General Assembly Restores Money To 1994-96 College Budget

Changes made by two budget committees in the General Assembly over the weekend would restore a portion of the funds cut in the original proposal made by former Gov. L. Douglas Wilder.

There are differences between the House and Senate proposals, but both restore much of the money eliminated in Wilder's original plan.

"We have come a long way in a relatively short period of time, and we will continue to work with the legislature as its members conclude their activities," said President Timothy J. Sullivan.

According to Samuel Jones, vice president for planning and budget, among the major features of the current proposals are:

- Restoring funds for research centers. Wilder's budget removed all general fund support for research, public service and Commonwealth Centers.

The House version restores 90 percent of the funding for research and public service centers, but takes no action on the Commonwealth Centers. The Senate version restores 100 percent of requested funding for the Commonwealth Centers and the Bureau of Business Research, but takes no action on other research centers.

- Altering the "tuition transfer tax" found in Wilder's proposal. The tuition transfer tax resulted when the original budget removed general fund support from the College, while imposing a corresponding tuition increase for William and Mary students. In essence, the College was being told to raise money through tuition to offset College money sent to other schools.

Wilder's budget also included specific tuition policies for the state's law schools.

The House proposal deals with the tuition transfer tax through a combination of support for initiatives like global studies and applied science, and restoring general funds previously replaced by tuition revenue.

The Senate proposal follows a similar approach with a combination of initiative support for curriculum revision and campus networking and general fund restoration.

- Changing Wilder's tuition caps. The Wilder plan capped in-state tuition at 5 percent and non-state tuition at 8 percent. Law tuition was capped at 10 percent in-state and 18 percent non-state.

The House accepted Gov. George Allen's amendment capping in-state tuition at 3 percent and non-state tuition at 6 percent. The Senate proposal also accepts Allen's amendment for capping in-state tuition at 3 percent, but recommends a non-state tuition of 7.5 percent.

Specific tuition limits for law school tuition are now eliminated.

College To Observe St. David's Day

A modest program to honor St. David, the patron saint of Wales, will be held Tuesday, March 1 at 11 a.m. in the Friends Room on the ground floor of Swem Library.

John Conlee, professor of English, will discuss "The Cathedral Town of St. David's," and Stephen Furey-Moore will play selections on the Celtic harp.

The public is invited to attend. For more information, call Bob Jeffrey at ext. 14084.

Chancellor Thatcher Thanks President And College For "Memorable" Charter Day

Following is the text of a Feb. 6 letter sent to President Sullivan from Chancellor Margaret Thatcher:

Dear President Sullivan:

May I thank you and Mrs. Sullivan, and all members of the College of William and Mary, for a memorable occasion in Williamsburg yesterday which I shall treasure forever. I am deeply grateful for the honour the College of William and Mary has bestowed upon me and I am mindful of the previous recipients of this great office. I am looking forward to the challenge of carrying out my duties as your Chancellor and getting to know more about campus life through the fine students who attend the College of William and Mary.

The investiture ceremony was deeply impressive and very enjoyable; I find that the beliefs that the College of William and Mary were founded upon are very much alive today and I only wish I could have stayed longer. I am grateful too for the extensive arrangements made for my visit which were excellent in every way.

I look forward to returning to the College soon and in the meantime would ask you to convey my sincere appreciation to everyone who helped make my investiture day truly outstanding.

All good wishes,
Yours sincerely,

New Dutch Ambassador To Visit College

Ambassador Adriaan Jacobovits de Szeged, the new Netherlands Ambassador to the United States, will visit the College Tuesday, March 1, and deliver a lecture that is open to members of the College community and the public.

President Sullivan invited Jacobovits to make his first trip to campus.

The ambassador's lecture, "Partnership For Peace—Which Partners? What Peace?" will take place at 4:30 p.m. in Tidewater B of the University Center. A reception will follow.

William and Mary's Thomas Jefferson Program in Public Policy is organizing the event.

Earlier in the day, Jacobovits will tour the College and Colonial Williamsburg and meet with Sullivan.

Jacobovits, 59, is considered to be exceptionally well-versed on European and Atlantic security policies, and issues of global instability, particularly in Russia and Eastern Europe. Prior to arriving in Washington last year, he was the Netherlands Ambassador to NATO.

He has also served as the Netherlands representative to the United Nations, and as director-general for political affairs in the Ministry of Foreign Affairs at The Hague.

Jacobovits received his law degree from the University of Leiden in the Netherlands.

Lecture Will Examine History Of Racial Exploitation In U.S.

The Commonwealth Center for the Study of American Culture and the Department of English are co-sponsoring a talk by Louise Meriwether, freelance writer, titled "Fragments of the Ark" today at 5 p.m. in Tidewater B of the University Center.

Author of Daddy Was a Number Runner (Feminist Press, 1986), Meriwether explores the troubled history of racial exploitation by exploring the lives of African-American ancestors.

In 1862, Peter Mango—based on real-life Robert Smalls—was a slave in Charleston, S.C. A skilled river pilot, he confiscated a Confederate gunboat, loaded it with family and friends and steamed it past the guns of Fort Sumter, delivering it intact to the Union forces. Granted an audience with the President, Mango explained why he risked all for freedom: "I was born a slave, suh, but always felt that I was a man." Mango serves with distinction as a pilot in the Union navy and retired after the war to an uncertain future in a divided South.

Meanings Of Mortality In The Minds Of Southerners Topic Of Lecture

Charles R. Wilson of the department of history and the Center for the Study of Southern Culture at the University of Mississippi will give a talk titled "The Southern Way of Death" on Thursday, March 3 at 5 p.m. in the Botetourt Theatre of Swem Library.

This seminar will focus on the cultural distinctiveness of the American South and the varying meanings of mortality in the minds of Southerners. Looking at the years 1865 to 1940, Wilson will examine how Southerners came to champion a Southern obsession with mortality, different from the "modern, middle-class approach" to the crisis of death prevalent in the Northeast at that time. Using regional factors such as the death rate, role of violence, rural life, folk culture, the Civil War and religion, Wilson will discuss the social context that nurtured particular attitudes and death customs in the South.

The Commonwealth Center for the Study of American Culture and the American Studies Program are co-hosting Wilson's lecture.

Meeting To Commemorate Landmark Supreme Court Decision On School Integration

Institute Of Bill Of Rights Law To Co-Sponsor Conference On 'Brown v. Board Of Education'

"Brown v. Board of Education After 40 Years: Confronting the Promise" is the theme for a national conference examining the past and future of racial issues in the United States.

The conference will be held May 17-18, in Williamsburg. The College of William and Mary's Institute of Bill of Rights Law and the Howard University Law School are planning the event.

In its historic decision, the U.S. Supreme Court struck down the practice of "separate but equal" racial segregation in public education. As a result, Brown v. Board of Education became a symbol of the emerging civil rights movement.

Hailed as a victory by civil rights leaders, the decision culminated a 20-year effort by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People to use the courts to attack segregated education.

To mark the 40th anniversary of the case, the Institute of Bill of Rights Law and the Howard University Law School plan "a focused and thoughtful forum for discussion of the serious issues involving public education, civil rights, race and ethnicity that face the nation today, and that are likely to become only more intense and difficult in the future," said Rodney Smolla, Institute director.

Independent Schools Employment Fair

The University of Virginia invites students interested in pursuing teaching and coaching positions in independent schools to attend the Independent Schools Employment Fair on Friday, March 4 from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. in the ballroom of Newcomb Hall. Interested students can obtain more information on the Independent Schools Employment Fair in the Announcements Notebook and in the "Teaching Opportunities for Arts and Sciences Graduates" notebook, both of which are located in the Career Services Library, Blow Hall 124.

A series of plenary sessions are being planned, with an emphasis on formats that contain a high degree of spontaneity, interaction, debate and discussion among participants, said Smolla. Debates, town meetings, moot courts and panel discussions will be used to present a diversity of views.

The Institute of Bill of Rights Law was founded in 1982 at the Marshall-Wythe School of Law. Its goal is to support research and education on the U.S. Constitution and Bill of Rights.

For registration information, contact the Institute at ext. 13810.

William and Mary Named Beneficiary Of $1 Million Life Insurance Policy

Mr. and Mrs. Henry A. Shook of Virginia Beach, both graduates of William and Mary, have made the College the beneficiary of a $1 million life insurance policy. The gift will provide future support to the College's athletic department, library and business school.

"We are happy that we could do this for our alma mater, said Mr. Shook. "We wanted to do something for the College that did so much for us."

"The Shooks have been loyal friends of the College for many years. This gift will provide lasting support to future generations," according to President Timothy J. Sullivan.

One-half of the eventual proceeds will be designated for endowments in the College's Earl Gregg Swem Library and the School of Business. Income from these endowments will be used for the most pressing needs of the library and for faculty support in the business school. The balance will be used to establish scholarships in football and women's tennis.

Henry A. Shook graduated from William and Mary in 1947 with a bachelor of arts degree in economics. As a student, he was a member of the Botetourt Biological Society, Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity and the varsity football team.

Shook is retired as president of Amy-Shu Properties Inc., but is still an active general partner of this family-owned real estate sales, development and management company in Virginia Beach. Prior to that, he was a major stockholder and senior vice president of S.L. Nusbaum Realty Co., a real estate sales and management company in Norfolk. While there, he founded the shopping center division that today has become one of the largest shopping center development and leasing firms in the Southeast.

Phyllis "Shu" Shook graduated in 1948 from William and Mary with a bachelor of science degree in home economics. She was a member of the Alpha Chi Omega sorority, YWCA, German Club, Spanish Club, Home Economics Club, Girl's Chorus and the Singers, and was a sorority intramural representative.

Mr. and Mrs. Shook have been active alumni and have supported the College through the School of Business, the William and Mary Annual Fund and the William and Mary Athletic Educational Foundation (WMAEF).

Mr. Shook was a member of the National Campaign Steering Committee for the Campaign for the Fourth Century, and is a member of the Order of the White Jacket and the Football Lettermen's Club.

Mrs. Shook was a member of the Tennis Steering Committee and co-chair of the reunion committee for the class of 1948. They have both served on the WMAEF Board of Trustees and are lifetime members of the President's Council.

Auction Raises $10,000 For Public Service

More than 200 law students gathered in the Campus Center ballroom Feb. 11 for the seventh annual Dinner Date Auction sponsored by the Marshall-Wythe Public Service Fund.

The Public Service Fund raised just short of $10,000 to fund stipends for law students working in low-paying or non-paying public service jobs during the summer of 1994.

Bidding was energetic for such "dinner dates" as a James River waterskiing expedition with Associate Dean Rick Overy; golf and lunch at Kingsmill with Associate Deans Faye Shealy and Connie Galloway; President Tim Sullivan offered a lunch for seven at the President's House.

Revenue generated from the event will enable at three students to take summer jobs working with underrepresented clients—jobs that they otherwise could not have afforded to take.

Noted Criminal Defense Attorney Tells Law Students To Keep The Faith

Lawyers rank one step below journalists in terms of their bad image with the public. Roy E. Black, the Miami attorney who successfully defended William Kennedy Smith against a rape charge in 1991, thinks educating the public about the greatness of the American system of adversarial justice may be the key to improving lawyers' reputation.

During a one-hour pep talk/question-and-answer session Friday, which at times seemed like a jurisprudential revival, Black recalled his experiences over the last 23 years as an attorney, including five years as a public defender. He offered several inspirational points to the audience of about 20 aspiring attorneys.

"Enforcing rights is the greatest commitment you can ever undertake," he said. "It is the highest duty. Don't let anyone undercut you."

Being a good defense lawyer, Black said, hinges on a recognition of the "panoply of options" available. Recalling that he stayed up for three nights straight during the last days of the William Kennedy Smith trial, Black said a willingness to put in long hours, even if 95 percent of the preparation is not used, is the key to success in the courtroom.

He added that he has not yet used anything he learned in law school. "But [in law school] I learned the tools of how to learn," he said.

As for remedying the poor reputation lawyers have in the eyes of the public, Black thinks lawyers will always be unpopular, but they must nevertheless strive to change the popular misconception that lawyers go into court "to hide or twist the truth." He added that lawyers must educate the public about the importance of lawyers as advocates and defenders of individual rights.

Black said people often forget the gross abuses of individual rights that have occurred in countries, such as Romania and the former Soviet Union, without lawyers committed to challenging government tyranny and oppression. Rights become "meaningless," he told his audience, without an independent bar and judiciary consisting of people committed to enforcing rights.

Pointing to mandatory drug testing and police searches of student lockers for narcotics as current examples of government infringement on individual rights, Black said there must be an effort "to stop government from doing these things."

In addition to his defense of Smith, Black also defended William Lozano, a Miami police officer charged with manslaughter in the deaths of two black men on a motorcycle that touched several days of riots in the Florida city. After 10 appeals and five changes of venue, Black got Lozano's conviction overturned last month.

"I'm proud to go to court to represent someone, even if they are unpopular," Black said. "There is no greater feeling than going to court knowing you're doing something right."

He added that he wished he could defend Tonya Harding should she be charged with a crime.

Black was in Williamsburg Friday to deliver the keynote address at the Virginia Bar Association's annual criminal law conference.

College Senior Wins First Zamora Award

On Thursday, Feb. 17, senior Liping Lo, an East Asian studies major with a minor in anthropology, received the first Mario D. Zamora Award of $300.

The award honors a student whose contributions to international understanding exemplify the ideals of the late Mario D. Zamora, professor of anthropology, who died of cancer on Aug. 12, 1993. Zamora was known as a leading proponent of education to promote international understanding.

Lo, the 21-year-old daughter of Ming-an Lo and Pao-Yueh Lo of Oakton, Va, accepted the award from President Timothy J. Sullivan in a ceremony that was part of the first Mario D. Zamora Memorial Lecture.

"I'm very honored to have something in his (Zamora's) name," said Lo, who took a course in cultural anthropology from Zamora. "He was one of the most caring, understanding, enthusiastic faculty members I've ever met, and my inspiration too."

Lo said she will use the award money to offset expenses when she travels to China next year to continue her own studies, and to teach English to Chinese students. She plans to pursue a master's degree in modern Chinese literature.

The lecture at the Zamora award ceremony was presented by Pavao Rudan, who serves as director for anthropological research at the University of Zagreb, senior vice president of the International Union of Anthropological and Ethnological Sciences (IUAES) and president of the IUAES Commission on Medical Anthropology and Epidemiology. His lecture, "Historical Processes, Geographic Maps, and Population Structure of Croatia—Current Problems from an Anthropologist's Point of View," addressed the crisis in the former Yugoslavia.

Following his lecture, Rudan received the Benigno Aquino Award, created by Zamora. Rudan was honored for his numerous contributions to international research in biological anthropology.

Prior to his death, Zamora was elected president of IUAES in Mexico and had just succeeded in persuading the anthropology union to hold its 1998 world congress in Williamsburg. Zamora told longtime friend Nathan Altschuler, professor of anthropology emeritus, who founded the department of anthropology on campus, that it was his gift to the College.

"The Mario D. Zamora Award will be the College's own gift in Zamora's memory," Altschuler said.

Concentration Week Runs Through March 3

Concentration Week 1994 began on Monday, Feb. 21, at 4 p.m. with an opening session in the University Center.

Randy Coleman, director of academic advising, discussed with students the procedures and policies to follow as they declare their concentrations. Mary Meade Saunders, associate director of career services, reviewed the resources available to assist them as they make their decisions.

Between now and March 3, each department and school will offer a one-hour forum or office hours devoted to informing students about concentrations in specific areas and to answer students' questions.

Students with 39 or more credit hours must turn in their declaration of concentration forms to the Academic Advising Office (not the Registrar) no later than 4:30 p.m. on March 18 in order for that concentration to be a part of their record for the fall 1994 pre-registration.

During Concentration Week, Feb. 21-March 3, the following departments will offer office hours to answer student questions about concentrations:

American Studies, Feb. 23-24 and March 1-3, 10, noon, College Apartments.

Interdisciplinary Studies, Feb. 23-24 and March 1-3, call Joel Schwartz, ext. 12460, to schedule an appointment, Charles Center, Tucker basement.

News From The Virginia Institute Of Marine Science

VIMS Expanding Main Campus

Construction of a 60,000-square-foot marine chemistry and toxicology building adjacent to Watermen's Hall, the main facility at the Virginia Institute of Marine Science, is scheduled to begin this summer.

The $8.5 million structure will have three stories and be 20,000 square feet larger than Watermen's Hall. Plans call for the eventual creation of a pedestrian plaza adjacent to the facility.

The addition to the VIMS campus should allow faculty and graduate students to utilize top-flight research equipment.

VIMS Research Of World's Oldest Lake May Yield Ideas For The Chesapeake Bay

Mark R. Patterson, associate professor of biological sciences at SMS/VIMS, led a 10-person team from the College and University of California last summer to Lake Baikal in Siberia, the largest, oldest and deepest lake in the world.

During the five-week joint expedition with the Soviet Academy of Sciences, Patterson's team measured filtration and photosynthetic activity of freshwater sponges in the lake using sophisticated instruments that were deployed by scuba divers on the lake bottom. The goal of the expedition was to determine how these sponges affected the lake's ecology.

Possessing 20 percent of the planet's unfrozen freshwater—more than all the Great Lakes combined—Lake Baikal is distinctive for its age, 25 million years; its depth, 5,433 feet; and particularly its unusually high number of sponges. It is also home to the world's only freshwater seal.

Graduate student Adele J. Pile determined that the sponges are extremely efficient in cleaning the water by capturing large quantities of very small particles, such as bacteria and blue-green algae. The lake's sponges, the researchers' findings determined, remove 55 to 90 percent of the particles from the water that they filter.

Because of their high filtration capacity, Lake Baikal's prolific sponges are an intricate component of its food chain. Snails and aquatic insects graze on their surface, while crustaceans called amphipods, typically live in the sponges' interior, feeding off their tissues.

Adverse conditions, including very cold water and food poisoning, faced the VIMS researchers throughout the expedition. Because of the lack of adequate food in the lake's region, Patterson and Pile often added fish that they caught and berries that they collected to their scant diet.

The expedition's divers also worked with cumbersome underwater gear, usually in water 70 feet deep or less. With remote measuring equipment provided by the expedition's sponsor, the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, the team sometimes explored depths up to 700 feet.

Findings from Patterson's study should be helpful in better managing Lake Baikal's fragile and pristine ecosystem as well as similar lake ecosystems worldwide.

The study also provides insights into the ecology of the Chesapeake Bay where oysters were abundant. Oysters filter-feed, much like Baikal's sponges. Today's low oyster population could provide one explanation for the current abundance of plankton and algae in the Bay.

Advisory Committee Seeks Suggestions For Honorary Degree Recipients

The Honorary Degrees Advisory Committee invites all members of the faculty, administration and staff to suggest names of possible honorary degree recipients for upcoming Charter Days and Commencements.

The Committee is especially interested in recognizing Virginians, alumni, women, minorities, scholars (particularly Southern scholars), Southern writers and university administrators who have a specific tie to the College.

When considering candidates for honorary degrees, the Board of Visitors bears in mind the following guidelines. Since the Committee is especially interested in imaginative nominations, no name should be withheld simply because an otherwise deserving candidate does not precisely fit every guideline:

- Candidates are considered without regard to sex, race, color, age, religion, national origin, sexual orientation or disability.
- Honorary degree recipients must be of sufficient eminence and character to honor the College.
- Candidates should have qualities and records of achievements that make it particularly appropriate for William and Mary to recognize them.
- Ideally, but not invariably, something about them should make it especially fitting that this honor should come from William and Mary.

- Finally, candidates should not include benefactors or prospective benefactors of the College unless they clearly meet the other criteria and are evaluated on those criteria only. In awarding honorary degrees, the College should give no suggestion that it is recognizing past or prospective financial contributions.

In addition to these guidelines, the Committee has recently sought nominations of:

- Persons who unquestionably deserve honorary degrees but who have somehow been overlooked.
- Younger persons of great promise who have only recently arrived at the point where an honorary degree is appropriate.
- Persons who would deliver a stimulating address at Commencement or Charter Day.

It is helpful for nominations to be accompanied by a brief memo explaining why the nominee is well-suited for an honorary degree.

Nominations may be submitted at any time. However, the Committee will be meeting in mid-March and submission of names prior to that time is encouraged.

Please submit nominations to the chair of the Committee, Nancy H. Marshall, Swem Library.

World War II Exhibit At Swem Library

Swem Library has opened a small exhibit, "World War II at William and Mary," which includes photographs and memorabilia from the University Archives dealing with life at the College during the war.

The exhibit focuses on the Naval Chaplains School and the 3321st Army Specialized Training Unit, two unique institutions during the war years.

John Coombs, a history graduate student and an apprentice in the archives and manuscripts collections apprenticeship program, prepared the memorabilia.

"World War II at William and Mary" is open 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday and 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. on Saturdays, through March 15, in the Botetourt Gallery on the ground floor of the library.

Swem Library Seals Time Capsule Commemorating Tercentenary

Swem Library personnel sealed a time capsule Feb. 4 containing commemorative items associated with the College's Tercentenary celebration and the administration of the library. The locked box is located in the Friends meeting room and will be opened in 2093. Among the items placed in the capsule include catalog cards, a reel of microfilm, a copy of the "Guide to Special Collections" and plans for the library's expansion.

Searching For Information At Swem Library Via E-Mail

Swem Library offers users the options of asking for certain kinds of information by electronic mail (e-mail). Both the reference and government documents departments can respond to e-mail queries sent to their respective e-mail boxes. Their addresses are: Government Documents: libdoc@mail.wm.edu; Reference: libref@mail.wm.edu.

The types of questions that can be asked of the government documents department include: "What is the population of Williamsburg?" or "What is the call number for the defense department study known as The Pentagon Papers?" Broader questions may also be asked such as what sources of information the department has on municipal waste management in Virginia.

Queries posed to the reference department must be phrased in a manner that can be answered concisely. Such questions could include the address of the American Automobile Association, ascertaining whether the library has any historical atlases of the Middle East or a journal called American Artist.

The reference department can answer questions about the holdings of the library by providing one or two sample titles, or by suggesting relevant subject headings to search in LION. Librarians may ask questioners to come in if the answer is long and involved.

Replies to queries are usually sent within 24 hours during the week. Questions received Friday-Sunday will be answered on Monday.

Enhancing Teaching And Learning With Technology Topic Of Teleconference

Technology Services and Franklin Robeson, vice provost for information technology, will host an interactive satellite teleconference titled "Classroom Design with Technology in Mind" tomorrow from 1 to 3 p.m. in the Dodge Room of Phi Beta Kappa Memorial Hall.

At an increasing number of educational institutions, technology is finding its way into the classroom and transforming the experience of teaching and learning. A panel of experts will demonstrate new technology and discuss the art of creating classrooms that match technological form with pedagogical function. The speakers include faculty and administrators from across the country who actively use technology to enhance teaching, learning and administration.

Attendees will learn how different classroom configurations not only facilitate different kinds of classroom interaction, but also create new opportunities for teaching and learning.

Admission is free and no reservations are required. Call Loretta Early at ext. 13002 for more information.

Student Speaker Sought For 1994 Commencement

The Commencement Committee is seeking applications for its competition to select the student speaker for Commencement 1994.

The person chosen will represent all graduates at commencement by delivering an address on a topic of his or her choosing. The only stipulation is that the topic must be of institutional interest. Any person, graduate or undergraduate, receiving a degree in May is eligible to apply.

By Monday, March 21, applicants must submit to the Vice President for Student Affairs Office: (1) a two-page personal statement describing why the candidate wishes to be the commencement speaker and any other information pertinent to the student's candidacy for this honor; (2) a five-page sample of creative writing (the subject should not be the one on which the applicant intends to speak); and (3) at least one recommendation from a faculty member.

By April 1, three to five finalists will be selected and asked to deliver draft versions of the speech they plan to give at commencement if chosen as the speaker. The selected speaker will be announced on April 15 and a member of the faculty will be available to assist the speaker with final development and preparation of the speech. For more details and guidelines, call the student affairs office at ext. 11236.

Administration And Finance Seeks Letters From Xerox Corporation

At least two College offices recently received a letter from Xerox Corporation about a class action lawsuit against Xerox. The letters contained a chart, which was filled out differently for each letter. The Office of Administration and Finance is trying to ascertain whether any other College offices have received the same letter. It is possible that the College may get a settlement out of this lawsuit, and the matter has been referred to the Office of the Attorney General. If there are any other letters, the Office of Administration and Finance needs to check the information and get it to the Attorney General's office. Anyone who has received such a letter, or wants more information about this lawsuit, should contact Nancy Nash at ext. 12743 or J. Charles Humphries at ext. 13593.

Departments & Schools

Biology

Professor C. Richard Terman and T.S. Boyer recently had a scientific paper published in the Journal of Mammalogy, 74: 813-18 (1993). The paper compared the reproductive inhibition in female white-footed mice from Michigan and Virginia.

Classical Studies

J. Ward Jones, Chancellor Professor of Classical Studies, had an article titled "A Latin Munusculum Among the Papers of Francis Nicholson" published in the Nov. 1993 edition of the Bodleian Library Record (Oxford). The piece examines and translates a Latin oration written by John Shelton, a student who attended William and Mary in its early days. According to Jones, no scholarly work focusing on the College has ever examined the composition, which, along with a short Latin quirent poem, is the only surviving remnant of the work of the Latin classroom at the early College.

Computer Center

Judith Ewart, systems analyst, is serving as the 1993-94 chair of the national SCT Human Resource System (HRS) Advisory Committee. With representation from five colleges, the committee serves as the liaison among the higher education customers of the SCT HRS computer software system, the SCT HRS product manager and the SCT HRS system development team. The advisory committee represents the College's best opportunity to influence the future direction of the HRS system and to benefit from the information gained by the close partnership with the SCT HRS development team.

Economics

Government

Professor Roger W. Smith's review essay on Simon Wisenthal's Justice Not Vengeance appears in the current issue of Holocaust and Genocide Studies.

Slevin also has had a paper accepted for publication in Research in Higher Education titled "The Importance of Gender in the Assessment of Historical Knowledge," co-authored with former graduate student Robert S. Gossweiler. She is currently working on a study of African-American professional women in retirement and, along with colleagues C. Ray

Oakley/Sinos Book Uses Vases To Reconstruct Stages Of Ancient Greek Wedding Ceremony

THE WEDDING

IN ANCIENT ATHENS

John H. Oakley and Rebecca H. Sinos

John H. Oakley, Chancellor Professor of Classical Studies, recently co-authored a book titled The Wedding In Ancient Athens with Rebecca H. Sinos, a 1976 William and Mary graduate. This is the first book to reconstruct the stages of the ancient Greek wedding ceremony using vase paintings from the sixth through fourth centuries B.C.

In order to explain the entire ceremony, from the preparations for the wedding to the rituals performed on the day after the wedding night, the authors incorporated numerous illustrations of Athenian vases in their analysis, supplementing evidence drawn from contemporary Greek literature. The weddings rendered on the vases evolve through time, from formal scenes of the wedding procession on black-figure vases to later red-figure scenes offering more intimate views of the bride as she prepares for adornments. In these later scenes, Greek women appear as more than just passive objects of men's manipulations; they possess their own powerful and divinely sanctioned means of seduction, according to the authors.

Some of the scenes depicted on the vases are important because they are not clearly portrayed in literature, thus supplying a better understanding of each stage of the ceremony. Vases also offer insight into Athenian attitudes toward the wedding, suggesting a perspective different from that provided by Greek literature, the authors said. The book includes scenes that represent real life, scenes that are clearly mythological, and also some tableaux that blur the distinction between mortals and gods or heroes, suggesting the idealized state in which mortals appeared when engaged in rituals with divine prototypes.

Wingrove at the University of Richmond and graduate student Theresa M. Johnson, will read the first paper from this project at the Southern Sociological Society meetings in April.

School of Education

Roger A. Baldwin, associate professor and director of the higher education program, co-wrote an article for Research in Higher Education, Vol. 34, No. 6, 1993, titled "Destination Unknown: An Exploratory Study of Full-time Faculty of the Tenure Track."

S. Stuart Flanagan, professor and mathematics educator, will present a paper this week titled "Making Connections with LPT Mathematics" at the National Council of Teachers of Mathematics Southern Regional Conference.

Flanagan was recently appointed to the Literacy Passport Test Mathematics Task Force for the State of Virginia. The task force will review the content and format of the current mathematics test and consider whether the test requires revision.

Marshall-Wythe School of Law

Raj Bhala, assistant professor, has signed a contract with Carolina Academic Press for a book titled Foreign Bank Regulation: Principles, Policies, and Perspectives in the Aftermath of the BCCI Affair. The book will be published by the end of the year. The recently published Global Risk-Based Capital Regulations (Irwin, 1993) contains his chapter titled "Commercial Banks, Risk-Based Capital and Mortgage-backed Securities Transactions." Blaha has been appointed to the advisory board of The Financier, an international interdisciplinary finance journal.

Professor Neal Devins's article, "Political Will and the Unitary Executive: What Makes an Independent Agency Independent?" recently appeared in the Cardozo Law Review. In it, Devins discusses the difficult question of executive control over litigation. He looks to his own involvement as a consultant to the U.S. Postal Service in its clash with the president's staff and to a number of other questions as well.

John Donaldson, Ball Professor of Law, recently made a presentation on "Hearsay Evidence" to the National College of Probate Judges.

Davison Douglas, assistant professor, wrote an article titled "The Rhetoric of Moderation: Desegregating the South during the Decade after Brown," which is scheduled for publication in the Northwestern University Law Review. The article will appear in modified form as a chapter in a forthcoming book on the civil rights movement in the upper South (University of Georgia Press).

Douglas was featured in an article, "Leaders of the Pack," in the Nov. 15 issue of The National Jurist.

The Dec. 30 edition of The Washington Post reported that Professor Trotter Hardy had organized two academic conferences entirely on the Internet. According to the newspaper, for each conference Hardy chose a topic—one was the impact of electronic mail on teaching law—and invited as many as 25 people to participate. After they exchanged electronic messages for three weeks, Hardy compiled and sent out a transcript, entirely on the Internet. Such conferences are useful for professors who need to save time or travel money.

Hardy's essay, "Using the Internet for an Electronic Conference," was recently published in the Law Technology Journal.

Rodney Smolla, Arthur Hanson Professor of Law, recently had a paper published in the University of Chicago Legal Forum, titled "Report of the Coalition for a New America: Platform Section on Communications Policy"—a "fictional futuristic 'thought experiment.'" In an article in U.S. News and World Report (Dec. 6), dealing with "the odious question of the digital age ... whether the first amendment should give broad free-speech protection to communications," the magazine quotes Smolla several times. He discusses the difficult questions involving the teaching and sheltering of children, versus traditional pure free-speech values.

Richard Williamson, Chancellor Professor of Law, has a recent article appearing in the Illinois Law Review adapted for the Search and Seizure Law Report.

Christopher Wren Association

Wayne Kernodle, professor emeritus of sociology, and Ruth Kernodle, co-founders of the Christopher Wren Association, presented a paper on "The New Frontier in Education: Lifelong Learning for the Retirement Years" to the workshop on Innovative Programs that Work in Virginia at the annual meeting of the Virginia Association on Aging held last month at the Omni Hotel in Newport News.

Alcohol and Drug Abuse Prevention Conference To Be Held Saturday

On Saturday, Feb. 26, Project Taproot at the College will host the Tidewater Regional YADAPP (Youth Alcohol and Drug Abuse Prevention Project) Conference. Project Taproot is the new program in Agency Counseling in the School of Education, specializing in training students in the areas of substance abuse counseling and prevention. The Department of Education and the Department of Motor Vehicles are co-sponsoring the conference.

To date 235 high school students and their sponsors from 33 schools in the Tidewater region are registered. The conference is designed to train youth leaders to go back to their schools to target problem areas and plan for solutions in the areas of alcohol and other drug abuse prevention. Informational sessions will include brainstorming, team building and networking opportunities. Action-oriented workshops will provide further opportunities for team building and leadership training.

State Returns Funding To Research Centers

- Altering a proposal to withhold 1.5 percent of the College's budget in each year pending State Council of Higher Education for Virginia (SCHEV) approval of a restructuring plan.

The House requires restructuring, but would not withhold any funds. The Senate recommends withholding 1.5 percent in the second year of the biennium pending approval by the Secretary of Education and SCHEV.

A new feature in the House and Senate plans calls for increased decentralization. The House suggests using four unidentified institutions to serve as pilot projects for decentralization. The Senate specifies using William and Mary, the University of Virginia and Virginia Tech as pilot schools.

In addition to these actions, the House and Senate also support faculty salary increases of 3.2 and 3.4 percent, respectively. These compare with faculty raises of 2.25 percent and a 1.7 percent bonus in the Wilder plan.

For classified employees, the compensation plan for the next two fiscal years looks like this:

Fiscal year 1994-95 includes merit-based salary increases up to 6.9 percent. There is no funding provided for an across-the-board base salary increase.

Classified employees could get a raise in the first year through the performance pay program. Raises could vary from 0 to 6.9 percent, based on performance plan ratings.

All employees would receive a 2.25 percent performance increases in the second year.

Capital project funding for Tercentenary Hall equipment is included in both versions, while money to renovate chemistry laboratories in Rogers Hall is included in the House version only.

Desire '94 Explores Human Nature

Desire '94, a collection of sculptures by Sunghoi Kim, is on display at Andrews Gallery through March 18.

The exhibit features a wide array of pieces that focus on contemporary expressions of human desire. A multi-directional style artist, Kim employs a variety of materials including bronze, steel, terracotta, wood, aluminum and various man-made objects.

Divided into two sections, the opening installation contains 3,000 clay abstract figures placed at various levels on ladders and steps representing different degrees of human desire. The body of the exhibition consists of various individual sculptures examining both the positive and negative aspects of desire in human existence.

Sculptor Kim said the pieces that represent the positive side of desire stemmed from the idea that desire, as a source of energy, can improve society. He exposed the negative nature of desire, on the other hand, through pieces that represent greed, violence and egoism.

Religion occupies the focus of several pieces, including Kim's favorite and a focal point of the exhibition, "Salvation II"—a 27-inch-high bronze sculpture (shown left).

Kim fashioned the piece in the form of a crucifix and accentuated this shape with several nuances that stand in opposition to one another. The sculpture's apex is in the form of a wing and represents religion's unlimited potential to improve humanity. Burnt and damaged, the body of the piece, however, shows how religion has failed mankind in the past.

"Religion hasn't had too much success so far in making the world better," Kim said, "but I believe it can be a tool for its improvement."

A native of Korea and former art lecturer at Seoul City University, Kim attributes the inspiration for his pieces to his interest in social issues. "I am not a social activist, but I am interested in social issues such as crime, over-population, environment, etc.," he said. "It is natural that an artist as a member of society is concerned about social issues."

The Department of Art and Art History is sponsoring Kim's exhibition.

Shown above is a 27-inch-high bronze sculpture titled "Salvation II," from the collection of Sunghoi Kim sculptures.
