Grimmette Selected As Othello

VSF Opens July 8

Bill Grimmette

The Virginia Shakespeare Festival selects one Equity guest artist to fill a main role each season. This year, the role of Othello will be played by Bill Grimmette, a veteran of stage, television and screen.

Grimmette is no stranger to Shakespeare. He has performed at the Folger Theatre in "Love's Labors Lost" and "Richard III." At Shakespeare at Landsburgh, he has appeared in "The Merry Wives of Windsor" and "Macbeth."

On television, he has appeared on "In the Heat of the Night" and in "George Washington: The Mini-Series" with Patty Duke. He has also been in "Her Alibi" with Tom Selleck, "A Man Called Hawk" with Avery Brooks and "To Heal a Nation" with Eric Roberts.

"What's interesting about Bill is that he doesn't have a degree in theatre," according to Jerry Bledsoe, executive director of the Festival. "Both his undergraduate and graduate degrees are in psychology."

"He comes highly recommended. During my search for Othello, four different people directed me to Bill," said Bledsoe.

For Grimmette, Othello is a role that he has always wanted to undertake, but never had the opportunity.

Describing his acting roots, Grimmette said he owes his interest in the profession partially to his father.

"My father was a minister in Alabama. There are a lot of theatrics in church," he said. "I got further interested in acting while in the army and enrolled in the Patricia Kratz Acting Conservatory."

Mr. Huggett Goes To Washington

Although his confirmation hearings won't come for at least a few more weeks, Robert J. Huggett is already in Washington, D.C., hard at work at the Environmental Protection Agency.

Huggett, a professor of marine science at the College, is taking a three-year leave of absence to be assistant administrator for research and development at the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency.

He started work at the agency early this month as an expert consultant and will take on his new position once he is confirmed. The Senate Committee on the Environment and Public Works should hold hearings on his confirmation in late June or early July.

"I can't make policy or personnel decisions until after the confirmation hearings. So this is really a good time to get to know the agency," said Huggett.

There is a lot to get to know. The EPA's office of research and development has 2,000 federal employees, more than 1,000 contractors, a budget of more than a half-billion dollars and 19 research laboratories around the country.

The research and development office examines a wide variety of issues, from groundwater quality to marine life management to public health concerns like environmental tobacco smoke and radon gas.

Huggett doesn't go into his new duties cold. For the last 12 years, he has been a member of the EPA's Sciences Advisory Board, and, through the board's committees, he has been conducting reviews of research on a broad range of environmental concerns.

Although his invitation to apply for the EPA position was a surprise, Huggett's education and experience have made him a natural candidate. He was an undergraduate at William and Mary in the 1960s, received his master's degree in marine science from Scripps Institution of Oceanography, and came back to the College to get his Ph.D. from the Virginia Institute of Marine Science/School of Marine Science. He joined the faculty in 1977.

While at VIMS, Huggett has worked for about 26 years

Scholars To Make Documentary On Guinea Watermen

Seven College faculty members are making a documentary film about the Guinea watermen, a group of fishermen and their families who live in a small community in southeastern Gloucester County, Va.

The Virginia Foundation for the Humanities and Public Policy (VFH) has awarded the film committee a $12,000 start-up grant for the production of a one-hour broadcast-quality film designed to capture the unique history and culture of the Guinea watermen and the contemporary forces that endanger their way of life.

Participants in the project from William and Mary include: Chandos Brown, an associate professor history; script writer David Essex, a College graduate and assistant professor of English; Tommy Leggett, who has a master's degree in marine biology from the Virginia Institute of Marine Science (VIMS) and is a full-time working waterman; Marilyn Lewis, a bibliographic service librarian at VIMS; Victor Liguori, an associate pro-

Barnes & Noble Will Manage Campus Bookstore

The College has contracted with Barnes & Noble Bookstores Inc. of New York to enhance operations at the campus bookstore. A three-year contract between Barnes & Noble and the College goes into effect this month.

Barnes & Noble, the foremost provider of bookstore services in the country, was selected to operate the bookstore for many reasons, including the company's expertise in the bookstore field, its highly competitive textbook pricing and buy-back policies, and its reputation for innovative store design, according to William F. Merck II, vice president for administration and finance. Barnes and Noble's sensitivity to the needs and concerns of students, faculty and staff was also a consideration.

"Improvement in the quality of service to the campus community was the number-one driving force in making the decision," Merck said. "Our goal is to have a bookstore that complements the academic mission of a university of the stature of William and Mary.

"A large multi-store company like Barnes & Noble has the capability to provide opportunities for the campus community that are well beyond the reach of a single-store operation," he explained. "Companies with a national presence have economies of scale and buying power, as well as expertise in merchandise, inventory, bookstore finances and store design."

Founded in 1873, Barnes & Noble is one of the nation's oldest booksellers. Barnes & Noble Bookstores Inc. is a separately operated part of Barnes & Noble's family of retail companies, which include Barnes & Noble Inc., the nation's largest trade book selling operation, B. Dalton Booksellers, Doubleday, Scribner's and Software Etc.

Barnes & Noble plans to improve service and inventory levels at the 16,500-square-foot bookstore at 106 Jamestown Road. In addition to an increase in the stock of non-text items, for example, the company will provide a wider variety of current trade, academic and scholarly literature, and offer a greater selection of merchandise including William and Mary clothing and memorabilia.

Barnes & Noble will also give the bookstore a more "academic and scholarly presence," according to Jerry McDonald, vice president of Barnes & Noble Bookstores

Inc. According to McDonald, renovation of the bookstore will take place in two phases: major re-merchandising, display changes and relocation of customer service areas will take place by this fall to give the bookstore a fresh look; more extensive renovations, including moving the textbook area to the lower floor and installing an academic book department of 40,000 titles, will be done within a year.

College officials and representatives of Barnes & Noble met with bookstore employees June 1 to begin the transition. Bookstore employees will become Barnes & Noble employees effective June 24 and be guaranteed employment for at least a six-month evaluation period.

"We're very pleased with this new partnership," Merck said.

Unique Community Subject Of Documentary

fessor of sociology; Robert St. George, Dittman Professor of American Studies; and project coordinator Sharon Zuber, an instructor of English whose work with the Achilles Elementary School in Gloucester inspired this project.

Achilles Elementary School, located in the Guinea area of Gloucester County, has integrated the Chesapeake Bay theme into its curriculum as a way of celebrating the local watermen's culture. This study comes at a time when environmental, governmental and economic forces threaten the occupation that defines the maritime community, and film-makers hope that the project will document these changes in the watermen's rigorous, traditional lives.

"Clearly the film will allow us to capture the colorful dynamic character of the Guinea watermen and the rhythms of their work and speech, and to join images with the many anecdotes of these accomplished storytellers," said Essex.

According to the film committee's proposal to the VFH, several legends surround the self-sufficient and fiercely independent Guinea watermen: "One legend claims that their name came from deserters from Cornwallis's army," the proposal said. "Holding themselves apart from newly independent America, they transacted business among themselves in British guineas rather than Yankee dollars."

Project coordinator Zuber said that the film-makers plan to explore such legends, as well as the history, work, play, religion and family life of this small, isolated group of fishermen who have made a living on the banks of the York River and the Chesapeake Bay for more than 300 years.

"The livelihoods derived from the water are threatened by development, pollution and by over-fishing and its regulation," Zuber said. "Even the community's distinctive dialect is being diluted by the influence of television and other media assaults."

The project is expected to take one year. Research and script writing is scheduled to be done this summer; videotaping of traditional work such as crab potting, patent-tong clamming, and net mending is scheduled to begin in late June.

The community education director of the Achilles Elementary School will coordinate office space, telephone service and access to office equipment. The project has letters of support from VIMS, the Yorktown Watermen's Museum, WHRO, the Virginia Marine Resources Commission, and the Chesapeake Bay Foundation.

Film-makers hope the documentary will be used on public television and in various Virginia institutions such as the Yorktown Watermen's Museum. The film will also be available on video to public libraries.

While rehearsing his role, Grimmette will also teach beginning acting at the College.

"My first love is storytelling. I want to help people, especially children, through storytelling," he said. "I hope lots of children come to see the show. In Germany, management encouraged children to sneak into the theatre. In America, we need to make theatre more accessible to the youth."

Many interns and directors are returning to the VSF this season. Robert Goddard III, who played Julius Caesar, will return for his fourth season. Also returning are Michael Harding, Mike Kindle, Jennifer

In Memoriam
Elvera Stromberg Burger,
Wife Of Chancellor Emeritus
Warren E. Burger

Elvera Stromberg Burger, wife of Chancellor Emeritus Warren E. Burger, died on Monday, May 30.

In addition to Chief Justice Burger, survivors include a son, a daughter, and two grandchildren.

A memorial service was held on Friday, June 3 at 1:30 p.m. in the National Cathedral in Washington, D.C.

The family has requested that in lieu of flowers, memorial contributions be made to either the National Symphony or to the Supreme Court Historical Society. The College will send a contribution to the Supreme Court Historical Society.

Individuals wishing to write Chief Justice Burger may address him at his office at the Supreme Court, 1 First Street NE, Washington, DC 20543.

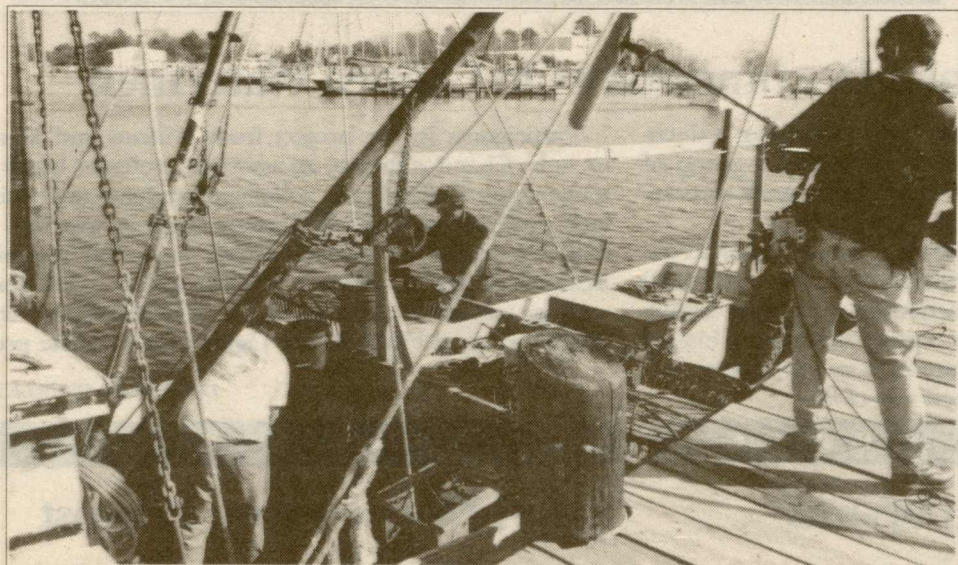

Retirement Reception
Set For Brown, Hunt,
Freeman

The Division of Student Affairs is holding a campuswide reception for three retiring employees: Stanley E. Brown, director of Career Services; Robert P. Hunt, associate director of Career Services; and Theresa N. "Pete" Freeman, executive secretary in the Office of Student Affairs.

Together, the three have given more than 80 years of service to the College.

The reception will be held from 3 to 4:30 p.m. Friday, June 24, in Chesapeake A of the Campus Center.

Accolades for the retirees have already started. Two weeks ago, the staff in Career Services presented Brown and Hunt with gold watches during a dinner party. The evening featured original poems, songs and dances designed to enhance the occasion.

VIMS Experience To Help Huggett

conducting research on some of the most important regional and national programs in water pollution.

In the 1970s, he was part of the team that examined the impact of Kepone, a pesticide ingredient discharged into the James River from a small plant in Hopewell. Kepone contamination resulted in the closing of some James River fishing grounds until 1988.

In the 1980s, he supervised research into the Navy's use of a paint additive commonly known as TBT. The additive kept barnacles from growing on ship hulls, but it also caused deformities in crabs, mollusks and other animal life in and around marinas.

Based on the work of Huggett and others, the use of hull paint containing TBT was banned first in Virginia, then by Congress.

Having a scientist like Huggett as assistant administrator for research and development is a novelty. Previous assistant administrators have come from other fields, and—while he can't comment on his plans until the confirmation hearings—Huggett hopes he will give the agency a different perspective.

"It's an exciting opportunity," Huggett said. "I can't wait to get started."

NOTES

Swem Library Opens
New Exhibit

A traveling exhibit titled "A Century of Library Publications" opened in the Zollinger Museum May 23 and remains on display until July 12. The books exhibited represent the best of library publications, 1893 to 1993.

These are all landmark volumes, ranging from the catalog of the American Library Association library printed in 1893 to a study of Jean Cocteau and the illustrated book issued by the California State University in 1990. Differing types of material include library catalogs, guides, bibliographies and exhibit catalogs. Library publications over the years covered a wide range of topics from science to literature to the art of the book.

The display is sponsored by Arundel Books of Los Angeles and the selections were chosen by a panel of special collections librarians, book dealers and directors of libraries.

Writing Resources Center
Consultations Set

The Writing Resources Center offers free one-on-one consultations for all students at all stages of the writing process. The center is staffed by graduate and undergraduate writing consultants.

Located in room 115A of St. George Tucker Hall, the center is open from 9 to 11 a.m. and 1:30 to 3:30 p.m. Monday; 9 a.m. to noon and 1:30 to 3:30 p.m. Tuesday; 9 to 11 a.m. and noon to 3:30 p.m. Wednesday; 9 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. Thursday; and 9 to 11 a.m. Friday.

To make an appointment, call ext. 13925 or stop by during regular hours.

James Blair Move
Starts This Month

Administrative offices will be moved out of James Blair Hall beginning this month, as the College prepares to renovate the building.

Here is the approximate timetable for the moves, and the new location for departments now in James Blair:

Moving in the next few weeks will be parts of the Office of University Development, including Development Systems, Prospect Management, Major Gifts, Estate Planning, Corporate and Foundation Relations and the Christopher Wren Association. Those departments will relocate to the Galt Houses at the Dillard Complex.

The Office of Multicultural Affairs also moves soon to the newly renovated Campus Center.

In mid- to late July, the Vice President of University Development and the University Events Office move to Corner House on Jamestown Road.

The Office of University Relations will be divided among two Jamestown Road houses across from Barrett Hall: Publications and the William and Mary News will go to Holmes House, while the University Relations and Public Information staff will be in Landrum House.

Also in July, the Office of Grants and Research will go to Rowe House on Jamestown Road.

In addition, the Office of Student Affairs will complete its move to the Campus Center. This includes the Vice President of Student Affairs, Dean of Students, Residence Life, Off-Campus Housing and Study Skills.

In August, the Office of Annual Support will take up new quarters on the lower level of Old Dominion Hall, where the Post Office was located.

Law School Hosts Students From Former Soviet Union

The Marshall-Wythe School of Law has been selected as a host school for graduate students from the former Soviet Union under the 1994 Edmund S. Muskie Fellowship Program.

The program, administered by the United States Information Agency, the American Council of Teachers of Russian, the Institute of International Education, the International Research and Exchanges Board and the Soros Foundation, anticipates placing law students in law schools around the United States beginning in the fall.

"The recognition of the law school will help us take another step in building a strong international network for our students and faculty," said Acting Dean Paul Marcus.

Students from the former Soviet Union will participate in the law school's masters degree program in the American legal system.

In addition to receiving students from the former Soviet Union, the law school will also be considered to receive selected graduate students from Albania, Bulgaria, Croatia, the Czech Republic, Hungary, Macedonia, Poland, the Republic of Slovakia, Romania and Slovenia. Candidates will be nominated by the Fulbright commission and the United States Information Services posts in the 10 countries, and finalists will be chosen on the basis of academic excellence and leadership potential in the field of law. Finalists will be chosen this month.

The Muskie Fellowship program is highly competitive, according to Linda Malone, Foundation Professor of Law and director of the international students' program at the law school. "We are very pleased to have been selected for this honor and this challenge," Malone said.

Law Students Fill Summer Public Service Jobs

The Marshall-Wythe School of Law, through its Office of Career Planning and Placement, has created funding to support 41 students in public interest job placements this summer.

The William and Mary Public Services Fund (privately raised support), a grant from the Virginia Bar Foundation from the Interest on Lawyers' Trust Accounts fund and federal work/study funds have enabled the law school to support the largest number of law students serving in public interest placements in its history.

"We are tremendously proud of the efforts of Rob Kaplan, the associate dean of career planning, and his staff and the efforts of our students in raising many of the funds necessary to support this outstanding program," said Paul Marcus, acting dean of the law school.

"The fact that we can deploy 41 students into important public service work this summer reaffirms our belief that our students care deeply about public service. We are proud to be able to support their goals," Marcus said.

Raymond A. 'Chip' Mason '59 Chosen For SEC Commission Post

The Securities and Exchange Commission has named Raymond "Chip" A. Mason '59, chairman and chief executive of Legg Mason Inc. of Baltimore, to a five-member, private-sector task force that will examine brokers' practices and compensation. This task force will address recommendations in response to the SEC investigation of 161 branch offices of nine large brokerage firms. The two-year probe of the firms found sales practice problems at about 40 branch offices that required referral to the agency's enforcement division.

Chief executives of several major American corporations as well as a Harvard Business School professor will join Mason on the review panel.

Meilman Participates In National Press Conference
On Substance Abuse Study

Columbia University's Center on Substance Abuse (CASA) recently held a press conference on its findings regarding alcohol and drug use on the nation's campuses. Phil Meilman, director of the Counseling Center, participated in the press conference and offered insight on the CASA study which included research conducted by the Counseling Center.

Martin Jurow Award
Winners Named

The 1994 winners of the Martin Jurow Theatre Arts Award for theatrical excellence are Donnie Bledsoe, Michael Harding and Jennifer Scott Mobley, students in the department of theatre and speech.

The award helps cover expenses of performers while they are interning with prominent regional, repertory or summer stock theatres. Harding and Mobley are interning for the Virginia Shakespeare Festival this summer. Bledsoe is interning at the Lakes Region Summer Theatre. The recipients were chosen April 18.

School of Education Alumnus Selected
"Post Secondary Counselor of the Year"

Jim Bergin, a 1974 graduate of the School of Education, was recently named "Post Secondary Counselor of the Year" by the American School Counselor Association. Bergin is a professor at East Central University in Oklahoma and chaired a task force to require K-12 counseling in all public schools in that state.

Departments and Schools

Biology

Professor Martin C. Mathes participated in the Seminar on Teaching the Large Section, at Brigham Young University, May 17-19. Speakers at the seminar presented their approaches to the problem of the large-class experience. Mathes presented his specific course objectives and strategies for teaching Plant Biology. The slide presentation included cartoons by senior Collan Bentley and examples derived from phone conversations and research presentations. The details of Mathes' methods will be included in a future issue of the Plant Science Bulletin.

School of Law

Dean Thomas G. Krattenmaker has just published Supreme Court Policies: The Insti- tution and Its Procedures (West Publishing Co., 1994). The 688-page volume, co-authored with Susan Low Bloch of Georgetown University School of Law, examines the process by which Supreme Court Justices are appointed and confirmed, the process of case selection by the Court and the collegial decision-making process.

Assistant Professor Raj Bhala gave a faculty colloquium last month at Emory University Law School on his forthcoming book Foreign Bank Regulation After BCCI. Bhala also lectured on the law of electronic funds transfers for World Bank and International Monetary Fund officials at the annual World Bank Payments System Training Program.
