Scholarships Provide Exciting Opportunities For Research

The opportunity to enhance their college experience with research and study outside of their major and, in some cases, overseas, is being made available to 23 undergraduates, funded by the Parents Association, the Renick Scholarships for International Service or Research and the Wilson Cross-Disciplinary Scholarships.

Parents Association Scholarships

The Parents Association has established four undergraduate research fellowships and two international travel awards for research service projects for the summer of 1993. The fellowships, two in Area I and two in Area II, are awarded for the purpose of enabling each student to pursue an intensive research project. The students receive fellowships of $1,800 with the expectation that they devote the summer to their project.

Two international travel awards of $2,000 each are awarded to students wishing to pursue research or service abroad during the summer.

This year's recipients are:

Parents International Service and Research Scholarships

Silica Johnson, a junior anthropology major, will do research for the Lidorkini Museum in Micronesia.

Susy Kim, a sophomore chemistry major, will be working as a teacher with Global Volunteers in Tanzania under this program.

Frederick Swanson, a sophomore German major, will be in Düsseldorf and Cologne studying the reconciliation of Jewish and German traditions in present-day Germany.

Parents Domestic Research Scholarships

Sociology major Amy Bass, a junior, will study the pottery of Nansemond Indians of Chesapeake/Suffolk.

Timothy Heath, a junior philosophy major, will conduct research on "Collective Action in U.S. Civic Education: A Benjamin Barber Perspective."

Megan Squire, a junior art history/public policy double major, will look at historic preservation of 20th-century structures, in particular in the art deco district of Miami Beach.

Junior Son Nhat Tran will study the transformation potential of crystalline silica and the induction of oncogenic expressions in lung cell lines and tissues.

Renick Scholarships for International Service or Research

The Renick Scholars are funded by an endowment established by Mrs. Fern C. Renick and Mr. and Mrs. George Tayloe Ross to honor the memory of Dewey C. Renick. Renick was a leading citizen in James City County until his death in 1976. He attended William and Mary and later served as national chairman of the Friends of the College group.

The Renick scholarships were established to enable students of Rhodes and Marshall caliber to undertake special projects during the summer. The first awards were made in 1991.

Award winners this year are:

Sorin Dragan will be a volunteer at the Pediatric Oncology Hospital in Bucharest, Romania.

Government major Chris Gring will work with Global

Carnegie Endowment Selects Haynes

Lukas Haynes, a senior international relations major, has been selected as a research assistant at the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace in Washington, D.C., for 1993-94.

Haynes will fill one of the 10 slots selected by the Carnegie Endowment from a national pool of 200 nominees.

The Carnegie Endowment publishes Foreign Policy magazine and designs programs for government officials, scholars and private citizens in the areas of diplomacy, arms control, international law, regional security and international organization. The goal of the Endowment's work is to assist people in overcoming problems of international understanding, to contribute to a national dialogue about America's role in the world and, recently, to increase participation of women in foreign policy making. Former associates include Anthony Lake, President Clinton's national security adviser; Robert B. Oakley, president Bush's special envoy to Somalia; and Strobe Talbott, Time Magazine's editor.

Haynes

Haynes will be paid a stipend of approximately $10,000 for a six-month period beginning in December and will undertake research for Carnegie's President Morton I. Abramowitz, a retired foreign service officer, three-time ambassador and former assistant secretary of State.

Before he begins this assignment, however, Haynes will be in Salzburg, Austria, working at an international conference center called the Salzburg Seminar.

Last summer Haynes worked at the International Economic Studies Institute in Washington as the sole assistant to Timothy W. Stanley, a former national defense adviser and author of a book, To Unite Our Strength: Enhancing the U.N. Peace and Security System. Haynes drafted one chapter and was production chief for the manuscript. He feels his experience on the book and doing NATO research in Europe last spring was helpful in landing the Carnegie award.

Haynes' assignments will take him into 1994 when he will begin seeking admission to a graduate school in international

Itochu CEO Tells Students 'Learn A Foreign Language, Live Abroad'

Jay Chai

Jay Chai, chairman and CEO of Itochu International Inc., and senior managing director of Itochu Corporation, visited campus last week as the guest of the Business School's International Management Group (IMG) and spoke to MBA students and faculty. Itochu Corporation, the parent of Itochu International, is the world's largest publicly owned trading company with 1992 sales of $155 billion.

Chai is a master broker of deals between Japanese and U.S. companies. As a Korean born American, he holds the honor of being the first foreign director of any Japanese corporation. Chai talked about his personal observations and views on world politics and economics. He stressed three points throughout his presentation: be global, pay more attention to technology, and set higher aspirations for yourself.

"Thirty percent of what you eat today, twenty to thirty percent of what you wear today, comes from overseas," he told his audience. We are a global economy. Whether we like it or not, we are part of the international economy, said Chai. "While you're young, join the Peace Corps, go to Zimbabwe or Bosnia. Experience relationships with people from other countries." When asked what the most important thing is to prepare for the international arena Chai replied, "learn a foreign language and study international finance."

Changes in technology will change the way we live, said Chai. "We're at the dawn of a new era in interactive technology that will connect every home in America with a nationwide electronic network capable of delivering voice, video, and data." This consumer network will connect homes via their telephone, TV or computer to access services such as banking, shopping, electronic mail and entertainment. According to Chai, the "super highway of technology" will create a huge new market for the information and communications industries, the major reason for his company's recent investment in Time Warner.

Chai told students to set their aspirations high. He said there were opportunities for them and that the future is bright. "The United States is a land of opportunity... go out, don't stop in Williamsburg, go out."

Chai was born in Korea in 1934. He is a graduate of Kyungbook National University and earned his MBA from the University of Southern California. He is on the boards of Consolidated Grain & Barge Company, Ambrake Corporation, Isuzu Motors Limited, Southland Corporation, and Itochu International.

Student Team Wins CASE Award

A School of Business Administration team won the fourth annual Honors Business Administration tournament sponsored by the Council for Advancement and Support of Education, CASE.

Undergraduates Bob Baierl, Lynn Cheslock, Erin Hollister and Jennifer Payne constituted the winning team, which was coached by Assistant Professor Jim Olver. Olver accompanied the team to the competition at the University of Western Ontario. Teams were asked to come up with a business plan to enhance the growth rate, financing and employee morale of the "Zebra Taxi Company of Indonesia."

After a week of preparation and discussion of the case, each team produced a written report and presented it to a blue-ribbon panel of judges and defended its conclusions in a one-hour session.

The international field of competitors included Victoria University of Wellington, New Zealand; the Instituto Tecnológico de Estudios Superiores de Monterrey from Mexico; the University of Florida, the Escuela Superior de Administración y Dirección de Empresas from Spain; and the Rotterdam School of Management from The Netherlands.

MBA Students Work For Special Olympics

The MBA Association raised more than $10,000 for Special Olympics in a day of intercollegiate athletic competition with teams from Georgetown, George Washington, Penn State, Wake Forest and William and Mary.

The event, early in April, culminated a year-long fund raising effort.

It was patterned after Stanford University's successful Challenge for Charity, and receipts topped last year's mark of $3,600 by a wide margin.

Teams competed in football, basketball, softball, volleyball and a few unconventional sports including the egg-toss, dizzy bat and briefcase relay.

This is the second year for the event and for the first time this year, Special

Support for Murakami's visit is being provided by the Lecture Committee of the College and the Wendy and Emery Reves Center for International Studies.

Haruki Murakami, distinguished novelist and short story writer, is scheduled to visit campus April 19-20. Together with his wife, Yoko Murakami, he will speak to interested students and faculty in advanced Japanese, comparative literature, East Murakami, at 44, is considered by many to be Japan's premier living novelist. He has had two full-length novels translated and published in the United States, A Wild Sheep Chase (Kodansha International, 1989; now available as a Plume Contemporary Fiction offering, New American Library, Penguin Books) and Hard-Boiled Wonderland and the End of the World (Kodansha International, 1991). His newly published first collection of translated short stories, The Elephant Vanishes (Knopf, 1993), includes stories that originally appeared in leading publications including The New Yorker, Playboy and Harper's Magazine.

Mr. and Mrs. Murakami currently reside in Princeton, N.J. Anyone interested in meeting with them is asked to contact Lawrence E. Marceau in the modern languages department, ext. 13687.

Band Plans Old-Fashioned Concert

Bring your blankets or lawn chairs and enjoy an old-fashioned band concert. This is the invitation being extended by the William and Mary Concert Band, which will open the Williamsburg Arts Commission's spring music series with a free concert at 5 p.m., Wednesday, April 21 in the Wren Yard.

In case of rain, the concert will be moved to the Campus Center ballroom.

The concert band, conducted by Laura Rexroth, will perform pieces that include selections from "The Sound of Music," Handel's exciting "The Royal Fireworks Music," Sousa's "Stars and Stripes Forever" and Leroy Anderson's "Bugler's Holiday," featuring the entire trumpet section.

Guest conductor Capt. Bill Garlette, director of training and doctrine, U.S. Army Element School of Music, Norfolk, will conduct Percy Grainger's sparkling "Handel in the Strand."

The concert band, founded in 1929, draws from all departments and divisions of the College for its membership.

For further details, call Laura Rexroth at ext. 11086.

'Gentlemen' To Give Spring Concert

The Gentlemen of the College will present their annual spring concert and semester finale at 8 p.m., Saturday, April 17, in the Campus Center ballroom.

Admission is free, and all students, faculty and community members are invited to attend.

The concert showcases the wide variety of entertaining material performed by the group during the entire year. The show will feature barbershop, traditional vocal harmony, spirituals, contemporary harmony and lots of good humor.

The men's 14-member a cappella group was co-founded three years ago by Mike Fitch '93 and Doug Stambler '92. Fitch, recently tapped for Phi Beta Kappa, is musical director.

During spring break, the Gentlemen performed at several locations, including Ohio, Indiana and Virginia. The singers will perform at the Baltimore Orioles-Minnesota Twins baseball game April 28 in Baltimore.

Last spring the group recorded its first album, "Jump the Wall," which includes 21 songs, some of which will be performed at the April 17 concert.

The album, $8 to non-students and $6 to students, will be available at the concert and is also on sale at the College Bookstore. The group is planning another recording to be released next year.

Stephen Macedo To Speak At Law School

Stephen Macedo '79, is coming back to campus to give a talk "Public Schooling, Religious Liberty and American Liberalism," at 7:30 p.m., Monday, April 19, at the Marshall-Wythe School of Law room 119.

This program is being sponsored by the Graduate Student Association of Arts and Sciences.

An expert in constitutional interpretation, judicial review, and political theory and public policy, Macedo is associate professor of government at Harvard.

Macedo graduated magna cum laude from the College. He is a member of Phi Beta Kappa and was a Drapers' Scholar. He received a master's degree in the history of political thought at the London School of Economics in 1980 and an M.Litt in politics from Oxford University in 1985. He received his Ph.D. in politics from Princeton University.

Macedo's book The New Right v. The Constitution is currently in its second edition. It was excerpted in The New York Times as "Required Reading: On the Constitution." Adopted for classroom use in more than 28 colleges and universities, the book has been excerpted in a forthcoming Macmillan publication, Philosophy of Law by Conrad Johnson.

Macedo is also the author of Liberal Virtues: Citizenship, Virtue, and Community in Liberal Constitutionalism, published in 1990 by Oxford University Press, issued in paperback in 1991, reprinted in 1992 and due out soon in Bulgarian translation by the University of Sophia Press.

Macedo is currently researching a book-length project, "Educating for Citizenship: Public Education and Private Liberty."

Hirsch To Speak On Bosnia And Genocide

Herbert Hirsch, professor of political science at Virginia Commonwealth University, will speak at 4:30 p.m., Thursday, April 22, in the Reves Center on "Bosnia and Beyond: Preventing Genocide in the Post-Cold War World." A reception will be held following the program.

Hirsch, a nationally recognized authority on genocide and human rights, is the author, most recently, of Studying Death for the Sake of Life: Genocide and the Politics of Memory. His April 22 talk was presented earlier as an invited lecture to the U.S. Department of State.

Hirsch's visit is being sponsored by the Reves Center and the department of government.

Directors' Workshop

Directors' Workshop performances will run from Tuesday, April 20, through Sunday, April 25 in the Studio Theatre in Phi Beta Kappa Memorial Hall.

Three different bills of student-directed one-act plays will alternate over the course of six evenings.

All performances begin at 8:15 p.m. Admission is free.

Brass Ensemble

The William and Mary Brass Ensemble will give a performance at 8:15 p.m., Monday, April 19, in the Great Hall of the Wren Building.

The recital will feature brass music from the 18th, 19th and 20th centuries. Admission is free.

The ensemble includes Matthew Johnson and Laura Keyt, trumpets; Erica Grundeman and Susan Ritenour, horns; Ruth Miller, trombone; and Kathryn Kravetz, tuba. The director is John Bourque, lecturer in music.

Dinner à l'Art

Celebrate the arts; visual, performing and culinary, at the fourth annual "Evening at the Muscarelle," a project of the Council of the Muscarelle Museum of Art.

The Evening, "Dinner à l'Art," will be held at 6:30 p.m., Saturday, May 8.

Those attending will be dining on the culinary arts of Catered Occasions, surrounded by the visual art of Okura's screens and Japanese paintings, and entertained by the performing art of the Sinfonicon Light Opera Company, on campus.

For further information and reservations, please call the Muscarelle Museum at ext. 12707.

Gallery Players

The Gallery Players of the Muscarelle Museum will present a concert of contemporary music at 4 p.m., Sunday, April 25 at the museum. This concert will follow a gallery talk at 3 p.m. by Director Mark M. Johnson, which will focus on the current special exhibition "Collaboration: Mountain Lake Workshop."

Both the gallery talk and the concert are free and open to the public.

Engel To Be Guest Speaker For Friends Of The Library Dinner

Elliott Engel, a faculty member in the English department at North Carolina State University, will be the featured speaker at the fifth annual Friends of the Library Dinner on Friday, April 30.

The dinner will be held in the Campus Center ballroom and members of the College community and the general public are invited to attend. Tickets are $35 per person. For reservations call Associate Librarian John D. Haskell Jr., at Swem Library, ext. 13054.

Engel spends much of his time lecturing throughout the country on a variety of literary topics. His topic April 30 will be "The Genius of Mark Twain."

Referring to himself as a scholar and performer, Engel will focus on the most interesting aspects of Twain's life and thus set the background for an appreciation for the classic works that Twain wrote during his career as America's spokesman.

The author of The Victorian Novel Before Victoria: British Fiction During the Reign of George IV, 1830-37 (1984) and Pickwick Papers: An Annotated Bibliography (1990), Engel wrote a mini-lecture series on Dickens which appeared on PBS Television. He has been honored with North Carolina's Adult Education Award as well as the Award of Merit of the Victorian Society. He received his undergraduate degree at Indiana University and his M.A. and Ph.D. in English from UCLA.

Volunteers in Tanzania.

Kristin Loerzel, a public policy major, will serve as a public health volunteer with Amigos de las Americas. Loerzel was recently awarded a Harry S. Truman Scholarship.

Two East Asian Studies majors, Jonathan Noble and Jennifer O'Hara, will conduct a study of small-scale entrepreneurs in Beijing, China. O'Hara has a double major in East Asian Studies and economics.

Wilson Cross-Disciplinary Scholarships

The Wilson Scholarships, established by Fred and Donna Wilson of Alexandria, will support student research in a variety of fields. This program each year supports summer research projects for students on topics of their choice drawn from fields outside the area of their concentration.

The aim of the program is to provide the scholars with a chance to pursue interests that they do not have the opportunity to pursue during the busy school year. The primary criterion according to which scholarship will be awarded is not grade point average, but rather a likelihood that the proposed course will be a challenging and profitable experience.

Scholars and their advisers are: Mark Baghdassarian, a junior chemistry major, will work with Fred Lederer, professor of law, on "The Concept and Policy Implications of Medical Malpractice."

Sophomore kinesiology major Elizabeth Burkey and Professor of Fine Arts, James Kornwolf will consider "The Influence of Japanese Architecture."

Joseph

Clarke, a junior biology major, and Mark Iwinsky, instructor in fine arts, will conduct an independent research tutorial in sculpture stone carving.

"Between Two Worlds: Documentary in Independence and Independence in Documentary," will be the topic for research by Mathew DeVries, a junior psychology major, and English instructor David Essex. The two plan to produce a documentary film as part of their project.

Economics major Michelle Fox, a junior, and James Perry, from VIMS, will look for answers to the question "Can Man Play Mother Nature?" in their study of the effectiveness of man-made wetlands.

Garber and English department chair Ann Reed will study "The Afrikaans-English Language Conflict of South Africa."

English major Maria Lamona and Thomas Sheppard, professor of history, have selected as their project, "Liberty, Equality, Sorority?: A Study of the Impact of the French Revolution Upon the Women of France."

Emily Leach, a junior English concentrator, will work with Raymond McCoy, assistant professor of kinesiology, on "Development of Gait Analysis Research in the Biomechanics Laboratory."

"The Role of God in the World of Science: A Study of Cosmology," is the subject sophomore English major Maria Mayo will study with John McKnight, professor of physics.

Stephanie Powell, a junior English major, will work with Cam Walker, associate professor of history, on "The Political and Literary Expression of Rage."

Meredith Thomas, a junior French major, and Lawrence Beckhouse, professor of sociology, will study "The Effects of Deployment on the Military Family."

"Science and Policy: A Study of the Use of Science in U.S. Forest Service Policy," will be the topic of a research project undertaken by Carter Wright, a junior American Studies major, and Maurice P. Lynch, professor of marine science.

Haynes To Work At Carnegie Endowment For International Peace

relations. His top choices are Oxford and Cambridge in England, because he likes the perspective of living abroad. He will also apply to some of the top domestic schools, including the Fletcher School of Law and Diplomacy at Tufts and the Nitze School of Advanced International Studies (SAIS) in Washington, D.C., at Georgetown.

Haynes' career goal is to work in international negotiation and conflict resolution. He is not sure at this point where his career path will take him since there is no set path for the one he seeks. He has passed the foreign service exam and has an interview in the fall, so the outcome of that may have a bearing on his choices. He is also pursuing another internship in Europe, but he's not sure about his chances and doesn't want to tempt fate by mentioning it.

Looking way ahead, Haynes would like to take the knowledge and experience of a career in the international field back to the classroom. "I think we owe such a debt to the next generation."

"I could not be happier," said Haynes of the Carnegie selection. "But I could not have been selected without the critique on my essays of my adviser, Professor Clay Clemens in government, the help of scholarship coordinator Lisa Grimes at the Charles Center and the advice of resident-Ambassador Robert Fritts. Carnegie is going to be an unforgettable experience. It will increase my understanding of global affairs by leaps and bounds. And I'm going to do everything I can to bring to Carnegie skills and knowledge that they can use as well."

An active member of Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity, Haynes has served this year as co-chairman of the VIP Committee for the Tercentenary Celebration and co-director of the "Into the Fourth Century: A World Perspective" faculty lecture series. He is president of the International Relations Club and a tutor in the Adult Skills Program.

Haynes at the Salzburg Seminar.

A director of the William and Mary High School Model United Nations conferences, Haynes was selected as the College's delegate to the 44th Student Conference on U.S. Affairs at the U.S. Military Academy last fall. He has won several distinguished delegate awards throughout the East Coast.

One of his proudest accomplishments is his work on Monitor, the international studies journal that he helped to found and which will make its debut April 30.

Part of Haynes' enthusiasm for his assignment in Salzburg comes from a chance to go back to his hometown—Haynes was born in Salzburg while his parents were on a Fulbright grant. His father is an English professor at New York University, his mother a real estate executive. Salzburg also has one of the best music festivals and some of the most breathtaking scenery in the world, and Haynes is a skilled skier and music lover.

A 1989 graduate of Stuyvesant High School in New York, Haynes took a year off before entering college, to travel and teach skiing in Utah. Looking for a break from the rigorous curriculum at Stuyvesant, Haynes enjoyed the break of travel, but before the year was over he was anxious to return to school.

CommonHealth Initiates 'Walking Challenge'; Medical Screening Results Available

CommonHealth, the wellness program for William and Mary employees is initiating a "Walking Challenge," Monday and Friday from 1:10 to 1:50 p.m. at the Wren Building.

The goal is to walk 540 miles, the length of the Appalachian Trail through Virginia, by accumulating daily mileage over several months.

The kick-off meeting for the challenge will be Monday, April 19, and will be held 1:10-1:50 p.m. in Tucker 213. This program will include a fitness walking test, a video presentation, distribution of walking logs and a review of warm-up and cool down stretches.

Participants accumulate mileage outside of the Monday and Friday meetings on their own schedule.

The purpose of the Challenge is to involve CommonHealth members and their families in the fun and healthy sport of fitness walking.

Personal records of miles walked will be kept for individual tracking. Incentives will be awarded for 50, 125, 250, 400 and 540 miles completed.

Medical Screening Results

Results are in from the health risk analysis/medical screening sessions held earlier, and interpretation sessions are scheduled as follows: 4:45-5 p.m., Thursday, April 15; 12:15-1 p.m. and 4:15-5 p.m., Friday, April 16; and 4:45-5 p.m., Tuesday, April 20.

All sessions will be held in Adair 104 and door prizes will be awarded at each session. Participants will receive a free T-shirt for their participation in the screening.

A group walk is planned for 12:15-1 p.m., Wednesday, May 19, in celebration of National Employee Health and Fitness Day. Walkers will meet in front of the Wren Building.

All participants will be eligible for a drawing for a $50 gift certificate from

'Death Of A Salesman' Opens Thursday

Ying Ruocheng, a guest artist from mainland China, directs the William and Mary Theatre department production of Arthur Miller's "Death of a Salesman," known to many as the tragedy for the common man.

Performances will be given at 8:15 p.m., April 15, 16 and 17 and at 2 p.m., April 18. This production replaces the originally scheduled "Summer and Smoke" by Tennessee Williams.

Tickets are $5 and may be purchased or reserved through the PBK box office (ext. 12674), which is open daily from 1 to 6 p.m. and will also open on Saturday and Sunday at 1 p.m.

In the role of Willy Loman in the William and Mary production is Michael Harding. The rest of the immediate Loman family is played by Jennifer Mobley as Linda, Jay Putnam as Biff and Donnie Bledsoe as Happy. Altogether, 14 students comprise the cast.

Michael Harding, who plays the leading role of Willie Loman in "Death of a Salesman," comes to the role with a great deal of experience. A junior theatre major, Harding played the leading role in "All the King's Men" for the William and Mary Theatre and "A Little Night Music" for the Sinfonicon Light Opera Company. He also had a principal part in "The Wake of Jamey Foster."

Harding's credits also include "A Funny Thing Happened on the Way to the Forum," "Six Characters in Search of an Author," "Once Upon a Mattress," and "Twelfth Night," for the William and Mary Theatre. His credits with Sinfonicon include "Pirates of Penzance," "The Pushcart Peddlers," for Directors Workshop, and "You Can Stop Me If You Want To" for Premiere Theatre.

Harding, who hopes to have a career as an actor, says he is enjoying the opportunity to work with Ying Ruocheng, who, he says, is an acting teacher as well as a director. He describes him as soft spoken and very confident, whose directions are clear and precise.

The design staff for this production includes members of the theatre and speech faculty including Jerry Bledsoe, scene designer, and Patricia Wesp, costume designer. Lighting design is by Richard Palmer.

Ash Lawn-Highland To Unveil Monroe And Jefferson Exhibit On April 24

Ash Lawn-Highland will officially unveil a commemorative exhibit titled "Monroe and Jefferson: A Society to Our Taste," on April 24. Chief organizer of the exhibit is John Eller '92.

Descendants of James Monroe will be present for the unveiling of the exhibit and celebration on the occasion of Monroe's birthday.

The festivities are open to the public. Ash Lawn-Highland is located 5 miles south of I-64 and U.S. 250, just outside Charlottesville and is open to visitors daily.

The exhibit explores James Monroe's and Thomas Jefferson's unique society of planter-statesmen in the late 18th and early 19th centuries in Albemarle County.

Open through December, this exhibit highlights major events of 1993: the 200th anniversary of Monroe's purchase of Ash Lawn-Highland, the 250th anniversary of Jefferson's birth and the 300th anniversary of the founding of the College, Monroe and Jefferson's alma mater.

In 1793 James Monroe purchased Ash Lawn-Highland, a 1,000-acre estate adjoining Jefferson's Monticello, to help create what Jefferson called "a society to our taste." This influential circle included not only Monroe, Jefferson and James Madison, but statesmen James Barbour, William Cabell Rives and William Wirt. In exploring the nature of this "agrarian aristocracy," the exhibit will examine political philosophies, education, plantation lifestyles and tastes in fine arts and architecture. Through original research and an extensive search among public and private collections, Ash Lawn-Highland has assembled nearly 100 objects related to the history of James Monroe and his society. Artifacts will include original Jefferson papers on agricultural concerns and the establishment of the University of Virginia; a letter of President Jefferson's introducing his ambassador James Monroe to the Spanish court; books from Monroe's private library; the first official White House china, commissioned by Monroe; and personal effects including the French silk waistcoat Monroe wore while negotiating the Louisiana Purchase. Many decorative objects from Monroe's White House residency will be on display. This exhibit is the most extensive ever undertaken by Ash Lawn-Highland.

For additional information, contact Jim Wootton, curator, or Carolyn Holmes, executive director, at 804-293-9539.

Commemorative Stamp

The Campus Post Office expects to have a supply of the new Jefferson stamp by the end of the week.

The Postal Service dedicated a 29¢ stamp Tuesday, in honor of the 250th anniversary of Jefferson's birth.

To obtain a first-day-of-issue postmark, purchase the new stamps, affix the stamps to self-addressed envelopes, insert a card of postcard thickness and place the envelopes in a large envelope addressed to:

Thomas Jefferson Stamp
Postmaster
Charlottesville, VA 22906-9991.

Customers who wish the Postal Service to affix stamps should send their self-addressed envelopes and 29¢ per stamp, in check or money order, to the Charlottesville postmaster.

All orders must be postmarked by May 12.

Historic Garden Week at William and Mary

The Williamsburg Garden Club Home and Garden
Tour
Tuesday, April 20 • 10 a.m. to 7 p.m.

The President's House and Guest Cottage
The Sir Christopher Wren Building
The Adams Garden

The Adams Garden, located at the corner of Boundary St. and Richmond Rd., was dedicated in 1986 to the memory of Gregory S. Adams, a member of the class of 1981. This delightful garden has become a popular spot for outdoor lunches and study breaks.

Originally a small bulb and azalea garden, improvements have been made to the area periodically. Through the efforts of Mr. and Mrs. Robert H. Adams, of Elizabethtown, Pa., the garden began taking on its current configuration, with small paths and greater variety of plants. The garden rapidly matured in appearance through the work of Madelynn Watkinson, a volunteer from Williamsburg, who has worked with the College facilities management staff to create a quiet point of beauty at the end of Sorority Court.

Mrs. Watkinson will be on hand in the garden throughout the day to provide information on plant materials.

Performances by a variety of student performing groups will be presented in the Wren Building the day of the tour. The schedule includes:

10:30 a.m.	The Botetourt Singers
12:30 p.m.	The William and Mary Chorus
2:30 p.m.	The William and Mary Choir
4:30 p.m.	The Gentlemen of the College
6:30 p.m.	The Ebony Expressions

Marshall-Wythe Law Team Wins Moot Court Tournament

Three students from the Marshall-Wythe School of Law argued their way to a first-place finish in a field of 24 teams at the National Constitutional Law Moot Court Tournament at Vanderbilt University, March 27.

Third-year students Joe English, Kevin Kroner and Heather Sue Ramsey won the competition by presenting arguments in a fictional appeal that involved the legislature of Troy and the conditions it could attach to government benefits.

Marshall-Wythe clinched the victory in the final round against NYU, after beating Mercer University and the University of Dayton earlier in the quarter and semifinals of the competition.

English will pursue workers compensation litigation with a Baltimore law firm after graduating this spring. Ramsey hopes to work in Alaska following commencement, and Kroner plans to return to New York to become a prosecutor.

The team members began preparing for the tournament in late January, when they drafted a brief on conditioning of benefits which counted for 40 percent of their preliminary score. This was the first interscholastic tournament for the students; their trophy will be displayed in the moot court trophy case in the lobby of Marshall-Wythe.

Graduate Students In Science Receive Continuing Funding From VSGC

Two graduate students, Tracey Beauchat, who is working toward a doctorate in computer science, and Michael Glasgow, who is working toward a doctorate in chemistry, have received fellowship renewals of $5,000 from the Virginia Space Grant Consortium.

Beauchat is studying metrics for the quantitative analysis of surface reconstructions. Glasgow is studying the synthesis and characterization of boron-containing polymers with applications in space. Part of his work will be performed with NASA-Langley Research Center.

The consortium's major goal is to help develop the engineers and scientists of the future. Another key goal of the consortium is to broaden the opportunities for all students to pursue science and aerospace careers. Since the consortium's inception, 75 percent of scholarships and 65 percent of fellowships have been awarded to females or underrepresented minority members.

Members of the consortium include William and Mary, Hampton University, Old Dominion University, the University of Virginia, Virginia Polytechnic Institute and State University, Virginia's Center for Innovative Technology, the State Council of Higher Education in Virginia, NASA-Langley Research Center, the Virginia Department of Education, the Science Museum of Virginia, the Virginia Air and Space Center, the Virginia State Chamber of Commerce, the Mathematics and Science Center and the Virginia Center for Public and Private Initiatives.

Orientations For Study-Abroad Programs

William and Mary In Cambridge Program, April 15

Students planning to participate in the William and Mary in Cambridge program in July are invited to attend an orientation meeting at 7 p.m., Thursday, April 15, in the Reves Room. Professors MacGowan and Whiteley will answer questions about the program. Refreshments will be served.

Non-William and Mary Programs, April 21

Students planning to study abroad in 1993-94 on non-William and Mary programs are invited to attend an orientation meeting at 7 p.m., Wednesday, April 21 in the Reves Room. Useful information on adjusting to another culture, health information and applications for student identity cards will be distributed. The Programs Abroad office will also answer questions about arranging for transfer credit. Contact Programs Abroad at ext. 13594 for more information.

Spring Job Fair For Prospective Teachers

Life-Saving Seminars

As beach traffic swells, the need for beach safety also increases.

The 1993 Mid-Atlantic Lifesaving Seminar will be held April 16-18 in Delaware.

The seminar is sponsored by the Sea Grant Marine Advisory Program in the mid-Atlantic region. Virginia Sea Grant is part of VIMS.

Registration is $40, which covers the cost of seminar materials and refreshments. For program details, call Jim Falk, University of Delaware Sea Grant Marine Advisory Service at 302-645-4235.

New Books By Faculty Members

Corpus Vasorum Antiquorum Receives Getty and Von Bothmer Grants

John H. Oakley, associate professor of classical studies, is the author of two new books: Debris from a Public Dining Place in the Athenian Agora, co-authored with S.I. Rotroff, Hesperia, Supplement XXV (American School of Classical Studies, Princeton 1992), and Corpus Vasorum Antiquorum (CVA), The Walters Art Gallery, Fascicule I (Philipp von Zabern, Mainz 1992).

Grants from the von Bothmer Fund of the Archaeological Institute of America and the Getty Grant Program supported publication of the CVA. The publication of catalogs of the museum's permanent collections has long been a top priority at the Walters Art Gallery. Robert P. Bergman, director, has said that Oakley's CVA volume on the collection of red-figure and white ground Greek vases at the Walters promises to facilitate access by an international community of scholars to one of the most artistically significant and comprehensive holdings among American museums.

The volume on pottery from the dining place at the Athenian Agora deals with items discovered in the 1972 excavations, namely a large deposit of pottery and other finds from the second and third quarters of the 5th century B.C. Of the 172 figured vases, more than half are kraters (vessels for mixing wine and water), and nearly one-third have been attributed to, or associated with, painters and workshops by Oakley. The authors have concluded that the pottery is refuse from one of the syssitia, or public dining facilities, which served the magistrates of Classical Athens. Reviewers have noted that "their careful study of the deposit offers new insights into the daily activities of the syssitia and provides clues for a better understanding of public dining in 5th-century Athens."

A third book, The Wedding in Ancient Athens, co-authored with Rebecca Huddleston Sinos '76, University of Wisconsin Press, is in press.

Scholnick Edits Collection Of Essays

Robert J. Scholnick, dean of graduate studies, recently edited American Literature and Science.

A collection of essays that explore the long engagement of American writers with science, the study focuses on 12 leaders in the emerging interdisciplinary field of literature and science, who uncover science's conflicting meanings as a central dimension of the nation's conception of itself.

Cathy N. Davidson, editor of American Literature, describes the book as "a thoughtful collection that reveals how the concept 'science' has evolved from Franklin to cyberpunk, and how it has transformed American literary form and expression."

Scholnick writes, "Through its exploration of the ways that American writers have found in science and technology a vital imaginative stimulus, even while resisting their destructive applications, this book points toward a reconciliation and integration within culture that is much needed today."

Gross Book Remembers Shays' Rebellion

Robert Gross, director of American studies, recently edited In Debt to Shays: The Bicentennial of an Agrarian Rebellion.

In Jan. 1787 Daniel Shays, a hero of the American Revolution, and an army of farmers, enraged by the program of heavy taxes imposed by the state government in Boston to pay the cost of the Revolutionary War, launched an attack on the federal arsenal at Springfield, Mass.

The uprising was easily suppressed, but since the time of his death, Shays has become a folk hero, inspiring novels, plays, ballads, murals, films and even the name of a folksinging group.

Scholars are divided over the meaning of the rebellion: left-leaning academics have viewed the rebellion as an authentic expression of the true, democratic yeoman of the early United States; right-leaning scholars have applauded the framers of the Constitution for rescuing the country from the kinds of anarchy which the uprising represented.

According to Gross, In Debt to Shays takes a fresh perspective on the rebellion by challenging existing understandings of late 18th-century America and restoring the rebellion to its historical context.

Survey Confirms Tightness Of Job Market

Whatever the the issues on the economy being debated in Washington, one certainty is that there is a tight job market. A recently completed report on the Class of '92, based on responses to a survey by the Office of Career Services, shows that since 1987 there has been a gradual decrease in the number of graduates reporting full-time employment, and in 1992 the decrease was 10 percent. The number of graduates reporting full-time graduate/professional school attendance has increased gradually until 1992 when there was a 10 percent increase over 1991.

The survey, which was sent to the class in July, with a follow-up in October, reflected a 40 percent response. A total of 563 responses were received. Students who received graduate degrees in business, education and law were not included in the report since graduates of these schools are surveyed by their respective placement offices.

General Statistics:

Respondents employed in full-time positions: 48%

Those employed by employers having contact with the Office of Career Services: 28%

Job offers received: 447

Working in temporary or part-time positions: 10%

Attending graduate or professional schools full time: 38%

Recipients of bachelors degrees attending graduate or professional school full time: 39% (a strong gain over the 1987 figure of 26%)

Attending graduate or professional schools part time: 1%

Number searching for employment or applying to graduate or professional schools: 3%

The number of graduates reporting full-time employment was 48 percent. This figure continues the drop in full-time employment figures since 1987 when the total was 67 percent.

Since 1987, the survey shows, there have been changes in the areas in which graduates are employed. The percentage in the not-for-profit sector has risen

Notes From Neighbors

Williamsburg Symphonia

The Williamsburg Symphonia will give its final concert of the season at 8:15 p.m., Monday, May 3, in Phi Beta Kappa Memorial Hall. Guest conductor will be Thomas Wilkins.

The program will include Strauss' Concerto No. 2 in E flat, played by principal horn soloist Alan Paterson; Boyce's Symphony No. 1 in B flat and Mozart's Symphony No. 40. Paterson, currently principal horn of the Richmond Symphony as well as the Symphonia, will be playing an instrument crafted by Williamsburg resident George McCracken.

Wilkins will share program notes on the evening's performance in a discussion preceding the concert starting at 7:15 p.m.

Yorktown Victory Center

The effect of the American Revolution upon the lives of many of the half-million, mostly enslaved, African-Americans living in colonial America is the topic of a free public lecture at 7 p.m., Friday, April 23, at the Yorktown Victory Center. The speaker is Philip D. Morgan, associate professor of history at Florida State University, and author and editor of numerous books and articles on African-American history and slavery and race relations in colonial America.

This is the final lecture in a series on cultural diversity in the Revolution, funded in part with a grant from the Virginia Foundation for the Humanities and Public Policy.

The lecture will be followed by a question-and-answer session and a reception.

Chamber Music Society of Williamsburg

The Guild Trio will perform at 8 p.m., Tuesday, April 27, at the arts auditorium of the Williamsburg Regional Library. This is the last concert of the 1992-93 series. Members of the trio are Patricia Tao, piano; Janet Orenstein, violin; and Brooks Whitehouse, cello.

The program will include Trio in G Major, Opus 121 by Beethoven; "To the Spirit Unconquered" by Sheila Silver; and Trio in f minor, Opus 65 by Dvorak.

There will be a reception immediately following the performance to which the audience is invited.

For information and reservations, call 229-0241. A limited number of tickets will be available at the door.

Alumni Polled In Employment Survey

from 7 percent in 1987 to 10 percent in 1992.

For business and industry, the figure has dropped from 74 percent to 63 percent.

Those in the education and government fields have risen from 9 percent to 15 percent and 7 percent to 11 percent, respectively. Employment in the military has dropped from 4 percent in 1987 to 1 percent last year.

The geographic survey showed that graduates left the eastern portion of the country in favor of work in the south and southwest. The mid-Atlantic showed a 2 percent gain over 1987 but the midwest, west and Virginia all declined as a work choice. The number of graduates working overseas climbed from 1 percent in 1987 to 4 percent in 1992.
