New Dutch Ambassador Outlines Future Of NATO

Ambassador Adriaan Jacobovits de Szeged, the new Netherlands Ambassador to the United States, chats with students following a lecture he delivered at the College Tuesday, March 1, in the University Center. The title of his talk was "Partnership for Peace—Which Partners? What Peace?"

Jacobovits examined the challenges that face NATO and the direction that the organization plans to take in the future. Jacobovits stressed the necessity for NATO to forge "partnerships for peace." He said the strength of the alliance will depend on its success in building partnerships with the countries of Eastern Europe, fostering closer ties between the United States and Europe and engaging in more peacemaking and humanitarian efforts outside NATO borders.

Jacobovits has served as the Netherlands Ambassador to NATO, the Netherlands representative to the United Nations, and in the Ministry of Foreign Affairs at The Hague.

William and Mary's Thomas Jefferson Program in Public Policy organized Jacobovits' visit.

Interim Report Of The Strategic Planning Committee

The Provost's Office invites the College community to an open meeting on Monday, March 21 from 3 to 5 p.m. in the Commonwealth Auditorium of the University Center to discuss the following interim report by the Strategic Planning Committee. Individuals are encouraged to retain this copy of the News for that meeting to facilitate discussion of specific aspects of the report.

The Strategic Planning Committee is working with the College community to produce a five-year plan to ensure that the College of William and Mary enhances both the quality of its programs and its position in a competitive environment. The final plan will state objectives so that progress towards their achievement can be measured. The committee has adopted draft Preliminary Planning Principles and Preliminary Financial and Budgetary Principles, copies of which were published Dec. 2 and Jan. 12 in the William and Mary News.

The purpose of this preliminary report is to give the campus community a sense of some directions the committee plans to pursue and to invite comment both on the points mentioned and on omissions from this document. The deliberations of the committee will probably include points not yet identified and mentioned in this document and will certainly incorporate the information and ideas which will be forthcoming in the unit analyses.

Tension Between Colleges And Government Topic Of March 21 School of Ed. Lecture

The changing relationship between state and federal governments, and the systems of higher education they finance, is the topic of a March 21 talk by C. Peter Magrath, president of the National Association of State Universities and Land-Grant Colleges.

C. Peter Magrath

Magrath's talk will take place at 7:30 p.m. in the Dodge Room of Phi Beta Kappa Memorial Hall. The lecture is free and a reception will follow in Andrews Hall Foyer. His talk is the 1994 Higher Education Lecture/Annual School of Education Alumni and Friends Distinguished Lecture.

In his address, Magrath will examine the change taking place in funding and regulations for state colleges and universities throughout the nation. He will examine if higher education and government will be adversaries or partners working together to meet the needs of a complex society.

ing together to meet the needs of a complex society.

"This is obviously a good time to be examining these issues," said Roger G. Baldwin, associate professor of education. "I believe Magrath's lecture will continue the dialogue stimulated by the controversial summer series of newspaper articles on higher education. At the same time, it will examine the range of forces that have provoked increasing conflict between college campuses and their respective state capitals."

The National Association of State Universities and Land-Grant Colleges was founded in 1887 and is a voluntary association of 159 public research universities and land-grant colleges.

Prior to becoming president of the association in 1992, Magrath was president of the University of Missouri System from 1985 to 1991 and head of the State University of New York at Binghamton from 1972 to 1974. From 1974 to 1984 he was president of the University of Minnesota, the largest single campus university in the country.

Swenson's Contract Will Not Be Renewed

The Athletic Department will not renew the contract of head men's basketball coach Chuck Swenson, College Athletic Director John Randolph announced yesterday.

Swenson compiled a record of 62-134 during his seven years at the College. "We appreciate the effort Chuck Swenson and his staff made for William and Mary," said Randolph.

"Our focus will be on the conduct of a national search for the right person to lead our program in the future. We will move as expeditiously as possible with a goal of naming a new coach before the April signing period," he added.

Swenson released the following in a prepared written statement:

"Everything I've done at William and Mary, I've done 100 percent and with integrity ... My commitment to my players was a special one and one that I will miss. I wish them and the new head coach only the best."

SCHEV Honors Hamada With Outstanding Faculty Award

Tomoko Hamada, associate professor of anthropology, is one of 11 Virginia professors who have been named winners of the eighth annual Outstanding Faculty Awards, presented by the State Council of Higher Education for Virginia (SCHEV).

Winners receive $5,000 prizes, made possible by the Governor and General Assembly, and the Outstanding Faculty Award sculpture. The winners were honored last night at a dinner in Richmond.

"These awards recognize the people who make education come alive in classrooms across Virginia," said Hugh L. Patterson, SCHEV chairman, in announcing the awards. "These achievements in teaching, research and public service remind us that there are scores of other outstanding educators in our state who are developing young minds for the future."

A 16-member panel, consisting of Council members, business and community leaders, past recipients and representatives of Virginia's public and private colleges and universities, selected this year's winners from a pool of 70 nominees.

Hamada has taught at the College since 1990. The 1991 recipient of the Alumni Society for Excellence in Teaching Award and this year's recipient of the Thomas Jefferson Teaching Award, Hamada teaches and advises students in a wide variety of programs, including international studies, American studies and business. She is the author of American Enterprise In Japan and has been awarded more than $400,000 in research grants. Hamada holds degrees from the University of California at Berkeley, Tokyo's Keio University and Vassar College.

Ludwell Johnson Participating In Forum At Supreme Court

Ludwell Johnson, professor emeritus of history, is participating today in a panel discussion at the Supreme Court on the topic of "Antebellum Constitutional Crises."

The discussion is one of a six-part lecture series titled "The Supreme Court in the Civil War." The Supreme Court Historical Society and the Friends of the Law Library of Congress are sponsoring the program, which is designed to explore the causes of the Civil War and examine the war's impact on the Constitution.

Chief Justice William H. Rehnquist will introduce Johnson and his fellow panelists, who include Professor Herman Belz from the University of Maryland and Larry Kramer of the University of Michigan School of Law.

Quoted in the Nov. 4, 1993, issue of The Supreme Court Historical Quarterly, Johnson said, "As a constitutional issue, the question of slavery was a relative latercomer, nor was it, as I see it, ever the fundamental issue. ... At bottom, the question was one of political power."

In the publication, Johnson alludes to Jefferson Davis and characterizes many prewar constitutional battles as "essentially struggles for sectional equality and ascendancy—for the maintenance or destruction of that balance of power or equipoise between North and South which was early recognized as a cardinal principle in our Federal system."

Andrew Zawacki Named To USA Today Academic All-Star Team

Andrew Zawacki, who was chosen in December as the College's second Rhodes Scholar, has been named to the second team of the USA Today Academic All-Star team.

The listing, published in the Feb. 4 edition of USA Today, consists of outstanding college students across the country. Annually conducting the contest to show its support of education, the newspaper solicits nominations from colleges and universities across the country. Representatives from various education groups in the Washington, D.C., area select students for each of the three teams.

Last year's list included Danielle Sepulveda '93, who was named a Marshall Scholar last year in 1993.

Larneds Give $375,000 To College For Men's Tennis Coaching Position

Mr. and Mrs. Gardner E. Larned of Barrington, Ill., have made a gift valued at $375,000 to endow the men's tennis coaching position at the College.

The Larneds gave 10,000 shares of Genuine Parts Co. common stock to establish the Gardner E. and Lois Larned endowment. Mr. Larned is director of Genuine Parts.

"I have very warm feelings for the College and Lois and I are excited to be in a position to make this significant contribution to the tennis program. Tennis has always meant a great deal to me and I am pleased to express my gratitude by establishing a permanent leadership position at the College for this program," said Mr. Larned.

Gardner Larned, a William and Mary alumnus, won the 1947 NCAA men's tennis singles championship and helped his teammates win the national team championship that same year. His team also won 82 consecutive tennis matches, the longest winning record in collegiate tennis at the time. Larned was inducted into the College's Hall of Fame in 1973.

Mr. Larned is past president of the Berry Bearing Co., which became the largest bearing and power transmission distributor in the Midwest. Genuine Parts, the parent company of Berry Bearing Co., is a publicly traded company listed on the New York Stock Exchange.

"William and Mary is working hard to meet the highest standards of excellence in all of our programs," said President Timothy J. Sullivan. "The Larneds' inspired gift will assure continued success

Sony Corporation Gives $500,000 In Equipment To College

The Sony Corporation of America will give the College $500,000 in equipment over the next three years for classroom, faculty and student use.

Most of the equipment has been designated for classroom support for the Faculty of Arts and Sciences, the Marshall-Wythe School of Law, the School of Business Administration and the Virginia Institute of Marine Science/School of Marine Science.

"Sony's gift will significantly enhance the College's capabilities in the area of information technology and will have a profound effect on the educational experiences of our students and teachers," said President Timothy J. Sullivan.

The single largest classroom facility to benefit will be Tercentenary Hall, said Franklin Robeson, vice provost for information technology. "This gift will enable the College to develop a state-of-the-art lecture hall. A Sony projection unit can be attached to other Sony equipment such as laser disks, video players and CD-ROMs. Computers can also be attached to the projection unit to enhance lecture presentations for both students and professors," said Robeson.

Tercentenary Hall, currently under construction, is a $9 million science facility, which will contain classrooms and teaching laboratories for computer science, geology and the College's new applied science program.

Equipment designated for faculty and student support will be used for a multimedia development lab and an instructional video production studio. The multimedia lab will allow students and faculty to create, store and distribute complex applications on CD-ROMs and video disks. The video studio will allow faculty and students to edit and produce instructional videos.

Past support from the Sony Corp. has included a gift for the College's East Asian Studies program.

In Memoriam James Bland Garner

A funeral was held last Thursday for James Bland Garner, 28, who died Feb. 28 from injuries sustained in a house fire.

Mr. Garner worked in the Department of Facilities Management at the College as a grounds maintenance worker and was active in the Williamsburg recreational softball league.

President Timothy J. Sullivan said he joined members of the College community "in extending our deepest sympathy to the family of James Garner. His death stands as a symbol of bravery and self-sacrifice representing the best of what it means to live in our community."

"He will be missed by those who worked with him and by the College he served," Sullivan said. "A fund has been established on campus to assist the Garner family. I hope everyone will be generous in responding to this important need for a family that has experienced such a great loss."

Born on Eglin Air Force Base in Florida, Mr. Garner lived on the Peninsula for 24 years. He attended Radford University.

Mr. Garner is survived by his wife, Tara Garner; one daughter, Alyssa Garner; one stepdaughter, Ashley Rogers; two stepsons, Codey Rogers and Colby Rogers; his mother and father, Jennifer and Malcolm Garner Sr. of Hampton; three sisters: Eva Montes of Anaheim Hills, Calif., Jennifer Wampler of Hampton, Lori Collier of Hampton; one brother, Malcolm Garner Jr. of Port Royal; and his grandmother, Gladys Bland of Irthingborough, England.

Dear Fellow Employees:

It is with deep regret that I inform you of the death on Feb. 28 of James Garner, an hourly contract employee in the Landscape Division of Facilities Management. Mr. Garner died as a result of injuries received in a fire in his home on Sunday, Feb. 27. Mrs. Garner and their youngest child (age 2) escaped without injury. However, the three older children (ages 5, 7 and 9) were injured and hospitalized for burns and smoke inhalation. They were released from the hospital over this past weekend.

While the family members lost many of their belongings in the fire, their most pressing concern at this time is to raise the money necessary to defray the cost of funeral expenses and hospitalization.

The Hourly and Classified Employees Association asks for your assistance in providing Mr. Garner's family with some of the financial assistance they so desperately need. HACE will make an additional donation on behalf of the employees of the College and will serve as coordinator of future donations for the Garner family. Please make all checks payable to HACE noting that the gift is for the Garner family and forward them to Joyce Jackson in General Accounting.

Cards and flowers can be sent to Mrs. Garner at the following address: Mrs. Tara Garner, c/o Moyer Thompson, 108 Brady Drive, Williamsburg, VA 23185.

If you should have any questions, please do not hesitate to call me in the Provost's Office at ext. 11993.

Symposium Will Examine Role of Technology In Teaching Foreign Languages, Cultures

The Department of Modern Languages and Literatures will wrap up its 1993-94 Funds for Excellence project with a two-day symposium on Friday and Saturday, March 11-12.

This project, titled "Encountering Foreign Cultures Through Technology," has explored new ways to use advanced technology in teaching foreign languages and cultures. During the summer of 1992, eight foreign language faculty members from the College and three from other institutions participated in a summer workshop taught by Gary Smith, associate professor of modern languages. They then designed workshops for the following summer, to pass on their knowledge to other foreign language teachers. In the summer of 1993, 48 teachers from a variety of institutions throughout Virginia participated in the eight workshops offered.

These workshop participants and their teachers from the College, including Robert Welch, Howard Fraser, Beatrice Guenther, Jim Griffin, Morgan Kelley, Myriam Haydock and George Greenia, will make presentations at the upcoming symposium. In addition, representatives from state and federal agencies will talk about their services. Dr. Harold Cothorn of the Virginia Department of Education will give a presentation on VaPEN (Virginia Public Education Network). Tom Kusiak will discuss the services available from the Department of Information Technology, and Nina Garrett and Katie Sprang will introduce a new federal agency, CALL (Center for Advancement of Language Learning). Katherine Kulick will speak at the Friday dinner on "Trends in Foreign Language Teaching and Textbooks," and Jim Noblitt of the Institute for Academic Technology will speak at the Saturday luncheon on the topic "Medium and Method."

The project garnered a follow-up dissemination grant from the State Council of Higher Education for production of a laserdisc containing video segments from SCOLA, a consortium that rebroadcasts news from foreign television stations. This laserdisc, together with a computer program for assisting interaction with the video, and other ancillary materials, will be distributed among symposium participants.

Some 200 people are expected to attend the symposium. William and Mary faculty and staff may register for the symposium without charge, except for dinner and luncheon, by contacting Martha Kandler Smith, director of the language lab, at ext. 13685.

Interim Report Of The Strategic Planning Committee

Topics the committee has chosen for discussion, and perhaps for sections of the strategic plan, include the following: organization, communications, faculty, student recruitment, learning, academic programs, technology, physical resources, student life, support services, service and athletics. Some themes, such as the importance of the intellectual climate for students and faculty, the significance of service and outreach to William and Mary's educational mission, and the need for enhanced technological support for the educational and administrative functions of the College cut across these preliminary organizational lines. The committee has met with some of the chairs of appropriate self-study committees (and will meet with others) to share ideas and, where possible, to coordinate data requests. As a first step, the committee has identified questions relevant to each topic, data needed to answer those questions and some points of consensus.

Administrative Organization and Academic Support Services

A preliminary review of organizational charts and conversations with senior administrators has identified some areas that should be providing additional support to faculty and students. Equally, the review has revealed options for consolidation or centralization of functions to free up resources to support administrative and academic program needs.

Administrative areas identified as needing additional resources include:

- Communications (internal and external) and governmental relations—(The naming of a Vice President for Public Affairs was a major step toward meeting this need.)
- Grants administration (pre- and possibly post-award)
- Information management and availability

Options for reorganization include:

- Coordination of graduate programs
- Clarification of the role and status of interdisciplinary programs and centers
- Technology support
- Enrollment management (admission, registrar, financial aid)
- Placement services
- Special events offices, in which there is duplication of effort (There are special events functions in the Development, Athletics, and President's Offices.)
- Reorganization of some administrative processes to make better use of technology and reduce duplicative paperwork (e.g., accounting, position approval, purchasing)
- Dispersion to departments of some activities which are now performed centrally and centralizing some activities which are now performed at the departmental or unit level
- Seeking approval to perform on campus some functions which are currently handled in Richmond

Outreach and revenue enhancement opportunities include:

- Auxiliary services (e.g., the new copy center, expanded bookstore, the National Planned Giving Institute, expanded marketing of conference facilities and services)
- Off-campus educational programs including continuing education and distance learning programs
- Summer school

Communications and Outreach

The committee agreed that the College needs to refocus and improve its communications and public relations efforts so as to:

- Represent itself more effectively at the state and federal levels
- Ensure that the College's publications and other public relations activities carry consistent themes and messages

Faculty Recruitment, Retention, Development

There was a consensus on the committee that the College should adopt a strategy of hiring faculty at all ranks with the goal of achieving national stature for some programs in a relatively short period of time.

To ensure that the faculty continues to reflect excellence and diversity, the following strategies will be considered:

- Finding funds for compensation enhancement in order to attract and retain faculty of the highest quality
- Creating a diversified system of faculty expectations (e.g. allowing faculty to emphasize teaching or research at different times in their careers)
- Formalizing and strengthening post-tenure review while, at the same time, establishing a faculty development program to support career-long enhancement of scholarship, teaching skills, revitalization of courses and integration of appropriate technology into the classroom
- Assessing the role of adjunct faculty and graduate teaching assistants, and the degree to which the College's reliance on them is consistent with its goals
- Creating an atmosphere which is conducive to the recruitment, professional and personal well-being, and retention of faculty members from diverse backgrounds

Student Recruitment

The excellence of its students—undergraduate, graduate and professional—is a defining characteristic of William and Mary. The College will continue to seek students with outstanding academic ability and accomplishments, special personal qualities and diverse racial, ethnic, and socioeconomic backgrounds and will continue to recognize its special responsibility to the people of the Commonwealth of Virginia. Because the student body at William and Mary does not yet reflect the diversity to which we aspire, the committee will focus special attention on that aspect of student recruitment. It recognizes that recruitment is profoundly influenced by the quality of the experience of currently enrolled students, and considers some aspects of student services to be inextricably connected to recruitment.

The committee will consider:

- Recruiting more aggressively to achieve racial and ethnic diversity
- Encouraging a variety of approaches to teaching and support services to recognize the different learning styles and personal and social needs of a more diverse community
- Increasing slightly the number of non-traditional students as an element of diversity
- Reviewing financial aid policies to ensure that they support the recruiting goals of the College
- Adopting strategies to support the predictable increase in international students

Learning

The Strategic Plan will reaffirm the reciprocal relationship between teaching and research by an emphasis upon "learning" as a shared activity of faculty and students. Learning, whether through imparting or gaining knowledge in the classroom or creating new knowledge through scholarship, unites the members of the College community in a common activity.

To enhance and support learning, the committee will consider:

- Reviewing current policies on Faculty Research Assignments, summer awards and overhead allocation to identify ways to support faculty research in a broad range of disciplines and to provide incentives and rewards for entrepreneurship
- Seeking ways to support interdisciplinary teaching within and across the faculties and schools
- Encouraging curricular and instructional innovation
- Improving concentration advising
- Providing training and supervised teaching experience for Ph.D. students as the next generation of faculty
- Providing sufficient resources for the William and Mary libraries to support the College's teaching, learning, research and public service missions commensurate with its commitment to quality and excellence
- Supporting the freshman seminars, internships, undergraduate research, opportunities for closely guided independent study and out-of-class faculty/student contact which make the close, personal nature of the learning experience at William and Mary unique among public universities
- Enhancing the intellectual climate on campus through lectures, concerts and other co-curricular offerings

Academic Programs

The College of William and Mary will continue its tradition of excellence in undergraduate education and in selected graduate and professional programs. In some areas, it has achieved or expects to achieve national or international stature. The committee will review the allocation of resources to academic programs to see that it reflects those commitments. It has asked that each department and program provide quantitative data and qualitative information about its particular strengths and aspirations.

The committee understands that the missions of the departments and programs differ, and will consider the role of each program both as a separate entity and as part of the larger mission of the College. In that context, criteria which the committee will consider in reviewing a program include the centrality of the program to the mission of the College; the quality of teaching, scholarship and service within the program; the outcome of the program reflected in graduate admission, job placement or other measures; the current and anticipated demand for the program; and cost effectiveness.

As part of its program review, the committee will also consider the following:

- The role of interdisciplinary programs, their relationship to traditional departments and the effectiveness or potential of some programs in integrating the instructional, research and service activities of the College across faculty and school lines
- The role of centers and institutes

Technology

The committee is committed to expanded use of technology as one means to improve both the effectiveness and efficiency of the College's academic and administrative activities. Expanded information access should be inherent in all technological investment over the strategic planning period.

As a result, the committee views the linking of the campus by a fiber optic network as essential. Absent this investment, opportunities to improve the effectiveness and efficiency of operations as well as expand academic and administrative information availability will be severely limited.

To support any investment in technology, the committee recommends development of a five-year technology improvement plan. This plan should identify how additional investment in technology will support the specific goals and objectives identified during the strategic planning process.

The technology plan should address the need to:

- Develop and maintain a user-friendly distributed administrative database
- Perform functions, particularly administrative functions, using systems rather than paper
- Ensure availability and access to academic and administrative information and data including library resources
- Support faculty, departments, schools and students within the overall structure of technological development
- Improve and expand the use of technology in the classroom in support of the academic curriculum and student needs
- Expand the scope and/or range of the curriculum through the use of video conferencing and other technologies

Facilities

William and Mary's facilities provide the environment in which students, faculty and staff work. The College must secure approval and funding from the Commonwealth to build and renovate academic buildings; auxiliary buildings are not state-funded.

The committee will consider ways to:

- Ensure that the College has the facilities needed to support its academic mission and priorities
- Strengthen the commitment to the maintenance of buildings
- Use facilities in ways that will generate revenue and be consistent with the mission of the College
- Include in plans for the maintenance and enhancement of William and Mary's physical plant attention to the special educational resource represented by the grounds and real property of the College
- Ensure a safe and secure campus environment for students, faculty and staff

Student Life

The College of William and Mary has a commitment to provide services and programs which enhance the lives and learning experiences of students. The major challenges facing the College in the area of student life are defining the degree to which the College can provide a personal environment to its students and the implications of increased diversity on the campus community.

Among the issues to be considered are:

- Maintenance of the personal environment which distinguishes William and Mary among public universities
- Ways to maintain the residential nature of the undergraduate experience and ensure that the residence halls provide an environment which enhances learning

Interim Report Of The Strategic Planning Committee

- The appropriate balance between support for academic success and the overall development of students
 - The provision of services to a more diverse student population
- Assessment of the social climate on campus, including:
- Extracurricular, service and recreational opportunities
 - The problem of alcohol and other substance abuse
 - The role of fraternities and sororities

Intercollegiate Athletics Program

The College of William and Mary offers a broad-based program of intercollegiate athletics funded by fees, revenues and private gifts exclusive of state support. Because many decisions affecting colleges are made at the conference or NCAA level, the College will have as one part of its strategy the support of change at the NCAA level. Recognizing the opportunities for personal development and the creation of a sense of community which the program offers, the committee will examine the size, role and cost of the program within the educational mission of the College.

Areas to be considered include:

- The appropriate level of the athletic fee and the percentage of the athletic budget to come from fees, private support and other revenues
- Possible alternatives to the current scholarship program, such as moving to a need-based aid model for athletes
- The means of achieving gender equity
- Ways to bring the in-state/out-of-state ratio of student athletes closer to that of the student body as a whole

Support Services

The College relies on the skill and dedication of its hourly and classified employees. To ensure that those employees feel visible and valued and have hope for career advancement at William and Mary, the committee will consider ways to recognize the centrality of the contributions of all of its employees to the achievement of its goals.

Issues to be considered include:

- The effectiveness of the College's policy of employing permanent hourly personnel and the cost implications of converting hourly to classified positions or providing benefits to some hourly employees
- Providing staff training programs at all levels to enhance skills and prepare employees to advance in their careers
- The possibility of supplementing the work of the classified and hourly employees by employing more students in some areas

Service

As an institution of higher learning and a public university, the College of William and Mary has a special service obligation to the Commonwealth of Virginia and its citizens. The nature and intensity of the responsibility vary from the legislative mandate of the Virginia Institute of Marine Science to the outreach programs of the School of Education to more general service in other areas. The service mission, broadly defined, also extends to the national and global communities.

The committee will consider:

- Developing ways to make service a more integral part of the culture of William and Mary
- Encouraging members of the William and Mary community to bring their expertise to bear to help solve societal problems
- Including appropriate recognition of service in the rewards system
- Identifying ways to become more actively involved in the economic development of the Peninsula and the state.
