Law School Enrolls Strong Class of '95

Applicant Pool Largest; 17% Acceptance Rate

The traditionally strong student body of the Marshall-Wythe School of Law has been further strengthened with the addition of the Class of 1995. Faye Shealy, associate dean for law admissions, reports that the year was the most competitive in the school's history with more than 19 applicants for each seat and fewer than 17 percent of the applicants offered admission. The 173 members of the Class of 1995 were selected from 3,411 first-year applicants—more than double the number of the 1985 applicant pool.

The Class of 1995 consists of 80 women and 93 men who received their undergraduate degrees from 84 different colleges and universities. Minority students comprise 15 percent of the class. Eleven have earned post baccalaureate degrees including a Ph.D. in biochemistry, a master's in history, a master's in mechanical engineering and others in subject areas as diverse as counseling psychology and Spanish.

Almost half have full-time work experience—16 as legal assistants, paralegals or legislative aides and others in such fields as consulting, engineering, accounting, architecture, teaching, research and journalism. The diversity of work experience among new students is represented by a Congressional Aide, an aerospace engineer at NASA-Langley Research Center, an actor, a financial analyst, a judge from South America and a program analyst for the United States Environmental Protection Agency. Many entering students have studied abroad and several have worked abroad. A horse rider and trainer, debaters, student body presidents and varsity athletes, representing many sports and including an All-Big 10 Conference Academic Wrestling Team member are among the entering class.

First-year students arrived on campus Aug. 17 for a week-long introduction to law school and the legal profession. These activities are part of the Legal Skills Program which teaches professional responsibility and ethics by having students engaged in simulated legal practice. The program was the first recipient of the annual Gambrell Award for Professionalism presented by the American Bar Association at the 1991 ABA annual meeting in Atlanta.

August 1992

Dear Colleagues:

The annual collegewide faculty meeting will be held on Thursday, September 10, at 3:30 p. m. in Millington auditorium.

There will be some changes in the traditional tone of the meeting. I have no desire to create a funeral environment, but I have relieved the deans of the burden of pretending to be wits. Instead, I have asked each to concentrate in his or her ten-minute remarks on a single, critical academic topic of real importance to the future.

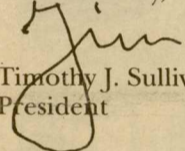

Rector Hays Watkins will bring words of welcome, Mel Schiavelli will provide an overview of critical academic issues of collegewide significance and I will offer some preliminary thoughts about our collective future as well as a strategy for meeting long-term goals. The Board of Visitors will be meeting at this time, and I expect many of them will attend as well.

As always, we will welcome our new and visiting colleagues. This year—as last—we will rely upon the magic of video technology rather than upon the individual presentation of each dean.

After the meeting, we will adjourn to the Muscarelle Museum for refreshments and good conversation.

I do hope you will attend.

Most cordially,

Timothy J. Sullivan
President

Employees Receive Service Awards

"You are appreciated, we couldn't do without you."

This was the theme of the fifth annual service awards ceremony held Wednesday, Aug. 12. The sentiment expressed by the opening speaker, Gretna Y. Smith, director of the Office of Personnel Services, was echoed by the other platform speakers, including President Timothy J. Sullivan, Vice President William F. Merck II and Loretta M. Early, president of the Hourly and Classified Employees Association, HACE.

In her welcoming remarks, Smith extended the first compliment of the program to Patty Bursleson, personnel assistant on her staff, who was responsible for arranging the presentation ceremony and reception. President Sullivan recalled a meeting with a visitor on campus to express his appreciation of staff support. A visitor stopped him as he was on the way to his office, Sullivan recalled. "He asked me 'Sir, do you work here? This is the most beautiful college campus I have ever seen. You're lucky to work here.'"

The greatness of a university, said Sullivan, is often measured in terms of the superiority of its faculty, students, new programs and the large sums of money it has raised. But the quality and commitment of people over many years to an institution is harder to measure, said Sullivan. That consistent quality, he added, is the heart and soul of an institution.

"If I were eligible for an award today, I would get a 20-year certificate," said Sullivan, who served on the faculty and as dean of the Marshall-Wythe School of Law before becoming president earlier this year.

Sullivan thanked his audience for their contributions to the "beautiful college campus" the visitor praised.

"You have my sincere congratulations and I look forward to working with you," said Sullivan.

Speaking on behalf of HACE, Loretta Early said, "This is a day of memories and hope—memories of our adversities and our triumphs; or those we've worked with and those we've served—hopes that our jobs are secure; that we will make more money; that the College acknowledges that we are a vital part of its existence and contemplates how to foster the type of workplace that will continue to support dedicated, positive employees."

Early stressed the importance of a positive outlook and concluded her remarks with a poem, "The Value of a Smile."

Libraries Want Your Number

For the automated circulation system, the libraries of the College need to identify each borrower with a numerical code, preferably the borrower's social security number.

With a person's permission, the College can provide a tape of social security numbers that can be loaded into the database where they will be protected from unauthorized use.

In compliance with Virginia Code, Section 2.1-285, permission is sought to use social security numbers within the database. If this is not acceptable to any borrower, please notify the libraries by Sept. 30 by writing Linda F. Adams, circulation coordinator at Swem Library. The request must be made in writing. The libraries will assume permission from borrowers they do not hear from by Sept. 30.

Parking Services Giving Break To Procrastinators

Mark Gettys, the new parking services director, describes himself and his department as service-oriented. As a token on that philosophy, his office will be open from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m., Saturday, Aug. 29 for anyone who has not already purchased a decal to park on campus.

Mark Gettys

Beginning Sept. 1, cars will be ticketed for no-decal violations. Gettys says the office will stay open later on Aug. 29, if necessary, to accommodate everyone who comes by.

"Everyone wants to know what we are going to do for the parking situation at William and Mary and that is a difficult one to answer because we do have limited space. There is never going to be enough convenient space for everyone who wants to park," he admits and adds, "that's one of the reasons you have limitations on freshman and sophomore drivers."

Gettys says he welcomes suggestions for improving parking on campus and can be reached at his office, 204 S. Boundary St., ext. 12435. He is currently evaluating the potential addition of new parking slots along one side of Landrum Drive, as suggested by a student. Students help review the new parking rules and regulations which are detailed in the latest pamphlet which was given to all decal purchasers.

One of the first challenges Gettys faces is to come up with an overall parking plan for the College for the State Art and Architecture Review Board in Richmond, which has said it will not approve any further piece-meal parking proposals until a master parking plan for the campus has been developed. Gettys says he is going to solicit suggestions from all constituents on campus, including faculty, staff and students.

"We know there are people out there with good ideas and we are very receptive to those ideas. We know we don't have all the answers.

"The first thing we have done is expand the Zable stadium lot from 165 to 206, by redesigning the road network, a net gain of 50 spaces.

"This area remains designated mainly for faculty and staff, but spaces along the stadium wall are reserved for day students."

Gettys says he would like to get feedback from the College community on the new parking area so adjustments can be made to maximize the area's usage when special events for the Tercentenary celebration bring crowds to the campus next year.

That area," said Gettys, underwent a 'quick fix' to improve drainage next to the stadium. There is a grand design for the area, which amounts to a $250,000 project and includes aesthetic improvements, but there wasn't time this summer to accomplish it. Although all bills are not in, Gettys estimates that the cost of the work this summer is $30,000. An excellent investment for 50 more spaces, he says.

There are currently 62 meters on campus near high-demand spots including the bookstore, the treasurer's office in Blow Hall, the ticket office at William and Mary Hall, the Recreation Center and Swem Library. These, says Gettys, are open to anyone who has business in the area. Gettys admits that visitors do have a rough time finding a place to park on campus. Because "visitor" slots are hard to define, Gettys says, they have been shaved down to a few for the President's Office and many replaced with metered spots or timed zones.

Gettys suggests that if a member of the campus community has a visitor coming to campus, he or she get in touch with parking services to obtain the appropriate permit ahead of the visit. The Parking Office is also able to provide visitor permits to offices on campus.

Gettys is looking into motorcycle pads. The Office of Residence Life is willing to fund these pads and Gettys says that as soon as a survey has been made to determine where they would be most useful, pads will be installed.

The old $5 late fee for those who appealed a ticket has been dropped.

Tickets paid within 10 working days of the date of the ticket will be reduced by $5. Tickets not paid after 90 days go to the treasurer's office for collection. Additionally, the no-decal violation fine has been lowered to $30 from $65.

A retired Army officer, Adjutant General's Corps, Gettys has been on the job for less than four months and is currently building a database of information on the parking population of the campus. Gettys says he is willing to meet with groups to discuss parking issues, if requested. Before coming to William and Mary, Gettys was assigned to Fort Eustis. An Army brat, he has lived in many areas but went to college at UVA and entered the Army via ROTC. He now resides with his family in Yorktown and enjoys jogging, gardening, racquetball and golf.

While he admits that he does not have enough data on vehicle usage yet to accurately answer the question of whether there are enough spaces for all decal holders, he suggests there are spaces that go unused, such as those in the W&M Hall lot, which are under utilized because people want to be closer to their offices. Those who do opt to park in the W&M Hall lot may use the campus shuttle bus which stops at the lot every 30 minutes. A decal for parking at the W&M Hall lot only is available for only $20 a year.

Parking Services is an auxiliary facility and as such is expected to generate its own revenue, which comes from fines, decal sales and fees for work at special events. Money collected is used for staff salaries and campus parking facility improvements.

After three months on campus, Gettys, whose focus is vehicles and parking, said he thinks walking is the way to go. "I am a pedestrian-oriented parking director," he quips.

New Law Journal Is Published

William and Mary Bill of Rights Journal, is a new publication produced by students at the Marshall-Wythe School of Law. The premiere issue in August included articles by legal exports who offered their views on issues from the role of the United States in international human rights efforts to an examination of criminal conspiracy law.

The new publication will be issued twice a year, and staffed by law students. Subscriptions are $16 a year and can be obtained by writing the journal's managing editor at the Marshall-Wythe School of Law, P.O. Box 8795, Williamsburg, VA 23187-8795.

The Institute of Bill of Rights Law is directed by Rodney A. Smolla.

Child Care Center Proposes Before-School Program

The Sarah Ives Gore Child Care Center is considering a before-school program for children six to 10 years of age who attend Matthew Whaley School.

The program would follow the 1992-93 Williamsburg-James City County School District schedule.

Children would be supervised from 7 a.m. until the school bus picks them up. Breakfast will be served. There will be a charge for this program.

The new plan would be beneficial to parents on an 8 a.m.-to-5 p.m. schedule, who have to make special arrangements for their elementary school children.

This program is still in the formative stage and is dependent on the level of interest from parents.

Those who would like to participate are asked to complete and return the form below via campus mail to Fran Dorsey at the Gore Child Care Center.

For further information, call Fran Dorsey at ext. 12121.

Linda Reilly to Talk at Exhibit Opening

Linda Collins Reilly, associate professor of classical studies, will discuss "The Dog in Ancient Greece: Hunter, Worker, Friend," at 5:30 p.m., Wednesday, Sept. 9 in the Botetourt Theatre of Swem Library.

The lecture will be followed by a reception in the Botetourt Gallery, sponsored by David A. Barley '64, owner of Agape Animal Care in Williamsburg.

The lecture and reception are part of the official opening for "Puttin' On The Dog," a mix of canine scholarship and whimsy drawn from the library's Peter Chapin and Horowitz collections. Together, the two collections include more than 9,500 items.
