Alumnus makes multi-million-dollar bequest

Roy R. Charles, a member of the class of 1932, has announced plans to provide a multi-million dollar gift to his alma mater through his estate plans. William and Mary President Paul R. Verkuil said last Friday to members of the President's Council, a group of the university's financial supporters, that the provision is the largest private commitment in the institution's 294-year history.

According to Verkuil, when the bequest is eventually realized, the endowment will be used to support at least 10 faculty members of the highest caliber who will be named fellows of the College's Center for Honors and Interdisciplinary Studies. The bequest will also help underwrite academic program initiatives associated with the center, which focuses on undergraduate curriculum. Verkuil said that he will recommend to the university's Board of Visitors next month that the center be named the Roy R. Charles Center for Honors and Interdisciplinary Studies.

The center, established in the fall of 1986 with a $250,000 grant from the Commonwealth of Virginia's Funds for Excellence program, encompasses a variety of programs integral to William and Mary's undergraduate curriculum. It includes the Honors Program for select sophomores and advanced freshmen; the Presidential Scholars Program, recognizing academically talented freshmen; and the interdisciplinary major, which enables students to major in areas such as American studies, comparative literature, environmental science, and public policy. In addition, the center offers fellowships and course development grants to William and Mary faculty members and oversees a series of distinguished visiting professorships in the humanities.

Verkuil said that, when realized, the Charles gift "will catapult the Center for Honors and Interdisciplinary Studies to the forefront of undergraduate education. The Charles fellows will help us achieve an important goal: to reaffirm higher education as a continuum in which faculty members and students from all disciplines are colleagues sharing ideas and challenging each other to new heights of achievement."

For 33 years, Charles was executive and director of Smith-Douglas, Inc. He retired from that position in 1965. A resident of Norfolk, he has been a philanthropist and prominent civic leader in the Tidewater region for many years. He served as a member of William and Mary's Board of Visitors from 1952 to 1960 and as chairman of the Campaign for the College, William and Mary's first major endowment drive, in the late 1970s. In recognition of his devotion and long-standing support of the university, he received the Alumni Medallion in 1961 and an honorary doctoral degree in 1975.

Planning for 300th begins

The celebration of the 300th anniversary of the College will be unique to this institution, will have a strong intellectual content and will endeavor to turn the national spotlight on William and Mary.

These are the goals of the chairman of the Commission on the Tercentenary Observances of the College of William and Mary in Virginia, which was formally established by Governor Gerald Baliles in Executive Order No. 50.

The commission chairman, Henry Rosovsky, former dean of the faculty of arts and sciences and currently Lewis P. and Linda L. Geyser University Professor at Harvard, was on campus this weekend for the initial meeting of the commission and to participate in a panel discussion on the liberal arts, which was part of the Parents Weekend program.

At the meeting, commission members decided to establish a representative steering committee of faculty, staff and locally based alumni of the College to handle various tasks of the commission. The steering committee is expected to be organized within the next two weeks. The commission also took action on adopting a mission statement and goals, which should be revised and released within the next two weeks.

Thad Tate, Pullen Professor of History and a member of the commission, reported on the various activities planned during 1988-89 to celebrate the 300th anniversary of William and Mary's ascension to the English throne. Members also discussed commissioning projects, including a College history and a commemorative stamp, both of which will be explored by the steering committee. Also at the weekend session, a variety of operating committees were set up, which will report to the commission when it meets again early next year.

Rosovsky said he was very pleased to have been asked to chair the commission for a number of reasons. "I do want to repay a considerable debt to William and Mary. I think I got an excellent education here and I wanted to help the College in ways in which I could be particularly knowledgeable and efficient." Rosovsky said he was very much involved with the recent 350th celebration at Harvard. "I really felt I could make a contribution in

Reception today

"Hard Hat Construction Worker (1970)" by Duane Hanson appears in the Muscarelle Museum's current exhibit "Figure Drawings by 20th-Century American Artists from the Herman Foundation Collection." A reception celebrating the opening of the current exhibits will be held 5:30-7:30 p.m. today at the museum.

Supreme Court, Bill of Rights and the law topic of series

In celebration of the Bicentennial of the U.S. Constitution, the Institute of Bill of Rights Law at the Marshall-Wythe School of Law, The Williamsburg Regional Library and the Virginia Foundation for the Humanities and Public Policy, with funding from the National Endowment for the Humanities, will sponsor a series of Tuesday evening public discussions on "The Supreme Court, The Bill of Rights and the Law," Oct. 8-Nov. 12.

The series will be held at 8 p.m. in the Williamsburg Regional Library, Arts Center Theatre.

The talks are free and open to the public.

On Oct. 8, Melvin I. Urofsky, professor of history at Virginia Commonwealth University and author of The Supreme Court, the Bill of Rights and the Law, will speak on "The History of the Bill of Rights."

Richard A. Williamson, vice dean and professor of law at Marshall-Wythe School of Law will discuss "The Right to Counsel" on Oct. 15.

The Oct. 22 discussion of "Freedom of Speech" will be led by Paul A. LeBel, professor of law, Marshall-Wythe School of Law.

"Due Process, Privacy and Personal Autonomy" will be Gene R. Nichol's topic on Nov. 5. Nichol is Cutler Professor of Constitutional Law at Marshall-Wythe School of Law and the director of the Institute of Bill of Rights Law.

The series will conclude on Nov. 12 with "The Public's Right to Know" by William B. Spong, dean and Dudley W. Woodbridge Professor of Law Emeritus, Marshall-Wythe School of Law, and former U.S. Senator from Virginia.

To enhance these discussions, the Virginia Foundation for the Humanities has published a volume containing abridged versions of the 25 landmark Supreme Court decisions that will be the focus of the discussion series. This is available to participants free of charge. Copies will be available at the opening program of the series or by contacting the local sponsoring organizations. Prior reading of the text in preparation for the lecture discussion is suggested but not required.

For further information contact Millie Arthur, IBRL, Marshall-Wythe School of Law, ext. 4120; or the reference staff at the Williamsburg Regional Library, 229-7326.

Rosovsky: William and Mary has own place in American education

this area and so I was glad to accept, and it is also nice to come back to Williamsburg every once in a while."

Although he was active in the Harvard 350th celebration, Rosovsky has no thought of making William and Mary's 300th anniversary a close copy. "I think it is terribly important for every celebration to be specifically designed for the institution," he said. "William and Mary has its own place and has its own great importance in the history of American education. I don't think anyone would suggest we imitate Harvard or anyone else."

"On the other hand, simply running a large event of that size means a lot," says Rosovsky, and adds that some of the negative lessons are sometimes more important than the positive ones. "It shows you where to be careful, what all the constituencies are. We learned something about handling a large press corps, many people, what the main issues are, the balancing of the academic versus the celebratory and those kinds of things. After all, how many people go through anniversaries like this? It is a rare thing. People who have this experience have valuable knowledge."

"I would like for this event, first of all, to go beyond just pomp and circumstance. We are celebrating the 300th anniversary of a college, actually a university today. I would like it to have a strong intellectual content. I think this is important for the graduates of the College."

"Second, I think it is a unique opportunity for William and Mary to receive beneficial publicity. In many ways William and Mary has been probably one of the most underpublicized schools. It has been a kind of secret in higher education. I don't think I am the first person to say this. I think other people have said it. I think people are just beginning to see what a high quality institution exists here. Paul Verkuil told me that William and Mary is the most selective public institution in the country, which is a great tribute to the school. I would like to see this opportunity to gain for William and Mary the benefits of the publicity to which it is entitled."

When asked what particular strengths of the university he would like to see emphasized in the celebration, he said: "There are in our country very few first-class small universities. Maybe that is a difficult thing to have, to make work. I can think of very, very few. William and Mary is one of the outstanding ones."

"And what are the advantages of a small university? I think they are pretty obvious. I think they are on a humane scale. They allow a very good teacher-student contact. They are easier for students to get used to. They are better in terms of individual growth. The strengths are very much, I think, in the undergraduate educational area."

"As far as the graduate programs at William and Mary are concerned, I don't know them personally as well, but I have heard very good things about many graduates, and here again I think these programs need more exposure to the outside world."

The other thing that should be brought out is the tremendous progress the College has made, said Rosovsky. "I was in the class of 1949. In 1949 I think the University of Virginia was very dominant in terms of institutions and compared to other state schools. William and Mary was not nearly as strong as it is today. I am amazed when I come back here by the changes, the growth not only in size but in quality. That is a very impressive story because in many ways this school really rose from the ashes, not too long ago. It is really a very great and exciting story."

Henry Rosovsky (l), Mark McCormack and Jody Powell field questions from the audience during a panel discussion on the liberal arts, Saturday morning in William and Mary Hall as part of Parents Weekend.

Ivo Herzer, Holocaust survivor, to give 1987 Bellini lecture

Ivo Herzer, senior research associate at the Riverside Research Institute in Alexandria, Va., will give the 1987 Bellini Lecture at the College of William and Mary on "Rescue of Jewish Refugees by Italian Authorities During the Holocaust," at 8 p.m., Thursday, Oct. 8 in Washington 200.

A reception will be held following the lecture at the relocated Italian House at 195 Armistead Ave.; the public is invited to both the lecture and the reception. There is no admission charge.

This lecture is named for Carolo Bellini who came from Florence and was appointed by Thomas Jefferson to the first American chair of modern languages at the College in 1779.

Dr. Herzer, a native of Yugoslavia, was among the 5,000 Yugoslav Jews who were rescued from the Nazis by the Italian Army in occupied Yugoslavia; Herzer was 16. In 1944 he fled to Bari in southern Italy where for the next two years he went to school and worked for the British Army as a translator and taught English for the British Council. From 1946 to 1948 he worked as administrator for the American Joint Distribution Committee, the international Jewish organization for aid to refugees.

Sir Denys Wilkinson to talk, 'the universe, today & tomorrow'

Sir Denys Wilkinson, a Fellow of the Royal Society and vice chancellor of the University of Sussex, England, will give a public lecture on "The Universe Today and Tomorrow," at 7 p.m., Tuesday, Oct. 6 in William Small 109.

Wilkinson is well known for a wide range of contributions to the fundamental understanding of elementary particle and nuclear physics and for his skill in presenting recent developments to both scientific and general audiences.

His lecture for a general audience is part of a two-day visit to the College which will include two other lectures, "Nuclear Rings and Chains," a special physics colloquium, at 4 p.m. Monday, Oct. 5. He will speak on "The Status of Some Nuclear Symmetries," at 2 p.m., Tuesday, Oct. 6 in Small 109.

United Way fund half-way home

To date, $12,944 has been collected in the United Way fund drive toward the College's goal of $25,000. The Greater Williamsburg United Way campaign has set a goal of $550,000 to help support the activities of 23 agencies, all of whom provide services in the Williamsburg area.

Provost Melvyn Schiavelli and Vice President William F. Merck are co-chairmen of the College campaign this year. Joy Archer, professor of physical education is faculty coordinator. The Rev. Braxton Allport of the campus Wesleyan Foundation is heading the student campaign.

Merck's staff members — Becky Raines, Dianna Tennis, Juanita Ellis and Joanne Wilkerson — are supplying the administrative support for the campaign.

If you haven't already given, please contact Merck's office staff at ext. 4211. They will be glad to send you information about the work of the United Way and a pledge card. You can tailor your donation to your individual preference: by check, pledge or direct billing.

253-New SCATS

The College has been advised by the Department of Information Technology that on Dec. 7 the Williamsburg Centrex system will undergo changes to make it consistent with other State Centrexes. Local numbers will remain the same. SCATS numbers will change from 427-XXXX to 253-XXXX. Local and SCATS numbers will then be the same.

This changeover by C&P Telephone, however, will cause some inconvenience for the College. A freeze on service orders will be in effect from Nov. 4 - Dec. 4, so that C&P and DIT can devote the necessary personnel to the changeover. Therefore, telephone users are encouraged to do some advance planning in the area of installation, moves, rearrangements, etc., in order to minimize any problems which may arise from this freeze. Work order requests require a 30-day lead time.

Questions should be directed to Pam Owen at ext. 5516.

careers with the U.S. Department of State, the U.S. Information Agency and the U.S. Department of Commerce.

Deadline for registration is Oct. 23. The test will be given Dec. 5.

Ivo Herzer

In 1948 he received a B'Nai Brith scholarship and came to the United States. He earned graduate degrees in international relations from Fairleigh Dickinson University, Russian area studies from City College of New York and electrical engineering from Columbia University.

As a historian he has done research on the rescue and aid of Jews by Italians during the Holocaust. In 1986 he organized and chaired the first international conference of historians on "Italians and Jews: Aid and Rescue During the Holocaust," held at Boston University under the sponsorship of the National Italian American Foundation, the National Endowment for the Humanities, and the American Jewish Committee.

In May, at the request of the Historical Institute of Calabria, he traveled to Cosenza, Italy, to chair a session of the conference on "The Ferramonti Camp and the Problem of Internment in Southern Italy." In mid-November, at the express invitation of Francesco Cossiga, president of the Republic of Italy, Dr. Herzer will attend a reception to honor and recognize rescuers and survivors of the Holocaust to be held at the Quirinale in Rome.

In 1984 Dr. Herzer chaired a special session on Italy and the Holocaust as part of an International Conference of rescuers and survivors, named "Faith in Humankind," sponsored by the United States Holocaust Council. Earlier he had published a memoir of his wartime experiences in a 1983 edition of Midstream magazine.

Currently Dr. Herzer is editing the Boston University conference proceedings to be published by the University Press of America.

Women's Club Plantation tour

The College Women's Club will visit Berkeley, Shirley and Evelynton plantations Tuesday, Oct. 6.

The group will assemble in front of Phi Beta Kappa Memorial Hall at 8 a.m., and carpools will be formed.

Lunch will be served at Indian Fields Tavern following the tour. Guests are welcome.

For further information, call Cassandra Plater, 565-3370, or Joan Goodwin, 229-2712.

Bulbs, plants both on sale

The plant sale program in the biology department is sponsoring its second annual bulb sales offer. Please call ext. 4284 for order forms for bulb sales.

A plant sale will be held from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. in the Campus Center on Oct. 8 and 9.

A variety of indoor plants will be provided by Mr. and Mrs. Deshields Henley.

Proceeds from both the bulb sales and the plant sale will be used for greenhouse support and a scholarship.
