Four New Members Named To BOV

Four new members have been appointed by Gov. George Allen to the William and Mary Board of Visitors. Included are J. Peter Clements, The Honorable Holland Coors, The Honorable Lawrence Eagleburger, and William Fricks. In addition, the governor reappointed Walter Zable to his second four-year term on the board.

"Gov. Allen's new appointments to the board bring to the College a variety of skills and experience," said President Timothy Sullivan. "We look forward to their advice and support.

"As we welcome these new members to the William and Mary board, I want to recognize the great leadership and service provided to the College by the departing board members—James Murray Jr., Shepard McKenney, James Vergara, and William Spong Jr. Each of them has been particularly helpful during my first four years as president, and I am grateful. I am also delighted that the governor saw fit to reappoint Walter Zable to the board."

and president of Women of Our Hemisphere Achieving Together.

Eagleburger was secretary of state for President George Bush, and recently visited campus to serve as a speaker in the conference jointly hosted by the Thomas Jefferson Public Policy Program and NATO's Supreme Commander Atlantic.

Fricks is chairman and CEO of Newport News Shipbuilding and Drydock. He earned an M.B.A. from the William and Mary School of Business in 1970.

*Senate finance
co-chair takes stock
of library needs*

The Hon. John Chichester, co-chair of the state senate finance committee, visited campus June 20-21 and learned of the College's budget initiatives.

Much of his time was spent in special collections at Swem Library where he looked at a number of pieces from the recently acquired collection of Warren Burger's papers. Chichester viewed Burger's honorary law degree given by William and Mary in 1973, a hat and gloves used by the former chief justice in the inauguration of President Dwight Eisenhower, a volume of Burger's major opinions, and a 1931 test booklet from his law school days.

This year, William and Mary secured $1.25 million in money from the General Assembly to plan the expansion and renovation of Swem Library. Twenty-six million dollars in state money is needed for the project to move ahead fully. Included in that request is $6 million for a new special collections wing.

Also during his visit, Chichester toured Tercentenary Hall and the applied science laboratory.

Burger Papers On C-SPAN

C-SPAN, the national public affairs cable television network, will broadcast a program on the gift of the papers and memorabilia of U.S. Chief Justice Warren Burger to the College. Slated to debut Aug. 3 from 7 to 8 p.m., the program features Dean of University Libraries Nancy Marshall and President Timothy Sullivan. The program will be re-broadcast throughout the weekend of Aug. 3-4 on both C-SPAN and C-SPAN 2.

Nancy Marshall shows Sen. Chichester the honorary degree that Warren Burger received from the College. The document is one of more than two million items from the Burger collection that is being housed in special collections at Swem Library.

Brian Hyde leads the pack in a 1500m race at the 1995 NCAA championships.

Hyde Wins Olympic Bid

Brian Hyde '96 was named yesterday to the U.S. men's Olympic track team. He will compete in the 1500-meter race, with the first heat scheduled for July 29, the semifinals on Aug. 1 and the finals Aug. 3 in Atlanta.

Finishing in fifth place at the U.S. trials on June 23, Hyde originally didn't qualify for the Olympics. But having met the Olympic qualifying time in an earlier race, Hyde earned a third-place spot on the team when two of the competitors ahead of him in the June 23 competition failed to post the standard Olympic time of 3:38.00 by July 15.

Hyde, a native of Kentwood, Mich., enjoyed an All-American career as a member of the Tribe track and field program and is the current American collegiate record holder in the 1500m. His fastest time in the 1500m came at the UNC Twilight Invitational in 1995 when he ran 3:35.84.

Feds Hire Law Professor To Predict Future Copyright Problems On Internet

The Internet's immediacy and ease of use have enabled the worldwide computer network to become one of the fastest growing forms of communication. With a few computer commands, writers and editors can copy electronic information and transmit it around the globe at the speed of light. The same factors that make electronic publishing so popular, however, also contribute to one of the Net's thorniest issues: how to preserve the principle of copyright when the computer and the network have made copying and distributing documents, photographs, artwork, movies and even music easier than ever.

"If we allow electronic technology to erode the copyright principle, we risk destroying much of the incentive that has stimulated artistic creativity over the years," says Professor of Law Trotter Hardy. Hardy has just been hired as a consultant by the U.S. Copyright Office to peer into the electronic future to determine what new forms of communication might spring from the Internet and to identify problems for the agency and Congress so they can develop ways to deal with the new realities.

With several legislative proposals to amend the copyright laws before Congress and more coming, the need for a long-term examination of the Internet of tomorrow is particularly pressing today.

"Without monetary incentive, many writers, musicians, and artists could not continue to practice their skills, and we would all be deprived of the richness of their work," says Hardy. "On the other hand, one reason the Net is so useful is that a huge amount of information is freely available. We don't want to lock up that information from easy access."

The Copyright Office approached Hardy in April with the possibility of his consulting on these issues. "It took a couple of months to work out the details and the paperwork," he notes, "but thanks to the help of the law school, I'll be able to go on leave for the fall semester and concentrate full time on copyright issues."

"Some experts argue that the ease with which material can be copied and distributed on the Internet is leading directly to the death of copyright," observes Hardy. "Others argue that the principle remains the same, and that what we should do is to strengthen penalties for infringement. The current ambiguity has

BOV Approves Key Appointments

Okays policies to continue decentralization of higher ed management

The Board of Visitors met via a special telephonic meeting at Blow Memorial Hall June 27 to make key appointments for the 1996-97 academic year and to adopt two policies supporting decentralization of the management of higher education institutions in the Commonwealth.

Mark Fowler, associate professor of philosophy, was named dean of undergraduate studies in the faculty of arts and sciences, and Franz Gross, professor of physics, was named dean of research and graduate studies in the faculty of arts and sciences.

Fowler holds both bachelor's and master's degrees from California State University at Los Angeles, and a Ph.D. from Princeton University. Gross holds a B.A. from Swarthmore College and a Ph.D. from Princeton University.

Board members also approved the appointment of Bonnie Kelm, current director of the Miami (of Ohio) Art Museum, to director of the Muscarelle Museum of Art and associate professor of art and art history; and L. Donelson Wright, acting dean of the School of Marine Science/director of the Virginia Institute of Marine Science (VIMS), to dean/director of that institution. Wright has been at VIMS since 1982.

Board members also approved two members of the William and Mary faculty for designated professorships: John Boschen, a professor at William and Mary since 1988, was named the Brinkley-Mason Professor of Business Administration; and James Stronge was named the Heritage Professor of Education. Boschen holds a Ph.D. from Brown University. Stronge, who has been at William and Mary since 1989, holds a doctorate from the University of Alabama.

The board also approved two policies designed to continue the decentralization of higher education management, as authorized by the governor and the General Assembly. The first was a policy governing the implementation of nongeneral fund capital projects. Under the provisions of the new policy, the College will manage such projects after they have been approved by the General Assembly and the governor. The second policy adopted by the board gives

William and Mary officials the authority to execute leases for needed facilities.

"These new policies set up a rigorous review process that will ensure that capital projects and leases are managed in a business-like manner," said Samuel Jones, vice president for management and budget. "The policies are the next logical step in the decentralization of higher education institutions, following the earlier decentralization of the purchasing and payroll functions."

Other appointments approved by the board included: Louise Kale, current registrar at the Muscarelle Museum of Art, to executive director of the historic campus; Bramble Klipple, William and Mary's assistant director for annual support, to assistant director of corporate and foundation relations; Melissa Liles, assistant registrar at the Muscarelle Museum of Art, to registrar at the Muscarelle; and J. David Mays, former assistant director of campaigns and planned giving at Colorado State University, to associate director of gift planning.

In other action, board members approved a resolution to hire an investment management firm, Delaware Investment Advisers of Philadelphia, to oversee endowments at William and Mary and Richard Bland College. Delaware Investment Advisers began work July 1.

The following professors were also appointed to fill vacancies in the instructional faculty: Christopher Bailey, assistant professor of geology; Reginald Brown, assistant professor of physics and applied science; Jill Burruss, assistant professor of education; Eva Busza, instructor of government; Daniel

Car Accident Kills Two, Injures College Student

Two students enrolled in a William and Mary summer program in international law were killed and five others were injured in an automobile accident near Pamplona, Spain, on July 7. The seven students were on a personal trip, reportedly to see the famed running of the bulls in Pamplona.

The individuals who were killed were law students at other American universities and, like the car's other occupants, were taking summer courses in law offered by William and Mary in Madrid.

Only one full-time William and Mary law student, Mark Ramos, was in the car at the time of the accident and was hospitalized. He was discharged and has returned to Madrid. The other four, who are enrolled at various American universities, were also hospitalized, some with serious injuries. Occupants of another car involved in the accident were treated and released.

"The College is deeply saddened to learn of this accident," said President Timothy Sullivan. "We are hopeful that the injured recover fully, and we add our condolences to the families of the bereaved."

Each summer, William and Mary offers international law courses at three sites abroad: Madrid, Spain; Exeter, England; and Adelaide, Australia. Each program enrolls students from a number of universities.

Cristol, assistant professor of biology; Monica Griffin, instructor of sociology; David Leslie, professor of education; Jack Martin, assistant professor of English; Brent Owens, assistant professor of geology; Gul Ozyegin, assistant professor of sociology and women's studies; Ronald Schechter, assistant professor of history; Nancy Schoenberger, assistant professor of English; and Shiwei Zhanz, assistant professor of applied science and physics.

In other action, board members approved the appointment of Rodger Bates as provost and dean of the faculty at Richard Bland College. Bates, a professor of sociology and currently dean of the faculty at Pikeville College, holds a bachelor's degree from William and Mary.

State Outlaws Use Of Computers To View Sexually Explicit Material

A recently enacted law (§ 2.1-804 et seq. of the Code of Virginia) requires that each state agency notify its employees that this law prohibits the use of state-owned or leased computer equipment to access files, materials or services with sexually explicit content. Exceptions may be made for research projects approved in advance and in writing by the appropriate vice president, dean or director. Such approvals will be available to the public under the provisions of the Virginia Freedom of Information Act.

'96 Graduate Named Miss Virginia

After Michelle Kang '96 was crowned Miss Virginia in Roanoke on June 29, Stewart Gamage '72, vice president for public affairs, told her administrative assistant, Lillian Kelly, "There's no doubt in my mind who will be crowned Miss America."

Gamage and Kelly came to know Kang well while she worked as a student intern in their office during her senior year. In addition, Kang baby-sat for Kelly's two children.

Kelly gushes about Kang's strong qualities as a person.

"I have never met anyone like her," says Kelly. "She is so well-rounded, creative and intelligent, and she gets down in the trenches to help children who have been abused."

A sociology major with a minor in music, Kang, 21, won a $13,000 scholarship that she plans to use to attend law school and study public policy after she represents Virginia in the Miss America pageant in Atlantic City, N.J., in September. Those plans, of course, could be delayed if she wins the Miss America contest.

Kang qualified for the Miss Virginia Pageant by winning the Miss Apple Blossom Festival in January. She is a court-appointed special advocate for abused children and said she plans to use her year as Miss Virginia to promote child abuse prevention.

A skilled pianist, she defeated 23 other contestants in the pageant. Kang will have an apartment in Roanoke and the use of a new Chevrolet for the year of her reign.

New Controls Established Over Funds Disbursement

Following a review of the internal controls and procedures for disbursement of institution funds, the College has established new controls for the purchase and procurement of goods and services.

The department chair/head is required to authorize all department procurements and review and approve each disbursement voucher. A second individual would be responsible for ordering and receiving the goods or services.

The College recognizes the significant number of small dollar departmental purchases that occur during the year. For this reason, the department chair/head may delegate procurement authorization and voucher approval authority for purchases below $100. The fundamental separation of authority, however, must be maintained and the department chair/head must regularly monitor budgets and disbursements.

By ensuring that one individual does not have complete authority over all aspects of the procurement, receipt and payment for goods and services, these measures are ultimately designed to protect the assets of the College more fully.

New WWW pages will begin to be unveiled in August

The College will debut a redesigned and reorganized World Wide Web site later this summer. The changes, including a consolidation of existing categories on the home page and a standard appearance for William and Mary pages, are part of an ongoing effort to raise the College's visibility and to promote consistency of graphic design and message.

The revision of the Web is the responsibility of the Office of University Relations and the Office of Information Technology. Individual schools, departments, and offices will be responsible for generating their own text, which will be placed in electronic templates available on the Web.

"Our primary audience is the thousands of young people who often surf the Web looking for colleges to which they may apply. The new design was developed both to appeal to this audience and to represent the College effectively and accurately in the national marketplace," said William Walker, director of university information.

"An introduction to the College and the admission segment will be the first sections to be completed; they will be posted later this summer. Associate Provost Bob Noonan and I would be pleased to meet with interested groups to solicit their advice and to offer assistance," added Walker.

By mid-August—when the new page is operational and proce-

The introductory section of the new Web site will contain a self-guided campus tour, and the admission pages will feature video clips from "A Place of Possibilities," the recently-completed admission video. A campus calendar will also be available. Using the Web, members of the College community will be able to fill out an electronic form about their public events and submit them for posting to the site.

Williamson Named Coordinator Of Legal Affairs

Richard Williamson, Chancellor Professor at the Marshall-Wythe School of Law, has been appointed coordinator of legal affairs at the College. The appointment was announced by President Timothy Sullivan, who said that Williamson will also continue to hold a full-time faculty appointment in the law school.

"I am pleased that Professor Williamson has agreed to take on these additional responsibilities," said Sullivan. "The Office of the Attorney General will continue to serve as the College's counsel, and Professor Williamson will act in an administrative capacity to expedite communications to that office."

Williamson will assist College personnel to communicate matters of legal concern more effectively to the Office of the Attorney General. College employees who have questions about policies or who anticipate changes in standing policies should contact him.

Williamson earned his law degree at the Ohio State University College of Law and came to William and Mary as an assistant professor of law in 1972. He has since served as associate dean and vice dean of the School of Law.

DEPARTMENTS & SCHOLARS

Chemistry

The Camille and Henry Dreyfus Foundation has awarded Associate Professor Chris Abelt one of five nationally competitive Henry Dreyfus Teacher-Scholar Awards for 1996. Abelt will receive a $60,000 unrestricted grant from the foundation to support his research and teaching.

Recommendations for awards are based on a faculty member's achievements and demonstration of continued commitment to the encouragement and support of undergraduates in the chemical profession through teaching and research. A panel of distinguished faculty in the chemical sciences reviews the nominees.

In his 10 years at the College, Abelt has been awarded more than $600,000 in research grants from various agencies. He was named a William and Mary Alumni Fellow in 1991 and last summer, helped to organize the 34th National Organic Symposium.

Gary DeFotis, Garrett-Robb-Guy Professor of Chemistry, had the following papers published recently: "Magnetic Properties of $\text{Fe}[\text{S}_2\text{CNC}_4\text{H}_8\text{O}]_2\text{X}$, X=Cl, Br, I," in the March 1 issue of the Journal of Magnetism and Magnetic Materials, with former undergraduate student co-authors William Jarvis, Steve Terranova, Vincent Pugh, Jennie Marmorino, Brian Hogg and Traci Jensen, and former Dreyfus Fellow Edgar Harlan; "Concentration Dependent Critical Behavior in Dilute Ferromagnetic $\text{Fe}_{1-x}\text{As}_x[\text{S}_2\text{CN}(\text{C}_2\text{H}_5)_2]_2\text{Cl}$ " in the April 15 issue of the Journal of Applied Physics, with former undergraduate student co-authors Greg Coffey, George Coker, Jennie Marmorino, Kathryn Beers, Sarat Chandralapaty, William Brubaker and Vincent Pugh, and with two colleagues at the Royal Institution, London; and "NiBr₂•3H₂O, A Lower Dimensional Antiferromagnet," in the April 15 issue of the Journal of Applied Physics, with former undergraduate student co-authors Joanna Goodey, Amy Narducci and Michael Welch.

DeFotis also chaired the session on one-, two- and three-dimensional solids at the March national meeting of the American Chemical Society in New Orleans, and presented two papers there: "Magnetic Properties and Spin

English faculty gave a number of papers at the American Literature Association meeting in San Diego, May 29-June 2, 1996. Joanne Braxton, Frances L. and Edwin L. Cummings Professor of American Studies and professor of English, offered "It Was Not Lady Like": Harriet Beecher Stowe Meets the Outraged Mother," a paper written under her direction and given by a graduate student at the University of Pittsburgh. Elsa Nettels, Mildred and J.B. Hickman Professor of English and Humanities, presented a paper on "The Older Woman as Portrayed by Edith Wharton and Henry James." Professor Kenneth Price and master's student Charles Green offered a session titled "Toward a Walt Whitman Hypertext Archive," describing the Whitman Archive based at the College. Professor Robert Scholnick spoke on "Respectable Old Blockheads": Science and Society in the North American Review, 1845-1860."

While a visiting professor at the University of Pittsburgh in the spring, Joanne Braxton offered a workshop, "Seeking the Ancestral Voice in Our Writing: That Which Bears Witness to Our Past, Our Present, Our Future." The Western Pennsylvania Writing Project sponsored the workshop.

Associate Professor Nancy Gray presented a paper titled "Witness for the Postmodern" at the 20th Century Literature Conference in Louisville, Ky., in February.

Associate Professor Christopher MacGowan has recently given two papers: "The Long Stem of Connection: Denise Levertov and the County of Essex," at a meeting of the Southern Humanities Council in Richmond, Ky., and "Ford Madox Ford's Virginia," at the March meeting of the Virginia Humanities Conference in Charlottesville.

Assistant Professor Adam Potkay spoke at the American Society for 18th-Century Studies conference in Austin, Texas, in March on "The Cunning of the Passions in Hume's 'History of England.'"

Professor Kenneth Price has had published Walt Whitman: The Contemporary Reviews by Cambridge University Press. The volume gathers virtually all the contemporaneous reviews of Whitman's books and documents, the poet's immediate reception, as well as the forces and patterns that shaped his career.

A book published by Talbot Taylor, the Louise G.T. Cooley Professor of English and Linguistics, titled Mutual Understanding: Scepticism and the Theorizing of Language and Interpretation (Duke University, 1992), has recently been translated into Italian and published by Biblioteca de Cultura Moderna Laterza.

Master's student Michelle Beal presented a paper titled "Jamaica Kincaid and the Search for an Identity: (Re)writing the Body within a Caribbean Context," at the International Conference of Caribbean Women Writers and Scholars, April 24-27 in Miami.

Master's student Rebecca Eldridge Hurst spoke at a conference on American poetry in the 1950s on "Theodore Roethke's Oedipal Rivalry with T.S. Eliot," held at the University of Maine, June 19-23.

Master's student Charles Green gave a talk titled "The Walt Whitman Hypertext Archive: Pedagogical Horizons" at the American Studies Crossroads Project Summer Development workshop at Georgetown University on June 28.

Geology

The Association for Woman Geoscientists-Potomac Chapter recently awarded geology concentrators Heide Werner '96 and Zetherene Jones '96 two of its three scholarships for the year.

Three faculty members presented papers at the 1996 annual meeting of the Virginia Academy of Science. Research Associate C.R. Berquist presented "GIV and ABICAS (YM): Effective Software for Digital Geologic Mapping;" Professor Stephen Clement presented "The Use of Microdem in Teaching Geology;" Berquist, Clement and Professor Bruce Goodwin presented a paper on "Stratigraphic Variability of Radon, Southeastern Virginia." Goodwin served as secretary for the geology section of the Academy and was elected vice chair of the geology section for next year.

History

James Axtell, William R. Kenan Jr. Professor of History & Humanities and an authority on the ethnohistory of colonial North America, delivered in April the 58th series of Walter Lynwood

Fleming Lectures in Southern History at Louisiana State University. The topic of his three lectures was "The Indians' New South: Cultural Change in the Colonial Southeast."

The Fleming Lectures, endowed in 1937, are one of the oldest and most distinguished lecture series in the country. Axtell is only the fourth colonial historian to be chosen and the first to speak about the original southerners.

His first lecture described the rapid demise of the great mound-building Mississippian cultures in the wake of several Spanish entradas through the Southeast in the 16th century. The second analyzed the rise of Franciscan missions among the Indians of Florida and coastal Georgia in the 17th century and their sudden fall at the hands of English settlers and their Indian allies from Carolina. The final lecture traced the social and cultural consequences of native involvement in the deer-skin trade with the English and the Louisiana French in the 18th century.

Axtell's lectures will be published as a book by LSU Press in the spring of 1997.

Judith Ewell, Newton Family Professor of History, has had published a book titled Venezuela and the United States: From Monroe's Hemisphere to Petroleum's Empire (University of Georgia Press). In the study, Ewell provides a historical analysis of the main themes and directions of United States-Venezuelan relations from the early 1800s, when Simon Bolivar declared an American republican identity and Monroe proclaimed U.S. responsibility for the hemisphere, to the present, when Venezuelan relations with the United States reflect the growing importance of the developing world and its multilateral challenges to U.S. global hegemony.

Graduate student Mary Carroll Johansen presented a paper titled "Please God and Your Parents': Religion and Charity at Southern Female Universities, 1800-1840," at the American Educational Research Association annual meeting in New Orleans in April.

Music

Lecturer Burton Kester's ar-

arrangement Five Pieces from the Renaissance for Two Oboes and Two Bassoons or Two Oboes, English Horn and Bassoon, was recently published in the National Association of College Wind and Percussion Instructors, the official publication of the National Association of College Wind and Percussion Instructors. Kester's work is an arrangement of Renaissance songs for double reed quartet with two different instrumentation options.

Philosophy

Assistant Professor Paul Davies delivered a paper titled "Evolutionary Functions and Mental Content" at a meeting of the Pacific Division of the American Philosophical Association in Seattle.

Francis S. Haserot Professor of Philosophy James Harris delivered a paper titled "Individuating Gods," at the annual meeting of the Society for the Philosophy of Religion in Atlanta, Ga. He also read another paper titled "On What There Isn't" at a meeting of the Southern Society for Philosophy and Psychology in Nashville, Tenn. Professor Alan Fuchs commented on a paper at the same meeting, and Associate Professor Dorothy Coleman served as secretary of the meeting.

School of Business

Assistant Professor Kenneth Cheng presented a co-authored paper, "Optimal Software Pricing under Piracy and Network Externality," in an invited session at the INFORMS national meeting in Washington, D.C., on May 7.

Professor Henry Mallue presented a paper titled "Business and Substantive Due Process: The Nexus in Franklin Par" at the annual meeting of the North Atlantic Academy of Legal Studies in Business on April 27 at Bentley College.

Associate Dean Lawrence Pulley's co-authored a paper, "Cash, Paper, and Electronic Payments: A Cross-Country Analysis," that will be published in the Journal of Money, Credit, and Banking. Another of Pulley's co-authored papers, "Do Consumers Pay for One-Stop Banking: Evidence from an Alternative Revenue Function," will be published in the Journal of Banking and Finance. Pulley's co-authored article titled "Banks Responses to Deregulation: Profits, Technology and Efficiency" has also been accepted for publication in the Journal of Money, Credit and Banking.

Professor Ronald Sims's article "Lessons Learned From the Reinvention of Training in Two Federal Agencies" was published in the International Journal of Public Administration.

Associate Professor John Strong's book, Moving to Market: Restructuring Transport in the Former Soviet Union, was published by Harvard University Press. The study examines the state of transportation in Russia, the Ukraine and the other republics in the former Soviet Union.

Wanda Wallace, The John N. Dalton Professor of Business Administration, and G. Thomas White, accounting program coordinator, and Victor Jarvis of BellSouth Corporation had their case no. 95-09 "The Evolving Role of the Audit Committee: The Case of BellSouth Corporation," with accompanying teaching notes, published by the American Institute of Certified Public Accountants (AICPA) Case Development Program (1996). Wallace also co-authored an article titled "Evolving Financial Reporting Practices: A Comparative Study of the Nordic Countries' Harmonization Efforts" that has been published in Contemporary Accounting Research, The Journal of the Canadian Academic Accounting Association, vol. 11, spring 1995, pp. 972-997.

The American Institute of Certified Public Accountants published an educationally-oriented monograph titled "Stock-Based Compensation," authored by Wallace. In addition, it produced an audio cassette of a script Wallace wrote on "The Intuition of Option Valuation." The materials include a diskette of bibliographic material and abstracts that are tied to each chapter of the publication.

Wallace co-authored an article titled "Distinctive Characteristics of Entities with an Internal Audit Department and the Association of the Quality of Such Departments with Errors" that was reprinted in The International Library of Management: Internal Auditing, published by The Dartmouth Publishing Company Limited (1996, pp. 111-138).

The Journal of Accounting Education recently published Wallace's article "What Questions Must Be Answered to Evaluate Whether the 150-Hour Initiative is Progress" in vol. 14, no. 2, 1996, pp. 151-159.

A book review of Wallace's Auditing Third Edition (Southwestern College Publishing) appeared in Issues in Accounting Education (vol. 11, no. 1, spring 1996) as did a review of her text Financial Accounting, Second Edition, by the same publisher.

School of Education

James Patton, associate dean and associate professor, made an invited showcase presentation titled "Strategies for Leadership and Social Skill Development in Gifted African-American Youth" at the April Council for Exceptional Children conference in Orlando, Fla. At the conference, Patton was a co-leader of a "Multi-Cultural Summit" and panel member on "Culturally Specific Curriculums." Patton was also elected to the Board of Governors of this 57,000-member organization. Patton and graduate assistant David Cox recently received a $10,740 grant from the State Council for Higher Education in Virginia for Project Reclaim: Pyramid Builders.

School of Law

Professor Raj Bhala's book, International Trade Law Cases and Materials, has just been published by Michie Law Publishers.

Assistant Professor Mechele Dickerson recently participated in a panel on Ethical Issues in Tort Litigation, at a program on Personal Injury Practice held in Newport News. Paul Marcus, Haynes Professor of Law, moderated the panel.

John Donaldson, Ball Professor of Law, recently spoke at the Virginia district court judges conference on legislative developments affecting civil litigation. Donaldson recently had published two items in the Trusts and Estates Newsletter of the Virginia State Bar: "Review of Legislation Affecting Estate Planning and Administration Enacted During the 1996 Session of the Virginia General Assembly" and "Protection of Vulnerable Adults from Financial Exploitation—Recent and Pending Developments."

Associate Professor Davison Douglas has recently received a National Academy of Education Spencer Postdoctoral Fellowship for the 1996-97 academic year. The Spencer program is administered by Stanford University to support scholarship pertaining to education. Douglas will use his fellowship, which includes a $40,000 award, to study northern school desegregation during the era prior to Brown v. Board of Education. His article, "The Quest for Freedom in the Post-Brown South: Desegregation and White Self Interest," will be published in Critical White Studies: Looking Behind the Mirror in 1997.

Assistant Professor Walter Felton recently spoke on legislative developments in criminal law to the Statewide Victim/Witness Coordinator Training Conference, the Newport News Bar Association, the 1996 Spring Training Institute for Commonwealth's Attorneys and the Virginia District Court Judges Conference. He recently spoke on "Sovereign Immunity in Virginia" to the Northern Virginia Regional Judicial Conference and on "Juvenile Justice Reform and its Impact on Crime Victims" to the Department of Criminal Justice and the Virginia Network for Victims and Witnesses of Crime, Inc. Felton received a 1996 Legislative Award for outstanding service in the area of crime victims' legislation.

Professor Trotter Hardy has been named the scholar-in-residence and technical advisor to the Register of Copyrights in the U.S. Copyright Office. He will be in residence in Washington, D.C., through the end of 1996, analyzing

OFFICE OF ADMISSION

Assistant Dean Tackles Rigors Of Army Training

Joanna Pleasant tests her rappelling skills.

Assistant Dean of Admission Joanna Pleasant joined 13 cadets from the College's Revolutionary Guard ROTC Battalion last month for a portion of a six-week advanced training camp at Fort Bragg, NC.

Pleasant, who serves as a liaison between the admission office and the ROTC department, took part in a variety of exercises designed to test and hone the physical, mental and leadership skills of the participants. The program also helps the Army assess the cadets individually and determine their respective career paths following their graduation from college.

Highlights of Pleasant's four-day visit included a fire support demonstration involving Apache helicopters, howitzers and machine guns, squad level tactical missions and a grenade assault course.

Pleasant also observed aspects of Recondo training such as constructing a rope bridge to cross a local river and rappelling off 50-foot towers.

For her part, Pleasant took part in the "Slide for Life," a zipline rising 80 feet above the water that shoots its passengers into the depths below.

"I knew that there were mental and physical challenges involved with ROTC," said Pleasant, "but now I have a newfound respect for the cadets involved with this program."

More than 600 employees turned out July 11 in William and Mary Hall for the second annual Employee Appreciation Day. During the two-hour event,

President Timothy Sullivan thanked hourly and classified employees for their dedication to William and Mary and particularly cited the 102 employees who have worked here from five to 50 years. The president personally honored nine of those employees with a plaque marking their lengthy commitment.

They included:

Robert Brown, described by the president as an "official William and Mary tradition."

Brown, who has worked at the College longer than any other employee, has cooked meals for students since 1946.

"I have eaten many of your meals," said Sullivan, "and the happy result is that I am now in a position to thank you, on behalf of the William and Mary community, for your significant contributions to our shared tradition of excellence."

Deloris Crump who was recognized for 40 years of "care and concern."

Crump started at the College as a line server in Trinkle Hall and worked her way up to supervisor.

"You have proven yourself to be a model for others: reliable, responsible, loyal," Sullivan told the audience. "You have been the epitome of good customer service, always working with the best interests of our students in mind."

Thomasine Jackson characterized by the president as a "familiar and valued presence on our campus."

Jackson began her career in food service 35 years ago in Trinkle Hall. She eventually moved to the Dining Commons where she was promoted to shift supervisor. Jackson now oversees the Marketplace Food Court.

Roxie Greene who has put in 30 years in food service and worked in every food service location on campus.

"In all of those places, you have exhibited the same dependability and good cheer," said Sullivan.

Greene currently works as a food production associate at the University Center.

The president honored five employees for 25 years of service.

They included:

Della Harris who currently holds the position of supervisor in the faculty support center at the Marshall-Wythe School of Law.

In her position, Harris also served as assistant to Professor Paul Marcus, when he was acting dean.

Sullivan cited Harris for her ability to keep pace with changing technologies and increased scholarly activity over the years. "You have the respect and the affection of the faculty and staff of the law school," he said.

Diane Taylor who is the senior member of the production control staff at the Computer Center.

Taylor was cited for her dedication far beyond the call of duty. In July 1972, she delivered her daughter in Jones Hall. "[This made] William and Mary a part of your family in your own unique way, and prompted the College to give its employees longer breaks," noted Sullivan.

Gary Fannin, described by Sullivan as one who takes his work in facilities management "very seriously."

"You have been the kind of colleague one can count on—one who considers the emergency calls in the middle of the night just part of the job," said the president.

Clinton Jackson began his career with the College in buildings and grounds, where he was quickly promoted to vehicle operator before he took his present position as storekeeper assistant in the material management warehouse.

"Your colleagues praise your dedication, your friendly assistance and your jovial personality," said Sullivan.

Geri Ellis a systems engineer in the Computer Center who "keeps the administrative computing functions going."

Sullivan described her as a "warm, wonderful colleague who can make the technicalities of a highly technical field accessible to those you so ably support."

Geri and her husband are alumni of the College, and one of their daughters is a senior at William and Mary.

from the government so they can avoid lawsuits."

According to Hardy, such copyright issues are not unique to the advent of computers. They arise when any new medium is developed and its use proliferates.

"When radio became popular in the 1920s, for instance, some people thought that it no longer made sense to apply copyright to broadcast music. Of course, that proved not to be the case. But what happens when it becomes popular to transmit music over the Internet? Right now that is technically feasible, and we will soon have to determine whether additional royalties are owed when music is distributed over the computer," says Hardy.

He first began to study these complexities a few years ago, and has since founded the Journal of Online Law, which is appropriately distributed via the Internet and is consulted widely by experts throughout the country.

Although Hardy is reserving final judgment until he thoroughly studies all the issues over the next six months, he thinks, "if we need new laws, the trick will be to write them broadly enough to cover as many of the presently unforeseen eventualities as possible. Writing very specific laws is a futile exercise, because the technology is moving so quickly that it soon makes specific laws look laughably archaic."

VIMS Dedicates Fisheries Science Lab

State lawmakers honored for commitment to Bay

The Virginia Institute of Marine Science dedicated a 10,300-square-foot Fisheries Science Laboratory June 21 at Gloucester Point.

While highlighting the Institute's role on fisheries science, President Timothy Sullivan and VIMS Director L. Donelson Wright used the occasion to recognize

The Honorable Hunter Andrews, former state senator, and Del. Robert Ball Sr. for their dedicated support of VIMS and contributions to a healthy Chesapeake Bay and coastal environment.

Four retiring VIMS administrators were also cited during the program for their service. They include Henry Aceto Jr., associate dean of graduate studies; Robert Byrne, director for research and advisory services; George Hayes, director of facilities management; and Paul Koehly, associate director for planning and budget.

With a nearly $800,000 price tag, the much-needed Fisheries Science Laboratory replaces Jefferson Hall, which is being demolished as a result of the Coleman Bridge widening project. The facility includes seven laboratories, two administrative offices, 18 faculty offices, 10 graduate student offices, a freezer room and a computer room.

Research in the lab will focus largely on fisheries ecology, diseases and genetics. Turtles, sharks, shad and river herring are among some of the animals that will be studied.

"The investigation of living marine resources of the Chesapeake Bay and the Virginia Sea has been a dominating focus of the Virginia Institute of Marine Science/School of Marine Science for nearly 60 years," said Professor of Marine Science Eugene Burreson, chair of the fisheries science department. "In no active subject area has a continuing commitment to research, education and advisory service been so consistent as in fisheries science."

Kelly Headlines Opening Convocation

Kelly

Charles Kelly, 1995 Sullivan Award recipient and former Catholic Campus Minister, will be the keynote speaker at this year's Opening Convocation at the Sir Christopher Wren Building.

The ceremony is slated for Friday, August 30 at 11 a.m. to celebrate the opening of the 1996-97 academic session. Following the convocation and the traditional procession of new students through the Wren Portico, a picnic lunch with live entertainment will be held in the Wren Yard.

Charles Kelly, who was the Roman Catholic Campus Minister for William and Mary from 1987-95, is currently Vicar of the Cathedral of the Sacred Heart in Richmond. The focus of his remarks at the convocation will be the importance of community and service in the William and Mary experience.

NFL Stars Share Tips With Football Campers

Four NFL football players turned out at the third annual Colonial All-Pro Football Camp June 23-27 at the College sponsored by Nike.

Included in the lineup were defensive end Reggie White of the New Orleans Saints and quarterback Jim Kelly of the Buffalo Bills, who shared tips with the campers on defensive tactics and passing. The players also signed autographs and answered questions about what it takes to be a pro football player.

Cordell Stewart of the Pittsburgh Steelers and Willie Roaf of the New Orleans Saints made appearances as well.

About 180 kids from age eight to rising seniors in high school attended the camp which is run by Tribe head football coach Jimmye Laycock and his staff.

Reggie White demonstrates a defensive stance to a camper.

Senior Awarded CURSOR Fellowship

Rising senior Rebecca Casaubon, a chemistry concentrator, is the recipient of a Council on Undergraduate Research Summer Opportunities for Research (CURSOR) Fellowship. The award is administered by the Council on Undergraduate Research and provides a $2,800 student stipend plus an additional $500 for living expenses.

Casaubon's summer research project is an investigation of mechanism-based inhibition of peptidylglycine amidating monooxygenase. Her advisor is Assistant Professor of Chemistry Deborah Bebout.
