"Community At A Crossroads"

President cites mounting pressure on community growth

"In the coming decade, we will experience a sea change that could influence the course of this region in the next century as profoundly as the historic restoration did during this century," President Timothy Sullivan said in an unprecedented appearance at the Williamsburg City Council on Jan. 9.

In pledging the College's support to local governments wrestling with issues of regional growth and economic development, Sullivan stressed that the keys to success are comprehensive planning and close cooperation.

"Growth could consume us both, if we are not careful," Sullivan warned in citing the need for both Williamsburg and the College to "hold fast to their human scale." He went on to call attention to the need to ensure high quality of life through such actions as preserving green space, like Lake Matoaka and the College Woods. As an example of the way cooperation can preserve the quality of life, Sullivan cited the land exchange between the College and the city that helps protect the lake's watershed and an important entrance to Williamsburg off Route 199.

Sullivan said that the College, its faculty and graduates are among the region's prime economic assets, "a magnet for the jobs of the future." He pointed out that, two years ago, the College initiated an economic development program, which has been quite active with local governments, corporations, and other organizations. He also announced that he had employed a Cambridge-based consulting firm—Reamer and Associates—to inventory College assets that could be useful to economic development in the area. The firm's report should be ready in a few weeks.

Planning to meet the educational and training needs of the area will be even more demanding, said Sullivan, detailing efforts to form a partnership between the College, Thomas Nelson Community College and the public schools to assess needs and develop appropriate programs.

"Last fall," Sullivan related, "I asked TNCC President Shirley Pippins—and she agreed—to join with us to determine how we could best meet the education and training needs of the area. That task force has been appointed and its work is already under way."

TNCC currently uses William and Mary classrooms to deliver its

Choir To Perform At Inauguration

The William and Mary Choir, under the direction of James I. Armstrong Jr., will perform during President Bill Clinton's second inauguration on Jan. 20 in Washington, D.C. The 67-member choir is scheduled to perform with the president's own Marine Band at 10:34 a.m. on the western steps of the Capitol building, while members of Congress and other dignitaries are seated on the platform for the swearing-in ceremony.

"We're absolutely delighted and honored," said Armstrong.

"It's an exceptional honor for the choir to be able to represent The College of William and Mary, the community and the Commonwealth of Virginia."

Only one other college choir from Virginia, the Hampton University Choir, will perform at the pre-inaugural festivities when President Clinton is sworn in for his second term. Both choirs were invited to perform by Sen. John Warner, chairman of the Joint Congressional Committee on Inaugural Ceremonies.

The William and Mary Choir, which regularly tours the United States and Europe and has performed for such dignitaries as Britain's Queen Elizabeth II, will present a 10-minute program that includes: "Shenandoah," a traditional American song arranged by James Erb; "Ev'ry Time I Feel The Spirit," a spiritual arranged by Moses Hogan; and "The Last Words of David," a piece by 20th-century composer Randall Thompson.

In Memoriam Paul Clem, Professor of Education Emeritus

Paul Clem, professor of education emeritus, died Saturday, Dec. 28.

Retiring from the College in 1989, Clem joined the faculty in 1959. He served in a variety of teaching, counseling and administrative roles at William and Mary: as a faculty member and periodic coordinator of the graduate program in counseling, which gradually evolved to include master's, educational specialist and doctoral degree programs; as director of the College's summer session for more than a decade; as the liaison officer between the College and Richard Bland College during its early years; and as the creator of the Family Counseling Center in the School of Education, as well as director of financial aid, placement and support services in the School of Education.

Clem served as an appointed member of the Virginia Resource Commission for more than a decade.

He is survived by his wife of 50 years, Elizabeth Clem of Williamsburg; two daughters, two sisters and one grandson.

A graveside service was held Dec. 31 in the Thornrose Cemetery in Staunton.

Memorials may be made to the School of Education, College of William and Mary, P.O. Box 8795, Williamsburg, VA, 23187.

$1 Million Sought For Faculty Salaries

Allocation would provide faculty a six percent raise in 1997-98

When William and Mary officials visit the General Assembly during the next two months, they will have faculty and books on their minds—and a number of other needs in the 1997-98 budget.

While the College wants additional funding for such areas as technology enhancement and student financial aid, its top two goals are to increase faculty salaries and to obtain a $25 million commitment to renovate and expand Swem Library.

"The College is pursuing a two-track strategy," explained Stewart Gamage, vice president for public affairs. "First, we've joined forces with other colleges to increase higher education funding by $200 million. Second, we're laying the groundwork on an institution-specific basis to obtain the money for the library."

William and Mary's share of the statewide request of $200 million, known as the Presidents' Unified Amendment, would be $8 million, including almost a million dollars for faculty salary increases. That would give the faculty a 6 percent increase in 1997-98, to continue a four-year program to raise faculty salaries to the 60th percentile in the College's peer group. Universities are currently slated for only a 2 percent increase.

Other allocations for the College in the presidents' request include $4.4 million for technology, $660,000 for student financial aid and $2 million for College initiatives.

In the capital outlay area, the College's top priority is Swem Library, for which William and Mary received $1.25 million for planning from the last General Assembly. The College has already submitted 35 percent of the drawings to Richmond for reaction and, with the $25 million, could continue the project unabated for its year 2000 completion date.

Samuel Jones, vice president for management and budget, says there is "uniform support for the project" and the only question is whether the General Assembly can find the money to fund it.

"We've made our case to Richmond, and they understand and agree we need it," says Jones, who stresses that if the project isn't funded in this session, the cost will go up. "It gets more expensive every year we put it off," he added.

Jones is more confident that the General Assembly will address

VIMS Prof Helps Forge International Agreement On Tuna

A push to bring 24 countries in compliance with international regulations for the Atlantic tuna fishery proved successful at the annual meeting of the International Commission for the Conservation of Atlantic Tunas (ICCAT) held in late November in San Sebastian, Spain.

Associate Professor John Graves, chair of the Department of Fisheries Science, headed up the advisory committee to the U.S. ICCAT delegation, which sponsored a resolution requiring all ICCAT member nations to comply with existing catch quotas for bluefin tuna and swordfish.

Despite long-standing catch regulations, the Atlantic tuna fishery has been ravaged by overharvesting for the last 25 years. In the western Atlantic, population levels of bluefin tuna are 13 percent of the level that would provide the greatest production. Likewise, the populations of blue and white marlins are running below 25 percent of the level that would produce the maximum sustainable yield.

Agreement by the 24 member nations of ICCAT to strictly enforce harvest limits will provide the opportunity for depressed populations of Atlantic tunas, swordfish and marlins to rebuild from their current low levels. Under the new compliance resolution, trade sanctions can be applied to nations that exceed their quotas.

Graves, who has been studying the genetics and stock structure of tunas and billfish since 1986, has been working with the U.S. Advisory Committee to ICCAT since 1994. As chair, he worked to reach consensus among all those involved in the fishery in the United States that compliance with international quota regulations is essential to the long-term viability of the populations and their fisheries.

"We all agreed that several conservation measures, including quotas, haven't been followed and something had to be done," said Graves, who held six regional meetings along the U.S. Atlantic and Gulf coasts on the issue.

He added, "The compliance mechanism that we arrived at is the only one of its type for an international fishery. It will no doubt receive attention from many other fisheries over the next few years." ■

One of the animals that will benefit from the new agreement is the swordfish. A student of marine science, Sandra Blake Boles (left) has been working with John Graves to map the population genetics of swordfish in the Chesapeake Bay.

PBK Awards Go To Nataraj, Weitzman

Sita Nataraj, a senior economics major, has been awarded the Ann Callahan Chappell Award for 1996. The Phi Beta Kappa honor society annually presents the $5,000 award to the most outstanding undergraduate newly elected a member of Alpha of Virginia chapter. R. Harvey Chappell, former member of the Board of Visitors and rector of the College, created the endowment for the award in honor of his late wife.

Erica Suzanne Weitzman has been awarded the Fraser Neiman Scholarship as the outstanding senior English concentrator. The $1,000 scholarship, which was inaugurated last year, is named after a faculty member of the chosen department who excelled in undergraduate teaching. During his 42 years at William and Mary, Neiman earned an international standing in Victorian studies, with particular expertise in the work of Matthew Arnold.

Duke Award Recognizes Outstanding Employee Service

Family of former administrator establishes $5,000 annual award

Charles J. Duke Jr. was named College bursar in 1934.

Office managers, groundskeepers, accountants, cooks, technicians, police officers and secretaries—they're the people who keep The College of William and Mary humming, and they deserve our appreciation on a continuing basis. Thanks to a generous gift from Mr. and Mrs. Charles B. Duke of Webster, N. Y., the College will now be able to recognize these individuals through the Charles and Virginia Duke Award, which will be awarded annually to a non-student, non-instructional-faculty employee who has demonstrated exceptional devotion to the College.

Nominations are now being solicited by the provost's office for recipients of the first Duke Award, named to honor Charles B. Duke's parents, who served the College for many years and in several capacities. The annual recipient of the award will be presented a plaque, a cash award of $5,000 and a booklet describing Charles and Virginia Duke's extraordinary service to the College. Nominations for the award are due Friday, Feb. 14, at 5 p.m.

"The Charles and Virginia Duke Award is appropriately named after two people whose lives were intertwined with the College," said President Timothy Sullivan. "Honoring individuals who provide essential support services to William and Mary is a perfect reminder of Charles and Virginia Duke's lifelong contributions to the College."

Charles J. Duke Jr. graduated from William and Mary in 1923, was appointed to the Board of Visitors in 1926, and in December of 1934 was named bursar of the College and assistant to President John Stewart Bryan. As assistant to President Bryan, the late Charles Duke held an important administrative position—not only as chief fiscal officer, but also as the liaison to the General Assembly. He also served as assistant to Bryan's successor, President John Edwin Pomfret.

Charles Duke's wife, Virginia Welton Duke, also played an important role in the Bryan administration. She hosted and funded prestigious events for the College that contributed greatly to the president's success.

Five generations of the Duke family have been closely associated with William and Mary. The long-standing relationship began before the Civil War with Julian H. Chandler, a member of the class of 1861. Grandfather of William and Mary President Alvin Duke Chandler, Julian Chandler was also the father-in-law of Charles J. Duke (class of 1892) and thus grandfather of Charles J. Duke Jr. The family's relationship with William and Mary continued on for two more generations: Charles B. Duke's sister, Lee Welton Duke Croll, graduated in the class of 1963, and her daughter, Lee Welton Croll, is a member of the class of 1995. Additionally, Charles B. Duke's wife, Ann Evans Duke, is a member of the class of 1957.

"Charles and Ann Duke established this award to reflect the beneficial influence his parents and, indeed, the entire family, have had on The College of William and Mary," said Vice President for University Development Dennis Slon. "He felt that they represented the best of William and Mary."

Nomination forms for the award have been mailed to all administrative and academic offices, schools, departments and to contractors providing auxiliary services to the College. In nominating outstanding individuals, all William and Mary personnel are encouraged to consider the diversified work force at the College, as well as the long and devoted service Charles and Virginia Duke gave to William and Mary.

Sullivan will present the award to the recipient, who will be named in the graduation program and recognized at commencement exercises in May. A plaque containing the names of the recipients will be placed permanently in a prominent location on campus. ■

If you would like to make a monetary donation to replenish the treasury for the gift certificates included in each basket, please forward your donation to Kim Wiseman, President, c/o Development Office. Checks should be made payable to "HACE" and marked for the food basket certificates.

Thanks for helping someone else to have a happy holiday. Should you have any questions, please give one of us a call.

Alumni Database Open To Faculty, Staff

The holiday season tends to be one of the busiest times of the year for Betsy Quinzio, director of alumni records and information systems. Steward of a database containing the information on some 175,000 alumni, parents and friends of the College, she is the one to call if you need an address for a mailing or want to know the occupation of a former student.

In addition to current addresses, employment and family information on alumni, Quinzio and her staff can provide lists and labels of alumni for any department on campus. Names can be sorted by major, class year, athletic team, club activities, geographic area and even by job type.

To save departments some money, Quinzio can also print addresses on envelopes along with the required bar code for mailing.

Quinzio encourages more departments and faculty to use the database as a resource. "Other departments on campus don't necessarily have the time or the personnel to devote to creating and maintaining their own database," she said. "We have the equipment, personnel and resources necessary to do the job. That's what we're here for."

Quinzio added that she only gives out information from the database to faculty and staff members of the College and alumni.

Quinzio is in the process of collecting e-mail addresses for her database. Currently, she has amassed some 2,000 e-mail addresses, which can be accessed on the alumni society's web site at <http://www.wm.edu/alumni>.

For more information, contact Quinzio at ext. 11177 or via e-mail at edquin@facstaff.wm.edu.

programs in the community, Sullivan said. "Our first job is to construct the programs, not the facilities. If we persist in doing our planning backwards, we will get what we deserve, a 1950s facility just in time for the beginning of the 21st century."

Finally, the president addressed the future of Eastern State Hospital by emphasizing that the College is fully committed to the facility, its employees and programs.

"Should the state change the way it provides these services, however, a region-wide game plan should be developed before any decisions are made concerning that property. It would be an enormous mistake for the Commonwealth to begin, or for this community to countenance, the disposal of that parcel of land on a piece-meal basis. ... Again, a partnership among Eastern State, the city, James City County, and the College is critical to a thoughtful examination of this issue," concluded Sullivan. ■ the faculty salary issue "in some manner and do more than the 2 percent increase that is budgeted for both faculty and classified employees" beginning this December.

In the last session, the General Assembly allocated an additional $200 million for higher education, which was seen as the down payment on a $400-million increase. The state also went into the session with an extra $235 million available to address its needs, although other agencies are vying for that money as well.

It's not as clear that the General Assembly will provide supplementary money for technology, Jones said, but "we continue to be aggressive in identifying that need."

"It gets more expensive every year we put the Swem Library project off."
—Sam Jones

In addition to faculty salaries and technology, William and Mary wants money to continue the implementation of its academic clusters program, for an Institute for Teaching and Learning, for economic development and business forecasting and safety and code compliance. Besides the library in capital outlay, it is requesting permission to spend private funds for the construction of an environmental field station at Lake Matoaka and for the construction of Plumeri Park, a baseball facility at Dillard Complex. In addition, it wants authority to float $2.2 million in revenue bonds for structural improvements at William and Mary Hall. Governor Allen has already given permission for the College to use private funds to move ahead with the renovation of the Wren Building. ■

Armstrong has scheduled four rehearsals for the choir this week and plans to practice with the Marine Band on Sunday. "We're going to work very hard to be prepared for this historic event," he said.

It has been estimated that some 300,000 people will be in the audience when the choir performs at the Capitol next Monday at the last presidential inaugural of the century. ■

Renowned Crime Novelist James Ellroy Speaks Jan. 23

Author will discuss the real-life mystery of his mother's death

Best-selling crime novelist James Ellroy will read selections from his works during a program on campus Thursday, Jan. 23. Ellroy, author of six crime novels including The Black Dahlia and American Tabloid (named "Best Book of 1995" by Time magazine), will speak at 8 p.m. in the Tucker Theater at Tucker Hall. The program is free and open to the public.

Ellroy is expected to read from his newest book, My Dark Places, a nonfiction account of the real-life mystery of his mother's death in 1958. Ellroy was 10 years old when his mother was strangled and her body dumped in the bushes of a run-down Los Angeles suburb. The killer was never found.

"It was a sordid back-page homicide that nobody remembered—except her son," according to Lisa P. Rose, publicist for the book's publisher, Alfred A. Knopf, Inc. "James Ellroy grew up obsessed with crime. His life spun hellishly out of control and into a blur of booze, drugs, theft and jail. Running from the past, Ellroy sunk into a world which almost claimed his life.

"Realizing at age 27 that it was time to clean up or self-destruct, he de-toxed and started writing."

Ellroy was 10 years old when his mother was strangled and her body dumped in the bushes of a run-down Los Angeles suburb.

In My Dark Places, Ellroy confronted nearly 40 years of demons and memories, telling the true story of his mother's murder, his life afterwards and his search for her killer. "My Dark Places is an emotionally raw, hypnotic memoir ... against a backdrop of similar L.A. homicides, from the 1947 Black Dahlia case ... to the indictment of O.J. Simpson," said a reviewer in Publishers Weekly. Time magazine called the book "part memoir, part detective story, part mediation on the kind of men who kill and the women who die at their hands." The New York Times called it "compelling" and "an unnerving memoir."

Reading with Ellroy on Jan. 23 will be biographer and poet Robert Polito, whose recent book Savage Art is a biography of crime novelist Jim Thompson. Savage Art won a National Book Critics Circle Award and an Edgar Award from the Mystery Writers of America. Polito, director of the Writing Program at the New School for Social Research and author of the poetry book Doubles, will also give a poetry reading at 5 p.m. on Jan. 24 in Tucker 216.

The Jan. 23 reading, sponsored by the English department's Writers' Festival Committee, is part of a program recently endowed by the late Patrick Hayes, long-time benefactor and friend of The College of William and Mary who gave more than $1 million to the College during his lifetime and through a bequest.

Hayes' bequest for the annual Patrick Hayes Writers' Festival will begin in the spring of 1998. Until then, the Writers' Festival Committee will sponsor public readings by new and established writers.

Other programs scheduled for the spring semester include a reading and workshop in February by African-American playwright Cassandra Medley, a reading in March by Richmond novelists Sheri Reynolds and Janet Peery, and a reading in April by writer and filmmaker Debra Twiss and African-American writer Lorenzo Thomas. Reynolds is teaching creative writing at William and Mary this semester. ■
