State Budget Puts College Back On Track

The College received significant improvements in its budget from a General Assembly that "affirmed the commitment of the Commonwealth to quality in higher education," according to a post-Assembly statement by President Timothy J. Sullivan.

"We have worked very closely with members of the General Assembly to achieve a new understanding of William and Mary's budget priorities," Sullivan said.

That assessment was a major shift from a few months ago when then-Gov. L. Douglas Wilder proposed a budget that would have meant substantial reductions in state support for William and Mary.

"Gov. Wilder's budget seemed to penalize quality" said Sullivan. "That result has essentially been washed away."

A combination of actions by Gov. George Allen and the General Assembly restored to the College about 80 percent of the potential general fund losses.

Among the major 1994 General Assembly actions are:

- Renewed support for research and public service centers. Wilder recommended eliminating all general fund support for research, public service and commonwealth centers.

The General Assembly restored 95 percent of the research center funding, including support for the Institute of Bill of Rights Law, the Institute of Early American History and Culture, and the Bureau of Business Research. While Commonwealth Center funding is not restored, the College will consider a reallocation of funds to continue support.

"That was a vote for economic development and the critical role that William and Mary and other universities play in helping the state's economy," said the president.

- More than $730,000 over two years for campus initiatives. The money will be used to support the continuing curriculum revision and enhance the College's link to Continuous Electron Beam Accelerator Facility (CEBAF) through the Applied Science Program. Partial support for technological advancement, including the addition of a high-speed fiber-optic communications network, is also included.

In addition, the current budget plan includes $450,000 in general fund money for Tercentenary Hall equipment. Most of the construction costs for Tercentenary Hall were included in a state bond referendum in 1992, but the College has to raise about $2.6 million to complete the building.

There was also $507,000 in nongeneral fund money allocated for renovation of Rogers Hall.

- Raises for both faculty and classified employees. Faculty salaries will go up 3.4 percent in 1994-95 and at least 2.25 percent in 1995-96. This compares with 2.25 percent with the possibility of a 1.7 percent bonus under the Wilder plan.

Relative to classified employees, salary increases for 1994-95 will be provided on a merit basis, ranging up to 6.9 percent. There is no across-the-board increase. Both faculty and classified salary increases are effective Dec. 1, 1994.

- Significant reduction of the tuition transfer tax. The original budget proposal removed general fund support with a corresponding increase in tuition to William and Mary students. In effect, William and Mary students were being taxed to finance increases in revenues to other colleges and universities.

The current budget provides what Sullivan called "a

Bone Marrow Drive "A Huge Success"

Described by Jennifer Ash of the American Red Cross as "a huge success," a bone marrow drive at William and Mary Hall last Wednesday and Thursday screened 1,179 potential donors.

College senior Jay Bukzin organized the drive to find a match for his 14-year-old brother Alan who has leukemia, a disease that attacks the blood-forming organs of the body. Despite two other similar bone marrow drives last fall, no donor has yet been found for Alan.

Susan Allen, wife of Gov. George Allen, and Sen. Thomas Norment both showed up Wednesday to offer their support and encourage participation.

The success of last week's effort was particularly noticeable considering the number of people in the bone marrow donor registry in the Red Cross's mid-Atlantic region. Including the results of Jay's efforts, this regional database has now risen to 7,400.

Combined with two other bone marrow drives that he organized last year at the College and in his hometown of Woodbridge, Va., Jay has added a total of 2,804 potential donors to the national database of 1.2 million people.

Minorities, which are particularly underrepresented in the national registry, received a significant boost from last week's event. 133 persons representing various mi-

New Personnel, Direction Fuel Business School

Three important administrative appointments, a growing international operation and an external relations emphasis are giving the College's School of Business Administration a new direction and a renewed energy, according to Dean Alfred N. Page.

"John Jamison built a very good foundation for this school. The changes that the faculty and I have collectively implemented will bring the School of Business to the next level of quality and expertise," Page said.

Two current faculty members will soon assume new responsibilities at the school: James M. Olver will become the director of undergraduate programs and Ronald R. Sims will become the director of the MBA programs.

The two join John S. Strong, who became director of the Executive MBA program in January.

Health Benefits Update

Premiums Will Not Increase For '94-'95

The annual Open Enrollment period will be April 18 through May 16. This is the only time employees may make changes in their health benefits, to opt-in or opt-out of premium conversion and make medical and dependent care account elections.

Changes for these programs will be effective July 1, 1994, through June 30, 1995. State officials have made one major change in the way Open Enrollment information will be communicated. In recent years, a SourceBook was used to communicate the information. However, this year the primary Open Enrollment communication will be a brochure which will contain the necessary information for employees and retirees concerning Open Enrollment. These brochures will be distributed in late March or early April.

College Seeks To Enhance Bookstore Operation

The College will advertise later this month for proposals to enhance the operation of the Bookstore.

"Our goal is to have a professional bookstore of the highest caliber for the College community," said William F. Merck II, vice president for administration and finance. "Of particular interest is the expansion of the availability of general books of at least 30,000 titles."

The request for proposals will be available no later than March 23, in line with the state's public procurement laws. Sealed proposals will be accepted in the middle of April. The proposals will then be examined by a representative committee of the College.

Merck said the request for proposals includes a number of requirements, including:

- Management which offers the maximum sensitivity to the needs and concerns of the students, faculty and staff.

- The best possible combination of quality, customer service and price.
- The highest possible level of financial effectiveness, service and satisfaction.
- The greatest level of personal and professional protection and courtesy for the current Bookstore employees.

Merck said he expected firms in the private sector would be able to offer the College a wide level of experience, economies of scale and highly competitive textbook pricing and buy-back policies.

In addition to an increase in the stock of non-textbooks, the Bookstore would continue to sell such "soft goods" as William and Mary clothing and other memorabilia.

"Large multistore companies have the capability of providing opportunities for the campus community that are likely well beyond the reach of a single-store operation," said Merck.

Noted Legal Experts Discuss Parole Changes

A panel of legal experts will participate in "Should Virginia Abolish Parole? A Spirited Discussion" sponsored by the Marshall-Wythe School of Law.

The panel discussion will take place at 7 p.m. in the Commonwealth Auditorium of the University Center. The session is free and members of the College community are encouraged to attend.

Abolishing parole was a campaign issue for Gov. George Allen, who plans to call a special session of the General Assembly in September to consider the proposal.

"The question of parole is extremely difficult and controversial," said Paul Marcus, acting dean of the law school and moderator of the debate. "Many states are currently studying the parole system and we can expect dramatic changes over the next few years."

"I anticipate our panelists will disagree on many matters, making for a lively and most interesting debate," Marcus said.

The panelists include: William P. Barr, former U.S. attorney general and chair of the governor's Commission on Parole Abolition and Sentencing Reform; Walter S. Felton Jr., deputy attorney general; Gene M. Johnson, deputy director of the Virginia Department of Corrections; Jerry W. Kilgore, secretary of public safety and a 1986 Marshall-Wythe graduate; attorney John F. McGarvey; and Margaret P. Spencer, associate professor at the law school and a member of the Virginia Board of Corrections and the Legislative Commission on Sentence and Parole Reform.

'The Meaning of Family' Topic Of March 24 Law Symposium

The Fifth Annual Bill of Rights Symposium will examine "Gays, Lesbians, and the Meaning of Family" on March 24 in the Commonwealth Auditorium of the University Center.

The symposium is sponsored by the Student Division of the College's Institute of Bill of Rights Law. No registration is required and the symposium is free.

Leading off the event will be a moot court argument at 6 p.m. when Marshall-Wythe School of Law students argue a child custody case involving a homosexual parent. Law school faculty and students will make up the panel of judges.

Rep. Barney Frank, D-Mass., will deliver the keynote address at 7 p.m. Frank, who has been a congressman since 1981, will discuss the legal landscape affecting gays and lesbians.

A panel discussion will follow, moderated by Rodney A. Smolla, director of the Institute of Bill of Rights Law.

Panelists will include: Joseph Broadus, professor of constitutional law at George Mason University, who testified on behalf of the state of Colorado in support of a state referendum to prohibit extending civil rights protection to gays; Beatrice Dohrn, legal director of Lambda Legal Defense; Herb Titus, former dean of Regent University's School of Law and professor of constitutional law; David Flaks, a psychologist and attorney who has conducted studies of children who grew up in lesbian households; and Stephen Pershing, legal director of the American Civil Liberties Union of Virginia and lead attorney in the Sharon Bottoms lesbian mother custody case.

Justice Kennan Visits Law School

Virginia Supreme Court Justice Barbara M. Kennan visited the law school yesterday and spoke to members of the Mary and William Feminist Law Society. Justice Kennan, who was appointed to the Court in July 1991, formerly served on the Virginia Court of Appeals and, prior to that, on the Fairfax County Circuit Court.

Previous symposia have included debates involving such diverse issues as gun control, censorship in music, the war on drugs and bio-ethics and the law.

Dear Fellow Employees:

I am pleased to report that through your generosity, HACE has made a donation in excess of $1,100 to the Garner family. The Department of Facilities Management also made a sizable donation through a separate effort. The campus has really pulled together in this time of crisis.

A friend of the family contacted me today to say the family is in need of kitchen items, (i.e. pots and pans, dishes, eating utensils and cooking utensils), sheets (1 double and 4 twins), towels, living room end tables, bedroom dressers and chests. Hopefully some of you will have items to share with them.

Donated items are being accepted at 816 South Henry St. The firm of Geddy and Harris has made a vacant room in its suite of offices available as a collection point. They are open from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., Monday through Friday. If you are unable to deliver to this address, please contact me at ext. 11993 and I will make arrangements for pickup and delivery.

The family has just moved into a home on Hickory Sign Post Road and is busy getting settled in. The children are recovering physically, but continue to experience emotional trauma.

Thank you again for your concern and for any support you can provide this family during its time of need.

Sincerely,
Ruth D. Graff
President, HACE

Sorority House Expected To Be Repaired Within A Month

Chi Omega Residents Have New Housing Following Fire

Fifteen young women whose rooms were damaged when fire broke out at the Chi Omega sorority house March 9 have been re-assigned to other College residences. No one was injured in the fire, which took place in Sorority Court off Richmond Road.

It is not known whether students will be able to move back into the house this semester, according to W. Samuel Sadler, vice president for student affairs.

"We have met with the entire sorority and they are taking this pretty well," said Sadler. "They've been very cooperative and they are working hard to keep this from becoming a barrier to a successful completion of their semester at William and Mary."

The College has contracted with the Hall Construction Co. in Grafton for clean-up and repairs to the brick building. That work is expected to cost $30,000 and is scheduled to be completed by April 15, according to Deb Boykin, director of residence life.

The 11 a.m. blaze was discovered March 9 by Russell Owen, a William and Mary senior who had a friend's permission to use her computer in the house. Owen told officials that he spotted the fire in a second-floor bedroom soon after letting himself into the building that Wednesday morning. He immediately telephoned police and pulled the fire alarm, an act that probably saved the building, campus Police Chief Richard McGrew later said.

The fire destroyed one bedroom and caused smoke damage throughout the three-story house. Water damage was also found in the dining room beneath the burned bedroom.

Fire officials suspect that a faulty small appliance in the bedroom ignited the fire.

Sadler noted that he particularly wanted to thank the women of Chi Omega for their "patience, understanding and goodwill" in the aftermath of the fire.

Melfi Receives NEH Award

Mary Ann Melfi, assistant professor of English, has won a $3,000 National Endowment for the Humanities Study Grant.

Melfi will study the uses of the past in modern British fiction.

About 550 college teachers from applied to the NEH for 100 awards. The awards sponsor six weeks of study in self-designed projects which promise to deepen the teacher's intellectual understanding of important texts and topics.

Teachers with heavy teaching loads receive preference, according to the NEH.

Republican senatorial candidate Oliver North will speak at 6 p.m. today in room 120 of the Marshall-Wythe School of Law. His talk is sponsored by the Law Students Speakers Forum.

The meeting is open to the public.

Saint Andrews University Seeks Exchange Students

For the first time, Saint Andrews University in Scotland will accept William and Mary students for one semester, in the spring of 1995. The Reves Center encourages students to consider applying for admission to St. Andrews for the full year, 1994-95 or for spring, 1995. Applications and further information are available in the Program Abroad Office, ext. 13594.

Slim Down For Spring

There is still time to get rid of those extra pounds and inches and fit into those favorites by getting together with others and joining a Weight Watchers At-Work Program. Weight Watchers needs at least 20 participants to start an at-work program. Call Jacqueline Smith in the Personnel Office at ext. 13157 to join and to get an at-work program started right away.

News Publication Schedule

The next issue of the William and Mary News will be published April 6.

Items for the News should be delivered to James Blair 310 no later than 5 p.m. on Friday, April 1.

CWA Elects New Officers

The Christopher Wren Association has selected officers for the 1993-94 academic year.

The association is a group of Williamsburg area residents of retirement age who seek regular opportunities for learning and fellowship.

New officers making up the executive council are: William Ragborg, chairperson; Carl Brown, chairperson-elect; Marilyn Entwisle, secretary; William Lancellotti, vice-chair, finance; Don Ball, vice-chair, programs; Joe Brinkley, vice-chair, membership; Rita and John Durrant, vice-chairs, hospitality; John Entwisle, vice-chair, college relations; and Jack Robinson, vice-chair, special events.

Directors at large are: Ruth Hughes, host/hostess coordinator; Sarah Belpree, brown bag lunch coordinator; Jan Molter, entertainment coordinator; Fred Czufin, art and design coordinator; and Pat Bostian and Ralph Hubert, general assignment.

Other officers are: Evelyn Curd, publicity; Jinny Brinkley, newsletter editor; Grant Mouser and Norma Olson, spring 1994 retreat coordinators; and Bruce Boehm, international students' liaison.

Area residents interested in joining the Christopher Wren Association may call ext. 11079 for more information.

Debaters Excel At Tournament

Two William and Mary debaters captured first place at the National Public Argument tournament held over spring break at Middle Tennessee State University. Andrew Martin and Jeff Petty compiled a 5-1 record in preliminary-round competition. Advancing to semi-final competition, they defeated a team from Northern Illinois U. on a 3-0 decision. In the final round they defeated a team from Allegheny College of Meadville, Pa., on a 14-1 audience decision. They argued the proposition, "Resolved: U.S. Military Intervention to Promote Democratic Government is Appropriate in the Post-Cold War World."

Petty was named first-place speaker, and Martin took second place. This was the first "National Championships" to be held in this division.

Environmental Policy And The University Topic Of Conference

A conference designed to examine ways in which colleges and universities can assist in solving environmental problems will be held at the College April 7-8.

Participants in the two-day conference will consider how well government resources are being utilized by environmental policymakers, whether links between the policymakers and academicians are changing, and how environmental policymakers can better use the research and scholarship potential of academia.

The conference will also explore regional attempts to preserve the Chesapeake Bay.

The Virginia Institute of Marine Science/School of Marine Science, the Thomas Jefferson Program in Public Policy and the Marshall-Wythe School of Law are jointly sponsoring "Environmental Policy and the Role of the University." All events take place in the University Center.

Anyone interested in attending the conference should register by Friday, March 25. The registration fee is $40, and the price of the two luncheons is $30. For more information, contact Karen Dolan, conference administrator at ext. 12388.

Law School Shines In Annual Survey

U.S. News and World Report's annual listing of "America's Best Graduate Schools" ranks William and Mary's law school 29th this year.

With an overall score of 78.7 and median 1993 LSAT score of 164.0, the law school had 95.3 percent of its students find jobs after graduation with a median starting salary of $53,000, according to the March 21 issue of the magazine. The law school ranked 32nd last year.

"While rankings of this kind are necessarily imperfect," said Acting Dean Paul Marcus, "when coupled with other recent national rankings showing us in the top 20 law schools, this year's U.S. News & World Report standing confirms once again that the law school's achievements are being recognized nationwide."

Yale University maintained its top ranking for the fifth consecutive year.

Five Alumni, One Team To Be Inducted Into College's Athletic Hall Of Fame

Five individuals and one team have been selected for induction into the William and Mary Athletic Hall of Fame for the spring of 1994. Jeri Daniels '82 (track), David "Splinter" Edmunds '59 (football, track, golf), Bob Foth '80 (rifle), Christian Herr '62 (swimming) and Warren Joblin '60 (track) will be honored as well as the 1980-81 women's golf team.

A reception, banquet and formal induction will be held on Saturday, April 9 from 6:30 from 10:30 p.m. at the Fort Magruder Inn. This event caps a weekend of golf, campus tours and a private reception for the inductees with President Timothy Sullivan. For more information, contact Jean Beall at the Athletic Education Foundation, ext. 13350.

Poets, Playwrights, and Even 'Jimmy Olsen' Slated for Patrick Hayes Writers' Festival

Some of the best of the New York City literati, as well as actor/writer Jack Larson, who played Jimmy Olsen in the television show "Superman," will participate in The Patrick Hayes Writers' Festival April 6-9.

Jack Larson

The festival is free and open to the public.

Novelist Jacqueline Deval and poet Jason Shinder open the festival at 8 p.m. Wednesday, April 6, with readings in the Botetourt Gallery of Swem Library. Deval is an executive with Villard Books and has just written her first novel, Reckless Appetites, a tale of seduction and betrayal among the young chefs and bon vivants of contemporary Europe.

According to David Essex, assistant professor of English and this year's festival chairman, "It is a tasty amalgam of intrigue, romance, literary and culinary history and recipes. One critic called it a witty morality fable about appetite, indulgence and regret, as well as an investigation into the nature of passion and creativity—in food, in love, in art and in life."

Shinder is the author of several poetry collections, including End of the Highest Balcony, The Imagining Head and Every Room We Ever Slept In. In addition, he has compiled two anthologies of poetry: More Light on fathers and sons, and First Light on mothers and daughters. He is founder of The Writer's Voice alternative literary arts center.

The festival continues at 4 p.m. Thursday, April 7, in the Friends Room of Swem Library with appearances by William Targ, former editor-in-chief at G.P. Putnam's Sons, and his wife, literary agent Roslyn Targ. They will discuss the New York publishing scene.

William Targ has been called the "Godfather of publishing" by former client Art Buckwald. Targ, who began his career in the book trade at age 14 as a messenger for Macmillan Publishing Co., has worked with Tennessee Williams, Saul Bellow and Henry Miller, among others. Roslyn Targ will discuss the ins and outs of getting a book published.

Poet and novelist Jessica Hagedorn and novelist Paul Russell will continue the festival at 8 p.m. Thursday in Ewell Recital Hall. Hagedorn has had several collections of her prose and poetry published, including Dangerous Music, Pet Food and Tropical Apparitions. Her most recent book is Dogeaters, a novel about her native Philippines.

Russell's critically acclaimed first novel, The Salt Point, is a quietly frightening tale of an aimless ménage à quatre, according to Essex. Russell has also written The Boys of Life and Sea of Tranquility which is scheduled to be published by Dutton Books this fall.

On Friday at 4 p.m., William and Mary student winners of the alumni literary awards will read their winning poems and prose in room 120 of Tucker Hall.

Poet, playwright and actor Jack Larson will speak Friday at 8 p.m. in the Commonwealth Auditorium of the University Center. Larson is best known for his TV role as Superman's friend and fledgling Daily Planet photographer Jimmy Olsen. After that role, Larson went on to writing poetry and plays, as well as producing feature films such as "Urban Cowboy" and "Bright Lights, Big City."

The festival concludes Saturday, April 9, at 8 p.m. in the Commonwealth Auditorium with a reading by novelist Richard Price. Price first achieved fame with his popular novel of street life in New York City, The Wanderers. Later, he penned screenplays for The Color of Money, Sea of Love and Mad Dog and Glory. His latest work is Clockers, a novel about murder and the innercity drug business, according to Essex.

Career Services Library Offers Assistance In Job Search

Nearly 7,000 students and alumni used the Career Services Library last year. Located in the basement of Blow Hall, the library serves as a resource for students needing information on current job opportunities, employers, internships or graduate schools. A computer room outfitted with a variety of audio/visual programs augments the facility. The library is open from 8 a.m. to 7 p.m., Monday through Thursday; 8 a.m. to 5 p.m., Friday; and 9 a.m. to noon on Saturday.

The Office of Career Services is currently taking applications for paid part-time student assistant positions for the 1994-95 academic year. There are 10 positions available, which will involve a wide variety of responsibilities. Students interested in applying for these positions should request information and application forms from the receptionist in Blow 123. The application deadline is Friday.

Pappy Fehr Will Be Remembered As "A Legend In His Own Time"

Carl A. "Pappy" Fehr, whose name was synonymous with the William and Mary Choir for nearly 30 years, died on March 9 in Riverside Hospital in Newport News at the age of 86.

Described as a "legend in his own time" by former College President Davis Y. Paschall in a eulogy delivered at a memorial service on March 12, Professor Fehr served as director of the Women's Chorus and William and Mary Choir from 1945 until his retirement in 1974.

When he became director of the Choir and Chorus, it was known as "The College Chapel Choir." Consisting of only 13 women and four men, its activities had been limited to the campus. Two years later, with 60 members, Professor Fehr changed its name to "The William and Mary Choir" and expanded its scope of performance beyond campus, adding different artistic formations and appealing arrangements.

During the 1960s, at the request of alumni in various areas of Virginia, Professor Fehr took the choir to high school and community audiences in Richmond, Norfolk, Halifax, Waynesboro, Roanoke and other locations.

"I received numerous letters of appreciation from alumni and parents," Dr. Paschall recalled, "and press editorials extolling the Choir's performance and praising an image of William and Mary that was not only prized in itself, but also one that attracted talent to the College from all over."

Among the Choir's noted successes

The William and Mary Choir and Chorus recognized "Pappy" Fehr in 1970 for his 25 years of service to choral music.

ing the College for sending such a talented group and providing a quality of music never before heard in those parts."

Professor Fehr later took the Choir on tours to other areas of the east coast including Atlanta, Charleston, Charlotte, New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Winston-Salem and Washington, D.C., with similar success. Dr. Paschall said he received so many letters praising the Choir's performance that it became clear that "they were truly our Good Will Ambassadors, convey-were appearances during Virginia Day at the New York World Fair and at a Freedom Foundation banquet in the Mayflower Hotel in Washington, D.C. As an outgrowth of that performance, the Choir received the George Washington Honor Medal from the Freedom Foundation for "bringing about a better understanding of the American Way of Life." In 1968 during the 275th anniversary of the College, the Choir staged a highly praised nationally televised Christmas concert, using the Wren Building as a backdrop. And in 1971, in recognition of his leadership, Professor Fehr received the Williamsburg Chamber of Commerce's distinctive "Drum Beater" award.

In his eulogy to Professor Fehr, which was read by former Choir member Dennis Cogle, Dr. Paschall recalled how Fehr received the name "Pappy."

"During a warm up for one of the Christmas concerts after Professor Fehr had given one of his famous pep talks, a football player, who was also a member of the Choir, put his arm gently around Professor Fehr and said 'Pappy Fehr and all his children.' The nickname 'Pappy' became an affectionate one ever after."

"Pappy was loved and respected by his students," Dr. Paschall recalled. "He was a perfectionist at his work, sometimes called a discipline taskmaster, but the results spoke for themselves, and the Choir and Chorus participants were proud of their opportunities. Many met their future spouses as members, and a camaraderie characterized each succeeding group. When they returned to campus in later years, they beat a path to Pappy's door to rekindle memories."

Fehr was not only known for his work with the Choir but respected as well for his work as choir director and organist for the Williamsburg Baptist Church from 1945 to 1968. In addition, he wrote or arranged much of the music for Paul Green's symphonic drama "The Common Glory" and served as its musical director.

Many of Professor Fehr's former choir members attended his funeral on March 12, including Tom Terry of Appomattox, Va., who led a group of former Choir members in singing some of "Pappy's" favorite hymns. Joe Phillips, a local attorney and former member of the Choir, sang a solo hymn "In My Father's House Are Many Mansions."

In his eulogy, Dr. Paschall said: "Few were so privileged as 'Pappy' Fehr, who, in the Golden Years, had already earned a worthy immortality all about him in the lives of so many whom he had touched for good—including mine."

Professor Fehr was born in Austin, Texas, graduated from the University of Texas and received his doctorate in music education from Michigan State University. Before coming to William and Mary, he taught in parochial and public school in Texas. He is survived by his wife of 60 years, Alice, and a brother, Walter G. S. Fehr.

In Memoriam

March 10, 1994

To the College Community:

It is with very deep regret that I inform you of the death on Wednesday, March 9, of Carl "Pappy" Fehr, Chancellor Professor of Music, Emeritus, of the College of William and Mary.

Professor Fehr received his undergraduate and master's degrees from the University of Texas, and his doctorate in music education from Michigan State. He was a long-time faculty member in the Department of Music and retired in 1974.

Professor Fehr came to William and Mary in 1945 and directed the William and Mary Choir and the William and Mary Chorus until he retired. Students in his choirs loved and respected him. Under his direction, the choir won many awards and honors including representing Virginia at the New York World's Fair in 1965 and doing the Freedom Foundation's tribute to former President Eisenhower in Valley Forge, Pa. He worked to furnish his liberal arts students with experiences in music and to develop musical values.

Several of the Christmas in Williamsburg programs he directed were broadcast on national television. Professor Fehr was the music director of "The Common Glory." He received the Freedom Foundation Award for Outstanding Achievement for "bringing about a better understanding of the American way of life" in 1969. The Williamsburg Area's Chamber of Commerce "Drum Beater Award" was presented to him in 1971. Professor Fehr served as choir director and organist at Williamsburg Baptist Church from 1945 to 1968 and was a charter member of the American Choral Directors Association.

Survivors include his wife, Alice K. Fehr of Williamsburg, and a brother, Walter G.S. Fehr of Lakewood, N.J.

A Memorial Service was held on Saturday, March 12 at St. Stephen's Lutheran Church in Williamsburg. Rev. Lawrence A. Shoberg and Rev. Dr. Thomas E. Pugh officiated. Memorials may be made to the Carl A. Fehr Musical Scholarship Fund at the College, or to St. Stephen's Lutheran Church, 612 Richmond Road, Williamsburg, 23185.

Women's Studies Speaker Will Examine Contemporary Family Issues

Writer Charlotte Allen will speak at the College Tuesday, March 29, as part of the Women's Studies Contemporary Family Issues Forum at 7:30 p.m. in Washington 201. The talk is free and open to the public.

Allen is a contributing editor of City Journal, an urban-affairs quarterly published by the Manhattan Institute for Policy Research in New York City. She is also a frequent contributor to The Wall Street Journal and The Washington Post's "Outlook" section, and is currently working on a book about searchers for the historical Jesus. Her recent articles include: "When Motherhood is for Sale" and "Our Archaic Adoption Laws."

At the College, Allen plans to speak on contemporary family issues in a talk titled "Family Women, Family Values," according to Deborah Green, coordinator of the Women's Studies Program on campus.

"The reason we asked her is because she has an intriguing intellectual perspective in that she comes from the conservative tradition but she's not a traditional conservative," said Green. "I think she has some very interesting views on women's issues."

Allen graduated with honors in classics and English from Stanford University in 1965, and received her master's degree in English from Harvard in 1967. In 1974, Allen earned her juris doctorate from the University of Southern California and was admitted to the State Bar of California.

College Professor Co-Curator of Cole Exhibition At National Museum Of American Art

Alan Wallach, Ralph H. Wark Professor of the Fine Arts and acting director of the American Studies program at the College, is co-curator of the "Thomas Cole: Landscape into History" exhibition.

The exhibition opened Friday, March 18, at the Smithsonian's National Museum of American Art in Washington, D.C.

The exhibition is a major retrospective of the work of Thomas Cole from 1801-1848. Cole is considered America's most important landscape painter of the early 19th century and has long been regarded as "the father of Hudson River school of painting."

The comprehensive survey features the rich variety of landscape formats that Cole developed from wilderness views and pastorales to imaginary compositions and allegorical history paintings.

Cole had more in mind than the painting of beautiful scenes, according to Wallach. "By using a variety of landscape formats, Cole expressed his concern over the rise of Jacksonian Democracy, economic expansion and the early phases of industrialization," said Wallach.

Wallach, a specialist in the art of Thomas Cole and the Hudson River School, co-curated the show with William H. Truettner, the National Museum of American Art curator of painting and sculpture. Together they selected more than 70 of Cole's works for the exhibition.

Wallach wrote the principal essay in the exhibition's catalog in which he reexamined the messages that Cole's canvases conveyed to viewers at the time they were painted, the era of Jacksonian Democracy. Wallach's essay, "Thomas Cole: Landscape and the Course of an Empire," analyzes Cole's landscapes and history paintings, showing how they address the social and political issues that arose during those years.

"The show and its catalog break new ground by identifying Cole as a man of his age and placing his ideas and accomplishments within the broader context of the early 19th century," said Elizabeth Broun, director of the National Museum of American Art.

The exhibition will highlight the relationship between Cole's landscape paintings and his history paintings. Throughout the exhibition, new ideas about the unity of the artist's message and meanings are introduced. For the first time in nearly 150 years, Cole's two important allegorical series, "The Course of Empire" (1834-1836), and "The Voyage of Life" (1842), will be hung in the same exhibition.

The exhibition is free and can be seen daily at the National Museum of American Art through Aug. 7, from 10 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. The exhibition will travel to Wadsworth Atheneum, Hartford, Conn., later this year and to the New York Historical Society in early 1995.

College Will Be Part Of New State Pilot Decentralization Project clear philosophical repudiation" of the tuition transfer tax.

- Elimination of a withholding provision. The Wilder proposal to withhold 1.5 percent of each institution's budget pending approval of a restructuring plan has also been removed.

While the General Assembly is requiring that each institution submit a restructuring proposal by Sept. 1994, no funds will be withheld pending approval.

"One lesson of this session was that for higher education there will be no return to business as usual," Sullivan said. "That message came through loud and clear."

- A decentralization pilot project. William and Mary is one of a handful of state institutions named to take part in a decentralization pilot project for areas such as accounting and personnel. Other schools named include the University of Virginia, Virginia Polytechnic Institute and State University and George Mason University.

- Lower tuition increases. Wilder recommended increases of 5 percent for Virginia students and 8 percent for non-state students. The current budget has increases of 3 and 7.5 percent, respectively.

Sullivan said the changes "allow us to make sure that William and Mary remains a place that able young Virginians can attend."

The General Assembly provides additional flexibility to raise law school tuitions to support university tuition requirements or to enhance law school programs.

The College Board of Visitors will fix tuition and fee rates at its April 29 meeting.

The Virginia Institute of Marine Science/School of Marine Science received additional funds for program support, planning for a modern telecommunications system and faculty salaries.

Sullivan characterized the 1994 session as "long and arduous," but noted that it marked a "welcome return to the reasoned examination of higher education policy."

"For the first time in some years, higher education has been recognized by the Commonwealth as the sound investment we know it to be," he said. "Gov. Allen and the General Assembly have demonstrated once more their recognition of the value of diversity in the Virginia system of higher education."

dents will also work on a set of projects important to the success of organizations outside the College community.

Meanwhile, Strong's international background is being used to ensure that students can continue with experiences like the educational trip the EMBA class took last year to visit the Chinese University of Hong Kong.

Page said it is no coincidence that international themes and experience are becoming more prominent at the school.

"Because the marketplace is becoming increasingly global in nature, businesses are expecting graduates to have a much broader perspective. Our size and faculty expertise give us the ability to quickly adapt to meet that expectation," said the dean.

Out of a total faculty of 45, 12 new faculty members have been hired in the last three years, and many of them have international experience, Page said.

For example, Hildy Teegan has a strong background in international marketing with a special interest in Mexico. Clayton Hubner has a strong interest in quality manufacturing and worked for McKinsey and Co. in Holland. Both were hired last year.

Faculty who joined William and Mary in previous years also have been developing international expertise. Last year Olver's team-taught a marketing course at Auyoma Gakuin University in Tokyo with Todd Mooradian, who came to the school in 1990. The course, sponsored by Canon Japan, was so successful that each has been invited back to individually teach a course

To the William and Mary Community:

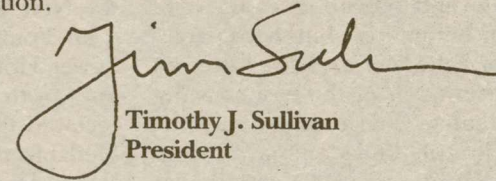

The 1994 session of the General Assembly is over, and I am pleased that the College of William and Mary has recovered a substantial portion of the money placed at risk in former Gov. Wilder's budget proposal. During the past several weeks, we have worked very closely with the leadership of the General Assembly to achieve a new understanding of the importance to the Commonwealth of William and Mary's budget priorities. In these efforts we were met with unfailing courtesy and a willingness to spend the time necessary to understand the College's complex budget predicament.

As you know, Gov. Wilder's proposed budget imposed upon William and Mary a "tuition transfer tax" which removed general fund support from William and Mary and required that we raise money through tuition to offset funds sent to other institutions. The budget adopted by the General Assembly represents a substantial rejection of that dangerous policy principle. This budget also recognizes that the Commonwealth should not continue to shift the burden of paying for higher education to our students and their families. Gov. Allen took an important first step on a path to a more reasoned tuition policy. The Governor and the General Assembly sought to keep tuition increases limited to the rate of inflation—and they provided the extra tax dollars necessary to make achieving that goal possible.

In respect to capital outlay, we were very pleased to receive $450,000 for equipment for Tercentenary Hall.

Another policy question addressed in this session was decentralization. We believe decentralization holds great potential for savings here and elsewhere in the Commonwealth. We are pleased that William and Mary has a designated role in the pilot program approved by the General Assembly.

This legislative session has been long and arduous. For William and Mary and its sister institutions, however, it marks a welcome return to the reasoned examination of higher education policy. For the first time in some years, higher education has been recognized by the Commonwealth as the sound investment we know it to be. The leadership of the General Assembly and Governor Allen have demonstrated once more their recognition of the value of diversity in the Virginia system of higher education.

Sims will use his human resource experience to help oversee the integration of a new set of principles for the MBA program, which was recently approved by the school's faculty. The principles emphasize that the school's goal is to help students reach their full potential in their careers and in other aspects of their lives.

For example, while teaching students to understand the external, international and multicultural environment, MBA stu-port consortium in Richmond.

- Creation of a Center for Operations and Information Technology. The center, which will operate with non-public dollars, will help support faculty research and course development in areas that will be useful to the business community and the Commonwealth, Page explained.
- Expansion of the school's board of sponsors. The size will grow from 27 to 45 over the next three years, a move which should help the school recruit students and provide internships and jobs for graduates.

"We want to support the College's efforts to build ties to the larger community and we are rapidly moving in that direction," said Page.

Bukzin Has Raised $80,000 For Three Bone Marrow Drives Since 1993

nority groups were screened at the hall. It will be three to four weeks before Alan, who has battled leukemia since he was 2-1/2 years old, learns whether any of last week's donors match his tissue type. While the odds for a perfect match are not good, about 1 in 20,000, those screened may be able to help some of the 12,000 to 13,000 people nationwide each year who need bone marrow transplants. Only 600 to 700 of these people actually receive bone marrow transplants each year.

"We might not find a match for Jay's brother," said Ash, "but we could find one for others, especially since all the information [gathered from screenings] remains in the national database until a donor is 56 years old."

Jay's previous drives have been successful in matching about 30 people with someone in the United States who needs a transplant. Of these 30, six are in the final stages of testing before actually donating their bone marrow.

For some people contemplating a bone marrow screening, the thought of actually donating marrow can be enough to scare them away. Ash said it is a misconception that donating marrow is a painful process.

The actual procedure involves extraction with a needle, without an incision, from the back of the pelvic area. An overnight hospital stay is required, and the only side effects are soreness and a dull pain for a short period of time.

To offset the $45 cost of each bone marrow screening, Jay has raised about $80,000 in donations. This money allowed the first 1,000 people at last week's drive to receive a free screening.

Ash owes the success of all three of Jay's bone marrow drives to his efforts at raising money and awareness of the plight of his brother and similar needy individuals.

"This event helped others get tested who might otherwise not be able to afford it," Ash said, "and also raised awareness [of the need for bone marrow donors]."
