Weekend activities focus on Constitution

A public lecture Saturday and a constitutional forum on Sunday will highlight a weekend of activities in honor of the Bicentennial of the Constitution.

Arthur Schlesinger Jr., Albert Schweitzer Professor in the Humanities, City University of New York, will give a public lecture at 5:30 p.m., Saturday, Oct. 10 in Chancellors Hall titled "Two Cheers for the Separation of Powers"; a reception will follow. This lecture is co-sponsored by Project '87 The American Constitutional Bicentennial and the Virginia Commission on the Bicentennial of the United States Constitution and is supported by a grant from the CSX Corporation.

Shirley M. Hufstедler, Secretary of Education in the Carter Administration, currently with Hufstедler, Miller, Carlson & Beardley of Los Angeles, Calif.; Austin Ranney, chairman, Department of Political Science, University of California at Berkeley; Hedrick Smith, chief Washington correspondent of the New York Times; and Eddie Williams, president, Joint Center for Political Studies, Washington, D.C., will be panelists for a constitutional forum to be held at 5 p.m. in Phi Beta Kappa Memorial Hall, sponsored by the League of Women Voters Educational Fund and Project '87. The moderator will be Cokie

Eddie Williams

Hedrick Smith

Arthur Schlesinger

Roberts, congressional correspondent for National Public Radio. Panelists will discuss "Mr. Madison's Constitution and the Twenty-first Century." Invitations have been issued for the forum but members of the general public are invited on a space-available basis.

The forum has been made possible by a grant from the Ford Foundation, and planners have expressed their thanks for assistance of the William and Flora Hewlett Foundation, the John Hancock Mutual Life Insurance Company, the College of William and Mary, the National Center for State Courts and the CSX Corporation.

A series of meetings on the conference theme will be held Saturday, Sunday and Monday at the National Center for State Courts. This portion of the program is being planned by Project 87 The American Constitutional Bicentennial, and supported by the CSX Corporation and the Virginia Commission on the Bicentennial of the United States Constitution.

Conference panelists will include James MacGregor Burns, Williams College; Joyce O. Appleby, University of California, Los Angeles; Herman Belz, I. M. Destler and Roger Davidson, University of Maryland; Walter Berns, Georgetown University; Thomas E. Cronin, Colorado College; Robert A. Dahl, Yale University; Leon D. Epstein, University of Wisconsin.

Also, Otis L. Graham, University of North Carolina; Martha Derthick, Matthew Holden Jr. and A. E. Dick Howard, University of Virginia; Kay Lawson, San Francisco State University; Richard L. McCormick, Rutgers University; Elinor Ostrom, Indiana University; Austin Ranney, University of California, Berkeley; Donald L. Robinson, Smith College; Arthur Schlesinger Jr., City University of New York; and James L. Sundquist, The Brookings Institution.

Doctoral students selected Commonwealth Fellows

Two doctoral students, Christopher J. Kenney in physics and J. Thomas Wren in history, are among 13 named by the Council of Higher Education as the state's first Commonwealth Fellows.

The Commonwealth Fellow Program is the Council of Higher Education's way of recognizing the excellent graduate students who are preparing to become faculty in Virginia's system of higher education.

Fellows will be honored at a luncheon and awards presentation on Tuesday, Oct. 20 in Richmond. Fellows each receive $5,000 to help meet the expenses of graduate study.

Christopher J. Kenney is studying physics. His thesis experiment involves searching for a fifth force in nature by examining violations of fundamental symmetry laws. The experiment will be performed at Brookhaven National Laboratory.

Kenney has taught introductory physics at William and Mary and served as a teaching assistant in a junior-level nuclear physics laboratory course at the College. He received his B.A. from Duke University and his M.S. from William and Mary.

J. Thomas Wren is a doctoral student in history. He has been an instructor and teaching assistant since 1983. He is widely published and practiced law prior to returning to graduate school. His dissertation will combine his legal background with his skills in

Johnson, Spong are honored by General Assembly

Ludwell H. Johnson, professor of history and William B. Spong Jr., Dudley Warner Woodbridge Professor of Law, emeritus, and former dean of the Marshall-Wythe School of Law, have been honored by the General Assembly of Virginia for their contributions to the state.

In a presentation at the Town and Gown luncheon on Thursday, George W. Grayson, John Marshall Professor of Government and a member of the General Assembly, presented the two with citations that were prepared in Richmond.

Johnson was cited for his contributions as a historian, scholar and teacher. Last year he received the silver medal of the Council for the Advancement and Support of Education's Professor of the Year program.

Grayson recounted Spong's achievements as a U.S. Senator who helped author the War Powers Act and was instrumental in crafting important environmental legislation. He also cited Spong's achievements in bringing the Marshall-Wythe School of Law to national status.

Economics

Bruce Roberts, associate professor, is the author of an article "Marx After Steedman: Separating Marxism from 'Surplus Theory,'" which will appear in the fall issue of the British journal Capital and Class. He also co-authored, with Susan Feiner, "Marx and Keynes and Kalecki," which appeared in the Dec. 1986 issue of Journal of Economic Issues, and with Richard Wolff and Antonio Callari, "Marx's (not Ricardo's) 'Transformation Problem': A Radical Reconceptualization," which is to be reprinted in John Wood, ed., Critical Assessments of Karl Marx (Croom Helm). Roberts and Feiner have also agreed to edit a book, Radical Economics, to be published in the Kluwer-Nijhoff series Recent Economic Thought: Development, Tensions, Prospects.

English

An article by Carl Dolmetsch, professor emeritus, "Mencken as a Magazine Editor," is included (pp.156-165) in Critical Essays on H. L. Mencken by Douglas Stenerson, published recently by G. K. Hall & Company, Boston, in their series of collections Critical Essays in American Literature under the general editorship of James Nagel. This book includes the most significant and critically useful articles written about American journalist, critic, editor and pundit Mencken (1880-1956) by contemporaries such as Edmund Wilson, Van Wyck Brooks and Walter Lippmann and more recent academic appraisals such as Dolmetsch's.

History

Professor A. Z. Freeman has been elected to a three-year term on the board of directors of the Marine Corps Historical Foundation. His term will begin Nov. 2, and his duties will involve developing and implementing historical research and writing on the U.S. Marine Corps. A scholar of military history, Freeman is finishing a book on medieval English military history and introducing a new course "The Rise of the Modern Army."

Modern Languages and Literatures

An article by Stephen Field, assistant professor, "The Idylls of Yang Jifu," has been published in the autumn 1987 edition of Modern Haiku. The article is based on research conducted while he attended Sichuan University in Chengdu as a visiting scholar in 1983 and analyzes the unique truncated verse of the early 20th-century Sichuanese poet.

Sociology

Professor Michael Faia and Jon Kerner, associate professor, recently attended the American Sociology Association meetings in Chicago. Faia presented a paper titled "Apples, Oranges, and Bananas: On the Development and Uses of On-line Taxonomics in Social Science Research." Kerner presented a paper titled "Grassroots Organizational Responses to the Toxic Waste Problem."

Professor Gary Kreps has published the following article: "Classical Themes, Structural Sociology, and Disaster Research," pp. 357-403 in R.R. Dynis, B. DeMarchi and C. Paulanda, eds., Sociology of Disasters (Milano, Italy: Franco Angeli, 1987).

School of Business

Ronald Sims, associate professor, has had the following articles published: "Training the Appraisers: An Orientation Program for Improving Supervisory Performance Ratings" in Public Personnel Management; "Some Alternatives to Person-Job Match" in International Journal of Management; and "A Marketing Training Workshop for Industrial Trainers" in Journal of Industrial and Commercial Training. Sims attended the Academy of Management Conference and served as a discussant on a paper titled "Improving Gain Sharing" and presented a paper, "The Survival Experience of Blacks in Today's Organization."

Richard Hoffman, assistant professor, recently attended the annual meeting of the Academy of Management and presented two papers, "Political versus Rational Sources of Power Among Country Clusters" and "Corporate Social Responsibility in the Twenties: An Institutional Perspective." He also served as a discussant in a session on "Management History: An International Perspective."

Jean Wyer, associate professor, has been elected secretary/treasurer of the auditing section of the American Accounting Association.

Fine Arts

Professor Miles Chappell served on the international organizational committee, the Comitato Scientifico Consultivo, for the comprehensive exhibition "Il Seicento Fiorentino," consisting of some 700 Florentine Baroque paintings and drawings borrowed from collections throughout the world and shown in Florence at the Palazzo Strozzi from Dec. 1986 until May of this year.

The three-volume catalog was devoted to the theme of the development of art in 17th-century Florence as it was influenced by painters such as Lodovico Cigoli, the subject of the sections written by Chappel.

For the 1987 Conference of the Southeastern College Art Conference, sponsored by the University of Tennessee, Knoxville, Chappell was the organizer and moderator for the session, "Aspects of Technology, Iconography and Iconology in Baroque and Rococo Art."

The 1987-88 faculty/staff telephone directories are available from the Auxiliary Enterprises office, College Apartments #1, corner of Boundary and Prince George Street.

18th century portraiture study will be co-sponsored by IEAHC

The Institute of Early American History and Culture and the National Portrait Gallery will co-sponsor an interdisciplinary study of 18th-century portraiture to be held at a conference Oct. 15-17 in Washington.

Under study will be ways in which portraiture expressed and conveyed messages about evolving social and cultural values and about changing lifestyles and political thought in colonial America.

Panelists representing the fields of history, art history and American studies will discuss ways in which the arts' techniques and their subjects' motivations may have been supported and molded by social, economic and political forces. Scholars will also focus on the artists, on the people who commissioned and sat for the paintings and on the portraits as symbols of achievement, status and power.

Program speakers will include John Hayes, director of the National Portrait Gallery of London; Timothy H. Breen, professor of

Education plan with HU

In an effort to help ease the shortage of teachers for emotionally or mentally handicapped children, the School of Education and Hampton University have started a new program to train special education teachers in new or different areas of instruction.

William and Mary is sharing $40,000 in funds from the state Department of Education with Hampton University in a cooperative venture known as the Peninsula Special Education Institute. The program is directed by Dr. James M. Patton and Dr. Louis P. Messier, associate professors of education at William and Mary, and by Dr. Mary Christian at Hampton University.

At William and Mary 10 teachers from schools in Williamsburg-James City County, Charles City County, Hampton-Newport News and Gloucester have selected from 20 course offerings in the program. Training is available in one of three areas of special education: learning disabilities (LD), emotional disturbance (ED) or mental retardation (MR). When teachers finish the program, they will have the expertise to teach in an additional area of special education.

"We expected and got highly motivated people for the program," says Messier. "They are real career people who are interested in increasing their ability to deal with handicapped children and their knowledge of handicapping conditions."

Although Messier would like to train both special education teachers and regular classroom teachers, the grant requires the program to focus initially on uncertified special education teachers who want to be endorsed in one of the three specified areas. Uncertified special education teachers are those who teach mentally and emotionally handicapped children but do not have a degree in special education.

Since some special education children are being "mainstreamed" into regular classrooms, Patton and Messier plan to seek funding next year to extend the same special education training to regular classroom teachers. They would also like to train certified special education teachers who would like an additional endorsement in one of the three specified areas.

"The retraining of experienced teachers will enhance the quality of special education instruction in public schools, and provide short-term remedies for the shortage of teachers of mentally retarded, emotionally disturbed or learning disabled youngsters," says Messier. The special education teacher shortage can also be eased by training regular education teachers in at least one area of special education, he adds.

American history, Northwestern University; Jessie J. Poesch, professor of art history, Tulane University; Stephanie G. Wolf, co-director, Philadelphia Center for Early American Studies at the University of Pennsylvania; Wayne Craven, professor of art history, University of Delaware; Dorinda Evans, associate professor of art history, Emory University; and Richard Saunders, director of the Johnson Gallery, Middlebury College.

The conference will be held at the National Portrait Gallery of the Smithsonian Institution in Washington and will coincide with a Portrait Gallery exhibition of American colonial portraits from 1700 to 1776.

The conference is funded in part by a grant to the Institute from the Barra Foundation of Wyndmoor, Pa.

For information on registration, call the Institute of Early American History and Culture, ext. 5117.

Muscarelle readies for dedication

The Muscarelle Museum opened its new building to the public on July 4. This enlarged facility, which increases the museum's size from approximately 8,000 square feet to 17,000 square feet, allows for a greater number of exhibitions as well as expanded educational programming.

Built entirely from private funds at a cost of $1.35 million, the new wing includes a graphic arts study and storage complex, sculpture and painting storage rooms, expanded offices and general workspace on the first floor. Three spacious exhibition galleries are on the second floor.

Major benefactors to the addition are Mr. and Mrs. Joseph L. Muscarelle, the Kresge Foundation, Philip Morris, Inc., and Mr. and Mrs. Alexander M. Quattlebaum. Funding for the director's office was provided through the generosity of June S. and Joseph H. Hennage.

Museum galleries have been designated as the Graves Gallery, in honor of Zoe Wasson Graves and Thomas Ashley Graves Jr., 24th president of the College; the Cheek Gallery, in recognition of the generosity of Mary Tyler and Leslie Cheek Jr., founding chairman of the College's fine arts department; the Herman Graphic Arts Study Room, in recognition of the generosity of Lucy Spigel Herman '47 and Frederick Herman '48; the Sheridan Gallery, in memory of Edythe C. and Ralph M. Sheridan; and the Spigel Gallery, in memory of Bernard B. and Enid W. Spigel.

The new two-story addition was designed by Carlton Abbott and Partners, Architects/Planners, of Williamsburg, which designed the original red-brick building in 1983. The general contractor for the project was Evans Construction, Inc., of Sandston, Va.

A two-story triangular staircase with brick-and-glass exterior compliments the museum's south facade and the triangular motif of the original building. A sequence of upper-level galleries runs the length of the museum and provides over 3,000 additional square feet of exhibition space. A new graphic arts study room provides an intimate setting for the study of prints or drawings from the muse-

Stevens, a classically trained pianist, singer and actress, combines her skills in the performance of innovative, interdisciplinary compositions. Her performance at the Muscarelle will include works by Judith Shatin Allen, Carlton Gamer, Betsy Jolas, Eric Satie, Francis Schwartz and Kurt Weill.

Ms. Stevens has given world premieres of over 30 compositions, performing contemporary works at major concert series and festivals throughout the U.S., including Carnegie Recital Hall, the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, the Virginia Museum of Fine Arts and the National Gallery of Art.

The official dedication of the new wing of the Muscarelle Museum will be held at 3 p.m., Friday, Oct. 23. Following the ceremony, the museum will host a reception and open house until 7 p.m.

During Homecoming weekend, the galleries will be open extended hours, and museum staff will conduct special tours of the building, collections and exhibitions. Gallery hours on Saturday, Oct. 24 are 9 a.m.-5 p.m. with tours at 10 and 11:30 a.m. On Sunday, Oct. 25, the museum will be open 10 a.m.-4 p.m. with a tour at 2 p.m., followed by a chamber music concert at 3 p.m.

The museum has scheduled a variety of special programs and events for the week preceding the dedication. Friends and members of the College community are invited to participate and celebrate the opening of the expanded museum.

Students are invited to a special evening of musical entertainment on the museum grounds from 5 to 7:30 p.m., Sunday, Oct. 18. A wide variety of desserts will be served. Admission is free to all College students.

At 8 p.m., Monday, Oct. 19, Marco Chiarini, director of the Galleria Palatina in the Palazzo Pitti, Florence, will speak in Andrews Hall Auditorium. Chiarini, internationally recognized for his publications on Italian Renaissance and Baroque art and 17th-century Dutch and Flemish painting, will discuss "Andrea del Sarto," the early 16th-century

Ms. Jackson quits type for byte

It hasn't been very long ago that Fredi Epps Jackson would have counted her typing speed as one of her prized business skills. Today she'll tell you she doesn't use the typewriter except on rare occasions. She's proficient in the world of computers and is compiling an impressive list of programs that she can manage, all of them self-taught.

Ms. Jackson was nominated by her department and selected by the Hourly and Classified Employees Association (HACE) to receive the Employee of the Month award, which includes a handsome plaque and two tickets for dinner at the Marriott Marketplace restaurant in the Campus Center.

A Williamsburg native, Ms. Jackson graduated from Bruton Heights High School and later the Peninsula Business College in Newport News where she was a member of Delta Mu sorority. She currently lives in Hampton.

Ms. Jackson joined the College staff as a secretary in the history department in 1971, working under Grace Jones. She transferred to the sociology department in 1974. The transfer enabled her to organize her own office and the work flow of an 11-member department. The chairman, Gary Kreps, is a good boss to work for, says Ms. Jackson. He keeps her supplied with lots of work and she enjoys being busy. He is obviously appreciative of her work. During the interview Kreps walked by to his office and said, "Write a nice story, she's special."

Part of her day involves work for the faculty and part of it she spends helping students who have found her to be an attentive listener and good counselor. They come to talk about classes and often ask about personal problems they have. "I'm a good listener, I like people," she says "Students know what they tell me is not to be heard again."

Ms. Jackson has taken several courses at the College and hopes to take more. She has taken a writing course, music and three years ago overcame a fear of the water by taking a swimming class.

When she is not on the job, Ms. Jackson enjoys playing tennis, racquetball and swimming. She enjoys music and plays the piano. She is a life-member of the Health Spa in Newport News and keeps in shape lifting weights and bicycling.

She belongs to the First Baptist Church of Williamsburg. Her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Epps Jr., live on South Boundary Street in Williamsburg and her grandmother, Mrs. Fannie P. Epps, who is a grandparent at Norge Elementary School, lives on Duke of Gloucester Street. Her son Jonathan is 21, a senior at Old Dominion University studying communications.

Forum seeks operating funds

The Forum of Williamsburg has announced three fall luncheon programs, Oct. 13, Nov. 10 and Dec. 1.

This fall the Forum is asking participants for a $6 contribution, over and above luncheon fees to sustain mailing lists and other operations of the organization. A request for funds was mailed out with the program schedule. Even those who cannot contribute the $6, however, will be welcome to attend the Forum luncheons at the Cascades Restaurant. Fees for the luncheon are $8 per person.

The luncheon schedule is as follows:
Tuesday, Oct. 13 — "One Woman of Williamsburg," a live interview with Dr. Janet Kimbrough about her choice of a career in the 20s and her later work as a physician, conducted by Patricia A. Gibbs, Colonial Williamsburg historian.

Tuesday, Nov. 10 — "Changes I Have Seen: A Black Woman's Perspective," Mary T. Christian, Delegate to the Virginia General Assembly from the 92nd District and professor of education, Hampton University, will talk about how she met the demands of her academic career, single motherhood and an active public life.

Tuesday, Dec. 1 — "Managing Change in the Information Marketplace" by Nancy H. Marshall, university librarian.

The Forum Board is currently updating its mailing list so anyone who would like to be put on the mailing list is asked to contact the Forum at the Center for Executive Development, ext. 4700.

Reservations must be made at least 48 hours in advance. Cancellations will not be accepted after the guarantee is made, but substitutions are permitted.

Poor in community get top quality legal aid

United Way

One of the most positive aspects of the United Way fund drive is the fact that contributors can see, first hand if they want to, how their contributions are put to use in the community.

On Richmond Road, near the intersection of Merchants Square, is a white frame building wedged between two sorority houses. The lower half of this building is home to the Peninsula Legal Aid Center. In this apartment-turned-office, where one secretary's typewriter is perched beneath 1940-style cabinets in the kitchen, the poor get legal help they couldn't otherwise afford. Part of the Center's funding comes from United Way contributions.

The two staff lawyers, Karen Rose and Willafay McKenna, and the students from the Marshall-Wythe School of Law who work there under the direction of John Levy, director of clinical education, would scoff at the mention of missionary zeal, but for the 10,000 people in this area who live in poverty and have been poor most of their lives, the office often works small miracles. More than 400 new cases were handled last year.

The poor, explains Ms. McKenna, are often unaware of their rights or how to protect them; some are unable to read. Poor people pay more for credit than those above the poverty line.

One case involved a woman who went to trade in her old car. A deal was agreed upon and a payment schedule set up. She drove home in her new car. Three weeks later, just before the first payment was due, the dealer called her to tell her the bank would not accept the trade-in allowance and she owed an additional $1,500. Because she didn't have the money and could not afford another loan payment she asked for her old car back. Too late, said the dealer, the car had been sold. Legal Aid was able to represent her in court and seek damages.

Poor people are also sometimes victims of loan contracts with unconscionable interest rates, made in exchange for time payments on what is sometimes shoddy merchandise, says Ms. McKenna. The client, she adds, may be paying for 36 months on an item that will not last that long.

There is a three-day rescind clause that many clients do not know about, and they don't know that just calling on the telephone to complain doesn't do any good. You have to put it in writing. This is part of the educational aspect of the Legal Aid Society's work, to help clients become more aware of their rights and be able to pass along that information to familiar members and neighbors.

Established in 1977 and funded primarily with federal funds, the Legal Aid Center staff handles civil matters, consumer-protection issues, landlord-tenant matters, health care benefits, child support problems and, in some cases, divorces.

The expectations of the poor, says Ms. McKenna, are not tremendous. "They don't come with great expectations; they often come thinking this is a last-ditch attempt to solve a problem. Their gratitude is bountiful."

"I know when we first started out clients were coming here and listening to what we had to say and how we analyzed their problem and they were checking it with another attorney. When they found that the analysis was the same or that not only did we analyze it this way, but we added a few things that might be effective in this situation, then they felt that 'O.K., you must be O.K. because you are saying the same thing as the other lawyer.'

"I think initially for the first two years a lot of what we had to do was to establish a reputation in the community among the client population that we were going to serve. They wanted to know that we were on the up and up, we were real lawyers. Sometimes clients would ask, 'Are you a real lawyer? If I get a divorce here will it be a real divorce?'"

"Over the last 10 years there has also been an acceptance in the community that has been pleasing. Initially, because I was interested in liberal politics, I think the local bar thought legal aid was going to be an extension of liberal politics. And I think they looked for something that was going to be wild and outrageous but it wasn't. We are using the law as a tool to impact on problems. It is the same law and the same courtroom; we are just representing a different client.

"One of the things we have always tried to do is to represent the client with the highest quality legal service and sometimes, for example, that means going into General District court with a memo or brief for the judge. When you are articulating some part of the law that people are not familiar with, that helps put it in a framework.

"On a loan contract you might go into court to argue that the client hadn't been given proper notice, but you could buttress the claim under the Truth in Lending Act, which specifically says that when you grant a contract there is a certain amount of information you have to provide a client and some of it is so important that you have to print it in larger type or in such a way that it will stand out. You can make that argument in court, but it is more effective, too, if you can present it and it is written in black and white. ... The judge may know a great deal about the Truth in Lending Law but may never have seen it applied in this particular way, so you are going to use this kind of tool; it is important."

Whenever possible legal aid lawyers try to offer advice on settling disputes out of court, but in some instances court is the only solution. "I recall a case of a tenant-landlord argument in which the landlord issued an eviction notice on a tenant," says McKenna.

"The tenant complained to the public health department about a sewer that was backing up into her house after the landlord refused to deal with the problem. He was angry that she had gone public with her complaint. The eviction notice had been served and the tenant had no recourse but to seek redress in the court if she could prove the landlord had acted in a retaliatory manner against her."

Those at the Legal Aid Center hope clients will come to them before the 29th day of a 30-day notice and ask for help, but it does not always happen.

There were times that the Center wasn't sure of its survival under federal budget cutting. "We posted large signs all over the office saying we were closing because we really did feel we were," says Ms. McKenna.

"I don't feel that way any longer, but some of the impact of those budget cuts is going to last for some time, and it has placed some restrictions on what we can do.

"There are some real restrictions on lobbying. Sometimes after you have fought the same case over and over again in court you clearly feel that a change in the law would be beneficial to your clients and would resolve the problem, but it is very difficult for us to go to a legislator and say anything because we are restricted in that area." Legal Aid lawyers are restricted in class action suits and cannot represent aliens.

The students who work at the Center are closely supervised and must have attained a third-year status in their law studies in order to handle court appearances. Many of the clients who come for help are experiencing emotional trauma because of their problems. Cases provide an educational experience for the students. They learn to represent poor people who are experiencing a crisis, who need empathy as well as legal advice, the kind of cases they might not be exposed to in an average law practice.

Former clients often stop in to chat; the Center receives a lot of Christmas greetings, too. The people who drop in at the Center, says McKenna, also include former tenants of the apartment-turned-office. They explain how the rooms were used when they lived there. McKenna is amazed at the number of people who used to have this address and how many details about the place they can recall.

Guilliams wins Ramsey scholarship

Michelle L. Guilliams, a freshman from Rocky Mount, has been named the second recipient of the Harold W. Ramsey Memorial Scholarship, which honors a 1927 alumnus of the College who dedicated his life to education in Franklin County.

Guilliams is a 1987 graduate of Franklin County High School where she was the salutatorian of her class. She also participated in student government and volleyball. She plans to major in biology as training for a career in medicine.

The Ramsey Scholarship was established in 1984 by Mr. Ramsey's daughter, Bobbie Ramsey Brooks, and friends of the late Mr. Ramsey.

Mrs. Brooks stipulated that recipients of the annual scholarship be graduates of Franklin County High School and that the award be given to an incoming freshman. The scholarship is based on need and merit and provides $1,000 per year toward the student's college expenses. If the student maintains satisfactory academic progress, the scholarship will be awarded each of the four years the student attends William and Mary.

The first recipient of the scholarship was Miss Tracy E. Flora of Glade, who graduated in May.

sion. A reception at the Muscarelle Museum will follow the performance.

Most of the scenes in the play and much of the dialogue comes directly from letters exchanged by the two brothers. The play, comprised mostly of flashbacks, opens with Theo's return from Vincent's funeral. British actor-scholars Nick Pace and Graham McTavish portray Theo and Vincent.

"Letters" has been presented at numerous museums including the National Gallery in London, the Metropolitan Museum of Art, the Cleveland Museum of Art and the Wadsworth Atheneum in Hartford.

Theatre opens season tonight with 'Crimes of the Heart'

One sister is lonely. Another doesn't like her husband's looks. The third sister is a frustrated singer who's been unlucky in love. Their stories are told in "Crimes of the Heart," a Pulitzer-prize winning play by Beth Henley, which opens the 1987-88 William and Mary Theatre season tonight.

"Crimes of the Heart," will be presented at 8:15 p.m. nightly through Saturday, Oct. 10 in Phi Beta Kappa Memorial Hall on Jamestown Road. For tickets, call the theatre box office at ext. 4272.

About "Crimes," director Louis E. Catron says: "Each sister has a weakness or a problem. They fight a lot, but they love each other. At the end of the play, what saves them for the moment is family."

The lonely Lenny, says Catron, is left in the family home after her grandfather dies. "She makes a burden out of having a shrunken ovary, and says she will never have children," says Catron. Her peculiar affliction, and the issue she makes of it, is oddly comedic.

Babe, the second sister, shoots her husband one afternoon, and then casually goes to the kitchen and drinks three glasses of lemonade. Catron labels her "incongruous." When questioned about the shooting, Babe says simply,

"I didn't like his looks." Audiences learn later that her reasons for shooting him were not that capricious. The legal difficulties stemming from the shooting create the thread of plot line that runs through the play.

Meg, the third sister, sings. She seeks a career in Hollywood movie musicals but ends up working for a California dog food company. She has many lovers, including a doctor who gives up medicine to become a house-painter. The family tries to get Meg to come home from Hollywood at Christmas and sends her money for a plane ticket, but she refuses. Later, audiences find out what she does with the money.

Catron says the three sisters manage to solve their problems, "though they aren't very good at it and there aren't any big melodramatic solutions."

The cast of "Crimes of the Heart" includes Laurie Maxwell, a junior from Richmond, as Chick; Keith Reagan, a senior from Seaford, as Doc Porter; Robert Brinkerhoff, a senior from Falls Church, as lawyer Barnett Lloyd; Sherry Adams, a junior from Burke, as Babe; Laura Carson, a senior from Atlanta, as Lenny; and Mary Stillwaggon, a sophomore from Point Lookout, N.Y., as Meg.

Gift to library

Swem Library has received the gift of a two-volume, leather-bound history of the White House, published by the White House Historical Association in cooperation with the National Geographic Society. It is No. 260 of a limited printing.

The volumes were given to the library by Dr. and Mrs. William C. Dulin of Chevy Chase, Md. Mrs. Dulin, the former Maurine Stuart, is a member of the class of 1939. Dr. and Mrs. Dulin's daughter, Jacquelyn Dulin, graduated in 1968.

William Seal is credited with authorship, but there are many scholarly contributions included. There is a chapter devoted to each resident through the Truman Administration. Later presidents are covered by an epilogue chapter. There are over 2,000 pages and 175 illustrations, which include sketches, maps and color plates. The pages of the handsome books are edged with gold leaf.

Second Season

The William and Mary Theatre offers experimental productions in its Studio Theatre series. Mean Man and Year After Year by James Schvill will be presented on October 29, 30, and 31

Notes

White House fellowships

The Office of Career Services in Morton Hall has information on the White House Fellowships program. This program was established in 1964 to provide gifted and highly motivated Americans with firsthand experience at the highest levels of government to prepare them as leaders of their communities, the nation and the world.

During their one-year assignments in Washington, Fellows serve as special assistants to Cabinet secretaries or senior members of the White House staff. Additionally, Fellows participate in an extensive education program including seminars with top government officials, leading scholars, journalists and private-sector leaders.

Application deadline is Dec. 1.

ROTC

Juniors are reminded that they can still join Army R.O.T.C. and earn a commission within two years. Students, however, need not wait until their junior year before enrolling in R.O.T.C. Freshmen and sophomores can participate in R.O.T.C. with no obligation or they may apply for the numerous two- or three-year scholarships available.

For further information on R.O.T.C. programs, contact 2LT Jennifer Morsch or 2LT James B. Vick in the military science department, Blow gym, ext. 4368 or 4366.

Stepfamily Assn.

The next meeting of the Williamsburg chapter of the Stepfamily Association of America will be held at 7 p.m., Oct. 8 in Room A of the Williamsburg Regional Library. A film, "Step-parenting," will be shown.

Resumes due for DC Job Fair

The Office of Career Services, Morton 140 will sponsor the Washington, D.C., Job Fair, Wednesday, Jan. 6 at the Marriott/Key Bridge.

Resumes are now being accepted and will be processed specifically for the Fair until Oct. 20. These resumes will not be included in other preselection envelopes.

A list of participating employers is available in Morton 102. Pam Garrette, recruitment coordinator, has job descriptions available for review.

Students who are preselected for interviews will must pay a required $25 fee (in cash) between Nov. 13 and 20. At that time students will schedule appointments with the employers.

The New York Job Employment Fair will be held Friday, Jan. 8. Resume submission will be scheduled shortly.

Dates for the Chicago and San Francisco Job Fairs have not yet been announced.

ADK grants

In 1989 Alpha Delta Kappa will offer a fine arts grant in the field of mixed media (two dimensional). This grant will be awarded to a person for undergraduate work or for graduate work or advanced training or for private study. The foundation is interested in assisting a person who is talented enough to be recommended for professional or advanced study and who is working toward a career in this field.

The deadline for submission is June 1, 1988, and applications must be on file in our office by that time. All applicants will be notified of the outcome of the competition.

Applicants should write for application materials to Fine Arts Grants Board, Alpha Delta Kappa, 1615 W. 92nd St, Kansas City, MO 64114.

film studios of France and Italy. It should come as no surprise then," says Stephen Field of the modern languages department, "that with the cultural and economic explosion of Pacific Rim nations, much of this innovative filmmaking hails from the intellectual centers of China and Japan. Chinese cinema, in particular, has been producing one New Wave film after another. Of the three centers of Chinese filmmaking — Hong Kong, Mainland China and Taiwan — easily the most progressive and cohesive Chinese cinema of the past five years has been coming from Taiwan.

The film schedule is as follows:

- Oct. 26 — That Day, On the Beach
- Oct. 27 — Green, Green Grass of Home
- Oct. 28 — Growing Up
- Oct. 29 — If I Were for Real
- Oct. 30 — Kuei Mei, A Woman
- Oct. 31 — A Summer at Grandpa's

President Verkuil opens LION in Swem

University Librarian Nancy H. Marshall and Berna L. Heyman, assistant university librarian (r), show President Paul R. Verkuil and Provost Melvyn D. Schiavelli (l) how to operate the new LION system.

The new library system LION (Libraries ONline) was officially opened by President Paul R. Verkuil, and inaugurated a system that has taken more than two years of intensive effort to establish. "It is a wonderfully efficient way to provide access to our library materials, and I am pleased to see it up and running," said Verkuil.

The LION database is the center of the automated library system. It includes titles from Swem, Marshall-Wythe, VIMS, CE-BAF, physics, chemistry, geology and School of Education libraries and the Professional Resource Center. Eventually patrons at each of these libraries will have online access to all of the collections on campus.

The online catalog is now available in Swem Library and will eventually be accessible all over campus through a network of terminals. The 300,000 titles currently in the system represent all titles cataloged since 1974 plus thousands of titles added through special projects. The libraries are continuing to convert older card catalog records to computer form on a regular basis.

Finding out about books used to be a matter of searching through the card catalog and going to the shelves to see if the book was available. The online catalog offers scholars the ability to search by author, title and subject (as in a card catalog). In addition, they'll be able to search by call number and determine the circulation status and location of particular titles. Further plans include providing access by keywords and more sophisticated searching methods.

The automated circulation and reserve books systems control materials being checked out and checked in. Each item in the collection and each patron's ID card will have a barcode affixed to it. The barcodes provide the means to link circulation records to book and patron information.

The LION online catalog and automated circulation and reserve systems are the first steps toward an integrated library system, which will eventually include acquisitions, fund accounting, serials control and general community access. New capacity for generating, storing and providing access to information has created an opportunity to make printed and other materials available to patrons more effectively and efficiently than ever before. Through LION, information within and beyond the library is now accessible at the touch of a finger.

W&M joins teleconference on world hunger

Nebraska Governor Kay Orr and film star Eddie Albert will join world development experts from Kenya, Norway and Peru in the fourth annual World Food Day teleconference, from noon to 3 p.m., Friday, Oct. 16, in which the College of William and Mary will participate.

The general public and members of the College community are invited to the local satellite teleconference program which will be linked to the international panel and sites in 50 states, Canada and the Caribbean.

Ronald Wheeler, associate professor of education, and P. B. Welbeck, director of educational media, are coordinating plans for the local link of the program, which will include a panel discussion from 1 to 2 p.m. in the Dodge Room of Phi Beta Kappa Memorial Hall on various aspects of the conference theme, "Poverty, Hunger and Interdependence."

Panel members will include Vincent Sultive, professor of anthropology; Berhanu Abegaz from Ethiopia, assistant professor of economics; Sister Berenice, pastoral associate from St. Bede's Roman Catholic Church; the Rev. Jonathan Barton, regional director of the World Church Service; and Bramble Klipple, a student member of the Hunger Task Force, a student organization at William and Mary. Mark Fowler, associate professor of philosophy, will serve as moderator.

During the first hour of the teleconference, participants will listen to the program in Washington with Governor Orr who will be joined by Hernando de Soto of Peru, founder and director of the Institute for Liberty and Democracy in Lima; John Gatu, vice president of the All-Africa Conference of Churches and former moderator of the Presbyterian Church of East Africa; and Torild Skard, former president of the Norwegian senate and currently director-general of the Multilateral Department, Royal Norwegian Ministry of Development Co-operation. Moderating the panel will be CBS Washington news anchorwoman Maureen Bunyan.

During the third hour of the program questions for the Washington panel will be received from participating programs.

WORLD FOOD DAY

Hunger exists because of poverty. It exists everywhere. And hunger persists because increasing numbers of people are losing control over the resources needed to access food. For most Americans hunger appears as an immense and impersonal threat beyond human control. But the truth is that the problem of global hunger is solvable.

The purpose of the World Food Day Teleconference is to inform participants about what has been done and what can be done to help solve the problem at multiple levels: international, regional and local. We hope that those who come to the teleconference will want to get involved on a personal level by taking a moral and political stand to ensure access to adequate food for everyone.

Lottery debate

Whether anyone is able to remember who's running for election to the General Assembly this November, there is one ballot issue on everyone's mind: should Virginia have a lottery? To help you decide, the William and Mary Young Democrats and the College Republicans will sponsor a debate on the lottery question on Tuesday, Oct. 13 at 6:30 p.m. in room 119 of the Marshall-Wythe School of Law. Admission is free and the public is invited.

Arguing for the lottery will be Virginia Sen. William E. Fears (D-Accomac) and Marcia L. Whicker, a professor of public administration at Virginia Commonwealth University. Arguing against the lottery will be Marshall Coleman, former Republican candidate for governor of Virginia and an attorney with the Northern Virginia law firm of Arent, Fox, and Del. Harvey B. Morgan (R-Gloucester). The panel moderator will be William Alcott, staff writer for Virginia Business Magazine.

There will be a question-and-answer session with the participants after the debate. A wine-and-cheese reception will follow in the law school lobby.

Gunn, Robertson win 1987 Prentis Awards

Richard E. "Dick" Gunn, founder of the Toymaker of Williamsburg, and Shirley Robertson, who created the Shirley Pewter shops have been honored with the 1987 Prentis Award for their exemplary craftsmanship and business practices, community service and continuing support of the College.

Gunn left a successful advertising career in Richmond to pursue a longtime dream to develop his own business and established The Toymaker of Williamsburg over 25 years ago, across the railroad tracks by the old A&P store. Now there are also shops in Merchant's Square and in Richmond in the Shockoe Slip area.

Gunn is known for his involvement in the community. He has served as president of the Williamsburg Area Chamber of Commerce, the Williamsburg Rotary Club and the Merchant's Square Association. He is currently commodore of the Kingsmill Yacht Club. He has been an energetic supporter of the Colonial Williamsburg Foundation, the Athletic Education Foundation and the Friends of the College for over a decade.

The Toymaker's ties with the College go back over a decade; since 1962 Gunn has been employing William and Mary students. Sarah Gunn represented her father's business on the Friends Advisory Council for several years and this spring was a graduate of the inaugural class of the executive M.B.A. program at the College.

Gunn's training in graphic art and in wood-working at Pratt Institute, plus his previous career, provided the foundation for success. Family members lent support to the venture, particularly Sarah, who began helping at age 12 and is today vice president of the family operation.

Robertson began an apprenticeship at Colonial Williamsburg's Sign of the Golden Ball and became a master of metal arts under the guidance of the world famous German silversmith, Max Rieg. After brief service in the Korean conflict, Robertson returned to Williamsburg to set up his business in the garage next to his home.

Then, as now, he created the prototypes for the distinctive pewter pieces that today are found across America and beyond. In the beginning, however, the business was wholesale only, and Robertson traveled the road by day to sell his product while by night he worked a shift on the local police force to help support his family. Son Bruce recalls that pewter cups, trays and bowls filled closets and the floor beneath beds. Mrs. Robertson kept the books and did the billing, except for the time that the family puppy devoured several months of records.

In the late '50s the Jamestown Road shop was built, and eventually, as business grew by adding catalog sales, then retail sales, a second shop was opened in Merchant's Square.

Robertson has received design commissions from corporations, governments and universities. For the College he designed a pewter desk set as an inauguration gift for President Paul Verkuil, and the letter opener which is given to new members of the President's Council.

At the awards ceremony Robertson was also cited for his contributions to the community as a Deacon, Elder and Trustee of the Williamsburg Presbyterian Church and as a member-at-large on the Board of Directors of the Boy Scouts of America.

The Prentis Award is named for the 18th-century Prentis Store, a retail store on the Duke of Gloucester Street, which became widely known for its fair wages, good merchandise and sound innovative business practices in the community and throughout the colonies.

Senator Bumpers to join Health care professionals for Nov. meeting

Health care policy scholars, health care professionals and government officials, among them Senator Dale Bumpers (D-Ark), will discuss the many changes underway in the financing and delivery of medical care at a conference titled "Health Care Policy: Where is the Revolution Headed?" Nov. 12-14 on campus.

Pre-registration deadline is Oct. 31. Conference fee is $25 plus $40 for luncheon and dinner tickets.

The conference is the first in an annual series sponsored by the William and Mary Public Policy program of the interdisciplinary curriculum. It is designed, says David H. Finifter, associate professor of economics and director of the public policy program, "to make a contribution to the long-term private and public health care partnership by undertaking an ongoing assessment of medical care policy and delivery in the U.S."

Senator Bumpers will speak on health care policy at an evening session Friday, Nov. 13. Earlier that day, health care changes during the past decade, the reasons behind those changes and their probable impact on the future of health care policy will be discussed under the leadership of Professor Eli Ginsberg, director of Conservation of Human Resources at Columbia University.

Dr. Gail Wilensky of Project Hope, Washington, D.C., will lead a discussion on major new technological thrusts in health care delivery and ways in which technological and organizational changes will challenge the industry. Professor Mark V. Pauly of the Department of Health Care Systems at the

Peter Kornbluh to lecture Oct. 20

Peter Kornbluh, a Central American scholar, will give a public lecture at 4 p.m., Tuesday, Oct. 20 in Morton 342, under the sponsorship of the Center for International Studies.

Kornbluh has titled his lecture "Central America: An Outbreak of Peace?"

Currently with the National Security Archive in Washington, Kornbluh is author of two books on Central American and Nicaragua, The Price of Intervention: Reagan's War against the Sandinista and co-editor and contributor to a forthcoming work titled Low Intensity Warfare: Counterinsurgency, Pro-Insurgency, and Anti-Terrorism in the '80s.

He will discuss Costa Rican President Arias' Central American Peace Plan and its implementation. Nicaraguan President Daniel Ortega has recently taken a number of steps to show Nicaragua's efforts to abide by the plan. The newspaper La Prensa, which had been closed in Nicaragua in 1985, has been allowed to reopen. Opposition parties have held street demonstrations without interference from the Sandinistas. There is talk of a pardon and release of a number of former National Guard members who have been jailed since the fall of Anastasio Somoza in 1979.

El Salvador's President Jose Napoleon Duarte has arranged discussions with the guerrillas in his nation to try to implement a cease-fire. Similarly, Guatemalan President Vinicio Cerezo had supported the principles of the Peace Plan, although there has been little publicity about any specific steps that he has taken in Guatemala.

In spite of some lessening of tension in the region, President Reagan and some of his foreign policy advisers remain concerned that the Central American nations will not be able to ensure that Nicaragua fully complies with the Peace Plan. Some in Washington believe that the U.S. should continue to aid the contras so that they will remain as a pressure upon the Nicaraguan government. Others argue that continued aid to the contras and refusal to support the peace plan fully will sabotage this slim chance for peace in the region.

Kornbluh's discussion will touch on these and other issues related to war and peace in Central America.

Paul J. Feldstein of the University of Michigan's School of Public Health, will look at the relationship of health care policy and social values. Participants will also propose ways to provide medical care most efficiently and equitably.

The concluding session Nov. 14 will be a panel discussion on health care policy issues by representatives of a variety of organizations, including the American Medical Association, private insurance companies, the American Hospital Association and Blue Cross and Blue Shield Association.

For more information, call David H. Finifter, ext. 4311.

This lecture, which is co-sponsored by the Department of Fine Arts and the Muscarelle Museum, is open to the public without charge.

Muscarelle plans pre-school classes

The Muscarelle Museum of Art, in conjunction with James City County Parks and Recreation, will hold a series of parent/pre-school classes at the museum this fall.

Parents, one or both, are invited to bring their three-, four- or five-year-olds to look and learn about the museum's collections and sharpen their visual perception, communication and fine motor skills through art projects. Chris Williamson will be instructor for the programs.

The series will include six sessions from 9 to 10 a.m. on Thursdays. Classes are scheduled for Oct. 27, Nov. 3, 10 and 17 and Dec. 1 and 8. Fee for the series is $25 per child.

Parents may register through James City County Parks and Recreation department or the Muscarelle Museum.

Registration deadline is Oct. 16.

For further information, call the recreation department at 229-5676 or the museum at ext. 4650.

Entries sought for drawing exhibit

The Muscarelle Museum of Art is seeking entries for its first juried exhibition, "American Drawing Biennial," planned for March 19-May 1. Entries will be accepted through Dec. 15.

Frank Gettings, curator of prints and drawings at the Hirshhorn Museum and Sculpture Garden, has been selected as juror for the show. Over $2,500 in cash and purchase awards will be offered. Competition is open to all artists residing in the United States. The competition will be juried from 35mm slides.

Drawings must be original and executed within the last two years. Each artist may submit up to three drawings. There is a handling fee of $2 for each drawing submitted. Sales from the exhibition will be encouraged. No commission will be charged.

The William and Mary News is issued weekly during the school year for faculty, staff and students of the College and distributed on campus Wednesday afternoons.

News items and advertisements should be delivered to the News Office, James Blair 310A, no later than 5 p.m. the Friday before publication. Notices for the calendar should be delivered to the News Office no later than 5 p.m. the Wednesday before publication.

Poet Orr to visit Oct. 20

Gregory Orr, whose book New and Selected Poems was published this year, has established himself as one of the most significant and constantly interesting of younger contemporary American poets. He will give a poetry reading and lead a discussion of his work and poetry in general on Oct. 20.

Orr will give a poetry reading at 7:30 p.m., Tuesday, Oct. 20 in Tucker 120. Earlier that day he will be present an informal discussion to answer any questions about his poetry or poetry in general at 3:30 p.m. in the Honors Room of Tucker Hall.

Orr, who has taught at the University of Virginia for the past 12 years, has received degrees from Antioch College and Columbia University. He is the author of five collections of poetry, Burning the Empty Nests, Gathering the Bones Together, The Red House, We Must Make A Kingdom of It and New and Selected Poems.

A book of criticism, Stanley Kunitz: An Introduction to the Poetry, was published by Columbia University Press. While Orr has written about Kunitz, the older poet has returned the favor, and commented insightfully about him: "When I read the poems of Gregory Orr, I am impressed by the splendid isolation of his words and by the immensity of the space between them. ... The space that he creates between his words and between his lines corresponds with a stillness at the center of his being, not the stillness of a mind at rest, but a terrible stillness."

He has received many honors, including fellowships from the Fulbright Council, the National Endowment for the Arts and the Guggenheim Foundation. In 1984 he won the Virginia Prize for Poetry when W. D. Snodgrass was one of the judges. For the past 11 years he has been poetry consultant for The Virginia Quarterly Review.

Conference on corporations and individuals

When a corporation decides to cut personnel or production to become "lean and mean," what does it owe its employees? Unlike previous generations, people today expect to work for several different companies during their lifetimes, and more people change careers than ever before. What does the shift mean to corporations?

Scholars and corporate executives will examine these issues Wednesday, Oct. 28 at a conference called "Organizations and Individuals: Is Loyalty Passé?" sponsored by the Corporate Council on the Liberal Arts, the Virginia Foundation on the Humanities and William and Mary.

According to conference director Franklin E. Robeson of the School of Business Administration, the idea for the meeting emerged from discussions with visiting executives in a new course on corporate responsibility offered at William and Mary for the first time last spring.

This is the third conference sponsored by the Corporate Council on the Liberal Arts. The first, on liberal learning and private enterprise was held Sept. 1986 in conjunction with Harvard University's 350th anniversary. A second conference on corporate ethics was held this summer in New York.

Less than $2 per person would put United Way over

If everyone in the Faculty and Staff telephone directory would donate $1.75 to the United Way campaign on campus the drive would go over the top. There are some 1,602 names in the book.

Currently $23,088 has been donated; $25,000 is the goal.

The services provided by the United Way agencies touch all segments of the community, from counseling a 13-year-old pregnant child to visiting the home-bound elderly.

Two important services originate on campus. The Rita Welsh Adult Skills Program brings a special kind of joy to people's lives. Imagine the difficulty of ordering lunch when you can't read and the menu has no pictures. Getting ripped off isn't uncommon when you're poor and the system seems geared to those who are not poor. The Peninsula Legal Aid Center, Inc., provides high-quality legal assistance to those who cannot afford it.

Provost Melvyn D. Schiavelli and Vice President for Administration and Finance William F. Merck are co-chairmen of the campus drive. There is still time to make a pledge or donation before the drive's official conclusion on Nov. 1.

Please send donations and pledges to Merck's office. Call ext. 4211 for pledge cards and information on payroll deduction or direct billing options.

Teleconference on world hunger

The college community is reminded that the campus will be part of the World Food Day teleconference from noon to 3 p.m. Friday Oct. 16 in the Dodge Room of Phi Beta Kappa Memorial Hall. Everyone is invited to participate. Local planners are Ronald Wheeler in education and P. B. Welbeck, educational media.

Ford Foundation to award 50 fellowships

Approximately 40 predoctoral fellowships and 10 dissertation fellowships will be awarded in a nationwide competition sponsored by The Ford Foundation and administered by the National Research Council.

Awards will be made for study in research-based doctoral programs (Ph.D. or Sc.D.) in the behavioral and social sciences, humanities, engineering, mathematics, physical sciences and biological sciences, or for interdisciplinary programs comprised of two or more eligible disciplines (but not including ineligible disciplines).

Predocctoral awards applicants must not have completed, by the beginning of the Fall 1987 term, more than 20 semester hours, 30 quarter hours, or the equivalent of graduate-level study in fields supported by this program. Dissertation award applicants must have completed all required course work and examinations except for the defense of the dissertation, and must have been admitted to doctoral degree candidacy by Jan. 15, 1988.

Scores from the Graduate Record Examination General Test are required for all predoctoral fellowship applicants.

Applicants must be U.S. citizens or nationals who are members of one of the following ethnic minority groups: American Indian, Alaskan Native, Black American, Mexican American/Chicano, Native Pacific Islander or Puerto Rican. Individuals holding a doctoral degree in any field are not eligible to apply. Individuals who have earned a master's degree in a field supported by this program are not eligible to apply for a predoctoral award.

Applications are due Nov. 13. Announcement of awards will be made in early April 1988. For information and application materials, write to The Fellowship Office, National Research Council, 2101 Constitution Avenue, Washington, DC 20418, phone 202-334-2872.
