The College Mission Statement

The College of William and Mary, a public university in Williamsburg, Virginia, is the second-oldest institution of higher learning in the United States. Established in 1693 by British royal charter, William and Mary is proud of its role as the Alma Mater of American revolutionaries and educator of subsequent generations of leaders and public servants. Now, in its fourth century, it continues this tradition of excellence by combining the best features of an undergraduate college with the opportunities offered by a modern research university. Its moderate size, dedicated faculty, and distinctive history give William and Mary a unique character among public institutions, and create a learning environment that fosters close interaction among students and teachers.

The university's predominantly residential undergraduate program provides a broad liberal education in a stimulating academic environment enhanced by a talented and diverse student body. This na-

Referendum On Student Assembly Set For April 26

Johann Wolfgang von Goethe, the famous German writer, once said, "The best of all governments is that which teaches us to govern ourselves."

Members of the Commission on Student Governance hope that students will remember this tenet April 26 when they vote on whether to replace the existing form of student government. The commission was appointed by President Sullivan to design a more simplified form of student government.

The referendum concludes six months of work by a committee of 11 undergraduate and graduate students. Responding to a recommendation last fall by an informal group of students, Sullivan established the commission "with the purpose of studying and developing favorable recommendations to correct the problems with our stagnating system [of student government]."

Over the course of several months, the commission elicited opinions from the stu-

VIMS Seminars, Symposia Promote Virginia Seafood

Americans consumed 14.8 pounds of seafood per person in 1992. The Virginia seafood industry, the third most productive in the United States that same year, harvested 630 million pounds of seafood or about six percent of the country's total. Recognizing the importance of seafood to the Virginia economy and the individual consumer, the Virginia Institute of Marine Science (VIMS), in conjunction with the Virginia Sea Grant Marine Advisory Program and food service professionals, regularly hosts seafood education seminars and chef's seafood symposia.

Marine Education Specialist Vicki Clark organizes the bi-annual classes. She sees their role as three-fold: to educate clients about proper seafood cooking techniques; to provide insight into seafood-related research at VIMS; and to encourage awareness and use of Virginia seafood products.

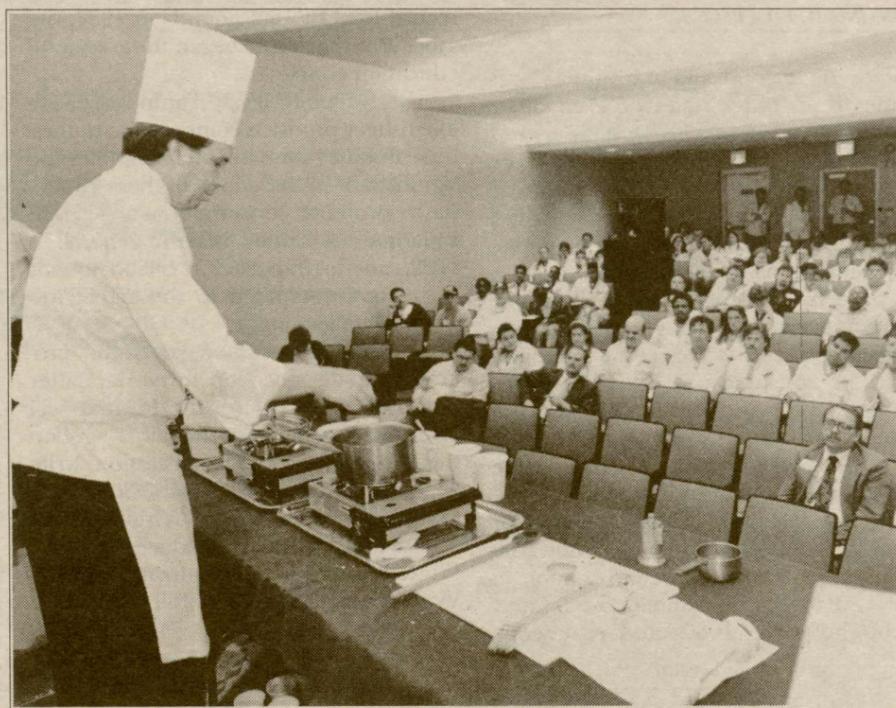

With more people eating seafood today, the one-day classes concentrate on proper cooking techniques to educate the public and professional chefs about how to make succulent seafood dishes, and the correct means for safe and healthy preparation.

"People tend to think seafood is difficult to cook," Clark said, "but our chefs show that just isn't so."

"Seafood Saucery" was the theme of the largest of two educational programs offered this spring for the general public. Master chefs from a variety of exquisite restaurants in Southeast Virginia demonstrated techniques of seafood and sauce preparation.

Hans Schadler, executive chef of the five diamond Williamsburg Inn, was one of five instructors for the seminars. He and his staff prepared a meal featuring a variety of local ingredients, beginning with an appetizer of Fresh Toano Asparagus and Blue Crab in Puff Pastry with Grain Mustard Sauce, followed by a salad of Pan-Grilled Alleghany Mountain Trout with Baby Greens, Pine Nuts, Ancho Chili and Lime Aioli. The entree featured Sauteed Black Sea Bass with Shitake Mushrooms, Caramelized Vidalia Onion Compote and Cilantro Butter Sauce.

Since overcooking, which ruins the taste, texture and nutritional value, is often the most common problem when preparing seafood, the seminars' instructors stress guidelines for proper cooking during their demonstrations. They also give hints for identifying fresh seafood at the market.

Mark Erickson, executive chef of Cherokee Town and Country Club in Atlanta, Ga., demonstrates the nuances of cooking seafood during a Chef's Seafood Symposium last week at the Virginia Institute of Marine Science. Over 100 chefs from various restaurants and culinary schools in Southeast Virginia attended the full day of instruction that focused on quality, safety and nutrition in seafood preparation.

An added touch to the three-hour culinary experience, which includes full four-course meals, are tips from representatives of Virginia wineries on guidelines for choosing wines to complement seafood dishes.

For chefs and food service professionals, VIMS also conducts an annual free symposium. This spring's theme focused on quality, safety and nutrition in seafood preparation, and featured cooking demonstrations, exhibits and a presentation by VIMS researchers on current seafood species research. This year's symposium was held last Monday at the Institute.

Instructors of both "Seafood Saucery" and the Chef's Seafood Symposia encourage their clients to make use of the different kinds of fish available for cooking, especially those caught in Virginia waters. Monk fish, for example, is excellent tasting but is not often eaten in the Mid-Atlantic.

The fact that much of the seafood that the chefs use in their classes is found in Virginia waters highlights another important function of the symposia: promoting the excellence of Virginia seafood.

Even though Virginia seafood producers caught the third largest volume of seafood of any state in America, a large por-

Child Care Center Celebrates Week Of The Young Child

The Williamsburg Campus Child Care Center (W.C.C.C.) will hold an open house and sponsor several other activities this week to celebrate the 1994 Week of the Young Child. The National Association for the Education of Young Children established the week as a way to call national attention to the importance of early childhood education and development.

W.C.C.C., the child care center serving the College community, invites members of the community to visit the center through Friday. Center hours are 7:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. Staff members will be available to talk with visitors, and special children's artwork will be on display throughout the center.

The center will also sponsor a children's parade on campus Thursday. Teachers will accompany the children as they carry

Week of the Young Child banners they created in class. The parade will begin at the center at 11:00 a.m.

Parents and staff members will mark Thursday as "Worthy Wage Day"—a day set aside to communicate the importance of adequate pay for child care professionals. All parents in the College community are urged to wear their child's hand print pinned to their clothing on that day as a way to "take their child to work" to show how many parents rely on child care and early education programs.

A fund raiser for the center will also be held throughout the week. W.C.C.C. is challenging every member of the community to donate $1.00 to the center for education supplies and equipment. Members of the Nu Rho Chapter of Alpha Phi Omega fraternity will be at the following locations on campus to collect donations: the Campus Center, University Center and Caf. Donations may also be made at the Recreation Center, Swem Library and the Law Library.

Finally, W.C.C.C. plans to kick off the sale of notecards featuring reproductions of the children's artwork during the week. The notecards will be available at the center through Friday and at the Bookstore after April 22.

The Williamsburg Campus Child Care Center is a nonprofit parent cooperative dedicated to high-quality early childhood education and development. It is located behind the Bookstore on Jamestown Road. For more information on the center or Week of the Young Child festivities, contact W.C.C.C. Director Marsha McLean at ext. 12121.

VIMS Seafood Seminars Fill Rapidly

tion of the seafood sold in Virginia stores comes from other states or even other countries.

"We want these seminars to make people more aware of the seafood that comes from Virginia," Clark said, "and hopefully buy more of it and encourage others to do the same."

Aside from such promotional efforts, the popular awareness of the health benefits of eating seafood has certainly heightened its consumption. In addition to seafood's high protein, low fat and low cholesterol content, fish oils extracted from a variety of fish can assist in the prevention of coronary disease.

Partly reflective of the growing popular awareness of seafood's high nutrition content, per capita seafood consumption in the United States climbed moderately throughout the 1980s and reached a record level of 16.2 pounds in 1987, the same year that VIMS began these seafood education courses.

The disparate level of imports of edible fishery products compared to domestic seafood exports in 1992 magnifies the significance of the efforts of these symposia to promote consumption of seafood caught in the United States in general. In 1992, America imported 2.9 billion pounds of seafood compared to the 2.1 billion pounds it exported.

This spring's seafood education programs rapidly filled up three days after registration began. But the Institute will offer the class again in the fall. To get on the mailing list for fall registration, write Seafood Education Seminars, Sea Grant Marine Advisory Service, Virginia Institute of Marine Science, Gloucester Point, VA 23062, or for more information, call Vicki Clark at (804) 642-7169.

Sears Named New Postal Services Director

Richard Sears has been named director of college postal services. Sears has been with the College for more than 18 years. For the past four years, he has managed the College's regular and bulk mail delivery.

Bringing to the position an outstanding knowledge of existing operations, Sears will manage the entire the College Postal operation, which handles more than 10,000 pieces of mail each day.

Sears plans to undertake a number of initiatives to make College postal services more cost effective and efficient.

With rates increasing across the board in 1995, he wants to encourage greater use of bulk mailings to reduce postal expenses. To ensure all campus mail is delivered within 24 hours, Sears also plans to distribute a listing to all departments of the correct designation for inter-departmental mail. Improper addresses often delay delivery.

Sears replaced Patty Lindsey who took a position at the Postal Services International Division in Washington, D.C.

MacGowan Receives PBK Faculty Award

The 1993 Phi Beta Kappa Society Faculty Award for the Advancement of Scholarship has been awarded to Christopher MacGowan, associate professor of English and director of graduate studies in English. The award, given by Alpha Chapter of Virginia, was created through an endowment made by John D. Rockefeller, Jr., to recognize a member of the faculty for scholarly achievements.

MacGowan, a specialist in 20th century American literature, has devoted much of his scholarly publication to the poetry of William Carlos Williams. MacGowan is the editor of the second volume of The Collected Poems of William Carlos Williams, the co-editor of the first volume and the author of a book on Williams and the Modernist visual arts.

The 1993 annual meeting of the Modern Language Association devoted a session to MacGowan's recently published edition of Williams's long poem Paterson. He contributed the essay on Williams to the recent Columbia History of Modern Poetry and has also published articles on Sherwood Anderson, Harriet Monroe and Vladimir Nabokov. He was president of the William Carlos Williams Society from 1988 to 1991.

Christopher MacGowan

MacGowan's current project explores the impact that residence in the United States has had upon the work and concerns of a number of modernist and contemporary writers from Europe.

MacGowan has taught at the College since 1984.

Beethoven's Fifth Will Fill PBK April 26

The William and Mary Orchestra will present Beethoven's "Grand Symphony in C minor" —the Symphony No. 5 on Tuesday, April 26 at 8 p.m. in Phi Beta Kappa Hall.

This performance of Beethoven's "Fifth" has become an annual event for the orchestra, both marking the end of another season and a farewell to graduates. In addition to Beethoven, the program will include the Alleluia and Fugue, by American composer/conductor Alan Hovhaness. Requiring a large complement of divided strings, the work is an atmospheric blend of quasi-medieval counterpoint and impressionistic harmonies.

Tickets are free (donation requested) and available at the hall 30 minutes before the performance, or in advance by calling the William and Mary Orchestra at ext. 11089.

Choir And Chorus Dedicate Performances To 'Pappy' Fehr

The Spring Concert of the William and Mary Choir and Chorus will have special meaning this year because it will be dedicated to the memory of Carl H. "Pappy" Fehr, the groups' director from 1945 to 1974.

Performances will be held at 8 p.m. Friday and Saturday, April 22 and 23, in Phi Beta Kappa Memorial Hall. Tickets are $4 and can be purchased before the concerts at the Campus Center main desk and the PBK box office. The box office is open from 1 to 6 p.m., and the phone number is ext. 12674.

The program is a wide-ranging one, featuring sacred music and spirituals, folk songs from America and England and ending with the Hallelujah Chorus from Handel's "Messiah."

Singing will be the William and Mary Choir, the Chorus and the Tenors and Basses. The Orchestra will also be featured.

In addition, music of Bellini, Ravel and Ralph Vaughan Williams will be played.

Appearing in the recital will be sopranos Suzannah Ancell, Elizabeth Barnard, Lara Johnson; mezzo-soprano Britt Argow; tenors Adrian Felts; Arthur Lathrop, Tristan Poje; baritones Donald Bledsoe; and Garrett Camporine; and bass-baritone Chris Skrable. All are students of Ryan Fletcher. Pianists Yasmin Khanizadeh, Carrie Lyons, Sally Moseley, Martha Smith and James Gutheil will accompany the singers.

Britt Argow will also perform Five Popular Greek Songs by Maurice Ravel and Tristan Poje will present three songs by Vincenzo Bellini. Adrian Felts and Arthur Lathrop will sing selections from Ralph Vaughan Williams' "Songs of Travel."

Five Student-Directed Productions Set For April 20-23

Vocal Extravaganza Ends Season For Capriole

World renowned soprano Claron McFadden and countertenor Derek Lee Ragin will highlight the final performance of the season for Capriole, the vocal and instrumental ensemble specializing in 17th- and 18th-century chamber music. The performance will be on Tuesday, April 26 at 8 p.m. in the Great Hall of the Wren Building.

Performing with Capriole, McFadden and Ragin will help deliver a program of works by baroque master G.F. Handel who wrote chamber duets as a young man in Italy from 1705 to 1710.

The Washington Post described Ragin as "one of the world's most remarkable singers," while The London Guardian cited McFadden for "the art of good Handel singing in a nutshell."

The concert will feature a duet and cantata based on the story of Armida and Rinaldo from Tasso's "Gerusalemme Liberata." Rinaldo, the preeminent knight among the crusading Christians bound to retake Jerusalem, is abducted by the enchantress Armida to an island of pleasure. His colleagues find him, remind him of his duty and persuade him to return to battle. The duet portrays the moment of his departure, while the cantata depicts the emotions of Armida, who has fallen in love with her prisoner.

Tickets are $12, $8 for students. They are available at Echoes and Theatre Connection, and by mail from Capriole at P.O. Box 558, Williamsburg, VA 23187. For more information, call Capriole at 220-1248.

Proposed Student Assembly Enhances College Unity

dent body on their impressions of the existing system. Results of the survey indicated dissatisfaction on many levels, including confusion about how the current system works and a general feeling of exclusion from the student governance process.

According to the commission's final report, "A clear desire for a simpler system was articulated."

Lisa Goddard, one of the co-chairs of the Commission on Student Governance and former Student Association president, believes that the proposed Student Assembly is a more inclusive and responsive approach to student government at William and Mary.

"A yes vote on this referendum will mean a more simple, easy-to-understand form of student government that unifies undergraduates and graduates," she said. "By cutting red tape, this system responds to students and gives all students more control over their government."

The proposed system addresses the biggest apparent deficiencies of the current system—disunity among the undergraduate and graduate student government bodies and a confusing number of representative student organizations with similar functions.

A new 16-member Executive Council would provide the medium for interaction between undergraduates and graduates. This single body would consolidate powers previously held by a wide array of committees including the Board of Student Affairs, the Student Association and the Graduate and Professional Students Organization.

The Executive Council would be popularly elected and consist of 15 voting members and one non-voting chair. Undergraduates would elect 10 of their members while each of the five graduate schools would have one representative on the council.

Augmenting this body would be eight standing committees that would also streamline the decision-making process. Each of the committees, such as the finance, club, social, cultural and services councils, would serve as either consolidations of existing committees or new entities with entirely new functions.

The proposed Club Council, for example, addresses one apparent problem with the existing system—a lack of effective club representation in student government. The proposed structure should facilitate not only inter-club communication but, more important, provide direct lines of input into the student governance process.

Since the Student Activity Fee funds many campus clubs and organizations, the proposed Student Assembly would also provide for more direct student involvement in setting and allocating revenue generated from the fee.

The Board of Student Affairs, which consists of students, faculty and administrators, currently recommends the fee to the Board of Visitors. A single Finance Committee whose voting membership consists solely of students would be responsible for this function under the proposed system.

The governing bodies of each graduate school would continue to act on their own behalf, while the proposed system also allows for undergraduate concerns to be addressed by a new 26-member Undergraduate Council. The four elected officers from each undergraduate class and the 10 undergraduates on the Executive Council would serve on this body.

On the April 26 referendum, a yes/no question on whether to adopt the proposed system will be put to undergraduate and graduate students. Should it pass, implementation of the new system will coincide with the installation of the new Student Assembly leaders in the Spring of 1995.

Voting locations for all undergraduates are in Morton Hall from 9 a.m. until 11 a.m., the Caf from 11 a.m. until 2 p.m. and all freshmen dormitories from 4 p.m. to 8 p.m. Graduate students may vote in their respective schools.

fellowships every year to candidates whom it deems to have "demonstrated exceptional capacity for productive scholarship or exceptional creative ability in the arts." During its 70-year history, the foundation has granted over $161 million in fellowships, over $4 million this year alone.

James Axtell, Kenan Professor of History and Humanities, was awarded a Guggenheim in 1981. The award funded his research for the book The Invasion Within. Professor of American Studies Robert Gross also received a Guggenheim Fellowship in 1979 while a faculty member at Amherst College.

During the fellowship period, Taylor will be associated with the Université de Rennes in France, where he will continue his research on the history of Western ideas about the nature of language and communication. Earlier portions of this research were funded by a William and Mary Faculty Research Assignment and a fellowship from the National Endowment for the Humanities, resulting in the publication of Taylor's 1992 book Mutual Misunderstanding: Scepticism and the Theorizing of Language and Interpretation.

The Guggenheim Fellowship is intended to support a related project investigating 18th-century European conceptions of the contrasting roles of individual freedom and social authority in language.

Presentation of this year's fellowships will be on May 10 at the Guggenheim Foundation in New York.
