Samuel M. Walton Named Recipient Of 1990 Business School Medallion

Samuel M. Walton, co-founder, chairman and chief executive officer of Wal-Mart, Inc., has been named the recipient of the 1990 Business Medallion according to Alfred N. Page, dean of the School of Business Administration.

The medallion is awarded annually to a business leader who exemplifies "the highest standards of professionalism and integrity in the practice of management." Recipients are chosen by the faculty of the business school. The medallion was delivered recently to Walton at his home in Bentonville, Ark.

"I am pleased, on behalf of the faculty of the School of Business Administration and the College of William and Mary to make this award to Sam Walton, whose humble manner and firm belief in human values has marked the retail industry with one of the finest operations of the century," said Page.

A citation accompanying the medallion applauded Walton's success in creating Wal-Mart, "one of the best-managed companies in the world. Your common touch, attention to people, and passion for simplicity exemplify a style that is all too rare in today's workplace." The citation further stated that Walton's homespun, self-made, plain-spoken style and his reputation for being a shrewd bargainer and excellent manager undoubtedly paved the way for his success.

A native of Oklahoma, Walton is a graduate of the University of Missouri. After service in the U.S. Army during World War II, he became a franchise owner and operator with Ben Franklin Stores. In 1962, Walton took his philosophy of "everyday low pricing" from his first Wal-Mart store in Rogers, Ark., and built a nationwide chain of more than 1,000 stores located throughout the Mississippi Valley and Gulf Coast states.

In 1988, Walton was named the nation's most admired retailer by Fortune Magazine and was the recipient of the NMRA's Retailer of the Decade Award. In 1989, Wal-Mart was ranked as the number five retail chain in the nation by Fortune, and today continues its strong performance on Wall Street and in the world of retailing.

Friends of Library To Hear Collectors

Ralph Poriss of Williamsburg, a former businessman turned collector, and his wife, Gerry, a former school teacher turned collector's researcher, will share their insights on the Civil War in a program titled, "A Yankee Collects," at 7 p.m. Wednesday, Jan. 23 in the Zollinger Museum of Swem Library. The program is sponsored by the College's Friends of the Library. Admission is free.

Mr. and Mrs. Poriss have loaned items to Swem Library from the papers of Col. Richard F. Thompson of the 12th New Jersey Volunteers for an exhibit which is on display in the Zollinger Museum through March 1.

The Porisses are working on a book about Col. Thompson, who made one of the decisive military maneuvers at the Battle of Gettysburg and after the war practiced law in Chicago and became a state senator.

Ralph Poriss, former president of R.G. Poriss Enterprises, Inc., of Phoenix, Ariz., became fascinated with the Civil War as a boy in his native Connecticut. Mrs. Poriss does research and lends "advice and consent" on the couple's purchases.

Their interest in the Civil War, Mr. Poriss explains, is focused on the fighting men and officers and their personal experiences. They have no interest, says Poriss, in strategy or armchair generals who were not actually engaged in battle.

In Memory of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.

The Rev. William S. "Pete" Parks, Baptist campus minister, will deliver remarks.

The campus event to mark the birthday of the late civil rights leader is sponsored by the Black Student Organization, the Minority Affairs Committee of the Student Association and Campus Ministries United.

The reception is planned as a continuing opportunity for increased interaction between the faculty of the College and members of the Board of Visitors and the Board of the Endowment Association.

PBK Plans Meeting On Current Education Issues

Career Exploration Day Set Jan. 26

Pianist Litwin Opens Ewell Concert Series

Phi Beta Kappa Plans Jan. 18 Conference To Discuss Public Education Improvements

Phi Beta Kappa, the premier national honor society which espouses academic excellence, is coming back to its roots in Williamsburg, Va., to find a plan of action for improving public education at all levels.

"Phi Beta Kappa and Virginia's Public Schools: Today and Tomorrow," is a one-day conference scheduled for Friday, Jan. 18 in Phi Beta Kappa Memorial Hall. The scholastic honor society which now has a membership nationwide of more than 300,000 in 240 chapters, was established by students of the College in Williamsburg in 1776.

Dr. Otis A. Singletary, PBK president, will open the meeting.

Speakers will include Harold Hodgkinson, Institute for Educational Leadership, Washington, D.C., and author of Virginia the State and Its Education System.

A response to Hodgkinson's remarks will be made by Dr. Joseph Spagnolo Jr., state superintendent of public instruction.

Luncheon speaker will be the Hon. James W. Dyke Jr., Secretary of Education for Virginia.

The afternoon will be given over to small group discussions.

Representatives from the PBK Society's national headquarters in Washington, D.C., the twelve chapters of PBK in Virginia, PBK Associates, Virginia's Department of Education and national institutions will participate in the deliberations.

Among the institutions represented will be the National Endowment for the Humanities; the Council on Basic Education; the Virginia Chamber of Commerce; the National Honor Society, PBK's high school counterpart; the Institute for Educational Leadership; the National Science Foundation; the Association of American Colleges; the National Faculty; the Virginia Foundation for the Humanities; and the Virginia Council for Social Studies.

The conference will be hosted by Alpha of Virginia chapter of Phi Beta Kappa at the College which will also hold a reception for participants at the close of their deliberations.

Phi Beta Kappa, said its secretary, Douglas W. Foard, is holding this meeting in Williamsburg in response to a resolution from its governing council, which has urged PBK to take a stand for excellence at all levels of American education.

Although local and alumni chapters have initiated programs in some areas of the country, the national organization had not been deeply involved, he added.

Foard said that it seemed appropriate to come back to the place where PBK began to address the question of a national resolution to help education.

"Basically we'll be asking two questions in our deliberations," said Foard, "What is being done today and what might we do in the future, in Virginia and across the country."

Foard says he doesn't expect a detailed plan to emerge from the meeting on Jan. 18, but it will be a start, he said, and a report to the membership will be made through the Key Reporter, the PBK publication.

"Also," said Foard, "we hope this meeting will not only point up what PBK should be doing but also what similar organizations can do to help education. And we are going to be looking at education at all levels from the elementary through university level. We have a vested interest in expanding our membership of collegiate scholars but we cannot do that by ignoring elementary and secondary education."

John Marshall Papers Receive $25,000 Grant

The Judicial Conference of the United States' Committee on the Bicentennial of the Constitution has awarded a grant of $25,000 to the Papers of John Marshall, a project co-sponsored by the College and the Institute of Early American History and Culture.

"This grant provides important supplemental financial support at a time of retrenchment in both the public and private sectors," said Charles F. Hobson, editor of the Marshall Papers. "It will help to offset anticipated reductions in state and federal funding during the next several years," Hobson added.

Hobson says this grant will be applied to the preparation of Volume 7, which will consist of Marshall's correspondence, papers and selected judicial opinions from 1807 to 1815. Volume 6 (1800-1807) has just been published by the University of North Carolina Press. The staff of the Marshall Papers includes Suzanne E. Coffman, assistant editor, and Laura S. Gwilliam, editorial assistant.

Created by act of Congress in 1922, the Judicial Conference of the United States is the principal policy making body concerned with the administration of the United States Courts. Its membership includes the chief justice of the United States as presiding officer and judges of the circuit and district courts.

The conference operates through a network of committees, one of which is the Committee on the Bicentennial of the Constitution. Chairman of the Committee on the Bicentennial is Judge Damon J. Keith, U.S. Court of Appeals, Sixth Circuit. Other members include former Chief Justice Warren E. Burger and Associate Justice Harry A. Blackmun.

Exhibit Showcases College Talent

The photographic work of two members of the college community is currently on exhibit through Feb. 2 at the Twentieth Century Gallery, 219 North Boundary Street.

Willa Chambers, formerly of the Development Office staff, has said she goes "where my eye takes me" to find impressionistic images in nature. She also uses multiple images for unusual painting effects in her photographs.

Roger Sherman, professor of theatre and speech emeritus, carefully crafts his images through the lens of his camera, injecting personal qualities which otherwise go unseen or unrealized.

Also in the exhibition is the work of Gary Friedhaber of Toano, who has won awards for his moody, almost abstract close-ups of ordinary objects.

The Twentieth Century Gallery is open Tuesday through Saturday, 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. and on Sunday from noon to 5 p.m.

Black Leadership Development Conference Draws 670 Students, Professionals For Two-Day Meeting

by Elaine Justice
Director of Public Information

Dynamic speakers, intensive workshops and new insights were the order of the day for over 670 black college and university students and minority affairs professionals who gathered at the Campus Center Jan. 10-12 for the College's Fifth National Black Student Leadership Development Conference.

This year's conference, which explored "The Art and Science of Bridge Building," addressed topics such as ethno-violence on campuses, managing in a multicultural environment, absence of black males in higher education, and mentoring and mentorship.

Punctuating the smaller sessions were a number of prominent speakers, each of whom approached the conference theme in a different way. Opening speaker Bishop George A. Stallings Jr., founder of the Imani Temple African-American Catholic Congregation, based in Washington, D.C., said that in order to be effective bridge builders, African-Americans need to "create a sense of ownership and control" over their own lives and "need to take full ownership over our destiny."

One way to do that, said Bishop Stallings, is to gain access to the corridors of power in America. Although blacks are gaining access to the corridors of political power, "we don't have access to the corridors of economics," he said.

Dr. Frank Matthews, publisher of Black Issues in Higher Education, told the group that his generation "has done a poor job during our watch. If we hadn't, we wouldn't be in the position we are in now." Referring to the cycle of violence within America's black community and around the world, he told the group of young student leaders that they "have the opportunity to rescue us from annihilation, obliteration and extermination."

To emphasize his point, Matthews cited incarceration statistics of black males between the ages of 18 and 34, infant mortality rates, an alarming increase in the rate of AIDS among young black women, and declines in numbers of black Ph.D.s and black males in higher education.

Dr. Asa Hilliard III, Fuller E. Callaway Professor of Urban Education at Georgia State University, challenged his audience to know their own history and culture. He cited specific scholars and books that are essential information for black students, but are often ignored in college curricula. "You must know the analysis of our people," he said as he took listeners from the history of classical Egyptian civilization through the Jim Crow years of 20th-century America.

"It is more obvious than ever that the need for such a conference is great," said organizer Carroll Hardy, associate vice president for student affairs. "I was particularly excited by all of the presentations. I think that students learned some things and I was pleased that they had the opportunity to see and talk to those leaders they consider important. I wanted the students to move from a kind of apathy to the realm of taking positive action."

Capriole Concerts Feb. 1-3 To Feature World-Class Artists

The second concert of the 1990-91 Capriole season will feature intimate solo songs and chamber duets performed by world-class artists Derek Lee Ragin, countertenor; and James F. Weaver, bass baritone.

The ensemble-in-residence has titled the concert "The Origins of Bel Canto." Performances are scheduled at 8:15 p.m., Friday, Feb. 1 in Richmond at the University of Richmond's North Recital Hall; at 8:15 p.m., Saturday, Feb. 2 in Williamsburg at the Williamsburg Regional Library Theatre and at 3 p.m., Sunday, Feb. 3 at the Chrysler Museum in Norfolk.

Admission to all concerts is $12,$8 for students. Tickets are available at Beethoven's Inn, 467 Merrimac Trail, 229-7069, and at the Theatre Connection, Festival Marketplace, Route 60, 221-0907.

Ragin has performed widely throughout Europe and the U.S. Much in demand for baroque opera, he is equally known for his performances of works by Britten and Bernstein. This summer he will appear with the Monteverdi Choir and Orchestra and John Eliot Gardiner, twice at the Salzburg Festival and at the London Proms, singing Orfeo in Gluck's "Orfeo ed Euridice," and the role of Speranza in Monteverdi's "Orfeo." He will also tour Israel with Helmut Rilling and the Israel Philharmonic.

Weaver is best known as an oratorio soloist. Important recent engagements include appearances with the Smithsonian Chamber Orchestra and Chorus in performances of J. S. Bach's "St. John's Passion" and the "Christmas Oratorio," which were broadcast on National Public Radio. Weaver is one of the original members of a new ensemble, American Bach Soloists, based in Marin County, Calif. Accompanying the singers, along with Gayla Johnson, harpsichordist and artistic director of Capriole, will be Capriole member Wayne Moss, viola da gamba; and guest artist Howard Bass, lute.

For more information or to make reservations call 220-1248.

Pianist Litwin To Open Ewell Concert Series Jan. 24
