Task Force Meets Here Thursday

The public hearing by the Governor's Task Force on Substance Abuse and Sexual Assault on College Campuses, scheduled for 9:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. on Thursday, April 25, has been changed from Trinkle Hall to the Campus Center ballroom. This site is handicapped-accessible.

The Task Force has the specific duty of addressing two often interrelated problems on Virginia's college and university campuses: substance abuse (including alcohol and illegal drugs) and sexual assault. Task Force chairman is Secretary of Education for Virginia, James W. Dyke Jr.

Individuals wishing to testify will be permitted to speak for up to five minutes. Those planning to testify are asked, if possible, to bring 25 copies of their prepared statements to the hearing.

Written testimony from those unable to attend the public hearing will be received in the Task Force office, P.O. Box 1422, Room 329, Richmond, VA 23211 until April 23. Mail should be directed to Ms. Kris Ragan.

Candlelight Vigil

The third annual Candlelight Vigil Against Rape, co-sponsored by Avalon and the W&M Women's Issues Group, will be held at 7:30 p.m., Tuesday, April 30 in the Crim Dell amphitheater or in Barrett Hall in case of rain.

This year's theme is "Breaking the Silence." There will be music, testimonials and a guest speaker. The vigil is a time to reflect upon an especially destructive crime and to support its many victims. We ask that no photos be taken during testimonials.

Miniature Golf Tournament April 26

The Recreational Sports department is sponsoring a miniature golf tournament from 3 to 4 p.m., Friday, April 26 at Mini Golf on Richmond Road, which will be open specifically for this event. All students, faculty and staff are eligible to participate.

Registration began today and entries will be taken at the Recreation Center until 5 p.m., April 24. Cost per game is $2 per person. Families are welcome.

Students From Keio University Arrive In July

Forty students from Keio University in Tokyo, Japan, will be in residence this summer for an intensive living/learning experience designed to immerse them in American history, language and culture. The program represents a first step in what organizers at both universities hope will be a series of yearly educational exchanges between the schools, said Tomoko Hamada, assistant professor of anthropology and program director.

Keio students will live in the Wendy and Emery Reves Center for International Studies along with 10 William and Mary students, from July 26 through Aug. 9 and will take courses in English and complete a specially designed series of seminars on American history, culture and management.

Teaching the students will be professors from William and Mary and other American institutions aided by Ph.D. candidates in W&M's American studies program. The curriculum will consist of a four-part seminar on revolutionary America; Southern American music; race, gender and ethnicity; and American leadership and decision making. Students also will be divided in to three groups, depending on fluency, to study English as a second language.

Hamada, who has organized the program in cooperation with officials from Keio University, said that the exchange offers an opportunity for Japanese students to immerse themselves in American life. "I think the time is ripe to do these kinds of programs, where students from two nations can hold intense discussions and live under one roof," she said.

Supplementing their classroom seminars and dormitory residency, Keio students will tour area historic attractions, and visit Canon Virginia in Newport News.

At the end of their residency at W&M,

Campus Rallies To Help Professor

The American Red Cross Blood Unit in Norfolk will hold a second blood testing session from 10 a.m. to noon, Saturday, April 27 in the Campus Center, rooms A and B, as part of the drive to find a bone marrow donor for James Whittenburg of the history faculty who is being treated for cancer of the bone marrow.

One hundred and twenty-eight undergraduates, graduate students and faculty members volunteered for the initial testing session which was held April 9. The $60 cost for each test is being met by donations.

Over $11,000 has been received by Dale Hoak of the history faculty who initiated the drive. The second session has been arranged because both the volunteer list and the donations continue to increase. Group donations have been received from Sigma Chi fraternity, $2,000; Alpha Chi Omega, $400; History Graduate Student Association, $240; and over $1,000 from the faculty.

Donors must be between the ages of 18 and 55. Colleagues 55 and over are invited to sponsor a student donor. Anyone who would like to volunteer for the blood screening Saturday or make a contribution to the fund is asked to contact Hoak at ext. 13750.

The gesture on the part of one academician to help another has mushroomed into an expression of generosity and caring that has exceeded all expectations. Hoak initiated the program with a memo to his colleagues asking that they volunteer for a blood test as the first step in finding a bone marrow match for Whittenburg, who has been undergoing chemotherapy. Since a marrow match could not be found within his family, the search for a donor needed to be widened. Hoak spread the word across campus via the voice mail system. The first pay-as-

To Members Of The College Community:

Referenda Set For Amendment To College Policy

On March 29, 1991, in a letter to the College community, President Paul Verkuil announced the appointment of a special committee charged with the task of considering whether or not the College's Statement of Rights and Responsibilities should be amended in light of a change that will take place in federal law on Sept. 1, 1991.

Currently, federal law prohibits colleges from releasing information about the results of their disciplinary hearings to anyone other than the defendants in such proceedings. On Sept. 1, this federal law will be changed. The new law will allow colleges to disclose, to alleged victims of violent crime, the results of any disciplinary proceeding it conducts against the alleged perpetrator of the crime.

Papers Of John Marshall Receive Major Grant From NEH

The National Endowment for the Humanities has awarded a grant of $93,100 to The Papers of John Marshall, a multivolume editing project sponsored by the College and the Institute of Early American History and Culture.

In addition to the grant of outright funds, the Endowment will provide $155,000 in matching funds if the project can raise an equivalent amount. Editor Charles F. Hobson is optimistic about the prospects for raising this money and realizing the award's full potential income of $223,000.

During the two-year grant period (July 1991-June 1993) the editors will submit volume seven (1807-1814) to the University of North Carolina Press and complete substantive editing of volume eight (1815-1820). Volume six (1800-1807) was published last October. The completed edition will consist of 10 to 12 volumes.

According to Hobson, this is the third major grant the Marshall Papers has received from the NEH in recent years. Previously an award of $17,000 was made in 1987 and an award of $85,000 in 1989. "This latest award is particularly gratifying," says Hobson, "for it provides essential support at a time when a sluggish economy means diminished funding for scholarly research projects." During the last six months the project has also been the recipient of two other grants, $25,000 from the Judicial Conference of the United States and $22,000 from the National Historical Publications and Records Commission.

The staff, which also includes Assistant Editor Suzanne E. Coffmann and editorial assistant Laura S. Gwilliam, is presently preparing volume seven for publication. This volume documents Marshall's life and career from 1807 through 1814 by means of correspondence, selected judicial opinions, and other papers. One of the notable cases presented in the volume is the treason trial of Aaron Burr, heard in the U.S. Circuit Court at Richmond in the summer of 1807. Marshall's major opinion in this trial (in which Burr was acquitted) is regarded as a landmark in the constitutional law of treason.

Voting On Policy Changes Begins Monday

In accordance with the procedures specified for amending the Statement (Section IV, p. 97 of the Student Handbook), referenda will be held on this proposal during the next three weeks. The current and recommended wording of the Student Handbook (Section I. E. 2a, p. 94) is printed below for your consideration.

Third In A Series

Notes From The Administration

This series of weekly articles was initiated to increase campus awareness of current issues and is authored by a member of the administration and is reprinted from The Flat Hat.

Appointed by Virginia's General Assembly and Governor, the Commission on the Tercentenary Observances has been making plans for approximately two years for celebrating 300 years of higher education at William and Mary. Led by its honorary chairman, retired U.S. Chief Justice Warren E. Burger, and Harvard University economics professor Henry Rosovsky, W&M Class of '49, as chair, the commission is focusing on calendar year 1993 for a series of commemorative events.

Charter Day Week, February 8-13, 1993—Conferences on international higher education and diversity are planned, along with an opening convocation for the College community, a commemoration of the Wren Building and professional and student creative performances. The week will culminate with the Charter Day convocation on Saturday, February 13, when colleges, universities, alumni and friends will pay tribute to William and Mary's entry into a fourth century.

Homecoming, October 20-23, 1993—An estimated 10,000 returning alumni will take part in a variety of events. The College faculty will offer symposia on timely topics and there will be concerts by groups such as the Preservation Hall Jazz Band, along with a special fireworks show. The Homecoming parade, football game and halftime show will have special features befitting the celebration. The weekend culminates with a giant birthday party.

Students will figure prominently in the festivities. The presidents of the senior class and SA are active members of the Commission on Tercentenary Observances and of the Steering Committee. In addition to their ideas, a subcommittee on student involvement has proposed activities that will feature students' talents and interests. For example, the opening convocation on February 8, 1993, will begin with a reenactment of the founding of the College, performed by students. The William and Mary orchestra, choir and marching band will also perform throughout the year at special events and concerts. There will be commemorative presentations on current issues in which students may participate alongside leading spokesmen of the day. Many student volunteers will be needed to manage the events.

The commission has attempted to plan something for everyone in 1993. For those students who will be at the College during the year, the celebration will present opportunities for enrichment and fun. If you are interested in participating in some way, please contact your representatives on the commission, the senior class president, the SA president or Sam Sadler, vice president for student affairs.

the Keio students will stay with host families the weekend of Aug. 9-12, said Hamada. Members of the Japan Virginia Society are currently matching students with host families, and those who would be interested in hosting a Japanese student for the weekend may contact Hamada at ext. 11060.

"It's important for Japanese students to see the inside of America from a family perspective," said Hamada. "I want them to see that America is one nation, many faces." Often, she said, Japanese students do not fully understand the dynamism of American society created by the country's tremendous diversity.

As part of their itinerary, the students will visit Hampton University, where Hamada has arranged tours and group discussions with students there. "It's important to show the pluralism of American society, not just in the classroom but in all sorts of practical reality," said Hamada.

The W&M students participating in the program will receive a $500 stipend and room and board, but Hamada points out that even without the stipend, interest in Japanese studies on campus remains high. At least six W&M students are visiting Japan this summer as corporate interns, another four are going to study at various Japanese universities for all or part of the academic year, and several are visiting the country this summer on their own.

"For W&M students, this is the second best thing to going to Japan because we're bringing Japan here," Hamada said. "I hope [the W&M and Keio students] will make lifelong friends."

Keio University, the oldest private university in Japan, was founded in 1858 by Yukichi Fukuzawa as a school for Dutch studies. The university's history parallels Japan's modernization from the mid-19th century to the present. "Keio" is the name for the last feudal period of the Tokugawa era which ended in 1867. Today Keio, with its four campuses and enrollment of 10,000, is a comprehensive university offering advanced degrees from the liberal arts to the natural sciences.

you-go donor campaign was a great success. Hoak said he was overwhelmed by the speed and generosity of people once the word got out. The American Red Cross Blood Unit, based in Norfolk, staffed two information sessions and performed blood tests from 2 to 4 p.m., Tuesday, April 16 in the Campus Center. Whittenburg says he appreciates the involvement of everyone connected with the drive, not only for himself but for anyone else who might be helped by the program. According to the American Red Cross, between 25 and 30 different diseases respond to bone marrow transplants. "I would like especially," said Whittenburg, "to recognize the help of Dale Hoak and Jennifer Ashe, coordinator of the National Marrow Donor Program in Norfolk."
