WILLIAM & MARY

A WEEKLY NEWSPAPER FOR FACULTY, STUDENTS AND STAFF

NEWS

VOLUME XXI, NUMBER 29 • WEDNESDAY, MAY 6, 1992

Governor's Fellows

Six William and Mary students have been selected as Governor's Fellows for the summer.

Those who will work in Richmond include William H. Baxter II, Laura L. Flippin, Rhonda M. Jones, Michael A. May, Yvonne L. Michael and Nicole L. Wagner.

Fellows will receive a stipend for two months of work in Richmond and will be assigned to offices in Governor Wilder's administration.

Watch 'Jeopardy!'

Senior William H. Baxter II will be a contestant on "Jeopardy!" Friday, May 8 and Monday, May 11.

"Jeopardy!" may be seen on ABC-TV, WVEC, Channel 13 in Newport News and WRIC, Channel 8 in Richmond.

Baxter has been working since freshman year to land a spot on the show and was finally successful.

Students Add Voices To Oppose Verdict

William and Mary students joined others at many colleges and universities across the state last week to protest the decision of the Los Angeles jury to acquit the police officers who had been video taped beating motorist Rodney King.

Wearing mostly black, students gathered in front of the Campus Center Thursday afternoon for the march.

Jane Carpenter, a senior who helped organize the demonstration, told Daily Press reporters Ron Shawgo and Jim Stratton, "We don't want to be violent, but we had to show it's not just Los Angeles that's feeling this."

"When I saw the news on TV, I knew we had to do something," Michael Britt, a sophomore told Virginia Gazette reporter Emily Pease. "I was in an outrage. Somebody has to do something. We may not get very far, but something has to be done."

Approximately 1,500 Students Will Receive Degrees At Commencement Sunday, May 10

A capacity audience of friends and families are expected for the 1 p.m. ceremony in William and Mary Hall. Admission is by ticket only.

Principal speaker will be Secretary of State James A. Baker III. The student speaker will be Susan Eleanor Brown of the Class of 1992. The baccalaureate speaker will be the Rev. J. Bryan Hehir, senior research scholar at the Kennedy Institute of Ethics, Georgetown University.

Speaker at ROTC commissioning ceremonies will be Maj. Gen. Kenneth Wykle, commander of Fort Eustis and the U.S. Army Transportation Center headquartered there.

The College will confer honorary degrees on Mary L. Good, senior vice president for technology at Allied-Signal Inc. of Morristown, N.J.; Floyd D. Gottwald Jr., chairman of the Ethyl Corporation of Richmond; the Rev. J. Bryan Hehir; and Stephen J. Wright Jr., former president of Fisk University, Nashville, Tenn.

The Marshall-Wythe School of Law will present diplomas at a ceremony following the commencement program. Speaker for the occasion will be an alumnus, Lewis B. Puller Jr. '74, who was recently awarded the 1992 Pulitzer Prize for biography for his book, Fortunate Son. The book tells about his life as the son of the most decorated Marine in U.S. history, his college years at William and Mary, his shattering experience in Vietnam where he was severely wounded when he stepped on a mine in October 1968 and his years of struggle to resume a normal life.

Robert L. Kirk, chairman, CSX Transportation Inc., Jacksonville, Fla., will give the address at the School of Business' diploma program following commencement.

The ceremony will include the presentation of B.B.A., M.B.A. and M.S.T. degrees and will be held on the lawn in front of the Wren Building.

Kirk joined CSX in March 1990. In 1989, he became chairman of the board of Reflectone, Inc., Tampa, Fla., a position he retains. Before going to Reflectone, Kirk was chairman and chief executive officer of Allied-Signal Aerospace Co.

Robert L. Kirk

James A. Baker III

In 1985 Kirk was publicly recognized by President Reagan with the Distinguished Public Service Award from the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services for his work in organizing the Executive Coalition for the National Initiative on Technology and the Disabled.

(A complete calendar of commencement weekend events appears on p. 8.)

A Calendar Reminder

The annual Collegewide Faculty Meeting in the fall will be held on Thursday, Sept. 10, at 3:30 p.m. in Millington Auditorium.

Waller Trial Subject Of Sherman Book

"I accidentally [sic] fell and some good people tried to help me, others did everything they could against me. ...

"First I'll say don't work for a man too poor to pay you. He will steal from you. In my case I worked hard from sunup to sundown to make a living for my family and it ended up to mean death for me."

The writer, Odell Waller, a black sharecropper, was executed July 2, 1942, for shooting a white tenant farmer, Oscar Davis, in Pittsylvania County, Va., in 1940.

In a death cell statement, Waller tried to put down his personal thoughts on what had happened to him. It was a case that drew national attention and epitomized the plight of poor blacks who ran afoul of the law. Although it drew the attention of national figures, the case was soon forgotten and would not have been revived at this time had it not been for a historian's curiosity.

The full story of the Waller case is told in fascinating detail for the first time in a new book by Chancellor Professor of History Richard B. Sherman, The Case of Odell Waller, just published by the University of Tennessee Press.

This is the third book by Sherman on black history. In 1973, the University Press of Virginia published The Republican Party and Black America, From McKinley to Hoover, 1896-1933. Prentice-Hall was the publisher of The Negro and the City in 1970. Sherman has also published many scholarly articles on a wide variety of topics, including black issues. He was a Fulbright Professor of American History at the University of Stockholm in Sweden, 1966-67.

Sherman is one of five faculty authors for a history of the College, which is being prepared for the celebration of its 300th birthday in 1993.

Sherman said he entertained thoughts of sadness, frustration and anger as he put together the story of Odell Waller, a frightened, desperate young man who tried to get wheat that his landlord owed him and his family.

Waller took a gun with him to confront farmer Davis because he had heard

Overy Named To Law School Post

Overy Named to Law School Post

Richard D. T. Overy, assistant director of capital support in the College's Development Office and former assistant director for alumni affairs for the Society of the Alumni, has been named associate dean for development and alumni affairs at the Marshall-Wythe School of Law. Overy replaces Deborah Vick, who was recently named director of corporate and foundation relations at the College. In his new post, Overy will be responsible for overseeing all fund-raising efforts and alumni program development for the law school.

A 1988 graduate in finance at the College, Overy spent a year in Washington after graduation in the Office of Public Liaison at the White House. He is active in politics and serves as director of the Colonial Soil and Water Conservation District, and is a founder and board member of the Council for National Policy Youth Council. Overy lives with his wife, Julie, in Williamsburg.

Relocation of Telecommunications Systems

In order to accommodate the construction of the University Center, it will be necessary to relocate the telecommunications cable and conduit systems that run through the construction site. This relocation will cause interruptions in telephone service to a large portion of the campus.

Relocation of copper cable on May 12, 13 and 14 will disable all fire and intrusion alarms on new campus, all dedicated data circuits that run from the Computer Center to off-campus locations and all telephone service to the old lodges, the Student Health Center and Yates Hall.

Some fiber optic cable must be relocated. In order to minimize the disruption caused by this move, the relocation will be completed over the Memorial Day weekend. All telecommunications service to the new campus and to the Dillard complex will be affected by this move. Data communications to the College's mainframe computers will also be interrupted during this time.

Every effort will be made to hold these service interruptions to an absolute minimum.

SCATS Network Being Phased Out

The State Department of Information Technology has contracted with MCI for long-distance services. This means that the current SCATS telephone network will be eliminated. This change will occur on an agency-by-agency basis, and is scheduled to be completed by May 15.

In order to accommodate this change, it is strongly recommended that, beginning immediately, SCATS telephone numbers no longer be used when calling another state agency. All calls to state agencies should now be dialed using the local number listed in the SCATS directory. SCATS numbers can no longer be dialed after May 15.

This change will not affect any other long distance calling. Callers should continue to dial 8 + Area Code + 7 digits for calls to be charged to their extension and 6 + Area Code + 7 digits for authorization code calls.

Please direct questions to the telecommunications staff at ext. 11765.

John Robert Davis

To Members of the College Community:

On the evening of April 24, John Robert Davis, a senior from Falls Church, died at Sentara Norfolk General Hospital from injuries he received in an accident early that morning. According to the best information we have, John and friends were walking near the railroad tracks behind the Palace. While jumping near the tracks, John apparently tripped, fell and struck his head on a rock, causing a severe injury.

John was a 23-year-old government major who was residing off-campus at 1404-B Mt. Vernon Ave. An active brother in Lambda Chi Alpha fraternity, John had held several leadership positions in the group, including service as social chair. He played varsity baseball as a freshman and was a member of ROTC. John competed in a wide range of intramural sports and was a member of the Catholic Students Association.

A memorial service was held for John at St. Mary's Catholic Church in Fairfax on Tuesday, April 28 and a campus memorial service was held on Wednesday, April 29 at St. Bede's Catholic Church. Father Kelly of St. Bede's and other campus ministers are available and willing to talk with students who would find it helpful. Counselors from the Counseling Center are also available and may be reached by calling the Student Health Center at ext. 14386.

We are deeply saddened by John's death and extend our sympathy to his family and many friends.

W. Samuel Sadler

The Rev. Ronald Joseph Seguin

The Rev. Ronald Joseph Seguin, former Roman Catholic campus minister at the College, who disclosed in March that he had AIDS, died Thursday, April 23 in Richmond. He was 44.

Father Seguin resigned as pastor of St. Mary's Catholic Church in Henrico County in 1990, after telling Bishop Walter F. Sullivan of the Catholic Diocese of Richmond that he had tested positive for HIV.

He worked as a volunteer coordinator with the Richmond AIDS ministry after he resigned from St. Mary's.

At William and Mary, where he served as campus minister for a decade, Father Seguin was known as "Father Ron." He received the College's Algernon Sydney Sullivan Award for selfless community service when he left the College and his post as parochial vicar of Williamsburg's St. Bede's Catholic Church in 1987.

Father Seguin graduated from St. Mary's Seminary in Baltimore in 1974 and was ordained that year. He served as parochial vicar of Harrisonburg's Blessed Sacrament Church from March 1973 to May 1974 and parochial vicar at Lynchburg's Holy Cross Church until May 1977.

Survivors include his parents, Albert J. Seguin and Stella Mary Duplese Seguin of Norfolk, and a sister, Constance Margaret Seguin of Norfolk.

A wake was held April 26 at the Cathedral of the Sacred Heart in Richmond where funeral services were held April 27.

Departments/Schools

Philosophy

Dorothy Coleman and George Harris, associate professors, and James Harris, Haserot Professor of Philosophy, recently attended the annual meeting of the Southern Society for Philosophy and Psychology in Memphis, Tenn.

Coleman commented on a paper titled "Is The Concept of Art Purely Social?" She was also elected secretary of the society.

George Harris read a paper titled "Motivational Consistency and Moral Priorities." James Harris was elected president of the society for 1992-93.

An article titled "Posthumous Satisfaction and the Concept of Individual Welfare" was recently published by Professor Alan Fuchs in the Journal of Philosophical Research.

Psychology

Three articles co-authored by professor Michael Rohrbaugh appear in current medical journals.

"The SAGE-PAGE Trial: Do Family Genograms Make a Difference?" (Journal of the American Board of Family Medicine); "Can Experts Predict Health Risk From Family Genograms?" (Family Medicine); and "How Do Experts Read Family Genograms?" (Family Systems Medicine). The papers concern the use of family genograms by physicians and family therapists. Co-authors are John C. Rogers (Baylor Medical College) and Monica McGoldrick (Family Institute of New Jersey).

Rohrbaugh will also present a paper titled "Couples Therapy for Drinking Problems: A Systemic Treatment Manual" at the American Family Therapy Association's meeting in Florida next month.

The treatment manual, co-authored by Varda Shoham Salomon (University of Arizona) and Peter Steinglass (Ackerman Institute for Family Therapy), was developed for a National Institute for Alcoholism and Alcohol Abuse study, comparing family systems and behavioral treatments for drinking problems. Related work from this project will be presented at the June meeting of the Society for Psychotherapy Research in Berkeley.

School of Business

Ned Waxman, associate professor, has authored the second edition of the Gilbert Bankruptcy Summary, recently published by the legal division of Harcourt Brace Jovanovich.

At the Mid-Atlantic Regional Business Law Association's annual conference, Waxman delivered an academic presentation titled "Jury Trials after Granfinanciera: Three Proposals for Reform."

Waxman's new MBA course, "Bankruptcy and Reorganization," which was taught this spring, is believed to be the first MBA bankruptcy course in the nation. Highlights included a trip to the United States Supreme Court to hear oral arguments in a bankruptcy case, and guest lecturer Stephen Case, who filed the bankruptcy petition in the Johns-Manville case and is nationally renowned for his expertise in bankruptcy law.

A speech given in the Renaissance Lecture Series at Cameron University by Wanda A. Wallace, John N. Dalton Professor of Business Administration and associate dean for academic affairs, titled "Historical Reflections and New Frontiers on Business Regulation," has been published in the spring 1992 issue of Southwest Oklahoma Economic Review.

School of Education

Virginia Laycock, associate professor, co-authored with Robert Gable an article titled "Regular Classroom Integration of Adolescents with Emotional/Behavioral Disorders in Perspective" in the fifth volume of Programming for Adolescents with Behavioral Disorders, which is published by the Council for Children with Behavioral Disorders.

VIMS/School of Marine Science

Jeffrey D. Shields has been appointed research coordinator of the Chesapeake Bay National Estuarine Research Reserve System in Virginia.

Most recently Shields was a visiting instructor in biology at Purdue University. He also recently completed an appointment as a postdoctoral fellow in the department of parasitology at the University of Queensland in Brisbane, Australia. There he was chief investigator on three studies of the parasites of crabs and lobsters, including those inhabiting the Great Barrier Reef.

Shields received his Ph.D. degree from the University of California at Santa Barbara with emphasis in parasitology, crustacean reproduction and cell biology. He received the M.S. degree in parasitology from UC-Berkeley and the B.A. degree in aquatic biology from UC-Santa Barbara.

Library Staff Offers Training In PC Outreach

The staffs of Swem Library and the Marshall-Wythe Law Library will offer two introductory training sessions on how to connect to a world of electronic information from a PC. The sessions will teach participants such things as the use of electronic mail to obtain information from Swem's reference and documents departments, how to identify other libraries' catalogs on the Internet computer network, how to search those catalogs, how to search the OCLC database and periodical indexes, how to get weather reports for distant cities, how to obtain basic information about the countries and the world and more. All of this information is accessible today from office computers as well as from any of the campus computer labs.

The training sessions, at 10 a.m. and 2 p.m. on June 9 in room G004 of Swem Library, will include hands-on interaction with many of the information sources listed above.

These sessions are open to all members of the William and Mary community, but since space is limited, registration is required.

To sign up for either session, call Glenda Page at ext. 13060.

NOTES

HACE May General Meeting

The Hourly and Classified Employees (HACE) Association will hold its May general meeting on Tuesday, May 12, at 1 p.m. in the Campus Center, room E.

The guest speaker will be George Grayson, professor of government and state delegate from the 97th District. Grayson will talk about issues and legislation recently addressed by the General Assembly.

HACE will hold a drawing for a paid parking pass for all members signed up by the meeting date.

The meeting is open to the College community. There will be a $1 admission fee for non-members. Annual membership dues are $5.

Please call Jackie Smith, membership chair, personnel, ext. 13157.

Organ Recital

Bette Crossen, who has taught for the Christopher Wren Association's program, has arranged for an organ recital with commentary by Giles Cook at 7:30 p.m., Thursday, May 14 at the Williamsburg Baptist Church on Richmond Road.

The public is invited to attend. There is no admission charge.

VIMS Researcher Gets Funds For Elementary Schools Program

Frances L. Lawrence, a researcher at the Virginia Institute of Marine Science has received a grant to help develop environmental education activities for elementary schools.

The Virginia Environmental Endowment awarded Lawrence $11,795 to start up the program for elementary schools. Other grants have been applied for to give added support.

The endowment is a private foundation, which executive director Gerald P. McCarthy said has awarded over $11 million in grants since 1977 for environmental improvement in Virginia and in the Kanawha and Ohio River Valley regions.

ARC/AAL Sponsors Sale

For students with a need to find a home for items they do not want to take home, ARC of Greater Williamsburg, formerly the Association for Retarded Citizens, will arrange to pick-up donations on Saturday, May 9.

Items will be sold at a yard sale which is being co-sponsored by AAL of St. Stephen's Lutheran Church, from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m., Saturday, May 16 at Williamsburg Crossing Shopping Center on Route 5.

Call 229-3535 to arrange for a pick up or a drop-off. All donations are tax-deductible and a receipt is available upon request.

Spear In Print

Reader's Digest recently published a contribution from Laura Spear in their Campus Comedy column.

"Sometimes the workload at the College of William and Mary in Williamsburg, Va., seems insurmountable. After a particularly stressful evening of studying another student walked into my room and moaned, 'I'm exhausted. I'm about ready to pay someone to take this exam for me!'"

'What class is it?' I asked.

'Ethics,' she replied.

Alumnus Invited To Take Major Role In VSF

Steven Culp '78, who is starring in plays, films and television in Los Angeles, has been assigned the title role of "Macbeth" for this summer's Virginia Shakespeare Festival which opens July 3.

Steven Culp '78

Culp, a native of Virginia Beach, recently appeared in "Dead Again" for Paramount Pictures, directed by Kenneth Branagh of "Henry V" fame; and in "Gross Anatomy" for Touchstone Pictures. His numerous television credits include guest appearances on "Murphy Brown," "L.A. Law," "Newhart" and "The Cosby Show." He was featured as John Jay, Lincoln's secretary, in Gore Vidal's "Lincoln," an acclaimed NBC miniseries filmed in Richmond several seasons ago. He has played major roles for the Champlain and New York Shakespeare Festival and recently appeared in the HBO series, "Dream On."

This will be the 14th season for the festival. The opening play will be "The Two Gentlemen of Verona," Shakespeare's joyous, amorous romp through Renaissance Italy. The Festival has scheduled a special holiday matinee on Saturday, July 4 for the benefit of out-of-town visitors who wish to visit the restored area in the morning, see the play at 2 p.m., then dine locally before attending the Colonial Williamsburg evening fireworks celebration.

"The Two Gentlemen of Verona" will also play July 5 at 2 p.m., and July 8 and 9 at 8 p.m. On Friday, July 20, the Festival will open "Macbeth," for three consecutive performances before the two plays begin repertory rotation through July 26. There will be a matinee performance each Sunday at 2 p.m. with no performances on Mondays.

The Festival, under the executive direction of Jerry Bledsoe of the department of theatre and speech, is currently in the midst of a major public fund-raising campaign. The goals of the fund drive are to provide for increased publicity of the summer productions and to ensure continuity of the organization's annual program at the College. The Festival box office will open June 9 in the foyer of PBK Hall, and season announcements and brochures will be mailed in late May or early June to all patrons on VSF's current mailing list. To be added to the list, call ext. 12660.

Bledsoe will direct "The Two Gentlemen of Verona" on the Festival's permanent Tudor-style setting, which has not been seen fully assembled on the PBK stage since 1980. The last play he directed for the Festival was Moliere's "The Miser" in 1986. "Macbeth" will be directed by Jack Crouch, founding director of the Colorado Shakespeare Festival and veteran director of the Oregon Shakespearean Festival. Crouch, who lives and teaches in Boulder, Colo., directed VSF's popular "Measure for Measure" in 1984.

This year's VSF company will consist of 21 advanced theatre students from William and Mary and other universities throughout the country, and 21 professional directors, designers and technicians. Rehearsals and production preparations will begin when the company convenes in Williamsburg on June 1.

The Festival will again sponsor Camp Shakespeare, July 13-24, in conjunction with James City-Williamsburg Parks and Recreation Department. This is a special day-school workshop with a classical twist for young people ages 8 to 14. It will be conducted by Karen Hardcastle and members of the Festival staff, Monday through Friday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. For registration information, call Kathy Gray at 229-5676.

The Festival invites members of the community, as well as summer students and staff of the College, to participate in all aspects of productions. Potential actors and technicians are encouraged to come to auditions and interviews with festival directors on Saturday, May 30, from 7 to 10 p.m. at PBK Hall. Volunteers available to assist regularly on stage crews or to attend scheduled rehearsals are eligible for highly responsible production assignments.

Those who wish to be considered for roles in one or both plays should prepare two short audition pieces, one or both from Shakespeare's plays, for presentation at auditions, May 30. Volunteer actors will compete with festival personnel for major roles, provided personal commitments allow for essential rehearsals and performances, June 1 through July 26.

"Macbeth" will be rehearsed and performed exclusively in the evenings to accommodate participants employed locally during the daytime hours.

Participants in "Two Gentlemen of Verona" must be available to rehearse afternoons during June and perform evenings during July.

Potential volunteers who require further specific information may call Jerry Bledsoe at ext. 12659 or Bell Mills at ext. 12660.

Coming to the Muscarelle Museum

Quilts As Art: A New Look At An Old Craft

If the word "quilt" conjures up a genteel art by graying artisans—plan to see the Muscarelle Museum of Art's new show "Southern Quilts: A New View" opening June 6, and get another perspective. Quilts in the exhibit are showcased in ways that heighten the vitality of the craft in exciting expressions of creativity.

Organized and circulated by the Hunter Museum of Art, this invitational exhibition includes the work of 28 contemporary artists from the southeastern United States who have chosen quilts as their form of artistic expression. The show will be up through Aug. 16.

The works, which display great variety in size, technique and texture, can best be described as art or studio quilts. Many of the artists use the traditional techniques of piecing, applique and quilting, while others have made a bold departure from the traditional quilt by using such surface design techniques as silk screen, airbrush, fabric dye and lamination.

The quilt as an art form is dramatically portrayed in the figurative and abstract works presented, many fashioned from unusual and exotic materials. As diverse as the exhibition is, a common thread is the fascination with fabric which is transformed into bold visual statements.

Four 28-minute films will be shown in conjunction with the exhibition on July 26, 27 and Aug. 3.

Lynne Sward of Virginia Beach departs from the expected in "Unwearable Art Series: Souvenir Shirt." She collects unusual and exotic fabrics and assembles irregular fragments into dynamic compositions reflecting her love of puzzles and kaleidoscopes.

Marjorie Claybrook of Augusta, Ga., uses cotton chintz, sateen and airbrush-painted fabric, hand-quilted with metallic thread and embellished with sequins, to create "Night Masque," a large work incorporating motifs suggestive of ancient revelry and pageantry.

"Midnight Conversations" by Murray Johnston uses intense hues in cotton panels designed to be seen from both sides.

"Tennessee Waltz" by Elizabeth Cherry Owen uses unusual color juxtapositions, along with floating, biomorphic shapes.

Beads, feathers, rhinestones, assorted fabrics and found objects are included in the realistic imagery of "The Prowler," a diminutive work (20 by 24 inches) by Sally Broadwell of St. Augustine, Fla.

One of the most unusual quilts is "Heritage Festival Faces: Windows of Creativity" by Arturo Sandoval of Lexington, Ky. This quilt is made of photographic images of people on transparent acetate film sewn on a cloth backing.

Summer Classes for Children

The Muscarelle Museum will offer a variety of art classes and workshops this summer for children from July 7 to July 30. Registration will be held June 18.

For details call ext. 12703.

Campus Anticipation

Because of the popularity of last year's "Campus Anticipation," that project has been expanded this summer into two week-long campus experiences co-sponsored by the James City County Parks and Recreation department and the Museum. The program will be designed for to children 7-10 from July 27-31 and for 11- to 14-year-olds Aug. 3-7. The cost is $60 and maximum enrollment in each session is 20.

For more information call 229-5676 or ext. 12703.

Mark Katz Gives Gift To Music Library

Mark Katz '92 has made a uniquely appropriate senior gift to the music library.

On April 23, he presented 15 CDs and 29 LP albums to Ruth Harris, the music librarian.

Mark has worked as a student assistant for the music library and the department of music since his freshman year. He has been very involved with music as a performing violinist and orchestra director for Sinfonicron's successful performance of "Pirates of Penzance."

Katz' job in the library has given him an opportunity to discover what kinds of recordings are lacking and his gift will help fill several gaps.

After graduation he has a temporary assignment with the music division of the Library of Congress, and plans to pursue an advanced degree in music.

Two Win Scholarships From Association For Women Geoscientists

Katherine O'Neill and Marcy Rockman have been awarded Penelope Hanshaw Scholarships by the Potomac Area Chapter of the Association for Women Geoscientists.

O'Neill is a senior, with a double major in geology and environmental science.

Founder of the William and Mary Student Environmental Action Coalition, O'Neill has been active in the fields of geoscience and earth-science education. She was the only sophomore to participate in a departmental field trip to West Virginia. The summer before her junior year she received a fellowship to do independent research as part of a National Science Foundation award to William and Mary in the Research Experience for Undergraduates Program. Her project was on the occurrence of radon in the Coastal Plain of Virginia.

For the summer after her junior year, O'Neill received a grant from the Virginia Space Grant Consortium to do research at NASA-Langley on satellite evaluation of biomass burning. This year she is continuing work on that project as her senior independent research projects in geology and environmental science.

Marcy Rockman

O'Neill has been involved with the William and Mary Recycling Organization since her freshman year, when the organization started, and is currently president. In addition she is developing an environmental education program in the local school system. This is a volunteer effort, one that O'Neill initiated because she saw a need.

Rockman, a junior geology major, is very interested in environmental issues and has been extraordinarily active in environmental programs on campus.

She has been involved with the William and Mary Recycling Organization since her freshman year and is currently vice president. She helps to recruit volunteers to work each Saturday and prepare recycling educational materials and programs. Rockman is the Student Recycling Coordinator for the College. In this position she organizes and participates in collection of recyclables from academic and administrative offices, supervises the 16 students hired by the College to pick up glass and newspaper from the dorms each week, and acts as general coordinator and trouble shooter.

Rockman's interests are not confined to geology. She took a field school in archaeology last summer. She is a member of the Medieval and Renaissance Society on campus and this summer is taking a course on Medieval English in England.

Fashing To Study Primates With NSF Grant

Peter Fashing, who finished his course work in December, has been awarded a five-year National Science Foundation award to study at the New York Consortium for Evolutionary Primatology, based at Columbia University in New York.

Fashing will receive full tuition and a yearly stipend of $12,000. While based at Columbia, he will also work at New York University, the City University of New York, the Bronx Zoo and with Wildlife Conservation International in New York. He will be working with Marina Cords of the University of California, Berkeley, a well-known scholar in primate research.

Fashing hopes to spend the fourth year of his grant doing field work in either Africa or South America. His work will culminate in a doctorate in biological anthropology, specifically evolutionary primate behavior. Fashing hopes to teach and do research in primate behavior.

Fashing wasn't sure what his major would be when he came to college; but after taking a course in anthropology from Rita Wright, he became interested in the subject and solidified his choice later after classes with Barbara King. Fashing likes his choice because, as he explains it, it combines biology with anthropology as they pertain to human origins.

For his senior research project Fashing wrote on play and exploration in captive woolly monkeys. He was able to observe them first-hand in Charles City County where Bernell Hawthorne is trying to breed them. The woolly monkeys are currently not surviving well in captivity.

Probst Receives Llanso-Sherman Award

Francis Joseph Probst III, a junior majoring in biology/chemistry, has been awarded the 1992 Llanso-Sherman Scholarship.

This scholarship is awarded yearly to a student concentrating in biology or chemistry who has indicated an interest in a career in medical research. It provides $1,500 for independent research during the summer after the junior year.

The scholarship has been established by Peter Neufeld '58, a New York producer, to honor the memory of two friends who died, Thomas Harlan Llanso '59, who died of diabetes, and Alan Clarke "Smoky" Sherman '58 who died of Lou Gehrig's disease. Probst is working with Professor Gregory Phillips on the origins of mutations in bacteria using E. coli.

This summer he also hopes to work with Professor Patricia Kane on a library research project involving yeast.

Probst is a varsity athlete, a freestyle distance swimmer. He has been a member of several hall councils and was elected to Phi Beta Kappa last semester. He is also a member of Phi Sigma biology honor society. Probst is aiming for a graduate program to obtain an M.D. and Ph.D. for a career in medical research.

Takach, Swanson Win PBK Honors

Patricia A. Takach, an anthropology major and a December 1991 graduate, is the first recipient of an award presented by Alpha of Virginia Chapter of Phi Beta Kappa to provide financial assistance to a student at the College who is a member of Phi Beta Kappa.

The award has been established by an endowment by Mr. and Mrs. William Lamb of Austin, Texas, to honor Mr. Lamb's grandfather, the late Col. William Lamb of Norfolk (1835-1909), "an editor, soldier, orator and businessman."

Takach was a 1990-91 Renick Scholar. She did research in the Jung Institute in Zurich, Switzerland, particularly on the cultivation of mental imagery. Her senior thesis was titled "Formation, Transformation, and the Eternal Mind's Eternal Recreation: Active Imagination in the Cultivation of Mental Imagery." Her career goal is medicine and she will be taking summer classes in preparation for medical school.

Takach transferred to William and Mary after two years at the University of Maryland as a botany major. Before college Takach spent 10 years as an administrator with the National Football League Players Association, a union organization in Washington, D.C. She is currently working with The Credo Institute in Williamsburg.

Her interests include photography and she has been a contributor to the William and Mary Review and The Gallery of Writing.

McCulley Award

Heidi Lynne Swanson, a senior German major, has been awarded the Cecil M. McCulley Humanities Award for 1991-92, established by Alpha of Virginia Chapter to honor the late Professor McCulley, a longtime member of the English department and drama critic for the Virginia Gazette. The award goes annually to a student who has demonstrated dedication and excellence in any area of the humanities.

Swanson will receive her award, which carries a stipend of $250, at Phi Beta Kappa's spring induction of new members on May 8. Speaker at the banquet following the initiation will be John Lynch, this year's Harrison Professor of History.

Three Awarded Dean's Prizes For Essays About Women's Issues

The Dean of the Faculty of Arts and Sciences has awarded three prizes for work by students that advances the community's knowledge of women.

Checks for $100 were presented to Amelia Vinroot, Tamara L. Burk and Anna Agbe-Davies.

Vinroot wrote on "The Support of Breastfeeding within American Culture: A Feminist-Functional Analysis," for a course in anthropology taught by Professor Kathleen Bragdon.

In addition to this award, Vinroot, a senior, has been awarded a Jacob K. Javits Fellowship by the U.S. Department of Education, which provides her with four years of tuition waivers and a yearly stipend of up to $10,000 at any school of her choice. She hopes to attend a school on the West Coast, possibly University of California at Santa Cruz or the University of Washington in Seattle, to earn a doctorate in cultural anthropology.

Burk, a graduate student in higher education, has been teaching in the department of theatre and speech. She wrote her paper on "American Midwifery and Medical Malpractice" for Professor Elaine Themo's course in "Topics in American Studies-Changing Gender Roles."

Agbe-Davies, a junior in anthropology, won her prize for a fine arts paper for Professor Kornwolf's Fine Arts 308 titled "Paper Sirens: Posters of Women in Fin-de-Siecle France."

Mitchell Byrd Honored By Izaak Walton League

Mitchell A. Byrd, who is retiring this year, is being honored by the Izaak Walton League of America for over 20 years of service in the protection of the American bald eagle and other threatened and endangered species throughout the Chesapeake Bay region.

Byrd serves on the Chesapeake Bay bald eagle recovery team and is a world renowned expert on eagles and raptors. He has conducted studies for the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service and the Virginia Department of Game and Inland Fisheries on eagles, pesticides and habitat loss. Byrd has identified the largest summer roost of bald eagles on the east coast of the lower James River and is currently working with The Nature Conservancy to preserve this vital habitat.

Byrd will join other winners in a variety of categories including public service, youth and journalism, at the annual Chesapeake Bay Awards Program which will be held in Baltimore on May 21.

The Chesapeake Bay Conservation Awards Program was started in 1986 through the League's Chesapeake Bay Program. This year the League will mark its 70th anniversary and will be using the Bay Awards dinner for a visible celebration. In addition, the League will give a special award to the Chesapeake Bay Foundation to mark its 20 years of service.

Society Of The Alumni Offers Literary, Science Prizes

This year's winners of the Student Literary and Science Awards, presented by the Society of the Alumni, were honored April 10 at a reception hosted by the Society's board of directors.

Although the Society has given literary awards for several years, this year marked the first time that undergraduate research awards in biology, chemistry, geology and physics were given. Winners of the awards also participated in the annual Patrick Hayes Writers Festival. All winners were presented with $100 checks.

Recipients of the four science awards, all members of the class of 1992, were: Russell Anthony geology; Elena Bonaplata, chemistry; Nicholas DiProspero, biology; and Warren Griffith, physics.

Beinecke Scholarship Goes To Sepulveda

Danielle Sepulveda, a junior majoring in sociology, has been awarded a 1992 Beinecke Memorial Scholarship. She is one of 14 national winners.

The award gives Sepulveda $2,000 next year to defer costs of graduate school applications and up to $15,000 a year for two years of unrestricted graduate study at the school of her choice. She says she is not sure of her career path, but is interested in environment and health in the third world and would like to study sustainable development that is environmentally sound, including a study of economic progress in third world countries.

A member of Mortar Board and Omicron Delta Kappa, Sepulveda was tapped last fall as the top William and Mary athlete with the highest GPA. She is a member of the varsity squads in both indoor and outdoor track. A ranking scholar, she has a 3.93 cumulative average and stands ninth in her class.

Winner of a Parents Association award, Sepulveda will spend six weeks in Bangladesh this summer working with a women's development program for CARE.

Sepulveda is a member of Kappa Kappa Gamma sorority and Alpha Kappa Delta Sociology National Honor Society.

Eric Chang Designs, Builds Cabana Temple Beside The Lake

Eric Chang

There for the Master of Architecture degree includes a first-year project where students design and build an affordable house in the New Haven area, which is sold for occupancy. Chang says he likes the idea of designers seeing their work tested through the construction stage.

Two local businesses, Better Buy Builders Supply Inc. and Custom Builders Supply Co. Inc., donated lumber for Chang's structure.

Chang became interested in architecture at an early age. His family moved a great deal because of State Department assignments, and he spent a much of his early years abroad. When the family looked for housing, Chang became interested in the design of homes and how the style and placement of rooms fitted the lifestyle of the occupants.

Chang is also very interested in sculpture. His entry in the current seniors art show in Andrews Hall includes a number of sculptures, including several striking pieces in metal and wood.

Because of the complications of building on state-owned property, Chang is realistic about the permanence of his cabana temple, but he hopes that it will stay by the lake for a while for people to enjoy.

The cabana sketches by Chang are taken from a series he made to show the evolution of his design.

CWA Studies 'Ethics In Politics'

The Christopher Wren Association for Lifelong Learning took "Ethics in Politics," as the theme of its second annual two-day spring retreat at the Chanco Center in Surry County, April 21-22. Approximately 50 members participated.

The first speaker was former Congressman and current Old Dominion University professor and TV commentator, William Whitehurst. He spoke on "Campaign Ethics," recounting episodes from his own experience as well as his observations of the White House and Congress as a U.S. Representative.

John Herbers spoke on "Ethics of Media Coverage" from the vantage point of many years covering national elections and as a journalist and editor for The New York Times.

John McGlennon, professor of government, focused his remarks on "Ethics Governing PACs and Special Interest Groups." McGlennon is a former candidate for Congress. One of his teaching and research interests is the American political scene.

Each presentation was followed by and/or interspersed with lively question-and-answer sessions. CWA members continued their discussions and arguments over various viewpoints throughout the period of the retreat, and even on the ferry ride back to Williamsburg.

Barbara Beaman, chairperson of the retreat committee, was responsible for planning and organizing the retreat and Grant Olson acted as moderator for the three presentations and discussions.

'Adventures' Nets Over $3,000 For Losito Fund

An Adventures at College Enrichment Day was held April 4 for the benefit of the Sherry Losito Transplant Fund. Thanks to the exciting sessions offered by members of the College community, children in grades kindergarten through five were able to get a taste of college life.

Professor Hans vonBaeyer thrilled kindergartners with a swinging bowling ball; Ronald Wheeler had children building block cities while learning about geography; Ed and Emily Pease gave children a taste of the world of architecture. Ron Geise helped children design their own science experiments, while George Bass helped children explore the world of the Apple computer lab.

Frank Derks and Leslie Rose helped children celebrate spring through literature, poetry, and art. Two special art classes were held by Sherry Greene and Alice Rogan-Nelson.

Older children were able to tour backstage at the William and Mary Theatre in Phi Beta Kappa Memorial Hall with Professor Bruce McConachie. Mary Voight shared life on an archaeological dig and Barbara King shared her work on African primate behavior.

Parents had a chance to join their children for a culminating chemistry magic show arranged and performed by members of the chemistry department.

College students from both the Graduate Education Association and the chemistry department generously gave up a Saturday morning to help the day run smoothly.

More than $3,000 was raised for the Sherry Losito Transplant Fund through "Adventures at College Day."

New Book By Sherman Details Trial Of Odell Waller

Davis usually carried a pistol. No one knows for sure what happened when the two men met, says Sherman, but Waller shot Davis and he died two days later.

Waller panicked and fled to Columbus, Ohio, where he had an uncle. He was quickly traced and extradited to Virginia. In a Chatham, Va., courthouse he was tried and convicted of capital murder. The trial was short and the death sentence was imposed. Appeals failed and on July 2, 1942, Waller was executed.

Waller had been working in Maryland, putting in electrical lines for the rural electrification project to earn extra money, when he heard that Davis had refused to give members of his family their share of the wheat crop and had turned them out of their sharecropper's house. For a family already in desperate straits for money, the loss of the wheat was catastrophic. Waller came back to see what he could do to help.

No one disputes the fact that Waller shot Davis, says Sherman, but nearly everything else is in doubt. "It is necessary to try to understand the total circumstances that left this man powerless. He was indicted by a grand jury on the 16th of September 1940. The judge in Chatham set trial for the 19th, giving his lawyer three days to prepare. That is obscene. After a fight, it was put off until the 26th, still a pitifully short time." Prosecution witnesses were believed to have been coached.

Waller had a trial by jury, but not a jury of his peers. All members of the jury were white citizens. Several were landlords. All were on the rolls of poll taxpayers. Waller and people like him were not able to pay the tax because their incomes were so pitifully low.

The failure of his lawyer to offer proof at the trial that the jury had been selected from the list of poll taxpayers and that Waller had not paid his poll tax was a fatal error that could not be corrected by appeals.

Even though the case went as far as the Supreme Court of the United States, which never gave it a full hearing, the response was that a man could be sent to his death on the error of a trial lawyer.

The Revolutionary Workers League, composed of dissident Trotskyites, was one of the first to come to Waller's aid. It hired Thomas Stone of Richmond, a relatively young lawyer with a radical past and only a few years of experience, to defend Waller. These people, said Sherman, were as welcome in rural Virginia as ants at a picnic. After Waller's conviction, the Workers Defense League, an organization founded by the Socialist Party, led the fight to save his life. It brought in some high-powered legal assistance, the most important being John Finerty, a well-respected constitutional lawyer who had worked on the Sacco and Vanzetti case.

One of the subplots of Sherman's book is the tension between these two organizations. Pauli Murray, a young black woman who later became a prominent lawyer and who was one of the founders of NOW, organized the initial effort by the Workers Defense League. In time, such luminaries as Eleanor Roosevelt, John Dewey and Pearl Buck championed Waller's case, but they couldn't change the outcome.

Virginia journalist Virginius Dabney and Gov. Colgate Darden were prodded to support Waller's cause. Dabney eventually came out for commutation of the death sentence, but Darden ultimately refused to grant clemency.

Franklin D. Roosevelt washed his hands of the case and would not intervene. Not that he could have legally, explains Sherman, who suggests that had Roosevelt told Gov. Darden that there would be an investigation of the trial, the Governor would have acted on Waller's behalf.

The case became a symbol of racial injustice. But, Sherman argues, the economic conditions also victimized many whites. It was a bad situation all around. Still, there clearly was a white elite that controlled the politics, schools and everything else.

"In 1940, 53 percent of Pittsylvania white farmers were tenants; 74 percent of the black farmers in 1940 were tenants and 48 percent of all farmers were sharecroppers.

"Fifty percent of the people were in conditions similar to the Wallers'. Poverty was widely dispersed among both blacks and whites, obviously much more among the blacks, a class of people who were cast out of meaningful economic and political power.

"They were voteless, and for many reasons, but not the least of which was the poll tax. To vote in Virginia you had to pay a poll tax cumulatively for up to three years. These people had cash incomes of only a few dollars a year. To pay $1.50 a year was an enormous price. The average cash income per farm inhabitant was $165, and that included all the whites. When I say the poll tax was a meaningful tax, it really was, especially when you add to that all the other problems. ... That was the background condition at the time of the trial. You had people who were exploited, not all by had people, but the total situation had imprisoned all these people.

"In theory," explains Sherman, "Waller could have gone to the courts to reclaim the wheat from Davis but in practice, he had no ability to do so. There were no cases on record up to that point in which a sharecropper in Virginia had successfully defended his right to a share of the crop in Virginia, at least by going to court. It was a problem. What was Waller to do?"

Poverty had caused Odell Waller trouble with the law earlier, only minor incidents, but they came back to haunt him at the trial. The prosecution labelled him a criminal because he had been caught driving without a license and selling moonshine, minor offenses. In both incidents, his actions were driven by poverty and the hopelessness of his living condition.

Waller was born to Dolly Jones, but she was unable to care for him. She gave him up at birth to her sister Annie who named him and raised him as her own.

Sherman points out that the Davis family was also a victim of the times.

Waller he obtained a picture of Waller, one of the routine pictures taken of death row inmates just before their execution.

One of the early groups to come to the aid of Waller was the Workers Defense League, and through his research Sherman came to know Morris Milgram who in 1942 was the League's national secretary. The League worked hard to help Waller. Milgram was very excited that Sherman had chosen to write about the case. Sherman was recently in New York at the invitation of the League to talk about the book in which they have great interest.

Looking back Sherman says, "I came by the case by accident and found it fascinating. I got to know Morris Milgram. Emotionally I got tied up, angry and sad. I had done enough black history to know that it is not an unusual story and one of the interesting things is I don't idolize Waller. He was a hard-working young man, brought up under difficult circumstances. He had a good native intelligence, but he was poorly educated. I've read a lot of his prison letters; they are moving but grammatically crude. Odell was guilty of a number of sins. He had sold moonshine, the prosecution made a lot of this; but this was a widespread practice. He was known to have disturbed the peace, only a minor offense; but it would be wrong to make him out some kind of a saint. He wasn't; he was an ordinary fellow. He didn't deserve what he got. If he had had a lot of money behind him he would have got off with a far less severe sentence and possibly eventually scot-free."

After Davis' death the Davis family gave the Wallers the wheat that was in dispute.

Waller is buried in Pittsylvania County and there is a headstone on his grave, erected by the Workers Defense League who tried so hard to save him. As if to impose one final footnote on the tragedy, the date of Waller's death on the headstone is incorrect.

Much has changed since the time of Waller's trial, says Sherman. The poll tax is gone, he notes, but he is still troubled by the role of money and how difficult it is for people on the margin politically and economically to obtain justice in America. "There are lots of lessons there," he concludes.

Richard B. Sherman

Davis had owned land but lost it and was reduced to being a tenant farmer. He had been cut back on the allotment of tobacco he was allowed to plant. The economic squeeze was affecting him also.

Sherman came across the case by accident while working on another project. He was intrigued by what he saw and embarked on a detective-like hunt for information. The trial had all but been forgotten, but by persistent questioning Sherman got access to 15 boxes of manuscripts in the state library which had been stored for more than 40 years but never catalogued.

"I was like a kid in a candy factory," recalls Sherman. He took several trips to Pittsylvania County to locate the scene of the crime and Waller's home, and to search court records and newspaper files. His research also took him to the Walter Reuther Library at Wayne State in Detroit and the Schlesinger Library on the History of Women at Radcliffe. From a staff member at the Virginia peniten-

Galano Receives Scholar Award From Virginia Science Association

Joseph Galano, associate professor, was recently selected as recipient of the 1991-92 Scholar Award in Psychology by the Virginia Science Association because of his contribution to advancing psychology in Virginia.

Galano has played a major role in helping Virginia to become a national leader in mental health promotion and mental illness prevention. He is chairperson of the Prevention and Promotion Advisory Council of the Virginia State Board of Mental Health, Mental Retardation and Substance Abuse Services, and serves as a gubernatorial appointee to the Virginia Council on Coordinating Prevention and as liaison to the National Prevention Coalition. He is on the editorial board of the Journal of Primary Prevention.

Galano is currently working with the state on two substance abuse prevention projects, including Project LINK, a new model-demonstration program concerning prenatal substance abuse prevention.

He has been actively involved in training preventionists to evaluate prevention programs in Virginia and serves as an evaluation consultant to numerous agencies and the Department of Mental Health, Mental Retardation and Substance Abuse Services' Office of Prevention, Promotion and Library Services.

Galano has also been invited to participate in a new national initiative developed jointly by the National Institute of Mental Health and the National Mental Health Association. The year-long project, "Prevention and the Mental Health Promotion in the States: Opportunities and Challenges," is assembling a core group of mental health professionals from across the country.

The project goals are to develop state leadership for the prevention of mental disabilities and the promotion of mental health in all states (36 states currently have no prevention activities designated under their state mental health authorities) and recommend specific policy changes to NIMH that could provide funds, technical assistance and a more active partnership between NIMH and the states in order to develop national goals and priorities for the prevention of mental and emotional illness and the promotion of mental health.

Gloucester Recycling Task Force Assists With Catlett Island Cleanup

Members of the Gloucester County Recycling Task Force led the trash pickup at the Catlett Islands National Estuarine Research Reserve on May 2. The volunteer crew shuttled to and from the islands in boats operated by the Virginia Institute of Marine Science. The cleanup was sponsored by VIMS through the Chesapeake Bay National Estuarine Research Reserve System in Virginia.

In keeping with the System's usual practice, the Task Force's mission and the spirit of Earth Day observances, as much as possible of the collected debris will be recycled.
