Judith Dubas To Speak At Brown Bag Lunch Today

Judith Dubas, assistant professor of psychology, will speak on "My First War: Young Adolescents' Responses to the Persian Gulf War" at today's Women's Studies Brown Bag Lunch, noon to 1 p.m. in CC room E.

Law School To Salute Jefferson; Cutler Lecture Set April 12

The Marshall-Wythe School of Law will mark Thomas Jefferson's 250th birthday, April 13 with a tercentenary lecture by Paul D. Carrington, Chadwick Professor at Duke University School of Law.

Carrington will speak on "Thomas Jefferson's Vision of a Law School" at 3:30 p.m., in room 127 of the law school. A colonial birthday celebration will be held on the patio at the law school.

Frank I. Michelman, professor of law at the Harvard Law School will deliver the 1992-93 Cutler Lecture, titled "Federalism and Jurisprudence," at 3:30 p.m., April 12, in room 124. This talk sponsored by the Institute of Bill of Rights Law.

Carrington is a member of the American Law Institute and a Fellow of the American Bar Foundation. He has been a member of the board of editors of The Journal of Legal Education and general editor of Law and Contemporary Problems. From 1984 to 1986 Carrington served as a member of the executive committee of the Association of American Law Schools. He is the author of more than 70 scholarly articles, essays and book reviews. His books include Justice on Appeal (1976) (with Meador and Rosenberg) and Cases and Comments on the Process of Adjudication (1983) (with Babcock).

Michelman is the author of numerous scholarly articles and of "Materials on Government in Urban Areas." He is a member of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences.

The Cutler lectures were established in 1927 by James Goold Cutler of Rochester, N.Y., to provide for an annual lecture by an outstanding authority on the Constitution of the United States.

Ernest L. Boyer

Boyer To Lecture Monday, April 12

Ernest L. Boyer, president of the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching and Commissioner of Education in the Carter Administration, will give the 1993 Higher Education Lecture at the College at 7:30 p.m., Monday, April 12. A reception will follow.

This lecture is open to the public as well as the campus community.

Battistoni On Campus April 8,9

Richard Battistoni, director of the civic education and community service program at Baylor University and currently on leave as visiting associate professor of political science at Rutgers University, will give a public lecture at 7:30 p.m., Thursday, April 8, in the Dodge Room of Phi Beta Kappa Memorial Hall.

Battistoni will take as his topic, "Public and Community Service: A Place in the University Curriculum?"

This lecture is co-sponsored by the Office of Student Affairs, the Charles Center and The Thomas Jefferson Program in Public Policy.

Battistoni's lecture is part of a two-day visit to campus. He will meet with Monroe Scholars at noon on Thursday and at 3:30 p.m. will take part in a public policy colloquium. He will speak on "A National Service Policy: Why, Why Now?" at the colloquium which will be held in Morton 342.

On Friday he will speak at a luncheon meeting with department chairs, academic deans and other administrators. His topic will be "Public and Community: Service Across the Disciplines."

Battistoni has many publications to his credit. His book, Public Schooling and the Education of Democratic Citizens was se-

Cate-Arries Wins PBK Scholarship Award

The 1993 Phi Beta Kappa Society Faculty Award for the Advancement of Scholarship has been made by Alpha Chapter of Virginia to Francie Cate-Arries, associate professor of modern languages. The award was created through an endowment made by John D. Rockefeller Jr. to recognize a member of the faculty for scholarly achievements.

Cate-Arries was named an Alumni Fellow in Sept. 1992.

Cate-Arries, a specialist in 20th-century Spanish literature, has devoted much of her published work to the role of metaphor in contemporary literature by writers such as Garcia Lorca, Manuel Altolaguirre and Juan Ramon Jimenez. At present she is doing research for a study of the relationship of Lorca and his writing to the art and texts of Salvador Dali.

"Like many literature professors and critics, my career grew out of a love affair with language," Cate-Arries recalled in her acceptance speech. I still clearly recall my absolute excitement as a 14-year-old schoolgirl when I memorized my first textbook dialogue in Spanish—who knows what it was about—something useful like "My uncle has a green pencil box." From the beginning I always had a very playful sense that I was learning a "secret" language, learning to "break a code," and by doing so could gain entry into a whole other world, another culture, another way of seeing and thinking about things.

"Of course, in the ninth grade my introduction to this 'other culture' could not have been more chock-full of stereotypes: it consisted of a spring trip to the big city of Savannah, of eating at a genuine Mexican restaurant, learning to sing 'La Cucaracha' and doing the Mexican hat dance. But I was already hooked on the Spanish language itself.

Francie Cate-Arries

"Years later, as an undergraduate completing a concentration in newspapers in the School of Journalism at the University of Georgia, I had the opportunity to take several courses in the department of romance languages with a Spanish poet, Manuel Mantero. Professor Mantero spoke no English, and my Spanish vocabulary had not gone much past 'My uncle has a green pencil box,' but I was completely and irrevocably, transfixed by the sounds and combinations, images, rhythms and secret possibilities of yet another language, the language of poetry and literature. My commitment to learning how to listen to the sounds of this new language, and interpret them, was thus strengthened, and led to my

NOTES

Crime Prevention Tips

With the weather turning warm, everyone starts thinking about opening the doors and windows and letting in the sunshine. Here are a few things to keep in mind to stay a little safer this spring:

When you leave your office or room, close your windows and lock your doors, even if you will only be out "for a minute."

When out riding your bicycle, make yourself visible to motorists and be sure you are familiar with the Virginia state laws concerning bicycle riding.

As always, be aware of your surroundings while you are out. Just because the days are longer doesn't mean you can take fewer precautions. Nice weather doesn't just bring out the nice people.

Police Blotter

During the period of March 19 through April 1, the William and Mary Police Department investigated 13 larcenies; 10 phone call complaints; 13 suspicious person complaints; two suspicious incidents; nine alcohol-related incidents with one resulting in an arrest; two vehicle accidents; one assault, one assault and battery; one attempted abduction; two disorderly conducts with one resulting in an arrest; seven damage to property reports; one domestic dispute and two trespassing incidents.

Anyone with information pertaining to the attack on a young man near the Bryan Complex early Saturday morning is asked to contact the Campus Police at ext. 14596.

The incident followed an argument in a nearby restaurant. The victim was visiting campus. The two men involved in the beating were college-age, but not William and Mary students.

Free Tax Help

Law students participating in the Volunteer Income Tax Assistance program (VITA), sponsored by the IRS, will be available to help with tax questions and prepare income tax returns on Saturday, April 10, from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. and Wednesday, April 14, from 3:30 p.m. to 6:30 p.m. in Campus Center, room E.

Rutt Ph.D. Oral Scheduled Today

Paul M. Rutt will take the final oral examination for the Ph.D. degree in physics at 3:30 p.m., today, in the conference room of Small Hall. This session is open to the public.

Rutt's dissertation topic is "The Recoil Momentum Dependence of the d(e,én)p Cross Section."

Commemorative Stamps Available At Campus PO

The U.S. Postal Service recently issued commemorative stamps featuring the late Grace Kelly, Academy Award-winning actress and princess of Monaco, honoring the 50th anniversary of the famous stage and screen classic, "Oklahoma!" and celebrating the bicentennial of the first American circus performance.

A commemorative stamp on the Cherokee Strip is due out April 19 and Broadway Musicals commemorative stamp booklets will be available July 15.

Stamp collectors should contact Patty L. Lindsey, director of College Postal Services, for more details concerning commemorative stamps. The Campus Post Office, in Old Dominion Hall, is open Monday through Friday from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Staloff To Give Institute Paper

Darren M. Staloff, a postdoctoral fellow at the Institute of Early American History and Culture, will give a paper on "The Failure of Puritan Political Economy and the Rise of Trade" at 7:30 p.m., Tuesday, April 13, in the Institute located in Swem Library.

In the early 1640s a depression struck the Bay colony and unleashed a spiraling deflation that threatened the economic viability of the settlement. From pulpit and courthouse, the orthodox regime responded with a series of initiatives in keeping with their 'productivist' political economy. While many of these initiatives were imaginative and far-reaching, ultimately they failed to end the depression of the 1640s. Instead, it was maritime commerce, and with it the resurgent mercantile bourgeoisie, that revived Massachusetts' economy in its hour of need.

Copies of the paper are available for reading at the Institute, the history department and the Commonwealth Center.

Conference On Racial Issues Set Tonight In Trinkle

A conference to discuss solutions to racial conflict will be held in Trinkle Hall at 7 p.m., tonight.

Speakers will include Garland Hunt, national director, New Generation Ministries; and Richard Land, executive director, Christian Life Commission of the Southern Baptist Convention. Both men grew up in the era of segregation in the south and will speak of their experiences with racism and offer ways of resolving deep-seeded problems of racial tensions.

The conference is sponsored by several campus organizations including the Baptist Student Union, New Generation Ministries, Campus Crusade for Christ, the Canterbury Association, Agape Christian Fellowship, the Wesley Foundation and the Society for the Promotion of Racial Harmony.

Grad Students Sponsor Macedo

The Graduate Student Association of Arts and Sciences is sponsoring a talk by Stephen Macedo '79 on "Public Schooling, Religious Liberty, and American Liberalism," at 7:30 p.m., Monday, April 19, in the Marshall-Wythe School of Law, room 119.

An expert in constitutional interpretation, judicial review, political theory and public policy, Macedo, who received his baccalaureate degree in economics, is currently a member of the faculty of Harvard University.

MOST Speaker

The Math Organization of Students will sponsor a talk by Alexandra Tolstoy of the Naval Research Laboratory at 3 p.m., Friday, April 16 in Tyler 201. Tolstoy will speak on "Underwater Acoustics and the Hunt for Red October." Election of officers for next year will be held following the program.

All students are invited.

SEAC Plans Earth Day Program April 17

The Student Environmental Action Coalition, SEAC, is sponsoring an Earth Day celebration on Saturday, April 17, in the Sunken Garden.

The program will begin at 11 a.m. and continue into the evening.

Environmental education booths will be set up, and information will be available on a variety of programs as well as state and national environmental organizations.

Bands and cultural groups on campus who will provide entertainment during the day.

Planners are billing the day as an enjoyable learning experience.

Pottery Sale To Benefit Studio

There will be a sale of work done in the ceramics studio in the Campus Center lobby, Wednesday and Thursday, April 14, 15 from noon to 7 p.m.

The sale includes primarily functional pieces which make great graduation, wedding and setting up house-keeping gifts.

Proceeds from the sale go to further the educational objectives of the ceramics studio program.

Gore Child Care Center Seeking Used Toys

The Gore Child Care Center would appreciate donations of old, useable toys, suitable for children ages six weeks to six years.

Please contact Fran Dorsey at ext. 12121 to arrange pick-up of donations.

Easter Egg Workshop

The Russian Club invites students who would like to learn to paint Easter eggs, Russian style, to come to a workshop at 7 p.m., Thursday, April 15 in Washington 201.

Bring a hard boiled egg. Other supplies will be furnished.

For further information call Sara at ext. 14839.

Improved Dial-In Computer Access

The Computer Center has recently completed the installation of 24 modems that provide an alternative method to outside users for accessing computers on campus.

Data calls from campus to off-campus sites will continue to go through the existing modems located in Telecommunications.

The modems located in the Computer Center provide connectivity at 300, 1200 and 2400 bps—eight of them also provide connectivity at 9600 bps. These modems are tested daily to ensure that integrity is maintained to the voice/data switch.

To access this modem pool use the following numbers:

221-1512 - 300/1200/2400 bps

221-1513 - 300/1200/2400 bps

221-1514 - 300/1200/2400/9600 bps.

Dudley Triathlon Set For April 24

The 10th annual Karen Dudley Memorial Triathlon will be held on Saturday, April 24, at 8 a.m. at the William and Mary Rec Center.

The race will consist of an 800-yard swim, 5K run and 12-mile bike race. Entry fees are: students $20, open $30, student teams $36 and open team $45.

Proceeds will be donated to the Karen Dudley Memorial and Kinesiology Majors Scholarship funds.

Entries are limited to the first 250 and must be received with the entry fee by noon, Friday, April 16. Entry forms may be picked up in Adair Gym or the Rec Center. For more information, call Deborah Carr, race director, at ext. 14925.

Bukzin Seeks Help For Ailing Brother Through Bone Marrow Transplant

Jay Bukzin has a question for the current round of hearings on health care being held by the Clinton administration. Why does it cost $200,000 for a bone marrow replacement procedure—and that is not including the hospital costs?

A junior and a biology major, Bukzin has more than an academic interest in the answer. Bukzin is currently working to help his brother Alan, who has acute leukemia and a bone marrow transplant may be his best chance of survival.

Spurred by support from his fraternity, Sigma Chi, and other members of the Greek community, Bukzin has organized a visit by the Red Cross to process volunteers in the hope of finding a match for Alan.

The Red Cross will be in Trinkle Hall April 28 from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. and 3 to 6 p.m. Cost of the initial blood test is $60. Donors should be between the ages of 18 and 55. Those who cannot donate, but wish to contribute are asked to donate the fee for a donor. Anyone who would like to sponsor a donor may send a check to the American Red Cross, National Marrow Donor Program, c/o Jay Bukzin, College Station Box 35410, Williamsburg, VA 23186. A federally financed program waives the fee for Asians, Afro-Americans, native Americans and Hispanics.

Jay Bukzin

The tests from each donor will be cataloged in the national Red Cross bone marrow registry. Bukzin hopes one will provide a match for Alan, but his brother's plight has prompted Bukzin to take a multi-approach to the problem. He wants to help spread the word about the registry; get as many people as possible to contribute, either actively or through donations; get as many eligible people as possible to take advantage of the Federal program; and enlarge the holdings of the registry. Bukzin is also working to get the word out about the bone marrow program.

Last year, Jennifer M. Ash, donor center coordinator for the National Marrow Donor Program of the Mid-Atlantic Region of the American Red Cross, came on campus to participate in a salute to Doug Baker, a graduate student, who had contributed bone marrow to help a cancer patient. Initially Baker donated to help history professor Whittenburg, but testing showed he was not a match. Once in the national registry, however, Baker's donation proved a match for another patient who is now on the road to recovery.

After the initial blood donation is collected, a battery of tests are performed before the donor actually undergoes the procedure of giving bone marrow, which is done under general anesthesia, but does not involve invasive surgery. Baker, by the way, was back jogging two or three days after his donation and back at work in a week.

Alan Bukzin, 13, has battled cancer since he was two-and-a-half years old. He has been in remission, once for six years and again for four years. This time, says Jay, doctors expect the period to be two years. Currently homebound while he recovers from a round of chemotherapy, Alan is in good spirits, says his brother. "He seems to be taking all this better than the rest of the family," said Jay. Jay has had to drop a class to fit in his campaign for Alan. "I can take the course again next year," he said, "and besides, that seems secondary now."

Cate-Arries

decision following graduation from the university to pursue a graduate degree in Spanish literature. Following several trips to Spain, including a year spent teaching English at the Language Institute at the University of Sevilla, I found myself on an elevator in Madison, Wis., going to the Spanish department on the 12th floor.

Cate-Arries describes the topics of her published research as eclectic. They have covered authors and works in both the 19th and 20th centuries. Concerning her current research dealing with the writings of the Spanish painter Salvador Dali, she says, "I really have felt like a detective myself, hot on the trail of textual signifiers. Dali wrote and published prolifically throughout his lifetime; he died in 1989 at the age of 84. The painter—consummate joker and showman—takes particular delight, as a writer, in creating puzzles with his words, and teasing his reader with them, enticing her/him to make the pieces fit. The titles of some of his most important written works reveal his propensity for using language as a mask. His 1942 autobiography is The Secret Life of Salvador Dali; his 1944 novel is Hidden Faces; a 1942 article on his artistic method is called "Total Camouflage."

Cate-Arries says she finds connections, "linked together by a so-called 'secret' or 'hidden' identity peeking from behind Dali's words."

In her acceptance speech, Cate-Arries included special thanks to the members of her department. "I have found in the department of modern languages and literatures a supportive environment, which has been conducive to my scholarly pursuits. I thank my senior colleagues for their encouragement and example of professional excellence; I thank my junior colleagues for their infectious energy, creativity and fresh intellectual perspectives, all of which have stimulated my own research interests."

Ash Lawn Receives NEA Grant

The Summer Festival at Ash Lawn-Highland and its opera company have received a $5,000 National Endowment of the Arts Opera/Musical Theater grant. The Opera Company is one of 111 professional companies, including The Metropolitan Opera, the Lyric Opera of Chicago, and the Santa Fe Opera, which were awarded grants for the 1993 season.

The Summer Festival's professional Opera Company, a member of OPERA America Inc. will present its 16th season of opera and musical theater this summer, fully staged and sung in English. Productions will include Mozart's "Don Giovanni, Rodgers and Hammerstein's "Carousel" and Donizetti's "Don Pasquale."

Friend Of Arthur Miller To Direct 'Death Of A Salesman'

By Jennifer Klein '94

Ying Ruocheng, who translated "Death of a Salesman" from English to Chinese, staged the play, took the role of Willie Loman and invited playwright Arthur Miller to China to see his work, will direct the William and Mary Theatre production of "Death of a Salesman," April 15-18.

There will be three performances at 8:15 p.m. on April 15, 16 and 17, and a matinee at 2 p.m., all in Phi Beta Kappa Memorial Hall.

Tickets are $5 and may be reserved by calling the box office at ext. 12674.

Ying's friendship with Arthur Miller began in 1979 when the playwright visited China. "I had a friend who worked with that area (tourism) and he told me that the Arthur Miller might be on his list. I grabbed him from his tour group and had him visiting theaters, watching performances and meeting Chinese actors, dramatists and directors," said Ying. "We became friendly and decided we should put on one of his plays."

In 1982 the two men met in New York and discussed which play to produce.

"Originally, Arthur wanted to do 'The Crucible,' because Chinese artists had told him about the persecution. Miller felt the theme of witch trials would fit in, but by this time there were already too many of those kinds of plays. I suggested 'Death of a Salesman,' because I felt it was his most representative work," said Ying. "We agreed, and he said that I should play Willy Lowman and he should direct it."

"He came to China in 1983, by which time I had translated the play, done most of the casting and had the set design ready." The play got a lot of American press coverage including "Our Times," with Bill Moyers and a satellite interview between Miller and Ying during President Reagan's visit to China.

After the play was over, Miller wrote a book on his experiences based on diary entries he spoke into a tape recorder. Excerpts will be used as part of the PBK lobby exhibit.

In 1984 Miller invited Ying to see Dustin Hoffman in a revival of the play on Broadway. Said Ying, "I talked to Hoffman after the show. We shared mutual complaints about playing Willy Lowman. It's so exhausting, you can't do matinee performances." Ying came to William and Mary after meeting Richard Palmer, professor of theatre and speech, in Beijing several years ago. "He was interested in Chinese modern theatre and extended an open invitation to me if I could find time to come to Williamsburg," said Ying.

After completing a film with Bernardo Bertolucci, Ying contacted Palmer and decided on "Death of a Salesman."

"The purpose of the production is the passing on of knowledge," said Ying. "Although I'm from China, I had the opportunity to work with Arthur Miller. I felt I had something to pass on from the horse's mouth."

Ying describes the William and Mary cast as very hard working. "It has been interesting for me. I've always looked at the play from the inside out. Now I'm looking at it from the outside in. I've learned a lot."

Ying got his start in theatre in 1946 at the University of Tsing Hua in Beijing where he majored in English literature.

He graduated in 1950 and became one of the first crop of university graduates since the founding of the People's Republic of China in 1949.

Ying helped found the Beijing People's Art Theater, based on the Moscow Art Theater. "I remained with that group practically all my life except for the Cultural Revolution. ... All theater was banned. They sent all the actors and stage workers to the countryside to a kind of farm to grow rice. I became a kind of target for criticism because of my activities in introducing Western theater to China," explained Ying.

After a few years of harassment, he got out of theater and became a journalist for China Reconstructs. Friends in the English-speaking community took Ying in as a refugee from the Cultural Revolution for almost three years before it ended in 1978.

He then resumed work in the theater and remained with the Beijing People's Art Theater until 1986. He was instrumental in touring with his group in Germany, France, Switzerland, Japan, Hong Kong, Canada and Singapore. He translated, directed and acted in a number of Western classics including some of Shakespeare's works, also "Amadeus," "Major Barbara" and "The Caine Mutiny Court Martial," which Charlton Heston directed. His film credits also include a starring role in "The Last Emperor."

President's House Receives Gift Of 18th-Century Secretary

A walnut secretary, made in 18th-century Williamsburg and owned for over 250 years by successive generations of the Baytop, Stubbs and Sinclair families of Gloucester County, has been given to the President's House.

The donor is Dr. Caroline Baytop Sinclair, a 1924 alumna of the College who now resides at Westminster-Canterbury house in Richmond.

"I believe I am the 10th—possibly the 11th—generation of the Baytop family to own this secretary of 250 years," Dr. Sinclair told President Timothy J. Sullivan. "Although I am reluctant to part with it, I know that it will be well cared for and well housed."

The gift has also been acknowledged by Clement Conger of Alexandria, president of The Committee for the President's House.

The handsome piece is thought to have been commissioned in Williamsburg by Thomas Baytop of Gloucester County, who was born in the county of Kent in England and came to Gloucester with his parents. Baytop's son, James, married Sarah Smith of Purton Plantation in Gloucester, whose kinsmen were among the founders of Phi Beta Kappa at the College in 1776.

The secretary was used in the 18th century at the Baytop Plantation at Springfield in Gloucester County. Later it was moved to Church Hill, the Gloucester home of Anne Baytop Stubbs and her husband, James New Stubbs. Still later it was inherited by Lucy Baytop

Dr. Sinclair with antique secretary.

Sinclair, who left it to her son James Sinclair, of Bay Cottage. Most recently it was at the residence of Dr. Sinclair in Richmond.

"The tall secretary was known in the Sinclair family as Grandfather Baytop," Dr. Sinclair said. "In my family of six children, family furniture descended to the child with that family's name. Hence

I, Caroline Baytop, inherited this piece. When we acquired the secretary from my father's first cousin's estate, I was about eight years old. My sister Indie and I were intrigued that it had a secret drawer. Because we already had a secretary that had belonged to Grandpa Sinclair, we called this one 'Grandfather Baytop.'"

After graduating from William and Mary as one of the school's first coeds, Caroline Sinclair received a Ph.D. in physical education at New York University. At William and Mary she held the John Archer Coke scholarship and was a member of Phi Beta Kappa.

After teaching physical education in public and private schools, Carolina Sinclair returned to William and Mary to teach from 1944 to 1950. Thereafter she was a professor and head of the department of health and physical education at James Madison University until she retired in 1966. In Gloucester and Richmond, she has been active in historical and preservation activities, and she is the author of several volumes of Gloucester county history, including Four Families of Rosewell, and Gloucester's Past in Pictures.

Members of the Baytop, Stubbs and Sinclair families are among the many Gloucester county alumni of the College. One of the College's "Seven Wise Men," in the tenure of President Lyon Gardiner Tyler, was Professor Thomas Jefferson Stubbs, whose namesake son was also a professor at the College in the early 20th century.

Gift To CDR

Meredith Braskie, president of the BBA Association of the School of Business, presents a check for $350 to Corrine Garland, director of Child Development Resources. The contribution is to be used to support CDR's work with children and their families. The money was raised from the sale of School of Business T-shirts with a matching amount from the BBA association.

The presentation was made Friday when Mrs. Garland spoke at the business school as part of the Friday Speakers series. She discussed the importance of leadership and teamwork for both profit and not-for-profit organizations.

Swem Plans One-Day Seminar On Communications In The Electronic Age

As part of the College's tercentenary celebration, the Earl Gregg Swem Library is sponsoring a one-day seminar, "Scholarly Humanities Communications in the Electronic Age," on Tuesday, April 20, from 8:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. in the Campus Center, to explore the future of scholarly communication in the humanities and to encourage communication about the use and distribution of information among scholars.

The seminar is being funded through grants from the Virginia Endowment for the Humanities and Public Policy and the Council on Library Resources.

Sessions are free and open to the community.

Registration, including an optional lunch for $8, must be made by April 12 by calling Berna Heyman at ext. 13059.

The seminar will include presentations by experts on the role of technology in higher education and libraries, discussions and demonstrations of current uses of technology by faculty who teach in the humanities and discussion on issues and challenges for scholars using technology.

"Electronic Information and Its Implications for Higher Education: The Leap from 1693-1993 and Beyond" will be discussed by Stanley Katz, president, the American Council of Learned Societies. Paul German, Virginia Polytechnic Institute and State University, will discuss "Evolving Models of Library Support of Humanities Scholarship." Ava Michelson of the National Archives Administration will discuss "From the Current Tercentenary to the Next Decade: Projections for Libraries and Humanities Scholars." Susan Hockey, Center for Electronic Texts in the Humanities, Rutgers and Princeton Universities, will speak on "The Promise and Reality of Electronic Texts in the Humanities," and David Seaman will demonstrate the use of electronic text in the recently established Electronic Text Center at the University of Virginia.

Several faculty members will participate in the conference. Judy Ewell, chair, department of history, will talk about the use of an electronic journal; Robert Fehrenbach, professor of English, will provide a case study of his use of an online bibliographic database. The creation and use of an electronic bulletin board will be the topic of a presentation by Trotter Hardy, professor of law, Marshall-Wythe School of Law. Gary Smith, associate professor of modern languages, will demonstrate multimedia resources.

A Clarification

The percentages of minority students provided to the President for his Letter on Affirmative Action which appeared in the March 3 edition of the William and Mary News mistakenly included international students. Citizens of other countries bring great diversity to our community and should be considered in any full discussion of diversity. In the context of the statement, however, the correct percentages of minority U.S. citizens and permanent residents should have been 14.4 percent in the undergraduate student body and 9.9 percent in the graduate and professional schools. The information on African-American students (just under 7 percent) was correct. Students who are not U.S. citizens or permanent residents make up 2.6 percent of the William and Mary student body. If you have questions, please call Jean Scott at ext. 11284.

New Books At Swem Library

By Carol McAllister, bibliographer
and Michael Poteet '94

A Medieval Home Companion: Housekeeping in the Fourteenth Century, translated and edited by Tania Bayard. (Harper Collins Pub.) TX 17 M3913 1992.

When he married a 15-year-old bride in the late 1300s, a well-to-do Parisian citizen composed a manual of moral and domestic instructions for his young wife. Bayard has chosen to translate for the modern reader those sections of the manuscript that deal with "practical matters" in the life of a 14th-century housewife.

The result is an entertaining medieval "how-to" compendium. There's advice on dressing and speaking properly, caring for a husband, maintaining a garden, dealing with servants and being a success in the kitchen. A typical hint tells how to prepare sand for an hourglass.

This pleasant little volume (less than one-fourth of the original) is designed to appeal to general readers, but the details the book provides about marriage and household management in the Middle Ages should interest academics, too. Swem Library also owns the first English edition of the complete treatise, The Goodman of Paris, translated by Eileen Power (TX 17M45).

Out of Bounds by Tom McMillen with Paul Coggins (Simon & Schuster). GV 583 M37 1992.

"How the American sports establishment is being run by greed and hypocrisy — and what needs to be done about it." The subtitle of this book accurately reflects Tom McMillen's anger at the present condition of athletics in the United States and his passionate commitment to reforming them.

McMillen tells two stories in his book. One traces his own life as a high school basketball star, and all-American at the University of Maryland, a Rhodes Scholar at Oxford, an NBA player for 11 seasons, and a current member of Congress from Maryland's Fourth District.

The other explores serious problems at all levels of sport, from high schools to professional leagues — problems stemming from what McMillen calls "the greatest threat to sports": "the mind-set that views every contest ... is a win-at-all-costs war where rules are made to be broken."

In addition to probing diagnoses, however, McMillen offers possible solutions, including pieces of his own sports reform legislation for which he has fought in Congress. McMillen's book stresses the clear need for "a concerted effort by all interested parties ... to rescue sports from their corrupting influences and return the games to their proper perspective."

Small Worlds: Children and Adolescents in America, 1850-1950 edited by Elliott West and Paula Petrík (University of Kansas Press) HQ 792 U5S575 1992.

Despite the fact that children have always constituted a sizable portion of the population, their influence in shaping American society has not been closely examined. By approaching social history "from a slightly different perspective" — that of "the children's own motivations, goals, and acts," — the contributions to this collection consider the ways children have actively participated in molding the nation's character.

The essay topics are diverse. The reader is offered scenarios of children as immigrants and slaves, and moviegoers and consumers, as middle class progeny and wayward adolescents. The volume ends with a discussion of adult recollections of childhood and examines how these perceptions become part of one's adult identity. Small Worlds gives voice to those who in the past were admonished to "be seen, but not heard."

Assassins, Music and Lyrics by Stephen Sondheim; Book by John Weidman (Theatre Communications Group) ML 50 S705A7 1991.

Has the United States been too successful in raising its citizens' hopes for the "American dream?" Stephen Sondheim and John Weidman pose this question in their memorable musical. Their libretto explores the pain and frustration of nine actual or would-be Presidential assassins — men and women who, convinced that "prizes" in life are their inevitable inheritance but unable to win them, resort to desperate and destructive means of self-expression.

"Everybody's got the right to some sunshine," they lament. "Not the sun, but maybe one of its beams." Far from justifying or glamorizing assassins, however, the musical emphasizes the tragedy of their vision; as the show's narrator admonishes the assassins, "There are prizes all around you if you're wise enough to see."

While Presidential assassins make unorthodox subjects for musical theatre, the concept succeeds thanks to Weidman's darkly comic script and Sondheim's clever and often poignant lyrics.

Assassins reminds its audience that "angry men don't write the rules — and guns don't right the wrongs."

Romantic Love by Susan S. Hendrick and Clyde Hendrick (Sage Publications). HQ 801 H455 1992.

Courtship by Rodney M. Cate and Sally A. Lloyd (Sage Publications). HQ 801 C34 1992.

Is romantic love a natural human tendency or a culturally taught concept? Can the quality of a courtship accurately predict a couple's chances for a happy marriage? Do people experience love similarly across genders, ages and ethnicities? Do love relationships progress through consistently identifiable stages?

Starry-eyed romantics may frown upon scientific investigation of such questions, but these two volumes from the new Sage Series on Close Relationships provide concise, readable summaries of contemporary research on love and courtship.

Topics discussed include styles of loving, the history of dating, crises often faced by couples, and even the meaning of love. Never vague or sentimental, these books present scholarly and thought-provoking investigations into some of the most mysterious of human emotions.

Origins of the Gulag: The Soviet Prison Camp System 1917-1934 by Michael Jakobson (University Press of Kentucky) HV 9712 J35 1993.

Jakobson's examination of the development of the infamous Soviet prison system centers on the bureaucratic agencies that managed the camps and prisons. Gleaning information from government decrees, agency journals and documents collected by the Hoover Institution, the author explains how interagency rivalries and self-serving adherence to ineffective policies lead to the expansion of the brutal system of confinement.

Among these destructive principles was the Bolshevik notion of reeducation under controlled conditions and the attempt to achieve prison self-sufficiency through inmate labor. Official pursuit of these unattainable goals perpetuated nationwide suffering and fear, circumstances which enabled dictators to prevail.

Origins of the Gulag uncovers the underpinnings of the former Soviet totalitarian state. Readers will be dismayed by the revelations.

Hitchcock: The Making of a Reputation by Robert E. Kapsis (University of Chicago Press). PN 1998.3 H58K36 1992.

Robert Kapsis presents readers not with a biography of the "master of suspense," but rather with a biography of his reputation. Tracing Alfred Hitchcock's career from his early days as a maker of silent films in Britain to his final Hollywood "thrillers," Kapsis focuses on the methods Hitchcock used throughout his life to shape his own public image. Kapsis also analyzes the many fluctuations in Hitchcock's reputation after the director's death, as well as his continuing influence on cinematic art today.

Film scholars will appreciate the thorough research and documentation of Kapsis's study, and film buffs will enjoy new insights into some of Hitchcock's greatest works. Hitchcock is an informative account of tensions between commercial success and critical acclaim, as well as the techniques one filmmaker used to overcome them.

The Literary Guide and Companion to Middle England by Robert M. Cooper (Ohio University Press) PR 109 C68 1993.

Anyone who plans to explore literary sites in central England, either on foot or from an armchair, will want to consult the late Dr. Cooper's augmented travel guide.

An American, who "unabashedly loves England and loves English literature," Professor Cooper shares pieces of British literary history, biography, and gossip as he directs the traveler/reader from place to place. His advice about what to see goes beyond the usual locales, and his commentaries are filled with witty anecdotes and minutia about what who did what in out-of-the-way streets, houses and rooms.

On the practical side the guide traces the most interesting route, includes detailed directions for actually finding buildings, supplies itineraries and regional maps and, of course, recommends inns and pubs frequented by literary notables.

Professor Cooper said he had fun writing his book and he wanted it to be fun to read and to use. It is. (For those anticipating a trip to Southern England the first volume in this series, The Literary Guide and Companion to Southern England [PR 2109 C6 1985] is also available in the library.)

Reminders

Health and Retirement Benefits

The first help session for those who would like to change their health benefits is scheduled from 2 to 3 p.m., Friday, April 9 in the Thiemes House on Richmond Road. The first session at VIMS is scheduled for April 13.

Representatives from Colonial Life will be on campus from 9 to 11 a.m., Wednesday, April 14 in room D of the Campus Center and on Monday, April 19 from 1 to 3 p.m. in the small conference room of Watermen's Hall at VIMS.

A TIAA/CREF retirement counselor will be available from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., Tuesday, April 13 in Campus Center, room D.

Call Eurka Robinson at 1-800-842-2008 to schedule an appointment.

Deadlines for Awards

April 16 is the deadline for nominations for several awards, including the Carr Cup and Sullivan Awards, Benjamin Stoddert Ewell Award and the Kratzer Memorial.

Nominations and supporting materials should be delivered to the Office of the Vice President for Student Affairs, James Blair 203.

Entries for the Rex Smith Award and the Charles McDowell-Kays Gary Award in journalism should be delivered to the William and Mary News office, James Blair 310, by 5 p.m., Friday, April 16.

Golf Tourney

The intramural golf tournament scheduled for April 16 has been moved up to Friday, April 9.

For details contact Joe Tighe at ext. 13314 or Marc Garufi at ext. 13319.

Jury Duty

To sign up for jury duty in the cases being tried in the criminal justice advocacy class call Margaret Spencer, associate professor of law, ext. 13856. Trials are held from 5:30 to 7:30 p.m. in the mootcourt room at the law school.

Trials are scheduled for April 8, 15 and 22.

Summer Credits

Students are reminded that if they plan to take summer courses at another institution and transfer credit, they must make prior arrangements with the academic advising office, Ewell 127. Retroactive permission will not be granted.

Committee on Degrees

The Committee on Degrees will meet for the last time this semester on April 28.

Petitions for waivers of, or changes in, degree requirements must be received in the office of the dean of undergraduate studies, Ewell 123, by April 21. (See Mrs. Crouch for application forms.)

All petitions must be typed and must be accompanied by a letter from the appropriate department chair.

Math 490 Begins In Fall

The mathematics department will offer a seminar course, Math 490, in the fall. Chi-Kwong Li will be the instructor.

The instructor will select certain topics and assign students to read and present material chosen from books or research papers. Every student is expected to take an active part in each lecture. Grades will be determined by the performance in class, homework sets and take home examinations. Small scale computer projects may be conducted.

This course will be permanently installed in the department's offerings and will be required of all concentrators who declare this spring and thereafter. Rising senior math majors should note that Math 490 may substitute for one of the four 400-level math courses currently required for the concentration. For further information, call ext. 12000.

Notes from Neighbors

Sandwich Cents For Books

The 100% Natural Grocery and Deli at 1317-F Richmond Road has agreed to donate 25 cents from the sale of each whole sandwich purchased during the month of April to Swem Library. For free delivery from 3 to 8 p.m., call 229-3057.

World Affairs Council Meets April 27

The World Affairs Council of Greater Hampton Roads is inviting the public to a dinner Tuesday, April 27 at the Omni International Hotel in Newport News (64W to exit 258A).

The featured speaker will be Diana E. McMeekin, executive vice president, The African Wildlife Foundation, who will discuss "Trends in Global Conservationism: Where Are We Heading?"

The cost is $15, $10 for students. A reception will begin at 6:15 p.m., dinner at 7 p.m.

Deadline for reservations is noon on Friday, April 23. Reservation checks, made payable to the World Affairs Council, should be sent to the council at P.O. Box 12868, Norfolk, VA 23541.

For further details, call 838-0954 (Hampton).

McMeekin has been involved with AWF since 1978. Among her many accomplishments is the development of her "Only Elephants Should Wear Ivory" campaign, which is credited with creating public pressure to ban commercial trade in elephant ivory. She also played a major role in managing the Mountain Gorilla Project in Rwanda, one of the most successful conservation projects in Africa. In addition to her work for the AWF, McMeekin serves as a consultant on films and books about Africa.

CW Volunteer Program Seeking New Members

When Jane Strauss retired after 33 years with the Colonial Williamsburg Foundation, the opportunity to work with its museums division as a volunteer seemed like a good idea to her and enabled her to continue something she enjoyed—working with the public.

This year the Foundation is looking to enlarge the volunteer corps and is seeking 20 new members to join the volunteers selected during 1992. The volunteers provide guided tours at the Abby Aldrich Rockefeller Folk Art Center and guided audiovisual presentations of exhibits at the DeWitt Wallace Decorative Arts Gallery.

Interviewing for volunteers is currently underway and the selection process will be completed by mid-April. Two-hour classes begin at the end of April and will be held twice a week. Volunteers will learn about folk art, exhibit planning and collections management. Candidates expressing an interest in the decorative arts will be trained to offer researchers and connoisseurs access to the textile collections and give instructions to Wallace Gallery visitors.

Volunteers who would like to join the program are asked to pick up an application at the Colonial Williamsburg employment department at the Franklin Street Office.

For more information, contact Pete Robins at 220-7001.

Haulman To Speak At Meeting Of Bibliophiles

Clyde Haulman, professor of economics, dean of undergraduate studies and a member of the Williamsburg Bibliophiles, will be speaker at a Williamsburg Bibliophiles meeting at 7:30 p.m., Wednesday, April 24, in the Botetourt Theatre of Swem Library.

Drawing on his valuable collection of early 19th-century American editions of economic tracts, Haulman will discuss the impact of the Panic of 1819 on American economic thought and the publication of economic works in the United States.

George Wythe House Re-Opens

The house where Thomas Jefferson studied law with George Wythe, first professor of law at the College, will re-open to visitors Saturday, April 10. The house has been closed since Jan. 1 for replacement of the building's mechanical systems. A series of programs is planned April 9-16 in honor of Jefferson's birthday, April 13. For details call 220-7645.

Multi-Discipline Team Sponsors Talk

The Williamsburg-James City County Multi-Discipline Team is sponsoring a talk by Katharine C. Kersey, chair of the department of child study/special education at Old Dominion University at 7 p.m., Tuesday, April 27 at the Human Services Center at the corner of Longhill and Old Towne roads.

Kersey is the author of several books including The Art of Sensitive Parenting,

Helping Your Child Handle Stress and Don't Take It Out on Your Kids. She writes a weekly syndicated column, "Raising Children," which is carried in the Virginian Pilot/Ledger Star newspaper.

Trustees Of Community Partnership For Excellence To Meet

The newly formed Community Partnership for Excellence in Education (CPEE) will hold its first trustees meeting on May 5 at 7:30 a.m., at a breakfast hosted by Colonial Williamsburg. Trustees include President Timothy J. Sullivan and George Grayson, professor of government and member of the Virginia House of Delegates. Committee chairs include Virginia McLaughlin, assistant to President Sullivan, and Sonnie Walker of the Commonwealth Center for the Study of American Culture.

CPEE's goal is to provide world-class educational opportunities for all area schoolchildren.

Virginia Is For Lovers Slogan Recognized

The Virginia Division of Tourism is the primary sponsor of the new red, white and black "Virginia Is For Lovers" race car which is being driven by Harmie Sadler of South Hill. He is competing in the Busch Grand National Series.

Virginia Lottery players will have a chance to win vacations at attractions throughout the Commonwealth next year as part of a unique partnership between the Virginia Lottery and the Virginia Division of Tourism.

To celebrate the 25th anniversary of the "Virginia is for Lovers" slogan, a second-chance lottery has been established.

Lottery players will be issued entry coupons when they purchase lotto tickets and a chance to win a trip in 1994. Details are expected early next year.
