United Way to coordinate new drive

$35,000 is campus goal for Combined Charitable Campaign

For the first time this year, under an executive order from Governor Baliles, the State Employees Combined Charitable Campaign will be held on campus during October. This replaces the United Way fund drive that is held annually at this time and includes a broader range of eligible organizations, including United Way agencies.

The United Way of Greater Williamsburg as well as being included in the roster of charities, will also serve as the coordinating group to raise money for all organizations on the expanded list as well as its own.

Franklin E. (Bud) Robeson, acting vice provost for computing and telecommunications, is serving as chairman of a three-man committee for the local drive, which includes Donald Messmer, J.S. Mack Professor of Business, and William Merck, vice president for administration and finance.

The new fund drive, said Robeson, follows the lead of a number of other states in combining local organizations with a variety of other organizations.

It gives all state employees an opportunity to participate in a one-time campaign, said Robeson, who pointed out that the extended new list includes units under the umbrella of the International Services Agencies and the National Voluntary Health Agencies of Virginia, as well as independent groups such as Special Olympics-Virginia, the American Foundation for the Blind and Recording for the Blind.

John Thelin, professor of education and president of the United Way of Greater Williamsburg, said the United Way was honored to be asked to participate and glad they could help out. The United Way is hoping that its smaller share of the fund-raising effort will be offset by the increased participation by members of the College community.

One of the criteria for organizations to be added to the list was that their fund-raising costs were under 25 percent of the funds they raised.

One of the main aims of the campaign this year, said Robeson, will be to achieve a high degree of participation on campus. Toward that end, Robeson plans to use a one-on-one approach.

For employees, the Hourly and Classified Employees Association (HACE) has volunteered to coordinate staff solicitation. Joyce Emerson, personnel office, Vicky Murff, treasurer's office, and Pam Owen, telecommunications office, will serve as HACE captains and coordinate the work of other employee volunteers. A faculty committee in each department will be asked to coordinate giving by faculty.

The donor card this year is different from last year's. There will be no billing. Gifts may be made in cash, by check or payroll deductions. Donors will also be given the opportunity to designate five different ways in which they would like their gift distributed. Donations of $250 and over will be recognized as Leadership Club gifts. A letter from President Verkuil will be included in the packet of information given each employee.

Solicitors will be asked to report back to their captains each week by 3 p.m. on Friday. A progress report on the drive will be made each Monday by noon.

The campus goal is $35,000. As important as the goal is, said Robeson, one of the main objectives of this year's drive is to involve all employees.

College testing program names Coleman outstanding adviser

Randy Coleman, associate professor of chemistry and director of the new freshman and sophomore advising program, has been selected as a 1988 outstanding adviser by the American College Testing Program/National Academic Advising Association (ACT/NACADA). The award names him as the outstanding adviser in a five-state region including New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Delaware, Maryland and Virginia.

VIMS hosts aquaculture meeting

One hundred and twenty-five scientists from around the world are currently meeting at the Virginia Institute of Marine Science for the third international colloquium in marine aquaculture.

Coleman has been the health professions adviser at William and Mary for 16 years and has served as a freshman and sophomore adviser for 10 years. Currently he is directing the new Office of Freshman and Sophomore Advising, which was established this year with a two-year, $145,000 grant from the state Council of Higher Education for Virginia.

Coleman, who served last year as one of the members of an ad hoc committee formed to study all aspects of advising at William and Mary, says the grant will enable the College to develop an advising system that "will put us back in the forefront of educational advising."

After a year-long study, the committee found that the freshman and sophomore advising programs "desperately needed enhancing," said Coleman. The new office of freshman and sophomore advising serves as an administrative center for the grant and as a catalyst for broad improvements in the advising system.

The first change made was a move away from requiring department chairs and deans to provide a certain number of advisers. Instead, Coleman asked for volunteers from the Faculty of Arts and Sciences and the Schools of Education and Business Administration. The results were heartening: 122 faculty members signed on, he said.

Coleman then began matching freshmen with advisers by sending questionnaires to entering students to ask about their high school experiences, probable areas of interest and future plans. "The majority of students were undecided, but at least it got them to think about the future," he said. Based on the questionnaires, Coleman assigned advisers in the students' general area of interest, defined at William and Mary as the humanities, the social sciences or the physical sciences.

The next change was to increase the number of required meetings between students and advisers from one to three. "If you have only one required meeting between a student and adviser, the student is free to flounder in the system, never getting to touch base again," said Coleman.

Students also have an advising folder, which travels with them through the advising process. The folders contain information such as students' interest questionnaires and records of student/adviser meetings, which should be useful, says Coleman. "In case another adviser has to step in,

there will be a history to go on."

Another new component of freshman/sophomore advising will be an ongoing evaluation of the system by students, advisers and administrators, says Coleman. He has also run the first of a series of adviser workshops to be held throughout the academic year on topics of interest to all advisers.

Among Coleman's long-range goals is the implementation of a freshman preregistration system so that new students would have a minimum of three desired classes already on their schedules when they arrive. For anyone who has ever been through the hectic schedule of orientation week, the mad activity of registration and the confusion of the add/drop system, the plan seems like a dream come true.

College invited to submit application for Howard Hughes Institute grant

The College of William and Mary is one of 100 public and private research universities invited to submit proposals to strengthen their programs in biology and other science disciplines and to attract minority group members and women to the sciences.

The Howard Hughes Institute plans to award $60 million to improve undergraduate science education at research and doctorate-granting institutions. The awards, which will cover five years, will range from $500,000 to $2 million and will be announced early next year.

Last spring, with the possibility of support for undergraduate science, the College wrote a pre-proposal statement stressing the importance of undergraduate science, and particularly undergraduate research, at the College and the success that our students have had in graduate school and medical schools.

A letter of invitation to the president from the Institute prompted the formation of a mini-committee, composed of Lawrence Wiseman, biology; David Thompson, chemistry; and Dean David Lutzer, Faculty of Arts and Sciences, to work on the grant proposal. Deadline for submission is Jan. 5.

The list of institutions competing for these grants include the major state universities, Ivy League colleges and many of the Public Ivys.

The world's richest research organization, the Howard Hughes Medical Institute was founded in 1953 by Howard Hughes to support basic biomedical research. Today it operates 33 biomedical laboratories at university medical centers and hospitals across the country.

AIDS Awareness Week begins Sunday

Television newscaster Terry Zahn of WAVY-TV Channel 10 in Norfolk, will be moderator for a panel discussion on "AIDS: What Does Everybody Need to Know," at 7 p.m., Sunday, Oct. 9 in Millington auditorium.

The program is the first of a series of events sponsored by Student Health Services, the Facts and Referrals organization and the Student Association for AIDS Awareness Week, Oct. 9-14.

The panel for Sunday night's program will include Barbara Clextan, administrative assistant with the Peninsula AIDS Foundation; Dr. David W. Galetto, Hampton physician; Jack and Kay Mitchell of Chesapeake, parents of an AIDS patient; Cathy Tubbs, from the Regional STD (Sexually Transmitted Diseases) program of the Virginia State Health Department; and Pat Bonner of the Tidewater AIDS Crisis Task Force in Norfolk. The panel will also include an AIDS patient.

George Greenia, assistant professor of modern languages and faculty adviser for the campus group Alternatives, will give an overview of AIDS at a program scheduled for 9 p.m., Oct. 10 in the Catacombs at St. Bede's Catholic Church.

Ms. Llew Roberts, certified sex educator with Bonheur & Associates, health consultants of Portsmouth, Va., will talk about "Beyond AIDS 101: Developing Assertiveness and Communication Skills" at 8 p.m., Tuesday, Oct. 11 in Millington auditorium.

Issues surrounding AIDS in the workplace will be presented by Anita Tieman, a community educator for the Peninsula Hotline, "Contact Peninsula," at 10 a.m., Wednesday, Oct. 12 in the Botetourt Theatre of Swem Library.

Throughout the week a table with informational materials and a video will be shown in the lobby of the Campus Center.

Cynthia B. Burwell, health educator for Student Health Services, is coordinating the week-long program of events. Questions concerning any of the AIDS Awareness Week programs should be addressed to her at ext. 4386.

Phone changes for Newport News agencies affect local and SCATS numbers

State agencies in the Newport News area have recently undergone a Centrex changeover, which affects both their local and SCATS numbers.

Effective immediately, all agencies whose local numbers began with 591 or 599 and whose SCATS numbers began with 535 have been replaced by the three-digit prefix of 594 for both Centrex and SCATS.

Likewise, all agencies whose local numbers began with 247 or 928 and whose SCATS numbers began with 535, have been replaced by the three-digit prefix of 247.

Please make note of these changes when dialing other agencies in the Newport News area.

VIMS colloquium attracts international scholars

Of particular importance to the participants at this colloquium is the presentation of research data and interpretations relevant to pathobiology and the culture of plants and animals in the estuarine and marine environments.

Participants include specialists from a number of disciplines within the scientific community, including researchers from marine science and biomedical and veterinary science.

According to meeting co-chairman Dr. Frank Perkins of VIMS, "These meetings are held every two years, enabling the scientific community to look closely at the progress being made in unraveling the processes and effects of diseases and environmental stresses on marine organism in culture." He added, "Opportunities like this are important if we as scientists are to effectively advise the farmers of the sea and managers of the marine resources of this world."

CommonHealth schedules 'Food for Thought,' Acapulco giveaway

Fitness

CommonHealth offers a variety of fitness classes including aerobic conditioning, circuit training, water aerobics, stretch and tone and a walking club. Classes are offered at times to meet most busy schedules. Call Mary Louise Mageean for information and registration.

Acapulco giveaway, Oct. 14

Last fall, Gayle Pougher from the Office of Internal Audit was the lucky winner of Com-monHealth's first Acapulco giveaway. She won the trip simply by participating in the CommonHealth programs that interested her.

A second trip will be given away this year. The drawing will take place on Oct. 14 at Personnel Services' semi-annual Benefits Fair held in the Campus Center.

The drawing will be held between noon and 1 p.m. The trip includes four days and three nights of accommodations at the Acapulco Princess Resort, airfare and most meals. All current members are eligible for the trip drawing.

Notes

With skates or without, coaches needed

Men's lacrosse and ice hockey club teams are looking for coaches.

Interested individuals should contact Denny Byrne at the Recreational Sports office, Blow gym 113, ext. 4498.

Fall break shuttles

The Student Association shuttles for fall break leave PBK for Norfolk International airport at 12:30 and 3:30 p.m., Friday, Oct. 14.

Returning shuttles depart from Norfolk airport on Oct. 18 at 4:30, 7:30, 9:30 and 11:30 p.m.

Tickets are $7 for one-way, $12 for roundtrip and may be purchased in the SA office between 1 and 5 p.m., Monday-Friday.

Art gallery reception tomorrow at 4 p.m.

The department of fine arts has extended an invitation to the campus community to a reception for the Andrews Gallery exhibitions at 4 p.m., Thursday, Oct. 6.

All faculty, students and staff, as well as the general public, are invited to see the works of James Jones, Lee Newman and the students of the Boston University School for the Visual Arts.

The reception is being hosted by the Fine Arts Society and the exhibitions department of the fine arts department.

Career openings in gov't., non-profit assns.

The Office of Career Services will sponsor a Government and Not-for-Profit Career Day from 1 to 4 p.m., Thursday, Oct. 13 in Trinkle Hall.

Representatives from a wide variety of associations such as NASA Langley Research Center, the National Endowment for the Arts and the Peace Corps will be present to talk to students regarding career positions, summer employment and internships.

For a complete listing of associations attending and for more information, stop by the Career Services office, Morton 140, ext. 4604.

Notes from Ash Lawn-Highland

Two new exhibits — "Elizabeth Kortright Monroe" and "Quilting in Early America" — are open at Ash Lawn.

Ash Lawn-Highland had a successful summer festival. Opera audience attendance increased 16 percent from the 1987 season.

Douglas Hargrave's resignation as artistic director of the Summer Festival has been accepted with deep regret. The positions of artistic and music directors have been combined and the new position is being advertised.

The Ash Lawn-Highland Opera Company completed a three-performance tour to Boise, Idaho, this summer.

The Midsummer Eve program was very successful. Despite adding every chair and table available, many reservation requests could not be filled.

Chicago careers

Students interested in employment in the Chicago area are invited to participate with students from 12 other universities in The Chicago Career Exchange, Jan. 4 in Chicago.

Chicago-area employers will conduct individual interviews and answer questions students may have regarding a career. Many organizations have already committed to participate and others are expected to be added later.

Interested students should sign up with Barbara McGrann, receptionist for Career Services, Morton 140, by 5 p.m., Oct. 10. There will be a mandatory organizational meeting for participating students at 4 p.m., Oct. 12 in Morton 140.

Special Collections expands hours

This week, Special Collections at Swem Library, which includes university archives and manuscripts and the rare books department, will add over an hour each day to its schedule and will be open as follows:

Monday-Friday, 9 a.m.-5 p.m.

Saturday, 9 a.m.-1 p.m.

Special Collections will continue to be closed on Sunday

Puppet designer Dean lends special magic to 'Threepenny Opera'

By Melissa J. Lanning '89

William Kenneth Dean '87, free-lance artist, has returned to make some big waves in Williamsburg with some big puppets.

Dean is the puppet designer for the William and Mary Theatre production of "The Threepenny Opera" which opens Oct. 13.

"The Threepenny Opera" by Bertolt Brecht and Kurt Weill, will be performed Oct. 13-15 and 21-23 in Phi Beta Kappa Memorial Hall, nightly at 8:15 p.m. and Oct. 16 at 2 p.m.

Dean's puppets are key elements in relaying the play's contemporary political messages through contemporary devices.

William Kenneth Dean peers out of one of his whimsical creations.

Bruce McConachie, who will direct the play, has chosen to shift the setting from the 19th century to the present day. The actors play the roles of homeless Americans of the 1980s.

"We're trying to shake up complacent attitudes," says Dean, explaining the effect he and director McConachie hope "The Threepenny Opera" will have on its audiences.

They both feel that many Americans are unaware of the plight of the homeless and too eager to assume that if there are any problems the government will take care of them. By moving the setting of the play to a contemporary venue McConachie focuses squarely on the problem.

Dean admits that sharing McConachie's views makes his job easier, but both have worked together before as director and designer for "Hot House," which McConachie directed while Dean was an undergraduate.

Dean's constructions will range from hand puppets to a larger-than-life marionette. The largest construction is a 16-foot Uncle Sam.

Using a variety of materials, Dean says his work is "Found Art." The puppets will be made from discarded products that Dean finds around the area including a blender, a Volkswagen fender and a cow skull.

Dean is excited about having the chance to express himself politically through his work. "Art should be consciousness raising," he believes. Although he feels there is little desire here "to rock the boat," he wants to open people's eyes, hoping what they see on stage will spur them to action. "While we may not be offering a solution, the hope for the future is knowing there's a problem," he adds.

Since graduation, Dean, a theatre concentrator, has been a man of transient residence. His many talents have allowed him to wear many hats along the way.

He just completed his fourth season touring as an actor with the Virginia Shakespeare Festival. He's been honing his directing skills by participating in workshops in Norfolk near his home in Virginia Beach.

In March he was hired by Busch Gardens to be their properties scenery supervisor. He says being back at William and Mary is like being home again.

Sherry Adams takes 'Livin' de Life' to schools

Sherry Adams, a senior theatre major, is taking a show on the road this fall for her senior directoral project.

Sherry is directing "Livin' de Life," a play for children by Ed Grazzyk, based on the Joel Chandler Harris Brer Rabbit stories. Students have been rehearsing in the lab theatre in Phi Beta Kappa Hall for the tour, which opened today at Berkeley School in Williamsburg.

The show goes to Bruton Heights School tomorrow, Achilles Elementary in Gloucester on Oct. 14 and will be part of the Virginia Theatre Association meeting in Williamsburg, Oct. 29. There is also an Oct. 8 performance for a Girl Scout gathering.

Although Sherry will not be performing, she has had a great deal of experience as an actress, playwright and director with the William and Mary Theatre's main stage and Second Season productions. She received an Irene Ryan nomination for her portrayal of Babe in last year's main stage production of "Crimes of the Heart." Last spring Premiere Theatre presented her theatrical monologue, "The Break-Up Diet."

Sherry says she enjoys children's theatre. They are the best audience, she says, and one of the toughest.

For the past three years, Sherry has been a traveling puppeteer for the summer recreation program in Fairfax, Va. This includes writing the script and making the puppets as well as performing. During the 10-week summer season Sherry gives over 120 shows.

Sherry is planning a career in teaching with an emphasis on children's theatre.

The cast of "Livin' de Life" includes David Sturdevant, Tom Fiscella, Freddy Wood, Chan Casey, Janie Troy, Lori Maxwell, Lydia York and Kari Ardolino.

Pam Schwartz is director and understudy.
