Varied programs readied for Parents Weekend

A special feature of Parents Weekend, Sept. 30-Oct. 2 will be a symposium "Public Service: A William and Mary Tradition," 9-10:15 a.m., in William and Mary Hall on Saturday, Oct. 1.

The alumni panel will include Sarah J. Brady '64, lobbyist and vice chairman of Handgun Control, Inc., and wife of Presidential Press Secretary James Brady; Hunter B. Andrews '42, member of the Senate of the Commonwealth of Virginia; Robert M. Gates '65, deputy director, CIA; and Alan B. Mollohan '65, member of the U.S. House of Representatives. David Finifter, associate professor of economics, will be moderator.

Opening remarks will be given by President Paul Verkuil.

James A. Bill, professor of government and director of the Wendy and Emery Reves Center for International Studies, will speak on "Iran and America after the Gulf War." Bill is a well-known authority on the Middle East whose views are frequently solicited by major newspapers, news magazines and television shows. He is the author of numerous books and articles on the Middle East. His latest book, The Eagle and the Lion: The Tragedy of American-Iranian Relations, was published by Yale University Press earlier this year.

Bill's presentation in Millington Aud. is one of a series that will be held Saturday morning, from 10:40 to 11:25 a.m.

Bruce K. Goodwin, professor of geology, will discuss the geology of Virginia in Small Hall 113.

A faculty-staff-student panel will discuss "Alcohol and the College Student: Myth and Reality," in Rogers Aud.

A second series of presentations, 11:40-12:25, will include Robert B. Archibald, associate professor and chairman of the department of economics, who will talk about current business cycles and what they have to do with elections. His session will be held in Small Hall 113.

"Communication and Change in Business: A Case Study," will be the topic discussed by Jeanne Lindholm, assistant professor of business administration, in Rogers Aud.

As part of the weekend's activities, President and Mrs. Verkuil will entertain parents, faculty and staff at a reception in the Wren Yard from 4 to 5:30 p.m., Friday, Sept. 30. In case of rain, this event will be moved into the Sir Christopher Wren Building.

That evening the William and Mary Choir and the College Orchestra will give a concert at 8 p.m. in Trinkle Hall.

On Saturday, the Botetourt Chamber Singers of the choir will give two half-hour concerts for parents in the Chapel of the Wren Building, at 3:30 and 4 p.m.

The weekend schedule for parents includes campus tours and an invitation to visit exhibits at the Muscarelle Museum of Art, the Andrews Hall galleries and Swem Library.

The women's volleyball team will play the University of Massachusetts in Adair Gym at 4 p.m. on Friday, Sept. 30, and the women's soccer team will take on the University of Connecticut at 2 p.m. on Barskdale Field, Sunday, Oct. 2.

A baseball game, William and Mary v. Catholic University, gets underway at noon on Saturday, Oct. 1.

"Richard Henzel: Mark Twain in Person" will re-create the wit and wisdom of the famous American humorist in a program at 8:15 p.m., Saturday, Oct. 1 in William and Mary Hall. Parents who have registered for the weekend and students with IDs will be admitted free of charge. General admission is $2.

An Occasion for the Arts, Williamsburg's fall festival of visual and entertainment arts, which begins at 10 a.m. Sunday morning on Merchants Square, is being included as an entertainment option for parents.

Parents register for the weekend in the lobby of Phi Beta Hall beginning at 8 a.m., Friday. Classes will be open to them throughout the day and lantern tours of "Old Campus" and the Wren Building will be offered at 11-minute intervals, 9:15-10:15 p.m.

Residence halls and student organizations will hold receptions for parents from 3 to 5 p.m. Saturday. A student-produced slide/tape presentation on college life will be shown at 11:40 a.m. Saturday in Andrews Aud. and again at 2 p.m. in the Campus Center.

SCHEV Director Davies talks about current, future issues

Gordon Davies, director of the Council of Higher Education, recently gave a campus audience a picture of Virginia higher education, past, present and future, as part of a seminar on education that was planned for The President's Council.

"We are fortunate now to enjoy a time of high revenue, high consensus and low conflict in higher education," said Davies. "It is easy to do new things in this environment. The challenge is to make progress in less favorable environments — that is the real test of our mettle."

The revenue situation in Virginia will probably change, and not for the better, partly, said Davies, because of federal actions and partly because economic growth tends to be cyclical.

"In the past few years we have started many new state programs, particularly human services programs, programs in corrections and aid to dependent children, as well as health care programs which have been cut by the federal government. Higher education's share of appropriations, while growing, is dropping as a percentage of the revenues being appropriated throughout the state. ... There are more slices of the pie," said Davies.

"Virginia is a low-tax state," he explained. "It does not use its full tax capacity, as that is calculated by economists, but increasingly our citizens want a full range of government services, particularly in higher education."

"We pay for exceptional high quality in higher education in two ways: one is fund-raising from private sources, which provides a margin of excellence to colleges like William and Mary and several others in Virginia, and the other is high tuition. Our tuitions are among the highest in public universities in the South and well above the national average."

"But I would suggest to you that in Virginia tuition is a user tax; it is an alternative to general tax revenues. We cannot decrease tuition in the state without commensurate increases in general tax revenues or without accepting a decrease in the quality of our colleges and universities."

"Private money will provide a margin of excellence, icing on the cake, but we are naive if we think that private money can take over the obligations of the state. So like it or not, tuition will be high in Virginia unless and until leaders of the state determine that the tax revenues must be increased," he added.

Davies reinforced his point about state support of higher education by noting that over a period of 30 months the state will buy $30 million worth of instructional and research equipment for Virginia colleges and universities through a higher education equipment trust fund, which has been created with the support of the governor and the General Assembly.

"I don't think any other state in the union is able to make that commitment to its faculty and its students," Davies also noted funding given to William and Mary for the revision of the advising program for undergraduates, the establishment of a women's studies program and the establishment of the Commonwealth Center in Early American History and Culture, one of seven centers for which the governor has appropriated $8 million.

The slowdown in revenue growth, said Davies, is coming at a time when the migration to Virginia is growing at the rate of 500 per day. He noted that in some parts of the state one-and-a-half times as many children were graduating from high school as were born in Virginia 18 years ago. In other parts of the state the statistics show a negative ratio.

"There is an indication of growing bifurcation between two parts of this commonwealth. In Northern Virginia 80 percent of graduating classes go on to college. There are other parts of this state where 30 to 40 percent go on."

Davies commented that another disparity exists between the numbers of blacks and whites going to college. Ten years ago 32 percent of black high school students were apt to go on to college while 42 percent of white high school students were likely to continue their educations. "We have mounted major campaigns and we have spent a lot of money on increasing access, providing financial aid and increasing awareness of opportunities, and the end of that is that the rate for whites has increased by about 26 points; for blacks it has dropped by two," he said.

"Now we can be consoled that the two percent drop is a smaller drop than occurs in many other states and believe me they are not all southern. ... We can be consoled, but we must deal with the fact that there is an increasing gap and an increasingly serious social problem and an increasingly difficult curriculum problem. I do not believe that our affirmative action efforts at colleges like William and Mary and elsewhere throughout the state are merely an ancillary social goal of colleges and universities; I believe they are integral to the curriculum and the intellectual and cultural well-being of our colleges and universities. It is important that they reflect the population of the state and nation. It is important for the curricula, too, and the integrity of the institutions."

Turning to another issue, Davies said that growth in the state contributes to what he describes as "irritation, puzzlement and occasional absolute outrage about selectivity and accessibility."

"There are a lot of very good friends and supporters of higher education in the Virginia General Assembly, and they want schools like William and Mary. They want very badly to maintain your traditions; they are proud of those traditions. They also want their constituents to get in."

"This is a source of puzzlement. They don't know what to do. The irony, of course, is that what they want is to get their students into the College of William and Mary the way the College of William and Mary is."

"If we change the ratios between in-state and out-of-state students at the College of William and Mary, the University of Virginia, Madison, Mary Washington and Virginia Tech, and make them less selective, many of the people who are complaining about not being able to get in here would go to Duke or some place else. They want to come here for what you are, and they can't get in because of what you do."

"I don't have an answer to that, but it is an issue that won't go away and in fact may become more pressing in the next few years when the enrollment surge begins anew and there are even more applicants for a limited number of spaces. That is a question we intend to bring to the Commission on Higher Education in the 21st Century as a matter of public policy. It is a matter of finding a way of preserving what we know and love about some of our institutions while accommodating the change that is surely coming in Virginia's population."

"I think the greatest threat to Virginia's higher education system is complacency," said Davies. "It is a good system but it can be better. William and Mary is a fine small university, but it too can be better without giving up the essential characteristics that make it dear to you."

"We have to figure out ways to stay good, get better, under pressures for enrollment growth, but we also have to figure out ways to support that particular kind of excellence at a place like William and Mary. William and Mary for its part has to help us understand how to do this; and we should do this in ways that are tough-minded and fair."

Because the era of leaving the dollars on the stump is over, William and Mary also has to work within itself to absorb its recent initiatives and great progress in the last several years into the fabric of the College."

Davies also said that the College should not take its position for granted. Nothing, he said, is more independently organized than Virginia's system of higher education, which is the quintessence of decentralization. "We have institutions that have great autonomy, and we cannot conceive that the autonomy of places like William and Mary, the University of Virginia and Virginia Military Institute can possibly be threatened. But

Research made easier with new databases at Swem

Swem Library recently installed ERIC (Educational Resources Information Center) and PSYCHLit (Psychological Abstracts) databases on CD-ROM (Compact Disk-Read Only Memory) giving researchers enhanced access to two significant bibliographic databases in the social sciences.

A fairly recent innovation, CD-ROM technology combined with a microcomputer allows users to search for information easily and inexpensively.

Formerly, a researcher interested in searching the ERIC or PSYCHLit databases had just two choices — either a laborious search through the printed indexes or a computer search conducted by a librarian and entailing a fee.

CD-ROM offers an attractive third option. With CD-ROM, there is no fee; researchers can perform their own searches, and can either print out or download search results to a floppy disk. The system's user-friendly software makes it easy to identify journal articles by author, subject, descriptors, keywords, journal name, classification code, publication date, population, language or any combination of these items.

CD-ROM technology allows up to 550 megabytes (the equivalent of 1,500 floppy discs) of information to be encoded on a single disc. The compact disc is read by a CD-ROM drive, connected to an IBM-PC. Search software running on the IBM-PC instructs the CD-ROM drive to access the compact disc, providing rapid retrieval of complex search requests.

Swem Library has two CD-ROM stations near the reference desk on the first floor. The ERIC database goes back to 1966, and the PSYCHLit database back to 1974. ERIC resides on three CD disks and PSYCHLit on two. The current disk of each database is updated quarterly.

Anyone interested in reserving time to use either of these databases should stop by the Swem Library reference desk or call ext. 4407.

Reception in Andrews offers chance to meet the artists

A reception to "meet the artists" featured in the current exhibitions in the Andrews galleries, will be held at 4 p.m., Thursday, Oct. 6 in the hall and foyer galleries.

The exhibits include watercolor florals by James E. Jones of Washington, D.C.; portrait sketches by Lee Newman, also of Washington, D.C.; and student art work from the Boston University School for the Visual Arts.

The exhibitions open Sept. 26 and will be on display until Nov. 4. The public is invited to the reception and the exhibitions.

Lee Newman's 12 portrait sketches are of Mrs. Pola Schofield, an 86-year-old Cuban. Newman painted the portraits over a four-month span while Mrs. Schofield was dying of cancer. Newman, a traditionalist, paints still life, landscapes, figures and portrait heads. "I like to become involved in everything I try, both for variety and because I am interested in the forms they represent," he says. Newman currently works at his studio in Washington and teaches at the George Washington Studio School.

The work of James E. Jones includes many floral landscapes. "My work balances a realistic approach to traditional floral and landscape subjects with the freedom of developing abstract passages that can be enjoyed on their own merits," explains the artist. Jones is a watercolor instructor at the St. Patrick's Senior Center in Washington, D.C., and runs the watercolor workshop for the Landon School in Bethesda, Md.

Works from the Boston University School for the Visual Arts include sketches and prints created by students over the past five years.

Library Friends honor Dr. Fields

J. Andrew Lark (l) chairman of the Friends of the Library, presents Memory of Washington, a collection of biographical sketches and eulogies to George Washington, to University Librarian Nancy Marshall. The book was given by an anonymous donor to honor the first chairman of the Friends, Dr. Joseph E. Fields, pictured at right. Dr. Fields, a retired physician, is an expert on George Washington. Memory of Washington was printed in Newport, R.I., in 1800, one year after the first president's death.

Fall T&G speakers announced

Bruce P. Lenman, James Pinckney Harrison Professor of History, will speak on "Elective Dictatorship in the United Kingdom," at the Sept. 29 meeting of the Town and Gown luncheon, at 12:15 p.m. in the Campus Center ballroom.

The Town and Gown luncheon is open to all members of the campus community and area residents. The fee is $6 for the general public, $4 for faculty and staff.

Reservations are required and should be made by noon on Tuesday the week of the program by calling Sharon Morgan at ext. 4600.

Speakers this semester will include Edward P. Crapol, professor of history, on "Legacy of War: Vietnam Today," Oct. 6; Donald Debats, visiting professor of government from Flinders University, Adelaide, Australia, on "To Form a Government: Australian and American Political Parties Compared," Oct. 20; Robert P. Maccubbin, professor of English, "William and Mary and the 300th Anniversary of the Glorious Revolution," Oct. 27; and Joyce Van Tassel-Baska, Jody and Layton Smith Professor of Education, on "Developing the Gifted Learner: What Works?" Nov. 3.

Also Rodney Alan Smolla, director, The Institute of Bill of Rights Law, Marshall-Wythe School of Law, on "Free Press and Privacy: Reporting on the Private Lives of Public People"; and John J. McGlennon, associate professor of government, on "Election 1988: What Happened and Why?"

Davies urges 'creative restlessness'

I will remind you that in a very short period of time in another country with which we have very close relationships historically, Oxford and Cambridge were stripped of their autonomy. Tenure was simply done away with by an Act of Parliament.

"Great institutions have been brought under state control. The first reaction of government to unease with higher education is to control it more. There is no evidence that that works, but it is nonetheless the first reaction. The key to avoiding that in this country and state is for us to remain creatively restless about what it is we are doing."

Davies was one of a panel, which included Frank M. Turner, an alumnus and Provost at Yale; and Henry Rosovsky, Lewis P. and Linda L. Geyser University Professor at Harvard. Turner was unable to attend and his paper was read by James C. Livingston, Walter G. Mason Professor of Religion.

Notes

Writing Center invites faculty

The staff of the Writing Resources Center in Tucker Hall will hold a reception for faculty tomorrow evening, Sept. 22 from 7 to 9 p.m.

This will be an opportunity for Center Director Colleen Kennedy to show off recent additions and introduce writing consultants who are working at the facility.

Actuarial science

Bob Cavaliere of the Wyatt Company, Washington, D.C., will speak on "The Actuarial Science Profession," at 4:30 p.m., Monday, Oct. 3 in Small Hall 109.

This career talk is sponsored by the department of mathematics. All interested students and faculty are invited to attend.

Norfolk Consort Sunday concert

The Norfolk Chamber Consort will perform Sunday evening, Oct. 2 at 8 p.m. in a free concert at the Williamsburg Regional Library.

The program will include J. S. Bach's Musical

Offering as well as music composed by its dedicatee, King Frederick the Great of Prussia.

This concert is sponsored jointly by the department of music and the library.

HACE bake sale

HACE is seeking donations for its bake sale from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m., Friday, Sept. 23 in the Campus Center lobby.

Only brownies or bar-type cookies, muffins, cupcakes and cookies will be sold. Items should be individually wrapped in see-through plastic.

Volunteers are also needed as salespersons.

For details on the types of baked items needed or to donate time at the sale, please contact Lina Kilmer at ext. 4388.

Greenhouse safari

The Hourly and Classified Employees Association is offering guided tours of the greenhouse atop Millington. Martin Mathes, professor of biology, will serve as guide.

Tours will be offered Friday, Sept. 30 and Friday, Oct. 14. Those planning to take the tour will meet in the lobby of Millington Hall at noon.

Anyone who has not signed up for this program but wishes to participate may contact Sandy Wilms, HACE program chairman, ext. 4213, to be put on the list for either tour.

College Women's Club plans museum visit

The College Women's Club is planning a trip to the Virginia Living Museum in Newport News, Tuesday, Oct. 4. Carpools will be arranged. A tour of the museum is planned for 10 a.m. with optional lunch at Herman's Harbor House. Cost of the museum visit is $4; lunch, $9. Deadline for reservations is Sept. 27.

Those planning to attend are asked to mail checks payable to the College Women's Club to Ilona Johnson, 308 The Maine West, Williamsburg, 23185. For more information call Ilona Johnson, 220-8316, or Cassandra Plater, 565-3370.

1989 grants in biological sciences

The Howard Hughes Medical Institute is offering 60 doctoral fellowships for full-time study toward a Ph.D. or Sc.D. degree in biological sciences.

Awards are for three years, with an option to extend the fellowship for two additional years.

Stipends are $12,300 annually and a $10,700 annual cost-of-education allowance is provided to the fellowship institution on behalf of each fellow.

Eligible fields of study include biochemistry, biophysics, cell biology and regulation, developmental biology, genetics, immunology, microbiology, molecular biology, neuroscience, pharmacology, physiology, structural biology and virology.

The fellowship program is intended for students at or near the beginning of their graduate study in biological sciences. Students who also hold or are pursuing medical or dental degrees are eligible to apply.

There are no citizenship requirements, but foreign nationals must study in the United States.

Deadline for application is Nov. 14.

This fellowship competition is administered by the National Research Council. For copies of the program announcement or applications, write Hughes Doctoral Fellowships, The Fellowship Office, National Research Council, 2101 Constitution Ave., N.W., Washington, DC 20418. (Phone 202-334-2872.)

The Institute welcomes applications from all qualified persons and encourages women and members of minority groups to apply.

Notes

Voter registration

A voter registration drive will be held from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. tomorrow in the Campus Center.

Qualified residents of local jurisdictions can register. There will also be information available for those who wish to vote by absentee ballot.

Cyclefest

Federation, novice and fraternity races will be included in Cyclefest, Oct. 2 at Cary Stadium. There will be a bicycle auction at 1 p.m. in the Bryan Complex lot.

All proceeds will benefit the Student Advancement Association, a student-run fund-raising organization dedicated to helping other students.

For registration details call the SA office at ext. 4350 or 4394.

Minority career day

The University of Virginia is sponsoring a Minority Career Day for all juniors, seniors and graduate students on Nov. 8.

More than 100 employers representing a broad range of career fields will be present. Students will have a chance to talk with the employers and obtain career information, as well as participate in a panel discussion addressing the minority student job search.

Interested minority students may register with Barbara McGrann, receptionist for Career Services, Morton 140, until Oct. 28.

Bus transportation will be provided, leaving from Morton Hall at 8 a.m. and returning around 6 p.m.

Help Unlimited

Do you have some free time? Are you interested in setting your own hours and earning some extra money? If so, contact Help Unlimited, which is seeking help with babysitting requests and tutorial referral services.

Please contact Chrissy at ext. 4129 or visit the Help Unlimited office, Trinkle 157 (Campus Center), to pick up an application.

Special parking for Occasion for Arts

The Board of Director for An Occasion for the Arts has worked out a parking plan for festival day, Sunday, Oct. 2 with the College, the Colonial Williamsburg Foundation and the Williamsburg-James City County School division.

Planners hope the following schedule will significantly reduce the number of ticketings for illegal parking at the Occasion.

1. Two parking lots within a 1-1/2 block walk will be supervised by AOFTA volunteers: Matthew-Whaley School and the maintenance area lot on campus.

2. Three lots will be available but not supervised by volunteers: The National Center for State Courts, Phi Beta Kappa Hall and the area parallel and adjacent to the railroad tracks extending west of the depot.

3. There will be a shuttle service from the W&M Hall parking lot. Buses will alternate leaving and returning every 15 minutes from 10 a.m. to 7:15 p.m.

4. AOFTA will provide a checking service at Bruton Parish House so that patrons may shop at leisure, accumulate their purchases at the Parish House and pick them up when they leave. This service will operate from noon to 8 p.m.

The William and Mary NEWS

The William and Mary News is issued weekly during the school year for faculty, staff and students of the College and distributed on campus Wednesday afternoons.

News items and advertisements should be delivered to the News Office, James Blair 310A, no later than 5 p.m. the Friday before publication. Notices for the calendar should be delivered to the News Office no later than 5 p.m. the Wednesday before publication.
