Statesman Leaves Legacy To College

During his 45 years of public service, George Ball amassed some 20,000 books in his library. He left nearly 1,000 books and bound collections on the Middle East to the College. This photo was taken at Ball's home in Princeton, N.J., in December 1990.

For the last seven years of his life, renowned statesman George Ball maintained close ties with the College and James Bill, professor of government. On May 25, the day before he died, Ball told his son Douglas that he wanted to give the Middle East section of his vast library to William and Mary.

During the summer, Bill, director of the Reves Center for International Studies; his wife, Ann; and Professor of Religion Jack Van Horn hauled almost 70 cartons of books from Ball's home in Princeton, N.J. Although Ball left Princeton University the bulk of his personal library, which included some 20,000 books filling two huge rooms, he left nearly 1,000 books and bound collections of Middle East papers and research materials to the College.

According to Bill, Ball's gift represents a major coup for the burgeoning Middle East studies program at the College.

"We cannot have a serious program without a quality library," said Bill. "These books, periodicals, journals, newspapers, and ... personal papers will contribute significantly to our library."

Once all the items have been cataloged, the Reves Center and Swem Library will divide the Ball collection. Included in the lot are some extremely valuable and rare biographies and encyclopedias on the Arab/Israeli conflict and histories of the Jewish and Palestinian peoples.

Strategic Planning Report Set For Release Friday

On Friday, Sept. 23, the Strategic Planning Committee will release a draft of the Strategic Plan as a report to the College community. The document will be accessible through WAMI (under Office of the Provost menu selection) on Friday. A printed version will be ready for distribution on Monday, Sept. 26.

The committee invites wide discussion and comment on the draft. The committee will hold two open meetings in the University Center Auditorium on Monday, Oct. 3, from 7 to 9 p.m. and Wednesday, Oct. 12, from 4 to 6 p.m.

All members of the College community are encouraged to attend. These meetings will be in addition to those scheduled by the Faculty Assembly.

A series of special meetings will also be arranged at which representatives of any program that is recommended to be phased out may make an individual presentation to the committee, if they choose to do so.

The committee will send copies of the document to committees of the Faculty of Arts and Sciences and the schools, to the self-study committees, and to staff and student organizations, with a request for comment. The committee also encourages written comments from any members of the community. All comments should be sent to the Provost as Chair of the committee by Friday, Oct. 14. Comments sent over the e-mail should be addressed to stplan@mail.wm.edu.

When the comment period closes, the committee will reconvene to consider what changes should be made to the draft in light of the community's response. The revised plan will then be submitted to the President on Oct. 24. The Board of Visitors will consider the Strategic Plan at its meeting on Nov. 10-11.

Critical in determining this timetable is the necessity for the College to submit an addendum to the Restructuring Plan that was sent to the State Council of Higher Education on Sept. 1. To meet the requirements of the Appropriations Act of April 1994 and the guidelines subsequently issued by SCHEV, some items deliberately left vague in the Restructuring Plan, pending the completion of the Strategic Planning process, must be made specific by early November.

The committee urges all members of the campus community to involve themselves in these very important discussions about the future of the College.

Scholars Rate Clinton's Foreign Policy Performance

President Clinton knows that the world is a "messy place." For former Ambassador Robert Fritts and Alan Ward, professor of government, the president's inability to devise an effective United States foreign policy stems from both the "disorganized world order" that he inherited and an ineffective management style.

Last Thursday, in the first of a series of fall lectures titled "Forging The Twenty-First Century: In Search of New Solutions to Old Dilemmas," Fritts and Ward cited the world's "chaotic" condition as a legitimate factor adversely affecting Clinton's foreign policy performance.

"[Considering the complex world today] it is understandable that Clinton hasn't been able to solve the insoluble," said Ward. "I would be giving the same apologia for Bush today [if he were still president] ... I ask you to have pity on Clinton."

Ward and Fritts, senior fellow in the

Thomas Jefferson Program in Public Policy, agreed that Clinton has "dithered," "waffled," and "flip-flopped" on a number of key foreign policy matters. This tendency, exemplified by Clinton's empty

Bill Predicts The Rise of Islam In Talk Tonight

"Revolutionary Islam will be the world's most powerful ideological force in the 21st century." This prediction will be the theme of a lecture tonight at 7:30 in Rogers 100 by Professor James Bill, director of the Reves Center for International Studies.

During the past 18 months, Bill has made four research trips to Asia and the President Reacts To Gov. Allen's Budget Request

William and Mary has now received a request from the Department of Planning and Budget which requires that we develop plans for General Fund budget reductions at 2 percent, 4 percent, and 6 percent for the 1995-96 fiscal year (commencing 1 July 1995). These plans are to be submitted by Oct. 17.

I am concerned about this newest development. Higher education has already suffered General Fund budget reductions approaching the half-billion dollar mark. Virginia needs desperately to make significant long-term investments in higher education. William and Mary has a critical role to play in Virginia's future. Further budget reductions will jeopardize our ability to meet the needs of our faculty, our students, and our Commonwealth.

For the last year, we have been engaged in a strategic planning effort designed to take control of William and Mary's future. The potential for further budget cuts must not cause us to abandon this historic effort at its most critical stage. The wisest course is not to forget that we must decide what is best for William and Mary.

Sandra Day O'Connor Highlights International Judges Forum

This fall, the Marshall-Wythe School of Law will inaugurate a series of public lectures by distinguished judges from around the world, highlighted by a talk by Justice Sandra Day O'Connor of the Supreme Court of the United States on Monday, Nov. 14. This seminar is called the Judges Forum.

Lord Harry Woolf, one of 12 English "law lords," kicks off the series with a talk Friday, Oct. 14, at 1 p.m. in the McGlothlin Moot Courtroom.

The Honorable Harry L. Carrico, Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Virginia, will speak on Monday, Jan. 23. Invitations to two additional speakers have been extended.

"We are thrilled at the willingness of these distinguished jurists to spend time with our students in Williamsburg," said Thomas G. Krattenmaker, dean of the law school. "We think it is a joy and a privilege for our students to get to meet these remarkable leaders of the legal profession. After all, law students spend thousands of hours reading judicial opinions. We think it is important that they be able to meet the men and women who write them."

All presentations in the Judges Forum will be open to the public, and most will be held at the law school.

College Climbs in U.S. News Overall Rankings

The College of William and Mary has improved its national standing in rankings announced Monday by U.S. News and World Report.

The College was ranked number 38 overall out of 229 national universities, compared to number 41 last year.

Rankings are based on such "attributes" as SAT scores, faculty/student ratio and high school graduation rates.

Ball 'Personally Impressed' By William and Mary

Ball's decision to carve out the Middle East portion of his library for the College partially stemmed from his long-term relationship with Bill. In December 1978, the career statesman called Bill, an expert on Iran, to the White House as a foreign policy consultant. At the time, President Jimmy Carter had solicited Ball's advice on United States policy toward Iran.

Over the years, Bill stayed in touch with Ball. After he had arrived at the College in 1987, Bill decided to begin writing a biography on Ball's career, which spanned 45 years of government service. He served as undersecretary of state and as U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations during the Kennedy and Johnson administrations.

In April 1988, Ball visited the College to deliver the first George Tayloe Ross lecture. Best known for his opposition to the escalation of the Vietnam War, Ball, during his lecture at the College, accurately predicted the imminent end of the Cold War and the breakup of the Soviet Union.

"Extraordinary vision" was one of the many hallmarks of Ball's distinguished political career, according to Bill.

Today, Ball's son Douglas continues to forward materials to the College from his father's library. Because Douglas must sift through more than 60 years of collected items, Bill anticipates Ball's donation to be even greater than initially anticipated.

"George Ball was personally impressed by what William and Mary had accomplished in the area of international and Middle East studies," said Bill. "His generous gift will be an enormous help to us as we go about building one of the leading Middle East studies programs in the United States."

Media Distort Clinton's Foreign Policy Record, Say Ward, Fritts

threats to use force in Bosnia and Haiti, has cost the United States much credibility abroad, both suggested.

"The military junta in Haiti would probably have been gone some time ago had it not been for a lack of credibility on the part of American foreign policy," said Fritts.

Fritts added that the administration got into the position where it had to oust the junta, by force if necessary, to restore the image of effective American international leadership.

Fritts said he believes the administration is setting a precedent of "forcible humanitarian intervention" for U.S. foreign policy.

"The administration's approach is the logical conclusion to two decades of the escalating focus on human rights as the issue for the international community," he added.

Fritts reminded his audience that Clinton expressed little interest in foreign policy in the 1992 presidential campaign.

Of his 159 campaign promises, only 29 related to foreign policy matters.

Despite several significant failures, Ward and Fritts said they believe that the media have distorted the president's overall foreign policy record by focusing excessively on Clinton's policies toward such countries as Bosnia, Haiti, Rwanda, Somalia, and giving little attention to his successes or his foreign policy agenda.

Between them, the speakers cited Clinton foreign policy accomplishments in at least eight areas including brokering agreements for the denuclearization of Russia and the Ukraine, pushing for the full withdrawal of Russian troops from Latvia, the passage of NAFTA, ending the recent Cuban immigration crisis, delinking human rights from trade issues in China, facilitating peace negotiations among conflicting parties in Northern Ireland and the Middle East, and successful conclusion of the latest round of GATT negotiations.

"In many ways, Mickey Kantor, the president's trade negotiator, has been more important [to Clinton's foreign policy successes] than Secretary of State Warren Christopher," said Ward.

While often applied inconsistently, Clinton's foreign policy agenda is relatively well defined, Ward said. He said the president believes world peace and improvements in human rights hinge on the expansion of liberal market economies.

Under Clinton's leadership, U.S. foreign policy has evolved from dealing with countries on an individual basis to a broader "transnational" approach, Fritts said. "Conventional country-by-country issues are now being supplanted by broader foreign policy issues," he said. "The water's edge is no longer sharply defined."

Fritts compared Clinton to every modern Democratic president since Kennedy whose foreign policy troubles resulted in part from an inability to apply general principles to specific problems.

"Principles are not policies, and policies are not decisions," Fritts said. "It's the decisions that count."

Ward added that, despite calls for leadership in foreign policy, "they [Congress and the American people] won't allow the president to act."

The International Relations Club and the Reves Center for International Studies sponsored Ward's and Fritts' talks titled "The Learning Curve and Clinton's Foreign Policy." Continuing the 1994 Fall Lecture Series, James Bill, director of the Reves Center, will deliver a lecture tonight at 7:30 in Rogers 100 titled "From the Atlantic to the Pacific: The Power of Revolutionary Islam."

English

Assistant Professor Nancy Schoenberger and adjunct professor Sam Kashner published a biography in May titled A Talent For Genius, The Life and Times of Oscar Levant (Villard Books/Random House, 1994). Since the book was published, Schoenberger and Kashner have appeared on National Public Radio's "Weekend Edition Sunday" and "Performance Today," as well as Voice of America's "Critics Choice." The Los Angeles Times Book Review, The New York Times, The Washington Post, The San Francisco Chronicle and The Jewish Daily Forward have all reviewed the biography. Later this month, the two will appear on a segment of "Entertainment Tonight."

Schoenberger and Kashner have been invited to attend the annual Pittsburgh Post-Gazette Book & Author Dinner on Oct. 12, an event in which the newspaper and B. Dalton Bookseller invite four authors reviewed in the current year to discuss their books and be honored by a dinner benefiting the Children's Hospital of Pittsburgh. Schoenberger and Kashner have also been invited to discuss their subject at the Jewish Book Fair in Pittsburgh on Nov. 21. The biography has just gone into a second printing.

History

Doctoral candidates Lynn A. Nelson, L. Jeffrey Perez and David A. Rawson had articles published in the spring 1994 edition of Locus: Local and Re- gional History of the Americas. The essays were originally part of a festschrift presented at the Mid-America History Conference in September 1992. The panel focused on land-use issues in 18th-century Virginia. Nelson's paper examined long-standing suppositions of soil exhaustion from tobacco cultivation in 18th-century York County; Perez's paper examined the town petition and formation process in post-Revolutionary Virginia; Rawson's paper examined the use of settlement as a defensive buffer in the early 18th-century Virginia piedmont.

Rawson also presented a paper at the annual conference of the Society for Historians of Authorship, Reading, and Publishing (SHARP), held at the Center for the Book at the Library of Congress in July. Rawson's paper, "The Williamsburg Printing Office: A Social and Economic View of the Customers of William Hunter and Joseph Royle," examined a variety of market changes seen within the customer base of the Williamsburg printing office between 1750 and 1766.

Doctoral candidate Robert W. Smith presented a paper at the annual conference of the Society for Historians of American Foreign Relations (SHAFR), held at Bentley College in June. Smith's paper, "An Ex-Federalist Abroad: John Quincy Adams and the Development of American Diplomacy, 1809-1817," addressed the political philosophy underlying American foreign policy in the early 19th century.

Doctoral candidate Matthew R. Laird had an article published in the winter 1993 edition of the Canadian Review of Studies. Laird's essay, "Nativist American Humour: Sam Slick and the Defense of New England Whig Culture," explored the hostile reaction of New England intellectuals to the cultural incursion of a reknown Canadian humorist in the 1830s.

Sociology

Kathleen Slevin, associate professor, has had an article titled "Women in Retirement: A Review and Critique of Empirical Research since 1976" accepted for publication in Sociological Inquiry (Vol. 65, No. 1, Feb. 1995). It is co-authored with gerontologist C. Ray Wingrove, University of Richmond. Slevin and Wingrove also will present a paper, "Successful African-American Women in Retirement," at the Gerontological Society of America annual meeting in Atlanta in November.

School of Business

Associate Professor John F. Bosehen's paper "Tests of Long-Run Neutrality Using Permanent Monetary and Real Shocks" has been accepted for publication in the Journal of Monetary Economics.

Counseling Center

Philip Meilman, director of the Counseling Center, recently co-wrote two articles: "Black College Students and Binge Drinking," by Meilman, Cheryl A. Presley and Rob Lyerla, published in The Journal of Blacks in Higher Education, No. 4, Summer 1994, pp. 70-71; "Development of the Core Alcohol and Drug Survey: Initial Findings and Future Directions," by Cheryl A. Presley, Meilman and Rob Lyerla, published in the Journal of American College Health, Vol. 42, No. 6, 1994, pp. 248-255.

Speech Communication Program And Women's Studies

Instructor Tamara Burk delivered a paper titled "Feminist Pedagogy/Feminist Praxis: Overcoming Obstacles and Making It Work" at the National Women's Studies Association Conference held in Ames, Iowa, in June. Burk also presented a paper this August at the Speech Communication Association's Summer Conference on "Assessing College Student Competency in Speech Communication" held in Alexandria. Burk's paper was titled "When Your Resources Are Limited: Using Assessment and Curricular Reform to Develop an Efficient Oral Communication Program at The College of William and Mary."

Sears CEO Stops By College

Arthur C. Martinez, chairman and CEO of Sears Merchandise Group, spoke to 30 senior executives of the company Monday who are attending a program this week hosted by the Center for Executive and Professional Development in the School of Business. Titled "Strategic Management in Sears' Changing Retail Environment," the series of seminars includes class instruction by Professor of Business Lawrence Ring and Douglas Tigert, professor of business at Babson College.

Family Weekend Activities Gear Up Friday

The College has planned a variety of activities surrounding the traditional Family Weekend which will take place Sept. 23-24.

A program Friday afternoon will provide family members of first-year students the opportunity to question a panel of faculty and administrators about the College experience.

Following this program, President and Mrs. Sullivan will host a reception for students and family members. Friday evening, students will conduct a lantern tour of the "Old Campus" and the Sir Christopher Wren Building for family members.

A number of faculty will serve on panel discussions on a wide range of topics Saturday morning. Some of the topics include a mid-term report on President Clinton and Congress, and a seminar featuring recent alumni on "Life After William and Mary."

Saturday afternoon, William and Mary will host the Virginia Military Institute in a football game at Zable Stadium, followed in the evening by a jazz concert featuring Ellis Marsalis (see pg. 4 for more information).

For a complete schedule of Family Weekend events, call ext. 11244.

Student Association Sponsors Voter Registration Drive

The Student Association will sponsor a voter registration drive Sept. 26-30 from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. each day. Individuals may register in the University Center on Monday, Wednesday and Friday, Sept. 26, 28 and 30. The Campus Center will be the location for Tuesday and Thursday, Sept. 27 and 29.

Any qualified residents of the Commonwealth of Virginia may register to vote. Virginia absentee ballot applications will also be available.

Virginia voter registration is also available at the Office of Residence Life in the Campus Center where qualified residents may also obtain absentee ballot applications.

The deadline for registering to vote in time for the Nov. 8 General Election is Tuesday, Oct. 11 at 5 p.m.

To Members of the College Community,

This Monday, Sept. 26, marks the launch of the annual Combined Virginia Campaign. As many of you know, the CVC helps non-profit health and human service agencies, including the Williamsburg United Way. The College of William and Mary is proud to participate once again in this communitywide effort. I encourage all of you to support this Campaign and to touch the lives of our neighbors in need.

These are tough times, and I know that many of you are feeling the pinch. However, there are people out there—some in our own community—for whom these are times of desperation. The CVC needs people to give more, and it needs more people to give.

Last year's campaign was a great success: the College community contributed more than $69,000. But at the same time that I thank the more than 700 donors who gave so generously last year, I want to ask all of you to dig a little deeper this year, to think about the desperate plight of some of our neighbors, and to find it in your heart to help them.

I hope you will join me in ensuring that the 1994 Campaign reaches its goal of $74,000. When a coordinator from the College contacts you, please give what you can. Your gifts will make the Williamsburg area a better place in which to work and live.

Most cordially,

Timothy J. Sullivan

Virginia Space Grant Consortium Announces Scholarship/Fellowships

Students pursuing studies in fields related to aerospace may qualify for scholarships and fellowships offered by the Virginia Space Grant Consortium for the 1995-96 academic year.

To encourage young people to study engineering and the sciences, the Virginia Space Grant Consortium has established undergraduate scholarships and graduate fellowships. A minimum of $181,000 is awarded annually to qualifying students in aerospace-related disciplines at the five Virginia Space Grant Colleges, which include William and Mary.

The scholarship and fellowship awards require that a student participate in an active, identified research experience with a faculty adviser.

A major goal of the Consortium is to help develop the engineers and scientists of the future. Applications from females, underrepresented minorities and the disabled are particularly encouraged.

Undergraduate students may receive a maximum of $8,500 which includes a stipend, travel and materials to support research activities conducted during the academic year and/or through the summer. Eligibility for the scholarship award is not limited to science and engineering majors. Any undergraduate major that includes coursework related to an understanding of, or interest in, aerospace is eligible. Students must have completed their second year of undergraduate study. Scholarship awards are not renewable.

The graduate fellowships are $5,000 add-on awards designed to supplement and enhance basic non-federal graduate research support. Graduate students must be pursuing a degree in an aerospace-related field, such as science or engineering. Fellowship awards are made annually and are renewable up to a total of three years.

Completed scholarship and fellowship applications must be received by Jan. 20, 1995. Application packets, which provide complete details of the programs, may be obtained from the Virginia Space Grant Consortium, 2713-D Magruder Boulevard, Hampton, VA 23666; 1-865-0726.

News Publication

The next issue of the William and Mary News will be published Wednesday, Sept. 28. All ads and items should be submitted by Friday, Sept. 23 at 5 p.m. to the News office in Holmes House or via e-mail at wmnews@mail.wm.edu.
