Actors return for festival opening July 2

Audiences will see several familiar faces at the Virginia Shakespeare Festival this summer. Seven actors are returning to the Williamsburg stage, including one whose appearance marks his fourth season with the festival.

Will Casey, returning for a fourth straight year, has performed in nine plays for the festival, among them "A Midsummer Night's Dream," "Measure for Measure," "Hamlet," "Romeo and Juliet" and "Taming of the Shrew." This year Casey will add the roles of Nim and Gower in "Henry V," Menacrates and Candidius in "Antony and Cleopatra" and Rover in "Wild Oats" to his repertoire.

Since last year, Casey has taught voice for stage at Montclair State College in New Jersey, acting and voice at Ft. Lewis College in Durango, Colo., his hometown, and creative dramatics in Durango's elementary schools. He also played title roles in "Macbeth" and "The Dresser" and Marley's Ghost in "A Christmas Carol."

Evangelia Costantakos, who appeared with the 1986 festival, returns this year to play the female lead in "Antony and Cleopatra." She will also appear in "Henry V" as a hostess and as Amelia in "Wild Oats." Last year she played Lady Montague in "Romeo and Juliet," Rosaline in "Love's Labour's Lost" and Lady Mortimer in "Henry IV." She holds a master's degree in fine arts from Southern Methodist University.

Also returning for a second year is John Edmond Morgan, who played Romeo in "Romeo and Juliet," Longaville in "Love's Labour's Lost" and Mortimer in "Henry IV" in 1986. This year he will play Michael Williams in "Henry V," Borachio in "Much Ado About Nothing" and one of Pompey's soldiers in "Antony and Cleopatra."

Morgan's acting experiences include roles with the Champlain and Utah Shakespeare Festivals and elsewhere as John Merrick in "The Elephant Man," Tom in "The Glass Menagerie," Laertes in "Hamlet" and Lucio in "Measure for Measure." He is a graduate of the University of Washington and lives in New York City.

John Reese returns to the festival after a seven-year absence. He will portray Leonato in "Much Ado About Nothing" and has multiple roles as Taurus, Varrus and a Roman messenger in "Antony and Cleopatra." His acting credits include roles on several television daytime dramas and in the De-Evangelia Costantakos returns to the Virginia Shakespeare Festival in a title role in "Antony and Cleopatra," which opens Wednesday, July 15. The festival opens Thursday, July 2.

Niro/Streep film "Falling in Love." Reese's directing credits include "1776," "The Elephant Man," "The Miser" and the International Children's Festival at Wolf Trap Farm Park.

Reese also has studied Shakespeare in England on a fellowship from the National Endowment for the Humanities. He has appeared with the Utah and Riverside Shakespeare Companies and spent one season as a resident actor at Washington D.C.'s Folger Theater. A graduate of William and Mary, Reese holds master's degrees from Case-Western Reserve and Temple universities. He is currently director of theater at Deerfield Academy.

Elizabeth Tunstall last appeared in the 1985 festival as Elise in Moliere's "The Miser" and Bianca in "Taming of the Shrew." Her 1987 roles include Hero in "Much Ado About Nothing" and one of Cleopatra's attendants in "Antony and Cleopatra."

Ms. Tunstall received a bachelor's degree in fine arts from Virginia Commonwealth University in 1986 and has studied at the National Theatre of Great Britain. Last year she toured with Theatre IV in "Runners" and "Babes in Toyland." Her work at VCU included roles in "The Three Sisters," "The Merchant of Venice," "Jesus Christ Superstar" and "The Winter's Tale."

Carter Reardon, returning for his second season with the festival, will play Bardolph in "Henry V," Ventidius in "Antony and Cleopatra" and Don John in "Much Ado About Nothing." He played Paris in "Romeo and Juliet," the King in "Love's Labour's Lost" and Peto in "Henry IV" in the 1986 festival. Reardon is an instructor in the division of theater at The Interlochen Arts Academy in Michigan.

Also returning for a second season, Robert Mellette will play Dauphin in "Henry V," Farmer Gammon in "Wild Oats" and Menas, Gallus and Thidius in "Antony and Cleopatra." Mellette last appeared with the festival in 1985, playing Cloten in "Cymbeline." Since then, he has performed in Florida and directed one-act plays in Raleigh, N.C.

Rehearsals are underway for this season's productions of "Antony and Cleopatra," "Henry V," "Wild Oats" and "Much Ado About Nothing." Performances are scheduled July 2 through Aug. 15. Ticket information is available by calling the box office at ext. 4469.

Over 300 students expected for Discovery program

When Dean of Admission Gary Ripple began his popular "Discovery" summer program at the College in 1982, he thought he could comfortably manage 50 high school seniors for the week-long college counseling seminar. This year, Ripple is expecting five times as many students, and he has expanded the program to fit the demand.

Ripple developed "Discovery" as admission director at Bucknell University in the early 1970s because he found that students seemed to know little about the college selection process. But as popular as the "Discovery" program is, no similar versions of it have been developed at other Virginia colleges.

Ripple likes the uniqueness of "Discovery," but that doesn't mean he's complacent. "We're always tinkering with the machine," he says. "Over the past seven years, the evaluations of the program have been so positive that no major changes have been necessary."

This year the tinkering has resulted in two weeks of "Discovery," June 28-July 3 and July 19-24. So far approximately 250 students from 27 states have signed up, but applications are still coming in. Ripple now says he thinks he can handle 200 students — per week. "It's a tremendous amount of work, but the students appreciate the amount of time we spend with them," he says.

Clearly, "Discovery" has come a long way. "For the first two or three years, I had to spend the first day of 'Discovery' just convincing students that it (choosing the right college) is important," says Ripple. "But we don't have to justify the program any more because the students are coming on their own now. They sense the difficulty of the decision and the help they'll need to make a good one."

If there was any down-side to "Discovery," Ripple says, it was that staff counselors sometimes felt frustrated by a lack of "closure" to some of the more difficult counseling problems they encountered. "Two weeks are ideal," he says. "By the end of the first week, we're just getting tuned up." He'll have 38 counselors from high schools and colleges in 16 states on the "Discovery" staff this year.

Students who come to "Discovery" spend an intense week learning how to make college and career decisions, enhancing their study skills and living on a college campus. According to the "Discovery" brochure, they also do "much soul-searching and self-evaluation."

Physics

An article by J. L. Feldman, M. J. Mehl and H. Krakauer, titled "Sodium Chloride Structural Properties: Linearized Augmented-Plane-Wave Calculations and Pressure Calibration," was published in Physical Review B 35 (1987): 6395.

Anthropology

The spring issue of the anthropology journal The Chesopiean contains an article by alumnus John M. Thompson '86 titled "Cochise: Shepherd of His People." The text was originally a term paper submitted for Professor Thomas Reinhart's course on Indians of North America.

VIMS

Susan O. Barrick, head librarian, recently hosted the 20th annual meeting of Virginia Special Libraries Association at VIMS. Guest speaker Janice Carter-Lovejoy, Chesapeake Bay Programs coordinator, presented a program titled "The Chesapeake Bay." Activities included a tour of VIMS and optional field trips.

Thomas A. Barnard Jr., assistant professor, was an invited speaker on the coastal wetlands panel at the regional workshop on the Beneficial Uses of Dredged Material held in Baltimore. The New York Region of the Corps of Engineers sponsored the program. Barnard spoke on "Wetlands and Beneficial Use of Dredged Material: A State Perspective."

William J. Hargis Jr., professor, attended the fourth annual symposium on Responses of Marine Organisms to Pollutants held at Woods Hole Oceanographic Institution in Massachusetts. He presented a paper on "Effects of Polynuclear Aromatic Hydrocarbons in Fishes and Shellfishes: An Overview of Research in Virginia," which he co-authored with M. E. Bender, R. J. Huggett and M. H. Roberts Jr. In a poster session, Hargis presented a paper titled "Effects of Certain Contaminants on Eyes of Several Estuarine Fishes."

During his trip, Hargis met with Richard Wolke of the Department of Aquaculture Science and Pathology of the University of Rhode Island in Kingston, to consult on lesions (disease conditions) found in fishes from the Elizabeth River.

Hargis was also an invited participant at the Workshop on Neoplasms and Related Disorders in Fishes held at VIMS and the Williamsburg Hilton at Kingsmill. The workshop, organized to begin development of an atlas of cancers and cancer-like diseases of fishes, attracted 50 of the most prominent specialists in fish and mammalian (human and veterinary) medicine. Funding for both the workshop and atlas has come from several institutions and agencies including the National Cancer Institute, American Petroleum Institute and National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration.

Gene M. Silberhorn, professor, and Walter I. Priest III, instructor, attended the annual conference of the Society of Wetland Scientists and Coastal Zone 1987 Conference in Seattle, Wash. Silberhorn presented a poster titled "Vegetation of Selected Dune Ridges and Marshes on the Eastern Shore of Virginia: Community Structure and Relationship to Environmental Factors" with Marian V. Huq (former VIMS graduate student) from the Oak Ridge National Laboratory. Silberhorn was also elected vice president of the Society of Wetland Scientists. He served as chief editor of the society's journal, Wetlands, from 1985 to 1987.

Priest presented a paper co-authored with Thomas A. Barnard Jr. titled "Plant Community Dynamics in a Recently Planted Wetlands Bank."

Mark Luckenbach, assistant professor, was an invited guest of the Governor's School program held at the NASA Visitors Center, Hampton, in June. Both Luckenbach and VIMS were recognized for their participation in the Governor's School Mentorship program and received a special plaque from the school.

Career Services

Bob Hunt, associate director, has been voted president-elect of the Virginia College Placement Association (VCPA) for 1987-88. The 231-member VCPA consists of persons from organizations that recruit graduates from colleges and universities in Virginia as well as members of career planning and placement professional staffs. The association provides leadership in the areas of recruitment, career development and placement through conferences, workshops and a newsletter.

Education

James Patton, associate professor, served as an evaluator for the Collaborative Teacher Education Program (COTEPEP) at a conference held May 7 in Richmond. This program represents a cooperative teacher education effort on the part of Virginia Commonwealth University and the Richmond City Public Schools.

Patton also co-authored, with Louis Messier, associate professor, a Special Education Training Institute Planning Grant, which was recently funded by the State Department of Education

Col. Carson, president emeritus of Richard Bland College, dies

Col. James Marsh Carson, president emeritus of Richard Bland College of the College of William and Mary in Petersburg, died Monday, June 7 of congestive heart failure in Williamsburg Community Hospital. He was 77.

Although a career Army officer, Carson was a specialist in education administration, and it was in that capacity that W&M Chancellor Alvin Duke Chandler called upon Carson to assume the Richard Bland directorship in 1961 as a two-year school was being established.

He served as director until 1968 when he became provost. He was named the college's first president on July 1, 1969, serving until he retired in Aug. 1973. In his 12 years Carson oversaw the construction of all the current campus buildings and the renovation of the old state facilities on the site. He spent his retirement in Williamsburg.

Carson was born in Sumter County, S.C., and graduated from The Citadel in 1932. He obtained a master of education in administration from the University of South Carolina.

In the mid-1930s he served as superintendent of schools in Lee and Florence counties, S.C. He also served as commanding officer of several Civilian Conservation Corps camps in South Carolina and Georgia.

In Jan. 1941 he was called to active duty with the Army and was at Schofield Barracks in Hawaii, commanding an anti-aircraft battery, during the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor. He served in the Pacific theater throughout World War II.

Following the war he served for four years on the staff of Gen. Douglas Mac-Arthur in Tokyo, Japan. From 1955 to 1959 he was a professor of military science and tactics at William and Mary.

In 1960, after a tour of duty in Korea, he became senior adviser to the National Guard for the Commonwealth of Virginia. He retired from the Army on May 31, 1961, to become director at Richard Bland.

Carson attended many military schools, including the Command and General Staff College, where he also served on the teaching staff; the Strategic Intelligence School; and the School of Military Government at the University of Virginia.

Carson was a member of Bruton Parish Church, the Williamsburg Rotary Club, a former president of the local Meals on Wheels and a director of the Colonial Capitol Branch of the Association for the Preservation of Virginia Antiquities. He was a charter member of the Southside Virginia Retired Officers' Association and a member of the Peninsula Retired Officers' Association. During his years at Richard Bland he was active in numerous Petersburg civic organizations.

He is survived by his wife, Elizabeth Thomas Carson; a son, Col. James Marsh Carson Jr. (U.S. Army-retired), West Lake Village, Calif.; a daughter, Elizabeth Carson Schwartz of Scotch Plains, N.J.; and two sisters, Eleanor Carson of Sumter, S.C., and Hallie Carson Davis of Hilton Head Island, S.C.

A graveside service was held at Arlington National Cemetery, Thursday, June 4, followed by a memorial service at Bruton Parish Church, Friday, June 4.

The family has asked that memorials be sent to Richard Bland College or the Colonial Capitol Branch of the APVA.

Library adds to Barron, Tyler manuscript collections

The Earl Gregg Swem Library at the College of William and Mary recently acquired at an auction at Sotheby's in New York a valuable 300-page manuscript relating to 19th-century American Naval officer James Barron and the Chesapeake-Leopard affair of 1807.

At the same auction, the library also purchased a letter of William and Mary alumnus John Tyler (1790-1862), 10th President of the United States (1841-1845).

Commodore James Barron (1768-1851) was captain of the U.S. Navy ship Chesapeake, which was overcome by the Leopard, a British ship looking for alleged British deserters. The Chesapeake gave up the fight after firing only one shot, and court martial hearings were instigated against Barron by his junior officers.

The materials purchased on Barron relate to these hearings and include previously unknown material. They include correspondence, rough minutes of hearings, witnesses' testimony, attorneys' interrogations, all relating to proceedings held in 1807-08. Although Barron was cleared of all but one charge, he was never again allowed to command a U.S. Navy ship.

A native of Hampton and later a resident of Norfolk, Barron was banished from the Navy for five years after the hearings and took command of a merchant vessel, which was marooned in Denmark during the War of 1812. There he supported himself by his inventions, returning to America in 1819. Shortly thereafter he fought a duel with an old enemy, Stephen Decatur (1779-1820), and mortally wounded him.

Barron was commander of the Gosport Naval Yard in Portsmouth from 1825 to 1831 and later served in the same office at the Philadelphia Navy Yard. He died in Norfolk at the age of 82.

"The papers are particularly valuable in shedding light on 19th-century court martial hearings," says Margaret Cook, the library's curator of manuscripts and rare books. Although the Barron hearings were published, Swem Library's new acquisition includes rough drafts used in preparing the publication and material excluded from the book, she says.

Swem Library is the major repository for James Barron's papers, numbering 2,739 items in a larger family repository. "This latest acquisition will support much-needed new research on Barron's life," says Cook.

The Tyler letter, written to his wife Letitia, is dated Dec. 20, 1818, when the aspiring politician was a Virginia congressman. At that time, explains Cook, Tyler was caught between his responsibilities to an investigating committee on which he was serving and his responsibilities to his wife and family. "The letter is a warm affectionate one regretting he will not be home for Christmas due to the pressures of public life," says Cook.

"This Tyler letter is the oldest one in the Swem collection and one of only two letters in the collection written to his first wife," she adds. The Tyler family papers at Swem Library were a gift in 1955 of the grandchildren of President Tyler.

CEBAF summer workshop slated

The CEBAF 1987 Summer Workshop will be held at Christopher Newport College, Newport News, June 22-26. The program is planned around two types of collaboration meetings — program collaborations and physics collaborations — and will provide opportunities for various groups to meet to organize additional collaborative efforts.

Participants are expected from major research facilities throughout the world. R. T. Siegel from William and Mary will co-chair a program collaboration on parity measurements. CEBAF scientists scheduled to participate are H. Grunder, J. Dirk Walecka, C. Leemann, A. Chargin, J. Mougey, B. Meckling, F. Gross and R. Sundlin.

Institute co-sponsors major Constitution conference

The Institute of Bill of Rights Law at the College's Marshall-Wythe School of Law will co-sponsor with the Chautauqua Institution a conference on the American Constitution June 29-July 3 in Chautauqua, N.Y. The conference will feature prominent lawyers and legal historians and an address by U.S. Attorney General Edwin Meese III.

Moderator for the week's program will be Gene R. Nichol Jr., deputy director of the Institute of Bill of Rights Law at Marshall-Wythe. William and Mary President Paul R. Verkuil and Marshall-Wythe Dean Timothy J. Sullivan will present opening re-

In a keynote address at 11 a.m. Monday, June 29, Attorney General Meese will present a major talk on constitutional law, titled "The Living Constitution." In the afternoon, Norman Dorsen, president of the American Civil Liberties Union (ACLU) and a professor at New York University School of Law, will comment on Meese's remarks in an open audience exchange format. The following day, Dorsen will discuss "The Protection of Civil Liberties in the United States."

As a follow-up to Dorsen's remarks, William Bradford Reynolds, assistant U.S. attorney general in charge of the civil rights division of the Department of Justice, will comment on Dorsen's presentation and respond to audience questions.

On Wednesday, Edwin M. Yoder Jr., a syndicated columnist for the Washington Post, will discuss "The First Amendment and the Myth of the Fourth Estate." In the afternoon, a panel of journalists will comment and answer questions.

Thursday will feature a discussion of privacy issues by Sylvia Law, professor of law at New York University. On Friday, Sol B. Wachtler, chief judge of the New York State Court of Appeals, will present a talk on "A Constitution for Our Age." The conference will conclude with a general summary and a question-and-answer session, moderated by Gene Nichol.

Other conference participants throughout the week will include B. Glenn George, associate professor of law at Marshall-Wythe, who will discuss a variety of constitutional issues affecting women, and Ronald H. Rosenber, Marshall-Wythe law professor, who will discuss "Private Property and the Constitution." Also during the week, William L. Miller, chairman of the Department of Rhetoric and Communications Studies at the University of Virginia, will discuss a variety of topics in constitutional history.

Verkuil encourages young graduates

As commencement addresses go, it had to be one of the shortest given anywhere this year. The speaker knew it was a tough audience, and the consequences of a too-long speech would be swift and sure.

The speaker was Paul R. Verkuil, president William and Mary. The audience consisted of third-graders graduating June 13 from Matthew Whaley School of the Williamsburg-James City County Public Schools. And the chief potential speech critic was Gibson Verkuil, one of the "graduates" and the nine-year-old son of the speaker.

In the speech, which lasted about five minutes, Verkuil urged Gibson and his classmates to take their schoolwork seriously, to stay in school through high school and to attend college.

"It's never too early to think about making the most of your education, about achieving as much as you can in school," he said. "If you do well in school and stay with it, you will give yourself more opportunities in life."

He also talked briefly — one might suspect to the parents — about the importance of supporting public education.

"Our public schools are the basis for matters of critical importance to all of us," he said. "We entrust the future of our children to them, and we depend on public education to develop the very leadership of our society."

Verkuil also shared with the students one of the academic trappings they will encounter in later life — a mortarboard. After discussing its historical significance, he suggested and demonstrated a use more meaningful to your average rising fourth-grader, converting it into a square black frisbee, which he sailed to Gibson in the front row.

Parke Land (l), principal of Matthew Whaley Elementary School, and President Verkuil await the start of the school's graduation exercises.

CHAMP students return to campus

A group of minority high school students who participated in a new program at William and Mary last summer called CHAMP have returned to campus for another session June 14-27.

Carroll Hardy, associate dean of student affairs, initiated CHAMP (Creating Higher Aspirations and Motivation Program) last summer with monetary support from the State Council of Higher Education's Funds for Excellence. With leftover funds, Hardy brought back the same group of students, who are now rising high school juniors.

CHAMP was originally intended for rising high school sophomores and was designed to limit or reduce the rate of minority students who drop out of high school. A major feature of CHAMP is to involve parents more in their children's educations. Hardy also hopes that CHAMP will motivate the students to consider college after secondary school.

This year, participants are studying mathematics and writing and study skills. Two hours of studying are required each night during the two weeks. CHAMP students are also being videotaped interviewing fellow participants so that they can get an idea of how they look and sound to others.

Also during the program the students are touring Washington, D.C., with special emphasis on visits to museums which reflect cultural and historic contributions made by prominent black Americans.

County wins national award for Shakespeare programs

Imagination and community spirit have brought an award to the James City County Department of Parks and Recreation for cultural programs involving the Virginia Shakespeare Festival at William and Mary.

The National Association of Counties has recognized James City County for the development of cultural opportunities for young people with "Camp Shakespeare," now in its second year at the festival, and for senior citizens with "Senior Shakespeare." In a similar vein, the county will also sponsor two art camps with the College's Muscarelle Museum of Art this summer.

Kathy Gray, recreation supervisor for James City County, is responsible for developing the programs. She says she decided to use the Shakespeare festival to involve children in a cultural opportunity they may not otherwise have known about and to help them develop an appreciation for Elizabethan art. The festival provides space and personnel to teach during "Camp Shakespeare." Senior citizens will also meet with festival artists for a week in June for "Senior Shakespeare."

The county will receive an award certificate and plaque, with a separate plaque to be given to the College. "It's very generous for the festival to include a municipal department in their family. That's a rare and wonderful opportunity," says Ms. Gray.

Observance of Independence Day Holiday

The College and VIMS will be closed Friday, July 3 to observe Independence Day.

The administrative offices, the plant department and the campus mail room will be closed with the exception of essential employees who are required to work. The Campus Police Department will maintain its regular schedule.

Classes are scheduled for July 3. Academic support staff who are required to work will be credited with compensatory time on an hour-for-hour basis. Consistent with an exception in the Fair Labor Standards Act, non-exempt employees are also eligible for compensatory leave if they are required to work on this holiday.

The names of permanent classified employees and William and Mary support personnel who are required to work must be reported in writing to the Office of Personnel Services by July 7 in order that these employees may be credited with compensatory leave on an hour-for-hour basis.

With the approval of management, compensatory leave earned should be taken as soon as possible after the holiday on which it was earned. Compensatory time not taken within 12 months will lapse. Hourly employees who are required to work on the holiday will be paid at their regular hourly rates.

On behalf of the administration of the university, I wish each member of the community a safe and enjoyable holiday.
