A WEEKLY NEWSPAPER FOR FACULTY, STUDENTS AND STAFF

NEWS

VOLUME XIX, NUMBER 28 • WEDNESDAY, APRIL 25, 1990

RBC Commencement

Wallace Terry, author of Bloods, the best-selling novel about the Vietnam war and a member of the Board of Visitors, will be guest speaker at Richard Bland College's commencement ceremony May 11.

The program will begin with a reception for the 150 graduates, their families and friends at 4:30 p.m. on the library lawn. At 6 p.m., the graduates and faculty will process into the gymnasium for the commencement ceremony.

President Clarence Maze Jr. will confer degrees. Rector Hays T. Watkins will also participate in the program.

Cyclers Need Adviser

Adviser needed for the W&M Cycling Club for the 1990-91 school year. If you are interested in recreational cycling and want to help students promote it on campus, please contact Denny Burne at Rec. Sports, ext. 13312.

Host Families Needed

The American Center for Cultural Exchange is seeking volunteer host families in the Williamsburg area for 20 French foreign exchange students. Students will be here July 16 to Aug. 13. Students are 16 to 18 years old. ACCE would like to place one student per family to provide wide exposure to family lifestyles.

Anyone wishing to participate is asked to contact Helen T. Riley, ACCE area coordinator, at 566-0029.

REMINDERS

Reception Today

The music department invites members of the College community to a reception, at 4 p.m. today, in the first-floor lounge of Ewell Hall. The event honors two members Dale Cockrell and Daniel Gutwein for their recent publications.

Sir Antony Acland

D. Tennant Bryan

Dr. Janet Kimbrough

Gov. L. Douglas Wilder

Recipients of Honorary Degrees Named

Three leaders in the fields of journalism, diplomacy and medicine will receive honorary degrees with Virginia Governor L. Douglas Wilder at 1990 commencement exercises Sunday, May 13.

Receiving honorary degrees at commencement will be Sir Antony Acland, British Ambassador to the United States, doctor of laws; D. Tennant Bryan of Richmond, chairman of the board of Media General, Inc., doctor of humane letters; Dr. Janet Kimbrough of Williamsburg, retired physician and one of the first women to attend William and Mary, doctor of humane letters; and Governor Wilder, doctor of laws. Governor Wilder will deliver the commencement address.

Acland first arrived in Washington, D.C., as ambassador in Aug. 1986. A graduate of Eton College and Christ Church, Oxford, he entered diplomatic service as an Arabic-speaking specialist, with his first postings in Dubai and Kuwait. Subsequently he worked in New York at the United Kingdom Mission to the United Nations before going to Geneva as the Head of Chancery there. In 1972 he became Principal Private Secretary to the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs; he went on to serve as Ambassador to Luxembourg and later as Ambassador to Spain. In 1982, he was appointed Permanent Under Secretary of State and Head of the Diplomatic Service, a post he held until his current appointment.

Bryan serves as chairman of the board of Media General, the Richmond-based communications company whose holdings include Richmond Newspapers. He retired as publisher of the Richmond Times-Dispatch and Richmond News Leader in 1977, succeeded by his son, J. Stewart Bryan III, the fourth generation to serve as publisher. In 1979 the Bryan family established the John Stewart Bryan Professorship of Jurisprudence at William and Mary in honor of Bryan's father, who was president of the College from 1934 to 1942.

Joseph L. Roberts

Roberts To Give Baccalaureate

The Rev. Joseph L. Roberts Jr., senior pastor of the Ebenezer Baptist Church, Atlanta, and successor to Dr. Martin Luther King Sr., will be the speaker for the baccalaureate service at 9:30 a.m., Saturday, May 12, during commencement weekend.

Roberts, who assumed the post in 1975, was previously director of the Division of Corporate and Social Mission for the Presbyterian Church U.S. from 1973 to 1975. He also served that denomination as the director of the Corporate Social Ministries Work Unit on the Board of National Ministries and as pastor of the Weequahich Presbyterian Church and the Elmwood United Presbyterian Church, the latter of which was recognized during his pastorate as the third strongest black Presbyterian church in the nation.

A native of Chicago, Roberts received his undergraduate degree with honors from Knoxville College, a master of divinity degree from Union Theological Seminary in New York City,

Alfred Page Is New Business School Dean

Alfred N. Page, associate dean for executive programs at the University of Washington's Graduate School of Business, has been named dean of the School of Business Administration.

His appointment to the post was approved April 20 at a meeting of the College's Board of Visitors and announced by President Paul R. Verkuil.

Page, who is professor of finance and business economics, served as acting dean of the Schools of Business Administration at the University of Washington in 1987 and again in 1988-89. He replaces John C. Jamison, dean of the William and Mary school since 1983, who is retiring July 1.

"Al Page brings enormous strengths to our rapidly expanding School of Business," said President Verkuil. "His international focus and dynamic leadership, following that of his predecessor John Jamison, ensures a bright future for

VIMS Recognizes Achievements At Annual Ceremony

David Eggleston, second from the right, winner of the 1989 John M. Zeigler outstanding student award, poses with Mrs. Zeigler, Acting Dean of the Graduate Studies Henry Aceto and VIMS/SMS Dean Director Frank O. Perkins.

Professor Thomas A. Barnard Jr., recipient of the outstanding advisory service award, with Dean Director Frank O. Perkins (l) and Dr. Robert Byrne, associate director for research at the institute.

Faculty and Students Recognized at Shellfisheries Conference

VIMS and the School of Marine Science faculty and graduate students made a splash at the National Shellfisheries Association annual meeting held at the Williamsburg Hilton Conference Center, April 1-5.

Graduate student Beth McGovern won the Best Student Paper Award, while reports related to Professor Roger Mann's proposal to experimentally introduce non-native oysters to the Chesapeake Bay drew a flurry of interviews from local and regional press and broadcast media.

According to Mann, who along with Professor Bruce Barber coordinated the event, "the quality of the presentations from SMS students was exceptional."

In addition to McGovern's award-winning research report, graduate students Joyce Meyers, David Eggleston and Jerome LePeyre also contributed papers that Mann says, "ranked very near the top," and Oyster Hatchery Manager Ken Kurkowski hosted highly popular hatchery tours for researchers from other institutions.

"The visitors were clearly impressed," said Mann. "The meeting was a showcase for VIMS/SMS."

Other News from VIMS

Gary Anderson, scientific data manager, is an invited participant at a workshop on natural science data management, sponsored by the National Science Foundation. The workshop, April 22-26 is being held at the M. W. Kellogg Biological Station at Michigan State University.

Professor Maurice P. Lynch, assistant director for special programs, spoke recently to the Reedville Masonic Lodge on VIMS' central role in studies of the biology and ecology of the Chesapeake Bay.

Environmental Trends Report, a resource book by Carroll Curtis, assistant professor, has been published by the Council on Environmental Quality.

Mohammed Faisal, associate research scientist, will be editor-in-chief of a new research journal, Immunology Review, to be published by Pergamon Press.

Robert J. Orth, associate professor, has been elected president of the Estuarine Research Association.

Thomas A. Barnard Jr., assistant professor, received the first Outstanding Advisory Service Award at the VIMS/SMS Annual Awards ceremony on March 23.

The first C.E. Richards Memorial Award, cosponsored by the Atlantic Coast Conservation Association, was presented to Jon Lucy, instructor. The award honors his work in sportfishing advisory services.

The award memorializes the late Professor C. E. Richards, a VIMS fisheries biologist who died in 1981 after nearly 30 years with the institute. Richards devoted much of his scientific career to investigating the biology of striped bass and other finfish species, and for many years worked closely with sportfishing and fisheries conservation groups to promote sound fisheries management strategies.

David B. Eggleston, doctoral candidate, received the John M. Zeigler Student Achievement Award. He was recently named research associate for the Caribbean Marine Research Center in the Bahamas.

The Zeigler Student Achievement Award honors the late Professor John M. Zeigler, a beloved figure on the VIMS campus who came to the Institute in the early 1970s in the middle of a 40-year career in physical oceanography, and became associate dean of the School of Marine Sciences in 1981.

A tireless researcher and enthusiastic teacher, Zeigler gained a reputation for recognizing potential in students and influenced the careers of many VIMS graduate students before his death in 1987.

Nicholas St. George Gives Facility To Shoreline Inventory Project

The Virginia Institute of Marine Science has a new facility to house its shoreline inventory project.

The new 1,900-square-foot structure, a manufactured research and office facility produced by Oakwood Homes Corporation of Greensboro, N.C., is a gift to William and Mary from Nicholas St. George, president of the corporation.

The facility will be used by graduate students in the chemical oceanography division and has been earmarked specifically for the VIMS coastal inventory project, which is mapping and analyzing the various physical parameters and types of biological interactions that characterize Virginia's 5,000 miles of tidal shoreline. Data generated by the VIMS inventory, which has so far concentrated on the Northern Neck, goes to the Council on the Environment, which in turn makes the information available to communities trying to grapple with growth, shoreline development and related issues.

"The shoreline inventory will provide accurate, high resolution, timely information for all of Virginia's coastal localities. We truly needed this new facility to fulfill our responsibilities," says Suzette Kimball, director of the inventory project and a faculty member in VIMS' Geological Oceanography division.

In addition to the building itself, a personal gift from St. George, the Oakwood Corporation donated custom design and installation of the structure on the VIMS campus. St. George is a 1960 graduate of William and Mary and received his J.D. from the the Marshall-Wythe School of Law. He is currently a member of the Endowment Association Board at William and Mary and the Law Foundation Board at Marshall-Wythe.

Through its Campaign for the Fourth Century, the College is seeking a total of $15 million for the construction of new facilities, including additional laboratory and office space on the VIMS campus.

Correction

It was very pleasant to see excerpts of my talk to the International Forum dinner on Maundy Thursday evening (April 12), and I am grateful. However, I am being seriously misquoted. In talking about the 17th century, I said "The Black Sea was, as it had been for centuries, a Muslim lake. ... Europeans were always having to compete with Europeans, and for a millennium, the Muslims had always managed to give a good account of themselves." For reasons impenetrable to me, all these verbs were put in the present tense, so that it seemed a description of today, rather than of then. That would make it a very misleading statement.

I also said, "Islamic and Middle Eastern studies are flourishing at last in American colleges." This appeared as "flourishing at least in American colleges," with a smugness for which one should feel no desire to be associated. America has not led the parade but brought up the tail in this matter.

John Alden Williams

The William & Mary News regrets these errors and any misunderstanding they may have caused. —ed.

NOTES

RBC Players Close Season

The RBC Players will conclude the season with a lighthearted comedy "Hooters" by Ted Tally, in the Barn Theatre at 8 p.m., April 27 and 28 and 2:30 p.m., Sunday, April 29. Tickets are available at the RBC bookstore or at the door; $2 for adults, $1 for non-RBC students and free for RBC students.

"Hooters" is directed by David E. Majewski of the theatre faculty.

The Players will open next season with a faculty-staff production of "Shrunken Heads" in September followed by "Neon Psalms" in November, "Rimers of Eldritch" in March and "Pops" in April. Season tickets will be available.

For further information about the RBC Players, call Majewski at 862-6122 or 862-6280.

Going to London?

For reasonable accommodations in the heart of the city, try Madison House, operated by James Madison University. For details, contact Judy Cohen, JMU Overseas Programs, Ltd., 301 Wilson Hall, Harrisonburg, VA 22807 or call 703-568-6979.

Scholarships

The Greater Washington, D.C., Chapter of the Society of the Alumni is offering two $500 scholarships for the 1990-91 academic year. To be considered, students must have a family member who is a William and Mary alumnus and who is a member of the Chapter.

Applications are available on campus through the Alumni House and the Student Aid Office, or from the Chapter (Charles Gobrecht, 6016 Commack Court, Springfield, VA 22152).

Applications must be returned to the Alumni House no later than May 1. Recipients will be announced at the Chapter's annual spring banquet in May.

For further information, call ext. 11173.

Student stories

The Reader's Digest is offering $400 for contributions to "Campus Comedy," a column of funny, true stories about college life. Submissions should be typewritten and no more than 300 words. Entrants should include name, address, telephone number and mailing date. Contributions cannot be acknowledged or returned and become property of Reader's Digest on payment. Entries should be sent to Reader's Digest, Box 200, Pleasantville, NY 10570.

F.O.A.M. Dance

Last F.O.A.M. dance of the school year. Tap your feet and swing your partner at the Friends of Appalachian Music dance Saturday night, May 5.

Southern squares, New England contra dances and circle mixers called and taught to live music.

The evening ends with a waltz and a Virginia Reel.

Dances run from 7:30 to 10 p.m. at Norge Community Hall, Rt. 60 west, 1.3 miles past the pottery, next to the Norge Sovran Bank.

Admission is $3 per couple, $2 single.

The easiest dances are called first—inexperienced dancers should come early.

For more details call S. C. Clement, geology department, ext. 12442.

McGlothlin Found Guilty of Generosity

The bailiff brought in the prisoner, a Circuit Court Judge sat on the bench and the jury was assembled, but it was all in the spirit of merriment for the man in the dock, James W. McGlothlin, chairman and CEO for The United Company of Bristol, Va. He was being "tried" in a special mock trial as an alumnus of the College and the Marshall-Wythe School of Law and a generous contributor to his alma mater. The outside front wall of the courtroom was gift wrapped with a giant green ribbon.

The occasion was the naming of the Moot Court Room for the McGlothlin family. McGlothlin, a member of the Board of Visitors; his father, Woodrow W. McGlothlin; his cousin Nicholas Street; and The United Company have made a joint commitment of $1 million to the Marshall-Wythe Law School, which has named the moot courtroom the McGlothlin Court.

The presiding judge, Lydia Taylor of Norfolk, received her law degree from Marshall-Wythe. Acting for the prosecution was Michael A. Tompkins, a third-year law student; the bailiff was Robert McDowell, also a third-year law student and outgoing Chief Justice of the Moot Court.

The first witness called was President Verkuil, who recalled McGlothlin when both men were undergraduates, and his work at the Kings Arms Tavern. McGlothlin, said Verkuil, was responsible for raising $11 million for The Campaign for the Fourth Century, which currently has raised $77 million.

Law School Dean Timothy Sullivan said that the fact that the McGlothlin gift was unrestricted meant that it could be used for the most pressing needs of the law school and suggested that scholarships, library resources, the Legal Skills Program and faculty would be areas in which the funds could be used.

Shepard McKenney, a friend and classmate of McGlothlin who was warned by the prosecutor not to engage in telling "exaggerated buddy stories" until after the trial, said that McGlothlin had asked him for a donation in 1987, and he had responded with a $25,000 gift. When McKenney in turn approached McGlothlin for a gift and he responded with $1 million, McKenney said he wished he could get that rate of return on all his investments. McKenney is an adjunct professor of law at Marshall-Wythe.

Defense lawyer Rene Bowditch, another Marshall-Wythe graduate, teaches in the Legal Skills Program and is associated with the law firm of Hornsby, Mulkey & Ailsworth in Newport News. She portrayed McGlothlin as a warm-hearted fun-loving man who had been applauded by Virginia Business magazine for his business acumen and labelled "King of the Mountain" in his industry. The United Company is a leader in the state's energy industry and was ranked by Virginia Business as the eighth largest company in Virginia in 1990.

Rector Hays Watkins thanked McGlothlin for his generosity and presented framed citations to McGlothlin, his father and cousin.

McGlothlin, addressing an audience of family member, friends and law school faculty, said that the McGlothlin name on the courtroom was a tribute to his grandparents, B. F. and Annie L. McGlothlin, who worked a farm and a grist mill and inspired their children and grandchild with their insistence on the importance of education.

"I didn't know my grandfather, but my grandmother was a very determined, stubborn, strong-willed woman. His grandparents, he said, had to struggle to send their son to school, but were determined it should be done. Their dedication to education, said McGlothlin, had forged a chain down through the generations; 14 members of the McGlothlin family have attended William and Mary. The cost, said McGlothlin, was a terrific burden then, and even though costs have risen, he said, the burden to parents today is not as great as it used to be.

"This is my way of saying thank you to my grandparents. I am indebted (to them) more than I could ever tell them. They believed so much in education. Their memory, he said, was his inspiration to serve the school in the future.

McGlothlin was found guilty of steadfast loyalty and generosity to William and Mary.

Thelin and Wiseman Write on Economics of College Athletics

John Thelin, Chancellor Professor of Education, and Lawrence Wiseman, professor and chairman of the department of biology, are co-authors of "Fiscal Fitness?: The Peculiar Economics of Intercollegiate Athletics," published in Capital Ideas journal.

This publication is sponsored by the Forum for College Financing at Columbia University and is distributed to over 10,000 college and university presidents, vice presidents and deans, and to foundation and government officials.

The major thesis of their study is that most intercollegiate athletic programs, including those at such major universities as Michigan, Stanford and Wisconsin, face increasing financial problems and will have difficulty fulfilling their charge to be "self-supporting." The study includes national data along with analysis of sample university intercollegiate athletic budgets.

Thelin is director of the Higher Education Doctoral Program at the College. He is vice president and president-elect of the Faculty Assembly and a member of the Athletic Policy Advisory Committee.

Wiseman has served as chair of the Athletic Policy Advisory Committee and as faculty representative to the National Collegiate Athletic Association. In 1987-88 he was an American Council on Education fellow and special assistant to the president at the University of Colorado.

our increasingly distinguished business program."

While at the University of Washington, Page also served as the school's international programs administrator, which is involved in business exchanges with other countries. He has served since 1980 as executive director of the Banking and Society program, sponsored by the Regional Bankers Association of Japan, which brings 45 bankers to study American culture and finance each year. Page originated and served since 1986 as executive director of the Hyogo Japan Prefecture program, which allows Japanese business and public officials to study politics and business in the United States. He served for five years as the director of the Korean Bankers program and one year as faculty coordinator of the Korean Small and Medium Business program.

A native of Minnesota, Page is a summa cum laude graduate of Macalester College in St. Paul, and received M.B.A. and Ph.D. degrees from the University of Chicago. He served as an assistant professor at Chicago's Graduate School of Business in 1964-65 before joining the Washington faculty in 1965. He has been a visiting professor at Chicago, at Stanford University's Graduate School of Business and at the University of Rochester School of Management. He was also a visiting scholar on the faculty of economics and politics at the University of Cambridge.

His current research interests include the structure and evolution of private and public organizations; agency theory; economic and managerial education; and comparative economic systems. He served from 1984 to 1987 as managing editor of the Journal of Financial and Quantitative

Analysis, and has published widely in such journals as the Journal of Business and the American Economic Review, and was founder and managing editor of the University of Washington's Journal of Contemporary Business.

In addition to his teaching, research and administrative duties, Page also has served as host of a Seattle public television interview program called "Upon Reflection," which has featured guests such as Mortimer Adler, Tom Wolfe, John Updike, Dave Brubeck, Margaret Mead and Jim Lehrer.

Honorary Degrees Recognize Supporters of College

Bryan was educated at the University of Virginia and serves as an honorary trustee of Virginia Union University. He is a member and past-president of the American Newspaper Publishers Association.

A 1921 Phi Beta Kappa graduate of William and Mary, Dr. Kimbrough was among the first women to receive a degree from the College. She went on to become one of only two women graduates of the University of Virginia Medical School in 1926. During her medical career she served at Eastern State Hospital, the Tucker Clinic in Richmond, as professor of physiology at Westhampton College, and for the U.S. Army at Fort Lee and later at Fort Eustis. She is the daughter and descendant of a number of William and Mary alumni, among them St. George Tucker, who was a student from 1771 to 1774 and became the College's second professor of law in 1790, succeeding George Wythe. In 1967 Dr. Kimbrough donated the Tucker-Coleman collection of manuscripts and rare books to the College, and in 1971 received the Alumni Medallion for service to her alma mater. She lives in the family's ancestral home, the St. George Tucker House on Market Square Green in Williamsburg's historic area.

A native of Richmond, Governor Wilder holds a B.S. degree in chemistry from Virginia Union University and a J.D. degree from Howard University School of Law. He is the founder and former partner of the law firm of Wilder, Gregory and Martin. A member of the Virginia Senate from 1969 to 1985, Governor Wilder served as chairman of the Senate Committees on Transportation, Rehabilitation and Social Services, and Privileges and Elections. He was also chairman of the Virginia Advisory Legislative Council and chairman of the Democratic Steering Committee. During his four-year term as lieutenant governor beginning in 1985, he served as chairman of the National Democratic Lieutenant Governors Association and chairman of the National Conference of Lieutenant Governors' Drug Interdiction Task Force.

'Making "Do the Right Thing"' Concludes Documentary Series

The Commonwealth Center for the Study of American Culture will host the final documentary film workshop at 7 p.m., Thursday April 26 in Millington auditorium.

The program will include a free showing of "Making 'Do the Right Thing'" a one-hour narrative documentary that captures the people, places and incidents involved in the making of Spike Lee's motion picture "Do the Right Thing."

Veteran filmmaker and producer St. Clair Bourne will be present to introduce his documentary, which presents an insightful behind-the-scenes look at a feature film crew in operation, including Spike Lee's working style, and the delicate, sometimes humorous, negotiations involved in getting community cooperation. Bourne will also lead a discussion and entertain questions from the audience after the showing of the documentary.

HACE Names Committee To Select Employee of the Month Recipients

The following have been named to the William and Mary Hourly and Classified Employees Association Employee of the Month Selection Committee: Loretta Early, Computer Center, chairperson; Shirley Aceto, Provost's Office; Becky Raines, Administration and Finance; Debbie Rorrer, Personnel Services; and Roy Williams, Facilities Management.

HACE's Employee of the Month Program has been established to recognize and applaud outstanding individual contributions to the College by hourly and classified employees.

Each month the selection committee contacts supervisors from 10 departments and requests they nominate an employee (or employees) deserving of this distinction. However, any College hourly and classified employee may be nominated at any time by two fellow employees and/or their supervisor. Nominations are kept active for one year. However, nominations should be sent to Loretta Early, the Computer Center, Jones Hall, by the 15th of each month to be eligible to receive the following month's award.

Once the nominations have been received, the HACE Employee of the Month Selection Committee will meet to select the Employee of the Month. The only selection criteria used is the recommendation of the supervisor and/or fellow employees. No personal interviews are conducted, neither is any further information sought. The decision of the Committee is final and not subject to review or appeal.

The Employee of the Month becomes an honorary HACE member for one year, receives an appropriately engraved plaque, a gift certificate good for two free meals at the Marketplace and is featured in the William and Mary News.

Nomination forms and additional information may be obtained from Loretta Early, Computer Center, ext. 13002.

Policies Set for W&M Child Care Center

Children become eligible for the College of William and Mary child care center waiting list as soon as they are born and parents subsequently complete the waiting list application form.

There are five categories of priority. Within each category, the priority is determined by date of applications. Priorities follow:

1. Children of William and Mary full-time administration, faculty and staff, who will attend a full day, Monday through Friday
2. Siblings of children already in the program, who will attend a full day, Monday through Friday.
3. Children of full-time employees of the day care center and William and Mary students, who will attend a full day, Monday through Friday.

4. Children of William and Mary part-time faculty, staff and students, who will attend a full day, Monday through Friday.

(One full time slot in priorities 1 through 4 can be shared by two children, one of whom attends mornings and one who attends afternoons. The center will match morning and afternoon part-time applicants on the waiting list. Category #5 applies to those part-time applicants who cannot be match.)

5. Children who will attend half days, Monday through Friday, in the following priority:

a. Children of William and Mary full-time administration, faculty and staff.

- b. Siblings of children already in the program.
- c. Children of full-time employees of the day care center and William & Mary students.
- d. Children of William & Mary part-time faculty, staff and students.

After enrollment, each family is expected to contract with the child care center for at least six months. If they relinquish their place before the end of that period and the center cannot fill it, they are responsible for paying tuition for the balance of that period.
