Swem Library addition to be dedicated

Charter Day features library science leaders

Robert Wedgeworth, dean of the School of Library Service at Columbia University and former executive director of the American Library Association, will be the principal speaker at the College's 1988 Charter Day exercises Saturday, Feb. 6, celebrating the 295th anniversary of the nation's second oldest college.

Wedgeworth will receive an honorary degree at the weekend ceremonies, which will also mark the dedication of a $3 million addition to William and Mary's Earl Gregg Swem Library.

Dr. Margaret E. Chisholm, director of the School of Library and Information Science at the University of Washington and 1987-88 president of the American Library Association, will be keynote speaker at the rededication of Swem Library Friday, Feb. 5.

As executive director of the ALA from 1972 to 1985, Robert Wedgeworth established a reputation as a major force in promoting libraries and librarianship throughout the world. Under his direction, ALA membership increased from 31,580 to 39,477; its budget rose from $3.8 to $9.5 million; a new headquarters was constructed; and new technologies were introduced in day-to-day operations.

A native of Texas, Wedgeworth received his bachelor's degree from Wabash College in 1959 and a master's degree in library science from the University of Illinois in 1961. He holds honorary degrees from several institutions.

Wedgeworth began his library career as cataloger of the Kansas City Public Library in 1961. He served as assistant librarian and acting librarian at Park College from 1962 to 1964, as librarian at Meramec Community College from 1964 to 1966 and as acquisitions librarian at Brown University Library from 1966 to 1969. He was an assistant professor at Rutgers University from 1969 to 1972, when he became executive director of the ALA. He stepped down from that position in 1985, becoming dean of Columbia's School of Library Service.

Wedgeworth is a member of the executive committee of the national advisory board for the Library of Congress' Center for the Book, a member of the board of directors of the Newberry Library and a member of the executive board of the International Federation of Library Associations and Institutions at The Hague. He is also on the advisory council of Princeton University Libraries and a trustee of the American Library in Paris.

Margaret Chisholm, a native of Minnesota, received a B.A., a master's degree in librarianship and a Ph.D. in administration of higher education from the University of Washington. After teaching at the University of Oregon and the University of New Mexico, she served as dean of the College of Library and Information Services at the University of Maryland from 1969 to 1975. From 1975 to 1981, she was vice president for university relations at the University of Washington, the first woman vice president in the institution's history.

Writer-in-residence to give poetry reading Thursday

*here is the land
where love songs sit on chairs.
— "Journey to the Next Frontier"*

Poet Cornelius Eady, the current writer-in-residence, will give a reading of his poetry at 8 p.m., Thursday, Dec. 3, in Tucker 120.

This program is open to the public; there is no admission charge.

Eady describes his poetry as "playful." "American poetry seems very absorbed in its concerns about life, how tough it is to be middle class, how horrible your parents were — legitimate themes, but they are done over and over again. The last thing I want to do is write another one of those books." Eady says he likes to look at life with a sense of humor. "I think humor is a very useful device; it has the ability to disarm the reader. I try to work against reader expectations. Some of my favorite writers have that power to surprise readers — of seeing what we've all seen but saying something new about it. Everything is an old idea; it is just how you present it."

Eady's distinctive way of presenting his thoughts through poetry has won him national recognition. Victims of the Latest Dance Craze, published in 1985 by Ommation Press, won the Academy of American Poets Lamont Poetry Prize for 1985. He is also author of Kartunes, published in 1980 by the Warthog Press. He is currently at work on a third book.

"Cornelius Eady uses body language as a motif to celebrate the unlimited human potential unleashed through the ritual of dance," said Wesley Brown, a reviewer for The Village Voice in praise of The Latest Dance Craze. He added, "Eady is a poet who, to paraphrase a line from one of his poems, has an entire world on the tip of his tongue. ... I eagerly await what will come next."

"Like his voice, his poetry is vibrant and rhythmic, filled with energy and very little anger. Many of his poems have a bit of improvisation — and even humor. Most important Eady will tell you that his work appeals to a wide range of people," said Robin Wilson-Glover writing in his hometown paper, the Rochester Times-Union.

Eady's first flirtation with poetry, according to Wilson-Glover, was a love poem for Valentine's Day when he was in the seventh grade. He wrote "SOS, I'm in a mess, I need you and I must confess." He really began to think of poetry in earnest when he had a poem about

Martin Luther King published in his high school paper and found people responded to his work. Before leaving the Rochester area he attended Empire State College and Monroe Community College.

Eady won an NEA Fellowship in Literature, 1984-85, and was a National Arts Club scholar in poetry at the Breadloaf Writers' Conference in 1981. From 1981-82 Eady hosted and co-produced a monthly hour-long radio show featuring the work of contemporary writers over WBAI radio, New York City.

Before coming to William and Mary, Eady was the Margaret Banister Writer-in-Residence at Sweet Briar College for two years. He has also been Master Poet for the Young Writers' Workshop at the University of Virginia; and poet-in-residence for the Richmond Public Schools Artist-in-Residency Program, the New York State Poets-in-the-Schools Program and the Artist-in-Residence Program for the Rich-ester, N.Y. City School District.

His poetry has been included in several magazines including Harper's and is part of two anthologies, From Mt. San Angelo, Virginia Center for the Creative Arts/Associated University Presses, Oct. 1984; and Some Things Make Us Strong (Cricket Press, 1975).

Anne Marie Keyes to speak on status of women in Nicaragua

Anne Marie Keyes will speak on "The Changing Status of Women in Nicaragua" at 12:30 p.m., Thursday, Dec. 3, in Chancellors 102. The talk is open to the public.

Her presentation is part of the closing session of a class in organizational behavior taught by Professor George D. Cole. It is sponsored by a student panel chaired by Will Segar.

Ms. Keyes, associate professor of philosophy at Marymount Manhattan College, spent seven weeks in Nicaragua last spring. During that time she traveled widely in both urban and rural areas, living mostly in the homes of Nicaraguan citizens.

Ms. Keyes, a graduate of Marymount, holds master's and Ph.D. degrees in philosophy from Marquette University. She has been on the faculty of Marymount Manhattan for over 20 years and has served on several mayoral committees in New York City.

Swem Library hosts exhibit of private libraries

The library at the College of William and Mary, one of the earliest institutional libraries in Virginia, is currently hosting a photographic exhibit of some of the fine private libraries in Virginia, 1700-1830.

Funded by the Virginia Foundation for the Humanities and Public Policy, the exhibit is currently on display in the lobby of the Earl Gregg Swem Library and will remain there until Dec. 11.

The exhibit highlights the collections of several prominent Virginians including Lady Jean Skipwith and St. George Tucker. The library of St. George Tucker is among the holdings in Swem as is part of Lady Skipwith's collection.

St. George Tucker of Williamsburg (1752-1827) was an eminent jurist, a noted poet, playwright and essayist. All of his interests are mirrored in the 319 titles from the library surviving today. An estate list reveals that his library was probably larger by almost one-half than the collection that has survived.

Law books dominate the collection, comprising 43 percent of it, but Tucker also made sizable purchases in geography and travel, poetry and astronomy. He also tried to acquire all the American history items that were published at the time.

Jean Miller Skipwith (1748-1826) of Mecklenburg County assembled a library that has been called "incomparably the largest and best made by a woman in Virginia." For at least 45 years, Jean Skipwith was a serious reader and book buyer who kept records of her purchases and signed each of her books.

Her 850-volume library contained an extensive collection of novels, moral guides and practical works on cooking, gardening and family care. It also contained books on travel, history and biography, which were not the usual fare for women. Unlike most "gentlemen's" libraries, Jean Skipwith's contained no Greek or Roman classics and few books on religious themes.

The exhibit also includes illustrations from the libraries of William Byrd II of Westover; Landon Carter of Sabine Hall; George Washington; Thomas Jefferson; Ralph Wormeley V of Middlesex County; James Mercer Garnett of Sussex County; John Randolph of Roanoke; and Joseph Carrington Cabell of Nelson County.

Gov't. professor predicts Korean elections will be fair

Chonghan Kim

Although the South Korean government faces a crucial test of its recently announced democratic reforms in the upcoming presidential elections Dec. 16, Korean affairs expert Chonghan Kim, professor of government, is convinced the ruling party will pass that test and deliver a fair election.

Kim was one of 20 Korean political scientists given the rare opportunity last summer to talk informally with presidential candidates Roh Tae Woo, Kim Dae Jun and Kim Young Sam. Based on his interview, professor Kim is convinced that the ruling Democratic Justice Party will deliver a fair election whether or not its standard-bearer Roh Tae Woo is elected.

How can he be so sure when Koreans themselves are skeptical? "because the whole world is watching," says Kim. "After Roh's stunning June 29th declaration of sweeping democratic reforms, neither he nor the ruling party can afford an unfair election."

With public sentiment so overwhelmingly against military rule, says Kim, "any impropriety would mean the ruling party would automatically forfeit power." If the ruling party tried to retain its hold on the government, Kim, like most other observers, concludes that "Korean society would be torn apart."

During a two-hour breakfast meeting with Roh, says Kim, the ruling party candidate was "open-minded, candid and calm in answering some harsh questions" about his controversial past and his plans for the future.

Roh also called for "cooperation and reconciliation" to heal the country's wounds and said his momentous announcement of democratic reforms came after a great deal of soul searching, says Kim, who sensed a new willingness of the government to move the country toward some badly needed changes.

"On the question of the military involvement in politics, Roh clearly stated his belief that the military would not intervene, even if the opposition wins the election," says Kim. "In a subsequent conversation with Roh, he expressed a deep concern about labor unrest and compassion for strikers, saying they were justified in seeking higher pay and fairer treatment."

Kim's meetings with the two major opposition candidates, now definitely running against each other and Roh for the presidency, showed the marked differences within the opposition and perhaps foreshadowed its split.

Both Kim Dae Jung (who recently formed his own Party for Peace and Democracy, or PPD) and Kim Young Sam, candidate of the opposition's Reunification Democratic Party, "are supremely confident that they are the legitimate leaders of the democratic movement," says Kim.

Kim Dae Jung, however, takes a hardline on the military, which could create problems for him as president. "If Kim Dae Jung's attitude toward the military is confrontational, Kim Young Sam was more circumspect when he said that 'we who are engaged in politics should not instigate the military,'" observes Professor Kim.

No matter who wins this stormy election, says Kim, "the biggest challenge for the new president, whoever he or she may be, is to smoothly implement all the democratic reforms promised to the Korean people."

Education Placement

Education students who wish to interview for jobs in the spring must have completed the necessary, preliminary steps with the Educational Placement Office.

Educational Placement is asking that education students come by Jones 310 to pick up materials for setting up a credential file.

This file is used in connection with job searches and as an informational file for prospective employers.

Students seeking Virginia certification should pick up the pertinent application forms. Certification in Virginia is not an automatic process; the educational placement staff can do nothing until students have filed an application with them for processing through the State Department of Education in June.

Between 50 and 60 school systems from Virginia, as well as many other states, will send representatives to the campus in the spring to interview for educational positions. Students must have a credential file established before the interview dates. Sign-ups will begin immediately following Christmas break in Jones 310 with interviews beginning the last week in February.

SCATS exchanges change Monday

A uniform dialing plan for Richmond and Williamsburg agency telephone numbers will go into effect Monday, Dec. 7. Under the new plan, all local exchange (three-digit prefix) numbers will match SCATS exchange numbers.

The Telecommunications Division of the Department of Information Technology is implementing the changeover to simplify dialing. Until now, callers often had to contend with two numbers — one SCATS and one local — for a single agency. Uniform dialing will eliminate this confusion, making telephone numbers easier to remember and allowing more efficient routing of calls on the network. The changeover will also result in savings of over $50,000 a year in the Richmond area alone.

All state employees must begin using these new exchanges, as shown on the chart below, on Monday, Dec. 7. Failure of agencies to use the new numbers for long distance calls could result in a charge, since a SCATS call to an incorrect number will be logged as a completed call and will carry a one-minute charge.

Recorded announcements will be used as a safeguard for those who do not know the new numbers. For example, an incoming call to the 257 telephone exchange will receive an announcement saying "The 257 exchange has been changed. The new exchange is 367. Please dial again, using 367 and the last four digits of the number you dialed."

For a detailed listing of agencies and new telephone numbers consult your new 1987-88 SCATS telephone directory or call DIT's State Operator at 800-422-2319.

Taxability of Scholarships and Fellowships A Reminder from the Office of Administration and Finance

The 1986 Tax Reform Act contains several provisions relating to scholarships and fellowships that may affect the taxability of the awards you have or will receive. The purpose of this memorandum is to provide you with our interpretation of the tax implications that this act will have for calendar year 1987. Student loans and out-of-state tuition remission will continue to be non-taxable for 1987.

Scholarships and Fellowships

The tax bill essentially rewrote Section 117 of the Internal Revenue Service tax code to limit the exclusion of scholarships for fellowships from income to only those amounts used to pay for tuition and fees required for attendance, course required fees, books, supplies and equipment. The College considers the student fees as fees required for attendance. The portions of scholarships and fellowships used to pay for room, board and other living expenses are not considered to be "course-related expenditures." Therefore, funds received for these non-course-related expenses are now taxable. Other funds paid as part of a scholarship or fellowship, such as stipends or living expenses, will also become taxable. The new tax provisions will apply to all scholarship and fellowship recipients regardless of the sources of those funds (Federal Pell and supplemental Educational Opportunity Grants, state grants, National Merit scholarships, athletic scholarships and scholarships from private groups).

The IRS recently issued Notice 87-31, which provides guidance for the institutions to follow in determining the taxable portions of scholarships and fellowships under the Tax Reform Act. The IRS has stated that the grantors of scholarships and fellowships are not required to file information returns (Form 1099). In addition, grantors are not required to withhold income or employment taxes. However, amounts paid for teaching, research or other services are to be treated as wages. In such cases, the grantor will be required to file Form W-2, Wage and Tax Statement, and to withhold income and employment taxes.

If you have receive or will receive a scholarship or fellowship during calendar year 1987, amounts received in excess of tuition and other allowed fees and expenses will have to be included in your income. One exception is, if the award was made prior to Aug. 12, 1986, the amounts received are excluded from income to the extent permitted under Section 117 prior to its amendment. The award date would normally be the date on the award letter unless an earlier date is specified in the letter. A multiple-year scholarship awarded prior to Aug. 17, 1986, can also be totally or partial excluded from income depending on the wording of the award. (Each multiple-year award will have to be reviewed on its own merits.)

The recipient of the scholarship or fellowship grant is responsible for determining whether the scholarship, in part or whole, is includable in gross income under Section 117. The student should keep records to document expenditures for books, supplies and equipment required for course instruction.

For students who receive scholarships or fellowships that required teaching, research or other services as a condition of the award, the College will advise the recipient as to the amount to be treated as wages by use of the IRS Form W-2. It is possible that a single scholarship or fellowship award could be treated as three separate amounts. A portion of the scholarship could be excluded because it was used for tuition and other allowable expenses; a second portion could be treated as wages "earned" by teaching, research or other services; and the remainder could be treated as other income because it does not represent compensation for service rendered. The grantor of the scholarship or fellowship must make a "good faith" determination, based upon all facts and circumstances, to determine the portions of the awards that represent compensation.

Please keep in mind that this information is based on our interpretation of information that we have received from the IRS. You are ultimately responsible for providing the information on your 1040. If you wish to seek further clarification, you should contact either the IRS or your tax counsel.
