Ford Foundation has announced it will provide a $300,000 grant to support the work of the Holmes Group for an initial two-year period. Other funding agencies are actively considering Holmes Group proposals.

A Nov. 15 decision deadline was set for charter memberships and invitations sent to 123 carefully selected public and private institutions. The major criterion was an established record of investment in research and development activity. Only one institution for every 25,000 teachers in five geographic regions and institutions with significant minority enrollments were invited. William and Mary is included in the south-eastern district. Other state schools in the Holmes Group include the University of Virginia, Virginia Commonwealth University and Virginia Polytechnic and State University.

To become charter members of the group, schools pay a $4,000 annual membership fee and agree to support the Holmes Group agenda by developing and implementing a program of reform over the next five years at their institutions.

The membership fee will be used in part to link the Holmes Group institutions with others, including outstanding liberal-arts colleges, institutions serving a large number of minority students, and state universities that may be somewhat less research-intensive. It will also be used to establish the group's national and regional offices.

Library initiates assembly watch

Do you want to know if the Virginia General Assembly is considering legislation affecting colleges and universities? Or taking action to raise sales taxes or lower pickup trucks? Whatever your interest, Swem Library can now provide information that will keep you up-to-date.

The library now belongs to the Online Legislative Information System of the General Assembly. The system, one of the first of its kind in the country, permits library staff members to monitor the introduction and progress of bills and resolutions in the state legislature on virtually an hour-by-hour basis.

The General Assembly's automated system consists of two databases: the Bill Status Subsystem and the Pending Legislation database.

The Bill Status portion makes available the following information on bills, resolutions and joint resolutions: the title, a summary of the wording, the full text, the sections of the Code of Virginia affected by the proposed legislation, amendments made by committee or floor action, the names of sponsors, and a step-by-step record of the measure's progress. A variety of special searching techniques allow users to examine committee meeting schedules and dockets, House and Senate minutes and listings of legislation that was passed, failed, amended, vetoed, or substituted.

The Pending Legislation database, known as OSCAR (Online System for Computer Assisted Research), provides keyword search access to the full text of proposed legislation. Search terms can be combined with boolean operators, such as "and" and "or," for more

Cindy Tracy

Tracy's job is special events

Cindy Tracy is the new manager of special events for the College, a position formerly held by Mary Dean, who resigned. Cindy has been on the job about three weeks and is already getting a baptism of fire with Charter Day just around the corner.

Charter Day and the other special events throughout the year including Burgesses Day, Homecoming, Commencement, the Christmas Storyhour for area school children and the weekly Town and Gown luncheons each have their own particular set of specifications. For Cindy this means everything from invitations and logistics to parking and security.

The floor of her office next door to William N. Walker, director of university relations, is dotted with half-filled boxes of envelopes, invitations and letters — remnants from mailings, which are part of the planning for any event.

A vivacious redhead, Cindy is a realist about the mountains of minutiae she'll process in a year and the complexities of programs and constituencies she'll work with.

"I have a unique position," says Cindy, "because my work affects so many areas of the College. It is a very exciting job." After only a few weeks she admits feeling a little overwhelmed, but she expects that to change as she settles into the routine of things.

Because Charter Day was just four weeks away when she started, Cindy found herself meeting people at a quick pace. "I had to get to know people in a hurry. And because so many people have input into special events, you have to be flexible and able to handle changes along the way," says Cindy.

Although the College has its own particular style, Cindy has had valuable experience in handling special events as former director of conference services for the Williamsburg Hospitality House. Previously she was director of catering for the Sheraton Patriot Inn.

A graduate of Virginia Commonwealth University, Cindy has a bachelor of arts degree in commercial recreation and a minor in business. She was awarded the Claire McCarthy Scholarship for recreation majors at VCU. She was an intern with the Virginia Beach Parks and Recreation Department.

While the traditions of special events at the College will be continued, Cindy wants to add special touches that will heighten the appeal of each event. This year a special invitation has been sent to seniors inviting them to process at Charter Day.

Reguash dancers due Wednesday

Reguash, an Israeli folkdance ensemble, will perform at 8 p.m., Wednesday, Feb. 4 in Phi Beta Kappa Memorial Hall under the sponsorship of Hillel Jewish Student Association.

Tickets are $5 for the general public, $1 for students, and will be on sale at the door.

These 40 young dancers from Argentina have been performing together for over eight years and have toured throughout North and South America and the Middle East. Their name, "Reguash," means "feeling" in Hebrew and conveys the excitement that they bring to their varied program of Israeli dances.

Everyone is invited to a brown bag lunch at 12:15 p.m., Feb. 4 to meet with the dance ensemble members. Dancers will attend morning classes and meet with students.

Piano concert

Claudia Stevens, who teaches at William and Mary, will present a free concert of German cabaret music, at 7:30 p.m., Thursday, Jan. 29, in the west wing marble hall of the Virginia Museum of Fine Arts in Richmond. Admission is free.

The concert, "Deutsches Kunstfest," or German Arts Festival is part of an open house related to the museum's exhibit of German expressionist art collected by Ludwig and Rosy Fischer.

Williams lecture

Richard S. Williams Jr., a research geologist with the U.S. Geological Survey since 1971 will give a public lecture on the geology of Iceland at 8 p.m., Thursday, Feb. 5 in Small 113 as part of a two-day visit to the College of William and Mary.

His talk is intended for a general audience interested in the geology and geography of Iceland. Williams will give two, more technical, lectures to classes at the College during his visit.

Iceland, with an area about the size of Virginia, is the largest supramarine exposure of a mid-ocean ridge. Because of its 30 or so historically active volcanoes, its numerous geothermal areas, its large ice caps and its diversity of volcanic landforms, Iceland has long been a mecca for geologists interested in studying these and related phenomena.

Drawing upon his 20 years of field, aerial and satellite studies of dynamic geological phenomena and geomorphic processes in Iceland, Williams will present in the first part of his illustrated lecture, a brief introduction to the geology and geomorphology of Iceland.

The second part of his lecture will feature a dramatic, prize-winning movie "Volcano Surtsey," which chronicles the early development of one of the world's young volcanic islands as it rose from the sea floor in Nov. 1973 and evolved into a shield volcano.

Williams specializes in aerial and satellite investigations of geomorphic processes and geologic hazards. He has published more than 145 books, journal articles, abstracts and maps. He is a strong proponent of cooperative international programs that use satellite data to globally monitor changes on the Earth's surface resulting from natural or culturally induced processes.

He received his B.S. and M.S. degrees from the University of Michigan, 1961 and 1962 respectively, and his Ph.D. degree from Penn State in 1965.

Schools slate interviews here

Listed below are the school systems that will be interviewing on campus during February.

Both graduates and undergraduates are invited to attend.

Ferguson will hold interviews on campus Friday, Jan. 30, and students wishing to participate are asked to call the Placement Office in Career Services to schedule an interview.

Rainey exhibit up in Andrews

The exhibits currently up in Andrews Hall include sculpture by Nan Rainey, visiting instructor of sculpture and an alumna, the Washington Studio School Faculty and Pratt Institute Foundation Drawings.

Titled "Recent Works," the exhibit by Nan Rainey consists of constructed works in wood and plate glass that explore issues of tension and balance. The works range in scale from 18 inches to eight feet and are held together not with adhesives, but with a delicate balance of natural forces: tension, friction between two surfaces and the pull of gravity.

Nan Rainey was born in Hampton, Va. She studied fine art at William and Mary before moving to New York to pursue a Master of Fine Arts at Pratt Institute.

Barbara Goodstein who is teaching three-dimensional design and is an artist herself, says that students in particular are drawn to the show of drawings from the Pratt Institute in New York.

"The works are displayed unframed, just pinned up on the wall in a pleasing, but definitely not a formal manner. However, the students can relate directly to what is portrayed, and many have, including those who are not involved in art classes here," says Goodstein. The show contains 119 drawings from Pratt's first-year foundation classes.

"The drawings range from models drawn quickly, and drawn to capture the particular gesture of the model boldly, to detailed works of models; still lifes — bottles, cans, glasses together, light from a window onto a table with a bowl and napkin; a room filled with gigantic machines; a rendition of winding stairs; a library with many books, a church interior, tree and plant studies, portraits and self-portraits. These works are in pencil, charcoal and many other drawing media," says Goodstein.

The Washington Studio School exhibit includes the work of six faculty members. The Washington Studio School was founded by artists to provide art instruction in an informal, affordable way, in the conviction that the workings of art should be accessible to all.

The School's philosophy of education stresses sound principles and high standards. In addition to its regular schedule of classes, the School provides a variety of lectures, workshops, drawing and painting groups, as well as exhibits in its new opened space, the Circle Gallery.

Art classes

Parents who are planning to sign up children for the new round of classes at the Muscarelle Museum of Art are reminded that registration will be held Saturday, Jan. 31 between 10 a.m. and noon at the museum. Registration will continue Feb. 2-6 until the classes are filled. Enrollment is limited.

The fee per student is $15. Some scholarships are available.

Classes are arranged according to school grade levels and are scheduled for Feb. 14, 21, 28, March 21, 28 and April 4, 11 and 25. Children in grades one through four will meet from 9 to 10:30 a.m., and those in grades five through eight from 11 to 12:30 p.m.

This program is supported in part by a grant from the Williamsburg Area Arts Commission.

Friday program

Dennis Rahim Watson, black actor, poet and comedian, will give a program Friday, Jan. 30 at 7 p.m. in the Campus Center Little Theatre. This program is being arranged by the Office of Minority Affairs. It is open to the public.

VIMS lecture

A slide-illustrated program on underwater exploration for valuable minerals will be held at 7:30 p.m., Wednesday, Feb. 5, in Watermen's Hall at VIMS as a part of the Oceanography for Landlubbers lecture series.

Carl R. Berquist of the Virginia Division of Mineral Resources will discuss heavy mineral finds and research in the Chesapeake Bay and offshore Virginia. The economic importance of heavy minerals as a source of abrasives, titanium and other elements and their value in historic geologic studies will also be discussed.

Summer jobs

The 1987 Secretary's Achievement Program and the U.S. Department of Energy is an eight-week summer internship, with compensation, that offers students the opportunity to participate in weekly government briefings on energy and environmental topics. In addition, various group excursions to department facilities, the White House and the Congress will be organized.

Interested students with a science or technical background should stop by the Office of Career Services, Morton 140, to pick up an application form. Two letters of recommendation are required. Applications should be submitted to Natalie Mahoney in the Office of Career Services, no later than Feb. 9.

Summer Camp Placement Day will be held 10 a.m.-2 p.m., Monday, Feb. 9 in the atrium of the Campus Center.

All students who are seeking jobs at summer camps are invited to attend. Camp representatives will be on hand to discuss available positions.

Career Days

Through the cooperative effort of several colleges, including William and Mary, career days have been set up in Chicago, March 23-24, and San Francisco, March 26-27.

Students who would like to participate in these events should contact Pam Garrette in the Office of Career Services, Morton Hall, by Feb. 6. Students will be required to sign up for interview times with specific employers.

Cambridge reunion

A reunion for students in the Cambridge '86 summer program is planned from 3 to 5 p.m., Sunday, Feb. 1 in the Sit 'n Bull room of the Campus Center. This will be an opportunity for students who went to England to swap reminiscences and share photographs.

Those planning to attend are asked to RSVP to Len Schiffrin, professor of economics, at ext. 4311 or Mrs. Schiffrin at 565-3191.

Superdance set

The 25-hour dance marathon for the benefit of the Muscular Dystrophy Association begins at 6 p.m. Friday at the Campus Center ballroom.

APOI is asking the campus community to join them in the fund-raiser, which also includes opportunities to win prizes.

Employment

The following positions at the College are open to all qualified individuals. Call 229-JOBS for further information, or visit the Employee Relations Office in Thiemes on Richmond Road for information and application forms, Monday-Friday, 8 a.m.-4 p.m. An EEO/AA employer.

The deadline for applications for the following positions is 5 p.m., Jan. 30.

OFFICE SERVICES ASSISTANT (unclassified) — $5.64 per hour, part time, approximately 20 hours per week. (Hours are flexible.) Location: Marshall-Wythe School of Law Library.

SECRETARY (unclassified) — $5.64 per hour, part time, approximately 30 hours per week. Location: Virginia Shakespeare Festival.

SECRETARY (unclassified) — $5.64 per hour, part time, approximately 35 hours per week. Location: Athletics Department.

Scholarships

The Office of International Studies, ext. 4354, has information and application forms for the following scholarships:

Beinecke Memorial — For students showing extreme academic promise and financial need. Applications are now available for qualified juniors wishing to continue their present studies in graduate school.

The award includes a tuition for the senior year undergraduate terms plus up to $4,000 per year for educationally related expenses during two years of graduate study with a maximum stipend of $12,000 per year.

This is not necessarily a study-abroad scholarship; it is fully valid in the U.S.

Overseas Research Student Awards — Approximately 800 will be offered on a competitive basis in 1987 to graduate students of outstanding merit and potential.

Awards are valid at select universities in the U.K. Awards may be held in any field of study and, subject to satisfactory progress, may be renewed for a second and third year.

Graduating seniors interested in pursuing graduate study in the U.S. should apply. Applications must reach the British university of your choice no later than May 1. Pick up applications before the end of February.

Japan Exchange Teaching Program — Consists of renewable one-year terms of employment in a Japanese city, a salary of 3,600,000 yen (approximately $22,000 at current exchange rate of 162.5 yen per dollar) and round-trip airfare.

efficient searching. When amendments are adopted, the amended language is added and symbols identify the old and new language.

Legislative activity is monitored by intercom directly from the floor of the House and Senate, and staff members of the Division of Legislative Automated Systems update the database as changes occur.

Unfortunately, even with the speed of computer updating, there are still gaps. No records are kept of the House and Senate debates. There is no equivalent, print or online, of the Congressional Record.

Alan Zoellner, documents librarian at Swem Library, arranged for the new service as an expansion of the library's computerized reference services for patrons. The reference department has offered online searches of commercial and federal databases for several years.

Anyone interested in taking advantage of the Legislative Information System should go to the documents department to schedule a search.

Busch interns

Busch Gardens is seeking applicants for a training specialist internship position in their merchandising department.

Beginning in early February, the intern will work four hours a day for a 4-5-day workweek at $4.50 per hour. Applicants must also be available during the summer as the position will expand to full time in May.

Interested students should contact Regina Williams, personnel supervisor at Busch Gardens at 253-3020.

The responsibilities of the job include conducting training sessions on cash-handling techniques for groups of 10-15 people per session, record keeping for approximately 450 cashier employees and acting as liaison between the merchandising and finance departments.

For further details concerning the internship, please contact Natalie Mahoney, internship coordinator, Office of Career Services, Morton 140, ext. 4604.

RBC Forum

Richard Bland College's 11th annual International Forum will open Wednesday, Feb. 4 with Ambassador Nalumino Mundia from Zambia as guest speaker.

Iranian Ambassador Nizar Hamdoon is scheduled to speak March 25. The third speaker, also expected to be an ambassador, has yet to be announced.

Ambassador Mundia will speak at 7:45 p.m. in Ernst Hall auditorium on the relationship between the United States and Zambia. President Clarence Maze will host a reception for the ambassador following his talk.

During his visit to campus, Ambassador Mundia will visit Blair's world politics class. Invited students from RBC and Petersburg High School will breakfast with the ambassador for an informal discussion Wednesday morning prior to the classroom session.

Ambassador Mundia, who also is a representative of his country to Venezuela, Brazil and Peru, is a founding member of the United National Independence Party of Zambia. He is a graduate of Shi Ram College of Commerce in New Delhi, India, and holds an M.B.A. degree from the Graduate School of Business Administration at Atlanta University.
