ANNUAL HOMECOMING CELEBRATION NOVEMBER 13TH

W.&M. DEFEATS V.P.I. FOR FIRST TIME--- TAKES GUILFORD AND AMERICAN U.

Indians Play Good Game Against V.M.I. Despite Loss; V.P.I. Victory A Surprise; Guilford and American U. Fail to Score.

Just as the Alumni Gazette stated in its last issue, the result of William and Mary's opening game with Navy was no certain criteria of what the Indian gridgers would do in future games.

For, since that disastrous start, coach Branch Bocock's boys have done all right for themselves—and have done it despite numerous injuries to regulars and despite desertions which have cut the squad strength to 25 men.

In four games played this month, William and Mary has emerged the victor three times without being scored upon. The lone loss was suffered to V. M. I. on October 2, when the Cadets rallied in the last half to win, 20-9.

Following that defeat, the Indians pulled one of the state's major upsets in whipping V. P. I., 12-0, and on two succeeding Saturdays, the Tribemen waltzed through Guilford and American University by scores of 37-0 and 33-0.

The Bocockmen will meet a big test this Saturday when they meet University of Virginia's aerial-threat eleven in Charlottesville. William and Mary have never beaten or even scored upon a Virginia football team, but the jinx may be cracked Saturday.

Against V. M. I.'s clever red-clad team, the Indians played excellent, and at times, inspired football, but lack of capable reserves and an inability to cope with the brilliant running of the Cadet's Paul Shu finally took its toll.

William and Mary led V. M. I., 9-6 at halftime on the strength of a safety and a half-foot touchdown plunge by sophomore Lloyd Phillips, of Lynchburg. The score came after Pete Bunch, senior halfback, had passed 28 yards to co-captain and end John Coiner.

Rugged Paul Shu swept 12 yards for V. M. I.'s initial score in the opening period, passed 14 yards to Trzeciak for the second six pointer, and raced 42 yards for the final touchdown. Shu also kicked two of the three placement attempts.

Coach Bocock pulled one from the bag in the V. P. I. game and the Indians brushed aside the Tech threat for the first time in history. The wily Indian mentor crossed up Tech scouts by reversing a pass play, and it went for a touchdown.

Stan Kamen, junior end from Jamiaca, N. Y., scored first for the Tribe, taking a short pass from Twiddy on the V. P. I. 12 and outracing two Tech secondary men for a standing up touchdown. The score came late in the first quarter.

William and Mary marched forty yards for its second touchdown with Twiddy and Bunch alternating in lugging the ball to the one-foot line, from where Bunch ploughed through for another six points.

In neither the Guilford nor the American U games were the Indians unduly extended. Subs played much

ERNEST GOODRICH NAMED TO BOARD OF MANAGERS

Youngest Alumnus Ever Elected; Was Active as Student Leader; Outstanding Scholar Now With Labor Department.

Ernest W. Goodrich, '36, was elected to the Board of Managers of the Alumni Association, at a meeting of the Board held in Richmond, Friday, October 8. Goodrich is the youngest alumnus ever elected to the Board. While a student, he distinguished himself in scholastic attainments and as a student leader. He is a Phi Beta Kappa; was President of the Wrangler's Debating Club, President of Phi Delta Gamma Forensic Fraternity, and President of the Phoenix Literary Society. He was Vice-President of the Debate Council and the International Relations Club and a member of the Wythe Law Club, Eta Sigma Phi, Student Religious Council, and of Omicron Delta Kappa, national honor fraternity.

Goodrich's home is Dendron, Va., but for the past two years he has been working with the Labor Department in Washington. He studied law at William and Mary, is a member of the Virginia Bar Association, and since living in Washington has studied law at George Washington University where he received his degree October, 1937. Gradually advancing in position, he is now an attorney for the Labor Department and presently doing field work on the Wages and Hours bill that will come before the next Congress.

He has been active in the affairs of the Washington Alumni Club being Secretary at the present time. He was elected to the Board of Managers to fill the vacancy of Charles P. McCurdy, Jr., who resigned to become Executive Secretary of the Alumni Association. Goodrich will serve on the Board until the next annual meeting of the Alumni Association next June.

The Board of Managers of the Alumni Association held a special meeting in the Byrd Room of the John Marshall Hotel, Friday, October 8. Dr. Sidney B. Hall, '16, President, presided. The Board discussed the acute situation regarding membership in the Association, and the Secretary reported that there were 447 paid up memberships on September 30th, including 180 Life Memberships. This represents a total of about four percent of the living alumni of the College. A committee, previously appointed to bring in recommendations, presented a plan to expand the membership which was approved by the Board and is now being prepared for presentation to the Administration before being announced to the Alumni.

Mr. Joseph Healy, '10, reported the progress being made on the selection and appointment of a committee of alumni and alumnae that will arrange the program for the centennial celebration at the College in 1943. It is expected that this committee will be announced during the present term.

CAMPBELL STUART RECEIVES DEGREE DELIVERS ADDRESS

Descendant of Colonial Governor Dinwiddie was Guest of College and Presents Relics to Williamsburg Restoration.

Sir Campbell Stuart, K. B. E., Chairman of the Imperial Communications Advisory Committee and a director of the London Times, was a guest of the College October 6th, when he received the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws at a formal convocation held in Phi Beta Kappa Hall. Hon. George Campbell Peery, Governor of Virginia, attended the ceremonies and participated in the program.

Sir Campbell is a descendant of Robert Dinwiddie who was Lieutenant Governor and Commander in Chief of the Colony of Virginia from 1751 to 1758, and while in Williamsburg, he presented to the Restoration a collection of relics and heirlooms belonging to Dinwiddie which are to be permanently kept in the restored Governor's Palace.

Mr. Bryan, President of the College, presided at the ceremonies, following a full academic procession, and introduced Dr. James Wilkinson Miller, head of the department of Philosophy who, representing the President and Masters of the College, read the address of welcome that was extended to Dinwiddie when he became Governor. Governor Peery was then presented and replied to the address of welcome by reading Governor Dinwiddie's original reply. The life and services of Governor Dinwiddie were recounted by Dr. Louis Knott Koontz, Visiting Professor of Colonial History.

In presenting Sir Campbell for the degree, Mr. Bryan said that he had distinguished himself 'as a servant and defender of his country in the field of journalism and under the sterner arbitrament of arms. As a writer, editor, publisher and soldier; a trusted and successful administrator, he demonstrated once again the exhaustless vitality and the invincible faith of the persistent Scotch. Dr. James Hardy Dillard, Rector of the Board, of Visitors, accepted the presentation and conferred the degree, after which, Sir Campbell replied by his address:

"I have to thank this historic College for the great honor that has been done to me today by allowing me to share an Alma Mater with Jefferson, Monroe and Marshall. This

NORFOLK

The Norfolk Alumni Club will hold its first meeting of the year, Wednesday, November 10th, at eight o'clock, p. m., at the Norfolk Division. All alumni in the vicinity are invited and urged to be present.

RICHMOND

All alumni interested in attending the annual dinner in Richmond the night before Thanksgiving will please communicate with the Alumni Office immediately. Further details will be announced at a later date.

INDIANS MEET W & L ON GRIDIRON PARADE AND PICNIC ON PROGRAM

The annual Homecoming Day celebration at the College will take place Saturday, November 13th, and will include a program of events that will last the entire day. Recent victories of the Indian football team have predicated a greater interest on the part of the College alumni everywhere and it is expected that a record crowd will return for Homecoming and witness the William and Mary—Washington and Lee game that afternoon. Alumni returning for this celebration have increased in number every year for the past four years since the College and the town people started contributing generously to make the program colorful and interesting.

Important features of this year's program will be the gridiron clash in the afternoon, the parade of floats in the morning, and the presentation of the Alumni Medallion to John Peyton Little, Jr., '74, second oldest living alumnus of the College, who is returning to Williamsburg with his wife, from their home in Clearwater, Florida, as invited guests of the College.

Mr. Little is literally returning from the 'dead', for the records of the Alumni Office and the last two alumni catalogs have listed him as having died. It was not until last January that Dean Grace Warren Landrum received word from a friend, advising her of Mr. Little's whereabouts and that he was actively engaged in the lumber business in Florida. Mr. Little was born August 11, 1854, the son of a Williamsburg doctor who owned a drug store on Duke of Gloucester Street. In acknowledging a telegram of congratulations on his eighty-third birthday from President Bryan, Mr. Little wrote that the College had always had a warm place in his heart and that it was the dream of his life to someday return to the scenes of his boyhood. Mr. and Mrs. Little, as guests of the College, will participate in the Homecoming program, and Mr. Little will ride in the parade.

WHAT MATTER THE REASON

In a couple of weeks, William and Mary Alumni from every section in the east will wind their way back to Williamsburg for their annual HOMECOMING festival. It only lasts for a day but it is enough to satisfy the sentimental needs and send you back home in a happy frame of mind and proud that you had such a home to which to come.

There are many reasons why alumni come back for this day. Some want to see the football game and are not particular about the rest of the program. Others want to come back to see old friends and class-mates. Perhaps some look forward to the picnic lunch and buffet supper, and there are a few who want to come back and appraise the College, talk with the administrators and professors, and make a general check to see if the College is progressing in acceptable manner. Whatever the cause which brings you back, be assured the College welcomes you and will be glad to have you as its guest for the day.

No finer incentive for HOMECOMING can be found than in the alumni verse of Alma Mater:

"Iron shod and golden sandaled
Shall the years go by,
Still our hearts shall weave about thee
Love that cannot die."

OCTOBER 9, 1937

October 9, 1937, was to be expected and might have come and passed without particular significance in the lives of most sons and daughters of William and Mary. There were only a mere two dozen men who arrived in Richmond that dreary and chilly day who had any idea of what was going to take place and they didn't tell any one about it. But precisely at two-thirty o'clock, those two dozen men took the field at Richmond Stadium, and in two hours managed to pull more rabbits out of the hat than have been seen in the memory of modern William and Mary men. For the first time in a quarter of a century, the Indians, with a reputedly weak eleven, sent the Gobblers back to Blacksburg feeling the worse for their experience. To the everlasting honor of those few men and their coaches, it can be said that they fought a great battle for William and Mary, under terrific pressure, against heavy odds, with a weakened morale, and wrote pages in the athletic history of the College.

A MEMORIAL

Last spring the faculty of the Norfolk Division of the College lost its most distinguished member, when their beloved Professor, Dr. Arthur George Williams died. For twenty years Dr. Williams had served the College, both in Williamsburg and in Norfolk. He was widely known throughout the state as one of the finest teachers of foreign languages in the south, and he was not only respected as a teacher but loved as a friend by all who came to know him.

That the memory of Dr. Williams should fade is impossible; it will live in the minds and hearts of his students and friends for many years. But that these friends and former students my give concrete evidence of their friendship, we at the Norfolk Division have determined to create to his memory an ever-living tribute. To that end, it is proposed to form a committee, whose purpose will be to accept contributions to the Arthur George Williams Memorial Fund. This fund will be used for the purchase of properly inscribed books for the library at the Norfolk Division. In this way we shall keep alive the memory of a great teacher in the minds of the college generations to come.

The following people have been asked to serve upon the committee:

|-----------------------------|---------------------------------|
| Dr. William T. Hodges, '02 | Miss Katy V. Anthony, '21 |
| Dr. Donald W. Davis | Miss Lucy Mason Holt, '24 |

Dr. Ernest W. Gray will act as secretary to the committee. Contributions may be addressed to him at the Norfolk Division of the College of William and Mary.

Campbell Stuart . . .

College is famous throughout the world, the second oldest in this country, and the first to enjoy a royal charter. It is particularly a pleasure to me to come here and receive this degree at the hands of your President, one of the most loved figures of the South.

"I need not tell you that I am greatly interested in this Governor (Robert Dinwiddie, an ancestor of Sir Campbell Stuart) who has played an interesting part in your history, most particularly because he was the patron of George Washington. He came to you in time of great difficulty, and no one has questioned his capacity or his devotion to the exacting duties of his office. Robert Dinwiddie came of Glasgow merchant stock at a period when Glasgow was developing into one of the great ports of Great Britain. Like many other young Scots he looked beyond the frontier, but his frontier proved to be far further than a journey to London. Like yet another merchant clerk, Stamford Raffles, the founder of Singapore, he sought new worlds to conquer, in no spirit of Raleigh, but in keeping with all the adventurous pedestrianism of the industrious Scot. Honourable, faithful, courageous and vigilant—these were no mean qualities—and they served him in good stead in his West Indian days, when he exposed fearlessly case after case of dishonesty. It is not the road to popular favor, and Robert Dinwiddie is not a loved figure in your history, more feared and respected. As Lieutenant Governor he came to live among you, the Governor rarely came—and although he went back to Bristol to die—he was never unmindful of the possibilities of Virginia and her future greatness which he could not live to see. I am glad by my visit and my association to recall him to you today, for in his day he was a great Virginian.

I have mentioned also Raleigh, a cavalier of a different breed, who gave you your virgin name—but who never saw your shores. I am happy to tell you that this mission of presentation to Williamsburg is only in its infancy, and that I am soon to be followed by my friend, Sir Harold Harmsworth, who proposes to present the original paintings of Sir Walter Raleigh and Elizabeth Throckmorton, his wife, by Marc Gheerardts the Younger. These portraits have been in the possession of the Sackville family since 1638, and were acquired a few years ago by the late Sir Leicester Harmsworth whose son now wishes to give them to Virginia. Every Virginian knows the story of Raleigh, perhaps they know also of Elizabeth Throckmorton, the Maid of Honour to Queen Elizabeth, whom Raleigh married without the Queen's consent—for this he was committed to the Tower. But it is not of Raleigh I wish to speak to you now—I want to speak of those early citizens at the beginning of your history.

I want to recall the spirit of Thomas Jefferson and his firm belief that he had left an old world behind for ever, and had helped to found a nation which would always be self-contained. It was a comforting philosophy then—it comes much home to me today, for in the direct male line I descend from a Pennsylvania emigrant from Northern Ireland, who left the old world of his day because the Presbyterians he had to associate with were, in his view, too liberal—in his conception too close to the Church of Rome. He drove from his Harrisburg door in 1750 his prodigal son—prodigal because he became a clergyman in the Church of England. I can speak to you of these people without offense because of them I am—and from them I came—and strange as some may think—them I understand—and for them I offer no apology. They have been called selfish, intolerant, bigoted, hard. Perhaps they were. But they were a grand people to come to this New World when it was a New World, to conquer climate, hardship, suffering, to leave an impress on this great nation which has influenced its destinies through the generations. An eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth. Not nice people to disagree with. They would not have been much help at our Non-Intervention Committee now sitting in connection with the Spanish War. They were certainly not exponents of the law of compromise. They were not given to smooth words—but they told the truth—they loved their country—and they knew how to die.

They were great Americans, those early pioneers. They blazed the trail in those difficult years that you and I in this luxurious twentieth century might reap where they have sown. But they failed to foresee the developments of this age. Modern Harrisburg this summer heard another George being crowned in Westminster Abbey—another coronation will be actually witnessed in Harrisburg by television. The world is getting smaller, distance certainly helped us to get on better. I wonder if we can ever evade our responsibilities—and thanks to them the responsibilities you once sought to escape are yours. Through them you have grown great. Their principles are the things in this nation that matter. Believe me, it is not your wealth that has made you respected throughout the world—it is those qualities those old people possessed and have handed down to you—that Puritan strain that, thank God, still comes out in every real American. Woodrow Wilson, Son of Virginia, had it in his blood when he planned a better world across the sea founded on those same traditions. He left an inheritance which some of us old world nations have been trying to live up to. But in modern Europe the doctrine of collective security has not been an easy one to enforce.

The forces of disorder seem to be growing closer together—perhaps it may help to bring closer together the forces of order. In that connection I have been reading this morning the remarkable speech of the President of the United States at Chicago yesterday and in particular this paragraph:

"The will for peace on the part of the peace loving nations must express itself to the end that nations that may be tempted to violate their agreements and the rights of others will desist from such a cause. There must be positive endeavor to preserve peace."

That is one of the most important statements President Roosevelt has ever made.

So far all that I come here today with pride in my heart for those people who made us—with thankfulness to men like John D. Rockefeller who has the vision to preserve for us the past through which, as Patrick Henry said, all true knowledge of the future comes. I have gladly given what I possess of Robert Dinwiddie back to the Virginia he served to the best of his abilities. I am proud to think these heirlooms will remain forever in the Governor's Palace, and be associated always with the Colony of a Governor whose greatest claim to fame will lie in the fact that he was perhaps the first of all our people to recognize the possibilities of that young soldier who has written in your history an undying page. He linked in that sense the old world with the new. And may I appeal to you not entirely to forget that Old World with its problems, its difficulties, its oppressed peoples, as I come here today to salute with some right the memory of George Washington who stood for everything the pioneer believed in and who left behind him a reputation for all the world to emulate. Let us, the great company of our yesterdays and our todays, see if we cannot keep the sun on the hill of our tomorrows, and in that spirit of the pioneer, I say, Thank You for the honor you have done me today."

W.&M. PLAYERS

The twelfth season of the William and Mary Players will have its formal opening with the presentation of "The Night of January 16th", on October 28th and 29th, in Phi Beta Kappa Hall.

Miss Althea Hunt, who is directing the Players, has announced "First Lady" by Katherine Dayton and George S. Kauffman, as the second play, to be given December 2nd and 3rd. This play is a satire on Washington political life. The last play will be either Ferenc Molnar's "Lilom", or Maxwell Anderson's "Elizabeth the Queen", and will be presented May 5th and 6th.

The "Mikado" has been selected as the operetta this year, and will have Miss Hunt as acting director, Mr. George M. Small as musical director, and Mr. Leonard V. Haber and Mr. Ramon Douse as the setting directors. The operetta, an annual feature, will be given March 17th and 18th.

The Fine Arts program is under the direction of three members of the faculty: Miss Althea Hunt, director; Leslie Cheek, Jr., designer; and Arthur Ross, technician. Mr. Ross is a new professor of Fine Arts and is supervising the construction of sets for the first play.

The season ticket plan, which was revised two years ago, is being used again this year. Tickets are being sold for admittance to the plays, the operetta, and the Sunday films on the rise of motion picture, at a price considerably less than the combined prices of individual tickets would be.

There are a number of unusual features in "The Night of January 16th", chief of which is the drawing of a jury from the audience. The play itself is the trial for murder of Karen Andre'. There will be no opening curtain. When the audience enters, the stage will be set as a courtroom with witness chair, judge's bench, and jury box. One by one the court officials will come on. Then the court clerk will draw, as in a lottery, the names of twelve people in the audience who will be asked to come up into the jury box and decide the case. No jurors are planted and those who would be willing to serve have been asked to leave their names at the box office during the week preceding the play.

The case will be decided at the end of the third act by a majority vote of the jury. The ending of the play is thus determined by the audience, and it is possible that the verdict will differ on the two nights of the play.

The large cast is made up of witnesses and court officials and included many newcomers to the William and Mary stage. Carl Buffington and Bill Wilson play the two lawyers in the case.

The two dramatic organizations, the Dramatic Club, and Theta Alpha Phi, have met and planned their programs for the year. Carl Buffington is president of the Club and Nick Woodbridge is president of Theta Alpha Phi.

The players wish to welcome their alumni who are returning for Homecoming, and ask them to come down to their workshop in the Wren Building basement where they may talk over old plays and meet the new players.

Homecoming...

From the end of the game until seven o'clock, fraternity and sorority houses will keep 'open house' for their alumni. These houses will be decorated with their respective colors, as will the various shops in town.

At seven o'clock there will be an informal buffet supper in Phi Beta Kappa Hall to which the faculty will be invited to greet the alumni and discuss College problems with them.

In connection with Homecoming, opening dances at the College will take place that week-end under sponsorship of the President's Aides. Blake T. Newton, Jr., Chief Aide, is in charge of the arrangements and has announced that there will be two dances in the set. The dance on Friday night will be formal, lasting from ten until two, and Dean Hudson and his Florida Clubmen Orchestra will supply the music. Saturday's dance will be informal from nine until twelve, with Earl Mellen and his orchestra playing. Cost of the two dances will be three dollars the couple, or separately, two dollars on Friday and a dollar and a half on Saturday.

Elaborate and interesting decorations for the dances are being designed by Leslie Cheek, Jr., head of the department of Fine Arts. Mr. Cheek has been responsible for the attractive settings of the dances, plays, and balls during the past two years. He describes the plan for the Homecoming dance as follows: "Using the suggestion offered by the word 'Homecoming', the design of the decorations for the ball to be held in Blow Gymnasium on November 13th is based on the Classic Revival motive always associated with southern homes. In fact, there are to be two 'homes' in the ballroom. The facades of two houses will be suggested on each of the straight sides of the gymnasium, using the existent balcony as the level of the second floor gallery usually found in the columned facades of old homes. Large white columns will run up to correctly support a crowning cornice, while behind them the windows of the houses will be suggested by large frames covered with cloth painted to represent the usual mullion divisions. These frames will be lighted from the back with a dull yellow glow to suggest festivities within the houses and to silhouette momentarily the figures of the crowd on the actual dancing floor. This window motive will be correctly repeated on the second floor galleries, as well, and all windows will have the typical green shutters. The railings of the galleries, besides the usual white fretwork, will have the initials of the College worked in the center of each panel.

Between these two towering white facades the dance floor will extend, roofed by great arches of silver-grey hanging moss, through which spotlights will spill down pools of soft moonlight, casting swaying shadows on the dancers and the high columns of the houses. The two curved end of the gymnasium will be treated as groves of trees, their great trunks extending upward from the floor to be lost in the moss overhead. The orchestra will be housed in a raised summer-house within the depths of the trees, and above the roof of the summer-house a huge six foot harvest moon will shine down upon the scene below.

The following merchants and organizations, by their generous contributions and cooperation, have made it possible to have a parade on Homecoming Day and that prizes might be given to those organizations, both student and civic, who present the most original and colorful display.

Indian-Spider Feud of Forty Years Standing to Be Renewed Thanksgiving

Many interesting happenings occurred in the year 1898. Spain declared war on the United States! M. and Mme. Curie discovered radium; and William and Mary met Richmond College for the first time in a game of football. Since this inaugural game, the two schools have met forty two times on the gridiron with Richmond winning twenty-three games, William and Mary winning fifteen, and four ending in ties.

That initial game, featuring handle-bar moustaches and a razzle-dazzle style all its own, must have been something for a freshman to write home about. Says the 1889 Colonial Echo: "On November 19 we played Richmond College on a park which was covered with so much mud and water that mass plays had to be resorted to altogether. Our boys were thus terribly handicapped by the impossibility of making their effective end runs, and the Spiders were able, under these circumstances, to win their most stubbornly contested victory of the season."

Just how "stubbornly contested" the game was, we don't know, but the fact remains that Richmond won their first game, 15-0. The Spiders also annexed the following three games by a considerable margin, and it was not until 1904 that William and Mary defeated Richmond on the gridiron. The Indians, although they were not then known as the "Indians," whipped the Spiders, 15-6 that year.

It was not until 1915 that William and Mary's athletic teams began being called "Indians." The name was suggested that year by an unidentified Flat Hat writer, because at that time William and Mary had an Indian school in the Brafferton Building and many chiefs from nearby tribes sent their sons to school there. The name was promptly adopted, and from that time on, William and Mary teams were nicknamed "Indians."

Before that time, the athletic teams usually were called simply Orange and Black, which were the school colors. The colors were not changed to green, gold and silver until 1923, and they were changed then because of the colors on the Royal Coat of Arms. This change of colors led to another team nickname—the Tri-Color—although for several years following, William and Mary football teams, under Coach Wilder Tasker, were frequently referred to as "The Fighting Virginians." This name of "Fighting Virginians" originated because of the fine showings William and Mary football teams were making against Syracuse, Harvard, and other strong Northern elevens during the early 1920's.

Incidentally, under the tutelage of J. Wilder Tasker, now head coach at Rutgers, William and Mary never lost a football game to Richmond. Tasker coached the Indians from 1923 through 1927, and in those five years the Spiders scored only two touchdowns against the Tribemen. One game, however, in 1927, ended in a scoreless tie. From 1924 through '27, William and Mary's immortal passing combination of Art Matsu to Meb Davis struck terror into the hearts of most Indian opponents, with Davis scoring the touchdown and Matsu adding the extra points with his uncanny dropkicking. Matsu followed this teacher to Rutgers and is now assistant coach there under Tasker.

When Coach Branch Bocock replaced Tasker at William and Mary in 1928, the Indians continued their mastery over the Spiders, winning 7-0 in '28 and again, 25-0 in '29. In 1930 "Honest" John Kellsion came in as head football coach and William and Mary again triumphed over the Spiders, 19-0. Richmond finally broke the victory string in 1931, whipping Kellsion's boys, 6-2. The Spiders won again in '32 by a 18-7 score, but William and Mary came back in 1933 with a 6-0 victory. This was the last win William and Mary has recorded over Richmond, although the two elevens tied 6-6 in 1935 when this year's co-captain, Johnny Coiner, scored in the final three minutes of play on a fluke pass from Otis Bunch. Richmond won last year, 6-0.

Before the 1920's, football teams thought nothing of playing the same opponent two, or even three times each season. Twice William and Mary played Richmond three times during the same season, the first time being in 1905. The first game ended 0-0 and this, apparently, was dissatisfactory to all concerned. The teams met again, and William and Mary, 4-0—a margin of victory so slight that another game was played, Richmond finally winning, 23-5. Again, in 1919, the Indians and the Spiders clashed three times. William and Mary took the first game, 7-0 but were humiliated in the next two by scores of 17-0 and 28-0. In 1914 and 1916 two games were played each year, Richmond winning three of the four.

When William and Mary and Richmond meet on November 25, rash indeed will be the person who would forcefully predict a victory for either team. For the past four seasons, the two teams have been so closely matched that a single touchdown has been the margin of victory each time and there seems no basis on which to name a sure winner this year. If there is any marked difference in the strength of the two teams, it probably lies in the backfield, where Richmond has a more plentiful supply of replacements than does William and Mary. Inasmuch as the line is concerned, William and Mary can match Richmond man for man, from end to end.

The speed of individual backfield men may prove the margin of defeat or victory in the coming Indian-Spider battle, just as it did last year. The Spiders won last year because Bill Robertson, Richmond halfback, was a shade faster than Johnny Trueheart, William and Mary halfback. Defensively, Trueheart was without doubt one of the finest backfield men in the state last year; and, on the play that led to Richmond's touchdown, Trueheart knew exactly what was going to happen. The play was a long pass from George Spears to Robertson, and, although Trueheart dropped back to cover the receiver, Robertson's superior speed enabled him to get beyond Trueheart, take the pass, and run to the William and Mary five-yard line before being knocked out of bounds. Richmond scored the only touchdown of the game in the next series of plays.

Speed won that game for Richmond and speed may win it for them again this year. Or, if William and Mary shows the faster men, the game might well go to the Indians. Victory or defeat in a football game so often can hinge on one seemingly unimportant movement—a flicker of an eyebrow, a deceptive body movement by any of eleven men, entrance of a fresh man into the game. These and hundreds of other things like them can determine the course of any game. Spectators are not aware of them happening, but individual players know what tricks them into making false moves and, conversely, how they trick opponents in much the same manner.

One thing seems pretty certain at this time. The sports editor who establishes either William and Mary or Richmond as favorite in this, the 1937 Indian-Spider football classic, should be laughed out of town. This is one year where there just ain't any such thing a favorite.
