Those who wish to come to the program after lunch are asked to be seated by 12:45 p.m.

Terry Coming Nov. 1

Speaker for the Nov. 1 Town & Gown program will be author Wallace Terry, a member of the Board of Visitors whose book Bloods: The Black Vietnam Experience, was a best seller. Reservations for this program are due Oct. 30.

Campus Recycling Day

Saturday, Oct. 20 is a comprehensive recycling day on campus. The collection of aluminum, cardboard, glass, certain plastics, white and colored ledger paper and computer paper will be held from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. in the William & Mary Hall parking lot.

Recyclables from residence halls will also be picked up on Saturday. Students willing to donate their time to help with this project are invited to meet in the Campus Center lobby at 9 a.m.

Honors Lecture

John E. Janzen, professor of anthropology, Kansas University, will give a public lecture at 4 p.m., Thursday, Oct. 18 in Millington auditorium on African therapeutic practices.

This is the fourth of a series of public lectures on African culture and traditions planned as an integral component of Honors 203.

W&M Hall Parking Lot

A large portion of the William and Mary Hall parking lot will be used Nov. 5 - 8 by the Williamsburg-James City County Public School System for their bus-driver training and safety program.

Cooperation is requested of those who normally use this lot to insure that the large portion of the lot remains clear of vehicles from 8 a.m. to 1 p.m. on the designated days.

Those with specific concerns regarding alternate parking should contact the office of parking services.

Volume VI Of Marshall Papers Published

A reception is planned Thursday afternoon in celebration of the publication of volume six of The Papers of John Marshall.

A late afternoon presentation will be made to President Paul Verkuil in the Wren Gallery.

Volume six of The Papers of John Marshall, edited by Charles F. Hobson and Fredrika J. Teute, has just been published by the University of North Carolina Press. The volume presents Marshall's correspondence, papers, and selected judicial opinions, Oct. 1800 to March 1807, embracing his first six years as Chief Justice of the United States.

Documents in this volume (including the landmark 1803 opinion in Marbury v. Madison) reflect Marshall's efforts to establish an independent federal judiciary and to make the Supreme Court into an institution peculiarly charged with expounding the Constitution. As Chief Justice, Marshall also presided over the U.S. Circuit Courts for Virginia and North Carolina. The editors give special attention to Marshall's circuit court opinions, the original manuscripts of which have been preserved.

Busy as he was attending his various courts, Marshall also managed in these years to write The Life of George Washington, published in five volumes between 1804 and 1807. A number of letters between Marshall and his publisher are printed here for the first time in their entirety. According to the editors, this correspondence sheds new light on the history of book publishing in the early republic.

The editors are now preparing volume seven (1807-15), to be published in late 1992 or early 1993. The entire edition will consist of 10-12 volumes.

The Marshall Papers is co-sponsored by the College and the Institute of Early American History and Culture. Additional financial support comes from the National Endowment for the Humanities, the National Historical Publications and Records Commission, and private foundations.

In addition to Hobson, the staff of the Marshall Papers includes Suzanne E. Coffman, assistant editor, and Laura Gwilliam, editorial assistant. Former Associate Editor Fredrika Teute is now editor of publications at the Institute of Early America History and Culture.

Alcohol Awareness Week Oct. 19-26

A variety of activities has been planned for "Soberfest '90: The Other Party," which will mark Alcohol Awareness Week on campus Oct. 19-26.

The schedule will include the following events:

Librarians Have Fun With Fundraising

These gleeful gourmands are not about to be stampeded by the herd of heifers behind them, but they are striking this unusual pose to illustrate the joy of giving—and getting. Pictured above are members of the Swem Library staff who were some of the first October customers for sundaes at Ben & Jerry's Inc., 3046 Richmond Road.

Responding to the plight of Swem Library which has been hard hit by budgetary cutbacks, the ice cream company agreed that it would devote the entire month of October to setting aside 50 cents of each sundae sold as a donation to the Friends of the Library Endowment at Swem. The library staff decided that they should be among the first to help the cause. "Our financial needs are great and we'll gratefully accept any and all assistance that comes our way," was University Librarian Nancy Marshall's response to the Ben & Jerry's offer. (Out of town when the picture was taken, she plans to participate before the end of the month).

In setting up the special offer, store manager Lisa Terry said, "The College students have supported our store from the day we opened. Now it's our turn to help the College. This is what Ben & Jerry's is all about."

UN Day Program Set For Oct. 24

A faculty panel will discuss "The changing Role of the United Nations," at 7:30 p.m., Wednesday, Oct. 24 in Trinkle Hall. A reception will be held at 7 p.m. in the atrium adjoining the hall.

Panelists will be Bartram Brown, assistant professor, government; Ismail H. Abdalla, associate professor, history; Eric Ayisi, assistant to the provost, off-campus program development; and Don Baxter, associate professor, government.

Program sponsors are United National Association, Williamsburg chapter; the International Circle; anthropology dept.; and the Wendy and Emery Reves Center for International Studies.

New Books At Swem Library

By Carol McAllister
Bibliographer/Information Services Librarian

Generations Past: A Selected List of Sources for Afro-American Genealogical Research by Sandra M. Lawson. (Library of Congress, U.S. Government Printing Office, 1988). Government Documents Dept. LC 1.12/2: AF8/4.

This bibliography lists 361 selected sources in the Library of Congress that contain information on Afro-American family lines. The volume begins by noting nine guides to Afro-American genealogical research, four of which are in Swem's collection. Following is a selection of family histories arranged by family name. The largest portion of the text lists civic records kept by cities, towns, counties and states.

Also mentioned are genealogical periodicals, newspaper resources, biographical indexes and the names and addresses of genealogical organizations that focus on Afro-American research. Introductory paragraphs for each section discuss the kind of information contained in each resource and suggest methods for accessing it. Since the listings are not comprehensive, limitations are explained and additional approaches suggested. Generations Past, which was intended for both beginning and experienced genealogists, was selected as one of the outstanding government publications for 1989.

Forgiven: The Rise and Fall of Jim Bakker and the PTL Ministry by Charles E. Shepard. (Atlantic Monthly Press). BV 3785 B3 S48 1989.

Charles Shepard, the compiler of this biography, is the investigative reporter for the Charlotte Observer who originally exposed much of the wrong-doing associated with Jim Bakker and his religious broadcasting empire. The writer's sources are numerous and varied. In addition to hundreds of hours of interviews with Bakker associates, he had access to legal documents and PTL publications and internal working papers.

Shepard's journalistic style is clear, enticing and fast-paced. With a docudrama narrative, he fulfills his stated purpose: "To replace stereotypes and sensationalism with a balanced portrait of Jim Bakker, his PTL ministry and, by extension, the business of TV evangelism."

Multiple Exposures: Chronicles of the Radiation Age by Catherine Caufield. (Harper & Row). RA 569 C38 1989.

Since the discovery of X-rays in 1895, mankind has been tantalized and terrified by the phenomenon of radiation. Caufield's study is a history of worldwide efforts to establish health and safety regulations governing the use of this lethal technology. Her chronicle of radiation use and protection is a story of trial and error, sometimes followed by reform and sometimes not.

Despite its increased use as an industrial and medical tool, many questions about the effects of radiation remain unanswered. This thorough and well-documented book probes the most pressing. Chief among them: do scientists and technical experts really have enough knowledge to establish adequate use of standards? Are our demands for all of the benefits and none of the risks realistic? And how well are we protecting ourselves and our descendants?

Peterson's Directory of College Accommodations: The Low-Cost Alternative for Travelers in the United States and Canada by Jay Norman. (Peterson's Guides, Inc.). REF TX 907.2 N67 1989.

If you are looking for an alternative to the Holiday Inn on the local business strip, keep this guide in your glove compartment. After exploring a number of campuses and finding them "beautiful and comfortable," the author decided to compile a directory of colleges and universities that provide lodging for travelers. The information was gathered through questionnaires sent to institutions in the United States and Canada.

Over 170 entries are arranged by state and include information on when rooms are available, the rates and facilities (cafeteria, laundry room, sports center, etc.), and whom to contact for reservations.

Each profile has a brief description of the campus and the town in which it is located, highlighting points of interest. Travelers of any age, who want to economize and enjoy the atmosphere of a college town should consult this directory before they take to the road.

Tourism: The International Business by Robert Christie Mill. (Prentice Hall). G155 AIM52 1990.

This tourism textbook is written for the reader who is considering a career linked to the travel industry. The opening overview defines tourism, explaining how the system is organized as well as where, how and why people travel.

The intermediate chapters examine the benefits and pitfalls of developing a tourist destination and managing it successfully. Methods of data collection, preparation of areawide master plans and community strategies for funding are examined. The final chapters cover tourism marketing, focusing on promotion and distribution. The volume ends with optimistic predictions about trends in tourism, noting how changes in population, income, leisure time and consumer tastes will affect the business. All-in-all, the book is an adequate introduction to what will be one of the largest "industries" in the world by the year 2000.

The Great Dismal: A Carolinian's Swamp Memoir by Bland Simpson. (University of North Carolina Press). F 262 D7 S56 1990.

Carolinian Simpson invites you to meander with him along the slow moving canals of the Great Dismal Swamp, that remnant of wilderness straddling the border between Tidewater Virginia and North Carolina. This informally organized memoir is a mingling of personal reminiscences, history and folklore. Chapters are organized around the Swamp's natural resources and their development by man. Among the exploiters are George Washington and his successors who surveyed, drained, logged and farmed in the swamp. One section recounts the trials of runaway slaves who sought dubious refuge in the undergrowth.

The Great Dismal's natural beauty is described throughout the book. Accounts of the abundant bird and wildlife and the hunting traditions linked with them are among the many interesting anecdotes. This guide includes maps and archival illustrations and ends with an excellent list of "Selected Swamp Sources."

The Freeman File: An Index to Articles from the Richmond Times-Dispatch and the Richmond News Leader (Special Collections and Archives Department, University Library Services, Virginia Commonwealth University). Reference Microfilm Collection AL 21 R526 1989.

The "file" of 253 microfiche is an index to articles that appeared in two Richmond, Va., newspapers from the late 1920s to Oct. 1985. It consists of 150,000 typed notecards arranged by subject headings. The headings are names of people, locations and general topics such as agriculture and segregation. Short one- or two-line abstracts appear on the cards with the name, date and page of the newspaper. A special index of articles about World War II supplements the main file.

This set greatly improves access to historic information at the state and local level. The collection is housed in the microform cabinets near the west entrance of the reference room.

Among Stinehour customers are the American Antiquarian Society, the Fogg Art Museum, the Grolier Club, the John Carter Brown Library, the Metropolitan Museum, and the Pierpont Morgan Library.

Donor Lights Tennis Courts

An anonymous donor has made a gift of $100,000 to the College to provide lighting for the Anheuser-Busch Tennis Courts on campus.

"Lighting the Anheuser-Busch courts has been in the plans since they were built in 1978," said Millie West, associate director of athletics. "This gift will enable us to complete the project. The lighting will double the number of courts available for night and day play, thus benefiting the entire college community."

Through the Campaign for the Fourth Century, the college is seeking a total of $25 million for facilities construction and enhancement, equipment and campus beautification. The campaign has an overall goal of $150 million.

Brunaldi To Give Patterson Lecture In Undergraduate Mathematics

Richard Brunaldi, professor of mathematics at the University of Wisconsin, will give the 1990 Cissy Patterson Lecture in Undergraduate Mathematics.

Brunaldi will speak on "Finite Ramsey Theory: Complete Disorder is Impossible," at 2 p.m., Friday, Nov. 16 in Small 113. Funding for this talk has been provided through the generosity of the Cissy Patterson Trust, and is sponsored by the faculty of the department of mathematics.

Brunaldi received a Ph.D. from Syracuse University in 1964. He then spent one year at the National Bureau of Standards as a postdoctoral fellow. For the last 25 years he has been at the University of Wisconsin in Madison. In 1986 he was honored with the Chancellor's Teaching Award. His research interests are in discrete mathematics and matrix theory.

He is the author of the book Introductory Combinatorics, published in 1977 by the Elsevier/North Holland Publishing Company. He is co-author of Combinatorial Matrix Theory which will be published soon by the Cambridge University Press.

Machine That Reads To Sightless Acquired By Swem Library

Swem Library has acquired a new machine which allows blind and partially sighted people to read. The Kurzweil Reading Machine utilizes a sophisticated optical imaging system to scan printed matter and generates synthetic speech so that the machine actually "reads" to the user.

While early models had problems with their scanners and used speech that many people found difficult to understand, the newer readers are easy to use and feature clear, natural voices.

The reader uses a hand-held scanner and a keypad which allows the user to stop and start the speed and to control the speed. The new models allows selection from nine different male and female voices depending on the user's preference and even features a child's voice for young users.

The reader is available to the faculty, staff and students of the College.

For more information, contact Rick Ferraro, assistant to the Dean of Students, James Blair Hall 211, ext. 12510.

Alcohol Awareness
