A WEEKLY NEWSPAPER PUBLISHED FOR AND ABOUT THE FACULTY, STUDENTS AND STAFF OF THE COLLEGE OF WILLIAM AND MARY

Volume XIX, Number 7

Wednesday, October 4, 1989

Timely Reminders

Telecommunications update

Because of delays in the installation of air conditioning equipment, some adjustments are required to the cutover dates for the telecommunications system. In a memo Monday, Franklin E. Robeson, acting vice provost for information technology, outlined the scope of the delays.

Voice services for part of the campus may be delayed from Oct. 13 until Nov. 1. All data communication services, originally scheduled for Oct. 16, are rescheduled for the weekend of Nov. 10.

Faculty and staff who have not signed up for the training sessions are asked to schedule a class by calling Tina Nichols at 221-1776.

Combined Charitable Campaign

The Combined Charitable Campaign is underway. College coordinator Donald R. Lashinger, professor of education, got some help this week from members of the Hourly and Classified Employees Association (HACE). HACE members volunteered to distribute information packets to staff members across campus. (See picture page 5.)

To date the fund has raised $14,000 of the $41,000 goal, reports Lashinger. He urges everyone to respond at whatever level they can.

Also, please take time to fill out the response form accurately and legibly, and please include your social security number.

Friday reception

Faculty and staff are invited to the reception at 5:30 p.m., Friday, Oct. 6, hosted by President and Mrs. Verkuil, one of the highlights of the three-day program for Parents Weekend. (The full program is included on page 5.)

Tasting party

HACE is planning a tasting party from noon to 2 p.m., Thursday, Oct. 19 in the lobby of the Campus Center to advertise their new campus cookbook. Everyone is invited to sample recipes from the book, prepared by HACE members.

Cookbooks are $6 and may be obtained by contacting Margaret Harris in the School of Business at ext. 4549.

Kranbuehl research wins national award

A sensor developed by David E. Kranbuehl, professor of chemistry and associate provost for research, has been picked as one of the 100 most significant technical products of the year by Research and Development magazine.

Kranbuehl began work on the device in the early 1980s after the National Aeronautics and Space Administration asked for help in measuring the physical states of the composites used in building space equipment. NASA needed a sensitive in situ probe that could examine the properties of composite resins as they change with temperature and time while the composite is being made.

In addition, the space agency wanted an efficient method of determining a structure's strength, toughness and point of failure after the structure has been exposed to extreme temperatures, atomic oxygen, ultraviolet rays and radiation.

Working under a NASA Langley grant, and later with grants from the Air Force Astronautics Laboratory and a variety of private and government agencies, Kranbuehl developed a sensor that can be imbedded into a composite structure during the early state of production. The sensor is small, only one inch long by one-half inch wide and wafer thin. The sensor can be used in a variety of objects from jet engines to tennis rackets.

By hooking a monitor to the leads from the sensor, analysts can keep track of the structure's condition during construction, under test results or, potentially, while the structure is in use, said Kranbuehl.

The U.S. Air Force, the Virginia Center for Innovative Technology, Newport News Shipbuilding and Drydock Co., ICI of Hopewell, E.I. DuPont de Nemours & Co., Aristech Corp., Phillips Petroleum Co., the Convair Division of General Dynamics Corp., Lockheed Corp., McDonnell Douglas Corp., and General Electric have all played a part in funding research at William and Mary involving the sensor.

In all, Kranbuehl estimates that more than $1 million has been received by the College in the last five years to support appropriate time as the College initiates a new interdisciplinary applied science Ph.D. program involving the departments of chemistry, computer science, mathematics and physics.

the work of undergraduate and graduate student researchers because of the sensor research.

This is the first time the College has received an award from Research and Development magazine. William and Mary is among a small number of universities recognized this year, along with major research firms such as AT&T Bell Laboratories, Dow Chemical Co., General Electric Co., Hewlett-Packard and NASA.

"The reward speaks highly for the role of science at William and Mary," said Kranbuehl. The award comes at an ap-proportionate time as the College initiates a new interdisciplinary applied science Ph.D. program involving the departments of chemistry, computer science, mathematics and physics.

"The most exciting part of the project is the opportunity it gives undergraduate and graduate students to do basic research and to observe the ways in which basic research is used in private industry," said Kranbuehl.

The award was presented in Chicago and the sensor will be featured in an exhibit at Chicago's Museum of Science and Industry this month.

Severino to give Bellini Lecture

Robert Severino

Robert Severino, chairman of the Italian department at Georgetown University, will give the 1989 Bellini Lecture on "Back to the Future: The Reshaping of the Italian Language," at 8 p.m., Thursday, Oct. 5 in the Campus Center Little Theatre.

A reception following the lecture will be held at the Italian House at 195 Armistead Ave. The public is invited to both the lecture and reception. There is no admission charge.

The Bellini Lecture Series is named for Carlo Bellini who came from Florence and was appointed by Thomas Jefferson to the first American chair of modern languages at the College in 1779.

Severino, a native of Catania, Sicily, holds graduate degrees from the Univer-

Brinkley and Mason endow SBA chair

James W. Brinkley and Raymond A. Mason, both of Baltimore, have each designated $100,000 to the College to establish an endowed professorship in the School of Business Administration.

The endowment established by the two alumni represents a portion of their overall commitment to The Campaign for the Fourth Century, the College's $150 million comprehensive campaign.

Brinkley, who graduated from William and Mary in 1959, is president of Legg Mason Wood Walker, Inc., the Baltimore-based brokerage firm. A member of the College's Board of

Evans: It takes a lot of money to run for Congress today

"There is no way to get elected to the Senate and House these days unless you have a very famous last name or a lot of money. These are simply the facts of life."

The escalation of money used in politics, proliferation of Political Action Committees (PACs) and the impact on the U.S. Congress, was the topic of a talk by C. Lawrence Evans, assistant professor of government, before the Town & Gown luncheon group recently.

Evans, a former Research Fellow at the Contributions to campaigns have been an issue dating back to the 1880s and before, but spending in Congressional races increased markedly during the 1960s, and due to campaign finance reforms, PACs began to explode in number in the 1970s, Evans explained. "Now we have PACs that represent just about everything imaginable. All you have to do is walk down K Street in Washington and you see them, townhouses with gold plaques outside, a PAC for this and a PAC deal—something that reformists have come up with to complain about and we don't have to worry about. I have a problem with that. As a political scientist, I have trouble when I listen to another social scientist and he tells me something that runs against the grain of common sense. Common sense tells me that these PACs wouldn't be spending hundreds of millions of dollars for campaigns just for the heck of it, just to help out these underfinanced congressional candidates.

"They are getting something in return for their money. They are buying access. The PAC people say they are not buying votes, they are buying access. The reason they want the access is so they can lean on congressmen," argues Evans.

Another effect, said Evans, to break down a congressman's reliance on parties, which further fragments a very fragmented institution. "It is very hard to get things done, there is little cohesiveness in Congress these days."

Campaign finance, says Evans, is a shell game. "It is always possible to come up with another accounting game to circumvent the rules and it's difficult, even with a consensus, to completely change the rules of the game without going to complete public finance of congressional campaign. I don't think very many people support that.

"The Bush Administration does have a plan. They would like to ban all non-ideological political action groups. The only political action groups they want are the pro-life groups and similar groups concerned with ideological questions. They also want to pass some kind of regulation requiring Congress to return all unused campaign money. Now it is possible to retire and take unspent campaign money home. If you were elected before 1980 and you have money in your campaign coffers, you can retire and bring that home. Some of them have close to a million dollars.

"This is an interesting plan, but the changes are not going to work. First of all we can't really define what constitutes a non-ideological PAC, and there is a good chance that the Supreme Court would deem it unconstitutional to discriminate in this way," said Evans.

"Because PACs are interested in keeping friendly legislators in office challengers must mount a great deal of money to unseat them. It is really hard to beat an incumbent running for office. Some 98 percent of incumbents who want to stay there win. That is something we should care about because one way we translate our interests into policy is by throwing the bums out. We have been doing that for 200 years. Now is it really hard to throw out the bums because they have two and three million dollar war chests.

"We have to realize that there is a lot of money in congressional campaigns now and it does matter. It is something we should be concerned about. One result has been a movement toward reform. In the 1980s, it waxed and waned. It was definitely on the agenda in the 100th Congress. It is floating around in space right now, but my guess is that we will see some legislation this year or next.

"Republicans like the idea of putting limits on PACs because most PAC money goes to incumbents, who are mostly Democrats. Democrats are a little bit worried about these restrictions on PAC spending. That is the cleavage; it is inherently partisan. There is a lot of talk about ethics, values and what is good for the American people, but, when push comes to shove, this is basically a partisan fight about who's going to win congressional elections.

"Senators take the subject of electoral spending very seriously," says Evans. "They get extremely upset by anything that is tied to their electoral survival, and that is the way reform proposals in this area are viewed.

"The bottom line is that the quantity of money spent in congressional campaigns has affected the process, although the effect varies according to who you talk to. The process of reform is going to be difficult because it is such an intensely partisan issue. It is absolutely impossible, I guarantee you, to come up with a reform proposal that would be neutral. It is either going to hurt the Democrats or hurt the Republicans. One of them is going to be damaged, and in our system it is difficult to get things done without a consensus."

Evans at Town and Gown Lecture

Brookings Institution, is writing a book about power in the Senate. He argued that the public should be concerned about PAC money because it influences the content of legislation and is partially responsible for a decline in competitiveness in congressional elections.

"It used to be that a young lawyer in 1960, to run for office, would take out a second mortgage on his house, raise a few thousand and run a credible campaign. Those days are gone completely. Now the quantity of money it takes to run for a House or Senate seat varies, but a benchmark figure for the House would be $200,000 and that is conservative—that is just how much it takes to be competitive, not to win. Realistically, a challenger running against an incumbent might have to spend five or six hundred thousand dollars," said Evans.

for that. ... We have a Dr. Pepper PAC, the Snack PAC, the Peace PAC, and the American Tax Reduction PAC, and the Brewers of Malt Liquor have their PAC, which is called the Six PAC.

"There are a lot of anecdotes about individual PAC funds buying individual votes of members of Congress. If the Congressman is undecided about something, the PAC man comes down and gives him a gift of $5,000 and all of a sudden the issue seems a bit more clear cut and he has made up his mind. There are a lot of stories about that, but I should say that political scientists, who have quite a bit of quantitative data about these things, say they cannot find systematic evidence that PACs are buying votes across the board," said Evans.

"That has left many political scientists to argue that PACs aren't that big of a

Anthropology

A new reader, titled The Social Sciences and International Education, has been published by Kendall/Hunt. The book was edited by Professors Mario D. Zamora and Tomoko Hamada, and graduate student Laurie Paonessa, along with Donald Zeigler of Old Dominion University.

Contributing authors from the College include President Paul R. Verkuil, "The Need for International Education and the V.S.S.A."; Armand J. Galfo, professor emeritus of education, "West German Gymnasia Students' Knowledge of NATO and the Warsaw Pact and Their Perceptions of Prospects for East-West Peace"; Professor Vinson H. Sutlive Jr., "Open for Business, or Out to Lunch? The Social Sciences and International Education"; Zamora, "Culture and Global Education" and "Mahatma Gandhi: His Life and Relevance to Modern Society"; and Hamada, "Anthropology and Business."

The Virginia Foundation for the Humanities awarded Hamada a grant of $10,500 to be a resident fellow at the Center for the Humanities and Public Policies in Spring 1990. She will conduct research on the acculturation process of Japanese-owned firms in the state of Virginia.

English

Terry Meyers, professor, has published an article in The Keats-Shelley Journal, Vol. 38 (1989): 82-102, "A Magnificent Find If Genuine: A Possible Portrait of Shelley—From the Workshop of H. Buxton Forman?"

Marshall-Wythe

John Lee, associate professor, has had an article, "The Art of Regulation Drafting: Structured Discretionary Justice Under Section 355," published in Tax Notes (Aug. 28, 1989): 1029.

School of Education

Stuart S. Flanagan, professor, is the author of "To Copy or Not to Copy," an article reviewing Japanese educational practices in the October issue of the Virginia Journal of Education.

Armand Galfo, professor emeritus, has published a review of two books in the summer issue of Educational Studies. The article is a summary and critique of Betty A. Reardon's book Comprehensive Peace Education: Educating for Global Responsibility and a companion volume, Teacher-Designed Curricula for Peace Education.

Kevin Geoffroy, professor and coordinator of counseling programs, presented his paper "The Relationship of Thinking-Intuitive Types and Sensing-Feeling Types to John Holland's Concept of Congruence" at the International Conference for the Advancement of Counseling held at the University of Dublin, Ireland.

Joyce VanTassel-Baska, Jody and Layton Smith Professor of Education, is the author of two articles, "Curricular Approaches to Gifted and Talented Education" in the special annual issue of Thresholds in Education and "Adapting Content Curriculum for the Gifted" in the March issue of Educational Leadership.

In addition, she and Gail McEachron-Hirsch co-authored "International Education for the Gifted" in the May-June issue of Gifted International.

VanTassel-Baska was also co-author with James Patton, associate professor and director of teacher education, and Douglas Prillaman, professor of special education, of "A Status Report on the Disadvantaged Gifted Learner: At Risk for Educational Attention," which appeared in Focus on Exceptional Children. Another article co-authored by VanTassel-Baska is "Evaluation of a Full-Time Self-Contained Class for Gifted Students" in the Winter 1989 issue of Gifted Child Quarterly. She reviewed "Flexible Pacing" by June Cox and Neil Daniels, and "Gifted Kid Speak Out" by James DeLisle, in the spring and summer issues of Gifted Child Quarterly. She also contributes to a regular column on instructional strategies to Understanding Our Gifted.

VanTassel-Baska is a member of an international evaluation team working with Al Ain University in the United Arab Emirates. The team made its initial visit to Al Ain in May.

In June, VanTassel-Baska presented workshops on "Scope and Sequence Planning in Curriculum" at Rockford College in Rockford, Ill., and on "Working with Disadvantaged Gifted Learners" for the Bureau of Indian Affairs at a conference on gifted education held in Williamsburg.

In July, she gave the 1989 Frank Tate Memorial Lecture at Victoria College in Melbourne, Australia. Her topic was "Nurturing Individual Differences: The Key to Appropriate Education for the Gifted." She also presented workshop sessions on "Curriculum for the Gifted and the Highly Gifted" at the World Conference on Gifted and Talented Education held in Sydney, Australia, in July.

Swem Library

Kay J. Domine, university archivist, recently presented a session titled, "Records Appraisal as an Archival/Records Management Tool," at the 1989 annual conference of the Virginia Association of Government Archives and Records Administrators.

Sharon Garrison, university archives assistant, and Merle Kimball, Serials, Collection Development and preservation librarian, recently attended a workshop on "Disaster Recovery Strategies and Techniques." The workshop was sponsored by the Virginia State Library and Archives and the State Historical Records Advisory Board.

Soprano Poyner, pianist Williams to give concert, Oct. 22

Margaret Poyner

Soprano Margaret Poyner and pianist Christine Anderson Williams will present a program of songs by Claude Debussy (1862-1918) at 8 p.m., Sunday, Oct. 22 in Ewell Recital Hall.

The songs, setting poems by Baudelaire, Verlaine, Louys and Mallarme, span the composer's career, reflecting both his early infatuation with Wagner and his own symbolist aesthetic.

Poyner, first-prize winner of the 1985 Concert Artists Guild International New York Competition, has performed extensively as a recitalist, soloist with orchestras and in opera, throughout the United States and Europe. She has soloed with the Orchestra du Capitole de Toulouse, the North Carolina Symphony, the Duluth Symphony, the Omaha Symphony, the Bethlehem Bach Festival and others.

Poyner gained major national recognition in the operatic field for her interpretation of Poppea in the Skylight Opera of Milwaukee's production of "L'Incoronazione di Poppea." She has sung many other leading roles in operas including "The Magic Flute," "Don Giovanni," "The Bartered Bride," "Falstaff," "La Traviata" and "The Consul," with such companies as the Texas Opera Theatre, the New York Lyric Opera, the Glimmerglass Opera and the Minnesota Opera. In the 1984-85 season she sang at LaScala and the John F. Kennedy Center in "A Quiet Place" and "Trouble in Tahiti" by Leonard Bernstein and Stephen Wadsworth.

Williams was graduated with distinction in music from Duke University and subsequently received a Master of Music degree in piano from the Manhattan School of Music. A frequent performer in this area, she has appeared with orchestras in Virginia, California and Florida, as well as in numerous solo recitals throughout the eastern United States. Presently a member of the piano faculty at the College, she has studied with Loren Withers, Artur Balsam and William Masselos. She resides in Petersburg.

Religion scholars to meet Oct. 6-7

The Society for the Culture and Religion of the Ancient Mediterranean will hold its semi-annual seminar at the College Oct. 6 and 7, hosted by the department of religion.

The members will consider three papers. Charles Kannengiesser of Notre Dame University will lead the discussion of his paper on the biography of Athanasius of Alexandria; Bart Ehrman of the University of North Carolina, will discuss the orthodox polemic against the heretics; and Thomas Finn of the religion department, will present his paper on baptism and conversion in Augustine's North Africa.

The society's 23 members focus their research and teaching on the ancient Mediterranean Basin from Spain to the Euphrates and Gaul to Saharan Africa. The participants represent a wide variety of colleges and universities, including Asbury Theological Seminary, Catholic University, Center College, Duke University, Emmanuel School of Religion, Loyola College (Baltimore), Mary Washington College, the University of North Carolina, the University of Notre Dame, the University of Virginia, Virginia Polytechnic Institute and William and Mary.

James Axtell to speak in Jamestown-Yorktown Foundation series

Explorations that led up to Columbus' voyage to the New World and French naval participation in the American Revolution are the topics of two lectures being presented by the Jamestown-Yorktown Foundation at 8 p.m., Thursday and Friday, Oct. 12 and 13.

On Thursday, James Axtell, Kenan Professor of Humanities, will present "Before and After Columbus" at Williamsburg Regional Library. The following evening, Michael Crawford, a historian at the Naval Historical Center in Washington, D.C., will discuss "The French Naval Campaign of 1778." Crawford's lecture will take place in the main auditorium of the U.S. Coast Guard

Reserve Training Center at Yorktown.

Axtell will focus on Christopher Columbus' explorations of the Mediterranean and the Atlantic during the two decades preceding his voyage to discover a westward route to Asia and early exploration and settlement of the Americas. Axtell has been a member of William and Mary's faculty for 11 years and previously taught history at Yale University in New Haven, Conn., and Sarah Lawrence College in Bronxville, N.Y. He received his Ph.D. from Cambridge University, England.

Crawford will discuss the unsuccessful attempts of a French naval squadron under Vice Admiral D'Estaing to strike major blows against the British in North America in the summer of 1778, in marked contrast to the highly successful Battle of the Capes three years later. At the Naval Historical Center, Crawford is associate editor of the series Naval Documents of the American Revolution. Before joining the Center staff, he taught at Texas Tech University in Lubbock, Texas, and served a year as National Historical Publications and Records Commission Fellow with the Adams Papers at the Massachusetts Historical Society. He received his Ph.D. from Boston University.

Both lectures are free and open to the public. They are a part of a fall six-lecture series being sponsored by the Jamestown-

Yorktown Foundation, a state agency, which administers the historical museums Jamestown Festival Park and the Yorktown Victory Center. The final two programs in the series are "Captain John Smith: Scoundrel or Hero," to be presented by Karen Kupperman on Thursday, Nov. 2, at Williamsburg Regional Library, and "Virginia: Visions of Change," given by Jack P. Greene on Friday, Nov. 3, at the Coast Guard Reserve Training Center in Yorktown.

For further information about the lecture series, contact the Education Office of the Jamestown-Yorktown Foundation at 253-4939.

sity of Illinois, Urbana-Champaign, and a B.A. cum laude from Columbia Union College. He is literary director of the Georgetown University Electronic Text for the Italian Archives, president of the National Institute for Contemporary Italian Studies and secretary-treasurer of Gamma Kappa Alpha National Italian Honor Society.

Severino is also Mid-Atlantic representative of the American Association of Teachers of Italian and past president of the Italian Cultural Society of Washington, D.C. He is also a member of the International Society of Appraisers for Rare Books and Manuscripts, the Renaissance Society of America, the Wilson Center for West European Programs and a frequent participant-contributor to the Smithsonian Associates programs on Italian culture and interests.

Severino has authored two books: Le soluzioni immaginarie (1985) and The Signs and Sounds of Italian (1986) and is co-author of the United Nations Organization Multilingual Glossary, published in 1988, International Nuclear Agreement - A Quadrilingual Glossary (1988), and Periscopio (1986). Additionally, he has published

Faculty Club party

The Faculty Club is planning a party in the new recreation hall from 5:30 to 8:30 p.m., Friday, Oct. 20.

For those interested in trying out the facilities at the new building, squash, racquetball, basketball, volleyball, table tennis, weight training, swimming and aerobic dancing (led by Kelly Charles) will be available.

A cocktail party will begin at 6:30 p.m. in the multipurpose room of the building and will include a tour of the building.

more than 30 critical articles dealing with Italian language, literature and poetry, and translated and edited innumerable rare documents he has uncovered in the course of many secret forays in numerous libraries, monasteries, public and private archives and holdings.

An avid and extremely skilled paleographer, Severino has discovered and identified numerous important letters and documents by the Italian poets Tasso, Foscolo, Leopardi, Montale and Pasolini. More important, he has also discovered and identified invaluable literary manuscripts and archives, such as the first edition of Giambattista Vico's Principi di scienza nuova, containing autograph corrections in Vico's own hand in preparation for the second edition; Alessandro Manzoni's holography treatise, Sul Romanticismo; as well as the manuscript copy of Il Conte di Carmagnola, the tragedy Manzoni had submitted to the occupying censors for approval.

More recently, Severino hit a proverbial scholar's jackpot when he discovered the long-lost and unpublished correspondence between Luigi Pirandello and Jenny Schulz-Lander, along with a miscellany of verses and poems, the manuscript of Pirandello's most important novel—Il fu Mattia Pascal, and the complete archive of Pirandello's correspondence with his American agent and translator, Arthur Livingston.

Acclaimed and respected by all his peers, Severino has been recognized by two Presidents of the Italian Republic. In 1983, President Sandro Pertini bestowed on Severino the title of Cavaliere dell'Ordine al Merito della Repubblica Italiana, and, in 1988, President Francesco Cossiga awarded him the Gold Medal and Diploma of Merit for Italian Culture, the highest distinction the Italian nation can award her citizens.

Pelaez to give Aquino Lecture

The 5th Benigno Aquino Memorial Lecture/Philippine Dinner will be held from 6 to 8 p.m., Tuesday, Oct. 24 at the Campus Center ballroom, in conjunction with the celebration of United Nations Day.

The Honorable Emmanuel Pelaez, Philippine Ambassador to the United States and former vice president of the Philippines, will be the distinguished Aquino lecturer and honored guest. A former senator, congressman and Foreign Minister, Pelaez is one of the most respected Filipino leaders today.

Sponsors of this program include the department of anthropology, the Reves Center for International Studies, the International Circle, the South/Southeast Asia Society and the Office of Charles Lombardo.

Library improves search capabilities

Word and Boolean searching is now available on LION in Swem Library. (LION is the online catalog for all William and Mary libraries.) These are powerful search tools, which allow users to look for any word in any record in the entire LION database.

With word searching, the user need not know an author's full name, the exact wording of the title or the controlled vocabulary used in Library of Congress subject headings. Instead, the user can search for those words he or she remembers or that are most significant and later combine them in Boolean searches.

Word searching can be restricted to authors, subjects or titles; or it is possible to search for all occurrences of a word. For example, the user could do a word search for hostage by typing "w/hostage" to find all occurrences of the word or a search for the word hostage only in titles by typing "w/t:hostage."

The user should continue to use regular author, title and subject searches when the specific author, title or subject heading is known. Because word searching is less precise, it usually results in some extraneous results.

Boolean searching allows the user to combine words and concepts to narrow or broaden the search. To illustrate, if the user were searching the database to locate information pertaining to water pollution in Virginia, he or she could do a word search for Virginia by entering "w/virginia," then a Boolean search for water and pollution by typing "b/water AND pollution," and then finally combine the results of both searches to identify those items dealing with water pollution in Virginia. Boolean searches can also be restricted to author, title or subject.

Both word and Boolean searching are now available on all terminals and micros with access to LION. There are flipcharts in the libraries and bookmarks explaining commands that are available to help the user learn how to do these searches. In addition, there are help screens in LION which can take the user step by step through word and Boolean searching. Reference librarians are available to provide assistance.

For answers to any questions about using word or Boolean searching, please call the Swem Library reference staff at ext. 4407 or the Law Library reference staff at ext. 4102.

We know that you will find these new capabilities of LION a "roaring" success.

W&M Theatre brings musical 'Canterbury Tales' to stage

"Canterbury Tales," the musical, will be presented by the William and Mary Theatre Oct. 6, 7, 8, 13 and 14 at 8:15 p.m., and Sunday, Oct. 15 at 2 p.m. The box office, located at Phi Beta Kappa Memorial Hall, is open Monday through Friday from 1 to 6 p.m., and Saturdays from 1 to 4 p.m. through the run of the show. Tickets are $6. Call ext. 4272 for further information.

Based on Chaucer's Canterbury Tales, the musical was written in the late 1960s. Although adapted for the stage, the words written by Chaucer remain intact. Of the 29 pilgrims included in the original Canterbury Tales, 15 are incorporated into this musical version.

Four of Chaucer's tales are told through the course of the show. The theme of these four tales is the tension between earthly, carnal love and sacred, true love. The outcome, although satirical at times, is surprisingly moral, bringing forth the timelessness of Chaucer's original message.

The cast is large and includes Paul Batchelor, a guest artist, whom the audience will remember from his appearance in "The Pirates of Penzance" in the 1988 Virginia Shakespeare Festival.

The choreography is being done by Lisa Baldwin, a 1989 graduate of the College. Lisa has used the modern dimension of the music within the show to present an exhilaratingly choreographed production.

Rachel Gardner as May (l) and Mary Stillwaggon as Alison listen to a tall tale from Carla Harting as the Wife of Bath.

Carla Harting gets amazed reactions from Lane Schonour as the Miller and Mark Millhone as Chaucer.

Guest actor Paul Batchelor (r) as the Steward strikes a pose that amuses Brian Keith Lewis, who plays the part of the squire.

Brinkley and Mason fund SBA endowment

Visitors since 1986, he serves as chairman of the board's Committee on Financial Affairs. He is also a member of the steering committee of The Campaign for the Fourth Century.

Mason, also a 1959 graduate, is chairman and chief executive officer of Legg Mason Wood Walker, Inc. He is also a member of the steering committee for the campaign and chairman of the President's Council, the major donor-recogniton group at the College.

"Increasing support for outstanding faculty is one of the major goals of The Campaign for the Fourth Century," said President Paul R. Verkuil. "We are grateful to Chip Mason and Jim Brinkley, two of our most successful and loyal alumni, for their generous support of our efforts."

Income from the Brinkley-Mason Endowment will qualify for matching funds under the Commonwealth of Virginia's Eminent Scholars Program.

Theatre and speech department to host national meetings, Nov. 16-19

By Anthea M. Hartig

The theatre and speech department will host the annual joint meeting of the American Society for Theatre Research (ASTR) and the Theatre Library Association (TLA) Nov. 16-19 at the Fort Magruder Inn.

The conference will focus on two major themes of theater studies: "Theatre and Politics," a concern in much current scholarship, which will be paired with "Early American Theatre," a topic well-suited for the historic Williamsburg area.

Both ASTR and TLA promote theater scholarship, linking fellow professionals and national and international institutions. As such, the conference brings together scholars from California to Calgary and topics ranging from "Women Tell the Dirtiest Jokes: The Politics of Gender in Stand-Up Comedy" to "The Masking Machine: Charlie Chaplin as Historical Inevitability on the Russian/Soviet Stage."

From the American identification with and celebration of Shakespeare's plays to the reinterpretation of traditional 19th-century theater by feminist scholars, the weekend will explore a broad and exciting range of issues.

The conference offers a program that spans over 250 years of interaction between theater and society and affords a chance to learn about both through panel speakers and discussion groups.

Simon Williams (University of California, Santa Barbara) will chair the first session, "Theatre and Empire," which begins at 9 a.m., Friday, Nov. 17.

Heidi J. Holder (University of Massachusetts at Amherst), J. Ellen Gainer (Cornell University) and Margaret Knapp and Steven Watt (Indiana University) will present papers.

"Early American Theatre" will be the topic of Friday's second session at 1 p.m., with Alicia Rae Koger (University of Massachusetts at Amherst) chairing and Peter A. Davis (Tufts University), Douglas McDermott (California State University at Stanislaus) and Jeffrey D. Mason (California State University at Bakersfield) speaking.

That evening, beginning at 8 p.m., the final session of the day will center on "Structures of Authority in the Theatre" and will be chaired by Tom Postlewait (Indiana University). Featured speakers will include Janice Carlisle (Tulane University), William Worthen (University of Texas at Austin), David Savran (Brown University) and Maria K. DiCenzo (McMaster University).

Saturday's program begins at 10:30 a.m., following an ASTR business meeting. "Cultural Performance and the Politics of Gender" will be chaired by Gay Gibson Cima, who also has acted as chair of the conference's program committee. Other participants in this program will include Tracy C. Davis (University of Calgary), Rosemarie K. Bank (Kent State University) and Phil Auslander (Georgia Institute of Technology).

Following ASTR's noon awards luncheon, Joseph Roach will chair the afternoon session at 1:45 p.m., which will include Kim F. Hall (Georgetown University), Sue-Ellen Case (University of Washington), Colette Human (Pennsylvania State University) and Robert Skloot (University of Wisconsin).

Chair Walter Zvonchenko (Kennedy Center Performing Arts Library) will monitor TLA's 4 p.m. session, which will include Amy Henderson (National Portrait Gallery, Smithsonian Institution), Elsie Freeman (National Archives) and Letitia Yeandle (Folger Shakespeare Library).

The closing day of the conference will include a program on "Representing Social Revolution and War" at 9 a.m., with Gary Williams (Catholic University) acting as chair and Sarah Bryant-Betail (University of South Carolina), Spencer Golub (Brown University) and Janelle Reinelt (California State University at Sacramento) among the speakers.

Bruce McConachie, professor of theatre and speech, will lead the "State of the Profession" forum which will highlight remarks by Marvin Carlson (City University of New York).

Both Associations welcome local attendance at the conference.

Registration fee for the entire conference is $40, excluding lodging and meals. Same-day registration will be available at $15 per day.

Reservations may be made by calling Bruce McConachie, chair of local arrangements for the conference at ext. 7218 or by mail in care of the Department of Theatre and Speech, College of William and Mary, Williamsburg, VA 23185.

Check of College keys now underway

The duplication or possession of unauthorized keys to college property is a violation of Virginia Code 18.2-503. Only keys issued by the College locksmith and stamped "Do Not Duplicate" are authorized keys to college buildings. If you have a key which has been duplicated or is not properly stamped, it should be returned by Oct. 31 to deans or department heads so that an authorized key may be issued.

"This measure is designed to promote the safety of the users of College buildings. Assault and thefts are a continuing concern for us all," said Richard Cumbee, director of the Campus Police Office. "The duplication of keys, if permitted to continue, jeopardizes everyone's welfare."

Introduction to biomedical research

The National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases in Bethesda, Md., has an initiative called the Introduction to Biomedical Research Program that is specially designed to acquaint academically talented minority students to career opportunities in the broad field of biomedical research.

NIAD, one of the 13 National Institutes of Health, conducts and supports research to study the causes of allergic, immunologic and infectious diseases, and to develop better means of preventing, diagnosing, and treating illnesses.

Students, who are provided per diem and round-trip tickets to the Bethesda campus, will have an opportunity to participate in a series of lectures, interviews, and tour the NIH Clinical Center. They will also discuss with scientists, current research initiatives and advances as well as career concerns and possible summer employment opportunities.

Participants will also have the opportunity to apply for summer positions in the NIAD Division of Intramural Research. Approximately 55 students will be selected for the Feb. 11-16 program.

Deans and faculty may recommend students with a 3.0 or better GPA. Selection is based on faculty recommendations and personal academic achievements. Interested students should contact the chairman of the chemistry department or Randolph A. Coleman, director of freshman and sophomore academic advising.

Help from HACE

Members of the Hourly and Classified Employees Association (HACE) help prepare information packets for the Combined Charitable Campaign. # Colonel Warren Kempf takes over as new head of ROTC

When Lieutenant Colonel Warren L. Kempf was due for an assignment change he sent in his first and second choices—a college ROTC unit or a base on the Peninsula such as Fort Eustis.

Knowing the apocryphal stories told about how the army decides on assignments, Kempf was unbelieving when he was given his first and second choice rolled into one—Professor of Military Science at William and Mary. “At first I thought it was a joke,” says Kempf. “It took me no more than a minute and a half to accept.

“I am here by choice looking to do as good a job or better than my predecessor,” said Kempf, who is recently returned from Europe. He served three years in Kaiserslautern, West Germany, located about an hour southwest of Frankfurt. His assignment here is “coming home” for Kempf. He was stationed at Fort Eustis from 1980 to 1983.

Kempf spent two and a half years in England before going to Germany and attests to Winston Churchill’s assessment of the Anglo-American difference, “two people separated by a common language.”

Serving as an officer in the British Army, Kempf learned he had preempted a national ritual when a Brigadier asked him to change a 1500 hours coffee break he had scheduled. Coffee is served in the morning, Kempf was told; tea in the afternoon.

“You would have thought that having spent three years on the Peninsula, where life evolved out of a British heritage, the transition to life in England would have been easy,” said Kempf. “We’ve heritated ourselves way away from them.” He recalls having difficulty finding a sign to buy diesel fuel until he found it was listed as DERV—diesel engineered road vehicle.

A native of New York state, Kempf didn’t have a military career in mind when he went to college. He worked in construction for three years before entering the University of Kentucky. He was an earnest student who was paying his own way. “I started by drawing $10 out of the bank and taking a loan. There is quite an inducement to study when you sign the loan and you don’t have a co-signer because you are 21. When you reach in your desk for a pencil, there is that payment book from the bank and your ‘I will pay back’ promise.”

After college Kempf went into the Army. He said he felt young men should serve two years. He went to flight school and was sent to Vietnam. That was 1969-70 at the height of the war, a time known mostly for the incursion into Cambodia in the spring of 1970.

Kempf says he doesn’t look back on Vietnam as a bad experience. “I think conceptually what we tried to do was right. I sometimes disagreed with the conduct of the war, but that wasn’t my call at the time. Simply stated, it was a good idea that just missed the mark.

“I think our policy was vindicated when North Vietnam took over and hundreds of thousands of people just wanted to get out. And I think we were somewhat further vindicated when Cambodia fell and there was a holocaust that wiped out one third of the nation.”

Kempf was stationed in Korea from 1979 to 1980, about five miles from the location of the hospital used as the model in the successful TV series “MASH.” “That was a very rewarding tour. I really got to see the differences between North and South Korea. There are a lot of troubles in South Korea, but there you also get an eyeball-to-eyeball experience of the hypocrisy of the North Korean communism.

“The South Koreans are, on average, two inches taller and more robust than their northern counterparts because they have been given more food and introduced to vitamins and health care. You can see this at the peace village at Panmunjam. I saw North Koreans who looked very tall but they were walking on a six-inch pallet to make themselves look bigger. At the peace table, the North Koreans placed their flag a shade higher than the others. ... That was just for eye-wash, just to make themselves look a little better.”

In this country, Kempf has served on the General Staff at Fort Stewart, Ga., and with the 101st Airborne Division at Fort Campbell. He also served as company commander of Headquarters and Headquarters Company, Division Support Command.

When Kempf first enlisted in the army he did not have a career in the military in mind. “I was going to get out and teach high school history ... but I started liking what I was doing and I never got out. It was a mix of patriotism, enjoying the job, enjoying the travel, enjoying the people.”

Why did he put in for an ROTC assignment? “I was enrollment officer and Commandant of Cadets at Indiana University of Pennsylvania. I enjoy students. Students here at William and Mary are just so good, compared to students when I was in college. They are smarter, stronger, they are more attuned to what is going on in the world; I wanted to be part of that.

“You hear so much that is negative about American youth; much of what the European press publish about students is derogatory. At William and Mary you see the absolute best of American youth—our Ivy League neighbors will argue that, but they are—and I wanted to be a part, however small, of helping develop these young Americans.

“I saw the performance of the William and Mary cadets last year at summer camp at Fort Bragg and they are so good; and there is empirical evidence to back it up. They are among the best in the entire United States and that includes some 350 schools offering Army ROTC. I would like to hold what we have; it is difficult to improve on something that good. Any changes I make will be minor.”

Kempf says he isn’t going to talk service careers to students. “I came in the Army and had no more intention of staying in than the man in the moon. I will tell students that a commission in the military in the reserve or on active duty is career broadening, personally enriching and it can’t do you anything but good in today’s competitive world.

“If I were an employer trying to decide on candidates, a candidate with a second lieutenant’s commission in the reserve or someone coming off active duty would be two steps ahead of anybody that did not have that experience. ... A student will find ROTC the place to learn leadership and management skills that won’t be offered in any other single program.”

This applies to both men and women, says Kempf. “Women are competing for exactly the same jobs. I think we have finally reached the point both in the military and civilian life that what matters is what you can do and not who you are or what sex you are.”

Kempf heads the program here on campus and the one at Christopher Newport College. He plans to commission 50 new officers between now and August, probably the same next year. He looks for enrollment to gradually increase.

During his career in the Army, Kempf has won several decorations including the Distinguished Flying Cross, the Meritorious Service Medal, the Bronze Star Medal, the Air Medal, Army Commendation Medal and the Vietnamese Cross of Gallantry.

Colonel Kempf is married to the former Janice Louise Durkin of Chicago, Col. and Mrs. Kempf have two sons, Erik Josef, 17, a student at Pembroke State University, and Christopher Lee, 14, who is in school at Denbigh High School.

Telecommunications update

The following buildings in the area of the new system’s Swem “node” may be delayed until Nov. 1: PE, Intramural/Recreational facility, Commons, Randolph Complex, Botetourt Complex, Dupont, Adair, Morton, Jones, Small, Swem, Millington, Rodgers, Phi Beta Kappa, Andrews and the Muscarelle Museum.

Now that the air conditioning is available at the Swem “node” Bell Atlanticom Systems (BAS) has begun testing and equipment installation. “Our first priority, for security purposes, will be Randolph Complex, Academic buildings will follow the Randolph Complex,” said Robeson.

“During the Fall Break period BAS will work in the residence halls not yet complete and return to the academic buildings on Oct. 17. Dillard Complex will be installed by the end of the Fall Break,” said Arthur Brautigam, director of the telecommunications services staff.

Crime Prevention Month

Police offer campus safety tips

October is a crime prevention month. Your Campus Police Department would like to take this time to offer some advice and safety tips to members of the college community:

- Be constantly aware of your surroundings. Don’t walk or jog alone at night; stay in lighted areas.
- Study with a friend or in a monitored study area such as Swem

Library or Tucker Hall.

- Always lock your residence hall room or office when not in use.
- Lock up your bicycle when not in use.
- Always lock your car.
- Don’t drink and drive.
- Report any suspicious activity or persons to the Campus Police.

Current Centrex phone service will be available in all offices and residence halls until at least mid November. The Office of Telecommunications will inform all offices regarding the schedule for discontinuing Centrex Services.

In the area of data communications, the data cutover has been postponed to the weekend of Nov. 10 to insure an effective transition to the new system. Data communications provided by the current Gandolph system will cease at 12:01 a.m., Friday, Nov. 10. Data service from the new telecommunications system will begin at 8 a.m., Nov. 13.

Faculty should be aware that students will have no access to mainframe computing resources from Nov. 10 until Nov. 13. Class assignments and schedules should be adjusted accordingly.

Since a definite voice cutover schedule for the buildings listed above is impossible to develop, a recorded system installation status report will be available to the campus community at 221-1411 beginning Oct. 6.

Victory Center schedules activities

More than 300 military reenactors representing American, French and British units that participated in the American Revolution will gather at the Yorktown Victory Center the weekend of Oct. 14-15. The event precedes a townwide observance of the anniversary of America’s Revolutionary War victory at Yorktown on Oct. 19, 1781.

As a special tribute to this year’s celebration of the bicentennial of the French Revolution, “Yorktown Day Weekend” will feature some of the French regiments that fought as allies of American forces at Yorktown in 1781. Without assistance from France, the American victory could not have been achieved.

Each of the reenactment groups will have a camp set up and will be on hand to talk with visitors. In addition to the military reenactors, there will be “sutlers” offering reproductions of 18th-century items for sale. Demonstrations, contests and games are scheduled periodically throughout both days. There will be mock skirmishes at 11 a.m., Saturday, and 2:30 p.m., Sunday.

Rates for College Transportation

The following charge rates are now in effect for buses used in academic and departmental-sponsored programs: driver rate of $7.87 per hour from 6 a.m. to 3 p.m. and/or driver rate of $11.80 per hour after 3 p.m. and Saturdays, Sundays, or holidays.

Buses can be reserved through the Campus Transportation office by submitting form WM8-1-4, Application for the Use of State or Personal Motor Vehicle for Official College Business.

Student organizations/groups wishing to request a vehicle must first secure the approval of the Associate Dean of Students for activities. Due to the shortage of vehicles, requests should be submitted as far in advance as possible.

Employment

Informational interviews are held in the Office of Personnel Services each Thursday from 9 a.m. to noon on a first-come, first-served basis. This is an excellent chance to learn more about employment opportunities at the College and VIMS.

The following positions at the College are open to all qualified individuals. Visit the Office of Personnel Services, Thiemes House, 303 Richmond Road, for information, a listing of vacancies and application forms, Monday-Friday, 8 a.m.-4 p.m. All applicants must submit a completed Commonwealth of Virginia Application form to the Office of Personnel Services.

Notice: In accordance with the Immigration Reform and Control Act of 1986, effective immediately, all individuals hired for positions at the College of William and Mary or the Virginia Institute of Marine Science will be required to produce the following: either (1) one document establishing both U.S. employment authorization and identity (such as Alien Registration card with photograph, U.S. passport, certificate of U.S. citizenship, certificate of naturalization or unexpired foreign passport with attached employment authorization); or (2) one document establishing U.S. employment eligibility (such as original Social Security card, birth certificate or unexpired INS employment authorization) and one document establishing identity (such as driver's license or U.S. military card). If the employee cannot produce the required documents within three business days of hire, he/she will be subject to removal.

The College of William and Mary is committed to the principles of equal opportunity and affirmative action in the employment of faculty, administrators and non-academic personnel. This policy was reaffirmed by the Board of Visitors on Nov. 4, 1988. It is the policy of the College not to discriminate against any employee or applicant for employment on the basis of race, sex, color, national origin, religion, age, handicap, disability, veteran's status or political affiliation. It is also the policy of the College to implement appropriate affirmative action initiatives.

Deadline for applying for the following positions is 5 p.m., Friday, Oct. 6, unless otherwise indicated. Postmarks will not be honored.

Dean of the School of Business Administration

Applications and nominations are invited for the position of Dean of the School of Business Administration. The position becomes open July 1, 1990, and carries with it an endowed chair.

Qualifications: The successful candidate must have a record of significant achievement in academia, business or government and be committed to quality teaching on both the graduate and undergraduate levels, as well as excellence in research. Outstanding leadership and administrative skills are required as is the ability to communicate effectively with a range of constituencies. The candidate should be well equipped to provide active leadership in a major fund-raising campaign recently launched by the College.

The School of Business Administration: The School is enjoying a period of sustained momentum and growth. Since 1983 the faculty has grown by 40 percent to approximately 50 full-time members. The School offers AACSB accredited B.B.A. and M.B.A. programs with enrollments of 475 and 350, respectively. A unique 20-month Executive M.B.A. program is in its fourth year of operation, and the undergraduate accounting program is ranked in the top 20 nationwide. Facilities have kept pace with the expansion: the School was remodeled in 1982 and an adjacent facility is currently being renovated to house the graduate programs. The School is aided significantly in its mission by an active Board of Sponsors composed of national business leaders.

Applications: Nominations and applications, including names and addresses of three references, should be sent to: Professor Lawrence B. Pulley, Chair, Dean Search Committee, School of Business Administration, The College of William and Mary, Williamsburg, VA 23185.

The committee will begin to review applications on Nov. 1, 1989. The position will be filled by Jan. 15, 1990, or as soon thereafter as possible. Nominations and applications will be accepted until the position is filled.

The College is an equal opportunity/affirmative action university.
