New Graduate Housing Complex Is Largest Of Construction Projects Now Underway

There are a number of construction projects on campus in varying stages of completion that will benefit a wide range of people from graduate students to preschoolers.

The new graduate housing complex next to the Marshall-Wythe School of Law on S. Henry St. was begun in February and is expected to be completed in the late spring of 1992.

A $7.2 million project, this complex includes nine three-story buildings which will provide apartment housing for approximately 240 students. The structures will be brick with gabled roofs, grouped around a courtyard.

Earlier this year the project received a commendation from the Colonial Water and Conservation District for effective erosion and sediment control measures.

Earth excavated from the building site has been used to fill in a low area near the building. A crumbling shed was removed and the ground leveled to provide a 200-foot-square playing field for the residents. The greenhouse formerly in that area has been moved to the Dillard complex.

A new parking lot was recently constructed and paving completed and striped to provide 194 new parking spaces for law school students. Temporary site lighting will remain until permanent electrical service is provided to the apartment complex. Additional parking will be constructed as part of the overall project.

The modern languages and anthropology departments are back in Washington Hall, which has undergone a $3.5 million renovation, including extensive asbestos abatement work. A new mechanical room has been added on the southeast corner of the building and handicap accessibility features, including an entrance ramp and elevator service to all floors, are complete. The building, said Bill Camp, associate director of facilities management, was gutted on the inside, and partitions, finishes, hardware, electrical and lighting, heating and air conditioning, and fire protection systems have been installed. Extensive reconditioning, including the refurbishing of all windows, has also been undertaken.

Because of the historical nature of the building and its position in the architectural balance of the campus it was important to retain and renovate the existing structure.

The new Matoaka Lodge art facility will provide seven studios in the Matoaka Lake area adjacent to the picnic pavilion. Cost of this project was approximately $900,000. Occupancy is scheduled for Oct. 1.

Preliminary site work has begun in preparation for the new $13.5 million University Center to be built south of Zable Stadium near the Student Health Center. Drawings have been delivered to the Department of Engineering and Buildings in Richmond for review approval. Camp hopes that the project will

International Business Venture Subject Of Book By Hamada

Tomoko Hamada, associate professor and chairperson of the East Asian Studies Committee, is author of a new book, American Enterprise in Japan (State University of New York Press, 1991).

Tomoko Hamada

This book describes how American and Japanese management ideologies meet, collide and contend in the process of competitive cooperation during a joint venture in Japan.

David Hollinger To Speak Sept. 12

David A. Hollinger, professor of history at the University of Michigan, will speak on "How Wide the Circle of the We? American Intellectuals and the Problem of the Ethnos Since World War Two," at a seminar at 5 p.m., Thursday, Sept. 12 in the Friends Room of Swem Library, sponsored by the Commonwealth Center for the Study of American Culture.

Hollinger will address the transition from universalist to particularist and historicist aspirations in American cultural criticism and social theory during the past several decades. In treatment of the current phase of the universalist-particularist debate, he will focus on Richard Rorty's widely-noted defense of ethnocentrism. Although Hollinger's prime concern is to clarify trends in recent and contemporary intellectual history, he will also suggest the need for critical renewal, in some contexts, of the more cosmopolitan, "species-centered" discourse now often placed on the defensive.

Swem Macs Being Networked

The Computer Center has temporarily taken the Macintosh personal computers in the Swem PC lab out of service.

To improve the Macintosh computing environment, these computers are scheduled to be attached to a PC network in a few weeks.

In a detailed case study, Hamada describes the very real problems when Japanese and American managers run a business operation, and analyzes them from a comparative, relativistic and historical perspective.

The author presents a novel and effective way of viewing organizational dynamics, seeking the "unfinished" cultural process between different sub-groups who create and recreate the symbolic meanings of corporate phenomena.

Departments

Athletics

The College was recently awarded a Citation of Excellence in the College Sports Information Directors of America Publications Contest. The awards for the 1990-91 academic year were presented at the annual CoSIDA convention held in July in San Francisco.

William and Mary's football program was named Best in the Nation in Division A (I-AA). It was produced by Jean Elliott and Brian Haave.

Classical Studies

Professor Lewis W. Leadbeater has published an article titled "Cocteau's Senecan Connection in La Machine Infernal," in The Classical Bulletin (66) 1990.

Kinesiology

Raymond W. McCoy, assistant professor, taught in a workshop Aug. 8-10 titled "Videography Principles for Biomechanics," at East Carolina University. He also performed three-dimensional biomechanical feedback at a junior elite discus camp held at the United States Olympic Training Center in Colorado Springs, Colo., July 5-9.

McCoy has received approval and a partial-funding grant for "Biomechanical analysis of elite shotputters." This research project will be conducted at the 1992 Summer Olympic Games in Barcelona, Spain. The analysis of these data will be done at the College's Human Performance Laboratory.

Sociology

David Aday, associate professor, and professor Gary Kreps recently attended the national meetings of the American Sociological Association in Cincinnati, Ohio. Aday organized the paper sessions of the Crime, Law, and Deviance section and presided at the session titled "Ethnicity, Race, and Crime." He was selected to serve on the publications committee of the section.

Kreps presented a paper, "Disaster, Role-Enactment, and Organizing: Summary of Findings from Archival Research," at a meeting of the Research Committee on Disasters, International Sociological Association. Kreps also began his term as a member of the ASA Committee on Freedom of Research and Teaching.

Professor Bernard Karsh, director of the Center for East Asian and Pacific Studies at the University of Illinois, reviewed the book and said "This is the first ethnographic study dealing with the experience of an American firm in Japan. As a professional and skilled field worker, Hamada understands the relationships between field data and social meaning. Her experience as a professional interpreter and translator provides analytic skills and tools which are very rare in studies of Japanese business and American business in Japan."

In his review Dr. William Kelly, director of the Center for International Area Studies at Yale University, said "The case itself is fascinating, and Hamada speaks authoritatively and convincingly from personal experience and careful research about joint ventures, a subject that has not been described or analyzed but which is of considerable practical and theoretical significance."

School of Education

Kathy Evans, assistant professor, presented a paper "The Effects of Multicultural Training on White Trainees," at the American Psychological Association convention in San Francisco in August. In addition, Evans authored a review of Training for Life: A Practical Guide to Career and Life Planning, by F. Hecklinger and B. Curtain, that appeared in the spring Virginia Counselors Journal, and co-authored with E. Herr, the article, "The Influence of Racism and Sexism in the Career Development of African American Women," that appeared in the spring issue of the Journal of Multicultural Counseling and Development.

Virginia K. Laycock, associate professor, and Lori Korinek, assistant professor, co-authored, with R. Gable, the article "Alternative Structures for Collaboration in the Delivery of Special Services" that appears in the summer issue of Preventing School Failure.

Thomas Ward, assistant professor, co-authored, with J. Herbert and L. Hemlick, the article, "Supervisee Perception of Rehabilitative Counseling Practica," that was published in Rehabilitation Education in the summer. This is the third of a series of four articles dealing with rehabilitation counseling.

Evans, assistant professor, will conduct a workshop "Supervising Multicultural Counseling and Psychotherapy," at a conference on "Multicultural Issues in Mental Health Service Delivery," to be held at Fort Eustis, Oct. 4.

Memorial Service To Be Held For Frances Crawford

A memorial service will be held at 3 p.m., Sunday, Sept. 8 at Williamsburg Presbyterian Church for Frances Knox Crawford, who died Aug. 26 at Iradell Memorial Hospital in Statesville, N.C. Survivors include her husband, George W. Crawford, professor of physics emeritus.

Mrs. Crawford, who was 83, was a first-grade teacher for 43 years, including 13 in Williamsburg. She was a member of the Williamsburg Garden Club and an avid quilt-maker.

A funeral service was conducted in Statesville.

The family has asked that expressions of sympathy take the form of contributions to the Building Fund of Williamsburg Presbyterian Church, 215 Richmond, Road, Williamsburg, 23185.

Child Care Center Off Jamestown Road Being Readied For The New Year

go out for bids in October-November.

The University Center will provide 93,000 square feet of space including a 500 seat auditorium, conference space, ballroom facilities, kitchen and food service for 400 students, and the Campus Post Office.

The childcare center is well underway and is expected to be completed in December. This $525,000 project, totally funded with private money, will accommodate 75 children. It is located off Jamestown Road, behind Bridges House. Main entrance to the building will be from South Boundary Street and Grigsby Drive through the parking area by the Campus Police Office. An area behind the bookstore will be paved to provide additional parking.

A small concrete block building is slated for demolition in order to provide added playground space. Particular care was taken in this area to retain as many trees as possible to provide sunny and shaded areas for the children.

Over the summer, windows in the fraternity complex were replaced with new insulated double-hung windows at a cost of $300,000.

Work is underway but not yet complete on replacement of the heating system in Hunt Hall. Work will go into September, says Camp, and should be finished in October. The electrical circuitry has been updated and new lighting fixtures installed. Old radiators were removed and are being replaced with new fin tube radiators.

A portion of one side of the power plant housing the boiler units was removed this summer to accommodate the replacement for Boiler #2. The old boiler was removed in parts but the new one was too big for existing entrances. This project, completed at a cost of $550,000, will provide the campus with better hot water service. The new unit is operated with natural gas with a fuel oil backup system.

The Commons Dining Hall and kitchen have also received a face-lift this summer along with asbestos abatement work.

The next project will be renovations to the first floor of Ewell Hall formerly occupied by the Admission Office which has moved to Blow Memorial Hall. New work will include partition changes, restoration of interior architectural woodwork and new electrical wiring, heating and air conditioning systems.

Ahead for Camp's office is replacement of the heating system in the five-building Bryan residence complex, a project so big it will be undertaken during the summers of 1992 and 1993.

Alumnus Gives Swem Library Rare Italian Texts

Swem Library received an unexpected windfall recently when George W. Poland '36, retired head of the Italian department at North Carolina State University dropped by to donate a 16-volume edition of Storia Della Letteratura Italiana by Girolamo Tiraboschi, published by Presso la Societa Tipografica, 1787.

These books, which will be added to the library's rare books collection, are located in only eight other university libraries across the country.

"This is a very welcome addition," said University Librarian Nancy Marshall. "The Tiraboschi set will be especially helpful to students and faculty engaged in researching Italian literature of the 18th century as well as scholars of Italian culture of that period.

These are the kind of rare books we especially appreciate adding like adding to our collection. We are delighted that an alumnus has remembered his alma mater with such a special gift."

As interesting as the literature is the man who donated the books.

Poland missed his graduation date because he volunteered to fill in as a teacher in the Spanish department, which was in need of faculty at the time. President John Stewart Bryan, grateful for Poland's assistance, helped him get a scholarship to study at a university in Spain. Unfortunately, the Spanish Civil War was underway, and when Bryan handed Poland his diploma, he warned him he could not be responsible for his safety if he went to Spain. Poland finally got to Spain in 1940. In 1942 Poland was an officer in the U.S. Navy and back in Europe. He was sent to Africa and later to Italy to work with Naval Intelligence.

While in Europe he purchased the books he has donated to the library. He said he couldn't recall how much he paid for them but thought it was probably well under $100 as he was only a lieutenant junior grade at the time.

Poland received his master's degree from Brown University and his doctorate from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. He joined the faculty at North Carolina State University in 1948 and was head of the department for 20 years. He stepped down in 1972 and retired in 1976. Since that time he has traveled a great deal and enjoyed opera and ballet performances in many different countries.
