'All The King's Men' Loses Only One Performance

PBK Studio Fire Does Substantial Damage

A fire in the Studio Theatre in Phi Beta Kappa Memorial Hall Friday night, caused considerable damage to the area but there were no personal injuries. The studio is located behind the main auditorium, between the stage and Andrews Hall.

The alarm was turned in by students and staff in the building preparing for a play performance. The fire is believed to have started in faulty electrical wires.

Paul Morris, director of facilities management, said he could not make an accurate estimate of the cost to repair and replace items damaged by the fire until structural engineers and contractors have made their assessments. An early assessment was set at $50,000 but Morris said that could go much higher after all reports were in.

One thing being looked into, said Morris, is structural damage to the roof. Intense heat from the fire melted tar on the flat roof over the studio, which dripped down onto the floor.

Chris Boll, chairman of the theatre department, said that the studio would not be usable for the rest of the semester and perhaps the spring semester, depending on the amount of repairs that have to be made.

Claims adjusters and theatrical equipment experts are being brought in to assess the damage and the extent of repair or replacement that has to be made. One of the areas being assessed is the control booth in the studio, which was filled with smoke but doesn't appear to have been touched by the flames.

Richard Palmer, director of "All The King's Men," the musical that was cancelled Friday night because of the fire, described the studio as basically a cinder block box that became an oven.

Palmer praised the alacrity of the fire department in responding to the call and the intense heat they had to deal with. The fire began about 6:30 p.m. and was under control at 7:20 p.m.

Although cast members for "All The King's Men" were in the building, none were in the studio when the fire broke out.

The schedule of performances for the coming weekend has not been changed. There will be performances at 8:15 p.m., Thursday, Friday and Saturday evenings and at 2 p.m. on Sunday, Oct. 20.

Anyone who is holding a Friday night ticket and would like to exchange it is invited to call the box office at ext. 12674 or stop by Phi Beta Kappa Memorial Hall. The box office opens at 1 p.m.

Director Palmer discouraged the spraying of chemicals to help dissipate the smell of smoke in the building. He told Saturday night's audience that they might well be patrons at the first "smell-o-drama" since a barbecue scene figures prominently in the play and the fire provided the fumes. Palmer added that after 27 years in the theatre, Friday night was the first time he had cancelled a performance for any reason.

The Second Season has been affected by the loss of the Studio Theatre, which is main stage for those productions. The play in rehearsal before fall break was Lanford Wilson's "Burn This," a senior directorial project being directed by Melissa Lowenstein.

Louis E. Catron, adviser, says he's committed to performance of the play on its scheduled dates but no site has yet been found and no assessment has been made of the cost to replace props and staging lost in the fire. The play, which contains adult language and situations, calls for a studio setting and none has yet been found, said Catron. The play is scheduled for performances Oct. 24-27.

FIPSE Grant Supports Program On Substance Abuse

"For college students nationwide and at William and Mary, alcohol is the drug of choice," according to Phil Meilman, director of the Counseling Center and research associate professor of psychology. "Although many people do not think of it like this, alcohol is a powerful mood-altering substance. Technically, it falls into a class of drugs known as sedative-hypnotics.

"Although cocaine, heroin, and other illegal drugs are abused by college men and women, a national survey shows that only 5 percent have used cocaine in the past year, contrasted with the 85 percent who use alcohol. Some already have a dependency on alcohol when they come to college," said Meilman.

"As a health risk, alcohol cuts across all aspects of life. Impairment from just two or three drinks may give a feeling of excitement and well-being, but it can also blur a driver's judgment enough to cause a fatal accident.

"How to help? Putting up a stop sign isn't going to do it. And 'Just Say No' doesn't cut it with college students."

Headed by Meilman and funded by a $135,000 grant from the U.S. Department of Education's Fund for the Improvement of Postsecondary Education (FIPSE), a comprehensive substance abuse prevention program is being launched by the College. It is a seven-part plan of educational outreach and other activities, which will attempt to reach out to students across the campus.

The project involves intensive education and outreach to residential units including the Greek houses; establishment of a substance abuse resource center with videos and written materials to be located in the Campus Center; linkages with community resources such as Alcoholics Anonymous, the substance abuse program at Williamsburg Community Hospital and the Williamsburg Drug Council; a program of education for deans, health care and counseling center staff; enhanced substance abuse programming for student-athletes; and a more systematized follow-up system for students experiencing alcohol-related problems. In addition, the grant will provide funds to assist the Student Association in alcohol- and drug-free activity programming.

The FIPSE-funded program will strengthen and enlarge efforts already underway said Meilman. There is an active student AA chapter meeting on campus each week, which Meilman describes as "a gift—these are truly courageous students." In addition, Cynthia Burwell, health education coordinator at the Student Health Center, has offered educational programs in the past and has successfully coordinated the College's offerings during National Collegiate Alcohol Awareness Week for the last few years. Meilman has high praise for the work of Burwell "for laying a solid foundation for the new initiatives." Last year Burwell's efforts were rewarded at the annual conference of the National Association of Campus Activities held in Nashville, Tenn. The College received a $1,000 grant as one of the top six schools in the nation in its observance of National College Alcohol Awareness Week. The award was presented by the Inter-Association Task Force on Alcohol and Other Substance Abuse Issues.

Meilman's proposal is an adaptation and extension of the experience gained in running the alcohol and drug prevention program at Dartmouth College, where he was the counseling center's assistant director for outreach services and an associate professor in the department of psychiatry.

The comprehensive approach suggested by Meilman received the support of top administrators. In support of the grant application, President Verkuil wrote a letter of endorsement stating, "We need concerted efforts to combat illegal drug and alcohol use on American college campuses generally, and I am hopeful that with FIPSE funding we will be able to make greater inroads here." W. Samuel Sadler, vice president for student affairs, stated that the grant-funded project would provide greater coordination and focus to the initiatives already underway at the College. And John Randolph, director of athletics, welcomed the program on behalf of the athletic department, noting the high visibility of athletes and their position as role models.

Meilman To Direct Substance Abuse Program Funded By New FIPSE Grant

Meilman received his undergraduate degree magna cum laude from Harvard and his Ph.D. in clinical psychology from the University of North Carolina. He was a clinical psychologist here at the Counseling Center (then known as the Center for Psychological Services) from 1977 to 1980. He left Williamsburg to become administrative director of the chronic pain treatment program at the University of Nebraska Hospital, and it was there that he learned about the diagnosis and treatment of alcohol and drug problems, as most of the patients were addicted to their pain pills. While there, he also established a student counseling center to serve the medical, nursing and pharmacy students, who previously had no such services available.

Meilman is enthusiastic about the opportunity to work on a Collegewide program here with a team approach. Mary Crozier, who previously worked at Colonial Mental Health, has been hired to serve as coordinator for the grant-funded programs. The Task Force on Alcohol, the Athletic Department, the Counseling Center, the Student Health Center, the Campus Police, Student Activities, Residential Life and the Student Association will all be active participants in the project.

"Many students come to college with their drinking and drugging patterns already established," said Meilman. "Others will experiment. For some the experiment will have no ill effects, but for others it will. You don't have to have a 'drinking problem,' for example, in order to have a problem with drinking too much. We look forward to addressing these issues and other issues. At the same time, we hope to empower those who choose not to use and help them to feel a greater resolve."

Tuition Relief, Refund of Payments and Reinstatement Information for Students Called to Active Duty in the Military Services

This statement describes the ways in which students whose active-duty, military duty during a tide of national emergency requires sudden withdrawal or prolonged absence from the College of William and Mary may seek tuition relief, refund of payments and reinstatement.

William and Mary students in the military reserves or the National Guard who are called to active duty after the beginning of a semester or summer session, or active duty personnel, may consider two options with the dean of students (academic support) in determining enrollment with the university. The same options are offered to active duty personnel who are transferred unexpectedly as a result of the activation of Reserve or National Guard units.

OPTION 1. Students may withdraw from all courses as of the effective date of the orders to report to active duty. Upon withdrawal all tuition and fee charges are canceled and appropriate refunds are processed promptly for the session in progress. Payments received for future semesters are also refunded. Disposition of refunds for students credited with financial aid funds are governed by state or federal refund regulations for the appropriate aid program.

A prorated refund is given for both room and board. This refund is based on the date the student withdraws officially from William and Mary. Deposits made with the intent of securing future facilities or services are refunded in full. Textbooks purchased for the current semester may be presented, with a copy of the applicable military orders, to the College Bookstore for a full refund.

OPTION 2. Students may take a grade of incomplete in all courses. The conditions for completing course work and receiving a regular grade must be agreed upon by the student and the instructor of the course(s) in which the student is enrolled. Upon separation from active duty, students may complete the course work without paying additional tuition and fees for the semester during which withdrawal occurred.

To initiate either option, students must provide the university registrar with a copy of their active duty orders. Students should seek advice and counsel from an appropriate representative of the office of the dean of students (academic support) and present a signed statement electing option one or two above.

Reinstatement following the student's release or return from active duty or mobilization is handled through the office of the dean of students.

Applicants to the university who have accepted an offer of admission, but who have not yet registered in a degree program, are eligible to defer enrollment. They are permitted to enroll for the next semester following discharge from active duty, provided the university receives adequate notice of the applicant's intention to enroll. The applicant need not reapply for admission nor pay an additional application fee.

Information concerning academic credit or reinstatement is available in the office of the university registrar. Information concerning tuition relief and refunds is available in the office of the treasurer (student accounts section).

Volunteers Pick Up Trash To Help Save The Chesapeake Bay

By Bland Crowder
Education Coordinator
Chesapeake Bay National Estuarine Research Reserve System in Virginia at VIMS

An "MRE" military meal pouch, a toy gun, lightsticks and a television picture tube. Those were some of the more unusual items included in the 1,120 pieces of garbage collected by volunteers on the Catlett Islands National Estuarine Research Reserve Saturday, Oct. 5.

Most of the garbage was less interesting but just as disturbing for lovers of the Chesapeake Bay System: lumber, cans and bottles, bait boxes and other paper and the ubiquitous plastic. Twelve people picked up more than 1,000 pounds of trash.

The October project was the second quarterly Cleanup at the Catlett Islands Reserve and part of a volunteer-driven study of the types and seasonal occurrences of garbage on U.S. beaches. It was sponsored by the Virginia Institute of Marine Science through the Chesapeake Bay National Estuarine Research Reserve System in Virginia. "Beachcombers" included members of the Thomas Nelson Community College Sailing Association and independent volunteers.

"I'm appalled at the amount of debris that accumulates between cleanups," said Robert Breeding, a marine scientist with the Chesapeake Bay Research Reserves at VIMS. "We hope to involve more and more volunteers in these cleanups so that we can remove even more trash from our estuaries. We had to leave a lot behind." Volunteers who cleaned the Catlett Islands in June also removed half a ton of debris.

The half-ton of jetsam included: 99 pounds of plastic, book bags, six-pack holders, milk jugs, PVC pipe, shotgun shells and an empty trash can.

More than 190 pounds of glass was gathered up, including beverage bottles, jars and more than 70 light bulbs.

The 30 pounds of plastic foam collected included buoys, cups, packing materials, coolers, fast-food containers, meat trays and a life preserver.

Aerosol cans, bottle caps and 325 soda and beer cans were included in the 42 pounds of metal collected.

Paper and wood that weighed 533 pounds included boards and other lumber, bait boxes, crab baskets and bamboo poles.

Upholstery material, hats, underwear, shoes and jogging shorts accounted for 18 pounds of trash.

Gloves, tennis balls and three car tires were included in 106 pounds of rubber.

The Catlett Islands in Gloucester County are one of four sites in the York River Basin designated as National Estuarine Research Reserves in June 1991.

Volunteers will clean the Catlett Islands again in December.

A fully functional fire extinguisher, a baseball bat, a metal picnic cooler, carpeting and life jackets were some of the more exotic discards found by volunteers removing debris from the Goodwin Islands National Estuarine Research Reserve in late September.

The lion's share of the garbage was less unusual. Fourteen people picked up 1,129 pieces—758 pounds of trash.

To learn how you or your organization can help in that or other cleanups call Bland Crowder, at 804-642-7135.

Visiting Historians To Speak At Commonwealth Seminars

James S. McLachlan, author of American Boarding Schools: A Historical Study and Princetonians, 1748-1768: A Biographical Dictionary, will speak on "Translatio Studiorum: The First Intellectual Migration to British North America, 1601-1700," at 5 p.m. seminar Thursday, Oct. 24 in the Friends Room of Swem Library.

This seminar is sponsored by the Commonwealth Center for the Study of American Culture and is offered in cooperation with the Institute of Early American History and Culture.

For over a century American historians have noted that 17th-century emigrants to New England included an unusually large number of university-educated men. In fact, the number of university men who emigrated in the same century to the Chesapeake (Virginia and Maryland) was much higher.

Dr. McLachlan's talk will describe, analyze and contrast the movement of learned migrants to these two areas of North America. The "learned migrants" are placed within the larger contexts of the history of higher education among the English (and British), the contemporary foundation at home and overseas of new English colleges, and the changing nature of the learned culture of Western Christendom.

McLachlan is currently working on a large-scale study of the history of American higher education.

Shields to speak Thursday

David S. Shields, associate professor of English at The Citadel, will speak on "The Discursive Communities of the Eighteenth Century Manuscript," at 5 p.m., Thursday, Oct. 17 in the Friends Room, Swem Library as part of the seminar series sponsored by the Commonwealth Center for the Study of American Culture.

Copies of a list of suggested readings for this seminar may be obtained from the Center, the Institute of Early American History and Culture, the office of Eighteenth Century Life in Tucker Hall and the history department library.

Ambassador Staar's talk is sponsored by the Williamsburg Chapter of the United Nations Association, the Wendy and Emery Reves Center for International Studies and the William and Mary Model United Nations Association to mark United Nations Day 1991.

Staar served as U.S. Ambassador to the Mutual and Balanced Force Reduction negotiations from 1981 to 1983 in Vienna, Austria. He is currently a senior fellow at the Hoover Institution and his areas of specialization include the Soviet Union and Eastern Europe, arms control and public diplomacy. Pritchett attended Hampton University. He was associated with Colonial Williamsburg's African-American programs from his teenage years and, for the past 10 years, he has traveled throughout the United States as a storyteller. He has served as a consultant for numerous museum educational programs and, most recently, was a consultant for the Museum of the Confederacy's exhibition "Before Freedom Came."

Two additional concerts on Nov. 24 and Dec. 8 are scheduled in the current series.

The Computer Center Offers Additional Telnet Access

The Computer Center has added a new facility for access to Internet Systems. This will provide additional Internet access capabilities for users of the limited CS/100 Bridge equipment. This new facility utilizes the Unix News system which also runs TEAMate and provides linemode (or character mode) Telnet support which is not available via the VM system.

How To Use The New Telnet Capability

On campus users may obtain a new version of the Procomm dialing script which includes a new option for Internet access via this News Telnet facility. This new offering is also available in most Computer Center labs. Contact the Technology Support staff at ext. 13002 if you need a copy of the updated Procomm script.

Off-campus users may dial into the Unix News computer, just as they would for TEAMate. However, instead of logging into TEAMate with the guest userid, you may use the telnet (lower case) userid. The system will prompt you for a terminal type, just as when using TEAMate. You can then use the telnet command to connect to any Internet address (not in fullscreen mode). You may enter the internet address on the telnet command line, or use the open subcommand after the telnet> prompt. Other subcommands may be listed by entering a question mark at the telnet> prompt. The phone number for this system is 221-6411 for 1200/2400 baud telnet service through this new facility.

For both on-campus users and off-campus users, when you finish, and close your internet connection, you will see the $ Unix prompt. Enter exit (lower case) to leave this Unix system.

To use FirstSearch, users may use the above technique, or access FirstSearch from within the TEAMate bulletin board system as described below.

Connect to the Unix News computer and use the guest (lower case) userid to actually enter the TEAMate application. (This may be accomplished with the Procomm Campus dialing menu.) Select TEAMate option 5 for "read only" from the bulletin board. Then browse the "Multi-Library Link" topic and the subtopic of "Library On-Line Reference Link. Pick the option for FirstSearch. This gives you a little help screen about what to type and does the Telnet 132.174.100.2 for you. You still have to do the authorization code and password, but they are shown on the screen. Note that the Swem staff inform us that FirstSearch will not be free after Oct. 15.

If you need assistance, contact the Technology Support staff at ext. 13002.

Mantey Readies Play Cast For Final Weekend

Peter Mantey, manager of video services is musical director for "All The King's Men," the opening show of the William and Mary Theatre which will continue its run this weekend.

One of the challenges of "All The King's Men," says Mantey, has been to arrange the thematic score from Randy Newman's 1974 album, "Good Ol' Boys."

Mantey holds a bachelor of arts degree in music education from Heidelberg College, 1978. He is the author of a children's musical, "The Lizard of Oz," a parody of "The Wizard of Oz." Mantey moved to the Williamsburg area and began his association with the William and Mary Theatre as a cast member of Three-Penny Opera.

Mantey was musical director for both "Canterbury Tales," and "A Funny Thing Happened on the Way to the Forum." Mantey says he is particularly fond of "Forum" since it was written by his idol, Stephen Sondheim and it brought him his first Portfolio magazine nomination as Best Musical Director.

Prentis Award

President Paul Verkuil gives the 1991 Prentis Award to Roxie White of the Fort Magruder Inn on Route 60.

The annual award is given to business people who, like the 18th-century Prentis family, are leaders in business, community service and support of the College. The award was presented Oct. 7 at a reception by Friends of the College.

White is known for her involvement with several community projects. She regularly assists the Jamestown-Yorktown Foundation, Williamsburg Community Hospital, AVALON, the Housing Partnership and the local rescue squad. She has also been a leader in Soroptimist, the Williamsburg Chamber of Commerce and the Williamsburg Hotel-Motel Association.

In the 18th century, the Prentis Store, a retail store on Duke of Gloucester Street, became known in the community and throughout the colonies for its fair wages, good merchandise and sound, innovative business practices.

Computer Center Offers Software To Support The Academic Programs

The Computer Center has acquired general licenses to a variety of MS-DOS based microcomputer software to support the academic program. Funding has come from the Dean of Arts and Sciences and from the Computer Center budget. Much of this software is available in the microcomputer labs around the campus; other material is available for faculty inspection and review at the Computer Center. Generally, faculty can have copies of these programs for use without charge but the documentation is separately priced and available either in the College Bookstore or the Computer Center.

The College has also joined the WISCWARE consortium (administered by the University of Wisconsin), which collects and distributes programs for use in higher-education instruction. The College has a demonstration membership and copies of approximately 350 programs from a variety of disciplines are available at the Computer Center for faculty review. The price for using one of the programs in a course is typically $35. To obtain a diskette with summaries of all the WISCWARE programs, call Information Technology Support at ext. 13002.
