Public Invited To Participate In Three Weekend Conferences

Lord Jenkins To Speak Friday At EC Conference

With the European Community another step closer to reality after the vote in France last week, a conference on the future of the EC will be held on campus Sept. 25-27, with speakers from international business, government and academe.

"EC 1992 and Beyond: A Challenge to the Postwar World Order" is sponsored by the College's Thomas Jefferson Program in Public Policy, the Delegation of the Commission of the European Communities and the Lowe Institute of Political Economy at Claremont

McKenna College.

While much of the conference is limited to participants, an address by The Right Honorable Lord Jenkins of Hillhead, chancellor of Oxford University titled "European Union as a Challenge to the World Order," at 7 p.m., Friday, in Phi Beta Kappa Memorial Hall, will be open to the public. There is no admission charge.

Other international speakers for the sessions will include Ambassador Andreas van Agt, head of the European Community delegation to the United States;

Andrew Crockett, executive director of the Bank of England; Michael Finger, lead economist, Trade Policy Division of the World Bank; Andrew Szasz, executive director, DeNederlandsche Bank; Jens Thomsen, permanent undersecretary for the Danish Ministry of Economics; and Per Magnus Wijkman, director of economic affairs for the EFTA Secretariat.

Conference participants will also hear Jagdish Bhagwait, department of eco-von Baeyer's New Book Explains Discovery Of Atom For General Readers

Hans C. von Baeyer's new book, Taming the Atom: The Emergence of the Visible Microworld (Random House), is enjoying great success. Enthusiastically reviewed in major papers across the country, including the New York Times, the Boston Globe and the Los Angeles Times, it is being translated into Japanese and German and published in England by Penguin Books.

Until recently, atoms occupied a mysterious and abstract realm—one so indescribably small that people could only theorize about their appearance and behavior. Taming The Atom is the first book to tell the story of the discovery of the atomic landscape in an entertaining literary style for general readers.

"There are three audiences for science books," von Baeyer explains, "scientists besieged by a flood of scientific writing, and science fans who read science books all the time, go to science movies and watch science programs on TV.

"Then there is the third group, for which my book is written, busy intelligent people; lawyers, doctors and business people who don't have the time or persuasion to delve deeply into science books and science literature, but who are nevertheless interested in the world. They read poetry and plays. That's the audience I am addressing—not just the serious fans of science who are willing to read all sorts of difficult technical materials, but people who have no scientific background.

"I write without any equations," says von Baeyer. "I try to write in a style that's readable and beautiful and is not laden with technical jargon. Nothing I write ever has technical illustrations. Furthermore, I try to relate the science I am talking about to art, poetry and the rest of human experience. The kind of people that I am writing for is exemplified by a former student who came up to me after a lecture and reminded me that what she remembers most about the course I taught was reading from T. S. Eliot.

"I try to relate science to people's lives, to explain the meaning of science by relating it to things that people are very familiar with and understand."

Taming the Atom is peppered with anecdotes and fascinating metaphors that lead the reader through the atom's fantastic history from ancient Greece to the quantum revolution of 1925 to the frontiers of modern physics and the experiments envisioned for the future.

von Baeyer traces his popular writing back to 1979 when he wrote an essay about relativity because it was the Einstein centennial year. "I got a depressingly large stack of rejections," he admits. Since the article was pegged to the Centennial and the year was running out, von Baeyer persuaded S. Dean Olson, editor of the Alumni Gazette, to publish his work.

von Baeyer was delighted when he received the highest award for writing from the American Institute of Physics for his article. He keeps the award on his desk.

"The Institute usually gives awards for entire books, and furthermore there had been an incredible flood of writing about Einstein. When they picked my essay, it made me think that I must be doing something right and that's when I started my first book, Rainbows, Snowflakes, and Quarks. von Baeyer included the relativity essay as a chapter.

We asked the author if there was a frustrated adventure novelist hiding behind his pen. "The one search of my life, and I think it will be an unending one, is to try to couch science in terms of a story because a story has an absolutely immediate, universal appeal. Everyone likes a story. Children like stories, young people like stories, old people like stories."

"The science writer's principal device for making the inexplicable explicable is to use analogy," says von Baeyer. "The mystery of quantum mechanical wave-particle duality is illustrated by comparing the electron to another double-natured beast, the platypus. The universe becomes a beach ball; a quark is imagined as a baseball curving to home plate through the sultry summer air. So important is analogy that even the technical literature abounds in it. In his first paper on the special theory of relativity, Albert Einstein introduced the concept of simultaneity by asking the readers of the stuffy German professoriat to imagine a stationmaster timing the arrival of a train by comparing the location of the front of the engine with the position of the hands of his pocket watch—as vivid a dream as one might imagine. Later Niels Bohr likened the invisible motion of inaccessible electrons in minuscule atoms to the revolution of planets about the sun—another analogy, another dream."

Taming the Atom is dedicated to von Baeyer's two daughters, Madelynn and Lili, and opens with a quote from one of their favorite books, The Velveteen Rabbit by Margery Williams. The word "taming" in the title comes from St. Exupery's Little Prince. Another clue to the humanistic approach by the author is his signature which includes his middle name—Hans Christian von Baeyer.

This latest success adds to the substantial store of awards von Baeyer has received for his writing. Last year his column in The Sciences, the New York Academy of Sciences magazine, won for the publisher top honors in essays and criticism from the American Society of Magazine Editors. von Baeyer's American Association for the Advancement of Science/Westinghouse Science Journalism Award was noted when he was tapped by the State Council of Higher Education for Virginia (SCHEV) as one of the state's outstanding faculty in 1990.

von Baeyer joined the faculty in 1968 and five years later was awarded the Thomas Jefferson Teaching Award. The course for which he was particularly cited at that time was titled "Physics for Non-Scientists." Like all his courses, this one reflected his approach to physics with a broad, humanistic flavor. In 1979 he was awarded the Science Writing Award of the American Institute of Physics. He is currently at work on a collection of essays to be published next year.

Departments & Schools

Fine Arts

Professor James D. Kornwolf has been awarded a grant of $7,500 by the Graham Foundation for Advanced Studies in the Fine Arts, and a Travel to Collections grant of $750 from the National Endowment for the Humanities for his current work in progress, a book on the architecture and town-planning in North America, 1562-1792.

Kornwolf authored the architecture essay in the forthcoming catalog, Starting from Home 1900-1920, which will accompany the American Craft Museum of New York's exhibition of the same name this fall. He also served as consultant for York (Maine) Historical Society's exhibition this fall at the University of New Hampshire, "The Colonial Revival in the Piscataqua Region."

Kornwolf will give a talk on "Francis Nicholson as a Patron of Architecture and Town Planning," at the Virginia Museum Nov. 14 for the symposium, "New Perspectives on Virginia Architecture." This will be published in the July 1993 issue of Virginia Magazine of History and Biography.

Government

George Grayson has written a monograph on "The Church in Contemporary Mexico," published by the Center for Strategic and International Studies, Washington, D.C.

Grayson presented a lecture on "The Impact of the North American Free Trade Agreement on Education" at the Smithsonian Institution on Sept. 11. Grayson also lectured on the impact of the NAFTA before university, political and media groups in the Dominican Republic and Honduras, Aug. 17-21, under the auspices of the United States Information Service.

Grayson's recent articles have appeared in the Sept. Petroleum Economist ("Cuba's Oil Dilemma"), the July 5 Houston Chronicle ("Mexico's Oil Monopoly"),

Professor Steven M. Haynie recently attended the 1992 United States Tennis Association (USTA) tennis teachers' conference, held Sept. 3-5 at the New York Marriott Marquis.

The 22nd annual conference showcased the latest teaching techniques, equipment and drills. Keynote speakers for the conference included former tennis greats Stan Smith and Dennis Ralston as well as Dennis Van deMeer, a pioneer of unique teaching techniques.

In conjunction with the conference, Haynie was a guest of the USTA at the U.S. Open Tennis Tournament at Flushing Meadows.

Mathematics

Margo Schaefer, associate professor of mathematics, has been elected to a three-year term on the Council of the Operations Research Society of America. ORSA Council is the governing body for the 8,300-member professional organization.

Modern Languages

The Baltic Studies Center at the University of Wisconsin (Madison) recently published an annotated translation of Salomon Henning's Chronicle of Courland and Livonia in its Wisconsin Baltic Studies series. Jerry Smith (modern languages) and J. Ward Jones (classics) and William Urban of Monmouth College, Illinois, prepared the translation and commentary. This 16th-century Low German chronicle is a first-hand account of Ivan the Terrible's attempted conquest of Estonia and Latvia.

Psychology

Joseph Galano, associate professor, was named Galt Scholar this summer by the Virginia Department of Mental Health, Mental Retardation and Substance Abuse Services. His selection recognized his long-standing involvement in preventing mental illness and promoting mental health in Virginia. As Galt Scholar, Galano consulted with the commissioner and his executive team and with the staff of the office of prevention concerning future trends in prevention and health promotion. His Galt Scholar lecture was titled "Prevention in Virginia: Past Successes and Future Challenges."

Professor Kelly G. Shaver attended the Babson Entrepreneurship Research Conference held this summer at Insead in Fontainebleau, France. He co-authored a paper for the conference with Elizabeth Gatewood of the University of Houston and William Gartner of Georgetown University. The paper was titled "Cognitive Factors in Entrepreneurial Persistence." In addition, he was co-author with Peter Robinson of the University of Calgary of a poster titled "Metatheory and Entrepreneurship Research" and served as a discussant in a session on "Strategy Perspectives on Entrepreneur-

Richard E. Walck

Richard E. Walck, who joined the faculty of the Marshall-Wythe School of Law in 1970 after a distinguished career in the Judge Advocate General Corps of the U.S. Air Force and served as professor and associate dean, died Saturday, Sept. 19.

A memorial service will be held at 10 a.m., Friday, Sept. 25 at the Williamsburg Community Chapel on Route 5.

Funeral services will be conducted in Greencastle, Pa., at 2 p.m. Saturday, Sept. 26.

Memorial contributions may be made to the Richard E. Walck Scholarship Fund, Marshall-Wythe School of Law.

Professor Walck was a graduate of Pennsylvania State University, and received his J.D. from the University of Virginia Law School. He retired from the military with the rank of colonel. He was a member of the Retired Officers' Association, Retired Judge Advocates Association, the Virginia, State Bar, Florida State Bar and the Middle Plantation Club.

Known affectionately as "the Colonel," Professor Walck endeared himself to 14 classes of law students and to everyone who had the good fortune to be his colleague. He retired in 1984.

His retirement citation from the Board of Visitors noted that "Professor Walck brought skill and humanity to every task he undertook at William and Mary. He excelled as a teacher because he conveyed his vast knowledge of torts, criminal law, and other legal subjects with genuine warmth and abundant good humor. He excelled as associate dean for administration because he tempered efficiency with compassion.

"Through his faithful service as chairman of the College discipline committee, he set a standard of fairness for others to emulate."

Professor Walck is survived by his wife, Rebecca; a daughter, Deborah Hayes of Middlothian; a son, David G. of Simsbury, Conn.; sisters, Thelma Edwards and Virginia Fitz, both of Greencastle, Pa.; and six grandchildren.

NOTES

Town & Gown Luncheon

At the Town & Gown luncheon Sept. 24, Michael C. Ely, executive director, The Jean Monet Council, Elliott School of International Studies, George Washington University, will speak on a topic related to the public policy conference "EC 1992 and Beyond: A Challenge to the Postwar World Order," which will be held on campus Sept. 25-27.

Judith Ewell, professor of history, will speak on "The Conquistador of the Amazon: Devil or Democrat?" at the Oct. 2 luncheon.

Fee for the luncheon is $6. Reservations may be made by calling 221-2640 or ext. 12640 on campus by noon on Tuesday before the luncheon. The program begins at 12:15 p.m. in the Campus Center ballroom.

Final Exam For Ph.D.

All interested persons are invited to attend the final oral examination for the Ph.D. degree in physics by Douglas H. Baker at 8 a.m., Thursday, Sept. 24 in the conference room of William Small Physical Laboratory. Baker's dissertation topic is "Formation and Desorption of Negative Ions from Metal Surfaces."

Federalist Society To Debate Legal Reform

Are we litigating ourselves into poverty? The Marshall-Wythe Federalist Society will debate the issue in arguments for and against legal reform at 4 p.m., Tuesday, Sept. 29 in the Marshall-Wythe School of Law, room 120.

Debate participants will be Walter K. Olson, senior fellow, Manhattan Institute, and author of The Litigation Explosion; and Roger A. Hanson, senior staff associate, National Center for State Courts and co-author of What Are Tort Awards Really Like? The moderator will be I. Trotter Hardy, associate professor of law.

CVC Campaign Opens Oct. 5

Club 48 Offers Awards To Participators

The magic number for the 1992 Combined Virginia Campaign for the College is "48."

The goal of the campaign is $48,000 and there will be a "Club 48" with special incentives for all who join.

"Club 48" is open to donors who contribute $48 or more. Their names will be included in a drawing for four prizes. Each winner will have the choice of a parking decal, a gift certificate for $50 at the College Bookstore or a Marriott food card for the same value. Through the payroll deduction method, membership in "Club 48" costs only $2 per pay period.

There is also an incentive for the department that has the largest percentage gain in giving over last year - a pizza party.

The CVC campaign will be held on campus Oct. 5-23. Training sessions for coordinators will be held from 10 to 10:30 a.m. and 1:30 to 2 p.m. on Wednesday and Thursday, Sept. 30 and Oct. 1.

William F. Merck, II is heading the campaign this year and is being assisted by Miriam Saguto at the United Way Office.

Wren To Be Location For Television Movie

The Sir Christopher Wren Building will stand in for other colonial locations next week for the filming of "The Broken Chain," a film to be presented by Turner Network Television.

The film portrays the revolutionary period in American history from the point of view of a Mohawk tribe. The Wren's exterior and interior will substitute for colonial buildings from other parts of the country.

Four locations in and around the Wren building will be used in the production: the front of the exterior, the Grammar School Room and Great Hall on the first floor, and the Blue Room on the second floor.

Production company teams will begin their work in and around the building Thursday, Sept. 24 and continue through the weekend in preparation for a full day of filming on Monday, Sept. 28. The crews will disguise modern characteristics to ensure historic authenticity.

It should take the film crews one day to remove the temporary changes once filming is complete.

Classes will continue uninterrupted throughout the preparation, filming and cleanup period. However, the Wren will be closed to visitors on Monday, Sept. 28.

Amy Kaplan To Speak On Origins Of American Studies

Amy Kaplan, associate professor of English, Mount Holyoke College, will give a seminar paper on "'Left Alone with America': Perry Miller and the African Origins of American Studies," at 5 p.m., Thursday, Oct. 1 in the Botetourt Theatre of Swem Library.

This program is sponsored by the Commonwealth Center for the Study of American Culture.

In this seminar paper Kaplan analyzes

An Open Letter To Students

Dear Students:

I hope that your semester is off to a great start. As your new President, I identify with you this Fall in a special way, for I feel like a student immersing myself in the William and Mary experience to learn and be challenged as never before.

One of my highest priorities as President is to enhance the quality of student life at William and Mary. With this goal in mind, I intend to interact as frequently as I can with students, listening carefully to your perspectives and ideas. In the past few months, I have enjoyed opportunities to talk with many of you during Orientation Week, meetings with student leaders, walks across campus and lunches in the Commons.

As my calendar becomes somewhat more manageable in October, I will attempt to schedule office hours and lunches with students. Dates and times for these will be published in The Flat Hat and William and Mary News well in advance so that you will have ample opportunity to sign up. If these are successful, I will continue both on a regular basis throughout the spring semester.

In the meantime, I look forward to seeing many of you and your families at Family Weekend events, Oct. 2 and 3, and at the Inauguration Ceremony and Reception, Oct. 16.

Most cordially,

Timothy J. Sullivan
President

Iwinski Sculpture Exhibit In Andrews

Ornithopter, 1992

An exhibit of sculptures by a new member of the fine arts department, Mark Iwinski, opens tomorrow, Sept. 24, in Andrews Gallery.

An opening reception will be held from 5 to 7:30 p.m., Thursday, Oct. 1 in Andrews Gallery. There will be an informal gallery talk by the artist at the beginning of the reception which is open to all members of the College community and the general public.

A native of Milwaukee, Wis., Iwinski received both his undergraduate degree and his M.F.A. from the University of Wisconsin. In addition to sculptures, Iwinski does watercolors and fresco painting.

His sculptures in wood, metal and stone are an outgrowth of a desire for a wider interpretive field than he found in figurative forms. His sculptures evoke a sense of movement and with rough hewn pieces, the early connection between alchemy and man's exploration of the scientific world.

"Ornithopter" (1992) steel, copper cable and stone, says Iwinski, recall the age of man powered flying machines, flapping wings strengthened by bands of metal. Iwinski designed "Faraday's Ring" with the early scientist in mind. It was Faraday's early work with magnetic fields, explains Iwinski that provided ideas for Einstein. Again using stone, wood and metal, Iwinski has positioned two pieces of stone, bound with copper wires, almost touching, but with a tension between them.

Iwinski plans to extend the ideas in one piece in the exhibit "Crucible" into a series. A large wooden bowl, Iwinski contrasts the rough hewn quality of the outside with the sheen of copper on the inside.

Flohr Journal Topic Of Illustrated Lecture By Robert Selig

Robert A. Selig of Hope College, Holland, Mich., will give an illustrated lecture on "A German Soldier in America, 1780-1783: The Journal of George Daniel Flohr," at 7 p.m., Tuesday, Sept. 29 in Washington Hall 201.

This lecture is sponsored jointly by the Institute of Early American History and Culture, the Commonwealth Center for the Study of American Culture and the Commission on the Tercentenary Observances.

Selig has rediscovered the personal journal of Georg Daniel Flohr, a German soldier who fought with a French regiment in support of the American cause during the Revolution. The journal's narrative is enhanced by watercolor illustrations of towns, countryside, battlefields and, most importantly for the College's interest, detailed drawings of the Yorktown Battlefield and the town of Williamsburg, ca. 1781. Selig is preparing the first translation and full publication of Flohr's account.

The drawing of Williamsburg by Flohr has been used as the design for one of the official posters prepared for the College's tercentenary celebration.

Fitness Walkers, Please Note

The Rec Sports Fitness Walking program was incorrectly listed last week. The correct schedule is as follows: Monday, Wednesday and Friday, 7 to 8 a.m.; Tuesday and Thursday, 12:15 to 12:45.

There are no mid-day walks scheduled on Monday, Wednesdays and Fridays.

The Rev. Jesse Jackson, who spoke on campus Sept. 16, with Black Student Organization President Christal Woodson.

Virginia Archaeology Week Celebrated At Regional Library

Staff members from the Center for Archaeological Research will present three slide lectures on "Rediscovering the Past: Archaeology Along the Chickahominy" at the Williamsburg Regional Library during September and October as part of Virginia Archaeology Week.

Dennis B. Blanton will be the speaker at 7:30 p.m., Tuesday, Sept. 29. He will describe how people have been forced by the changes in the Chickahominy region over the last 12,000 years, to change their lifestyles, including diet, settlement, and organization.

Thomas Higgins III will talk about 18th-century slave life at 7:30 p.m. on Oct. 6, showing how the remains of small houses and yards, items of a household and personal nature, reveal aspects of slave life at that time.

The location of the colonial galleys and an earlier palisade line were recently confirmed on Capitol Landing Rd. Joe B. Jones and Charles Downing will report on Oct. 13 on the nature of their construction and role during the colonial period, information that has resulted from a combination of historical research and archaeology.

These lecture series which began in mid-September are co-sponsored by the library and Virginia Natural Gas. All programs are held in the library's Arts Center Gallery.

Classes For Gifted Begin Oct. 3

The Center for Gifted Education will begin its Saturday Enrichment Program for gifted learners in preschool through eighth grade Oct. 3.

Courses will be offered each Saturday from 9 to 11:30 a.m., Oct. 3 through Nov. 21 in Jones and Morton halls. Subjects will include junior geography, "Klassics for Kids," French, architecture and three computer classes, two in IBM, one in Apple.

Courses are open to students who have scored in the upper fifth percentile (95 or above) on a nationally normed aptitude or achievement test. Eligibility screening by a certified school psychologist is available for students four through 18, for a fee.

A recommendation is required from school personnel for each applicant.

A $10 application fee is non-refundable. Total fee for each course is $150. Some scholarships are available.

Applications can be obtained at the Center in Jones 304 or by calling ext. 12362.

Three Weekend Conferences Slated On Campus

EC Conference

nomics at Columbia University, and Morris Goldstein, deputy director, research department, International Monetary Fund.

Those attending the conference will examine the progress being made toward a unified market and the consequences for existing international, economic, political and legal entities.

The members of the EC have agreed that a single European market should be created by Jan. 1, 1993. This new EC will remove all barriers to free trade.

For registration information about the conference and details on the conference program, call Karen Dolan, conference administrator, at ext. 12388.

Medieval Conference

son Patrick Gerary of the University of Florida will speak at 5:30 p.m., Friday, Sept. 25 in Andrews 101 on "Memory and Oblivion in Medieval Society." Professor Jaroslav Folda of the University of North Carolina will speak at 11 a.m.,

Saturday, Sept. 26 in Andrews 101 on "A 12th-Century Prayerbook for the Queen of Jerusalem." Conference chair is Barbara Watkinson, chair of the fine arts department. Members of the planning committee include John Conlee and Monica Potkay from the English department; Franco Triolo and Jerry Smith from modern languages and literatures; and Mark Johnson, director of the Muscarelle Museum.

Several faculty members will serve as chairs of conference sections including Miles Chappell, Chancellor Professor of Fine Arts; David Jenkins, professor of English emeritus; Barbara Watkinson, Charles Davidson Professor of English emeritus; Monica Brezinski Potkay, assistant professor of English; Franco Triolo, associate professor of modern languages; Jean Scott, acting associate provost; Michael Jarvis, a graduate student; Paula Blank, assistant professor of English; Earl McLane, professor of philosophy; LuAnn Homza, instructor of history; Jerry Smith, associate professor of modern languages and literatures; Stanley Kustesky, an undergraduate; J. Ward Jones, Chancellor Professor of Classical Studies; Dale Hoak, professor of history; Chandos Brown, associate professor of history; and George Greenia, associate professor of modern languages.

Lisa Kelly Named Catering Director

Lisa Kelly has been named director of catering by Marriott Dining Services with primary responsibility for the day-to-day supervision of the department, scheduling, planning and execution of catered events.

A former special events chef on campus, Kelly has worked for several well-known local restaurants including The Trellis, Le Yaca, Berrett's and The Williamsburg Hilton.

Kelly's appointment is part of a restructuring of the catering department's management staff announced by Bill Lacey, Marriott Dining Services' general manager. "As the College enters the fourth century, Marriott welcomes the opportunity to enhance the catering program by providing professional and personalized attention to all facets of campus catering services," said Lacey in announcing the changes.

The management staff has also been expanded to include two banquet managers. Glen Carter and Sheila Wharton will fill those positions. With 12 years of food service at William and Mary, Carter has served in various positions at both

Altshuler Scholarship Winner Studies In Israel

Suanna Selby, an intern at the Center for Archaeological Research, spent the summer in Israel, recipient of the first Nathan Altshuler Scholarship for Summer Field Study in Anthropology. This scholarship was established to assist anthropology students by giving them summer field study experience that they can use in the preparation of their senior theses.

Selby worked with a Semetic Museum field school run by Harvard University at Ashkelon. She worked an eight-hour work day in the field for seven weeks learning excavation and documentation techniques, map-making, field photography, and many other basic skills.

Selby is currently working on her senior thesis for which she will draw on both her experiences last summer and her current internship.

President of the Anthropology Club, Selby is planning to go to graduate school to continue her studies in anthropology and is particularly interested in photography and the interpretation of anthropological issues into layman's language for the general public.

Among those who are scheduled to participate are William Banks, law professor at Syracuse University; Paul Barrett of the Wall Street Journal; Joan Biskupic of The Washington Post; John Blume, executive director of the Southern Carolina Death Penalty Resource Center in Columbia; and Daan Braveman, associate dean at Syracuse University College of Law.

Richard Carelli of the Associated Press; Walter Dellinger, law professor at Duke University; Lyle Denniston of The Baltimore Sun; Neal Devins, law professor; Davison Douglas, law professor; Aaron Epstein of Knight-Ridder Newspapers; Michael Gerhardt, law professor; and Linda Greenhouse of The New York Times.

Judith Ledbetter, law professor; Tracy Maclin, law professor at Boston University; Paul Marcus, law professor; Tony Mauro of USA Today; David Savage of The Los Angeles Times; John Tucker, a lawyer and freelance writer; and Stephen Wermiel, formerly of The Wall Street Journal and now a faculty member at Georgia State University Law School.

Rodney Smolla, director of the Institute of Bill of Rights Law, will serve as moderator for much of the program.

Friday evening will feature a moot court case and a town meeting on the future direction of the Supreme Court, allowing audience members to discuss their points of view with the conference panels.

Along with an examination of the Supreme Court's most important cases, Saturday will feature a second moot court presentation, small group seminar discussions and a debate on press coverage of the judiciary. Saturday's events begin at 9:30 a.m.

Katherine Kulick Co-Authors New French Textbook, Notez Bien!

Katherine Kulick, assistant professor of French, is co-author with Frederick L. Toner of Texas Christian University, of a new textbook for French. Notez Bien! comes complete with a cassette for home study.

Notez Bien! focuses on the progressive development of functional writing skills through contextualized assignments that reflect their real-world relationship between writing and the other language skills (speaking, listening and reading).

The new book consists of 10 chapters, each structured around an authentic writing task and a substantive theme selected for its relevance to student interests. Writing tasks range from drafting personal and professional correspondence to note-taking, summarizing articles, formulating opinions, or poetry and story writing. Substantive themes include French-Canadian culture, job hunting, study abroad options, environmental concerns and more.

The natural link between writing and the other language modalities is underscored through the use of authentic reading texts (written by and for native speakers of French) and the audio recordings of non-scripted discussion and interviews that accompany each chapter.

Kulick is co-author with Ron and Susan St. Onge and David King of the modern language department at Christopher Newport University of two texts, Passerelles and Interaction, which is currently out in a third edition.

Kulick Offers Encouragement To Adult Foreign Language Students

To adult students who have hesitated to begin study of a foreign language: Take heart, it is not too late. You'll do fine.

Katherine Kulick has encouraging words for adult students returning to foreign language study after a sometimes lengthy absence.

Although she is an enthusiastic advocate of starting foreign language study in elementary school, Kulick, who has done research to back up her claim—says adults make fine language students.

How people learn languages, especially adults, is of special interest to Kulick, who has a doctorate in second language acquisition and foreign language teaching methodology from the Pennsylvania State University. Kulick has written on "Foreign Language Proficiency and the Adult Learner," and has been invited to speak on the subject at foreign language conferences, at universities with strong adult enrollments and by the U.S. Department of Defense.

Nationally, 45 percent of students enrolled in undergraduate programs in the United States are adult learners (over the age of 25), says Kulick. By 1996 that percentage is predicted to rise to over 50 percent.

"Adult learners are not at a disadvantage," says Kulick. "They do not learn less well than younger students, they learn differently." The learning strategies that adults bring to their studies have evolved over time and reflect their experiences beyond the classroom. Foreign language practice that would best reflect what we know about adult learning would reduce the amount of material presented at one time, integrate or relate new structures to previously learned material and call on students to synthesize more in responding to questions.

Instruction integrating cultural information with language skill practice and attention to conversational discourse strategies would take the place of brisk, generic mechanical substitutions and automatic responses. The challenge for both instructors and returning students is to look beyond the traditional pedagogical assumptions and techniques that may be incongruent with adult learning needs.

Recognition of how individuals differ in their learning strategies is beneficial—not only for adult learners—but for traditional-age college students as well. It alters our selection of classroom materials and the types of tasks we, as faculty, ask our students to perform, said Kulick.

Kulick was influenced to become a teacher by teachers she remembers. "I saw the impact they could have and I wanted to have that kind of impact too," she recalls. With a facility for language and an interest in art, literature and history, Kulick found that teaching a foreign language gave her the opportunity to explore the many facets of a foreign civilization. Throughout her career she has maintained a special interest in different ways of teaching language.

Grant Deadlines

Application forms for faculty Summer Research Grants, Semester Research Grants, and Minor Research Grants (NOTE: undergraduate and graduate students are also eligible for Minor Research Grants, which normally do not exceed $500) are available from the Grants Office, James Blair 201, or call Anne Womack at ext. 13967 to receive one in campus mail.

Applicants should read the policy and principles statement attached to the applications before submitting a proposal.

Deadlines will be strictly enforced. The deadlines are:

Semester Research Grants—Oct. 1
Summer Research Grants—Oct. 22
Minor Research Grants—Jan. 30, 1993.

Prayer And Reflection Service Sept. 27

An interdenominational meditation group will meet for a prayer and reflection service, modeled after a Quaker meeting at 10:30 a.m., Sunday, Sept. 27 in the first-floor lounge of Jefferson Hall.

For further information, call Justin Greene-Roesel at ext. 14802.

Richard Palmer Writers On Tragedy And Tragic Theory

Richard H. Palmer, professor of theatre and speech, is the author of a new book, Tragedy and Tragic Theory, published by Greenwood Publishing Group, Inc.

Comprehending tragedy has been a major philosophical and critical preoccupation in Western thought. In an effort to bring order to the multiple and often conflicting perspectives, Palmer has analyzed the principal ideas about tragedy from Plato to the present, pointing out similarities and differences. He has analyzed features associated with tragedy, such as the tragic hero and catharsis, and applied these ideas to a sampling of plays that present special interpretive problems.

In the preface Palmer explains that the book "grew out of a need to guide my students through the complexities of tragedy and tragic theory. The journalistic compulsion to label any disaster a 'tragedy,' and pat textbook definitions based on the idea of punishment for a 'flaw,' ignore the intricacies confronted by serious critics and philosophers trying to understand and explain the full meaning of the word tragedy and the varieties of experience that it attempts to describe."

"This book," adds Palmer, is a temporary pause to take stock, to bring order to an apparent disarray of ideas and to guide the reader through a maelstrom of concepts."

Palmer, whose specialties range from theatre aesthetics and dramatic theory to stage direction, lighting and theatre management, is the author of The Lighting Art (1985) and The Critics' Canon (Greenwood Press, 1988).

Teresa Williams Is New Director Of Rita Welsh Adult Skills Program

Teresa Williams the new director of the Rita Welsh Adult Skills Programs, is well prepared for her position, having spent the last 20 years in the adult literacy field. She comes to William and Mary from Andover, Mass. where she was Williams says she is delighted to be joining a program which has a positive image in the community. One of her particular skills is helping people prepare for the GED. The high school diploma equivalent, says Williams, gives a person a sense of accomplishment and independence.

Williams is married; her husband is director of human resources for the National Center for State Courts. The Williams family also includes three daughters: Helen, a first year law student at Emory University; Anne, a sophomore at Howard University; and Dana, a freshman at Lafayette High School in Williamsburg.

"I really enjoy working with people who choose to come back and get more education," says Williams. "They have a positive attitude because they have made the decision to go back to school."

The program needs more volunteers for the semester, both from the College and Williamsburg communities. Volunteers are asked to make a commitment of two hours per week. For detailed information on volunteering, call ext. 13325. Volunteers from the community will receive a parking decal for use when they are on campus. There is a special need for tutors who wish to teach English as a second language and for math and reading skills to prepare students for the GED.

The Center is open Monday and Wednesday from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m.; Tuesday and Thursdays from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. and 7 to 9 p.m.; and Fridays from 9 a.m. to noon.

Teresa Williams

a literacy specialist with the Lawrence Public Library, working in a program funded by the Barbara Bush Foundation.

She was director of adult education at Durham Community College for seven years. She is a native of Memphis, Tenn., and attended the Benedictine College in Atchison, Kan., graduating with a bachelor's in sociology.

VACU To Hold Car Sale Oct. 22-24

The fall issue of Today, the newsletter of the Virginia Credit Union, Inc., has a number of money-saving tips.

The VACU will hold its car sale Oct. 22-24. Members get reduced loan rates and pay special prices for cars at participating dealers. Save on new and used cars when you shop during this private sale for members only. Repayment can be made through payroll deduction. Call the credit union for details.

New car loan rates as of Aug. 15 were 7.75% APR for a 36-month car loan or 8.25% APR for a 48- or 60-month loan. Qualified borrowers can borrow up to 100% of the value of the car.

Members may get a loan for $1,000 or more and pay 10% annual percentage rate.

VACU also offers no-service-charge checking and low credit card fees. Credit union members get preferred rates and pay low annual fees on MasterCard, VISA and VISA Gold. There is also a 1/2% rebate on all purchases made with VISA Gold.

Credit Union membership is limited to employees and retirees of the Commonwealth of Virginia; employees of all political subdivisions of the Commonwealth of Virginia who participate in the Virginia Retirement System; employees of the University of Richmond, Virginia Union University, Randolph Macon College and families of credit union members. A $5 membership fee and a $5 minimum deposit are required to join.

Computer Center Offering New Electronic Mail System

By Loretta Early
Micro Software Coordinator

This fall, as a result of a joint development with the computer science department, the Computer Center is offering a new electronic mail system.

Electronic mail, or E-mail, is a means of written communication between people using a computer. Usually, the information communicated is ordinary text, but it can also contain word-processor and other computer files. E-mail can provide a more efficient means of distributing department memos or information to specific individuals or groups around campus.

Not only can faculty, staff and students use E-mail to communicate with colleagues on campus, but by using "Internet" or "Bitnet," they can communicate with people at other universities all over the world.

Internet is a worldwide network connecting both educational institutions and business organizations. Bitnet is another international network that connects only educational institutions.

A faculty member can send a message to a scholar at MIT faster than he or she could address an envelope. Before a first-class letter could make it to the University of Virginia, academicians from Germany, France and California could have appraised a research article and made final suggestions for publication.

Pegasus Mail, or P-mail, is the electronic mail system that will be available to faculty, students and staff here. P-mail can be installed on any of the IBM-compatible personal computers in the labs or offices on campus, and on your computer at home. On-campus computers must have access to an ADI; home computers must have a modem.

P-mail is a simple program that is completely menu-driven. To send a message, just type "S" for send, and the computer will take it from there. When new mail arrives, just hit "N" to read it. And, unlike those burgeoning file cabinets with arcane letters written in a script that would make some doctors jealous, P-mail can organize those letters and save hours of searching through circular file cabinets.

This summer the Computer Center installed P-mail on the student lab computers. Lab users need to have a blank disk that P-mail will use to set up and store their electronic mail messages. During the next few weeks the software will be distributed and installed on campus office computers. Students ordering ADIs from Telecommunications for their IBM-compatible computers will receive the software with the ADI installation.

Departments or individuals who would like to install P-mail on their own may order installation packets, containing disks and instructions, from the Computer Center by calling ext. 13002.

Shaver also attended the Academy of Management meeting in Las Vegas this summer. He recently served as a member of two National Science Foundation review panels, one of which was the 1993 Undergraduate Course and Curriculum Development Program in the division of undergraduate science, engineering and mathematics education; the other, a small business innovation research proposal review conducted by the Decision Risk and Management Sciences program.

Sociology

Susan Bosworth, Gary Kreps, Kathleen Slevin and John Stansfield recently attended the annual meeting of the American Sociological Association in Pittsburgh. Kreps and Bosworth presented a paper, "A Theory of Organizing and Role Enactment" at the session on group processes. Kreps also continued serving on the ASA Committee on Freedom of Research and Teaching. Stansfield presented a paper at the Philanthropy and Social Change session on "Foundation Executives and the Colonization of America" and continues to serve on an ASA ad hoc committee organized to establish an archive for the association. Slevin began her service on the ASA Committee to establish workshops for the section on sex and gender.

School of Education

Roger D. Baldwin, associate professor, co-authored with Ann E. Austin, Faculty Collaboration: Enhancing the Quality of Scholarship and Teaching. This is the ASHE-ERIC Higher Education Report No. 7 (Washington, D.C.: The George Washington University, School of Education and Human Development). Baldwin has returned to the College after a two-year tenure as program director in the office of studies, evaluation and dissemination, with The National Science Foundation.

Professor James W. Beers, co-authored with Carol S. Beers, a chapter in Development of Orthographic Knowledge and Foundations of Literacy: A Memorial Festschrift for Edmund H. Henderson, edited by Shane Templeton and Donald R. Bear (Hillsdale, New Jersey: Lawrence Erlbaum Associates Publishers) 1992. It is titled "Children's Spelling of English Inflectional Morphology."

Professor Mark Gulesian directed this summer's Eastern Virginia Writing Project.

Professor Ronald N. Giese was the recipient of the Educational Press Association of America's Distinguished Achievement Award for excellence in educational journalism for his science fair reference issue.

Virginia K. Laycock, associate professor, co-authored "Regular Classroom Integration of Adolescents with Emotional/Behavioral Disorders in Perspective" in Programming for Adolescents with Behavioral Disorders, vol. 5, published by the Council for Children with Behavioral Disorders.

James H. Stronge, associate professor and coordinator of the Educational Administration Program for the School of Education, edited Educating Homeless Children and Adolescents: Evaluations, Policy and Practice, Newbury Park: Sage Publications, 1992.

Stronge presented a paper on "Educational Opportunities for Homeless Children and Adolescents: From Access to Success" at the annual meeting of the American Educational Research Association in April. Also for AERA, Stronge co-authored "A Performance Evaluation System for Professional Support Personnel," for Educational Evaluation and Policy Analysis, vol. 14, no. 2.

John Thelin, Chancellor Professor of Education, wrote "Athletics in Higher Education," in the recently published Encyclopedia of Education Research, sixth edition, vol. 1.

He reviewed two books, Gender and Higher Education in the Progressive Era by Lynn D. Gordon; and Outside In: Minorities and the Transformation of American Education by Paula S. Pass in the journal, Reviews in American History, vol. 20, no. 2 (June 1992). The reviews appear in an article titled "Left Outs and Left Overs: The Limits of Education and Social Reform Since 1980."

Computer Usage On Campus To Be Audited

The increase in the number of personal computers on campus has enhanced faculty and administrator productivity, efficiency and access to mainframe computer resources and data. With these new capabilities come new responsibilities for the user. The College's Systems Administrator, Jim Carter, recently distributed bound copies of Information Security Policies. This document explains College policies for complying with Commonwealth and federal laws and regulations. Should you desire a copy, please contact Carter at ext. 13004.

In recent months, colleges and universities have become subjects of federal audits for software copyright violations. Many of these audits result in stringent penalties and fines for a number of these institutions. In order to ensure the College is in compliance with the various Commonwealth and federal laws and regulations, the Office of Internal Audit will be conducting audits of personal and mainframe computer usage throughout the campus.

If you have any questions concerning what is or is not proper hardware and software usage, please feel free to contact the College's Systems Administrator at ext. 13004 for the Office of Internal Audit at ext. 12047.

1960-1980 by Clark Kerr.

A fourth review by Thelin of The Character of Higher American Education and Intercollegiate Sport by Donald Chu appeared in the Journal of Higher Education.

Drawing from the work of his student, Elizabeth Crowder, Thelin published an article in Change: The Magazine of Higher Learning (Jan./Feb. 1992) titled "The Curriculum Crusades and the Conservative Backlash."

School of Marine Science/VIMS

Marine scientists Jacque van Montfrans and Karen Metcalf were joined by School of Marine Science graduate students Adele Pile, Judy Haner and Heinz Proft in presenting research papers at the summer meeting of The Crustacean Society, June 12-14 in Charleston, S.C. Haner and Proft received two of the three "Best Student Paper" awards given at the meeting. Haner's presentation was titled "Ovarian Developmental Stages and Distribution of the Potential Spawning Stock of Blue Crabs in Chesapeake Bay." The paper presented by Proft was titled "Impact of Spiny Lobster in Artificial Habitats on Macrobenthic Community Structure in Florida Bay."

Professor George C. Grant recently returned from a visit to the Universitat de Illes Balear in Palma de Mallorca, the site of the Second International Workshop of the Chaetognath Group, an association of specialists on this marine phylum.

He presented an invited talk on "Chaetognaths in a Different Light: Silhouette Photography ROVs, and Videofilming," and distributed listings of the current holdings in the Chaetognath Reference Library, housed at the Virginia Institute of Marine Science.

The Chaetognath Group has provided the majority of the documents in this specialized, worldwide collection of literature.

Group representatives from Spain, France, England, Norway, Germany, Italy, the Netherlands, India, Japan, Canada and the United States attended the meeting.

Five Former Tribe Stars Helping Collect Titles In The Pro Ranks

The 1992 professional football season sees five former William and Mary players who are collecting paychecks and titles in the NFL or CFL.

Two teams, the defending Super Bowl champion Washington Redskins and the AFC champion Buffalo Bills, have two former Tribe players each. Former All-American (1990) running back Robert Green and record-setting signal caller Chris Hakel, who both finished their college careers last season, are playing for the Redskins.

The Bills have 1984 All-American and Academic All-American defensive back Mark Kelso, who was a 1988 All-Pro as selected by Sports Illustrated. This summer Buffalo also signed 1988-89 All American kicker Steve Christie as a Plan B free agent from Tampa Bay.

Michael "Pinball" Clemons, who plays for the defending CFL Champion Toronto Argonauts, was an All American selection in 1986 and voted Most Valuable Player in the CFL during the 1990 season.
