SSPP Names Harris President-Elect

James F. Harris

James F. Harris, Haserot Professor of Philosophy and chair of the philosophy department, was elected president-elect of the Southern Society for Philosophy and Psychology at its recent annual meeting in Atlanta. The Society is one of the largest regional professional groups in the country with over 800 members. Regular members are from not only the southeastern United States but also from the mid-west and mid-Atlantic states (Kansas, Michigan and Pennsylvania).

Harris has been a member of the Society for over 20 years. He was winner of the Junior Award in 1969, given for the best paper at the annual meeting of the Society presented by a person who had obtained the Ph.D. degree within the last five years. He has presented more than a dozen papers at meetings of the society in the areas of epistemology and the philosophy of language.

Harris served on the program committee twice and also served two terms on the Council of the Society from 1983 to 1986 and again from 1987 to 1990.

Harris joined the faculty of the philosophy department in 1974. He was named Haserot Professor of Philosophy in 1984. He received B.A. and M.A. degrees from the University of Georgia and his doctorate from Vanderbilt University.

Harris is currently editing a collection of original papers in the philosophy of religion which will be published by Martinus Nijhoff under the title Logic, God and Metaphysics. He is also currently working on a book manuscript with the working title of The Limits of Relativism.

An environmental activist, Harris is a member of the Chesapeake Bay Foundation and has worked on projects with the Environmental Defense Fund. He is looking forward to participating again this year in Earth Day teach-in programs at the Virginia Living Museum. Harris has been a regular participant since the Museum's first program in 1970.

Evans Chosen Steiger Congressional Fellow

C. Lawrence Evans, assistant professor of government, has been named the third William A. Steiger Congressional Fellow by the American Political Science Association (APSA). The fellowship is awarded each year to an outstanding political scientist or journalist through a national competition.

C. Lawrence Evans

As the William A. Steiger Congressional Fellow, Evans will participate in APSA's Congressional Fellowship Program, which includes political scientists, journalists, health policy professionals and federal government executives who have been selected through a rigorous national competition. The Fellows spend 10 months working closely with members of Congress and congressional committees as legislative assistants and attending seminars and lectures by experts on the political process. Evans says he has not made a decision about what office he would like to work in next year.

The fellowship program honors the memory of the late William Steiger, a Republican who represented the Sixth District of Wisconsin from 1966 until his untimely death in 1978. During his service in Congress, Representative Steiger was a member of the Congressional Fellowship program's advisory committee.

Alumni of the program include university presidents, deans and professors; newspaper and magazine publishers, editors and reporters; high ranking executives in the federal bureaucracy, including Richard Cheney, the current Secretary of Defense; as well as congressmen and congressional staff aides.

Evans, who joined the faculty in 1987, is author of a new book, Leadership in Committee: A Comparative Analysis of Leadership Behavior in the United States Senate. He has contributed to several journals including the Political Science Quarterly, Journal of Politics, Comparative Political Studies and the European Journal of Political Research. His comments on both national and state policy have been sought by the media, including The Christian Science Monitor and the Associated Press.

Evans was a research analyst for the U.S. Department of Justice Antitrust Division in 1982 and spent the 1985-86 year as a Research Fellow at The Brookings Institution. He was winner of the 1985 Hartley Fellowship awarded by the Brookings.

Departments

Classical Studies

Lewis W. Leadbeater, professor, has published an article titled "Euripidean Elements in Giraudoux's Electre in Classical and Modern Literature" 11 (2) (1991).

John Oakley, chair/associate professor, has been awarded a fellowship by the Alexander von Humboldt Foundation to spend next year in Wurzburg, Germany. Oakley will continue his work on the Achilles Painter. He has also recently published two articles, "A New Chalcidian Vase with the Departure of Amphiaraios," in Akten des III. Internationalen Kongresses für klassische Archäologie, Berlin 1988 (Mainz 1990): 527-9; and "Hylas," in the Lexicon Iconographicum Mythologiae Classicae (LIMC): V, 574-9 and 396-9, and a book review of A. Lezzi-Hafter, Der Eretria-Maler (Mainz 1988) in the Classical Review 40 (1990): 420-21.

Oakley won his first Humboldt Foundation grant in 1988 to study the painters and paintings on vases during the Greek Classical period.

Oakley worked specifically on the Achilles Painter who was, says Oakley, "the classical painter par excellence, because his drawing exhibits better than any other artist's the characteristics we consider to be symptomatic of the classical style." The Achilles Painter decorated vases between 460 and 430 B.C. in the black-figure, red-figure and white-ground techniques and takes his name from a red-figure amphora in the Vatican, which has the figure of Achilles on the front.

The Humboldt Foundation was established in 1860 under the board of trustees of the Prussian Academy of Science in memory of the naturalist Alexander von Humboldt.

Modern Languages and Literatures

"Modernism's Accidental Tourists: Modernist Travel Literature and the Theme of Immigration" by Professor Howard Fraser, is the lead article published in the current issue of Journal of Interdisciplinary Literary Studies/Cuadernos Interdisciplinarios de Estudios Literarios. The article focuses on the social turmoil associated with the theme of uprootedness brought about by the great waves of immigration at the turn of the 20th century.

Music

Dale Cockrell, chair, has been awarded the Irving Lowens Award by the Sonneck Society for American Music.

The Sonneck Society is the national professional society for scholars of American music. The Lowens award is made annually for distinguished scholarship in American music and is generally understood to be given for the best publication on American music in a given publication year.

Cockrell was cited for Excelsior: Journals of the Hutchinson Family Singers, 1842-1846 (Pendragon Press, 1989).

Faculty Party Planned May 1

The Faculty Club invites all members of the faculty and administration to a party from 5 to 9 p.m., Wednesday, May 1 at the Lake Matoaka Shelter.

There will be barbecue and fixings, beer, wine and music by The Katatonics.

Tickets are $10 each. No advance reservations required. No membership requirements apply.

Of Cockrell's work the awards committee wrote: "Dale Cockrell, in his perceptive work with the journals of the Hutchinson Family Singers in the 1890s, has achieved a skillful blending of the roles of editor and annotator. By painstakingly combing contemporary sources, he has illuminated a critical area in America's musical life—the period between Jackson and Lincoln, including the controversial Mexican War, which is still relatively obscure today. Many of the public figures, terms, customs, movements and institutions, indeed the very texture of our musical life, are unfamiliar to us. Cockrell's Excelsior provides the explanation they deserve. The period was alive with issues and concerns that proved ultimately to be of critical importance to American cultural history. We can now understand the events themselves, and we can now honor the role the Hutchinson Family Singers in their unfolding, thanks to Cockrell's admirable clarity and perspective."

The awards committee was chaired by D. W. Krummel and included Daniel Kingman and Katherine Preston.

William DeFotis, assistant professor, participated in the annual festival of contemporary music at Western Illinois University March 18-19. His new piece for electronic tape, titled "Breaking Up Immediately Recognizable Units of Significance Is Hard to Do," was presented.

Philosophy

Dorothy Coleman, associate professor, recently attended the Pacific Division of the American Philosophical Association in San Francisco where she commented on a paper titled "Duties of Beneficence: In Defense of Common Sense," given by Richard Eggerman.

George Harris, associate professor, and Professor James Harris attended the recent meeting of the Southern Society for Philosophy and Psychology in Atlanta where George Harris delivered a paper titled "Surrogacy, Patriarchy and Contracts."

Computer Center

A paper titled "Technical Tips/Pitfalls to Avoid in the Implementation of HRS," by Susan Walker has been accepted for presentation at the Information Association/HRS Users Conference in Los Angeles, Oct. 23-26.

Walker is a senior programmer/analyst with the administrative development group in the Computer Center. She was the programmer responsible for the technical installation of Information Associates' portion of the new Human Resource System that was implemented Jan. 1990. The paper deals with some of the technical problems that were encountered with installing the software.

Board Of Visitors Receives In-depth Report On Budget Prospects For 1991-92

The Board of Visitors heard reports on a variety of issues at its meeting April 11-12, including an update on potential revisions to the College's Statement of Rights and Responsibilities, a discussion of undergraduate admission and an in-depth report on the College's budget prospects for 1991-92.

Vice President for Student Affairs Samuel Sadler told the Board's Committee on Student Affairs about the College's efforts, through a recently appointed committee, to examine the Statement of Rights and Responsibilities section on sexual assault. Among the proposals being considered, Sadler said, are creating a separate section on sexual assault in the student handbook, having administrative hearings on sexual assault cases handled jointly by a male and a female administrator, and changing the mandatory penalties in such cases.

Jean Scott, dean of undergraduate admission, reported to the committee that the number of undergraduate applicants increased by about 3 percent this year and that the academic qualifications of applicants continues to be very high. Scott said the College is aiming to admit about 1,200 freshmen next fall, a figure that reflects the decrease in numbers of high school graduates statewide.

During a meeting of the the Committee on Academic Affairs, faculty liaison chair John McGlennon said the faculty is currently formulating a policy on optional retirement plans such as TIAA-CREF and others. The faculty will propose a policy on how the state ought to address the discrepancy in retirement plan contributions between VSRS and the optional plans. He also reported on a SCHEV survey being conducted among about 1,200 faculty statewide on how the budget cuts are expected to affect their workloads.

The Board's Committee on Athletic Policy voted to recommend that the College join the Yankee Conference in football beginning next fall, a move that would make W&M the ninth member. The conference would include recent rivals such as the University of Delaware and Villanova University, while allowing the Tribe to continue to play long-time in-state opponents such as the University of Richmond and Virginia Military Institute.

In a report to the full Board on Friday, President Paul Verkuil reported that, despite ongoing budget cuts, the College is committed to maintaining and improving its core program. He added that in the long term, "the state must look at its commitment to higher education," noting that current state spending per student ranks Virginia 43rd in the nation. Verkuil also warned that recent gains in faculty salaries at W&M could also be set back by the cuts.

Verkuil noted that W&M faculty and students continue to reap honors placing them at the forefront of academic achievement. Two professors who "reflect the depth and quality of teaching at this institution," Gerald Johnson and Virginia Kerns, were named outstanding professors of the year by the State Council of Higher Education for Virginia (SCHEV). He also mentioned achievements of David Kulp and Julie Richardson, who received Fulbright Scholarships for next year, and Student Association President Laura Flippin, who has won a Truman Award.

Commenting on the wave of publicity surrounding the issue of "political correctness" on college campuses, Verkuil said W&M "is neither politically correct nor politically incorrect. Let's call ourselves politically accurate," he said. "We try to educate students in the traditions of Western culture but at the same time remain open to new ideas."

"We're not afraid of diversity or affirmative action," Verkuil said. "We're committed to maintaining an atmosphere of open inquiry and will not allow anyone to close debate." On the issue of civility, the President said that both faculty and students at the College are committed to the value of treating each other with "respect and understanding."

Also reporting to the Board, Roy Pearson, director of the College's Bureau of Business Research, gave a presentation on the status of the state's economy and a short-term forecast on income and consumer spending, both of which should return to more normal levels in the months ahead. Paul Forch of the Attorney General's office gave Board members a brief presentation on major features of the state's Freedom of Information law.

The Buildings and Grounds Committee heard reports on current campus construction from William F. Merck, vice president of administration and finance. He said that ground will be broken soon on the new Child Care Center, which is expected to open in the fall. Contractor for the project is Armada/Hoffler, which had the low bid of $427,000. The center is being built with private funds. Also under construction are Matoaka Art Studio, which has a projected completion date of Aug. 1991 and is 40 percent complete; the graduate residence complex adjacent to the law school, expected to open in June of 1992; and the renovation of Washington Hall, which is about 80 percent complete.

Faculty appointments approved by the Board include: Hsing K. Cheng, assistant professor of business administration; Robert M. Fulmer, W. Brooks George Professor of Business Administration; and Michael D. Topper, instructor of economics.

Administrative and professional appointments include: Page Hayhurst, assistant director of development and alumni affairs, Marshall-Wythe School of Law; James M. Patton, associate dean, School of Education; and Trina P. Thomas, head women's basketball coach, Department of Athletics.

Tenure was granted to: Jayne Barnard, associate professor of law; Dorothy P. Coleman, associate professor of philosophy; Chi-Kwong Li, assistant professor of mathematics; Abdul-Karim Rafiq, professor of history; and Michael E. Sieracki, assistant professor of marine science.

Faculty promotions from assistant to associate professor include: Chi-Kwong Li, mathematics; James E. Moliterno, law; Alemande G. Selassie, law; and Michael Sieracki, marine science. Promotions from associate professor to professor include: Joanne M. Braxton, English; John W. Conlee, English; Virginia Kerns, anthropology; Linda A. Malone, law; and Joyce Van Tassel-Baska, education. Glenn E. Coven was designated the Mills E. Godwin Professor of Law.

Nicholas DiProspero Awarded 1991 Llanso-Sherman Research Scholarship

Nicholas DiProspero, a rising senior who plans a career in medical research, has been awarded the 1991 Llanso-Sherman Research Scholarship, which will enable him to spend the summer with one of the leading researchers in the field of paraplegia.

Established in 1986 by Peter Neufeld '58 of New York, the scholarship honors the memory of two of Neufeld's college friends, Harland Llanso and Alan Clarke Sherman, who started college with him; both died as young men. Llanso died as the result of a series of heart attacks that he didn't have the energy to fight because of the debilitating effects of diabetes. Sherman died after a gallant fight against Lou Gehrig's disease.

The scholarship award is intended to assist a rising senior at the College who has indicated an interest in medical research to undertake an independent research program in one of the pre-medical sciences during the summer between the junior and senior years.

DiProspero will spend the summer working with Dr. Lloyd Guth, research professor in biology and former chairman of the department of anatomy at the University of Maryland School of Medicine in Baltimore. Guth is currently working in the field of paraplegic under a multi-year NIH grant. In 1989 he was awarded the Javits Neuroscience Investigator Award from NIH for his work in the field of paraplegia. He has worked for many years to find a way to reverse the paralysis that results from spinal cord injuries.

DiProspero will continue research started this year as an honors project. He has been assessing whether central nervous regeneration can be stimulated by treatment with agents that stimulate release of cytokines from macrophages and astrocytes.

The descriptive information obtained in the present study on the interaction between macrophages and neurons may provide a basis for future predoctoral studies assessing the molecular basis of these interactions by use of the advanced techniques of molecular biology, suggested Dr. Guth.

"DiProspero has developed all of the technical expertise essential to the execution of this research program. His abilities have been demonstrated by his successful research performance during the present semester. As a result of his thorough knowledge of the literature of nerve regeneration and his understanding of the experimental approach to analysis of neural function, he has been able to make meaningful suggestions for modifying the experimental design, and testing additional treatment modalities. These suggestions have been incorporated into the proposed experimental protocols," says Guth.

"His interest has been in the experimental analysis of neural function that has been stimulated by his formal studies in biology and by his laboratory experiences. His long-term goal is to obtain a Ph.D. in immunology and embark on a teaching and research career at the medical and graduate school level." DiProspero plans to attend the Robert Wood School of Medicine at Rutgers University.

A Garden State Distinguished Scholar when he entered William and Mary, DiProspero was captain of the varsity gymnastics team until sidelined by injury. He hopes to rejoin the team next year. He is a member of Psi Upsilon fraternity and the Catholic Student Association. He is a graduate of Cherry Hill High School in New Jersey where he was a member of the Cum Laude Society and an Eagle Scout.

Board Approves Tuition, Fees For 1991-92

The cost of attending William and Mary next year will rise 4.7 percent for in-state students and 9.3 percent for out-of-state students, according to rates set April 12 by the Board of Visitors.

The cost, which includes tuition, fees, room and board, will increase from $7,142 to $7,476 for in-state students, and from $12,992 to $14,196 for out-of-state students.

Most of the cost increase was driven by a surcharge on tuition and fees to partially offset expected budget reductions in 1991-92, according to Sam E. Jones, director of planning and budget.

State funding reductions totaled approximately $4 million during the current fiscal year, and could increase to $8 million during 1991-92, said Jones. For 1991-92, the Governor and General Assembly have allowed the College to recover approximately $3.4 million in the form of increased tuition.

Jones said that the additional resources will be used to minimize the impact of budget reductions on academic programs. "In the next year's budget, funding for library materials is restored to original 1990-91 levels. While funding for full- and part-time faculty is reduced, the expected loss of class sections is about one-fourth of what it would have been," he said. Funding support for supplies and materials in the instructional budget also will increase 10 percent.

"In sum, we have repositioned the funds that we have to further our educational mission," said Jones. "Instruction as a percentage of our total budget has risen from 55 percent last year to 58 percent this year."

Tuition increases alone, however, "do not preclude the need for the College to meet the budget reduction targets of the commonwealth," said Jones. "As a result, additional budget reductions in administrative and support areas are occurring."

Charges for room and board will remain the same next year. "In order to keep the total cost to students down as much as possible, it was important to hold the line on room, board and other fee-supported activities," said Jones. Since about 80 percent of undergraduates live on campus, total cost figures are the most significant to students, he added.

For law students, tuition will be $50 higher than the figures for undergraduate students. For graduate business students, tuition is $300 above figures listed for undergraduates.

Tuition for part-time Virginia undergraduates and graduate students (non-law and non-business) will increase from $105 to $120 per semester hour; and from $280 to $320 per semester hour for out-of-state students. Part-time Virginia law and graduate business students' tuition will rise from $120 to $135 per semester hour; while out-of-state will increase from $300 to $345.

Band Invited To Susan Constant Launching

In a commissioning ceremony at 2 p.m., Friday, April 26, the Susan Constant will officially be placed into service as the flagship of the Jamestown Settlement fleet and a major exhibit at the living history museum.

The Susan Constant, a re-creation of the largest of the three ships that brought America's first permanent English colonists to Virginia in 1607, was built at Jamestown Settlement and replaces an earlier replica which was retired last year.

Keynote speaker for the commissioning is Peter C. Stanford, president of the National Maritime Historical Society, based in Croton-on-Hudson, N.Y.

Stanford, head of the society since 1970, has led efforts to preserve a number of historic ships. He was founding president of the South Street Seaport Museum in New York.

Music for the commissioning service will be performed by the William and Mary Concert Band under the direction of Laura Rexroth.

Following the ceremony, at approximately 3 p.m., visitors will be invited to board and explore the Susan Constant. As a museum exhibit, the ship will be open daily from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., beginning April 27.

Newport News Shipbuilding Commits $300,000 To The Campaign For the Fourth Century

Newport News Shipbuilding, a Tenneco Company, has made a commitment of $300,000 as part of its comprehensive support to the College and the Campaign for the Fourth Century.

The majority of the funds will be used to establish an endowment, the income from which will be used to meet the most pressing needs of the School of Business Administration. A $50,000 portion of the commitment will endow a lectureship in manufacturing and production at the business school.

In recognition of the company's continuing support, the Graduate School of Business Administration's Executive MBA classroom in the newly renovated Blow Memorial Hall will be named in honor of Newport News Shipbuilding.

Begun in 1986, the executive MBA program is an intensive 20-month program taught primarily on weekends for professionals with substantial management experience. Edward J. Campbell, president and CEO of Newport News Shipbuilding, has been an active proponent of the program since its inception. The company has enrolled two or three employees in each executive MBA class.

"Newport News Shipbuilding, which has distinguished itself as an international leader in the shipbuilding field, has a strong commitment to continuing education," said Alfred N. Page, dean of the business school. In addition to providing continuous support for William and Mary and its School of Business Administration, Newport News Shipbuilding was instrumental in the establishment of the executive MBA program and to date has sponsored more executive MBA students than any other employer."

Model UN Group Receives 'Distinguished' Delegation Designation

The College's Model United Nations group that participated in the National Model United Nations Conference in New York City, March 26-30, has been designated a "Distinguished" delegation.

Over 140 teams from around the country participated in the conference and William and Mary's distinction places it among the top 10 delegations.

The group's success is all the more impressive in light of the difficult assignment, which was to represent Malawi, a small African nation, which is one of the 10 poorest countries in the world. Usually awards go to schools representing larger countries with higher political profiles in international affairs.

During the five days of the competition, delegates representing the various countries meet in several simulated UN committees, such as the General Assembly, the Economic and Social Council and the Security Council. In these committees delegates make statements, caucus/negotiate and vote upon resolutions.

Members of the William and Mary delegation included Karen Beyer, Mike Chadwick, Dan Chase, Franca Davila, Arash Farahvashi, Eric Hall (head delegate), Luke Haynes, Vice Indelicato, Josh Katz, John Kile, Ali Korangy, Craig Krimbill, Anna Lawson, Henny Moaveni, Ashley Miller, Scott Pasternack, Don Purka, Vivek Reddy, Rich Smith and Tiffany Williamson.

The group's faculty adviser was Bartram S. Brown, assistant professor of government. The Model UN group on campus is organized by the International Relations Club.

Dzura and Kamens Do Well In National Tournament

The season ended successfully for debaters with two teams competing in the Cross Examination Debate Association's National Tournament at Western Washington University. Jason Jones and Danny Green were 4-4 in competition among 212 teams from across the country. This sophomore team completed an impressive season, which included three appearances in final rounds.

The second team was composed of Jeremy Kamens, a junior, and Ana Dzura, a sophomore. The national tournament was their first time together as a team, and they advanced to the round of 64 by winning six of eight preliminary rounds. They were eliminated by Southern Illinois University in the triple octofinals.

Dzura and Kamens' only two losses in the preliminary rounds were to UCLA and Kansas State. Ironically, these were the two teams that met in the final round.

Debate coach Patrick Micken was one of the judges selected for the final round panel where he found himself in the minority; Kansas State won the national championship on a 4-3 decision.

Campus Interviews Scheduled For Minority Internship Program

Ventures Based International Ltd., a research and development organization based in Glen Allen, Va., will be interviewing on campus April 24 and 25 for the Minority Internship Linkage Program for the High-Tech Space Industry, which links minority academia with the space industry.

Applicants should possess skills in computer programming, data processing, information systems analysis, engineering, scientific research, mathematics/analysis, information systems management and data base management.

Computer science, mathematics and physics majors are encouraged to place a resume in the VBI pre-selection envelope in Blow Hall 134 by 3 p.m., Friday, April 19. Interns will work at NASA in Hampton.

Information on VBI is in the Employer Research Files in the Career Library, Blow Hall 124.

Bibliographer/Information Services Librarian

Portici: Portrait of a Middling Plantation in Piedmont Virginia by Kathleen A. Parker and Jacqueline L. Hernigle (Occasional Report #3, Regional Archaeology Program, National Park Service) Government Documents I 29.14/2:3.

The Portici Plantation site is within the boundaries of the Manassas National Battlefield Park which is located to the west of Fairfax, Va. This archaeological study of the location was undertaken to assess the eligibility of the plantation complex for nomination to the National Register of Historic Places. The resulting 397-page document records in great detail the archival and archaeological methodology used to explore the area.

The report establishes the historical and social context of the homestead, outlines the archaeological methodology used in its exploration and describes the architecture common to the period. Much of the study is devoted to analyzing the cultural materials excavated at the site and drawing implications about the lives of the people who used the artifacts.

Those involved in cultural resource management in the state should find this intensive study of a frontier piedmont plantation a useful tool.

Rolling Stone Magazine: The Uncensored History by Robert Draper (Doubleday). PN 4900 R6D7 1990.

The index to this venture begins with "Abzug, Bella" and ends with "ZZ Top." In between are all the names and phrases that one might expect to find in a history of a magazine that became "the voice of the counter-culture." Begun in 1967 by Jann Wenner, a 21-year old Berkeley dropout, Rolling Stone was soon accepted as the vanguard of rock and roll journalism. Paradoxically, the publication written and read by the disaffected, was also a capitalist success that any baby-boom yuppie would envy.

Robert Draper tells us that his account is not so much a story about music and journalism as it is the story of a collaboration among exceptional and talented people who reflected and defined their times—both of which have changed. His book recalls and preserves a benchmark period in American culture.

Platte River Road Narratives: A Descriptive Bibliography of Travel Over the Great Central Overland Route to Oregon, California, Utah, Colorado, Montana, and Other Western States and Territories, 1812-1866 by Merrill J. Mattes. (University of Illinois Press). REF F 591 AIM37 1988.

"Upon arrival in Oregon, Martha gave birth to a child, carried in her womb across the continent." So reads one line in this compilation of citations for over 2,000 accounts of transcontinental treks. Mattes, a former Park Service employee spent seven years of his retirement finding, describing and evaluating "significant diaries, journals, letters and recollections of pre-railroad central overland travel."

The entries in this descriptive bibliography are grouped by year and then arranged in alphabetical order by the "emigrant author's" surname. Individual entries record the route and chronology, contain an excerpt from the text and show location codes for holding repositories. The compiler comments on each entry, assessing its value and supplying explanatory comments. This reference work makes accessible many unique and neglected primary sources.

Doubleday has recently published three novels with British bio-literary backdrops. The viewpoints in all of the books are those of attendants to the well-known. The first two, a doctor and a female servant who accompanied noted writers, actually lived. The third is an imagined heroine working as a maid in the home of an infamous fictional character.

The books are:

Lord Byron's Doctor by Paul West. PR 6073 E766L67 1989.

The confessions of Dr. John William Polidori, the young physician, who succored Byron and the Shelleys during their indulgences in Switzerland and Italy.

Lady's Maid by Margaret Forster (Available at the Williamsburg Regional Library).

The Elizabeth Barrett and Robert Browning love affair as observed and abetted by Miss Barrett's self-sacrificing maid, Elizabeth Wilson. The novel is based on materials that Margaret Forster accumulated while writing a biography of Elizabeth Barrett Browning.

Mary Reilly by Valerie Martin. PS 3563 A7295M37 1990.

The chilling discoveries of a dutiful servant girl who is enamored of her kind, gentlemanly master, Dr. Jekyll, and repulsed by the brutish attentions of his unsavory assistant, Edward Hyde.

Research Perspectives on the Graduate Preparation of Teachers, edited by Anita E. Woolfolk (Prentice Hall). LB 2372 E3R47 1989.

This essay collection is the first title in the Rutgers Symposium on Education series. The book will focus on timely educational issues from an interdisciplinary perspective.

Under debate is the question: "Are graduate programs for teacher preparation more likely than undergraduate programs to prepare highly qualified, competent, reflective professionals?" Although the answers proved inconclusive, due largely to a lack of empirical evidence, the arguments, pro and con, were enlightening.

Several trends do seem to be developing. These include: the shift to an emphasis on content area preparation rather than professional education for undergraduates, the emergence of "alternative route" programs by which individuals are able to begin teaching without taking traditional teacher-education courses and the introduction of fifth-year programs in which professional competence is gained through intensive, specialized training at the graduate level.

Whether any of these tactics will provide successful in adequately preparing teachers for the challenges of tomorrow's diverse classrooms remains to be seen.

You Just Don't Understand: Women and Men in Conversation by Deborah Tannen (William Morrow). HQ 734 T24 1990.

Tannen, a sociolinguist, delineates the gender-based differences in the conversational styles of men and women. She proceeds to show how these differences result in misunderstandings and frustrating exchanges that damage relationships. The vignettes she uses to illustrate her points would be familiar to anyone who has engaged in a less-than-successful conversation with the opposite sex, particularly within a marriage.

Tannen wants her readers to recognize the contrasting conversational modes of men and women, so that both parties can better understand one another and present their points of view in ways that are clear and acceptable. Her book contributes to closing not only the communication gap, but the gender gap as well.

Book Collecting: A Comprehensive Guide by Allen Ahearn (G.P. Putman's Sons). Z 987 A39 1989.

Book collecting for fun and profit would be an appropriate subtitle for this informative guide. In a straightforward style, the author provides practical advice for anyone who enjoys acquiring special books.

The introductory chapters discuss reasons to collect books, what books to collect and where to find them. The all important financial aspects of the undertaking are discussed in sections devoted to knowledgeable buying and explanations of how prices are established. The core of Book Collecting is a listing of 3,500 authors' first works and an estimate of their current retail prices.

Other helpful features are a list of authors who are most in demand at the present time and a description of the methods used by various publishers to indicate first editions. Ahearn emphasizes throughout that his observations are his own, but leaves little doubt that he knows what he is talking about.

Hayes Gift Recognized

Patrick Hayes was recognized for his numerous contributions to the College April 4 at the dedication of a new sculpture and fountain in the Wendy and Emery Reves Center for International Studies. Located in the Reves Center sunroom, the statue is titled "Frog Baby" and was designed by Edith Baretto Parsons, a native Virginian. The statue shows a young girl gleefully standing atop a sphere, a frog in each hand. Below her, four frogs send water into the fountain's basin. The gift is the latest from Hayes, whose generosity to the College has benefited the Joseph and Margaret Muscarelle Museum of Art, the Earl Gregg Swem Library, the fine arts department and the annual Writers' Festival.

Music Department Receives New Harpichord

The music department has a new harpsichord made by Robert Duffy of Indianapolis, Ind.

The new instrument is made in the style of a French instrument of the 17th century. It is also styled and decorated to suggest its origin was the south or central France where the influence was Italian. Instruments from Paris during that period had a decidedly Dutch influence, says Duffy.

Several types of wood are incorporated in the instrument including polar and bass wood. The sounding board is spruce.

Duffy, who works for an organ company in Indiana, maintains a workshop at home for harpsichords and furniture of the Queen Anne and colonial periods. Duffy who learned his trade at the the Hubbard Harpsichord Company in Waltham, Mass., also worked for a harpsichord maker in Boston before moving to Indianapolis.

Harpichord builder Robert Duffy watches Tom Marshall, lecturer in music, try out the new instrument.
