New book focuses on contributions of women in politics

Collaboration among faculty and students in the history department has resulted in a pioneering study, Women and American Foreign Policy, which is scheduled for release this week. Conceived and edited by Acting-Department Chairman Ed Crapol, the book was inspired, in part, by the persistent questioning of undergraduates and includes essays by Crapol and his colleague Judy Ewell, as well as former graduate students Janet Coryell and John Craig.

The new book is a collection of essays about women who have attempted to make a difference in U.S. foreign policy. It is the first book to substantially challenge the long-held belief that women are not a part of the history of American foreign relations.

"This has been, and continues to be, a male-dominated and male-oriented field. Opportunities for women to achieve power and exercise influence have been extremely limited," acknowledges Crapol. "Yet, since at least the 1830s individual women have worked relentlessly, using both traditional and non-traditional ways, to shape this nation's foreign policy," he adds.

The essays in the book focus attention on the particular contributions of eight women including Eleanor Roosevelt, Jane Fonda, Jeane Kirkpatrick and Eleanor Dulles.

"These women achieved varying, often limited degrees of success in pursuing their foreign policy goals. More important than their immediate success, however, is the long-overdue recognition that they were participants in the process and they helped shape thinking and establish the parameters of the debate," says Crapol.

Each author attempts not only to assess the success of the women studied, but also to assess the degree to which the individual woman's goals represented a distinctly female vision of foreign policy.

"What the researchers discovered," says Crapol, "is that while virtually all of the women articulated a consciousness of the limitations imposed upon them by their sex, the foreign policy objectives they sought were varied and reflected a broad political spectrum." In short, no evidence for the existence of a coherent women's foreign policy was revealed.

"This book," says Crapol in his introduction, "resulted from my experiences in the classroom teaching the history of American foreign policy to undergraduates. In the late 1960s and early 1970s women students in my classes frequently asked to do their research papers on women and women's role in the history of American foreign policy. When I replied that women played no role and had not been a factor in American foreign relations, their reactions ranged from incredulity to barely veiled hostility.

"My immediate retort was to challenge these women to prove me wrong. Sceptically I suggested, 'You go ahead and do your paper on women or an individual woman's influence on foreign policy. See what you can find.' Obviously I was passing the buck and invariably after some frustrating hours in the library, my women students would concede that indeed I had been correct. ... Occasionally a female undergraduate doggedly might try to do something on Abigail Adams, and later in the mid 1970s, one or two grappled with the career and activities of Jane M. Cazneau. Usually their efforts were less than satisfactory to either student or teacher.

"Despite my students' discouraging lack of success, I remained intrigued by the problem. Quite by accident I discovered I had been wrong. In doing research on an ongoing project on abolitionists and their impact on foreign policy I encountered Lydia Maria Child. Here, to my surprise, was a female critic who through the power of her ideas and the force of her actions had played

New Cheek Award announced

Leslie Cheek Jr., former director of the Virginia Museum of Fine Arts, has established an endowment to fund an annual award to an individual for an "outstanding presentation of the arts."

The award is to be conferred in the autumn of each year to a creative visual artist: architect, interior, landscape, stage or graphic designer, sculptor, painter, printmaker, ceramist or textile artist.

The artist will be selected by a jury of three faculty members, the director of the Muscarelle Museum of Art, who will chair the committee, and the heads of the fine arts and theatre departments. The award can be presented to any citizen of the United States.

The Cheek Award Committee is now seeking nominations from faculty, students and other interested persons for the first award scheduled to be given early next fall.

Written nominations should summarize the achievements of the artist and provide justification for his or her consideration for this award. Letters may be submitted to any committee member and must be received by April 15. Inquiries should be directed to Mark M. Johnson, director of the Muscarelle Museum.

The award reflects Cheek's continuing interest in art at the College, which he championed so energetically during his tenure here from 1935 to 1939. After earning a bachelor's degree from Harvard and a graduate degree in architecture from Yale, Cheek took a position as instructor in architectural history at William and Mary. Here his work won the admiration of College President John Stewart Bryan, who asked Cheek to organize a fine arts department, one of the first at a southern university. He remodeled an old dormitory into classrooms and brought in talented colleagues from Yale to teach painting, sculpture and theatre techniques.

Exhibitions were organized, bringing to the College the work of prominent artists such as Frank Lloyd Wright and Georgia O'Keeffe.

Swenson named

Chuck Swenson, 33, assistant coach at Duke University, has been named head men's basketball coach to succeed Barry Parkhill.

Swenson has been at Duke for the last seven years. During that time, Duke played in the NCAA final in 1986 and reached the final-16 two weeks ago, losing to Indiana.

Swenson sees many similarities between Duke and William and Mary "both in academic standards and the values" they represent.

Cutler lecture to be given by Blasi

Vincent A. Blasi, Corliss Lamont Professor of Civil Liberties at Columbia University School of Law, will be Distinguished Lee Fellow in Residence at the Marshall-Wythe School of Law, April 8-10. His visit is being sponsored by the Institute of Bill of Rights Law.

He will present the Cutler Lecture at 4 p.m., Wednesday, April 8 in room 120 of the law school on the topic "The First Amendment and the Virtue of Courage: An Appreciation of the Brandeis Opinion in Whitney v. California." A reception will follow his address.

Blasi will meet with the media law class Wednesday morning to participate in a discussion of reporters' privileges. He will

Lancetti to give Bellini lecture

Frank Lancetti, docent in American and French art at the Corcoran Gallery in Washington, D.C., who has spent 27 years working with cultural programs for the Department of State, will give the 1987 Bellini Lecture at 8 p.m., Thursday, April 2 in Washington 200. He will take as his topic, "Costantino Brumidi: Enigmatic Italian Painter of the U.S. Capital."

Brumidi (1805-80), the Roman-born painter, who worked in the U.S. Capital for 25 years and left works in many other places in the U.S., has been the focus of study for Lancetti for several years.

Bellini, for whom the lecture is named, came from Florence and was appointed to the first American chair of modern languages at the College in 1779 by Jefferson.

Lancetti was born in Rome where he attended the University of Rome and earned degrees in political and commercial sciences. He moved to Washington, D.C., in 1954 and became a consultant in international relations. In 1960 he entered the U.S. State Department service as an international relations officer.

He has been director of cultural exchange programs for African and Asian countries, and in the past 14 years especially he has supervised and monitored scientific and technological activities of specialized agencies of the United States working in the United Nations.

Concomitant with his state department duties, Lancetti has also developed a keen interest in the cultural and artistic contributions of Italians to the United States.

In addition to his work on Brumidi, he is collecting material on Maria Casway, an Anglo-Italian friend of Thomas Jefferson, who founded a finishing school for girls of the Italian nobility in Lodi, near Milan, which is still in operation.

speak on "Consequences or Character: Which Should Be the Benchmark for Interpreting the First Amendment?" at a faculty colloquium in room 239 at 3:15 p.m., April 9.

Friday he will meet with a constitutional law class at 11 a.m. in room 119 and end his visit at a faculty luncheon.

Blasi has published extensively in a variety of topics in American Constitutional Law. He edited The Burger Court: The Counter-Revolution That Wasn't, published by Yale University Press, 1983.

He is also one of the nation's leading commentators on the freedoms of speech and press.

Board hears Finley report

At its meeting Friday, March 28, the College's Board of Visitors heard a report by Virginia Secretary of Education Donald J. Finley outlining the state's educational goals.

Among the state's priorities are providing academic and financial incentives to institutions that meet or exceed the state's educational goals in the areas of equal opportunity, remedial and teacher education, international education and participation in programs with the Center for Innovative Technology (CIT).

The Board also heard reports by President Paul Verkuil and Provost Melvyn Schiavelli on the university's peer-group ranking and on the institution's long-term academic goals.

Comparing the College's 1980 peer group to the newly established one, Verkuil pointed out that the new peer group determined last fall is comprised of 20 schools, including both first-line state institutions and high-quality private institutions. Some of the factors used to determine the current peer group were: the percentage of Ph.D. degrees granted (2.4 percent at William and Mary), library volumes per faculty member (2,053), and research dollars per faculty member ($26,839).

Based on these and other statistics, William and Mary is grouped with institutions such as Vermont, Rhode Island, New Hampshire, Wake Forest, Dartmouth, Tulane, the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, Notre Dame and Boston College. This list represents not what we want to be," said Verkuil, "this is what we are today."

William and Mary's overall goal is to be "the finest small public university in America," said Verkuil. Toward that goal, the College should build on its areas of existing academic strengths in creating new programs, said Provost Schiavelli.

The newly approved Ph.D. program in American studies, for example, will help students make connections across the already strong disciplines of government, history, literature, fine arts and anthropology, he said.

Building on the College's strength in foreign language study, said Schiavelli, the new Center for International Studies will help make the College "a focal point for international education in the Commonwealth."

He also stressed the importance of building on the College's strengths in the basic sciences and its relationships with Langley-NASA and CEBAF as essential to building the new graduate program in applied science.

Schiavelli added that "any of these initiatives cannot be allowed to erode undergraduate education" and that the College would be looking for high-caliber graduate students "equal to the undergraduate students we have now."

Faculty matters, including appointments, promotions, resignations and confirmation of tenure comprised the major portion of action material presented to the Board.

Six members of the faculty were promoted to the rank of professor: Clyde A. Haulman, economics; Gary A. Kreps, sociology; Stephen K. Knudson, chemistry; Robert P. Maccubbin, English; Roger L. Mann, School of Marine Science; and George M. Vahala, physics.

Promoted to the rank of associate professor were Ismail H. Abdalla, history, and George W. Harris, philosophy.

Tenure, effective Sept. 1, 1988, was approved for three members of the School of Marine Science faculty: Mark E. Chittenden, professor; and two associate professors, Roger L. Mann and Beverly Anne Weeks.

Leaves of absence were approved for the following: Lynda L. Butler, associate professor of law, Aug. 16-Dec. 31, to accept a visiting position at the Ohio State University Law School; Scott Donaldson, Cooley Professor of English, Aug. 16-Dec. 31 to pursue research; Ingrid M. Hillinger, associate professor of law, Aug. 16-Dec. 31, to accept a visiting position at Emory University; Michael G. Hillinger, assistant professor of law, Aug. 16-Dec. 31, to accept a visiting position at Emory University; John E. Olney, assistant professor of marine science, educational leave for one year to seek an advanced degree at the University of Maryland; Elmer J. Schaefer, professor of law, 1987-88 academic year for research purposes; and Margaret K. Schaefer, associate professor of law, Jan. 1-May 15, 1988 for research purposes.

The Board accepted the resignations of Stephen J. Dempsey, assistant professor of business administration; Don C. Johnson, head of reader services division, Earl Gregg Swem Library; Julia B. Leverenz, director, Center for Executive Development and Women in Business Program; and Roberta W. McGaughran, part-time physics/geology librarian.

Clark C. Havighurst, professor of law, Duke University, and John A. Spanogle Jr., professor of law, University of Buffalo, both have been selected as Tazewell Taylor Distinguished Professors of Law for the 1987-88 academic year. Havighurst will hold the post during the spring semester, Spanogle for the fall semester.

The following new appointments to fill existing vacancies were approved by the Board: Neal E. Devins, assistant general counsel, U.S. Commission on Civil Rights, full-time assistant professor of Law; C. Lawrence Evans, Ph.D. candidate, University of Rochester, full-time instructor of government; Robert C. Hale, research environmental chemist, Mobil Oil Corporation, full-time assistant professor of marine science; John M. Hamrick, assistant professor, University of Virginia, full-time associate professor of marine science; Charles R. Johnson, professor, Clemson University, full-time professor of mathematics, with

To the Members of the College Community:

It is with deep sadness that I write again to report the death of one of our students. This morning, Cynthia Dianne Anderson, a 20-year-old sophomore from Los Angeles, Calif., died at Riverside Hospital in Newport News. Cynthia's death was the result of a gunshot wound she inflicted on herself Saturday evening in Tucker Hall. She was a resident of Brown Hall and a member of Delta Delta Delta social sorority.

The funeral service for Cynthia will be held at the Bruton Parish Episcopal Church at 1 p.m. on Thursday, April 2. In lieu of flowers, the family asks that expressions of sympathy be sent to the College of William and Mary in Cynthia's memory.

I regret that it was not possible to notify the College community of this tragic situation until now, especially in light of the many rumors which have circulated about the matter. Notification was withheld until Cynthia's parents could arrive from California and the full impact of her injuries was more clear. In the meantime, our efforts have been directed toward assisting the family and providing counsel and aid for her friends, hallmates and sorority sisters.

The thought of suicide, especially the suicide of someone close to us, predictably creates a need for us to explore our reactions and feelings. Many of you have already asked for such an opportunity. If you feel such a need, I urge you to talk with your area coordinator, a campus minister, a counselor from the Center for Psychological Services, a member of the Student Health Service staff or a member of the faculty or staff in whom you have trust. There will also be several opportunities in the next few days for you to increase your understanding of suicide and the conditions which lead to its contemplation.

Tuesday, March 31 — 7-9 p.m., Sit 'n Bull Room, The Campus Center: Dr. Jan Finch of the Center for Psychological Services will lead a program/discussion on the subject of suicide.

Wednesday, April 1 — 7:30 p.m., The Great Hall of the Sir Christopher Wren Building: A panel of campus ministers, the director of the Center for Psychological Services and faculty will offer a Wren Forum on the subject of loneliness. The relationship between loneliness, despair and suicide will be explored.

Thursday, April 2 — 3 p.m., 5 p.m., and 7 p.m., Sit 'n Bull Room: Ms. Ellen Zinner, a counselor with a special expertise in the subject of suicide, will be available for discussion with interested students.

In addition, if groups of students feel the need for a program directed at their special needs, we will try to provide those insofar as our staff time permits.

A suicide by an enrolled student is a rare event at William and Mary. There has not been another in 20 years. We are a close community. What affects one of our members has an impact on many of us. If there is any message we should reaffirm in the wake of this tragic event, it is that no life is without hope and no person in our community beyond help.

Harvard visit

President Paul Verkuil and Provost Melvyn Schiavelli spent three days in Cambridge, Mass., recently meeting with faculty members and administrators at Harvard University to explore new academic program options.

Arranged through an invitation from Henry Rosovsky '49, acting president of Harvard, the sessions were designed to provide the opportunity for discussion and consideration of possible new curricular ini-atives at William and Mary, according to Schiavelli.

Verkuil and Schiavelli discussed new ideas in interdisciplinary programs, faculty involvement in curriculum development and potential areas of student academic interest.

Specific departments involved in the visit were the John F. Kennedy School of Government, applied physics and chemistry, East Asian studies, Jewish studies, Japanese language and culture, romance languages, international studies and American civilization.

Alumni contribute essays on women in foreign policy

alleled by countless other American women over the last century and a half."

Although by 1980 Crapol was publicly presenting his case that women had been historical actors in shaping the nation's foreign policy, his suggestion on incorporating the role of women into courses on diplomatic history received a chilly reception at a meeting of the Organization of American Historians in Detroit. "The small, all-male audience was openly skeptical. ... I perfectly understood their doubts, having myself originally shared much the same outlook.

"Throughout the nation's existence United States foreign policy has been the domain of white, Anglo-Saxon, Protestant males. The essays reveal, however, that since the 1830s a number of American women have attempted to shape and influence the nation's foreign policy. In the process women have expanded their role in the public sphere, helped shape the public's consciousness about the nation's diplomacy, and frequently offered alternative policies that ultimately have infiltrated the inner sanctum of the foreign policy establishment.

"They have done this as lobbyists who employed intelligence, charm and tenacity to persuade powerful men to accept their views, as insiders who subtly and effectively influenced the men who were their husbands, bosses and confidants and as critics who publicized their ideas and politically mobilized women and men in the pursuit of changing the nature of American foreign policy."

Contributors include Blanche Wiesen Cook, professor of history at John Jay College of Criminal Justice, City University of New York. She is the author of The Declassified Eisenhower: A Divided Legacy of Peace and Political Warfare and Crystal Eastman on Women and Revolution. At present she is completing a biography of Eleanor Roosevelt.

Janet L. Coryell, who received a Ph.D. from William and Mary, is an assistant professor of history at the University of Dayton. She is working on a biography of Anna Ella Carroll.

John M. Craig (Ph.D., William and Mary) teaches history at Slippery Rock University. He is completing a full-length biography of Lucia Ames Mead.

Lynne K. Dunn currently is a visiting assistant professor of history at State University of New York, College at Fredonia. She is working on a biography focusing on Eleanor Dulles' career and influence upon U.S.-Austrian and U.S.-Berlin relations.

Judith Ewell is author of The Indictment of a Dictator: The Extradition and Trial of Marcos Perez Jimenez and Venezuela: A Century of Change as well as several articles on Caribbean international relations.

Joan Hoff-Wilson is executive secretary of the Organization of American Historians and professor of history at Indiana University. Her most recent book is an edited collection of essays, Rights of Passage: The Past, Present, and Future of ERA.

Robert E. May is a professor of history at Purdue University. He is the author of The Southern Dream of a Caribbean Empire, 1854-1861 and John A. Quitman: Old South Crusader.

Jeanne Zeidler is director of the University Museum, Hampton University and adjunct lecturer in the School of Education at William and Mary. She is at work on a biography of Countee Cullen.

Women and American Foreign Policy: Lobbyists, Critics, and Insiders is published by Greenwood Press, Westport, Conn.

Irish diplomat

Kevin Dowling of the Irish Embassy, Washington, D.C., will speak at 4 p.m. in Morton Hall Thursday, April 2.

Dowling, second secretary in the political department of the embassy, will discuss the Anglo-Irish Agreement of 1985 and its effects on Northern Ireland and on U.S. support for peace in Ireland.

This talk is open to the public. It will be followed by a reception for the speaker.

ZOB celebrates

Xi Lambda chapter of Zeta Phi Beta sorority will celebrate its fifth anniversary April 10 and 11.

A fashion show and dance will be held Friday, April 10 in Tazewell Hall beginning at 8 p.m. Admission is $2.

Events on April 11 include a luncheon at noon in the Campus Center ballroom with Yvonne Miller as the guest speaker. Admission is $10 for the public; $8 for students. A semi-formal ball will be held that evening from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m. in the Campus Center ballroom. Admission is $4 single admission; $7 per couple. Door prizes have been donated by several local merchants.

For further information on any of the anniversary events, contact Sheila Williams at 229-6978 or Janice Johnson at ext. 5511.

Women's Club

The College Women's Club will hold its annual luncheon/fashion show April 15 at the Kingsmill clubhouse.

A wine reception will begin at 11:30 a.m., with luncheon at noon, followed by a fashion show with clothes from Casey's.

All members and their guests are invited to attend. Cost of the luncheon is $9.50. Reservations should be made by sending a check, payable to the College Women's Club, to Linda Vahala, 138 Nina Lane, Williamsburg, VA, by April 10.

Lee lecture

British author Hermione Lee will give a lecture titled "Victorian Fathers in Modern Literature: or, 'Why won't my whiskers grow?'" at 8 p.m., Monday, April 6 in Tucker 120.

A former member of the William and Mary faculty, Ms. Lee is the author of three books on modern fiction: The Novels of Virginia Woolf, Elizabeth Bowen: An Estimation and Philip Roth. She has edited several others, including The Secret Self: Short Stories by Women, The Poems of Stevie Smith and The Hogarth Letters. She is currently at work on a book about Willa Cather.

She is a regular contributor to the Observer and to the Times Literary Supplement and is one of the annual judges of the prestigious Booker Prize for fiction.

Ms. Lee has taught at Liverpool University and is currently lecturer in English and American literature at York University. She will be a participant in the annual Writers' Festival on campus April 9-11.

Rites of spring

William and Mary College Republicans will hold their sixth annual Rites of Spring barbecue from 1 to 5 p.m., Saturday, April 4 at Lake Matoaka Shelter.

This year the group will honor former Congressman G. William Whitehurst of Norfolk. Whitehurst will be presented the Mills E. Godwin Award for conservatism.

Invited guests include Congressmen Herbert Bateman and Stan Parris and former Virginia Attorney General Marshall Coleman.

Tickets are $10 for the general public; $5 for students; $2.50 for children under 12.

For further details, please contact Jim Parmalee, chairman, at 253-2879.

Defense forum

U.S. Senator John W. Warner and William G. Hyland, editor of Foreign Affairs magazine, will participate in a forum discussion at 2:30 p.m., Monday, April 6 in the moot court room at the Marshall-Wythe School of Law on national defense titled "To Promote the Common Defense."

The William and Mary College Republicans and the William and Mary Young Democrats are co-sponsors of the program.

Seating in the moot court room is limited, but one of the adjacent classrooms is being set up with video equipment to accommodate a large audience.

ROTC competition set Saturday

Over 150 ROTC cadets from the College and Christopher Newport College will tackle a variety of obstacles and demonstrate their military skills on Saturday, April 4, in the first "Military Badge of Excellence" competition at Lake Matoaka. Developed by the William and Mary military science department, the event is the first of its kind to involve cadets from both schools.

The exercises begin at 6 a.m. Performances will be judged by members of the ROTC senior class who went through a similar test course during ROTC summer camp last year.

German Film

"The Trouble with Love," a German film with English subtitles, will be shown at 8 p.m., Tuesday, April 7 in the German House.

Board actions

tenure and Class of 1961 Professor; Katherine M. Kulick, Ph.D. candidate, Penn State University, full-time instructor of modern languages and literatures; Michael Meranze, Ph.D. candidate, University of California-Berkeley, full-time assistant professor of history and Fellow in the Institute of Early American History and Culture; and Alamante Selassie, associate, Foley & Lardner, assistant professor of law.

The Board of Visitors also approved the appointment of the new head men's basketball coach. (See separate story.)

In other action the Board approved a maintenance and operating budget for Richard Bland College in the amount of $3,225,609. Members also received an interim progress report from Barrett H. Carson, director of development, and approved the design of a heroic bronze statue of a waterman for the front of Waterman's Hall at the School of Marine Science in Gloucester Point, with the understanding that the approval of the statue itself is reserved to the Board.

Swenson

A native of Crystal Lake, Ill., Swenson is a 1976 graduate of Indiana University where he earned a bachelor of science degree in physical education with a minor in English. During his undergraduate days at IU, Swenson was basketball manager for the Hoosiers under Coach Bobby Knight. Swenson served as graduate assistant for one year.

A year later Swenson served as junior varsity coach at Army under Michael Krzyzewski; his team had a 30-7 record over two years. His third year at Army he was promoted to assistant varsity coach for the 1979-80 season when Army advanced to the National Invitational Tournament.

The next year Swenson moved with Krzyzewski to Duke. During his years there, Duke advanced to postseason play in five of the seven years. Duke appeared in four NCAA tournaments and reached the quarterfinals of the NIT tournament in 1980-81.

Swenson has built a solid reputation as a recruiter. He played a big part in landing Washington, D.C.'s Johnny Dawkins, the 1986 Naismith Award winner, later a first-round pick of the San Antonio Spurs of the NBA, and Mark Alarie, currently with the Denver Nuggets. Two years ago Swenson played a key role in signing Danny Ferry, a DeMatha High School student who was rated the top high-school recruit in the nation.

Swenson becomes the 25th head basketball coach at the College and the second since William and Mary joined the Colonial Athletic Association ranks in 1985.

Chosen from a national search and one of five finalists for the position, Swenson was the first choice of the search committee to lead William and Mary into a new era, says John Randolph, athletic director. "Chuck Swenson is a top-quality person who has achieved solid success as a recruiter of outstanding student-athletes. After 24 years under two of the top teachers of the game, Bob Knight and Mike Krzyzewski, he is our choice to lead William and Mary toward a new strata of success for our basketball program."
