College, state plan prevention institute this summer

This summer, the first Virginia Institute on the Prevention of Mental Illness, Mental Retardation, and Substance Abuse will be held at the College, organized by Joseph Galano, chairman of the psychology department, and Tamara Stovall, director, Office of Prevention, Virginia Department of Mental Health, Mental Retardation and Substance Abuse Services.

"The institute is an excellent example of collaboration between the College and the mental health community and reflects the College's mission to extend its reach and its services beyond the perimeters of the campus," says Galano.

The institute will feature leading preventionists in mental health including Stephen Goldston, former director of the Office of Prevention at the National Institute of Mental Health, and George Albee, past president, the American Psychological Association and chair of the President's Commission on Mental Health (Task Panel on Prevention).

Galano is very excited about the array of nationally known prevention experts who will be participating in the institute and "feels privileged" to be presenting along side them.

Galano says that the goal of the institute is to provide front-line preventionists working in Virginia's 40 community service boards with the knowledge, theories, principles, and skills to develop effective prevention programs. The institute will focus on three major goals; (1) to provide all of Virginia preventionists with a common knowledge base, (2) to thoroughly educate preventionists about those emerging prevention technologies that offer the greatest promise for reducing the number of new cases of mental illness, mental retardation and substance abuse in the Commonwealth, and (3) to assist preventionists in translating theory into practice and in learning how to generate the community support so vital for their prevention programs.

"Virginia is clearly emerging as a leader in the area of prevention and mental health promotion," says Galano. A key feature of the state's effort has been to educate prevention specialists about model programs that have clearly demonstrated the effectiveness through research and evolution.

Galano believes that without an investment in prevention, Virginia will continue to pay the ever-escalating human and financial costs of victims of adolescent pregnancy, substance abuse and a lengthy list of other preventable problems. "Success will neither be cheap nor rapid, but it will be far less expensive than the failure to act," asserts Galano, and adds that he is glad that Virginia has accepted the challenge.

Galano serves as a gubernatorial appointee to the Virginia Council on Coordinating Prevention and is vice chairman of the Prevention and Promotion Advisory Council to the State Board of Mental Health, Mental Retardation and Substance Abuse Services.

Australian economist to give third Public Policy Lecture

When Japan or America sneezes, Australia tends to catch cold—economically speaking, according to Australian David K. Round, visiting professor of economics.

Round will give the third in the current series of public lectures sponsored by the university's Public Policy Program. The lecture, titled "She'll Be Right, Mate: The Australian Policy Approach to Achieving Competition," will be held at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday, April 19, in Chancellors 102. Admission is free.

Round, a reader in economics at the University of Adelaide, is also a member of Australia's Trade Practices Commission (TPC), a body comparable to the U.S. Federal Trade Commission. As the sole trade-enforcement agency, Australia's TPC is "similar to the FTC and the antitrust division of the Department of Justice rolled into one," says Round, one of five part-time members and the only academician.

Round's lecture will deal with the derivative nature of both the Australian economy and the country's antitrust policies. The antitrust movement there began in 1906 with the Australian Industries Preservation Act, which was almost a direct copy of the U.S. Sherman Act.

"In Australia, however, there was no history of trusts or robber barons. The act was passed to keep out foreign competition rather than encourage it," Round explains. The act collapsed under a constitutional challenge in 1917 and remained virtually unused until the early 1960s.

During that time, says Round, Australian industry became more and more collusive. "Mate-ship" described the way many Australians did business. Most industries of any importance had all sorts of collusive agreements with regard to price and market sharing, which were unchecked by government intervention."

A series of restrictive trade practices reforms beginning in the 1960s culminated in the 1970s with enactment of legislation and establishment of the TPC.

"As a result of legislative developments in the 1970s and 80s, Australia now has an arsenal of antitrust weapons which is on par with that of the U.S., but which is enforced rather less formally than here," says Round.

"Mergers in particular have to lead to really dominant market positions before they are attacked. However, price fixing is attacked as vigorously as in this country."

In contrast, says Round, "resale price maintenance is thought to be unexcusably bad in Australia, while in the U.S. there is currently a strong body of thought which suggests that it should not be made per se illegal. The free-market philosophy is not as deeply entrenched in Australia."

More recent moves to lower tariffs and establish the country as a free-trade zone with New Zealand have "forced Australia to face the process of modernization," says Round, but the country still has difficulty competing on the international market because of its companies' small size and its distance from major markets.

After Great Britain joined the European Community, Australia lost one of its guaranteed markets, says Round. The newly established free-trade policies also make Australia vulnerable to foreign countries' "dumping" or selling goods and services below the home cost of production.

One American example is cheap air fares. Since it began service to Australia, Continental Airlines has been able to underprice Qantas and Air New Zealand considerably.

Reynolda House director to speak at Muscarelle spring luncheon

Nicholas Bragg

Nicholas B. Bragg, executive director of the Reynolda House Museum of American Art in Winston-Salem, N. C., will be the guest speaker for the Muscarelle Museum of Art's spring lecture luncheon on May 4. The luncheon will take place at noon in the Dodge Room of PBK Hall.

Following the luncheon, Bragg will present a slide talk on the furnishings, architecture and gardens of Reynolda House and on the museum's superb collection of American art.

The public is invited to attend the lecture luncheon. Advance registration is required. Luncheon reservations will be accepted until April 28.

The luncheon fee is $12 per person. The lecture is free to Muscarelle Museum of Art members and College students. Non-members will be charged a $3 lecture fee.

Those who wish to attend only the lecture will be admitted at 12:45 p.m. For reservation information, call the Muscarelle Museum at ext. 4650.

Bragg is a native of Oxford, N. C. He is the recipient of a bachelor's degree from Wake Forest University and a master's degree from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

He began his career in historic preservation with the North Carolina Department of Archives and History in Raleigh before accepting the position of director of education and interpretation at Old Salem.

Since 1970, Bragg has served as the first and only executive director of Reynolda House Museum of American Art. During the past 18 years, he has developed that museum's impressive holdings in American art to a level that now ranks the Reynolda House as one of the finest institutions of its type in the nation.

Swem adds to Chinese language collection

Chinese Embassy donates 200 books to library

The Reves Center for International Studies and the Earl Gregg Swem Library were host to a delegation from the Embassy of the People's Republic of China on April 5. Jiaxian Xu, cultural counsellor, and Haiming Liu, first secretary, traveled to the College at the invitation of President Paul Verkuil to present a gift of Chinese language books.

At a reception in the Botetourt Gallery of Swem Library, Stephen Field, assistant professor of Chinese, introduced Counsellor Xu to an audience of Chinese language students, library staff and interested faculty.

Mr. Xu emphasized the importance of reading in an inspirational talk that drew from classical Chinese proverbs. He began with Kai juan you yi meaning "There is profit in unrolling the scroll." In other words, to gain advantage in the world we should open books and read.

Alluding to the great distance separating our two nations, Mr. Xu continued with this proverb: "Reading 10,000 books is like traveling for 10,000 miles." Then he humorously concluded with the observation that "With knowledge comes a house of gold, with knowledge comes a girl of jade."

Counsellor Xu expressed his admiration for the College and the growing Chinese language program. He expressed his wish that this gift of more than 200 volumes would serve to increase the understanding between our cultures.

Then he presented a handsome edition to the library on the subject of the Buddhist caves at Dunhuang. Nancy Marshall, university librarian, accepted the volume on behalf of the College and expressed her gratitude to the embassy for the generous gift.

New parking designations

The Parking Services Office has announced two new student parking designations.

Decals are on order and the plan is expected to be initiated before the end of the school year. Cost of the new decals will also be announced when the program begins.

EVENING DECAL — This decal will allow parking in all faculty/staff areas on campus (except those specifically reserved) from 4 p.m. to 7:45 a.m., Monday - Friday and anytime on weekends.

This decal will be pro-rated at half the current annual day-student decal rate. Evening users wishing to make daytime use of the College facilities will have the option of purchasing a regular day-student decal.

SUMMER PERMIT — This decal will accommodate short term, summer users, and those whose user designation may change with the fall semester. All summer permits will expire Aug. 31 and all are pro-rated on a three months basis determined by the current annual fee.

The fee for the Summer Permit will be deducted from the full value of a permanent decal, regardless of whether the student uses a day-student or resident student permit during the regular school year. To be eligible for the deduction, however, students must turn in Summer Permits when the permanent decal is issued.

Carr, Sullivan nominations due Friday, April 15

The committee on prizes and awards will meet shortly to select the recipients of the major College awards — the Carr Cup and the Sullivan Awards. Nominations for the Carr Cup and the Sullivan awards may be made by any member of the College community. Criteria for the awards are as follows:

The Carr Cup: "awarded (to a graduating senior) on the basis of character, scholarship and leadership. The aim is to find a well-rounded student, having a good standing in all three of these respects, and withal carrying within the spirit of willingness to sacrifice and give oneself to a cause."

The Sullivan Awards: awarded annually "to not more than one man and one woman in the graduating class, and to one other person who has a close relationship with the College. In the selection of the recipients, nothing is considered except the possession of characteristics of heart, mind and conduct as evince a spirit of love for and helpfulness to other men and women."

Please submit all nominations and supporting materials to the Office of the Dean of Student Affairs, James Blair 203B, by April 15.

Bourjea to speak on French poetry

Serge Bourjea will give a lecture in French on "Poésie et sous-développement," at 7 p.m., Monday, April 18 at the French House. A reception will follow.

He will reflect on the role and function of poetic creation in developing countries, particularly in Africa and Brazil. Bourjea has traveled extensively and lived in the Malgache Republic, Brazil and Senegal.

A member of the faculty at the University of Montpellier in France, he is a well-known specialist on Paul Valéry.

Bourjea's visit is being sponsored by the Alliance Française.

The William and Mary Chorus

Choir to offer varied program in concerts

A variety of music that includes "Ave Maria" and lively European folk tunes from the repertoire of the College of William and Mary Choir and Chorus has been selected by director Frank T. Lendrim for the annual concerts by the two singing groups at 8:15 p.m., Friday and Saturday, April 22 and 23 in Phi Beta Kappa Memorial Hall.

General admission is $2.50, and tickets are on sale at the main desk of the Campus Center and will also be available at the PBK box office the evenings of performance. Tickets may also be reserved by phoning the music department office at ext. 4374.

The women's chorus will open the program with "Ave Maria" by Gustav Holst, sung in Latin. The chorus will also sing "How Excellent Thy Name" by Howard Hanson and "Five Prayers for the Young" by Ned Rorem.

Michelle Martin, a senior from Columbia, S.C., and Summer Rutherford, a sophomore from Huntington, W. Va., will provide violin accompaniment for "The Snow" by Edward Elgar, which will be sung by the chorus to open the second half of the program. Other chorus selections include "Come In" by Randall Thompson, and a Scottish folk song, "An Eriskay Love Lilt."

Carol Fox, a senior from Alexandria, Va., will be soloist for one of three Latin Motets by William Mathias, which will be the open the choir's portion of the program. The choir will also sing "I Hear A Voice A-Prayin'" by Houston Bright; an American folk hymn, "Hark, I Hear The Harps Eternal," and "Come Let Us Sing" by Giovanni Gabrieli.

Michael Holtz of Great Falls, Va.; Elizabeth Johnson of Murrysville, Pa.; and Diann Vaughan and Ryan Vaughan, both from West Hartford, Conn., will be soloists for a group of gypsy songs by Johannes Brahms, sung in German. Cameron Dahl of Falls Church, Va., will be soloist for the French folk song, "A Cargo of Fruit."

The Botetourt Chamber Singers of the choir will sing the rousing "Oh! Susanna" by Stephen Foster and English and German folk songs.

Joseph Turi of Wilton, Conn., will be soloist with the Men of the Choir for the spiritual "Sometimes I Feel Like a Motherless Child." James Scofield, of Westfield, N.C., and Ward Loving of Ponca City, Okla., will be soloists for "Bonnie Eloise" by J. R. Thomas. Brent Baxter of Arlington, Va., will provide guitar accompaniment.

The choir and chorus will combine for the final selection of the program, "Psalm 150" by Charles Ives.

Choir accompanists (l-r): Christine Cochrane, Melody Pitts and Wanda Graybeal

Montage to perform

Montage will be heard at 8 p.m., Monday, April 18 in the Williamsburg Regional Library Arts Theatre. This concert is being sponsored by the music department.

Mark Millhone (l.) as Aufidius; Nancy Gunn as Volumnia; Tom Fiscella as Coriolanus; and Fiona Davis as Virgilia in a scene from Shakespeare's "Coriolanus," which will be performed April 14-17 in Phi Beta Kappa Memorial Hall. This is the final play of the 1987-88 W&M Theatre season.

Political themes mark 'Coriolanus'

Although Shakespeare knew nothing of Democratic primaries or Republican caucuses, one of the last tragedies, "Coriolanus," has been chosen as an appropriate season finale in this election year by the William and Mary Theatre, because it deals with politics. The parallels with the current election process are intriguing, says director Richard Palmer, professor of theatre and speech.

"Coriolanus" will be presented April 14, 15 and 16 at 8:15 p.m. and April 17 at 2 p.m. in Phi Beta Kappa Memorial Hall.

Tickets are $4 and may be obtained at the PBK box office the week of the play and will also be on sale the evenings of performance.

The dynamics of electioning are woven through the story of the Roman general Coriolanus who decides to run for the top political job as consul of Rome. He finds his aristocratic, patrician views are both despised and praised by a citizen mob which lacks any consistent political philosophy of its own and is easily swayed by charismatic orators.

Palmer says that just as Shakespeare approached the Roman story in an Elizabethan context, he is taking the play out of its early Roman setting and using a post-modern setting as a background. By removing the setting and costumes out of the narrow restrictions of any one historical period, Palmer wants to free the audience to see the modern parallels in the play and view it as an election commentary. It will, he hopes, "get people to look at the process and how manipulated we are by it."

The play is counted as one of Shakespeare's tragedies, but it is a political tragedy more than a personal one, says Palmer. Distraught by the political machinations that surround him and over which he loses control, Coriolanus cannot overcome his anger and decides to join the enemy and sack the city he has sworn to defend.

Palmer has also chosen to wrap the action around the audience for "Coriolanus." The balcony will not be used and the action will be played out using portions of the auditorium as well as the stage. As a result of the unusual setting, the seating capacity in Phi Beta Kappa Memorial Hall will be limited to about 500 seats.

The central character, Coriolanus, says Palmer, is a role coveted by actors but a difficult one nevertheless. While Coriolanus is very active and very vocal, there is little to give the actor clues to the personality of the character beneath the surface; the playwright does not provide a soliloquy, as he does with other major figures such as Macbeth and Henry V.

In the William and Mary production the title role will be played by Thomas D. Fiscella, a sophomore and an English and theatre concentrator. Fiscella was a member of the cast of "The Three Sisters" by Chekhov and is fiction editor for the college literary magazine, The William and Mary Review.

Another major role in the play is that of Volumnia, Coriolanus' mother, whose overwhelming influence provides one of the major themes of the play. She will be portrayed by Nancy R. Gunn, a senior theatre concentrator who has worked for two years with the Virginia Shakespeare Festival and last year received the Martin Jurow Award for theatrical excellence.

Kirby Knight

Knight plans senior recital

Kirby Ray Knight, a senior majoring in music, will give an organ recital at 4 p.m., Saturday, April 16 at the Williamsburg Baptist Church.

The program will include Suite du Premier Ton by Louis-Nicolas Clerambault; five chorale preludes, including "Du Friedefurst, Herr Jesu Christ," "Wir Christenleut" and "Jesu, Meine Freunde" by J. S. Bach, "Kom, Heiliger Geist, Herre Gott" by Buxtehude, and "Ein Feste Burg ist Unser Gott" by Pachelbel. Knight will also play the Toccata and Fugue in F by Buxtehude; "Fanfare" by Jacques Lemmens; "Benedictus" by Max Reger; a hymn, "Crown Him with Many Crowns" and three selections from Kleine Praludien und Intermezzi by Hermann Schroeder.

Knight has been a member of the William and Mary Choir for the past four years. An active member of the Baptist Student Union, he has been choir director for the past three years and Creative Ministries Leader for two years.

He is a member of Phi Eta Sigma and Alpha Lambda Delta honor societies and Delta Omicron music honorary. Knight is the recipient of the Carl A. Fehr choir scholarship. Last year he was awarded the Aurelia Walford Classical Music Scholarship.

Knight plans to work toward a master's degree in church music at Southern Baptist Theological Seminary in Louisville, Ky., this fall.
