Commonwealth of Virginia Seminar on Latin America

Latin America program opens July 24

Business leaders, teachers and students from 21 Virginia communities will take part in an intensive 11-day program on cultures, politics, history and economics of Latin America, July 24-Aug. 3.

"The Commonwealth of Virginia Seminar on Latin America" will bring together state residents with an international group of more than 40 experts on the region, from former U.S. ambassadors and government leaders, to influential members of the business, news and education communities. The seminar is sponsored by the Commonwealth of Virginia and the College.

Each school system in Virginia was invited to nominate a three-person team to attend the seminar. Teams representing the school districts will participate in sessions on the history, culture, religion, economy and political climate in the Latin American nations.

Each of the 21 teams will include a teacher, business or community leader, and high school student. Their mission will be to acquire as much information as possible about Latin America, then create a plan for disseminating this knowledge to residents of their home communities throughout the 1989-90 school year.

Last year, during a similar seminar on East Asia, Governor Gerald L. Baliles praised the seminar for its potential to help Virginians acquire the international skills needed to succeed economically. Baliles will reaffirm his commitment to the seminar concept when he opens the program on Monday, July 24.

This year's keynote address will be given by Diego Asencio, who served from 1977 to 1980 as U.S. Ambassador to Colombia, where he was captured by left-wing terrorists and held for 61 days as a hostage. The experience formed the basis for his 1983 book, Our Man Is Inside. Ambassador Asencio has talked about his experiences in programs on terrorism, which have been held on campus.

Asencio has since been the assistant secretary of state for consular affairs and the U.S. Ambassador to Brazil. He is currently chairman of the Commission for the Study of International Migration and Cooperative Economic Development, which is studying clandestine immigration. While at William and Mary on July 24, Asencio will discuss "Latin America: Revolution or Reform."

John M. Nagle, dean of the School of Education, is director of the seminar, which is a collaborative project of the school, the Faculty of Arts and Sciences and the Wendy and Emery Reves Center for International Studies. Judith Ewell, Newton

Diego Asencio

Most of the sessions will be held on campus, although the group will travel to Washington for two days of briefings. Among the Washington activities will be a session on U.S. policy in fighting narcotics traffic on Wednesday, July 31.

The closing day of the seminar will feature a panel discussion with three U.S. ambassadors: Edwin Corr, who was assigned to Peru, Bolivia and El Salvador; Frank Ortiz, who has served in Peru and Argentina; and Robert Sayre, who served in Panama, Brazil and Uruguay.

Professor of History; George Grayson, Class of 1938 Professor of Government; and Ronald Wheeler, professor of education, have been responsible for organizing the seminar.

School systems sending teams include Arlington, Botetourt, Campbell, Chesapeake, Chesterfield, Colonial Heights, Essex, Franklin, Hampton, Henrico, Hopewell, Lynchburg, Norfolk, Petersburg, Prince Edward, Richmond, Roanoke, Smyth, West Point, Williamsburg-James City and York.

Paul Verkuil in England for legal exchange

President Paul R. Verkuil is one of eight American legal experts, including U.S. Supreme Court Justices Sandra Day O'Connor and Anthony Kennedy, taking part in the 1989 Anglo-American Legal Exchange.

The American delegation arrived in England on Saturday for a nine-day visit. During the British phase, the Americans will witness several court hearings involving civil cases from small claims arbitrations to a session of the Law Lords, the highest ranking judicial tribune in England.

The British legal experts will come to the Marshall-Wythe School of Law during their visit to the United States in September. Included in the British team are the Right Honorable Lord Nigel Bridge of Harwich and Lord Hugh Griffiths, both Law Lords.

"The idea is to give a small group of judges and lawyers an opportunity to examine the strengths and weaknesses of each country's system of law," said Verkuil before leaving for England. "It's been very useful background for my law classes. Generally speaking, the exchange keeps me involved and at the forefront of law reform."

This is the second time Verkuil has been involved in the legal exchange. During his first exchange trip in 1985, the U.S. delegation was led by former Chief Justice Warren E. Burger, Chancellor of the College. Burger praised the exchange in a 1986 article from the William and Mary Law Review, saying "there is much to learn on both sides, but my own view has always been that our side has profited more from the exchange than have our friends (from England)."

The 1989 comparison of the two legal systems will be most apparent when the British delegation comes to the College in September. At that time, both delegations will sit in judgment as a free speech case is argued twice: once under the rules of the American legal system, then under British law. The moot court case is being created by Rodney A. Smolla, director of the Institute of Bill of Rights Law at Marshall-Wythe.

Besides O'Connor, Kennedy and Verkuil, the current U.S. delegation in the exchange includes U.S. Court of Appeals Judge Clifford Wallace of California; Connecticut Supreme Court Chief Justice Ellen Peters; M. Bernard Aidinoff of the New York firm of Sullivan and Cromwell; Morris Harrell of the Dallas firm of Locke, Purnell, Rain and Harrell; and Philip Tone of the Chicago firm of Tone, Jenner and Block.

The exchanges, which have been conducted for more than 25 years, are held at approximately four-year intervals.

Galano to chair prevention/promotion advisory council

Joseph Galano, associate professor of psychology, was recently appointed as chairperson of Virginia's Prevention and Promotion Advisory Council.

The Council advises the State Board and the Commissioner of the Department of Mental Health, Mental Retardation and Substance Abuse Services on the establishment, funding and administration of prevention and promotion programs in Virginia.

The Council recently developed Virginia's Plan for Prevention Services, which defines priority areas for services aimed at decreasing the incidence of emotional/behavioral problems, substance abuse and mental retardation.

Galano said, "Virginia, along with Michigan, is one of only two states to have such a comprehensive plan." The new proposed mental health budget calls for four million dollars during FY '91 and '92 to fund the prevention priorities set forth in the plan.

Galano added that this represents the first time in the Commonwealth that a separate line item to fund prevention services has been included in the mental health budget. Galano said he was "proud of the leadership position the state has taken and believes that a prudent investment in the promotion of mental health and the prevention of mental illnesses can have dramatic effects and lower the incidence, and the human toll, of mental-emotional disorders in Virginia."

Visitors join Governor's School Program

Soviet students visit VIMS

Eighteen biology students from the Soviet Union and their two supervisors are getting a taste of science in Virginia this summer. The students are participating in a "Youth Science Exchange" sponsored by People to People, International, which brought 150 outstanding Soviet high school science students to the United States.

The group arrived early in July and spent a few days touring Washington, D.C. They then split up into small groups to spend time studying archaeology, computers and physics, astrophysics, chemistry and marine science at different institutions of higher learning.

In Virginia, the Soviet students have joined with high school students participating in the Governor's School Mentorship Program at the Virginia Institute of Marine Science.

During their visit to VIMS, the Soviet students have the choice of studying wetlands, fisheries, benthic ecology, oyster biology or resource management. Students will do field work at sites on the York River and Sweet Hall Marsh. They will also visit some local points of interest including Busch Gardens, Jamestown, NASA and Colonial Williamsburg. The visitors will also be entertained with a Rappahannock River cruise, dances and a weekend visit with families of VIMS/William and Mary faculty and staff.

The Governor's School is sponsored by the Virginia Department of Education's Office of Programs for the gifted. Every summer, gifted high school students spend six weeks working on ongoing research projects with scientists/mentors at NASA and VIMS. Lee Lawrence is project director at VIMS and Rebecca Cunningham, assistant director.

Soviet students know some English, and the American students know some Russian. To help bridge the language gap, staff member Lana Rodriguez interprets.

After leaving VIMS, the Soviet students will spend a week at the Wallops Island Marine Science Consortium facility studying marine biology before leaving for the Soviet Union on July 31.

Top Richard Bland student named 'Virginia Scholar'

Richard Bland College's top May graduate, Kimberley Peterson of Petersburg, will attend the College in the fall as a "Virginia Scholar." Governor Gerald L. Baliles will present her award at a ceremony in Richmond, July 24.

Chosen as one of five recipients from a pool of 45 graduates nominated by their two-year colleges, Kimberley will receive a $3,000 stipend from the State Council of Higher Education. The scholarship will be renewed for one additional year if she maintains at least a "B" average at William and Mary.

While at Richard Bland, Kimberley earned the highest grade point average of any student in her graduating class, a 4.0. She participated in the scholastic honor fraternity, Phi Theta Kappa, and was a reporter for the student newspaper, The Bon Homme Richard. She also worked part-time in the RBC admission office.

Kimberley plans to major in English in order to teach on the high school and college levels. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John A. Peterson Jr. of Petersburg.

History professor emeritus and state legislator die

Bruce T. McCully

Bruce T. McCully, 85, professor of history emeritus, died Wednesday, July 12 at Williamsburg Community Hospital after a long illness.

Professor McCully joined the faculty in 1940 as instructor of history, was appointed assistant professor in 1941, associate professor in 1947 and professor in 1961. His teaching and research specialties included British Empire history and British constitutional history. He was the author of a pioneering work on India, titled English Education and the Origins of Indian Nationalism (Columbia University Press, 1940, 1966).

Dr. McCully received his A.B. degree from Rutgers University and M.A. and Ph.D. degrees from Columbia University. Prior to joining the William and Mary faculty, he served from 1932 to 1937 as an instructor at Teachers College at Columbia, and from 1938 to 1940 as an instructor at Princeton.

At William and Mary, Dr. McCully's love of learning and his breadth and depth of scholarship were recognized by his election to Phi Beta Kappa. He also served as chairman of the history department.

The Board of Visitors resolution adopted upon his retirement in 1974 stated: "Those who have known Dr. McCully over the years will agree that there was never a man who better deserved his reputation as a dedicated teacher and scholar, as a professional educator in the highest sense of the word. He demanded the best of his students and won their respect for his uncompromising academic standards. He was a teacher they remembered in after years and the one they came back to visit."

Survivors include his wife, Mrs. Dorothy Logan McCully; a daughter, Elizabeth McHale of Fairfax; a brother, Douglas C. McCully of Whiting, N.J.; and one grandson, James T. McHale.

A funeral service was held July 15 in Wren Chapel.

Memorial contributions can be made to Swem Library.

Lewis A. McMurrin, Jr.

Lewis A. McMurrin Jr., a former Newport News-Warwick delegate to the Virginia General Assembly for 30 years and Peninsula businessman, died July 17 at his home.

Mr. McMurrin sponsored legislation for construction of the Hampton Roads Bridge-Tunnel, establishment of Christopher Newport College and the establishment of the Yorktown Victory Center.

During his tenure he headed the Jamestown-Yorktown Foundation Committee and served on the Roads and Internal Navigation Committee and the Counties, Cities and Towns Committee.

He later served as Democratic liaison to Governor John Dalton and served on the State Council for Higher Education.

He attended the College in the early '30s and graduated from Washington and Lee. He received an honorary Doctor of Laws degree from the College in 1981 and honorary degrees from St. Paul's College and Christopher Newport College, which renamed its first building Lewis A. McMurrin Hall in his honor.

Mr. McMurrin was often called "Lord Lewis" an affectionate nickname he earned because of his long-time British connections.

Queen Elizabeth II conferred upon him the rank of Officer of the British Empire in 1959, recognizing his contributions to Anglo-American friendship.

Mr. McMurrin had many English ties. In 1957 he was chairman of Virginia's 350th Anniversary Commission, established by the legislature to celebrate the 350th anniversary of the establishment of the first permanent English settlement in the New World at Jamestown in 1607. He was chairman of the Virginia Independence Bicentennial Commission which was established by Governor Mills E. Godwin Jr. in 1966.

He held leadership roles at the Jamestown Festival in 1957, the Virginia Independence celebrations in 1976 and the Yorktown Victory celebration in 1981.

Alumni Society

W. Barry Adams, executive vice president of the Society of the Alumni, has written an article on the role of alumni associations in university capital campaigns for the June issue of Currents, the monthly journal published by the Council for Advancement and Support of Education.

Drawing upon a document he prepared for William and Mary's Fourth Century Campaign, Adams delineates ways in which alumni administrators can work in partnership with development professionals for the benefit of both alumni and their institutions.

In April, Adams will chair a national CASE conference, "Alumni Associations and Capital Campaigns," in New Orleans.

Biology

Stanton F. Hoegerman, associate professor, delivered two papers at the Fourth International Workshop on the Fragile X Syndrome, held recently at Columbia University's Arden House in Harriman, N.Y. The first paper, titled "The Effect of Deoxynucleosides and Dideoxynucleosides on Fragile X Expression," was co-authored with graduate student Tony Hirtz, and Julie Hill, a 1989 graduate with high honors. The second paper presented, titled "Pierre Robin Syndrome in Three Males with the Fragile X Syndrome," was co-authored with Dr. Ave Lachiewicz, a pediatrician at Duke University.

President Bush to nominate Smith for federal judgeship

A top William and Mary graduate is in line to become Virginia's first woman judge on the federal bench.

According to a story in the Norfolk Virginian-Pilot on Wednesday, July 12, President Bush has said he will nominate U.S. Magistrate Rebecca Beach Smith of Norfolk, Va., for a U.S. District judgeship in the Eastern District of Virginia, which includes courts in Norfolk, Richmond and Alexandria.

Her nomination will have to be confirmed by the U.S. Senate. Virginia Senator John W. Warner recommended Mrs. Smith for the post and says he foresees no trouble for her nomination.

"In the 11 years I've been providing presidents with recommendations for the federal judiciary, I have never experienced a candidate who garnered wider or more genuine endorsements from his or her professional peers," Warner said in a prepared statement.

The Virginia State Bar, a statewide organization of lawyers, recommended Mrs. Smith to the senator for the judgeship.

"All of us in Virginia are fortunate that we will have the benefit of her abilities and experience in such an important position," said Timothy J. Sullivan, dean of the Marshall-Wythe School of Law where Mrs. Smith received her legal training. "All of us at the law school are very proud of her," added Dean Sullivan.

Mrs. Smith is in her 10th year of law practice. A Phi Beta Kappa graduate, class of 1971, Mrs. Smith received a master's degree in city planning and public administration from the University of Virginia in 1973.

She worked several years in health planning for the national Academy of Sciences in Washington, D.C., before enrolling in the Marshall-Wythe School of Law. She graduated first in her class in 1979.

After serving as a law clerk for U.S. District Judge Calvitt Clarke in Norfolk, she joined a Norfolk law firm where she was a civil trial attorney for five years.

Mrs. Smith was sworn in as a U.S. magistrate in July 1985.

20th anniversary of moon walk is celebrated

William H. Michael played important role in lunar expedition

With the focus this week on the 20th anniversary of the day men walked on the moon, tribute is being paid to some of the people who made that mission possible, including William and Mary alumnus William H. Michael Jr.

In 1980-81 Michael served as associate director of VARC, the Virginia Associated Research Campus, then headed by Hans vonBaeyer, professor of physics. Michael received a master's degree in physics from William and Mary in 1962.

Michael joined NASA shortly after he completed his undergraduate degree at Princeton in 1948. He also has a doctorate in aerospace sciences from Princeton, 1967. For a time in the 1950s Michael left Langley to work on STOL (short take-off and landing) aircraft with the Martin Company in Baltimore.

"Sputnik happened during this period," Michael remembers, "and it excited me. I decided to return to NASA and Langley."

As a member of Langley's newly formed Lunar Steering Committee, chaired by Clinton Brown, Michael worked with others on trajectory research. "We learned celestial mechanics along the way," he recalled, "because there were very few texts on the subject. We would sit around asking each other, 'How do you get to the moon? How do we photograph the back side?'"

During late 1959 and early 1960 Michael wrote a working paper titled "Weight Advantages of the Use of a Parking Orbit for Lunar Soft Landing Missions." With conceptual work by Michael, John D. Bird, Ralph W. Stone Jr. and Manuel J. Queijo, the ideas grew into the Lunar Orbit Rendezvous mode of sending manned spacecraft to the moon used in the Apollo project.

In 1965 Michael was appointed principal investigator for the Selenodes (measurement of the shape of the moon) experiment for Langley's Lunar Orbiter Project. In 1970 he was appointed leader of the Viking radioscience team to direct a joint university-industry-government group of scientists in investigations of the planet Mars. In the early 1970s Michael helped set up the Environmental and Space Sciences Division (now the Atmospheric Environmental Science Division) and became its chief in 1971.

Michael's work with space technology has spanned several decades and brought him many honors and taken him to many countries. In 1977 he shared with other Viking experimenters the Newcomb Cleveland Prize of the American Association for the Advancement of Science for outstanding papers published in science. Michael has authored over 100 scientific publications in the fields of engineering, planetary science, geodesy and geophysics.

In 1987 Michael was given the New York Academy of Sciences I. B. Laskowitz Award for his studies related to lunar and planetary missions.

Interviewed recently by Bill Ruehlmann of the Norfolk Virginian-Pilot, Michael recalled, "I can't believe it worked. It's amazing. Can you really believe we went to the moon?"

"I don't think we as a nation would take risks like that now. ... When NASA was brand new it was different from other agencies. It had a great mandate. Now it is a regular agency with a regular bureaucracy, in competition with everybody else, justifying its budget and struggling for funds. In the Good Old Days, we were more fortunate.

"Today, there is no budget at NASA for dreams."
