W. & M. Literary Magazine Makes Announcements

Announcement of Prizes Given by the Magazine Staff

The editor of the Literary Magazine for next year, Mr. C. R. Ball, wishes to make the following announcement of prizes, which will be awarded by the magazine staff, for the benefit of the students of the Summer Quarter:

1. For the best prose essay, fifty ($50.00) dollars.
2. For the best poem, not considering the one for which the James Barron Hope Scholarship is awarded, fifty ($50.00) dollars.
3. For the best short story, fifty ($50.00) dollars.

These prizes will be in the form of checks. All students of the Summer Quarter of 1922, the extension classes of 1922-23, and the regular college classes of 1922-23, who are paid-up subscribers, are eligible to compete for these prizes.

The editor wishes to announce that in addition to the departments of "Exchanges," "Book Reviews," "Dramatics," "Science," "Virginia Folk Lore," and "Alumni," in last year's magazine, there will be a department of "Law."

Contributions from the students of the summer school will be welcomed. Address all contributions to C. R. Ball, Editor, or C. B. Jones, Business Manager, Williamsburg, Va.

The Old Blair House, Williamsburg, Virginia, as it looks today. One of the oldest buildings in America.

Shall the Ancient Landmark Pass Away?

The home of John Blair, Sr., situated on Duke of Gloucester Street, is one of the oldest and historically one of the most important of all buildings in America today. The Society for the Preservation of the Old Blair Homestead has been recently organized by Hon. John Garland Pollard for the purpose of purchasing this old building and of conveying it to the College for preservation. In order to prevent the building being torn down and its site used for business purposes, the purchase price of $6000 must be secured at once. Membership in the Society for the purpose of raising this fund will consist of those who contribute to purchasing the homestead.

Blair has been a notable name in the field of American statesmanship and higher education, both in the North and in the South. The Blair name is closely associated with the early history of the College of William and Mary, and of Princeton University, two of the oldest institutions of learning in this country. The Blair family has been represented in the

"Agamemnon" To Be Presented

"Agamemnon," the masterpiece of Aeschylus, will be presented Monday, July 17th, at 7 P. M. "Agamemnon," which was presented here for the first time Alumni night of the commencement exercises, was the first classical drama to be produced at William and Mary for more than a score of years. The performance, which was held in front of the library, was witnessed by more than a thousand spectators. A more appreciative audience has never witnessed a performance at the College.

The success of the play was due in large part to the untiring efforts of Professor Gelsinger and Dr. Montgomery, as directors of the play.

In answer to the many demands for a second performance, the directors have decided to repeat the performance. A great many of the members of the old cast will make up the new cast. A great wealth of new material at the summer school has been drawn upon to complete the new cast.

The play has been directed by Professor Gelsinger, Professor of Ancient Language at the College.

Enrollment Women W. & M. Complete

Registrar Announces That No More Women Students Can Register

H. L. Bridges, registrar of the College of William and Mary, announces that no more women students can be enrolled for the fall term, and that he had returned the registration fee of more than forty women who were applying for admission for the coming term. The dormitories for women have been applied for and assigned for some time.

Mr. Bridges says that the College of William and Mary could easily register 500 women this year, but that it was not the policy of the College to have such a large proportion of women students. Although co-educational, the College of William and Mary is primarily a College for men. The policy is to have at least 150 more men than women on the roll of the regular session.

The College is desirous of taking care of the local students particularly, including Newport News, Hampton, and Williamsburg. It is estimated that seventy-five women from the city and vicinity will stay in town and attend College this fall. This addition will bring the enrollment of women up to the maximum allotment of about 300.

Indications are that within the next few weeks, all men's dormitories will be filled and no more applicants will be accepted. This state of affairs emphasizes the need of additional dormitory room, for which, President Chandler is working to secure, in order that the growing demand of the College may be met. About $100,000, including the State's appropriation of $80,000, is now available. Friends of higher education could not find a more worthy investment.

PROFESSOR SHEWMAKE PURCHASES THE OLD SAUNDER'S HOME

Professor Shewmake has secured a deed to the old Saunder's place which faces the Court House Green. This structure is one of the oldest in Virginia or America. It was at one time the temporary residence of Gov. Dinwiddie, having been bought for the purpose by the colony in 1751. Later it was owned by Robert Carter Nicholas, treasure of the colony, at the time of the Revolution and First Treasurer of the Virginia State government after the Revolution. Gov. John Page lived there until the Capital was moved to Richmond. Afterwards, Robert Saunders, President of the College of William and Mary in 1887, bought this place which had been until then known as the Old Hansford House. Professor Shewmake intends to make his home there as soon as the repairs and renovations have been completed.

William and Mary Revives Law School

Higher Entrance Requirements Than Any Other School in South

It appears from the new catalogue that the Board of Visitors of the College of William and Mary propose to revive the old three-year law course, beginning September 1, 1923. The course will cover three full years. No student will be eligible to enter the law school until he has had as much as three years of academic work. No applicant will receive a B. L. degree until he has fulfilled the requirements of a bachelors degree.

It will be interesting to note that the William and Mary School of Law will maintain the highest entrance requirements of any school in the South, and as high as any in the country. None of the Southern institutions have come up to the William and Mary Law School standards. This law course is included in the Marshall-Wythe School of Government and Citizenship. Many of the law subjects are required of the students doing work in the school of Government and Administration. The following is the faculty of the School of Government and Citizenship for the session of 1922-23:

Julian Alvin Carroll Chandler, Ph.D. LL.D., President of the College.

What's the use of writing an editorial? Who reads it? It so happens that the very persons the editor would not like to have read his editorial are the ones who read it. Yes, but the editorial space must be filled, and the editor diligently searches for some hot air to turn loose on the few victims. He tries to expound every modern theory that develops, and hands out a dogmatic statement that cannot be disputed. When the editor does this, he is expecting his readers to be very well unacquainted with the subject matter, but he is often fooled. Business gets no better rapidly for this editor.

Sometimes the editor undertakes to criticize the school affairs, but he never gets any pleasure out of it. Somebody reads it and calls him a darn fool—I guess he is. At other times, the editor wants to become very popular with the student body and undertakes to spread some flowers, but it so unfortunately happens that the students never read his editorial. But if he writes a criticism, all the students read it. All the students proclaim him a radical, a fool, or what not.

Well, Mr. Editor, lean back in your easy chair and fill up the space with some freshly generated gas, and you will come out all right. Nobody reads your editorial and no body misses anything. The world moves along just the same. Why search for an editorial? "Where ignorance is bliss, 'tis folly to be wise."

New Department At Boston University

After much urging on the part of the leaders in the hotel industry, after many conferences with educational authorities, and, finally, after repeated requests from prospective students, a college course in Hotel Training has been arranged. It is being given at the college of business administration of Boston University.

The Boston University course is only a beginning. The class of '75 scattered in the hundred resorts of New England will have a small effect indeed. The important thing to be noticed is that a university of first class has now tackled the problem of training men for a long-neglected profession.

Mr. H. B. Meek, head of the hotel department, has planned a four year hotel training school. The success of the undertaking depends for a large part on the support of different hotel associations. The New England Hotel Association is whole heartedly behind Mr. Meek's plan and express the hope that other universities will follow the example of Boston University in establishing departments of hotel management.

WILLIAM AND MARY REVIVES LAW SCHOOL

William Angus Hamilton, D. C. L., Professor of Jurisprudence.
 Oscar Lane Shewmake, A. B., LL.B., Professor of Government and Law.

John Garland Pollard, LL. B., LL. D., Professor of Virginia Government and Citizenship.

Richard L. Morton, M. A., Ph. D., Professor of History and Government. It was through the efforts of Thomas Jefferson, himself an alumnus of the College, that the School of Law was established here in 1779, with George Wythe, whom Jefferson styles "the American Aristides," as its first professor. George Wythe was at one time Judge of High Court of Chancery of Virginia, and was a signer of the Declaration of Independence. This was the first chair of law to be established in America, and the second in the English speaking world, the first being the Vinerian chair at Oxford, filled by Sir William Blackstone. The William and Mary School of Law enjoyed continuous operation from the date of its establishment until May, 1861, when the College was closed on account of the hostilities in the vicinity during the Civil War.

During the period of the school's activity, the Board of Visitors included the names of Jefferson, Blair, Madison, Randolph, Nelson, and Harrison. The professors of law were George Wythe, St. George Tucker, William Nelson, Robert Nelson James Semple, Beverly Tucker, Geo. P. Scarborough, Lucian Minor and Charles Morris. Lucian Minor was the brother of John B. Minor, for many years dean of law at the University of Virginia.

Returned, Approved

He was just a raw country boy, but a fortnight's experience in New York with city girls had taught him something.

One evening he drifted down to a dance in Greenwich Village, where the wildest and the wooziest are supposed to hold forth. He drew a bobbed-haired sweetie for a partner and she lost no time in impressing on him her modernity of ideas.

"I suppose," she suggested, idly fingering her cigarette, "that you would be shocked if I told you I believed in free love?"

"Now, that's where you and me are right together," he responded heartily. "I'm tarnation sick of layin' out good hard-earned cash for candy an' flowers."

W. & M. STUDENT SPEAKS AT JAMESTOWN

Carter H. Harrison, student of William and Mary College, conducted services at the old Jamestown church Sunday afternoon. His talk on "Religion and the Early Colonization of Virginia" was heard by a large crowd, many of whom were excursionists from Richmond and other points.

Cabinet, on the Supreme Court of the United States, and in the Senate of the Nation.

The following is a brief sketch of the two Blairs who lived in the building, to save which, this effort is being made:

BLAIR, John, statesman, b. in Williamsburg, Va., in 1689; d. there, 5 Nov., 1771. He was a nephew of President James Blair, of the College of William and Mary. As early as 1736 he was a member of the House of Burgesses, and he was president of the council, and three times acting-governor of Virginia, in 1757, 1758, and 1768. Campbell, on page 554, of his "History of Virginia" (Philadelphia, 1860), gives a letter concerning the dissenters, written to the King's attorney of Spottsylvania by Blair, when he was acting-governor, and showing a spirit of tolerations as rare at that time as it was creditable. His son, JOHN, jurist, b. in Williamsburg, Va., in 1732; d. there, 31 Aug. 1800, was graduated at William and Mary College, studied law at the Temple, London, soon became prominent in his profession, and was a member of the legislature as early as 1765. On the dissolution of the assembly in 1769, Blair was one of those who met at the Raleigh Tavern and drew up the non-importation agreement. In June, 1776, he was a member of the committee that drew up a plan for governing the State, was chosen to the council, and in 1777 became a judge of the court of appeals. He was afterward chief justice, and in 1780 judge of the high court of chancery. He was a delegate to the convention that drew up the Federal Constitution, and with Washington and Madison, alone of all the Virginia delegates, voted for its adoption. He afterward supported it also in the State convention. In September, 1789, he was appointed by Washington a justice of the U. S. Supreme Court, and in 1796 resigned.

SPICE OF LIFE

"THE" GIRL

Why should I love her still,
When I know she cares naught for me?

Why do I say that I will Try and more manly be?

Yet when I see her each day
At noon-time, and often at five,
My soul will unconsciously pray
That some day she may be my bride.

Her eyes, as the poets would say,
Are tinted a hazel-nut hue;
And they gleam and sparkle each
day,
Like the sun's first rays on the dew.

Her face is fair to behold,
With lips so soft and so red;
And I firmly believe that her soul
Is as pure as the lily is said.

She is graceful, pretty, and neat,
And attractive, as every one knows.
At dances the boys she will meet,
Will soon become regular beaux.
—G. A. C., Jr.

WORKING LOVE

It isn't the work that's tiring you,
If you are working true.

It is the fault you find and the
trouble you bind;

Into the warp and the woof of the
cloth,

That makes up your work-a-day
world. —L. C.

Onlooker (watching a first-fight):
"Brace up, old boy, can't you stop
those blows?"

Combatant: "Stop 'em! Do you see any of them getting by?"
—Ga. Crocker.

Ikey: "Bet you can't guess vot I'm got to my house."

Jakie: "Vot you got, a little home
brew?"

Ikey: "Nein, a little Hebrew."
—Jade.

"Look here," said the maiden from
Siam,

"I don't want to be kissed,
But if you insist,

Lord knows you are stronger than
I am." —Humbug.

"Here's where I make a little money on the side," observed the surgeon as the patient with appendicitis was brought in. —Ga. Crocker.

'25 to Varsity Swimmer: "Gee,
where did you ever learn to swim like that?"

The Captain: "Well, buddie, I was a traffic cop in Venice for three years."
—Pitt Panther.

The Difference

What's the difference between a doctor and an old maid?

One is a hum bug and the other is a bum hug.

Admirer: I understand that what your father left you amounted to a good figure.

Admired: No. I inherited my figure from my mother.
