A WEEKLY NEWSPAPER PUBLISHED FOR AND ABOUT THE FACULTY, STUDENTS AND STAFF OF THE COLLEGE OF WILLIAM AND MARY

Volume XVIII, Number 31 32

Wednesday, May 10, 1989

Timely Reminders

Memorial Day Closing

The College and Virginia Institute of Marine Science will be closed on Monday, May 29 to observe Memorial Day.

The administrative offices, plant department and campus mail room will be closed with the exception of essential employees who are required to work. The Campus Police Department will maintain its regular schedule.

The names of permanent classified employees who are required to work must be reported in writing to the Office of Personnel Services by June 2 in order that these employees may be credited with compensatory leave. Hourly employees who are required to work during the holiday will be paid their regular hourly rates.

With the approval of management, compensatory leave should be taken as soon as possible after the holiday on which it was earned. Compensatory time not taken within 12 months will be lost.

On behalf of the administration of the university, I wish each member of the College community a safe and enjoyable holiday.

Melvyn D. Schiavelli
Provost

Commencement time

This year, Commencement exercises are scheduled at 1 p.m. (instead of 2 p.m.). Tickets are required for admission.

Commencement speaker will be Glenn Close '74.

News schedule

The last regular issue of the William and Mary News for the spring semester will be next Wednesday, May 17. All materials must be received in the News office (James Blair 310A) by 5 p.m., Friday, May 12.

Summer editions will be published on the following Wednesdays, unless conditions warrant additional issues: June 7, June 28, July 19 and Aug. 9. Deadline for each issue is 5 p.m. the preceding Friday.

The weekly publication schedule will resume on Wednesday, Aug. 23. Deadline for that issue will be 5 p.m., Friday, Aug. 18.

Campaign for the Fourth Century launched

Goal is $150 million by 1993

On Friday, the Board of Visitors approved the largest fund-raising effort in the College's history. Called "The Campaign for the Fourth Century," the drive has a goal of $150 million to be reached by 1993, the College's 300th anniversary.

Rector Hays T. Watkins, who read the Board resolution approving the campaign, announced that the $150 million goal encompasses gifts and commitments from July 1, 1986, through June 30, 1993. He also announced that the campaign, which has been in its private phase for two years, has already raised a total of $60 million.

The Campaign for the Fourth Century is the largest undertaken thus far by any college or university in Virginia, said President Paul R. Verkuil. "William and Mary has remained true to its vision since its founding almost 300 years ago. In the university setting, vision means building an institution to serve the next generation now. It means creating a place of learning that is timeless, yet relevant, a place of learning that serves as a beacon as well as an anchor. Our goal is to ensure William and Mary's future as the best small public university in the nation."

Chairing the campaign is international entrepreneur, author and alumnus Mark M. McCormack, president of International Management Group. He said that he accepted the leadership position with enthusiasm because he was struck by the opportunity to leave an imprint on William and Mary that will last forever. "Ever since I completed my degree in 1951, I have known that my William and Mary experience had prepared me for whatever directions my life would take. The mark William and Mary left on me has endured. It is now our turn to leave a mark on William and Mary."

A. Marshall Acuff Jr. of New York, senior vice president of Smith, Barney, Harris, Upham & Co. and president of the Society of the Alumni, said the society will "endorse, advocate and support the Campaign for the Fourth Century and will seek to actively involve the College's 50,000 alumni in meeting its goals."

Watkins, who is chairman of CSX Corporation, has served as chairman of William and Mary's pre-campaign steering committee. He said that the campaign announcement is the culmination of several years of institutional planning, beginning with a decision in the early 1980s to examine the College's long-range goals and needs.

"Through that process we established a set of goals that will continue William and Mary's development as one of the nation's premier universities," Watkins said. "During the three years that I have participated in creating the Campaign for the Fourth Century, I have come to view it as the vehicle through which we will realize these goals and achieve a new level of prominence."

Of the $150 million goal, $100 million will be for the College's permanent endowment, which will be tripled during the seven-year accounting period of the campaign. "Our goal is to create an endowment on a per student basis that is the equal of any public university in America," said Verkuil.

The campaign will address areas of critical need throughout the university, said Verkuil. Monies raised will support: students, through scholarships and financial aid; faculty, through endowed professorships and fellowships, program enrichment for library and museum acquisitions, faculty research, curriculum development, lectures and scholarly publications; facilities and equipment; current operations; and unrestricted endowment.

Of the $100 million sought for endowment, $35 million will be used to foster diversity and distinction within the student body; $35 million will go to attract and retain prominent scholars committed to teaching; $25 million will enhance academic programs and resources; and $5 million will provide unrestricted support to meet the university's most pressing needs.

To complement state capital funding, an additional $25 million will provide for new construction and facilities renovation integral to William and Mary's campus master plan. These funds will underwrite growing needs for equipment, furnishings and instrumentation, expand museum and library collections and beautify the campus.

At the same time, $25 million in current operations funds will supplement other sources of revenue, ensuring that important annual and recurring needs can continue to be met.

Board of Visitors approves operating budgets

Although its most prominent action was approving The Campaign for the Fourth Century, the Board of Visitors took up a variety of matters during its meeting Friday, May 5. Board members approved 1989-90 operating budgets for Richard Bland College, the Virginia Institute of Marine Science, and for William and Mary's auxiliary enterprises and educational and general programs. Tuition and fees were set for the coming year (see story below), and a number of personnel appointments were made.

Upon the joint recommendations of the committees on university advancement and buildings and grounds, the Board passed a resolution naming the conference room in the School of Business Administration for W. Brooks George, class of '32, who has served as Rector of the Board of Visitors, president of the Society of the Alumni, and chairman of the Business Sponsors, Inc.

Also passed was a resolution naming the band/orchestra room in the newly renovated Ewell Hall in honor of 1938 alumnus William R. Van Buren Jr. and in memory of his wife, the late Anna Lee Hite Van Buren.

The new multi-purpose athletic field adjacent to William and Mary Hall was formally named the Anheuser-Busch Field to recognize a commitment of $600,000 toward the cost of construction by the Anheuser-Busch Foundation.

Five student residences were given names by the Board. Units B and F of Randolph Residences, which are currently under construction, were named Preston House and Nicholas House, for two Virginia governors. Also renamed were units 5, 6 and 9 of Botetourt Residences, which have been recently vacated by the German, French and Spanish houses. Units 5 and 6, which are one structure, have been designated Gooch House, and unit 9 is Dinwiddie House, both for prominent royal governors of the 18th century.

Appointments

The Board approved a number of faculty and administrative appointments. At Richard Bland College, Dr. James B. McNeer was named acting provost and dean of the faculty, effective June 1.

At William and Mary, faculty named included: Lawrence C. Becker, William R. Kenan Jr. Professor of Humanities; S. Daniel Breslauer, Sophia and Nathan S. Gumenick Professor of Judaic Studies; Monica Brzezinski, instructor of English; Kathy M. Evans, assistant professor of education; Jack Goodwin, associate professor of business administration; Anne Henderson, instructor of government; Mariann Jelinek, Richard C. Kraemer Professor of Business Administration; Lawrence E. Marceau, instructor of modern languages and literatures; Raymond Wayne McCoy, assistant professor of physical education; Barbara J. Levergood, assistant professor of English; Marc Sher, assistant professor of physics; Margaret J. Simpson, instructor of English; William H. Starnes Jr., Floyd Dewey Gottwald Sr. Professor of Chemistry; Anne Wallach, Ralph H. Wark Professor of Fine Arts; Thomas J. Ward, assistant professor of education; John Alden Williams, William R. Kenan Jr. Professor of Humanities; and Hugo Jan Woerdeman, instructor of mathematics.

Also named were Enrique Alonso-Garcia, visiting associate professor of law; David H. Feldman, visiting associate professor of economics; Eric T. Freyfogle, visiting professor of law; Warren Lee Kempf, professor of military science; John Lynch, James Pinckney Harrison Professor of History; Rodney D. Olsen, Commonwealth Center Fellow in Early American Studies and visiting associate professor of history; Katherine K. Preston, visiting assistant professor of music; Kimberly S. M. Reece, assistant professor of biology; Toni Robinson, visiting professor of law; William R. Stanton, Commonwealth Center Fellow for the Study of American Culture and visiting professor of history; Christopher Lawrence Tomlins, senior fellow, Commonwealth Center and Institute of Bill of Rights Law; Sheila S. Walker, visiting professor of anthropology; and Peter Winship, Mills E. Godwin Visiting Professor of Law.

Appointments to the professional faculty include: Patrick C. Buchanan Jr., reference librarian, Marshall-Wythe School of Law; Mary Grace Hune, reference librarian, Marshall-Wythe; Philip Frank Janaro, assistant football coach; and Byrd G. Latham, director of financial aid and support services, School of Education.

Also appointed are: Mahamed Abdel-Kariem, associate research scientist, School of Marine Science; Loy C. Collingwood, director, Technological Entrepreneurship Center; Saul Cornell, assistant professor of history and fellow in the Institute of Early American History and Culture;

Edgar Wall Harlan, Dreyfus Teaching and Research Fellow.

Faculty promotions

The board also approved the following faculty promotions. Associate professor to professor: Samuel Baker, economics; Gary DeFotis, chemistry; Norman Fashing, biology; John W. Lee, law; William F. Losito, education; Carlisle Moody, economics; Ronald Rapoport, government. Assistant professor to associate professor: Rita Wright, anthropology. Designated professorships: Joanne M. Braxton, Frances L. and Edwin L. Cummings Professor of American Studies; Herrington J. Bryce, Life of Virginia Professor of Business Administration; and Franklin E. Robeson, Hays T. Watkins Professor of Business Administration.

Fees and tuition for 1988-89

The total cost of attending the College of William and Mary next year will rise 5.8 percent for in-state students and 6.7 percent for out-of-state students, according to figures released by the College's Board of Visitors.

The total cost, which includes tuition, fees, room and board, will increase from $6,370 to $6,740 for in-state students, and from $11,216 to $11,966 for out-of-state students.

Tuition and fees will increase $200 to a total of $3,166 for Virginia students, and $580 for a total of $8,392 for out-of-state students. Within this amount, general fees for the 1989-90 academic year will increase $78 to a total of $1,514 for in-state students and $92 to a total of $1,784 for out-of-state students.

The rise in tuition is driven by increases in state funding, especially items such as faculty salaries. "William and Mary continues to receive the highest percentage increase in faculty salaries (9.3 percent) based on the state's peer group review," said

W&M Provost Melvyn D. Schiavelli.

Consistent with state policies, William and Mary receives 60 percent of its educational budget from the state, with students paying the remaining 40 percent through tuition.

For law students, tuition will be $454 higher than the figures listed for undergraduate students. For undergraduate and graduate business students, tuition is $296 above the figures listed for undergraduates.

Tuition for part-time Virginia undergraduates and graduate students (non-law and non-business) will increase 5.3 percent, from $95 to $100 per semester hour; and 5.5 percent, from $254 to $268 per semester hour for out-of-state students. Part-time Virginia law students' tuition will rise from $111 to $116 per semester hour, while out-of-state tuition will increase from $270 to $284. Part-time business students' tuition will increase from $110 to $115 per semester hour for Virginians, and from $269 to $283 for non-Virginians.

Loy Collingwood named director of TEC in NN

Loy C. Collingwood of Williamsburg, a business development consultant and former vice president of Newport News Industrial Corp., has been named director of the College's new Technological Entrepreneurship Center (TEC) in Newport News.

The center, which has been funded with a $94,000 grant from the Center for Innovative Technology (CIT), is designed to help people with high technology ideas take them from the laboratory to the marketplace. TEC's offices are located in Oyster Point Industrial Park, and the official opening of the facility is planned for early June.

A native of Pittsburgh, Collingwood has worked since 1983 as a business development consultant with corporate clients such as Handy & Harman, Reed Tool, Exotech, Dominion Chemical, Gulf Oil, Al Kawther (Saudi Arabia) and EDGO Development Corp. (London). His work has encompassed a variety of areas including the marketing, sales, management, financial and international arenas. He has been responsible for a number of business startups and has arranged joint ventures and secured venture capital commitments and long-term financing through private and public offerings.

From 1980 to 1983, Collingwood was vice president for Newport News Industrial, and from 1977 to 1980 was group vice president for marketing with International Systems & Controls Corp. of Houston. He has also served as president of Hydra Tool Equipment Corp. of Richmond, 1972-77; vice president and general manager of the Tobacco Machinery Division of AMF, Inc., of Richmond, 1970-72; and president of Sangamo Company, Ltd., of Toronto, Ontario, Canada, 1967-70.

Collingwood received a B.S. degree in engineering from the University of Pittsburgh and an M.B.A. degree, with emphasis in marketing and finance, from the University of Richmond.

William and Mary's TEC is one of seven entrepreneurial centers in the state funded by CIT and the first one to be devoted exclusively to high technology businesses.

Commitment of $140,000 made by Chesapeake Corp.

The College has received a commitment of $140,000 from the Chesapeake Corporation.

Of the commitment, $35,000 is an unrestricted endowment to support the most pressing needs of the Virginia Institute of Marine Science. Another $32,500 will provide faculty endowment in the School of Business Administration. The remainder of the funds will support current operations at William and Mary and its schools of marine science and business.

Chesapeake Corporation is a Virginia corporation organized in 1918. The company, which today has operations in 11 states, is a major manufacturer of craft paperboard, paper, corrugated containers, bleached hardwood pulp, commercial and industrial tissue products, and treated wood products. Its Virginia plants are located in West Point, Keysville, Fredericksburg, Milford, Richmond and Roanoke.

Room named for Mrs. Van Buren

Ewell Hall dedication

With the symbolic passing of a key, the newly refurbished Ewell Hall and the Van Buren Band/Orchestra Room were dedicated on Thursday, May 4.

On hand for the occasion was William R. Van Buren Jr. '38 of Hampton, former co-owner and current vice chairman of the Daily Press.

Van Buren recently made a $150,000 commitment to the College, $100,000 of which will be used to establish a permanent endowment to provide for the most pressing needs of the music department. In recognition of this commitment, the band/orchestra room has been named in memory of the late Anna Lee Hite Van Buren. The remaining $50,000 will be used to establish an unrestricted endowment of the Institute of Bill of Rights Law at the Marshall-Wythe School of Law.

Mrs. Van Buren attended the Shenandoah Music Conservatory and directed the instrumental music program in the Hampton Public Schools from 1944 to 1952. She was active with the Peninsula Symphony and the Virginia Symphony throughout her lifetime.

Mr. Van Buren, who was accompanied by his son Bill and daughter Katie, said the dedication of the new facilities was evidence of the growth and vitality of fine arts in the area.

David L. King of Odell Associates, Inc., presented the key to the building to Rector of the College Hays T. Watkins, who turned it over to Provost Melvyn D. Schiavelli as chief academic officer of the College.

Dale Cockrell, chairman of the music department, expressed appreciation on behalf of the department for the new facilities and invited the audience to tour the building; student guides were provided. The William and Mary Brass Trio entertained at the outset of the program playing "Fanfare for Brass Trio" by V. Nelhybel and three works by Josquin des Pres, "Fortuna d'un gran tempo," "Cela sans plus" and "Canzone 'La Bernardino.'"

To conclude the festivities the Trio played "Chanson" by A. de Fevin, "Adagio" by Mozart and "Rondeau" by F. Poulenc.

Music at William and Mary dates back to the early years of the institution. Documentation on music is first present from 18th-century sources through the pages of that era's Virginia Gazette.

The College students were serious enough in their study of music that they sought out qualified teachers. Thomas Jefferson, in general the exception that proves the rule, studied violin, cello, flute and perhaps keyboard during his student days, and might have practiced as much as three hours per day.

Brooks George honored for service to the College

President Verkuil shows display of citations at a dinner in Richmond honoring Mr. and Mrs. Brooks George.

At a dinner at Richmond's Commonwealth Club Monday, May 1, friends and family gathered to honor W. Brooks George for his many years of service and dedication to the College.

With Mrs. Gerald L. Baliles in attendance, President Paul Verkuil announced that there were several surprises in store for George.

"Brooks is aware that Signet Bank has made a commitment of $200,000 establishing the W. Brooks George Professorship in Business Administration at the College," said Verkuil. "But he does not know that alumni of the College and his friends and family have gathered together and contributed an additional amount of over $445,000 in gifts, commitments and testamentary provisions in his honor, raising the total endowment to over $645,000."

In addition, Verkuil announced that a portion of this total will establish the W. Brooks and Elizabeth S. George Athletic Scholarship Endowment. This scholarship will be awarded to a student athlete, preferably a basketball or football player, whose field of concentration is business administration.

A third surprise for George was Verkuil's announcement that he would recommend to the Board of Visitors that the main conference room in the School of Business Administration be named the W. Brooks George Room in his honor.

"Brooks' support and service, in addition to all his other activities on behalf of William and Mary, has been outstanding," said Verkuil. "His leadership as Rector of the College, president of the Society of the Alumni and chairman and founder of the Business Sponsors will leave a lasting impression on William and Mary."

Freshman wins essay prize

Rachel Schucker, a freshman from McLean, Va., has been awarded first prize in the first-year college division of the Russian essay contest held by the Virginia chapter of the American Association of Teachers of Slavic and Eastern European Languages.

Rachel won her award for an essay titled "Molodiye Lyudi" (Young People).

In her essay, she points up a very real problem

she sees in her own generation: a lack of knowledge about other peoples and countries as well as a general ignorance of the operations and interests of their own government.

She calls on young people to study the geography and culture of other nations so that worldwide understanding may become a reality, when the world may indeed be peaceful. In the conclusion of her essay Schucker uses a play on the Russian word mir which means both peace and world, to get her point across.

For others interested in learning more about everyday life in the Soviet Union she recommends Hedrick Smith's book, The Russians.

Rachel has long had an interest in foreign lands. At Langley High School she studied French. As a high school freshman she was an exchange student in Tel Aviv where she had to learn Hebrew quickly in order to keep up with the lively social and academic pace of her Israeli classmates.

Her continuing interest in foreign languages, she says, has been encouraged by both her parents and an older sister who travel extensively. When she came to William and Mary she decided she would tackle another language and welcomed the challenge of a language that required learning an entirely new alphabet.

Rachel is considering a major in Russian studies but is continuing to keep her options open.

Her prize will include books from the Soviet Union. In addition, her essay will be published in Dlya Vas an annual publication of the AATSEEL of Virginia.

Rachel Schucker

Karen Burrell wins Fulbright

Karen Burrell, a senior from Hampton, Va., has been awarded a Fulbright grant to Germany.

A German major with a minor in government, Karen is interested in politics and political analysis and environmental problems. She hopes to spend next year in one of the industrial areas of Germany to study how the problems of industrial pollution are handled there.

Karen is a Martin Luther King Jr. Scholar, a member of the Black Student Organization, Alpha Kappa Alpha Sorority, Inc., Delta Phi Alpha German honorary and the government honorary, Pi Sigma Alpha.

She has been listed both as an Academic All American and in Who's Who Among American College Students.

She plans to attend law school and study environmental law with the goal of working for the Environmental Protection Agency.

VIMS scientists track turtle; candy funds aid research

A College marine scientist and a graduate student attached a satellite transmitter tag to a leatherback sea turtle on May 3 in the first effort of its kind with this endangered species.

School of Marine Science Professor John A. Musick, graduate student John Keinath, and private foundation president Chris Lughinbul were able to satellite tag the nesting sea turtle at 2:30 a.m. on St. Croix in the U.S. Virgin Islands.

By early afternoon on May 3, the first position response from the satellite used to track the leatherback had been recorded. The turtle was estimated to be 12 miles offshore of St. Croix.

This represents the first effort to tag and satellite track a leatherback, the only warm-blooded sea turtle. Members of the research team are looking forward to tracking the migratory patterns of the female turtle, estimated to weigh 750 pounds, for up to nine months, the time the transmitter's battery is likely to last. Leatherbacks are occasional summer visitors to the Chesapeake Bay.

Transmitter tags like the one used on the leatherback have been successfully used on loggerhead sea turtles. Musick and Keinath have tagged and tracked several loggerheads over the past three years, gaining valuable insights into the migratory patterns of this federally protected species. Lughinbul is head of the David E. Lughinbul Foundation for Endangered Species in Ellington, Conn. His foundation is sponsoring the work of Musick and Keinath on St. Croix.

Funding for the satellite transmitter tag was provided by Newport News Shipbuilding and Dry Dock Company of Newport News, and Save the Turtles Fund/Rowntree DeMet's, Inc., of Chicago.

Peat Marwick establishes professorship

Accountants donate $250,000

At a dinner Wednesday, May 3, the accounting firm of KMPG Peat Marwick announced a commitment of $250,000 to establish a professorship in accounting at the School of Business Administration.

According to President Paul Verkuil, "the commitment from Peat Marwick is especially significant because it is the first endowed professorship at William and Mary to bear the name of a Big Eight accounting firm. We are very grateful for their support of our accounting program."

In 1986 and 1987, Peat Marwick employed twice as many of the College's accounting graduates as any other Big Eight firm. Approximately 80 William and Mary alumni are currently employed by the company, which is the largest accounting firm in the world.

William and Mary's accounting program is consistently rated by the Public Accounting Report in the top 20 undergraduate programs in the nation. In 1988 it was ranked 12th by managing partners of the top nine national accounting firms.

"We are pleased to have an opportunity to recognize William and Mary's outstanding achievement in accounting education," said F. David Fowler, chairman of the Peat Marwick Foundation. "It is a particular pleasure to create this professorship as part of the College's impending campaign."

The establishment of this endowed professorship will assist William and Mary in attracting and retaining a scholar-teacher of the highest caliber in a highly competitive field. Income generated from the endowed professorship will qualify for matching funds through the Commonwealth of Virginia Eminent Scholars Program.

Leonard Graves Jr. dies at 42

Leonard L. Graves Jr., who received baccalaureate and law degrees from the College, 1968, 1971, died Friday, May 5 in Riverside Regional Medical Center in Newport News. He was 42.

Graves taught accounting at the College and then joined the accounting firm of Arthur Andersen in Washington, D.C., 1971-72. He served as city manager in Botswana, South Africa, while he was in the Peace Corps from 1972 to 1975.

He then became the assistant commonwealth attorney in Hampton until he resigned in 1982 to become a partner in the law firm of Glascock, Martin and Graves. In recent years he had his own law practice in Hampton.

He was a member of the Hampton Rotary Club, the Virginia Bar Association, the William and Mary Athletic Educational Foundation and the Hampton Country Club.

Survivors include his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Leonard L. Graves Sr. of Williamsburg and six sisters.

A graveside service was held Tuesday at Cedar Grove Cemetery. The Rev. Howard W. Saunders III and the Rev. Cotesworth P. Lewis officiated.

The family has requested that expressions of sympathy take the form of contributions to the William and Mary Athletic Educational Foundation.

College undertakes largest campaign yet by any public or private Virginia school

Gala celebration marks beginning of Campaign

The Campaign for the Fourth Century got underway in fine style Friday evening at a black-tie dinner and dance, which premiered the Campaign video introduced by Oscar nominee Glenn Close '74.

William and Mary Hall was transformed into a gala setting with hundreds of white balloons and silver streamers. White tables and chairs sat around a dance floor arched with balloons. First copies of the Case Statement for the Campaign were presented to celebrants.

"We're here to celebrate," said Hays T. Watkins, Rector of the College, in his introductory remarks. The Rector introduced members of the pre-Campaign steering committee: Vice Chairmen Lewis Glucksman, Herbert Kelly, Jim McGlothlin, Chip Mason and Walter Zable. At-large members include David Bottoms, Jim Brinkley, Harvey Chappell, T. C. Clarke, Clyde Culp, Scotty Cunningham, Loretta Glucksman, Jeanne Kinnamon, Joe Koons, Alan Miller, Anne Dobie Peebles, Joan Showalter, Layton Smith, Henry Tucker, Jim Ukrop and William Van Buren.

Ex officio members include Bob Boyd, Jim Callahan, Edward Campbell, Edward Grimsley, Ann and Bill Harrison, Ardon and Rue Judd, Andy Lark, George Roper and David and Lee Wakefield.

These people are the very heart of William and Mary; because when we approached them over two years ago we did a very brazen thing," said Watkins. "We asked them to serve as volunteers on a steering committee for planning the biggest single advancement project we had ever undertaken—a major campaign that would involve the entire William and Mary family of alumni and friends, that would touch every aspect of this great College, and that would prepare William and Mary to enter its fourth century.... They were bold enough, resourceful enough, even crazy enough to say 'YES!'

"We owe this celebration to strong leaders."

—Hays Watkins

"We owe this celebration to strong leaders," said Watkins in his introduction of Mark McCormack '51 chairman of the Campaign for the Fourth Century. "He never lets his appreciation for the past interfere with his dreams for the future. As president and chief executive officer of International Management Group, Mark has carved out an entirely new field, merging international business and professional athletics.

"With his authorship of the best sellers, What They Don't Teach You at Harvard Business School and The Terrible Truth About Lawyers, he has revealed the savvy of his liberally educated mind, and in his continuing support of the College, he has demonstrated that gift of leadership in every aspect of his life.

"With Mark's expert guidance, we were able to take our students, faculty and alumni halfway around the world for the first-ever football game between the all-stars from Japan and our own American college team. And with his leadership and support, we will become players in the international arena."

The Rector also recognized the two honorary co-chairmen of the campaign. Roy Charles '32 was not able to be at the dinner as he was home recovering from a short hospital stay. "Roy has been such an important part of William and Mary over the years through his service on the Board of Visitors and the Endowment Association, and by succeeding Ed Zollinger in chairing the only other campaign in William and Mary's history and through his magnificent leadership and financial commitment to this effort.

"We are delighted to have with us this evening our other honorary co-chairman of the campaign, a man whose devotion to William and Mary truly knows no bounds. If I were to enumerate all his contributions we would be here all night, so I'll just introduce him as 'Mr. William and Mary,' Brooks George, class of 1932.

President Paul Verkuil took the platform to talk about plans for the future of the College.

"This campaign started as part of a long-range plan, which began before I arrived in 1985 and was completed in 1986. That plan reaffirmed our mission, outlined our priorities for the future, and revealed a critical need for the financial resources to make our dreams a reality.

"And so we began planning the Campaign for the Fourth Century. This campaign is a comprehensive effort that will triple our endowment and touch virtually every aspect of the university: students, faculty, programs, facilities and equipment. It will involve every constituency and every discipline: our undergraduate and graduate programs in the arts and sciences; our schools of business, education, law and marine science; our athletic program; our library; our museum — all parts of a unified university, moving forward together.

"Tonight is the beginning of a new age."

—Paul Verkuil

"Tonight is the beginning of a new age, a new chapter in the history of this remarkable College. And we are here to share and to shape this historic time. As Hays has said, there is something compelling about the calendar. When we began planning for this campaign, it became clear early on that what William and Mary should do, what William and Mary has always done, is to reach out into the future, to go beyond the exigencies of today and greet the opportunities of tomorrow. So we began to envision what the William and Mary of tomorrow should be.

WILLIAM & MARY

The Campaign For The Fourth Century

"The William and Mary of tomorrow will be a place where talented students from every walk of life, from every race and background, will have an equal opportunity to pursue educational excellence regardless of financial standing.

"The William and Mary of tomorrow will be a gathering place for the finest scholar-teachers in the country, whose dedication to the classroom is matched only by their vigorous pursuit of research that is on the cutting edge of higher education, pushing back the frontiers of new knowledge.

"The William and Mary of tomorrow will be a community offering the very finest educational programs, in physical surroundings that inspire the best minds to achieve goals they never dreamed possible.

"And the William and Mary of tomorrow will be a secure place, endowed with the tools to create imaginative programs to address the challenges of the 21st century — a place of only the most ambitious plans and aspirations.

"It is tempting to say we are here to celebrate the beginning of the greatest chapter in William and Mary's history. But we all recognize that our dreams for the future would be totally unattainable without the foundation, the hard work, the thoughtful and dedicated leadership of the past. William and Mary without a historical perspective is not William and Mary."

President Verkuil paid tribute to the contributions of two past presidents, Davis Y. Paschall '31, "who ushered in a new age with the building of the new campus for a new university," and Thomas A. Graves, "who led the first endowment campaign for the College and placed William and Mary in the company of distinguished American universities. These two William and Mary leaders forged the public-private partnership that is in large measure responsible for our status today."

Verkuil continued: "When we speak of the public-private partnership at William and Mary, we acknowledge the very life-blood of this College. For without public support from the Commonwealth of Virginia, William and Mary might be only a chapter in a history book. Who can forget what Benjamin Ewell did to keep hope alive, and what Lyon Tyler did to convince the state to adopt us?"

"Today, we are still blessed with enlightened leadership from the Commonwealth of Virginia. Through the efforts of governors such as Gerald Baliles and other dedicated public servants, such as alumnus and Senate Majority Leader Hunter Andrews, the public aspect of our public-private partnership has helped forge a William and Mary that represents an ambitious new model in higher education.

"I've got to say that this is the high point of all

Twelve-member faculty panel meets to consider role, mission of College

By Melissa D. Gill
Advancement Writer

On Friday afternoon, 12 faculty members gathered in the new Ewell Hall auditorium to discuss their views of William and Mary. Provost Melvyn Schiavelli, who served as moderator of the symposium, commented that "defining the character of William and Mary is an appropriate activity for the kick-off of the Campaign for the Fourth Century. To do this, we're going to eavesdrop on the conversation of academic colleagues."

Faculty members participating in the symposium were Roger G. Baldwin, assistant professor of education; James A. Bill, Class of 1935 Professor of Government and director of the Wendy and Emery Reves Center for International Studies; Bartram S. Brown, assistant professor of government; Elsa S. Diduk, professor of modern languages and literatures; Judith Ewell, Newton Professor of History; Tomoko Hamada, assistant professor of anthropology; Robert J. Huggett, professor of marine science and assistant director of VIMS; Lawrence B. Pulley, associate professor of business administration; Joel D. Schwartz, associate professor of government; Rodney A. Smolla, Cutler Professor of Constitutional Law and director of the Institute of Bill of Rights Law; Robert E. Welsh, professor of physics; and Lawrence L. Wiseman, professor and chair of biology.

Schiavelli initiated the discussion by asking the participants why they came to William and Mary and why they remained here. Bill led the response by saying that he had been attracted by the intangibles of the College: "Coming from Texas, I knew about the tangibles — the location, the facilities, the tradition — all of which were very impressive. But I came because of the intangibles. There was a sense of excitement, of dynamism; something was going on. The place seemed on the verge of taking off. The faculty was solid, the students were solid, the administration had vision. I felt that the airplane was taking off and I had a chance to be, if not in the cockpit, at least in the first few rows."

Hamada added that she felt a sense of mission: "At William and Mary, I could start something new. There was a group of people here who welcomed initiative." Ewell added that while she too felt a sense of mission, she was also attracted by the opportunity to teach students who challenge their professors and keep them fresh.

Another strength of the College is its combination of teaching and research. While this demands a lot of the faculty, it is also a very attractive combination. Research and teaching are seen as complementary functions: someone who is a good researcher and on top of his or her field is also good in the classroom. "The students challenge you all the way in the classroom, and you take that challenge back to the laboratory where it improves your research," said Diduk.

When Schiavelli asked what the faculty would change about William and Mary, the participants agreed that one thing they needed was another symposium — they would like more opportunities to meet and discuss issues with colleagues from other departments. Another perceived a need of the College was more publicity: "We're a good school and doing a lot of things right, but not enough people know about us. We need to be more vocal about blowing our own horn," said Bill.

President and Mrs. Verkuil greet guests at the campaign gala Friday evening in William and Mary Hall.

my years in higher education. As an undergraduate in 1961, I never could have imagined that someday I'd have the privilege to return to William and Mary as president. But to be here at this time, to share this moment, makes it even more significant. When the Board, through Rector Anne Dobie Peebles, asked me to serve in this office, I was given the specific assignment of preparing a campaign and celebration for our 300th anniversary.

"I have watched The Campaign for the Fourth Century unfold in a rewarding way. The outpouring of generosity from those concerned and caring people who share our vision has been astounding.

"Because of our already remarkable achievements we are able to announce tonight a goal that exceeds the expectations we had in the beginning. It has been four years in the planning, but this moment was worth waiting for. I am pleased to announce to you that we are about to launch not only the most ambitious fund-raising effort in William and Mary's history, but also the largest campaign ever undertaken by a public or private college or a university in Virginia."

"The Campaign for the Fourth Century has already achieved a stunning victory."

—Mark McCormack

Mark McCormack began his remarks by introducing benefactors who have made pace-setting financial commitments to the campaign. These include CSX Corporation, represented by Hays Watkins and also Hays and Betty Watkins personally; Patrick Hays of St. Augustine, Fla.; Jim and Bobbie Ukrop of Richmond; Frank and Jaroslava Shatz of Williamsburg; the United Company and Jim and Diane McGlothlin of Bristol, Va.; The Cummings Memorial Fund of New York, represented by Andy Lark; Newport News Shipbuilding, represented by Ed Campbell; Doug and Marilyn Morton of Denver, Colo.; the Peat Marwick Foundation, represented by Candy Duncan; Marshall Acuff of New York; David Bottoms of

New York; Rich and Carol Kraemer of Tempe, Ariz.; Elliot and Helen Cohen of New York; Jeanne Kinnamon of Williamsburg; T. C. and Elizabeth Clarke of Norfolk; Hilly and Stu Wilson of Timonium, Md.; Elliott and Carolyn Schaubach of Norfolk; Bob and Audrey Harris of Richmond; and Roger Woolley of Rancho Santa Fe, Calif.

"Sharing chairmanship of the Pre-Campaign Steering Committee with Hays, I know I speak for many people when I say that we've had an exciting and astonishing pre-campaign phase," said McCormack.

"And we've seen results. Through the efforts of our alumni and friends, The Campaign for the Fourth Century has already achieved a stunning victory. As of today, the Campaign has raised more than $60 million dollars!"

Alumni staff is reorganized, new assistant directors named

As the result of recent vacancies on the staff of the Society of the Alumni, W. Barry Adams, executive vice president, has announced a restructuring of the Society's management staff and the appointment of three new assistant directors.

Reporting to Adams are three senior managers: Lee Johnston Foster, director of alumni affairs, formerly director of reunions and campus activities; Ben F. Kellam III '78, director of administration and records, formerly director of alumni records and research; and Virginia Carter Collins '77, director of alumni communications, formerly news and publications writer.

Reporting to Ms. Foster as newly named assistant directors of alumni affairs are Richard D. T. Overy '88 and Elizabeth S. Littlefield '86. Overy has assumed responsibility for the management and development of programs for the Society's more than 40 chapters located in the United States and United Kingdom. He holds a B.B.A. in management and finance from William and Mary and most recently worked at the White House as a confidential assistant in the Office of Public Liaison. While a student he served as chairman of the nationally honored William and Mary Republicans and as chairman of the Student Association Council.

Ms. Littlefield's position entails the management and coordination of Society programs for reunions, campus activities and continuing education, including Homecoming, Olde Guard Day and Alumni College. Her responsibilities also encompass various student programs, such as the Student Alumni Liaison Council, Life After DOG Street program and Career Exploration Day.

In addition to holding a B.A. in government from William and Mary, she will receive her master's in counselor education from the University of Virginia this month. Since Jan. 1988 she has served as a graduate assistant in the department of human services at UVA and has held internships in the office of the dean of students at both UVA and Washington and Lee University in Lexington, Ms. Littlefield will officially begin her duties June 7.

In the office of administration and records, Beth C. Mills '82, formerly office services administrator, has been promoted to assistant director of administration and Society services. She will manage the Society's merchandise program, rental of the Alumni House facilities and oversee a variety of administrative functions, including personnel and benefits, purchasing and fiscal records. Ms. Mills holds a B.A. in psychology from William and Mary and has been employed by the Society since 1985. She also worked briefly for the office in 1982-83 before relocating to New Orleans, where she was an administrative assistant at Tulane University School of Medicine.

"The Society's new structure more closely resembles an alumni association preparing to meet the challenges of the next century," said Adams. "It affords us an organizational framework to utilize staff and resources more wisely and effectively. It should have a major impact on our programming area, placing a greater emphasis on what is essentially the College's primary outreach efforts to our graduates."

Notes from Richard Bland College

Congressman Norman Sisisky to give commencement address

U.S. Congressman Norman Sisisky, who is currently serving his fourth term as a representative from Virginia's fourth district, will give the commencement address at Richard Bland College, Friday, May 12.

The program will begin at 6 p.m. in the school gymnasium.

A graduate of John Marshal High School in Richmond, Sisisky earned his B.A. in business administration from Virginia Commonwealth University. He also holds an honorary Doctor of Laws degree from Virginia State University.

Before the formal ceremonies, graduates, their families and friends will gather at 4:30 p.m. on the lawn outside the library for a reception. The class photo will be taken on the steps of the library at 5 p.m. and the procession of graduates will begin at 6 p.m.

Faculty marshals leading the procession will be

Dr. Martha Day of the English department and Professor William Henderson of the history department.

Class President Catherine Scarbrough will present the class gift to the college during the ceremony.

President Clarence Maze Jr. will confer degrees on 112 graduates. Hays T. Watkins, Rector of the College, will bring greetings and congratulations on behalf of the Board of Visitors of the College of William and Mary.

President's Scholars

President Clarence Maze Jr. announced his personal involvement in the new "President's Scholars" program at a luncheon held to honor current scholars.

Maze explained that 10 outstanding incoming freshmen would merit a $1,000 scholarship each as well as entrance into the special program.

As President's Scholars, each of the 10 will rely on Maze as academic adviser and mentor during their stay at the college. Maze will assist each scholar in planning his academic program and preparing for transfer to a four-year institution.

Applications are now being accepted from students with at least a 3.25 grade point average.

President's Scholars who maintain at least a 3.25 g.p.a. during both semesters of their freshman year at RBC will earn another $1,000 for their sophomore year.

"I'm looking forward to working closely with these outstanding students," Maze told the principals and counselors in the audience. "Please encourage your best to apply to RBC. We'll welcome them with special attention."

Science fair planned

Richard Bland College will host an area science fair in which projects by over 200 area students will compete for awards. This is the 12th annual science fair, open to junior and senior high school students from central Virginia.

Colonial Heights, Lloyd C. Bird, Dinwiddie, Prince George and Meadowbrook are among the senior high schools who will send representatives.

Projects entered in the junior division of the fair will come from N. B. Clements, J.E.J. Moore, Southampton Academy, Tidewater Academy, Evangel Christian School, Colonial Heights Junior High and James E. Mallonee Middle School.

This year the fair will award a $1,000 scholarship to the senior high school that accumulates the highest average number of points.

Entries at the fair will be judged by a panel of RBC professors and four guests including Professors Jeremy Jordan, Tom Milton, Robert Antrim, Steve Martin and Elizabeth Weiland. Guest judges will include Ben Burrell, Randolph Macon College; Rex McBarnes, Prince George County School system; and Dillip Sen and Chris Egan, both from Virginia State University.

Classified Advertisements

Classified ads are included as a service to members of the College community and will be accepted from faculty, staff, students and alumni only. The fee for ads is $3 for three consecutive issues. Ads should be no longer than 40 words and must be submitted, in writing and with payment, to the William and Mary News office no later than 5 p.m. on the Friday preceding the first insertion. Corrections must be made before the second insertion. Any change is considered a new ad.

Profs recall Glenn Close

By Colin Donald

Graduate student, department of government

Three drama professors will be specially happy to see Glenn Close as this year's commencement speaker. One is Howard Scammon, whom she acknowledges as her mentor. Along with Lou Catron and Jerry Bledsoe, he recollected the college career of the student actress whom everyone called "Glennie."

Glenn Close

Scammon was struck by her potential from the first. "I was having auditions for 'Twelfth Night.' She walked in and that was it. She was Olivia." Scammon ensured she was cast by personally inviting her to the call-back. His instinct for picking a winner was confirmed as Close went from strength to strength, thanks to wholehearted dedication and the theater department's support.

She appeared in 12 productions, taking lead roles in "The Trojan Women" and "Antony and Cleopatra" and working backstage in costuming.

Catron was impressed by Close's ability to juggle several projects without lowering her high standards. "Whatever she was doing, she did that with 100 percent concentration. She would be doing a main stage show, when that was over she would come to the lab theater and act in a director's workshop show and when that was over, go to another rehearsal." The self-discipline was not confined to the stage. "She had very beautiful handwriting. You would think that frenzy of activity would be reflected in a scrawl. The lady's personal attitude was that 'everything I do with my life, I'm going to do right.'"

The high standards and self-discipline enabled Close to prepare thoroughly for every role. Said Scammon, "She wants to know everything. My feeling is that she's got it all worked out and left the emotion out of the thing. The next step was to ask herself, 'Emotionally what is this character?'" Her preparation is still as meticulous. She consulted three psychiatrists to understand the borderline personality disorder she recreated in "Fatal Attraction."

The preparation paid handsome dividends in "The House of Bernarda Alba," directed by Catron. Set in 1930s Spain, the play centers on the failure of Close's character, Bernarda Alba, to confine her daughters within the era's strict morality. One daughter finally hangs herself after losing her virginity.

"At the end, Bernarda had this wail of anguish, 'My daughter died a virgin.' Every night, when she hit that, you could hear the audience go 'Ah!' Two years after that, I happened to be talking to some theater directors about 'Bernarda Alba.' Everyone said their production was a disaster, the audience roared with laughter. The difficulty is getting contemporary Americans to accept 1930 Catholic Spain's restrictions. What she did as Bernarda — and this is why the audience didn't find our production funny — was [not show] a moment of self-doubt."

Bledsoe found Close held high expectations of others as well as of herself. "She wanted more, more, more from us. We always want to give more, but the logistics of our lives means there's only so much. The more she got, the more frustrated she became. I think she was driven by the frustration to find new ways to do things, the right way to do things." This was evident when Close played Madame Trepleva in Chekhov's "The Seagull." "I met her after the opening night and told her I'd enjoyed it [her performance] very much, and she burst into tears. She was so frustrated because it wasn't as good as she wanted it to be."

Out of that frustration emerged a better performance. A decade later, "Fatal Attraction" director Adrian Lyne witnessed the same thing. "She would cry and she would scream at me. The rage would turn into tears, and then she would be extraordinary."

Catron saw Close balance the frustration by keeping a perspective on acting. "She was critical of her work and often dissatisfied, not in a way that inhibited her, but that made her get better. That's unusual." The perspective also helped her avoid becoming a prima donna. As Scammon remembers, "She just didn't think of herself as a star. She was more concerned with the production as a whole. Certainly within a company, she'd work with a great deal of intent on ensemble playing."

Close graduated Phi Beta Kappa in 1974, with a major in drama and a minor in anthropology. After graduation, Scammon met her backstage while she was in the Broadway hit "Barnum" and "The Real Thing" and continued his role as mentor. "I saw 'Barnum.' There again, Glennie was always asking people, 'What're your suggestions?' I would make one or two and finally, when it came to 'The Real Thing,' she said, 'What do you suggest about this?' 'Nothing!'" He could find no room for improvement.

What one quality set Glenn Close on the road to success? Says Catron, "She was serious about hunting for perfection."
