RICHMOND ALUMNI CLUB HOLDS FALL RALLY, BUSINESS SESSION, OCTOBER 8

John Stewart Bryan Invited to Speak; Duke, Bocoek, Gooch, McCurdy to Attend; Election of Officers for Coming Year.

BOARD MANAGERS MEET

The William and Mary Alumni Club of Richmond will hold its first meeting of the fall, Friday, October 8, at 8 p. m., on the mezzanine floor of the John Marshall Hotel.

John Stewart Bryan, president of the College, has been invited to deliver the principal address. Other College officials who have been invited to attend are: Bursar Charles Duke, Head Coach Branch Bocoek, Athletic Manager William S. Gooch, and Alumni Secretary Charles P. McCurdy, Jr. On this occasion, the Board of Managers of the General Alumni Association will be the guests of the Richmond Alumni, following an afternoon meeting of the Alumni Board in Richmond the same day.

The meeting will assume the form of a combination business meeting and rally for the William and Mary—V. P. I. football game which will be played in the Richmond stadium next day.

Officers for the ensuing year will be elected at the meeting and a nominating committee consisting of Guthrie Kennard, chairman; Dr. Horace R. Hicks, J. Malcolm Bridges, J. D. Carneal, and D. Gardiner Tyler, has been named by President Robert C. Harper to bring in nominations for the four officers: President, Vice-President, Secretary and Treasurer; and for three members of the Executive Committee who will serve with the four officers as the governing group of the capital city alumni association.

Present officers of the William and Mary Alumni Club of Richmond are: Robert C. Harper, President; Dr. George Preston Green, Vice-President; Harry Wilkins, Secretary; Sterling King, Treasurer; and Dr. P. D. Lipscomb, J. Malcolm Bridges, and Dr. Sidney B. Hall, Executive Committee.

ZABLE WITH THE ARROWS

Walter Zable, '37, All-South Atlantic end, and star of the Indians 1936 team, has joined the ranks of the professional footballers, and signed with the Richmond Arrows, member of the Dixie League. Zable was an outstanding player during his entire college career and was the other half of that passing combination, Bunch to Zable. The Arrows are coached by Meb Davis, '28, member of the Matsu-Davis combination of several years ago, and a former coach at William and Mary. Another former coach, Tommy Dowler, is also expected to play backfield for the Arrows.

Richmond President Extends Invitation

To the Alumni College of William and Mary.

Members of the William and Mary Club of Richmond are hopeful that alumni from all parts of Virginia will meet with the alumni group on the night of October 8, at the John Marshall Hotel, in a rally preceding the V. P. I.—William and Mary football game.

All of us are proud of the glorious traditions of William and Mary. We have a debt to pay to the college of our boyhood which can be discharged only by working to advance the interests of the College. We are entering a new year, and all of us are anxious to see William and Mary broaden its sphere of usefulness to young men and women of the state and nation.

While we like to win our share of football games, spirit and a willingness to work for the College transcend any temporary victory or defeat in athletic contests. The College has been and is an inspiration not only to those who have attended its classes, but to Americans generally.

The William and Mary Club of Richmond cordially extends an invitation to alumni to meet us at the John Marshall, on the night of October 8.

(Signed) Robert C. Harper, President.

Freshmen men and women are now required to leave the campus by the center walk and to tip their hats and bow as they pass the statue of Lord Botetourt.

WILLIAM AND MARY RECEIVES CRUSHING DEFEAT FROM NAVY

Indians Have Only Fifteen First String Men; Six Are Lettermen; Rest Last Year Reserves.

If last week's game against Navy can be taken as any criterion of what William and Mary's football forces will resemble this year, alumni may as well resign themselves to the inevitable.

Navy whipped the Indians, 45-0 and it could have been more. The Indians figured to have an improved eleven this year, but the Middle's crushing victory has knocked all early-season predictions into the proverbial cocked hat.

Take your choice. The Tribemen had six lettermen for use against Navy; the rest were last year's reserves and sophomores. Pete Bunch was the lone veteran backfield man. Two sophomores, Phillips and Twiddy, and one junior, Della Torre, completed the backfield.

The line had Coiner and Kamen at ends; Dillard and Walker at tackle; McGowan and Davidson at guards; and Krueger at center. Coiner, McGowan, Walker and Krueger are all lettermen. The Navy showed no respect for lettermen.

Coach Branch Bocoek has said that he has only 15 men capable of playing a good game of football. He used more than twenty men against the Navy and the Midshipmen showed no partiality. McGowan, suffering from a cold, played only half the game, and Walker was carried off the field in the first half. Both are regulars.

Navy showed a powerful offensive against the Indians, and the defeat must be taken with a grain of salt. William and Mary will be tough while losing. Coach Bocoek says they will, and coach Bocoek knows his football. The Indians figure to improve, and they will.

Besides the starting lineup named above, the Tribe has capable backfield substitutes in Charlie Hall, Frank Yeager, and Al Tirelis. Yeager, on the injured list, has not seen action in three weeks. Tirelis can kick; Hall needs experience.

End replacements are uncertain, but Hanna and Legg have been the boys. Hook, a tackle, showed flashes of brilliancy against Navy. Tanner, Mitkiewicz, and Kennedy subbed at guard with Tanner as first choice. Tucker replaced a fighting Kreuger at center.

The Indians next meet V. M. I. and V. P. I. in a row. Both military teams are packed with veterans. A William and Mary victory is not expected, but the boys will fight. They're smarting under the Navy defeat. Smarting and fighting mad.

Take your choice, but don't use the Navy game as your criterion. Navy has a strong team. The experimented on William and Mary last Saturday. The score was 45-0. No Navy team has rolled up forty-five points on William and Mary before.

He returned to his home from the hospital the first of September and shortly afterward suffered a relapse. Opening Convocation September 27; Full Academic Procession; Heads of Departments, New Faculty Presented.

DR. D. DAVIS PRESIDES

With a week of classes in the 245th session almost gone, enrollment figures showed an increase of 63 men students over the corresponding period of last year, and a decrease of 63 women students. The total number remains practically the same, around 1200.

Opening the season's first convocation, President Bryan greeted freshmen, and urged them to face their individual problems with the thought that they have never been faced before. The convocation was held Monday morning in Phi Beta Kappa Memorial Hall and was preceded by an academic procession.

"Each generation", Dr. Bryan said, "faces its own problems with the thought that they have never been faced before, and yet the problems are, in whatever guise they come, essentially the same. It is the attitude of courageous dealing with the old problem of adjustment. From the earliest recorded history men have sought to find a way to live together and to enjoy the fruits of the earth without creating unjust and insupportable privileges and powers.

"No body of students can ever tell what leadership or control exists within that class.

"One hundred and sixty years ago in the midst of the war of the Revolution, there were only seventeen names recorded in the entering class at William and Mary, and yet among those seventeen students were two founders of Phi Beta Kappa, Governor Mercer, of Maryland; the man who has exercised a longer and more continuing power in the development of America than any other person, Chief Justice John Marshall, and the man who settled the problem of non-interference by Europe in this Hemisphere, James Monroe.

"That class did not know what genius was among its membership. And no class of students anywhere today can know this. But they can know that the possession of freedom means a continued will and capacity to fight; they can know that security can never be purchased by surrendering, and that the safety of slavery is the servitude of the soul."

Taking part in the impressive ceremonies were the vested members of the College Choir, who sang the Processional, a special selection, Alma Mater, and led the recessional. Dean K. J. Hoke presented the Officers of instruction, and Charles J. Duke, Jr.,

THE BAND WAGON

".... I have watched my alma-mater's vicissitudes of fortune with mingled hope and despair. I have seen her prostrate in the dust, and, thank God, I have lived to see her rise again "to life everlasting and glory immortal", with the bloom of perpetual youth upon her cheek and the urge of continual triumph in her breast. To her I owe whatever success I have attained, and here I lay my honors as a thank offering upon her shrine. In the formative period of my youth she guided my steps aright and pointed out to me the path of honor and duty. I love every brick of her fire swept walls, every foot of her ancient campus; and my highest ambition is to have my name long linked with hers in the years to come.

And when I wrap the drapery of my couch around me and lie down to eternal rest, she will share with my loved ones my last thoughts and my parting benediction."

These beautiful words were spoken by that grand old man, Judge Robert M. Hughes, '76, when he delivered the commencement address in 1933. Every alumnus holds these same feelings but perhaps has never been able to express them. Such words, in this day of progressiveness, are worthy of consideration.

William and Mary has come a long way in two hundred and forty-four years; she has been prostrate many times but truly she has returned each time mightier than before. But it has only been since 1888 that William and Mary has consistently gone forward without serious interruption. Lyon Gardiner Tyler paved the way and in thirty one years was able to turn over to his successor, a College which had recovered from years of strife and disaster and ready to forge ahead toward her rightful place in the academic sun. Julian Alvin Carroll Chandler assumed the presidency with a modest pledge to lead the College on to greater and better things and to a future of more usefulness to the state, to Nation, and to God. His record as President is so well known to every alumnus and friend of the College that it needs no further edification. He gave the last fifteen years of his life to the building of a great institution, not for personal honor but for the honor of the College he loved so dearly. John Stewart Bryan became President over three years ago, with problems confronting him that were of a different nature, though no less important, than those of his two distinguished predecessors. To him befell the serious task of accepting the finished plant and developing it into a center of scholarship and culture for which it was established in 1693. In three short years he has done a masterly job and ere long, William and Mary will represent to the south what Harvard claims for the north.

And so we may ask—does this affect our standing and position as alumni of the College? Has this progress and growing greatness of alma-mater made us greater men and women? Has it enhanced our prestige among our associates, our friends and neighbors? Are we proud that we, too, may claim a fraction of the fame and glory that surrounds William and Mary today? The answer to any and all of these questions is obvious.

There remains but one question which cannot be answered as emphatically or quickly. Are we, as alumni, carrying our part of this progress; are we contributing to the cause by membership in the Alumni Association, and participating in its affairs by rendering helpful suggestions and criticism; are we active in alumni clubs in our community; are we getting non-members to join; are we urging young men and women in our community to come to William and Mary; are we doing our share; are we progressing with the College; are we on the BAND WAGON?

HOMECOMING

Williamsburg has a continual succession of beautiful and interesting seasons throughout the year; many times they pile one upon the other before we have had the opportunity to get everything out of them that we intended. Autumn is the season for high spirit and fellowship. Already, people are coming back to town, opening up their homes, conspicuously showing the WELCOME sign, and preparing to renew old friendships. We know that soon the old crowd will be back again and we are waiting for them. We have dug deeply and brought out the old stories and tales—old pictures and souvenirs. We have heard and seen them many times but a little dusting will make them great again.

"Doc" Billups says "Williamsburg and the College are getting ready for HOMECOMING."

CAMPUS IMPROVEMENTS

Continuing a policy of campus improvements, work has been carried on throughout the summer on the planting program, which this year has included grading, seeding, and landscaping of the Men's section of the campus around Old Dominion and Monroe Halls and extending down to the campus road. Surface treatment of the drive on the north campus has just been completed, a brick curbing project having been constructed on this roadway during the summer.

Other sections of the campus have also been included in the planting program and trees have been moved into positions indicated by the architects who drew the campus plans.

Numerous changes have been made in dormitories to make them more livable. Continuing the system found so practicable in Monroe Hall, a housemother has been placed in charge of Old Dominion Hall, social rooms opened, and the downstairs rooms, once used for visiting teams, made into a game room and lounge. Work on the Old Dominion Hall project is almost completed, including the new rooms for visiting teams on the fourth floor.

New equipment has been installed in the dining hall, and a sound-deadening ceiling installed during the summer.

AT HOME and ABROAD

"Malta is truly an enchanted isle. One is forever conscious of its rich and exciting history, of living amid the beautiful legacy of old palaces, churches and massive fortifications built by knights, the Western culture so well blended with the near East characteristics which have left their marks on the Phoenician features and language of the people, on some of the amazingly oriental customs, such as an eye of superstition painted on the prow of colorful little "dgharsas", or fishing boats, the segregation of men and women, the "faldeta" of black cloth falling from a basket shaped head covering of whalebones, vast enough to serve as a cloak. And yet, I am always so strongly reminded of New York, I suppose because Valletta is situated between two bodies of water, the opposite shores resembling the Palisades of New Jersey and the heavily built up areas of Long Island. Because of the extensive terracing of the houses, the varied sky-line, and the impression of height, Valletta seems to approach in miniature the appearance of my home-city. And unlike the other ancient cities in Malta, with their narrow tortuous streets, Valletta is planned in square blocks, as easy to find one's way in as New York.

The island is very arid, both the peasant men and women slaving to wrest two crops a year from the small amount of topsoil, working their tiny strips of farmland, terraced and bordered with rough walls of loosely piled stonework. They are a handsome folk, sun browned, often blue-eyed, with delicate features, and having that graceful carriage belonging to those who go bare-foot. They are amazingly poor and amazingly contented, deeply religious and fearfully superstitious; a penny spent a week allows for a Sunday excursion in their carts drawn by be-plumed Arab ponies with nail-studded and painted leather harnesses, to a nearby town where the men go off to some wine-house, and the women cluster in little groups, gossiping on the parapet of some old bastion. The day, for them, is still divided by the medieval hours of the Church, begun and ended at Prayers. Yet superstition continues through the centuries to fix a pair of bullock horns to the facades of their squat flat-topped houses.

"For the other extreme, the society of Malta is made up and headed by a tight-shut, autocratic group of ancient nobles, of old families whose Maltese titles are respected by British rule, whose beautiful palaces are raised on hilltops overlooking the island, or well fortified on rocky promontories, with obsolete watch-towers against the pirates.

"Despite the characteristic sluggishness of the weather, with its hot, sand laden winds from the Sahara, or its damp, penetrating "Scirroco" from the north-west, and the necessary afternoon siesta, the days are extremely busy, beginning at six-thirty in the morning (Victor's first lecture being at eight in Valletta, which is about six miles away), and ending after midnight.

"From Charles McCurdy I had a very nice letter and a notice of my class reunion this spring at William and Mary. It would have been so jolly could Victor and I visit Williamsburg at this time, but I am afraid that I shall have to postpone that trip for at least two years."
