Finalists Picked For Physics Olympiad

By Kelley Daspit
University Relations

The American Association of Physics Teachers (AAPT) has announced the names of 20 high school students from across the United States who have been selected for the 1993 U.S. Physics Team, which will compete in the 24th International Physics Olympiad (IPhO) at the College, July 10-18.

IPhO will bring together teams from some 40 countries to compete for gold, silver and bronze medals in a two-part physics examination of theoretical and experimental problems. The Olympiad, which recognizes and challenges the abilities of some of the most able physics students in the world, is being held in the U.S. for the first time.

The International Physics Olympiad began in 1965 in Eastern Europe. The U.S. has participated since 1986 and has garnered 19 medals. The U.S. had the best first-time showing ever by any team in the Olympiad and won the top gold medal in 1989. At the 1992 IPhO in Helsinki, Finland, the United States brought home two gold medals, one silver medal and two honorable mentions for the five team members.

The U.S. Physics Team will take part in a physics training camp May 22-31. At

Lafayette College's Gillian T. Cell Appointed Provost

Gillian T. Cell, provost at Lafayette College in Easton, Pa., and a specialist in English history, will become the new provost for the College beginning in August. Her appointment was approved April 30 by the College Board of Visitors.

"We had many excellent candidates for the position of provost. Gillian Cell had the right combination of administrative experience and academic credentials to make her the best choice to help guide William and Mary as it moves into its fourth century," said President Timothy J. Sullivan.

Cell graduated with first class honors in history from the University of Liverpool in 1959, and received her Ph.D. in history from the same university in 1964. She became an instructor at the University of North Carolina-Chapel Hill in 1965 and a full professor in 1978. In 1985,

Gillian Cell

Cell became dean of the College of Arts and Sciences and the General College, a post she held for six years.

While at UNC, Cell was also president of the Arts and Sciences Foundation, a private foundation, which had an endowment of $42 million and received $1 million in gifts annually. In addition, she was chair of the history department for two years and the university affirmative action officer for two years. From 1972 to 1976, she served as director of graduate studies in history.

Cell became provost of Lafayette College in 1991. She is also a history professor at the college. While at Lafayette, she chaired the college's strategic planning committee, and has been secretary of

Cosby, Kelly, Styron to Receive Honorary Degrees

This year, for the first time in modern history, the College will award an honorary master of arts degree, instead of the usual honorary doctorate.

The recipient will be Bill Cosby, a Philadelphia native who will receive, at his request, the same type of honorary degree that the College awarded on April 2, 1756, to another famous Philadelphian: Benjamin Franklin. Franklin was the first to receive an honorary degree from the College.

Cosby will be the commencement speaker. His talk is titled, "Now Where Are You Going? Anyplace But This House, I Hope."

Honorary degrees will also be awarded to Newport News attorney Herbert V. Kelly and renowned novelist William Styron.

Kelly, a Newport News attorney with a distinguished record of public service, will be awarded the doctor of laws degree. Kelly has both a bachelor's and a law degree from the College.

His many public service activities have included posts as president of the Newport News Rotary Club, the Peninsula Council of Boy Scouts, the Peninsula United Fund and the Newport News Bar Association. He is a currently chair of the Board of Riverside Regional Medical Center. Kelly has also been a member of the Commonwealth Transportation Board, the Virginia Independent Development Services Advisory Board, the Virginia State Bar Council and the Governor's Commission on Efficiency in Government.

In 1976, Kelly was appointed to the first of two terms on the Board of Visitors and he later served two years as Rector of the College. In 1987, he was awarded the Alumni Medallion by the Society of the Alumni.

William Styron, an internationally renowned writer and Newport News native, will receive a doctor of humane letters degree.

Beginning with Lie Down in Darkness in 1951 and continuing through such works as the Pulitzer Prize-winning The Confessions of Nat Turner and Sophie's Choice, Styron's novels have won him repeated honors. Styron's 1990 memoir, Darkness Visible, recounted his long struggle with clinical depression. His other novels include The Long March, Set This House on Fire and This Quiet Dust.

Styron attended Davidson College, served as a Marine lieutenant and graduated from Duke University. A member of Phi Beta Kappa, he has received many honors including the American Book Award and the Distinguished Alumni Award from Duke University. In 1988, he was inducted into the American Academy of Arts and Letters. France awarded him the Legion of Honor.

A Response

The Publications Council acknowledges that a significant segment of the university community has been deeply hurt and offended by the cartoon that appeared in the recent issue of The Pillory. The Council has heard the complaint against the publication and its staff and has taken action it deems appropriate in accordance with the current bylaws. The Pillory staff has already taken steps to alter its operating procedures to ensure greater accountability by the editor and staff.

The Council supports the effort announced by President Sullivan to appoint a group to examine the policies governing student publications and anticipates the recommendations.

Governor's Fellows

A Reminder

Open enrollment will end May 14. Changes in health plans or flexible reimbursement accounts must be made before that date.

In-State Tuition, Fees, Room And Board To Rise 8.2 Percent In 1993-94

The Board of Visitors Friday approved an 8.2 percent increase in the total bill that in-state students will pay for the 1993-94 academic year.

The total cost increases would rise from the current $7,947 to $8,602. Out-of-state students, who currently pay $15,327 a year, will be charged $16,792, an increase of 9.6 percent.

The total costs include tuition fees, and average room and board costs. Looking at tuition only, the increase has gone from $2,460 to $2,730 for in-state students and $7,380 to $8,190 for out-of-state students. In both cases, the tuition rose 11 percent.

Law students pay an additional $850 in tuition, while graduate business students pay an additional $300.

The tuition increases are needed to support several needs, said Samuel Jones, associate provost for planning and budget.

Among the needs cited by Jones are: faculty salary increases, which take effect Dec. 1; new faculty positions supporting undergraduate research programs and new freshman seminars; new support for the Applied Science Program and the Thomas Jefferson Program in Public Policy; additional support for library materials; and funds for buildings and grounds priorities.

'The Ordeal of the Longhouse' Wins Two OAH Awards

The Organization of American Historians awarded two of its most prestigious prizes to The Ordeal of the Longhouse: The Peoples of the Iroquois League in the Era of American Colonization by Daniel K. Richter, a book published last November by the Institute of Early American History and Culture, in cooperation with the University of North Carolina Press.

Described by University of Washington historian Richard R. Johnson as "the best account yet written of one of the most remarkable stories of any period of American history," and "a work of exceptional balance and lucidity," The Ordeal of the Longhouse received both the Frederick Jackson Turner Award, given to the best first book by a previously unpublished author, and the Ray Allen Billington Prize, bestowed biennially upon the best book on frontier history.

A member of the history and American studies departments of Dickinson College, Richter was a postdoctoral fellow at the Institute from 1983 to 1985, and during that period he also taught history at the College. Presently participating in a faculty exchange at the University of East Anglia, Richter flew from England to attend the awards banquet with Institute Director Ronald Hoffman, and Editor of Publications Fredrika J.

Taute. The award was made April 16, during the annual OAH meeting in Anaheim, Calif.

Richter's study is the most recent example of the widely recognized excellence of the Institute's book-publishing program. During the past decade alone, Institute volumes have garnered an impressive array of prizes, among them a Pulitzer, a Bancroft, Choice's outstanding academic book award and nine awards from the leading professional historical organizations.

Founded in 1943 by the Colonial Williamsburg Foundation and the College, the Institute of Early American History and Culture is the only organization in the United States whose central mission is exclusively dedicated to the advancement of study, research and publications bearing upon the history and culture of early America until approximately 1815.

In addition to books, it publishes the William and Mary Quarterly. One of only 17 National Endowment for the Humanities Centers for Advanced Study in the country, the Institute, which is located in Swem Library, annually offers a two-year postdoctoral fellowship and sponsors a variety of seminars, colloquia and conferences.

New Books

Booker T. Washington and Adult Education

The University Press of Florida has just published Booker T. Washington and the Adult Education Movement by Virginia Lantz Denton '69.

This book takes a new look at the black leader for whom an entire era was named. Material covered includes the influences of slavery on Booker T. Washington's philosophy; the early problems of emancipated slaves, including establishing rights and buying land and homes; the struggle to educate an entire race coming out of slavery; Washington's education at Hampton Institute and its influences; his work with adult education at Tuskegee Institute; his political activity and leadership in the South, nation and world; an evaluation of his work from several perspectives; and his place in the framework of the adult education movement.

Denton received a Ph.D. from the University of Southern Mississippi in 1988. She taught school for 20 years in the United States, Japan and Germany.

She has published two volumes of poetry and numerous articles in magazines and newspapers. A freelance writer and educator, she lives in Birmingham, Miss.

Anatomy Of The Sacred

James C. Livingston, Walter G. Mason Professor of Religion, is the author of Anatomy of the Sacred: An Introduction to Religion, which was recently reissued in a revised and expanded second edition by the Macmillan Publishing Company. Unlike most introductory texts that represent historical surveys of one or more of the major living religious traditions, Anatomy of the Sacred is a phenomenological-comparative study of those fundamental concepts or structures that constitute a religious worldview, with illustrative material selected from primitive and archaic, as well as from the great historical, religious traditions.

Livingston's essay, "Christianity and Culture in Newman's Idea of the University," recently was published as a chapter in Discourse and Context: An Interdisciplinary Study of John Henry Newman, ed. by Gerard Magill (South Illinois University Press, 1993). The contributions to this volume comprise the papers presented at the Newman Centenary Conference held in 1990.

Community Volunteers Honored

The Greater Williamsburg Association of Volunteer Administrators held its first communitywide volunteer appreciation gala last Thursday evening in Trinkle Hall.

Some 400 volunteers, representing a variety of community agencies, attended the event, which followed National Volunteer Week, April 18-24. Participating agencies worked together to host the event to save staff time and budgets.

"Volunteers keep this community running," said Carolyn Kincaid, director of the Volunteer Connection, a United Way service that matches volunteers with their agencies. "Many of our agencies depend on volunteers to help run their programs and serve."

Kincaid hoped the event raised awareness about the importance of volunteers

Library Friends Honor Meyers

Terry L. Meyers, associate professor of English, receives the first Earl Gregg Swem Award for service and commitment on behalf of the library at the Friends of the Library dinner Friday evening. Pictured with Meyers (l-r) are Bonnie White, new chairman; Andrew Lark, retiring chairman; Nancy H. Marshall, university librarian; and speaker for the evening, Elliott Engel.

Rettig Receives Library Award

James Rettig, assistant university librarian for reference and information services, has been awarded the 1993 American Library Association G. K. Hall Award for Library Literature.

The award, $500 and a citation, donated by G. K. Hall & Co., recognizes an outstanding contribution to library literature issues during the three years preceding the presentation.

Rettig received the award for the volume titled Distinguished Classics of Reference Publishing, Oryx Press, 1992.

Essays contained in the book, each approximately 10 pages in length, cover the development and history of 31 major English language reference sources.

Rettig is author and editor of the Current Reference Books column in Wilson Library Bulletin, editor of Bibliographic Guides in the Humanities and a member of the Reference Services Review Editorial Board. He has served as associate editor and assistant editor of the Reference Services Review.

Rettig is president of the Reference and Adult Services Division of the American Library Association and a member of the OCLA Reference Services Advisory Committee. He received the 1988 RASDA Isadore Gilbert Mudge Award for "distinguished contributions to reference librarianship."

Departments & Schools

Classical Studies

Professor Lewis W. Leadbeater has published an article titled "The Sophistic Nature of Kafka's Forschungen eines Hundes" in German Life and Letters 46(2) (1993).

Religion

Mary J. Gentes, visiting assistant professor, published "Scandalizing the Goddess at Kodungallur," in Asian Folklore Studies 51 (1992) 295-322.

Lynn R. LiDonnici, assistant professor, published an article on an important Epidauran inscription in the American Journal of Philology 113 (1992) 25-41; and the Harvard Theological Review has just accepted for publication this year her study on "Artemis Ephesia and Greco-Roman Worship."

Professor Thomas M. Finn recently published two volumes of a long-term project on conversion in antiquity: Early Christian Baptism and the Catechumenate: vol. 1, West and East Syria; vol. 2, Italy, North Africa and Egypt (Collegeville: Liturgical Press, 1992). His next volume will include conversion in the Greco-Roman religions and in early Judaism.

Professor David L. Holmes chaired the southeastern meeting of the American Society of Church History in Williamsburg, April 1-4, and recently published an article on "Presiding Bishop John E. Hines and the General Convention Special Program," in Anglican and Episcopal History 61 (1992), pp. 393-417. He has had three book manuscripts accepted for publication this year, on evangelicals in the history of the Episcopal Church, and on the white establishment and the underclass in the 1960s. He continues to edit the Church Reviews for Anglican and Episcopal History.

Marc Lee Raphael, Sophia and Nathan S. Gumenick Professor of Judaic Studies, recently published an article on the Americanization of Orthodox Judaism in a memorial volume for Rabbi Leo Jung and continues to edit the quarterly journal American Jewish History and to serve as editor of the Biographical Dictio- naries of American Judaism and associate editor of the American National Biography.

Marshall-Wythe School of Law

"The Pressure of Precedent: A Critique of the Conservative Approaches to Stare Decisis in Abortion Cases" by Professor Michael Gerhardt, has been published in Volume 10 of Constitutional Commentary. Gerhardt examines the Supreme Court's decision in Planned Parenthood v. Casey and the various opinions of the Justices as they relate to the role of precedent in constitutional decision-making.

Specifically, he compares and critiques the two conservative approaches to constitutional stare decisis present in the Casey decision: the position of Justices O'Connor, Kennedy and Souter, on the one hand; and the position of Chief Justice Rehnquist and Justices Scalia and Thomas, on the other hand. Although the article deals with the specific question of affirming or overruling Roe, the issues have applicability to the full range of constitutional law.

Denise Bland, lecturer in law, has been selected to attend the NEH Summer Institute, "Educating a Citizenry: School and Society in the World of Thomas Jefferson," sponsored by the American studies program at the College. Bland will be among 25 participants—an interdisciplinary group of scholars in the fields of education, history, law, philosophy and political science—who will assemble in Williamsburg and Charlottesville from May 30 to July 10.

School of Business Administration

Wanda A. Wallace, John N. Dalton Professor of Business Administration and associate dean for academic affairs, spoke at Washington and Lee University on "Integrating Ethics in University Education," April 26. This lecture was followed by a discussion forum. During her visit to the campus, Wallace also spoke to a class on standard-setting, particularly focusing on her activities with the Financial Accounting Standards Advisory Council.

New Book Club

The Hans Christian von Baeyer Book Club for Children at the Williamsburg Child Care Center has been established at Rizzoli's bookstore on Merchants Square. A large sign at the top of the stairs invites customers to either make a donation or purchase a book that will be used at the center.

Bucks for Books

Acting Athletic Director Barbara Blosser hands over a check for $1,792 to University Librarian Nancy H. Marshall, money raised from game receipts at the men's basketball game against American University. This game was designated "Bucks for Books," and receipts tripled the amount donated to Swem Library in 1992.

Endowment Established To Collect Student And Faculty Art

By Peggy Shaw
University Relations

The College has established an endowment for the new President's Collection of Faculty and Student Art. The endowment was set up through the efforts of President Timothy J. Sullivan, in order to acquire, exhibit and preserve exceptional works of art from William and Mary faculty and students.

Last spring, Sullivan and his wife, Anne Klare Sullivan, purchased five senior student pieces, which they donated to the President's Collection. These art works now hang in the President's House, along with sculpture and paintings on loan from William and Mary faculty members. As the collection grows, however, art work will be exhibited in other public spaces on campus.

"The goal is to collect meritorious work from College artists for exhibit around campus," said Valerie Hardy, curator of the President's Collection and an adjunct professor of art at William and Mary. "We're trying to think about the future. Many of these artists will continue, and the College will have a wonderful record of their early work."

Enough money is currently in the endowment account to acquire several new pieces of student art annually, according to Hardy. Artworks purchased for the President's Collection this year will be selected from the 1993 senior art show, which runs through May 16 in Andrews Hall, and is open Monday through Friday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Members of a special selection committee will review the show and bestow purchase awards. Committee members are: Hardy; Paul Helfrich, associate professor of fine arts; Lewis Cohen, associate professor of fine arts; Mark M. Johnson, director of the Muscarelle Museum; and Anne Sullivan.

"My guess is that the work we buy this time will go to the admission office," said Hardy. "We're also working on acquiring faculty work for the Blow Hall Board of Visitors rooms."

Terry Speaks At Adult Skills Program Ceremony

Author Wallace Terry, currently artist-in-residence, was guest speaker at the annual awards ceremony held by the Adult Skills Program.

Sixty-seven students and 23 tutors were awarded certificates and two-year service pins in a program held in Phi Beta Kappa Memorial Hall Friday afternoon.

In his inspirational remarks, Terry recalled some of his most memorable interviews, to tell his audience how the continuing quest for learning was a part of many great lives. He also talked about some of his own struggles as a writer and the years he spent before he found a publisher for his best-seller Bloods, about black servicemen in Vietnam.

He urged the students in his audience to hold tight to a desire for knowledge and a love of books. He closed his talk with a quote from Albert Schweitzer: "In everyone's life at some time our inner fire goes out. It is then burst into flame by an encounter with another human being. We should all be thankful for those people who rekindle the inner spirit."

"And those of you who learn in this program I dare say had your inner spirits rekindled," he said.

His portion of the program also included the presentation of copies of the book, Read With Me by Parade editor Walter Anderson.

Also Jirina Paskovsky, Karel Paskovsky, Carol Patterson, Hector Perez, Rosario Perez, Hilda Potter, Lan Radda, Edgar Rangel, Elisabeth Rank, Roselind Richardson, Paul Rodgers, Luciano Sagredo, Albert Skutans, Galina Spitkovskaya, Chun Vei Tiao, Lewis Vincent, George Wallace, Cheng Zhang Wang, Yunfei Wang, Rayve Washington, Rihong Xu, Hosni Zeid, Shuwen Zhang, Zhaomei Zhang and Zhiping Zhu.

Tutor awards were presented to Anne Bailey, Jason Brockwell, Ilse Bussing, Jimmy Chandler, Melanie Coates, Danielle Eng, Rebecca Fallen, Justin Greene-Roesel, Krista Griffith, Andrea Gubser, Dorothy Hamann, Catherine Hance, Joy Kinlaw, Mac Laird, Henry Lerner, Kristin Lottig, Christie Milnovich, Dina Osborn, Katie Otis, Charles Tedding, Don Rehm, Tamara Shie and Anne Turner.

There are more than 160 William and Mary students currently serving as tutors in the Adult Skills Program on campus, along with more than 60 community tutors.

Housed in Bryan Complex, the Adult Skills Program is directed by Teresa Williams. It is a United Way agency.

Polymer Science Research Topic Of Short Course June 10-11

An intensive short course in recent research advances in poly(vinyl chloride) will be offered by the Applied Science program, June 10-11, at the Holiday Inn, Downtown.

This course is being offered especially for chemists and engineers, supervisory personnel and other professionals, who are concerned with basic research, applied research, product development, characterization testing and applications. The course will benefit newcomers as well as experts in the field and will emphasize basic scientific knowledge that relates to industrial needs. The latest fundamental advances will be stressed, but considerable amounts of background material will be presented.

Participants will receive one credit in the continuing education program of the College. Early registration is strongly recommended since the number of attendees will be restricted. Registration details may be obtained from W. H. Starnes Jr., Floyd Dewey Gottwald Sr. Professor of Chemistry, ext. 12552.

Instructors will include two executives from the B.F. Goodrich Company's research and development center in Brecksville, Ohio.

Alan R. Berens, a polymer science consultant, retired recently from B. F. Goodrich, where he was a senior research fellow. A world renowned PVC expert, Berens has published extensively on the polymerization, rheology, structure and properties of PVC and on diffusion processes in polymers.

Richard G. Parker is associate director of corporate research. He joined the company in 1969 after serving as a research fellow at Harvard University and the California Institute of Technology. Among many other publications and patents, he is the co-author of "Chapter II, Chemical Modifications: Chlorinated PVC" in the Encyclopedia of PVC (2nd edition), edited by Nass and Heiberger.

Starnes will be course director. Well known, both nationally and internationally, for his research on synthetic polymers, Starnes formerly was head of the department of chemistry and life sciences at Polytechnic University, Brooklyn, N.Y. He has been profiled as a "Polymer Science Pioneer" by Polymer News and has received several awards for his extensive basic research on the degradation, stabilization, and microstructure of PVC.

Observance Of Memorial Day

The College and Virginia Institute of Marine Science will observe Memorial Day on Monday, May 31.

Most of the administrative offices and the plant department (except for those employees required to maintain essential services as determined by management) will be closed. The decision to require employees to work should be made by the dean, director or department head, as appropriate, and should be communicated to the employee(s) as soon as possible. The Campus Police Department will maintain its regular schedule.

The names of permanent classified employees who are required to work must be reported in writing to the Office of Personnel Services by June 11, 1993 in order that these employees may be credited with compensatory leave. Hourly employees who are required to work during the holiday will be paid their regular hourly rates.

With the approval of management, compensatory leave should be taken as soon as possible after the holiday on which it was earned. Compensatory time not taken within 12 months will be lost.

On behalf of the administration of the university, I wish each member of the College community a safe and enjoyable holiday.

Melvyn D. Schiavelli
Provost

New Kappa Delta Pi Members

Seventeen new initiates were inadvertently omitted from the new member listing for Kappa Delta Pi in the April 28 issue of the News.

New members enrolled in master's programs include: Laura Fontana, Leigh Ann Foster, Katie Lori Haden, Ann Haimburger, Karen Little, Corey McDonald, Corey Schock and Karen Swift, elementary education; Brenda Frank and Martha Muir, museum education; Deborah Kendall, gifted education; Cynthia Loiacono, counseling; Kecia Mincey, reading; and Cynthia McGee and Melissa Sutton, resource/consulting teaching.

New members enrolled in doctoral programs include: Barbara Harrison and Richard Osman, higher education.

Our apologies for these omissions. Ed.

James W. Brinkley To Succeed Hays T. Watkins As Rector

By Ray Betzner
University Relations

The College Board of Visitors elected James W. Brinkley '59 as the new rector, James B. Murray Jr. '74 as the vice rector and Audrey M. Harris '60 as the secretary.

The regular elections of new officers came as the board also recognized the service of five members whose terms expire June 30: Joseph R. Koons '68, James W. McGlothlin '62, John H. Tucker Jr. '54, Hays T. Watkins LL.D. '82, and James E. Ukrop '60.

Also during the two-day meeting, a proposal to have a non-voting member of the student body sit on the board was voted down. State law gives the board the option of creating a position for the non-voting student.

An ad hoc committee of the board had been examining the issue, which was proposed by student leaders earlier this year. Audrey M. Harris, who chaired the ad hoc committee, said the committee concluded that a new position was not needed because the current system seems to be working well.

Retiring Rector Hays T. Watkins (r) hands over the gavel to his successor, James W. Brinkley.

"The current student liaison group is made up of four undergraduates and one graduate student. If we appointed one student to the board, even though the student would not be voting, we would be creating a dynamic on campus that minimizes the impact of others," said Harris.

Faculty members told her they wanted the decision delayed until the General Assembly could have a chance to create an equivalent position for a faculty member. In addition, graduate students were concerned that their needs might not be communicated if the non-voting student was an undergraduate.

The board accepted the ad hoc committee's report with the dissent of Najeeb E. Halaby.

In other action, the board learned that:

* The Campaign for the Fourth Century has received $142.5 million in gifts and commitments so far, approximately 93 percent of its goal. More than 450 new endowments have been created, and the College has increased its cash flow from $5 million to almost $17 million a year, according to Dennis Slon, director of development.

* The decision to close the King Health Center at night and offer health care through other means has been a success. Vice President for Student Affairs W. Samuel Sadler said the center will likely keep its daytime hours and use the money it has saved from the overnight closing to upgrade service during the day. (See story p. 6.)

Faculty Promotions, Appointments Approved By Board

Two faculty members were granted academic tenure and 11 were promoted from associate professor to professor by the Board of Visitors on April 30.

Granted tenure, effective July 1, were Robert C. Hale, associate professor of marine science; and Ronald Hoffman, professor of history and director of the Institute of Early American History and Culture.

Promoted from associate professor to professor were John F. Boschen and Lawrence B. Pulley, School of Business Administration; Eugene M. Bureson, School of Marine Science; Neal E. Devins, James E. Moliterno and I. Trotter Hardy, Marshall-Wythe School of Law; Bruce A. McConachie, theatre and speech and American studies; John H. Oakley, classical studies; Ilya Spitkovsky, mathematics; and Talbot J. Taylor, English.

Four professors were promoted to designated professorships: Howard M.

Fraser is now the N.E.H. Professor of Modern Languages and Literatures; John H. Oakley is now Chancellor Professor of Classical Studies; Talbot J. Taylor is the Louise G. T. Cooley Professor of English, and John H. Willis Jr. is the Forrest D. Murden Jr. Professor of English.

New faculty hired by the board of visitors include: Prabhu Aggarwal, assistant professor of business administration; James E. Bauer, assistant professor of marine science; and Deborah C. Bebout, assistant professor of chemistry.

Appointed by the board to fill tenure eligible positions are Sharon T. Broadwater, assistant professor of biology; Elizabeth A. Canuel, assistant professor of marine science; Dorothy E. Finnegan, assistant professor of education; Julie Galambush, assistant professor of religion; Kirsten Silva Gruesz, instructor of English; Cindy Hahamovich, assistant professor of history; Kevin B. Hendricks, assistant professor of business administration; Christopher Howard, assistant professor of government; and Clayton Hubner, assistant professor of business administration.

Also appointed to fill tenure eligible positions are Stephen Kaattari, professor of marine science with tenure; Steven Alan Kuehl, associate professor of marine science with tenure; George S. Oldfield, Richard S. Reynolds Jr. Professor of Business Administration; Edward E. Pratt, assistant professor of history; William M. Rodgers III, instructor in economics; Yana van der Maulen Rodgers, instructor in economics; Margaret S. Saha, assistant professor of biology; Carol Sheriff, instructor in history; Ann Marie Stock, instructor in modern languages and literatures; Hildy J. Teegan, assistant professor of business administration; Brenda Toler Williams, associate professor of education; and Charles Weise, instructor in economics.

The board also made several appointments to fill vacancies in the administrative and professional faculty. Appointed were Jayne W. Barnard, acting associate dean of the Marshall-Wythe School of Law; Deborah Boykin, director of Residence Life; Samuel E. Jones, vice president for Budget and Planning; Paul Marcus, acting dean, Marshall-Wythe School of Law; Nancy Marshall, dean of University Libraries; R. Heather MacDonald, acting dean of Undergraduate Studies; and Elaine McBeth, associate director of the Thomas Jefferson Program in Public Policy.

Five appointments were made to the School of Marine Science, including William D. DuPaul, professor; Fu-Lin Chu, David A. Evans and James E. Kirkley, associate professors, and Jerome P. Y. Maa as assistant professor.

Selection of the 1993 U.S. Physics Team began in January when hundreds of the top high school physics students in the nation took a rigorous exam. Those with the top 79 scores then took a second, more difficult examination in March, with the top 20 being invited to become members of the 1993 U.S. Physics Team.

In addition to the United States, the following countries will send teams to the competition: Australia, Austria, Belgium, Bulgaria, Canada, China, Croatia, Cyprus, Czech Republic, Estonia, Finland, Germany, Great Britain, Greece, Hungary, Iceland, Indonesia, Iran, Italy, Kuwait, Lithuania, Mexico, The Netherlands, Norway, Poland, Republic of Korea, Romania, Russia, Singapore, Slovak Republic, Slovenia, Spain, Surinam, Sweden, Turkey and Ukraine.

The AAPT organizes the U.S. participation in the International Olympiad while the American Institute of Physics is responsible for the funding the U.S. Physics Team and the international competition. AT&T and the Office of Naval Research are sponsors of the 1993 U.S. Physics Team.

The academic director for the 1993 team is Larry Kirkpatrick, a professor of physics at Montana State University. Theodore W. Vittitoe, one of the coaches, teaches physics at Libertyville High School in Libertyville, Ill. Wilson Bascom, who teaches physics at Thomas S. Wootton High School in Rockville, Md., will serve as the other coach for this year's U.S. Physics Team.

to the community. Volunteers, she said, are especially needed during the summer months.

Jan Callahan, weekend anchor for WTKR television news, served as the guest speaker. She announced the names of 12 volunteers from the greater Williamsburg area, who were honored for their dedication to community service.

They include: 1993 Volunteer of the Year, Mack Stolarski of Housing Partnerships, Inc.; Pete Cruikshank of the United Way Information and Referral Service; James Robertson, commissioner of the Clean County Commission, James City County; Gertrude Berthiaume of Williamsburg Community Hospital; Naomi Flythe of the Black Child Development Institute; and Sharon Keach of the James City County Extension Service.

Also, Dennis Cogle of the Rita Welsh Adult Skills Program; Hope Dodds-Kirk of Big Brothers/Big Sisters; Flicka Prince of Birthright of Williamsburg, Inc.; and Jack Charlton of the Greater Williamsburg AIDS Network.

Local businesses and organizations made donations to support the event. "There has been a wonderful show of support from the community," said Sally French, secretary of G.W.A.V.A. and executive director of Meals on Wheels. "People know how important volunteers are to having a close-knit caring community."

Andrea Williams, chair of the association and executive director of Big Brothers/Big Sisters of Williamsburg, added that response to the gala was very positive. "People work hard and volunteer personal time that is difficult to spare these days," she said. "They need to know they're appreciated."

G.W.A.V.A. consists of representatives from many public and non-profit health and human service agencies. Volunteer administrators formed the group as an avenue for sharing knowledge and ideas.

Elizabeth Barrett and Matt Corey Win Fulbright Scholarships

Anne Elizabeth Barrett, a senior concentrator in sociology and economics, has been awarded a Fulbright Scholarship to study in New Zealand next year.

"As an extension of my senior honors project in sociology on the funding of women's disease research in the United States, I wish to conduct a parallel study in New Zealand," explained Barrett in her research proposal.

"Continuation of my research would allow comparisons to be made between the largely private health care system of the United States and the system of New Zealand which is in transition from public to private provision. ... To continue the research I have begun this year, I hope to study at the University of Auckland. Peter Davis, senior lecturer in medical sociology, and Maureen Molloy, lecturer in sociology at Auckland, have expressed interest in my project and mentioned that other colleagues, including Helen Robert, with expertise in women's health, would assist me."

Barrett's faculty adviser on campus is Elaine Themo, professor of sociology.

Barrett will begin a Ph.D. program in sociology at Duke University in the fall, but plans to leave for New Zealand in Feb. 1994. She intends to return to graduate school in the spring of 1995 and prepare for a career in research and teaching at the university level.

A Phi Beta Kappa graduate, Barrett is vice president for scholarship for Delta Gamma fraternity, and is a member of Omicron Delta Epsilon economics honor society, Alpha Kappa Delta sociology honor society, the Cycling Club and Outdoors Club.

Elizabeth Barrett

"I have a strong interest and background in research that will enable me to conduct the study in New Zealand," said Barrett. In the spring of 1992, I completed an internship as a research associate at the National Center for State Courts. One of my research papers, 'Women in Law,' won the 1991 Dean's Prize for Women's Studies. Relative to my proposal for New Zealand, I am currently examining the funding of research on women's diseases in relation to the dollars allocated to examine diseases affecting similar proportions of the population and having comparable rates of increase over time.

"My research will not only increase understanding of the distributional ef-

Matt Corey

Matt Corey

Matt Corey, a Phi Beta Kappa senior majoring in Latin American studies and comparative literature, has been awarded a Fulbright Scholarship for study in Uruguay.

Corey will spend his time at the University of the Oriental Republic of Uruguay in Montevideo. He will focus his attention on the Tupamaros, whom he describes as "an urban guerilla movement which began in 1963, buoyed by the success of the Cuban Revolution in 1959. By 1972, the military had declared 'internal war,' initiating a process of anti-subversive repression on the Brazilian model that would not fully subside until 1985."

Prevention To Be Focus Of Conference On Community Research And Action

One of the events on the Tercentenary Calendar is the Fourth Biennial Conference on Community Research and Action, June 16-19. The following preview of the conference was written by a member of the conference planning committee, Joe Galano, associate professor of psychology.

Imagine a conference on mental health professionals at which the treatment of mental illness, violence and substance abuse is not a major focus. Go a step further and imagine that these topics are not even on the agenda. If you can't imagine what these professionals would be saying to each other, consider yourself in the mainstream of thinking about issues relating to mental health.

But this June the College will host the Fourth Biennial Conference on Community Research and Action, which will focus on one of the most exciting and promising perspectives in the field of psychology—prevention of mental illness and the promotion of mental health.

One reason this American Psychological Association conference is notable is that it is not the typical assemblage of university faculty talking to other university faculty. Rather, this conference will be a true conversation between mental health researchers from across the country and front-line practitioners. In fact, the conference is the first to be co-sponsored by state and university—the Virginia Department of Mental Health, Mental Retardation and Substance Abuse Services and the College of William and Mary. Such collaborations, while rare nationally, happen, and with greater frequency, in Virginia. These collaborations are the reason Steve Goldston, former director of the Office of Prevention, National Institute of Mental Health, said, "Virginia represents the best example of university-state partnerships in the country."

Commissioner King David (DMHM-RSAS), Secretary Howard Cullum (Health and Human Resources) and Harriet Russell (director, Office of Prevention) are ecstatic about this partnership and the opportunity it presents for professionals on the front line. In fact, the Department of Mental Health, Mental Retardation and Substance Abuse Services is contributing money to fund the conference and additional monies to defray the expenses of 100 mental health workers from across the state.

Members of the American Psychological Association, in selecting William and

Student Alumni Liaison Council Elects New Officers

The Student Alumni Liaison Council recently elected officers for the 1993-1994 school year. Heather Lyle, daughter of Fraser and Valerie Lyle of Mendham, N.J., was elected president. She is a senior majoring in public policy. A member of the SALC since 1991, Lyle is also a member of Mortar Board, Kappa Kappa Gamma Sorority, the William and Mary Choir and Botetourt Chamber Singers. She was SALC secretary from 1992 to 1993 and a president's aide from 1991 to 1993.

Shawn Smith, son of Danny and Dianne Smith of Richmond, Va., was elected vice president. A sophomore majoring in accounting and a member of the SALC since 1992, Smith is also a tour guide, admissions assistant, Bryan Hall Council secretary-treasurer, Young Republican and a member of the crew team.

Elected secretary-historian was Deanna Buxton, daughter of Donald and Cynthia Buxton of Vienna, Va. She is a sophomore majoring in English and Spanish. A member of the SALC since 1992, Buxton is also Kappa Delta sorority's assistant rush chairman.

Derek Gottschall, son of Herbert and Ruth Ann Gottschall of Allentown, Pa., was elected treasurer. He is a junior majoring in international relations and has been a member of the SALC since 1992.

Gottschall is also a three-year member of the honor council, a 1993-94 orientation aid director, a member of Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity, the William and Mary Choir, Botetourt Chamber Singers and The Stairwells, a men's a capella choir.

Sponsored by the William and Mary Society of the Alumni, the 32-member SALC coordinates student programs involving alumni and assists with alumni functions such as Homecoming and class reunions.

CommonHealth Winners

Winners for the drawing held during each Medical Screening Interpretive sessions April 15, 16 and 20 were Sandra Scott, parking services; Peter Derks, professor of psychology; Willie Perry, spouse of Paula Perry, physics dept.; and Marge O'Shell, widow of Kurt O'Shell, professor of education emeritus.

Nineteen Receive Summer Research Fellowships From Commonwealth Center

Nineteen doctoral candidates in history and American studies have been awarded Summer Research Fellowships by the Commonwealth Center for the Study of American Culture. Typically, the applicants' projects relate to dissertation research. This year the fellowships range from $200 to $1,100 and total $10,000.

American studies program doctoral students and projects receiving fellowship support are: Donald Linebaugh, for research on the excavations and career of Roland W. Robbins; MaryKate McMaster, to attend the American Antiquarian Society's "Seminar on Critical Methods in Bibliography and the History of the Book in the United States"; Emily Mieras, for research on author Charlotte Perkins Gilman; Darlene O'Dell, for research on Pauli Murray, civil rights lawyer and co-founder of NOW; Anjeanette Rose, for research on Rebecca Gratz, a leading woman intellectual in the 19th-century American Jewish community; Gretchen Schoel, for research into the lives of American women living in Japan in the 1940s and 1950s; Elizabeth Scott, for research on feminist author and activist Mary Johnston; Renee Sentilles, for research on 19th-century actress and poet Adah Isaacs Menken; Karen Veselits, for research on Harlem Renaissance literary figure and magazine editor Dorothy West; and Jochen Wierich, for research on the art and life of Samuel F. B. Morse.

Doctoral students and projects in history receiving summer fellowships are: Jon Brudvig, to support research at the Bureau of Indian Affairs in Washington, D. C., and in collections in North and South Dakota and Nebraska for his dissertation, "Bridging the Cultural Divide: Hampton Institute's Native American

Alumni;" Michael Jarvis to support research at the Bermuda National Archives for his dissertation, "Shipbuilding and the Transformation of Society in 18th-Century Bermuda"; Mary Carroll Johansen, to support research at the University of Virginia and University of North Carolina archives for her dissertation, "Education for Women in Virginia, 1790-1830"; Christopher Joyce, to support research at the Newberry Library for his dissertation, "Owning the Map, Owning the Land: The European Conquest of America as Reflected in Cartography"; Lynn Nelson, for research at Duke University and University of North Carolina archives for his dissertation, "Society, Agriculture and Environment in the Virginia High Country, 1740-1850"; Jeffrey Perez, for research at the Virginia Historical Society and the Virginia State Library for his dissertation, "Visions of Virginia: Responses to Improvements of the James and Appomattox River Systems, 1783-1819"; and Blair Pogue, for research in church archives in Nashville, Tenn., Frankfort, Lexington and Louisville, Ky., and Decatur, Ga., for a study of female Baptists, Methodists, Presbyterians and Disciples of Christ in the Virginia and North Carolina back country and in Kentucky and Tennessee, 1775-1860.

The State Council of Higher Education in Virginia founded the Commonwealth Center at William and Mary in 1988 to develop and enhance campus-based academic programs and to sponsor scholarly research. The center's summer research fellowships have materially contributed to graduate training and to the study of American culture in an interdisciplinary setting.

Siemens Award

Two students, Laura Norton, a senior, and Eyuka Hayashi, a rising junior, will be studying in Muenster, Germany, this summer as recipients of the $2,000 Siemens Automotive International Study Scholarship, awarded annually to one or more eligible undergraduate students studying in Muenster.

Students selected for the Siemens scholarship must have demonstrated interest in business and must be proficient in German. The scholarship is intended for students studying abroad as part of the William and Mary Summer in Muenster program, but may also be awarded to eligible students who plan to study at the University of Muenster during the academic year. The Siemens scholarship is administered by the Wendy and Emery Reves Center for International Studies. The first award was made last year to Erin Hollister '93.

The Newport News plant of Siemens Automotive manufactures electronic and electromechanical products for the automobile industry, including fuel injection systems and fuel rails. Siemens Automotive is a subsidiary of Siemens A.G., an international industrial conglomerate with headquarters in Germany.

King Student Health Center Handled More Than 25,000 Visits Last Year

by Poul Olson
Graduate Assistant

On any given day, the King Student Health waiting room is filled with students waiting to see doctors for a variety of illnesses, injuries or examinations. For many students the health center is the primary source of medical care, behavioral education and counseling.

With a 1.25 million dollar annual budget, 20 full-time and several part-time health care providers, Student Health handled some 25,000 student visits last year, 2,220 last month alone. All students pay an annual College health fee of $159 to cover the cost the service.

The facility offers a variety of health services, in addition to basic treatment. Respiratory problems, injuries and gynecological examinations are typically the most frequent reasons students come to Student Health.

Since many students are away from home for the first time when they come to the College, the health center tries to teach students good health habits. Director Linda Herrmann says her staff does not just treat illnesses or injuries, but also offers advice and guidance about prevention and possible changes in behavior.

Though it is difficult to gauge the effectiveness of the health center's education efforts, Herrmann says that her staff strives to warn students about risky behaviors that may lead to illness or injury. Efforts typically focus on answering questions, as well as providing information and advice about sexually transmitted diseases and alcohol.

"Education and health care go together," Herrmann says. "We work with students to help them feel better about being on their own and also to provide them with someone to talk to [about their problems]."

Many young women get their first gynecological exam at Student Health. Herrmann attributes this to the change in behavior which coming to college often spawns, and the availability to students of confidential health care at the health center. "Accompanying the freedom of leaving home is often an increase in sexual activity," Herrmann says, adding that the health center has a part-time nurse practitioner who specifically performs gynecological exams.

Since last year, two persistent staff vacancies have plagued the health center. At the beginning of this semester, the lack of an overnight nurse forced the administration to suspend operation hours from 11 p.m. to 8 a.m.

The difficulty in filling the position coupled with low overnight usage patterns prompted Vice President for Student Affairs Samuel Sadler, in consultation with the Board of Visitors last week, to eliminate the night shift completely. Reiterating that the center will still remain available for suicide and other protocol emergencies, Sadler says that the decision will permit the reallocation of resources to improve daytime accessibility.

The most frequent complaint of the health center is long waits, sometimes up to two hours, which students endure. Since Nov. 1, a physician has aggravated the problem and forced the College to purchase time from Williamsburg Hospital emergency room doctors.

In addition to most mornings, Mondays are usually the busiest days because students develop illnesses or get injured over the weekend. Visitation patterns, however, vary from week to week depending on weather and the academic schedule.

"Most students don't have a lot of free time," Sadler says. "The long waiting times are certainly a deficiency of the center and a problem we want to solve."

"We would like to give students some predictability about when they get to see a doctor," Herrmann says. "We may also want to consider implementing an official form of triage to ensure that sicker students are seen in a timely manner." Herrmann says that by next fall, she anticipates having a computer system in place to track the demographics of visits to the Health Center. She hopes the information it provides will allow her staff to perform a "needs assessment," determine the most frequent injuries and illnesses and ultimately alter outreach care to address possible better prevention measures.

Because the Health Center has been subject to the same state budgetary constraints as other departments at the College, operating costs have risen only a moderate 3 to 4 percent over the last several years. Sadler attributes the general cost effectiveness of the operation to the quality of staff and the "tremendous progress" that has been made in improving the quality of service.

Unlike the University of Virginia and most private institutions, William and Mary does not require students to have insurance prior to enrollment. Both Herrmann and Sadler agree that something needs to be done about this policy. "The risk is too great today for anybody who is uninsured," Sadler says. "In the event of hospitalization, most students who are uninsured do not have the financial resources to pay the bills themselves."

"The issues are very real. The burden of having to pay medical bills themselves can profoundly affect not only students' health but their education as well."

Swem Partner In Reciprocal Faculty Borrowing Program

For faculty planning research travel this summer, we have been asked to reprint an earlier notice of Swem Library's expanded borrowing program.

William and Mary's participation in the OCLC Reciprocal Faculty Borrowing Program allows any William and Mary faculty member to borrow books when visiting any one of more than 150 university libraries throughout the country.

It is a service offered by OCLC, a non-profit computer library service and research organization, whose computer network and products link more than 11,000 libraries in 37 countries and territories; Swem Library and the Marshall-

Wythe School of Law Library are active members of OCLC.

The program allows faculty from one institution to borrow materials when on the premises of another participating institution. Boston University, Duke, Georgetown, the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, Rice, VCU and Vanderbilt are just a few of the institutions participating in the program.

Before a W&M faculty member goes to another institution and asks for borrowing privileges, it is necessary to obtain a Reciprocal Borrowing Program borrower's card. These are available from the interlibrary loan office in Swem, Monday through Friday from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.

When issuing a card, the interlibrary loan staff will check the policy statements of the libraries the faculty member is planning to visit. These statements will list loan periods, renewal privileges and any restrictions established by the other libraries, for loans made through this program.

It is necessary to obtain one of these cards before visiting another library and asking for borrowing privileges. If a book is lost or overdue, the faculty member who borrowed the item is responsible for any fines or charges.

For more information on this program call John Lawrence at ext. 13071.

"Take A Hike" Challenge Extended To M-W-F

Notes From Neighbors

Arts And Crafts Fair

The Williamsburg Homespun Arts and Crafts Fair will be held from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the Williamsburg Crossing Shopping Center on Saturday, May 8. Proceeds will benefit AVALON: A Center for Women and Children.

For information, call Kathleen at 258-5022.

Williamsburg Symphonia

The Williamsburg Symphonia will present a "kaleidoscope" of varying musical colors and images when it performs in the Wren Yard at 4 p.m., Saturday, May 8.

The concert, sponsored by the Williamsburg Arts Commission, is free and open to the public. In the event of rain the concert will be moved to the Campus Center.

Thomas Wilkins will be guest conductor, and will repeat a program originally presented in a children's concert in March. The concert, titled "The Winning Combination," features seven composers working with the same instruments achieving very different musical results.

Celebrating Jamestown's 386th

On the weekend of May 15-16, celebrations will be held in the Historic Triangle, at Jamestown and Jamestown Settlement. Both will celebrate the founding of Jamestown, America's first permanent English settlement, 386 years ago.

"Jamestown Landing Day," from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., Saturday, May 15, at Jamestown Settlement will have a maritime theme in recognition of the importance of the ocean and coastal waterways as a means of transportation and a source of food.

Demonstrations will be presented aboard the Susan Constant, a replica of the largest of the three ships that landed at Jamestown on May 13, 1607. A replica of the second-largest ship, the Godspeed, will sail within sight of the shore from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Visitors can also see the Discovery at the museum pier.

For more information call 253-4838.

17th-Century Encampment

Colonial National Historical Park will hold a recreated 17th-century encampment by the St. Maries Cittie Militia, Saturday, May 15. Tactical demonstrations will be presented at 11 a.m., 1 p.m. and 3:30 p.m.

Marley Brown, archaeologist from the Colonial Williamsburg Foundation, and Dennis Blanton, archaeologist from the College, will give a lecture at 2 p.m. They will focus on the Jamestown Archaeological Assessment, a five-year research project that is currently underway.

Sunday's activities will include a recreated 17th-century encampments by the St. Maries' Cittie Militia and the Company of James Fort.

A wreath-laying ceremony will honor the early settlers, and a patriotic band concert will be held at 3 p.m. In recognition of the 300th anniversary of the College, a wreath will be placed on the grave of James Blair, the College's first president, who is buried near the memorial church at Jamestown.

Throughout the weekend, the visitor center, museum and orientation film will be available and Ranger-guided tours will be offered of the historic area.

For details call 229-1733.

Fourth Biennial Conference On Community Research And Action

Mary over other applicants to host this conference, cited the strong commitment to including front-line preventionists in the conference—part of the stated purpose of the Society of Community Research and Action that has never before been realized.

A second reason the conference is notable is that its content represents some of the most important issues facing us as a society today. The Fourth Biennial Conference on Community Research and Action will bring together people from across the United States and abroad to present their best work and exchange ideas on how to put research into action. For example, Ricardo Munoz (University of California) will present emerging technologies on the prevention of depression. Rick Price (Institute of Social Research, University of Michigan) will summarize years of research on the prevention of mental illness associated with the loss of jobs and other invited participants will address the prevention of social ills such as violence, substance abuse, AIDS and adolescent pregnancy.

The conference will be held on campus, June 16-19. It begins with an international session with representatives from as far away as Hong Kong, India, Portugal, Japan, Germany and New Zealand—all presenting their perspectives on topics ranging from overcoming oppression to health promotion in Australia. There will be three invited addresses.

A special feature of the conference will be three opportunities to receive training in state-of-the-art prevention interventions. When participants take this knowledge back and apply it in their communities, they will be helping the College realize its goal of transforming research findings into applied programs. In addition to the training and invited addresses, there will also be concurrent sessions offering a veritable cornucopia of symposia, roundtable discussions, and workshops. It is exciting to see that in the midst of celebrating its 300th birthday, the College is not only paying homage to the past, but also reaffirming its mission to be a public institution committed to public service.

So what is the prevention perspective and why is it important? The prevention perspective is that rather than passively accept the onset of problems as inevitable, psychologists would better use their talents proactively to prevent mental illness, violence and substance abuse and to promote mental health. In many areas of their lives, people have already accepted the concept of prevention. They'd rather floss their teeth than pay for root canals. They'd rather inoculate their children than be impressed with how well we can treat polio. In some domains the public has taken the lead in shifting the profession's focus from treatment to prevention.

A compelling example of the public leading the way is Mothers Against Drunk Driving. This grassroots organization has forced public attention and governmental action on the prevention of drunk driving. MADD recognizes that the solution to a social problem is not just to try to reform each offender, one by one. Instead this organization focused on changing community norms, changing public policy and the enforcement of laws and educating individuals before they became offenders. Without knowing they were preventionists, they used many of the same principles that guide preventionists in mental health.

As President Clinton is discovering, marketing prevention can be more difficult in mental health than in physical health and vehicular safety. One of the goals of the conference is to demonstrate that the principles of prevention that work in other domains are applicable to the prevention of mental conditions and emotional problems. Winston Churchill once said, "People will generally do the right thing, but only after they've exhausted all other possibilities." Our society has just about exhausted all other possibilities.

As a society we can no longer afford a pound of cure. Virginia spent 100 million dollars on new jails. It costs more to keep a person in the pen than in Penn State. Substance exposed and addicted babies can run a tab of $1,000 a day at the Medical College of Virginia. The cost of children having children has been estimated to be over $15,000 per baby. In 1986-87 the cost to the Commonwealth of not effectively preventing adolescent pregnancy was $200 million. In 1990-92 that cost skyrocketed to $300 million! None of these economic costs begins to address the human costs at the individual, family and societal levels. If an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure, what would a pound of prevention be worth?

In Virginia and across the country, we have a common stake in preventing these damaging outcomes. To paraphrase Lizbeth Schorr, we all pay to support the unproductive and incarcerate the violent. We all live with fear because crime and violence will no longer stay neatly in the ghettos. We all lose when waiting lists at treatment centers are so long that addicted people are denied the opportunity to get treatment when they most need it. Perhaps most importantly, we can no longer afford to ignore problems like alcohol and drug abuse, teenage pregnancy, teenage suicide, crime and delinquency and school dropout, which are emotionally damaging and even killing our next generation.

By bringing together researchers and practitioners to collaboratively address these important social issues, the Fourth Biennial Conference on Research and Action is taking an innovative step to create a science of psychology that is truly in the public interest. Its greatest successes might well be invisible; the teen who does not develop a drug problem, the laid-off worker who does not become depressed or the disadvantaged young man who does not resort to violence. Prevention is not only possible, it may be the best contribution mental health professionals can make to our society.
