College Approaches Two Important Anniversaries

July 4, 1942 will mark the 100th anniversary of the founding of the Alumni Association, an important event in itself but made more so by virtue of the fact that it immediately precedes the Quarter-Millennium anniversary of the establishment of the College.

For five years the Association, in coöperation with college officials, has been considering how these two events shall be properly celebrated and last March a committee of twenty-five alumni, appointed by President Peachy, met on the campus to perfect its organization. Vernon M. Geddy, '17, vice president of Williamsburg Restoration, Incorporated, was named chairman of the committee.

The committee, after lengthy consideration, decided to inaugurate a campaign for funds through which every alumnus would be given an opportunity to contribute to this birthday gift to the College. No similar campaign for funds has ever been directed by the alumni and the committee was of the opinion that the alumni would welcome this opportunity to make a contribution to the College as it approaches its 250th anniversary of service to her sons and daughters—to State and Nation—to the cause of democratic government. The modest sum of at least $10,000 has been set as the goal which should not be difficult to meet considering the fact that there are over ten thousand living alumni whose addresses are known.

Over three hundred men and women in every State in the Union have been asked to serve as managers of the campaign in their localities and each has been supplied with the names and addresses of alumni whom they are to contact. Before December 31st, when the campaign will close, it is expected and hoped that every alumnus will have been called and asked to contribute whatever amount he or she feels able to give. No definite amount will be asked of anyone and no contribution will be too little or too great. Contributions will be given to the managers who will in turn forward them to the committee in Williamsburg. On Alumni Day in 1942 the gift in the form of a check for the full amount received will be presented to the College as a part of a fitting program commemorating the founding of the Association and with the good wishes of the alumni to Alma Mater as she begins her second 250 years of useful service.

The names of all contributors will be printed in the GAZETTE in its anniversary issue next May and a memorial folder will accompany the check which will also contain the names of all contributors. This folder will be bound and placed in the College Library for permanent record.

In addition to chairman Geddy the officers of the alumni committee are: James Gordon Bohannon, '02, and Jeannette Sage Kelly, (s), vice-chairmen; and Charles Post McCurdy, Jr., '33, secretary. Members of the executive committee in addition to the officers are: Cornelia Storrs Adair, '23; Lucille Foster, '28; Thomas Glenn McCaskey, '32; Blake Tyler Newton, '11; and, Joseph Henry Saunders, '17.

The general committee is composed of two honorary members: Schuyler Otis Bland, '92x, and Thomas Jefferson Stubbs, Jr., '99; and twenty-five active members who are: James Malcolm Bridges, '25; Claude C. Coleman, '98x; Henry Jackson Davis, '02; Ashton Dovell, '08; Geddy; Channing Moore Hall, '08; Amos Ralph Koontz, '10; Newton; Saunders; Rex Smith, '20x; William Munford Tuck, '17x; Robert Perry Wallace, '20; John Weymouth, '94; and, Franklin Samuel Wilcox, Jr., '30.

The alumnae on the general committee are: Miss Adair; Katy Viola Anthony, '21; Martha Elizabeth Barksdale, '21; Lizinka Ewell Crawford (Ramsey), '33; Catherine Teackle Dennis, '21; Lucy Mason Holt, '24; Miss Kelly; Mary Thurman Pyle, '32; Caroline Baytop Sinclair, '24; and, Marguerite Wynne-Roberts, (s).

CALLING ALL ALUMNI

•By JOHN STEWART BRYAN

It is a privilege and an opportunity to speak directly to the Alumni of the College of William and Mary through the columns of their own Magazine. As a means of communication the written word has been a little depreciated in comparison with the voices which come over the radio, but it is more true than ever that "the written word remaineth," and there is something especially fitting when William and Mary is associated by word or deed with the fact and ideal of continuance.

It has always seemed to me that the most amazing attribute of William and Mary is precisely its indestructibility. The props of the British Government were knocked from under the first Royally Chartered College in America, but the Wren Building did not fall! The financial aid from the Boyle bequest was withdrawn from the successful rebels in Virginia, but teaching did not stop; the tax on tobacco was cut off, and yet students continued to come. It was not until the war between the North and the South had run its deadly course that devastation and destruction dispersed the faculty of the College for a few brief years. Then, like the fabled Phoenix rising from real ashes, William and Mary opened its doors again, and once more welcomed and nurtured exemplars of shining youth.

This miracle sprung from the will, the memory and the support of the Alumni. The memory of the part played under the British flag by the sons of this College, in establishing the Old Dominion, inspired the students of the new era to make sure and strong the future of the United States. It was this appeal that revived and drove William and Mary to fresh labors.

The same urge to larger life in a land newly set free animated the other colleges of the new nation, but the surrounding conditions were notably different. Harvard and Yale, for example, were strongly placed in commercial centers, while the exhaustion of the soil, never very good, in Tidewater Virginia drew many young men with William and Mary background and affiliations to the rich soils of the widening West. It was this change in the agricultural economy of Tidewater Virginia that depleted so notably the natural supply of Virginia students for William and Mary. Added to this handicap was the almost rhythmic recurrence of war and desolation. It was not until the presidency of Dr. Lyon G. Tyler that William and Mary started (almost from the beginning) once more on a course of steady progress.

The older Alumni will recall vividly the financial situation in Virginia at that time. The South was economically enslaved; taxes for a lost war, discriminatory freight rates, absence of money for industrial development, and the forced migration of the South's sons to the North and the West born of hopelessness at home, held Virginia in bondage. To have gone to William and Mary, and to have formed priceless friendships and associations at this College were the promises and the rewards of being an Alumnus; but this honor and satisfaction did not at first entail any corresponding obligation. The idea that sonship required service had not been developed, as in northern colleges, and though none of our Alumni half a century ago were able to make gifts of great munificence, few if any left College with the intent and duty of helping steadily to maintain their Alma Mater. Experience and example have combined to emphasize that William and Mary cannot maintain its relative position, much less expand, without steady and generous aid from her Alumni.

Important as it is, money is not the only thing necessary for a rich college life; imagination, scholarship, energy and character are the fundamental and irreplaceable requirements.

This session the College will for the first time take up scientifically and with full preparation the whole problem of dealing with personnel and student direction. The development of that valuable work is directly due to a study made by the faculty. Incidentally that survey has been highly praised by experts in this field, and holds promise of securing for each student the maximum use of his opportunity and capacity.

Likewise the brilliant pamphlet, "College and Career," was the sole creation of the faculty and administration. I shall later go into a fuller explanation of this idea and the efficiency of these undertakings, but in this communication I only wish to call attention to the good will, the energy and the high intelligence from which these suggestions sprang. The Alumni, seeing what the faculty has done, can take courage and certainty as to the progress of their College.

The first step for the Alumni is organization, and that has been taken, as this Magazine itself bears witness.

The next step is the will to give, and it will spring from interest in giving.

OFF AND ON THE RECORD

Tippecanoe and Tyler Too—

Pictured on the cover of this issue are two freshmen gazing upon the age-worn, highly prized statue of Norborne Berkeley, Baron de Botetourt—gazing as their fathers had doubtless done many times before them. To the left is Lyon Gardiner Tyler, Jr., whose beloved father was president of the College. To the right is William Mortimer Harrison, Jr., whose father was a member of the class of 1912. Both boys are the descendants of a long line of distinguished alumni who have made William and Mary famous. Harrison descends from Benjamin Harrison, a signer of the Declaration of Independence and his son William Henry Harrison who with John Tyler, the grandfather of the present student, ran for President and Vice President of the United States in 1840. The slogan which accompanied their campaign—perhaps the most famous of all presidential campaign slogans—is appropriately recalled today. Lyon Tyler and Bill Harrison, freshmen, roommates, are attending the College of their fathers. "Tippecanoe and Tyler too" are together again.

President's Page—

A new feature of the GAZETTE, appearing in this issue, is a message from the President of the College under the heading "Calling All Alumni." Mr. Bryan has agreed to contribute a message in each subsequent issue which will be received with a great deal of interest by the members because in it the President proposes to discuss a wide range of College matters about which many of the alumni will be concerned. Among the questions which may from time to time be discussed will be the College program—what has been done, is now in process, or is in prospect—the failures and successes—the accomplishments and needs. He may choose to discuss the work of the Board of Visitors, the administration, the faculty and students. Certainly he will suggest work which the alumni should undertake. College finances, methods of operation, athletics, extension work, a multitude of subjects—all may receive the President's point of view in such a way that the alumni will come to have a better understanding of College affairs.

Adair and Newton Retire—

Two of the most ardent supporters the College ever had retired from the Board of Directors of the Association in June after completing thirteen years of service. Cornelia Storrs Adair and Robert Murphy Newton will be remembered as two of the most constructive alumni to have served on the Board both of whom consistently displayed an intelligent interest in all questions brought before them for attention.

Cornelia Adair was one of the first two women ever elected to the Board and while ably representing the alumnae of the College, she never participated in any sort of "feminist flag waving," but on the contrary considered herself a delegate of the whole group of alumni whose interests were her interest. She, for example, was the strongest advocate of the 60-40 ratio between men and women students that is desired by all alumni. Those who have served with her on the Board since 1927 will probably best remember her for her outspokenness and independence. Every subject, small or large, received the benefit of her opinion and many times she stood alone in this particular. A majority had no influence upon her opinion if she believed her views to be right.

Friendly, pipe-smoking, never-in-a-hurry Bob Newton was no less independent and his views were always attentively heard and many of them adopted. He served one term as President of the Association and probably chairmanned more committees than any other member of the Board.

Getting Old—

On July 4th next, the Alumni Association will celebrate one hundred years of activity, expansion, accomplishment. It will forget the up and down process, inertia, and inactivity which interspersed the same period. It will reflect upon the many distinguished men who have served it and recall that ours is one of the oldest alumni associations in the United States. These things, we say, will be done on July 4th, 1942. Before then there is a job to be done and one which has not been undertaken before by the alumni of William and Mary. As announced in this issue, the Quarter-Millennium Committee is starting a campaign to raise a birthday gift to be presented to the College next year—a campaign to reach every town, county or city in the United States where our alumni reside. Over three hundred men and women throughout the country have already been asked to conduct the drive in their localities, even in Arizona, where there are three, to Richmond, where there are seven hundred.

A commemorative program of one hundred years of service in which the alumni will have an opportunity to contribute to a gift to the College for its two hundred and fifty years of service.

Have You Moved?

September is the month when rent-paying (?), house-buying, job-hunting alumni (10% of them) move around from house to house, street to street, city to county and vice versa, and tell everyone but the bill collector, magazine editor and alumni secretary. Did you?

Homecoming, etc.—

When one remembers that a few short years ago—three to be exact—some three thousand persons, including twelve hundred students, trooped out to the Stadium to fill eighty-five hundred seats, it is difficult to realize that at Homecoming this year it will be advisable to make reservations for the game in advance and that the game to be played that day between VMI and the Indians will be the most important game in the State. So great will be the crowd that day it has become necessary to sell tickets for the picnic luncheon on Lake Matoaka. Time was when the College could give this luncheon for the alumni without charge but there is a difference between two hundred and fifty and two thousand and five hundred returning alumni.

Defending a Championship—

As we go to press alumni, students and friends of the College are clamoring for a second state-championship in football. It is natural that they should do so, having starved so long before finally tasting the choice fruit of victory. These people feel that their appetites are as yet unsatiable.

Whether our desire can be fully met this year is not

Degrees to Marshall, Swem;—Metcalf, Mapp Elected to Board

Wayne Carr Metcalf and John Aydelotte Mapp

Wayne Carr Metcalf, '13Bs-17M, and John Aydelotte Mapp, '35Ba, were elected to three year terms on the Board of Directors of the Alumni Association at the annual meeting on Alumni Day June 7th. They succeed Robert Murphy Newton, '16Ba, Hampton, and Cornelia Storrs Adair, '23Ba, Richmond. Amos Ralph Koontz, '10Bs-11M, Baltimore, Md., was re-elected to succeed himself.

Metcalf, who formerly lived in Williamsburg, is now in Roanoke, where he is the general agent for the New England Life Insurance Company. As a student he was active in sports, being a member of the football team and captain of basketball during his senior year. In addition to his bachelor's degree, he received a teacher's diploma in 1912 and a master's degree in 1917. In 1934 he was elected to Phi Beta Kappa, Alpha of Virginia. After moving to Roanoke from Richmond several years ago, he became interested in the alumni chapter there which had been dormant for many years. Largely through his efforts, the chapter was revived and is today one of the most active organizations in the Association. Mr. Metcalf will complete his second term as president in October.

Mapp is the son of the late George Walter Mapp, '94Ba, who was rector of the Board of Visitors at the time of his death in February of this year. He entered the College in 1931 from Accomack and during his student days was one of the campus leaders. During his junior year he was editor of the Flat Hat, and in his senior year was president of the student body. He was a member of Omicron Delta Kappa and Kappa Alpha. Soon after graduation he became associated with the Richmond office of the National Youth Administration and in 1939 was made director of the Richmond Consultation Service.

Dr. Koontz has been a member of the Board of Directors since 1930 and is now the senior member of the Board. A surgeon in Baltimore, he is now medical director for the draft boards of the State of Maryland.

All officers of the Association were reelected for another year including Bathurst Daingerfield Peachy, Jr., '14, president; Walter Finall Cross Ferguson, '19, vice president; and,

Vernon Meredith Geddy, '17, secretary-treasurer. Ashton Dovell, '08, was reelected to the Athletic Committee and Henry Jackson Davis, '02, was reelected to the Alumni Board of Trustees for the Endowment Fund.

GLASS PORTRAIT RECEIVED

One of the principal features of the Alumni Day program was the presentation to the College by the New York State Bankers Association of a portrait of the Honorable Carter Glass, '35H, United States Senator from Virginia. A distinguished group of government officials and bankers, including Senator Glass; Preston Delano, comptroller of the currency; Herbert Case, former president of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York; Warren Randolph Burgess and Eugene Donovan, retiring and present presidents of the New York State Bankers Association, respectively; Virginia Congressmen Schuyler Otis Bland, '99x, Winder Harris, Dave Edward Satterfield, Jr., and Patrick Drewry; and, Bernard M. Baruch, attended the presentation which took place in the Great Hall of the Wren Building. Later, they attended the alumni luncheon at which time Senator Glass spoke briefly to those in attendance.

ALUMNI LUNCHEON

At the annual luncheon, presided over by President Peachy, the graduating class was formally welcomed by John Latane Lewis, '29Ba; Stanley Jack Ebb, '40Ba, received a prize for having come the longest distance to be present for the occasion; and Howard Paul Shaw, '44x, received the ALUMNI GAZETTE award for his prize winning essay "Or What's A College For?" which appeared in the May issue.

President John Stewart Bryan welcomed the alumni and then presented the alumni medallion to Dr. Claude C. Coleman, '98x, who was cited as follows:

To: CLAUDE C. COLEMAN, '98x, Richmond, Virginia.

Author of numerous medical publications.

President of Richmond Alumni Chapter of the College of William and Mary in Virginia and recently appointed to the Board of Visitors of the College of William and Mary in Virginia.

By resolution of the Board of Directors of the Alumni Association of the College of William and Mary in Virginia, I have the honor to present to you an alumni medallion in public recognition of your loyalty to your Alma Mater and to your devoted interest and continued service in her behalf.

James Noah Hillman, '05Ba-'09M-'31H, president of Emory and Henry College, delivered the annual oration and in the eloquent manner of which he is capable recounted the glories of American democracy and citizenship now organized in a death struggle with another system of government of organized hate and greed. He recalled the part which William and Mary alumni have played in the fight for and preservation of free government.

Prior to the luncheon and following the business meeting of the Association, memorial services were held at the grave of Colonel Benjamin S. Ewell with Roscoe Conkling Young, '10Ba-M, and Alfred Scott Anderson, '01x, reading the ritual.

Following the luncheon, Tony Pastor and his band gave a "swing" concert on the east front of the Wren Building and also played for the Alumni Dance held in the Sunken Garden. A smaller crowd of alumni returned for finals this year than in previous years due probably to the fact that many of the younger alumni are now in some branch of the service and were unable to return.

GENERAL MARSHALL SPEAKS

General George Catlett Marshall, Chief of Staff, United States Army, delivered the commencement address and was the recipient of the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws along with Earl Gregg Swem, college librarian and author of the Virginia Historical Index.

THE DEFENDING CHAMPIONS

•By SPIKE MOORE

If you take a quick look at the roster of William and Mary's 1941 football squad, you'll find that the Indians have six lettermen returning in the backfield, three lettermen at end, and one letterman at center. But when you get down to the guards and tackles, you find that only one letterman is available for each of these positions.

And that, to you experienced football observers, should be enough to convince you that the Indians are going to run into trouble this year in defense of their 1940 state Bix Six championship.

A chain is only as strong as its weakest link and, similarly, a football team is only as strong as its weakest points. And make no mistake about it—not by the wildest stretch of the imagination can William and Mary's forward wall be called as powerful as that of last year, either in first-line men or in replacements.

To set down the cold facts, Coach Carl Voyles has some of the best backfield talent in the state; he has three capable ends; and he has a proven center in Captain Bill Goodlow. But he has only Garrard (Buster) Ramsey at guard and only Marvin Bass at tackle. To help bolster the guard positions, Voyles has converted two of last year's freshman backs, Johnny Grembowitz and Elmo Gooden, and he also has sophomore Horace Knox, brother of Glenn Knox, one of the regular ends.

At tackles, there is only Marvin Bass, who won his spurs as a sophomore last year. Nothing came up from last year's frosh team that can be used right away. Billy Weeks, who played some at guard last season, is working at tackle, but he, like others who are working at tackle, is woefully inexperienced.

The end positions should be fairly well taken care of by Glenn Knox, Newell Irwin, and Al Vandeweghe. Knox and Irwin saw a lot of service as sophomores last year, and Vandeweghe, who played blocking back in '40, has shown up well in practice this year and should be one of the three first flankmen. Then there are Johnny Peterson and Walter Weaver, two boys whose greatest need is more experience.

Barring injuries, the Indians have a pair of pretty good

An Alumnus You Should Know

•By ROBERT CURTIS HARPER, '23x

(Robert Curtis Harper, formerly executive secretary of the Citizens' Road League of Virginia, is now serving as State press secretary. He is responsible for sending out news releases from all State departments. For many years he reported sports, finance and politics for Richmond's Times-Dispatch and News Leader. He served one term as president of the Richmond Alumni Chapter.)

When the Man of Galilee went about healing the sick, He provided an outlet for humanitarian efforts that has found notable expression in the field of medicine during succeeding generations.

Dr. Claude C. Coleman, Richmond, Va., one of William and Mary's most illustrious sons, is one whose self-effacement is equalled only by his ability.

Dr. Coleman, born on a farm in Caroline County, Va., knows the dignity of labor with the hands as well as with the head.

Measured by professional and other standards, Dr. Coleman has achieved national distinction in the realm of brain surgery. Yet his greatest happiness flows not from his own success, but in the careers of those he has trained . . . "it makes me happy to feel they will do a better job than their teacher."

To him has come honors galore, yet the modesty and simplicity of the man offers refreshing contrast, in this "go-getter" age, to a horde of "stuffed shirts and sacred cows" clamoring for recognition and wooing the collegiate muse.

As a student in 1897 Dr. Coleman won the R. Walton Moore essay contest on civil law.

William and Mary awarded Dr. Coleman the coveted Phi Beta Kappa key in 1921.

William and Mary chose Dr. Coleman in 1941 as the sole recipient of the prized Alumni Medallion.

Governor James H. Price early in 1941 appointed Dr. Coleman to the Board of Visitors of the College of William and Mary.

Son of Henry Frank and Jane Patrick Coleman, of Caroline County, Dr. Coleman was one of ten children. Each was sent to college in an age when money was not plentiful. Incidentally, another native of Caroline County, Julian Alvin Carroll Chandler, who had just graduated from William and Mary, interested young Coleman in attending the South's oldest institution of learning. Dr. Chandler, at the time of his death, was president of William and Mary and contributed greatly to its renaissance.

Then a frail lad of fifteen, Claude C. Coleman spent three years at the Williamsburg institution, obtaining a licentiate certificate entitling him to teach. Two years of school teaching followed. Entering the Medical College of Virginia, Dr. Coleman was graduated in 1903, following which he did post-graduate work at Polyclinic of New York.

"The thing that impresses me most as I look back on my student days at William and Mary," Dr. Coleman says, "is that the boys were earnest, hard students. It was regarded then by the students that going to college was a privilege. Today, it seems, almost everyone goes to college. Children today have greater educational opportunities, but I doubt if they study as hard as their fathers did. Most of us got our education the hard way."

In 1917 Dr. Coleman married Julia Langhorne Cone, their four children being Anne Putney Coleman, Julia Langhorne Coleman, Claude C. Coleman, Jr., and Jane Patrick Coleman. In 1931, a widower, Dr. Coleman married Ruth Threadcraft Putney.

Professor of oral surgery at the Medical College of Virginia from 1913 to 1929, the first world war found Dr. Coleman as director of the school of brain surgery, Medical Officers' Training Camp, Fort Oglethorpe, 1918, and chief neurosurgical service, Cape May, United States Hospital No. 11, 1919.

How is Dr. Coleman regarded in his profession? Let us quote Dr. Howard C. Naffziger, former president, American College of Surgeons, and now dean of the Medical School, University of California, at San Francisco:

"I believe Dr. Coleman's balanced judgment, his interest and experience in educational matters will make him a very valuable addition to the Board of Visitors of your most historic college. It has been my good fortune to have increasingly intimate, professional and personal contacts with Dr. Coleman for over 20 years. He brought to the practice of medicine an exceptionally quick and alert mind which was made manifest by his early scholastic record.

"Following a period of general medical and later general surgical practice, he manifested a special interest in surgery of the nervous system, and this was strengthened by his war experiences in 1917 to 1919. While stationed at Cape May, New Jersey, his surgical work in reconstruction of the wounded was concerned with the repair of nerve injuries, brain and skull wounds. His wide experience in that field obtained during that assignment and amplified by the large surgical material available to him since then, have been exceptional.

"His student days did not end in college. Continued studies have been combined with this vast experience.

"Dr. Coleman has manifested a particularly analytical mind with an unusual ability to separate the essentials from the non-essentials and then to crystallize his thoughts, that complex problems are made clear by a few of his simple, well-considered phrases.

"At medical meetings, his summary of a situation with reference to the problems of diagnosis, treatment, or research, are always listened to with expectancy and appreciation by the members. Good clinical judgment always characterizes his opinions.

"His value to medicine is attested by his highly prized and numerous publications in medical literature. The original contributions have covered a wide field, dealing with injuries of the brain, spinal cord and nerves, but also with brain abscesses, brain tumors, and numerous other special disorders.

CALKINS NAMED DEAN AT COLUMBIA

Formerly Dean of Commerce at University of California

Columbia University recently announced the selection of Robert DeBloie Calkins, Jr., '25 Bs, as the new Dean of the School of Business. Dr. Calkins has been Dean of the College of Commerce at the University of California since 1937 and Chairman of the Department of Economics there since 1935.

Robert DeBloie Calkins was a University Fellow at Stanford in 1928-29, instructor of citizenship in 1930, and an assistant in economics in 1929 and 1930-31.

Dr. Calkins joined the faculty of the University of California in 1932 as Assistant Professor of Economics. He was

Dean Calkins was a student at William and Mary from 1921 to 1925, when he received his B.S. degree. After graduation he worked for a short time with the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Company in Richmond, resigning to accept a position as Junior Research Associate at the Food Research Institute, Stanford University. He did graduate work in economics at Stanford and received his M.A. degree in 1929 and his Ph.D. in 1933. He was on the staff of the Food Research Institute during 1925-27 and 1930-32. He advanced to the Associate Professorship in 1936 and to the full Professorship in 1940. He has engaged in a variety of public service activities. In 1934 he was acting chairman of the San Francisco Regional Labor Board and later served as public representative on the Board. In 1934 and 1935 he served as regional representative of the NRA Consumers' Advisory Board and of the AAA Consumers' Counsel. He was appointed by the Secretary of Labor as impartial arbitrator of a labor dispute on the San Francisco Waterfront in 1937. He has been chosen often by employers and employees as impartial arbitrator of labor disputes during the past six years. In 1939 he served on Governor Olsen's Fact Finding Committee, appointed to investigate the dock checkers' strike in San Francisco. He has served as consulting economist to the Bureau of Reclamation to work out methods for handling the migratory fish at Grand Coulee Dam in Washington and at Shasta Dam in California. Recently he has made an industrial survey of the San Francisco Bay Area as a center of defense work for the State Planning Board and the National Resources Planning Board.

Dean Calkins has also been active in scholarly organizations. He is now president and was formerly vice-president of the Pacific Coast Economic Association. He is chairman of the Pacific Coast Regional Committee of the Social Science Research Council. He is a member of the American Council of the Institute of Pacific Relations, a member of the American Economic Association, the Royal Economic Society and other scholarly and professional associations.

DAVIS COMPLETES TWENTY-FIVE YEARS

Biology Department Head Ranking Member of Faculty

Dr. Donald Walton Davis, senior member of the faculty, completed his twenty-fifth year as a member of the faculty last June. His service has been continuous except for a leave of absence during the sessions 1917-19 when he joined the military forces of his country as a first lieutenant of infantry, being later appointed captain in the cavalry reserves.

Dr. Davis has had a distinguished record in the field of biology, both before and after coming to William and Mary. Taking his undergraduate work at Harvard, he received his A.B. degree in 1905, and became an assistant in zoölogy at the University of California where he remained until 1908. During this same period he was a naturalist of the Marine Biological Association of San Diego; a graduate student at Columbia University; and a scientific assistant at Woods Hole Laboratory of the United States Bureau of Fisheries. He was also a professor of biology at Sweet Briar College. He became a graduate student in biology at Harvard and instructor in zoölogy at Radcliffe College in 1909 and received his Ph.D. degree from Harvard in 1913. Before coming to William and Mary he was a professor at Clark College and DePauw University.

His first appointment at William and Mary was in the rôle of acting professor of biology during the absence of John W. Ritchie. Upon the resignation of Ritchie and upon his return from military service Dr. Davis was named head of the department by Dr. Chandler. With the growth of the College and under the direction of Dr. Davis, the biology department has become one of the largest in the institution. With only two professors, including himself, at the time his service began, the department now has a personnel of six.

Dr. Davis is a fellow in the American Association for the Advancement of Science, a member of the American Genetics Society and the American Botany Society. He is also a member of the Virginia Academy of Science of which he was president in 1927-28 and has delivered several papers and demonstrations before the Academy.

In the field of research he is known for his study of the genetics of the garden balsam (Inpatiens balsamina).

Dr. Davis is a member of Sigma Xi, Phi Sigma, Omicron Delta Kappa, and Phi Beta Kappa. Of the latter he has served as recording secretary of the local chapter, Alpha of Virginia, for many years.

THE POWER OF AN INSPIRED DEMOCRACY

The 1941 Alumni Oration

•By JAMES NOAH HILLMAN, '05

Mr. President, Fellow-Graduates, Former Students of the dearest college in the world to us, and all other friends:

This occasion, to at least one William and Mary alumnus, is a very signal honor. Thirty and nine years ago, the students of William and Mary believed the Commencement Alumni speaker to be one who represented, in a somewhat satisfactory manner, something of the ideals and traditions of "Ye Ancient College." In that day, a student in course hardly dared to hope that the time would ever come when he would be invited for such an honorable service. Let this speaker hasten to say, however, that you honor him today far beyond his deserts. His known limitations are often very embarrassing to him, and he fears even more often to his friends. Yet in the deep of his heart, he is sincerely grateful to you for your kindly consideration, as well as for your gracious invitation to share with you in the fine fellowship and the great joy of this delightful gathering. He will ever cherish the memory of this reunion of college friends as one of his mountain-top experiences along life's journey.

These are trying days. For centuries it has been true, but more so today, seemingly, than at any other time in the world's history, the issue of civilization is a democratic idealism or a totalitarian tyranny. This crisis comes in a day of power politics. Force is on the throne, and values which for thousands of years have been held dear, and loyally cherished, as desirable goals for abundant living, are being trampled under foot. Indeed it is a day of reaffirmation of our own American poet's faith, when, with inspired confidence in those values which abide, he wrote:

"Truth, crushed to earth shall rise again;
The eternal years of God are hers;
But error, wounded, writhes in pain,
And dies among his worshippers."

Humanity, at the time of its greatest potential possibility, is on the defensive today. It is being threatened by the "Blitzkrieg" attacks of motorized divisions, armored tanks, big guns, motorcycle corps, parachute invaders, roaring dive members, and high-powered and false propaganda—all bent on terrorizing and crushing every individual, or nation, who dares protest or disagree. One peace-loving and unoffending nation after another is being over-run. The ideal of conquest is not new, but the methods and the machinery which are being used today are of modern origin.

In all ages men have sought power. They have used and abused it. The cave man knew the power of the heaviest club. Knowledge is power, according to the sages of many centuries, but we are taught that it is power only as it is used. There are various types of power. There is a physical or natural power which constantly reminds man of his insignificance when he is compared with the infinities of the universe. No one can stand on the brink of Niagara and sense the power of the on-rushing water, as it spends its force in the mist and swirling tides of the tumbling waters of the river in the canyon below, without being somewhat conscious of his helplessness in its presence. One cannot be on the bounding billows of a great ocean without being aware of the seemingly limitless power of the fathomless deep. One cannot watch a thunder storm stalk its way across the mountain tops, or sweep in cyclonic fury across the broad expanse of extensive plains, or pitch and toss gigantic ocean liners on the mountain crests of an angry sea, without acquiring a very real appreciation of the unlimited, and as yet, unharnessed natural powers of the universe about him, and of his own weakness in comparison. Moreover, the power of the Grand Artificer of the universe is just as awe-inspiring in the handiwork of beauty as it is in the lightning's flash from an angry cloud.

Just a shower of gold-studded lace,
Where met the waves of radiant gleam;
A restless Deep, with uplifted face,
Joyously kissed each departing beam.
Sea and sky in golden robes are met,
And God had made an ocean sunset.

Again, there is a mechanical power which claims both one's admiration and his awe. The giant dynamo which generates the power to turn the wheels of industry in distant factories; the monstrous, streamlined Diesel railway engines that shuttle over ribbons of steel which tie together the long distances of our nation's vast expanse of territory; the great passenger airliners, to say nothing of flying fortresses and dive bombers, and the terrific power of modern high explosives which terrorize and destroy whole populations, whether such destruction is belched from massive long-range guns, or dropped from argosies of the air—all are exhibitions of a power which no man can contemplate without being acutely aware of his frailty and his impotence by comparison.

Furthermore, there is an economic power—or the force of material advantage—which holds millions of men as slaves to a state of mortal fear. The fear of failure; of hunger; of death and unknown existence, which oftentimes accompany the non-possession of material power—is appalling in the extreme. The instinct of self-preservation is so intricately interwoven with money and material security that a death-like grapple between the "haves" and the "have nots" continues to curse the whole of mankind.

Also, there is a political power, or the use of the advantages which political preferment brings. This type of power, like all others, has been wisely used, and criminally abused. Men are willing, even in this enlightened age of scientific achievement and opportunities for improving the well-being of all men, to continue to "wade through slaughter to a throne."

True, the manifestations of power move us to fear, to hate, to revere, and to fight—yet they are not the most important forces affecting the life of mankind. The power of man's spirit is the immeasurable force in the universe. It is not the modus operandi of democracy, but it is the power of democracy's eternal spirit, the power of inspired conceptions of liberty, justice, fellowship, and the freedom of conscience, which will preserve the American way of life, if indeed it is to be preserved.

William and Mary men, and women, with pardonable pride, rejoice in the early interest of this college in the building of good citizenship. It is no mere accident that this institution should have been the first college in America to establish a chair of law, or government. It but reflected the keen perception and the ready response of an institution directed by men who were aflame with the ideals of liberty and the desire to pursue happiness in their own way—and yet faced with the responsibility of providing a well-trained and intelligent understanding of the duties incumbent upon those who would become the leaders in the “noble experiment” of a government based upon the consent of the governed.

It was in this historic city that the torch of liberty in the western world was fanned into flame by the patriotic eloquence of Virginia's Patrick Henry. William and Mary men gave a good account of themselves in that early day, not only in the continental forces, but in the councils of State which framed the constitutional bases for our national existence. Again in the 60's, William and Mary men responded, almost in a unit, to the test of their integrity and good citizenship. So also, in every other emergency, the graduates of this college have shown the courage, the patriotism, and the daring which characterize worthy patriotic American citizens. They will not fail either their country or their college today.

To be an American citizen is greater than it was to be a Roman in the days of old. In Rome's pristine glory only a highly privileged few were permitted to enjoy the full blessings of citizenship; and that not because of any inalienable right, but rather because of position, family, or perhaps a purchase price. Comparatively few Roman mothers could hope to see their sons, never their daughters, enjoy the full privileges of free Roman citizenship. The benefits of citizenship in our American democracy are reserved to no special class. They are the heritage of all stratas of our society, whether native born or naturalized Americans. In this good land, every mother, from New England's “stern and rock-bound coast” to the fragrant, flower-laden gardens of Key West; from the bounding billows of the Atlantic to the ponderous placidity of the great Pacific, is privileged to claim for her offspring the American Pledge of “Equal opportunities for all and special privileges to none.”

The glory of American democracy is in the open road to the full development of the entire native endowment which any citizen may possess, regardless of position or rank. The humblest origins of birth and occupation are no bar, in the American pattern, to positions of trust and honor. The high compliment of being selected by one's fellow-countrymen to serve the common weal, regardless of the trappings of birth, family connections, or material fortune, is the highest conception of the sacredness of one's God-given endowment in the realm of human personality.

Yet our American democracy is not without its cost. It has been purchased at the price of hardship, self-denial, and even life itself. The sacred compact which we know as the American Union—dedicated to justice, domestic well-being, common defense, and the blessings of liberty, may have cost us little if anything. Let it be remembered, however, that if the faculty and students of William and Mary during those formative years of our Union could speak to us today, their recital of what they endured that we might have the heritage we enjoy would most certainly stab us awake and would surely cure some of the stupid indifference by which we are allowing subtle, insidious, and determined competitors, who have nothing in common with the American way of life, to rob us of the benefits we so much cherish. It is easy to take our blessings for granted, simply because they have cost us so little.

Arrayed against the advantages of American democracy are the powers of organized hate, the battalions of greed; wild tongues which hold nothing sacred; and all the “blitzkrieged” blood and iron policy which unleashed ruthlessness and inhuman barbarities can provide. Their watchwords are: believe, obey, sacrifice, die. These are stern words. Yet they represent the same creed which our fathers followed, only a few short years ago, that we might enjoy the heritage of our noteworthy American democracy. Shame on us that we many times treat our privileges with such little concern.

Her patriots of 1776 dared to die, ill-fed, ill-clothed, and ill-sheltered, amid indescribable hardships, that we, their children, might be free and independent. Have we the courage, the character, and the willingness to sacrifice, aye even to the death, that an all-out defense, if need be, may be provided for our American way, both for ourselves and for our posterity? Yes, we have! There are those of us who subscribe to the Christian standard which says: “As much as lieth in you live peaceably with all men.” There are those who try to be Christian in thought and life. They hate war. They know it is cruel and barbarous. They loathe the backwash of immorality and degeneracy which follow in its train—but war, with all its horror and destruction, as compared with the alternative of living under a totalitarian dictator, is tame indeed.

For any William and Mary man of this day, as well as for any other American citizen, to refuse to defend his most cherished values—the liberties which have been achieved and bequeathed to him through the patriots' blood; through mothers' and widows' tears; through orphans' cries—all representing the self-denial and sacrifice of a long train of liberty-loving ancestors, many of them former students of this ancient and honorable college—is to be unworthy to bear or to perpetuate their names; is to be unfit to enjoy the privileges for which they fought; and undeserving of continued protection under a flag made free by the long, long trail of toil, sorrow and death, which was in the wake of the American Revolution. It is also to be somewhat unappreciative of a National banner which was exalted by the hallelujahs that sprang from the soul of an enslaved race, when freedom came to it as an incident in the preservation of a democratic union—one and inseparable.

Benefits carry responsibilities. One can hardly be a good citizen, if indeed he can be an honest one, if he shares in all the benefits of a great democracy, and refuses to share in its burdens and responsibilities. We are all stockholders in that social plan which we call American civilization.

The assets of American democracy are much more than the gold and other precious metals in our vast mountain ranges; much more than the black diamonds which underlie Virginia's hills, and much more than the iron and steel in our great factories; much more than the bricks, mortar, and steel girders, which go into the construction of our hundred-story skyscrapers; aye, even much more than the dusty tomes of our great libraries. American democracy's real assets are the faith and character of the American people; for it is out of these intrinsic values that genuine progress is made available.

Uninterrupted progress, and a uniform continuous success, even in a democracy, is hardly to be expected. There always have been crises, and there will continue to be. There have been “dark ages,” disappointments, depressions, and exceedingly discouraging moments along the entire march of history. Yes, threatening forces are again on the march today—but whither? The recuperative forces of mankind will win this contest just as they have always done. America's first line of defense—yes, her impregnable fortress, is in the character and spirit of the American citizen. So long as unquestioned character, trustworthy integrity, and calm courage, control the life and thought of the American people, the Nation is safe. When American leadership becomes untrustworthy, then is the Nation vulnerable and in danger—however rich its lands; extensive its trade; vast its gold reserve; or strong its defense, whether of concrete hill-boxes, armadas of ships and airplanes, big guns, or armored and motorized army divisions. Any nation is weak when the masses of its citizens have no faith in their fellow-man or in their government, and are, themselves, without dependable character. Such a condition is the highway to defeat and to ultimate National extinction.

MODERN LANGUAGES AT WILLIAM AND MARY

•By JOHN ROBERTS FISHER

(This article is the twelfth of a series concerned with the various departments at the College. The next of the series will be on the Department of Government, and will be written by William Warner Moss.)

INTRODUCTORY

Recently Mr. Walter Lippman published in The American Scholar an arresting article on the place of classical studies in transmitting our cultural heritage. This presentation of the case, our educational leaders should read, mark and inwardly digest. It has needed a world war to bring to our dull perceptions the importance of mathematics and the modern languages.¹

If Thomas Jefferson recognized the educational values of modern languages in his day, how much more do we need them today, when communication has made the world much smaller! Splendid isolationism, still advocated by a few, is untenable. America cannot dwell in her ivory tower even if she chose to do so. The Atlantic is not a barrier but a highway.

We believe in the essential unity of all branches of learning, but particularly in the unity of all language study. Languages have an educational value particularly their own. In addition they furnish us with the necessary tools for investigating any and all subjects. Thus, would it not be well if all departments of our College required certain readings in foreign languages collateral to the subjects of instruction? Some departments are already doing this kind of constructive work. If our students intend to do any advanced study in any field, the tools must be available. The ability to read at least two important languages is a serious requirement of most of our universities today.

Who are the educated men and women who need careful training in at least one language not their own? Physicians, engineers and scientists, who must consult technical publications to keep abreast of their professions. Lawyers, historians and students of foreign affairs, librarians, teachers and radio announcers. The last are prone to mispronounce foreign words and titles. Anyone who aspires to a clear and correct use of English can benefit by the drill in pronouncing the sounds of a foreign language. One will no longer say subsidiary for subsidiary, assessor for accessory, convict for convict, parliament for parliament, evil for evil, gospel for gospel, etc. He who possesses the resources of another language and another literature enjoys a richer mental life and surveys a wider horizon.

During the World War I, the study of German almost entirely ceased in high schools and colleges. Today, although the popular disapproval of German policies is much more bitter, we are acting with more wisdom and are not discontinuing German. Even if France should be completely destroyed the precious things stored in the French language and French civilization would retain all their original significance.

HISTORICAL

Thomas Jefferson revised the curriculum of William and Mary in 1779. Among other new courses of study he introduced the modern foreign languages. For the first time in an American college was established the systematic study of modern languages. This is one of the prized priorities of the College.

To head the new department or school, Jefferson brought to Williamsburg an Italian scholar, Carlo Bellini. It is certain that he taught French and German, and it is considered very probable that he offered courses in Spanish. Sufficient recognition has not yet been accorded this great pioneer who served the College for many years. It is true that a plaque to commemorate the name of Bellini was erected some years ago in one of the College buildings. A good friend of the College, and member of the Board of Visitors, Mr. A. Obici, has given annually prizes of twenty-five dollars to each of two students who excel in Spanish and Italian respectively. These prizes are known as the Bellini prizes. But a chair of modern languages should be founded in honor of Carlo Bellini.

Another pioneer of a later date must be mentioned, Professor Edward B. Joynes. Professor Joynes was one of a remarkable group of southern scholars, for the greater part Virginians, who before the War Between the States began going to Leipzig for graduate study and returned to make a lasting contribution to education in the South. It is interesting to note the names of some of those great teachers who continued to go to Leipzig in the 70's and 80's, Dr. John Lesslie Hall of William and Mary, R. E. Blackwell of Randolph-Macon, Baskerville of Vanderbilt and Sharp of Tulane. Professor Joynes married a Miss Vest of Williamsburg and in 1875 was called to Vanderbilt and from there to the University of South Carolina. Professor Joynes' claim upon our attention is because of his numerous textbooks in French and German, some of which are still in use.

During Dr. Chandler's régime the teaching of Spanish and Italian was revived. A fine young scholar and an effective teacher from Mexico, Mr. Carlos Castaneda, organized the courses in Spanish. Mr. A. Obici gave a very generous foundation to establish the work in Italian. From time to time a native of Italy has given those courses.

One important recent development has been the practice of exchange of students and professors with France. During the past fifteen years William and Mary has each year received either a visiting professor or an exchange student from France and has each year sent at least one and sometimes two or three to teach in French institutions. Most of these young Americans have returned to teach in Virginia schools or do graduate work in various universities. This we believe to be a genuine contribution to the teaching of French and to international understanding and good will. This enterprise has had the cooperation of the deans who have guided the choice of students and given constant encouragement to the teachers and students concerned. A similar exchange has occasionally been extended to include German, Spanish and Italian students. All arrangements for making exchanges are worked out by the Institute of International Education, to whose directors we express our indebtedness.

In response to the great public interest in Pan-American affairs, the College began during the past summer a series of conferences and lectures on Inter-American subjects. Several more lectures are to be given during the fall term.

ORGANIZATION OF THE DEPARTMENT

It will be noted that all languages may be begun in College and under certain conditions all courses may be taken for credit toward a degree. Twelve hours in a modern language are required of all students, and if no foreign language was taken in high school, eighteen hours are required. The first and second years are concerned chiefly with the facts of the languages, vocabulary, forms, pronunciation, dictation, a minimum of syntax for comprehension, ability to answer easy questions on the text and reading of easy material for comprehension without translating.

The purely composition courses have been set apart from the other work and in both Spanish and French there are intermediate and advanced courses in composition. There are special courses for intensive drill in conversation in French and Spanish and sometimes in German.

The third and fourth years are organized around the literature.² We believe sincerely that the literatures of all four languages are worth studying for their own sake. But if any teacher wishes to use the study of literature as an excuse for further extension of oral skill, should it be considered a fault? Language is the best key to the psychology of a people. Geography, history and customs are also grist for the teacher's mill. But the wise teacher will avoid superficial diffusion, if he does not want to be accused of chasing every rabbit of an idea that jumps up. Relations with other languages and literatures, especially with English, may be pointed out, if important. The guiding principle of every language teacher is found in this statement: The students always take more interest when the instruction is centered on learning to speak.

Mention must be made that our library collections in the four languages are growing rapidly and are being used more by our students. Perhaps our Virginia high school teachers could be invited to make use freely of the resources of the library.

Each year French and Spanish Clubs are active in stimulating greater interest in the study of languages. Table groups for conversation in French or Spanish have been formed.

A plan is being pursued to equip a phonetic laboratory with all the mechanical aids for language learning: Phonographic records, projecting machine, dictaphone for recording progress in pronunciation.

SAUNDERS HONORED BY COLLEGE

Also Elected Chairman of State Board

Joseph Henry Saunders, '17Ba, superintendent of schools in Newport News, has twice been honored during the past four months in recognition of his distinguished service to Virginia education. At June commencement his alma mater conferred upon him the honorary degree of Doctor of Pedagogy, and in August he was elected chairman of the State Board of Education.

Saunders has long been associated with education, having been superintendent for the past twenty years and, in addition, has served as chairman of the board of trustees of the National Education Association and member of the executive committee for several years. Since 1931, he has been a member of the National Council of Education, and a representative of the N.E.A. on the American Council of Education, an institutional organization representing virtually all schools, colleges and universities in the nation. He was one of the original organizers of the Virginia Educational Association, serving as president in 1908, and has held many other important offices in the organization.

After taking his undergraduate work at William and Mary, he studied at the University of Chicago where he received the M.A. degree in 1924. He has been a member of the State Board of Education since 1930; made a member of Phi Beta Kappa, Alpha of Virginia, in June, 1920; and, received the alumni medallion in June, 1936.

In conferring the honorary degree upon him, Mr. Bryan cited him as follows:

"From the outset your career has been transfused with the love and practice of teaching.

"A student and graduate of the College of William and Mary, your knowledge has deepened and your capacity made more skillful under the administration of Dr. J. A. C. Chandler in the public schools of Richmond.

"Over a period of 45 years as teacher, principal, supervisor, and superintendent, your understanding, courage, and devotion have become increasingly manifest.

"To you and to others like you must go the credit for the advancement of public education in Virginia and in the nation.

"The survival of democracy depends upon the public will to learn and upon the constancy of educational service by those to whom the duty of teaching has been entrusted. As a citizen and as a public servant, you have eminently discharged the obligations to which your talents and your time have been wholly dedicated."

SONS AND DAUGHTERS OF ALUMNI ENROLL

Among the new students entering William and Mary this year are the sons of fourteen alumni and the son of a former president of the College. They are: William Fleming Addington, son of Ray Rufus Addington, '16Ba; Ross David Campbell, Jr., son of Roscoe David Campell, '23x; John Paul Carter, son of Josiah Tidball Carter, '11x; Robert Chandler, son of Herbert Gray Chandler, '20Ba, and grandson of the late J. A. C. Chandler; Richard Watson Copeland, Jr., son of Richard Watson Copeland, '20Bs; Cecil Clinton Crockett, Jr., son of Cecil Clinton Crockett, (a); James Everette Douglas, son of the late Otis Whitfield Douglas, '99x; Edwin Stonewall Hunter Greene, Jr., son of Edwin Stonewall Hunter of head injuries. This is about to be published by the Surgeon General as part of a war manual.

"Dr. Coleman's inquiring mind does not seem to permit him to fall into accepted grooves of routine methods, and his original ideas often lead the minds of his associates to productive ends. In this lies much of his value as a medical teacher.

"The brain surgeons of this country are well aware of Dr. Coleman's ability, depth of knowledge, experience, and frequently they seek his judgment and advice. He has been generous with his suggestions and has given them freely. Frequently, these have been adopted by others, published and credited to them in our medical literature."

This expert opinion of a fellow professional leader gives alumni of William and Mary an insight into the medical greatness of their friend, Dr. Coleman. As to his endearing personal qualities, Dr. Naffziger sums up the feeling of William and Mary alumni when he states:

"There are not many who combine in such generous measure the qualities of 'head, heart and hand.' When one finds these in a good friend and fine companion, one is surely fortunate, and this has been my experience."

Perhaps it would be fitting to conclude this sketch at this point, to avoid an anti-climax. But there are other things about this remarkable man that makes one feel that to "know him is to love him."

Dr. Coleman is unspoiled by success and worldly goods; he is today the same unassuming country boy who built his educational foundation the hard way.

To enumerate his clubs and the honors that have come to him is to labor the obvious.

His hobbies: athletic contests, especially the modern William and Mary football teams. It now looks like he will have to miss one of the Indians' games this fall, and the prospect saddens him just a wee bit.

Of course, I don't know, but I have an idea that Dr. Coleman will be a faithful traveler with the Indians this fall, and that "Medicine Man" Carl Voyles has no more loyal friend and supporter than the famed Richmond surgeon.

Dr. Coleman, as president of the Richmond Alumni Chapter of William and Mary, is taking an active interest in the loyalty campaign, and this means success.

What of William and Mary's future?

"I want to see more boys attending William and Mary, more Virginia boys if possible. I believe that Administration and alumni are imbued with the same objective and enthusiasm; the interest shown by the older alumni does my heart good."

And when Dr. Coleman's big heart is lightened, it is high time we lesser fry begin lending a helping hand!

At William and Mary, Dean Calkins was a member of Sigma Alpha Epsilon, Phi Beta Kappa, and several other professional and honorary fraternities.

The School of Business at Columbia has both an undergraduate and a graduate program. The School intends to adapt its program to the requirements of the future. The graduate program will be emphasized and it is the hope that the facilities offered by New York City for the study of business may be made available to students from all over the country.

As our Alumni know, William and Mary is one of ten institutions of higher learning administered by Virginia. It has been difficult, and at times impossible to get the bare minimum necessary to give essential instruction.

William and Mary can never realize its own possibilities by any path except the forward one. The faculty has given the lead for scholarship and, as the experience of all colleges shows, the Alumni must take up the work of Endowment. There is no other way.

"Herein lies wisdom, beauty and increase.

Without this folly, age and cold decay."

Today's crisis is not new. The present emergency in American democracy is not the first to which the American way of life has been subjected. George III attempted to bend America to his will; the institution of human slavery threatened to disintegrate and destroy America's Christian Soul and Conscience; and again, only a few years ago, an inordinate desire for economic advantage would have strangled America's international economy, if it had gained its objective. Each of these efforts failed. The first at Yorktown; the second at Appomattox; and the third on the battlefields of Northern France in 1918.

The present crisis, in some respects more dangerous to the world than any yet known to mankind, will pass. No one man or nation is wise enough, resourceful enough, strong enough, or rich enough to dominate the rest of the world. If opposing armies fail to halt him, the tides of the ocean can destroy him; if guns, ships, airplanes, tanks, and other engines of war cannot check him, the grip of old man Winter can strangle him; and if Christian diplomacy and sound reasoning be of no avail, then the forces of nature can make a funnel of the mountains and change the location of nature's oil tanks in the twinkling of an eye, and thus withdraw the sinews of war which are so needful for any plunderer to carry on. Yes, ere long the mills of the gods will put an end to this mad orgy of ambitious frenzy, and the world will move on a pace.

Faith and character—qualities which William and Mary has always inculcated, both by precept and example, are not easily defeated. They may halt temporarily, but they are never defeated. Herein lies a lesson for all of us who enjoy the blessings of this good land. We must hold fast to the true and tried virtues of our fathers—namely, plain, common honesty and an abiding faith in each other. To this end, let us dare to defend the cherished heritage of American Democracy, even to the extent of going to the death in its behalf.

Eternal vigilance is the price of victory as well as of liberty. Competitors are defiant today. Russian Communism boasts of its socialized medicine and the economic well-being of its followers; but let it not be forgotten that liberty is dead, human labor is enslaved, and freedom of thought and conscience is suppressed. Naziism breathes out death and destruction against all the values which we hold dear. The totalitarian state is absolutely and unalterably opposed to the American pattern of life. Its creed is blood, race, and soil. Democracy's dogma is brotherhood, love, and service. American citizens must choose today which pattern they prefer. If the dictator's way be more desirable than the American way, then join the dictators—and the sooner the better—but get out of America to do it. If freedom of speech, freedom of the press, freedom of conscience, and the guarantee of the rights of the minority be worthy goals, let us defend these values with our lives, if need be.

It is true that the American way of life is not perfect. There are very apparent imperfections. Those who love Democracy most are not unmindful of its weaknesses. We will have city slums; we still have share-croppers; we still have poverty and wide-spread areas of preventable disease; but with all America's faults, it is still the land of the free. We are still free to worship as we please. We still have freedom of thought; we still have freedom of speech; we still have freedom of the press; we still have freedom of assembly, we are still guaranteed protection of the rights of the minority; and we still have the right to enjoy the privacy of our homes with none to dare molest or make afraid. The malicious and maniacal forces abroad in the world, which would rob America and all the world of these liberties, offer no such blessings.

There are some things worse than death. To live a down-trodden, cringing slave is one of them. Better to give one's all—even life itself—and enter the broad highway to that "bourn whence no traveler returns," with head erect and the confident tread of a free man, than to live shackled in that bondage of abject slavery, both of body and soul, which the totalitarian state offers.

The time has come when all loyal Americans, and certainly this will include all students and lovers of William and Mary, should make meaningful the everlasting creed of the American way of life. With the resounding volume of 130 million voices, united in one courageous, unterrorizable and unconquerable spirit, let's sound a clarion blast which shall shake the foundations of tyranny around the earth, and establish respect in the hearts of dictators wheresoever dispersed. Let American democracy make known the determination of free men to live and to help others to live in the God-given sunlight of equal opportunities for all men. Let us wear in our hearts, as the insignia of American free men, the flaming and immortal words of Virginia's own son, who, in this Nation's infancy, shouted defiance to a tyrannical world, in his classic utterance: "Give me liberty or give me death."

May Will Irvin's prayer-hymn be the sentiment which will give inspiration to the power of America's greatness, and glorify the immortal spirit of her institutions, when he says:

"While the storm clouds gather,
Far across the sea,
Let us pledge allegiance
To a land that's free.
Let us all be grateful
For a land so fair;
Let us raise our voices
In a solemn prayer.

"God bless America, land that I love;
Stand beside her and guide her
Through the night with a light from above;
From the mountains, to the prairies,
To the ocean white with foam—
God bless America, my home sweet home."

This is the spirit which wings its way today from fifty-thousand poppy-covered graves on a foreign strand, where sleep those thousands of our sainted dead; and it stirs the patriotic fervor of every red-blooded American citizen to make good the ideals for which those gallant young men, the flower of American manhood, paid with their lives. William and Mary men, and all other loyal American citizens, will not be recreant to duty in the stern emergencies of this tragic day or under the heartache of this solemn hour in which we live. America is still "the land of the free." Yes, America is yet free. May it be grandly true that all really patriotic Americans shall be united in one solid and impregnable phalanx—as they make known to the world, yes, to a broken and blood-soaked world, and in no uncertain terms, their adamant determination that a "government of the people, by the people, and for the people, shall not perish from this earth," but that it shall continue to inspire the hearts of liberty-loving men throughout the whole wide world, and shall perpetuate to all posterity the blessing of liberty and the pursuit of happiness in a Democracy where dwell a people who shall deserve to be included, now and forever, among the bravest of the brave.

Request for Biographical Data on Alumni of William and Mary

The staff engaged in research on the history of the College, under the direction of E. G. Swem, librarian, has prepared a Provisional List of Alumni, Grammar School Students, Members of the Faculty, and Members of the Board of Visitors of the College of William and Mary in Virginia, from 1693 to 1888, as an appeal for additional information about alumni.

The foreword to this list explains how the list was prepared and why it is necessarily incomplete. To those who believe they might be able to contribute data, E. G. Swem will be glad to send one of these lists.

backfield combinations, which include such known players as Jimmy Howard, Harvey Johnson, Johnny Korczowski, Harold Fields, Harlie Masters, and Jim Hickey. Three sophomores—Jackie Freeman, Bob Longacre, and Dave Bucher—can also be counted on for active duty this year.

Besides Captain Goodlow at center, the Indians have two sophomores, Tex Warrington and Joe Bottalico. Goodlow was given a try at guard this year and Bottalico had a whirl at tackle, but it is expected that both boys will do most of their playing at the pivot post.

And there they are. Given two more good tackles and two more good guards, Coach Voyles admits he would have a "pretty good" team on the field this year, better perhaps than his 1940 state championship club. But he doesn't have the guards and he doesn't have the tackles. That's why there's tough sledding ahead for the Indians. Ask your nearest coach what happens to teams that don't have good guards and good tackles.

known and Coach Voyles, all others to the contrary notwithstanding, indicates it cannot be. It is too early for the laymen to predict but it should be pointed out that the 1941 team is confronted with a somewhat different set of problems than was the 1940 team. In the first place the line is weaker in spots and lacks good reserve strength and in addition "the schedule is tougher." Some of our opponents of last year are stronger this year and on successive week-ends we shall compete with George Washington, Dartmouth, Virginia Military Institute, Richmond and North Carolina State—five strong teams in a row—offering no breathing spell for the INDIANS. It is a schedule that William and Mary fans have hoped for for many years and, in final analysis, that which will count the most with those in the stands is the fight which the Indian team is certain to put up at each game.

As the season begins every one of us wishes the coaches and the team the very best of success and we say this with assurance that whatever the tally may be at the end of the season we shall continue to be behind them 100 per cent.

Hello Everybody—

Did you have a nice summer? Mine was delightful. I spent the first week in June in Williamsburg and had a grand time in spite of a four day rain (but then, rain is part of Williamsburg, more so than any other place I know).

Finals were, as usual fine, but not as many people back as last year. I missed a lot of you—maybe we'll see each other at Homecoming.

After leaving Virginia I spent a week in Silver Spring, Maryland, and one in Fairbury, Illinois. In Chicago, of all places, I ran into Raymond Wilson Dudley, '39Bs, who was looking very fine in his Ensign's uniform.

Pearl Jeannette Haigis, '39Ba, writes that she fell into a fine job in March—private secretary and assistant to the head of the Purchasing Department for Kendall Company—and she has her own private office. (Rusty, that is definitely no job—it's a position!) After William and Mary, Rusty went to Chandler Secretarial School in Boston. April 29th her family announced her engagement to Irving W. Henderson, who has a position with the S. S. Pierce Company in Boston. Thanks, Rusty, for writing. You can reach our junior executive at 2 Liberty Street, Foxboro, Massachusetts.

Eva Rose Colby, '39Ba, writes that she is just starting a new job in Buffalo, as secretary to the president of a manufacturing concern which at present is very busy being a defense factory. Prior to this time Rose had a secretarial position in a local bank. On the side she is going to study more art. You can write Rose at South Buffalo St., Orchard Park, New York.

Rose writes, also, that Marjorie Harkness Bowman, '39Ba, is working in the reservations department at the Pennsylvania Station in New York and that Carroll Whitney Hutton, '39Ba, is working in Richmond.

I saw Jane Stewart Gay (Warren), '39x, Labor Day weekend in Pittsburgh. She is living now in Hinsdale, Illinois, 213 South Clay Street.

Elaine Rosewell Bentley, '39Bs, is teaching at Oceana and Rebecca Anthony Timberlake, '39Ba, is librarian at the Consolidated High School, Matthews Courthouse.

Ruth Ellen Brill, '39Bs, is with the Personnel Office of the Farm Securities Administration and lives at 1400 Massachusetts Avenue, North West, Washington, D. C.

Jeanne Belle Etheridge, '39Ba, attended the University of Chicago this past summer.

Stanley Kamen, '39Bs, is coaching at the Norfolk Division of the College of William and Mary.

John W. Teal, '39Ba, is with The Noland Company at Newport News.

Anthony Pelzer Wagener, Jr., '39Bs, received the M.S. in Chemistry from Carnegie Institute of Technology on June 2nd.

Christine Weaver, '39Bs, is teaching the 6th and 7th grades at Yorktown.

Margaret Helen Williams, '39Ba, is with the J. Walter Thompson Advertising Company in New York City.

I would certainly like to hear from more of you, to know where you are and what you are doing, etc., so—I repeat that well worn phrase, "please write."

Homecoming is on November 8th. Let's try to go back before we are too old to recognize each other.

FRANCES GRODECOEUR, '39Ba, Permanent Secretary
810 Howard St., Monongahela, Pennsylvania.

This may be a wonderful time in which to be young (and single) but it is a terrible time in which to try to keep track of some 279 young people!

We certainly don't lack news this issue; however, we do lament the fact that four months have elapsed since some of it was sent in and, there's no telling where half of you are by now. We record it all, nevertheless; if it is not news, it is history.

Francis Joseph Yeager, '40Ba, wrote last April (just too late to catch the May issue) and accounted for himself during the year previous. Two months of the summer following graduation Frank was in Cuba with the All-American Baseball Team and played in the International Baseball Tournament that took the place of the Olympics in Japan. When he returned he went with the Liberty Mutual Insurance Company working out of their New York office. He ushered at Albert Clark Allen's, '40x, wedding on November 30th. All was calm until his draft number came up—it was so low he enlisted with the Pennsylvania National Guard on January 13th. It's a Field Artillery Unit, firing the 155-mm. Howitzer guns. He was a corporal in the instrument section and was taking the Army Extension Course with an eye on a commission in the regular army. He sent his best wishes to all of you . . . from Camp Shelby, Mississippi (Battery D, 166 F.A.).

Tommy Bryant, the bouncing boy of Catherine Edge (Bryant), '40Bs, and Francis Epps Bryant, '41Ba, now boasts 17 lbs. and what's more, he had 2 teeth at the meager age of 4 months. (This ought to bring in some letters from others of you proud parents.) Kitty and Tweedy are now living at 512 Newport News Avenue extension. Hampton. Tweedy is with the electrical department of the Newport News Shipbuilding and Drydock Company. Fred Stanley Worster, '40Bs, and his wife, Virginia, who were married at the same time that the Bryants were married, are building their home right next door to the Bryants so that their daughter, Daphne, can play with Tommy Bryant. Hope they are still living there when the children get old enough to appreciate this effort.

Merritt Foster, '40Bs, we hear, has been sailing his boat in the races at Irvington with the Rappahannock Yacht Club.

Margie Barnes, '40Ba, has been working with the State Legislature in Chattahoochee, Florida, but plans to return to Washington this winter.

Shirley Sheain, '40Ba, has moved to the Prestwoud Apartments here in Richmond and plans to continue working as receptionist and office manager at the Richmond Professional Institute.

Jayne Magee, '40Ba, having graduated this summer from the Enoch Pratt Library Training School, is continuing her studies at Columbia University. She just doesn't know when to stop, but we are proud of our classmates that can take it—more and more sets of exams and stuff!

Frances Wagener, '40Ba, PBK, received her M.S. from the New York University School of Retailing last June and is now working in the art department of Miller & Rhoads, Incorporated, at Richmond.

Gervais Wallace, '40Ba, we note by the current issue of Mademoiselle is adding modeling to her long list of accomplishments. This new art, plus her dancing with Arthur Murray gives her a promising future.

James Newcomer Dill, Jr., '40Bs, will attend Temple Medical School this winter.

Virginia Forward, '40Ba, is working in the department of the Construction Quartermaster at Aberdeen Proving Grounds, Maryland.

Virginia Everett Garrett, '40Ba, is librarian at the high school in Mount Jackson.

Geraldine Mabel Gorden writes, "I am no longer teaching in the High School at Great Bridge but have surrendered that honorable profession for an interesting position in the Engineering Branch of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company here in New York City. I am living at home, 7822 Colonial Road, Brooklyn, New York."

Frances Kuhn, '40Bs, is on the staff of the Woman's Page of the Evening Star in Washington, D. C., and lives at 4550 Connecticut Avenue, Northwest.

Carolyn Frances Moses, '40Ba, is librarian at the Appomattox County Public Circulating Library, succeeding Violet V. Ramsey, '36Ba.

Mary Willis O'Farrell, '40Ba, is with the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, Washington, D. C. She is living at 1533 New Hampshire Avenue, Northwest.

Charles Loreaux Quittmeyer, '40Ba, PBK, is with the Century Indemnity Company (Underwriting Department). He lives at 424 Beacon Street, Boston, Massachusetts.

Kathryn Ann Sherman, '40x, is an Eastern Air Lines hostess.

Helen Bernice Vince, '40Bs, is teaching Home Economics at the Middlesex County High School. Her address is c/o Mrs. Gary, Saluda Inn, Saluda.

Susie Elizabeth Vincent, '40x, is in training at the Stuart Circle Hospital School of Nursing, Richmond.

Alfred Rosser Walton, Jr., '40Ba, is an Investigator for the Retail Credit Company in Norfolk. He lives at 127 Court Street, Portsmouth.

Nella Whitaker, '40Ba, is working at Kugler's in Philadelphia and seems to be having the time of her life puttering around the president's office, where she is assistant to his secretary.

SEE YOU AT HOMECOMING! !

ROSA L'ENGLE ELLIS, '40Bs, Permanent Secretary, 2416 Bryan Park Avenue, Richmond, Virginia.

I've decided if I am to be a first class columnist that I must have one of those Winchell-Bernie feuds, and so, Miss Grodecoeur, I'm starting with you. It all mounts up to one thing, the Class of '41 opposing the Class of '39 or what is more like it, it's a case of mail going to Pittsburgh (pardon, Fran, Monongahela!) or Philadelphia. I'm hoping it comes this way.

My news for this first letter, as an alumna, is rather scarce, but I shall tell you what I can of the class as it now stands, scattered all over the U.S.A. and Virginia.

By a mighty strange coincidence, both June Lucas, '41Bs, and Charles R. Gondak, '41Ba, are working for telephone companies; June in New Haven with the Southern New England Telephone Company, and Chuck with the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Company. June writes that she confidentially doesn't believe that all this nonsense about the white collar girl is too true, but I guess right now it's a very bad case of wishing she were going back to Williamsburg. (Who doesn't?)

C. T. Holbrook has been transferred to the Washington, D. C. office.

Sterling Thomas Strange, Jr., '41Ba, (Cadet Strange, pardon) is now in Jacksonville, Florida, along with Bertel Richard Rasmussen, '41Ba, and probably John Brodka, '41Bs, by this time, taking the advanced training course in the Naval Air Reserves. Buddy and Bert are both hoping and working hard along with their hopes to get their commissions. Buddy writes that John Brodka is expected soon to be appointed a cadet. Others in the service are Saunders Mann Almond, '41Ba, who, we understand, is in the Naval Supply Corps; Norris Epworth Lineweaver, '41Ba, who is in the Marine Corps at Quantico; William Edward Plitt, '41Ba, who is a midshipman (V-7) at the Naval Training School, New York; Harry Kyle Barr, Jr., '41Ba, is at Fort Dix and expects to go to Fort Monmouth for officers training for the Signal Corps; Kormic Lapolla, '41Ba, when last heard of, was heading for a place in the Flying Cadets. Coleman Bernard Ransone, Jr., '41Ba, PBK, had the distinction of drawing the first number in the last draft lottery in Roanoke.

I understand that both Edmund Raymond Goodlow, '41Ba, and his Brother Bill are working in Richmond for a tobacco company. Ellen Frances Lindsay, '41Ba (thank you for all your news) worked in Washington at George Washington University the first two weeks she was home and now has completed a course in switchboard operating and expects to start working along that line shortly. Stephen Edward Lenzi, '41Ba, when last heard of, was still unemployed but plans to run for alderman of his ward, come next election. Frances Olivia Paul, '41Ba, was working in Washington at the Red Cross Department of Information. It is rather like a bureau of missing persons and Frances finds it fascinating work.

Ruther Staebner, '41Ba, has a library and teaching position combined awaiting her in the fall, Frances Sarah Knight, '41Ba, is a secretary in the Brazilian Embassy in Washington. She has the distinct advantage of being able to speak Portuguese. Sounds marvelous, Frankie.

Alphonse F. Chestnut, '41Bs, writes that he has been in Williamsburg all summer doing some research work for Dr. Newcombe in the Biology Laboratory and plans to continue at the College this fall as line coach for freshman football and will also do work on his master's degree. Lucky fellow, I'd say. Guess most all of us wish that we could be heading that way about now. Evelyn Winifred Kempfer '41Ba, was also at the College this summer working in the library. Mary Katherine Edinger, '41Ba, is the new secretary for the Fine Arts Department, taking the place of Nancy Peed (Muecke) '39x.

Grace Cozens Hopkins, '41Ba, PBK, is attending secretarial school in Tuscon, Arizona. This seems to be the conventional thing for most college graduates to do these days. I called up Kitty Jane Britton, '41Ba, this evening and she said she had been, and still is, attending business school this summer. And speaking of going to school, Jean Margaret Klinefelter, '41Ba, PBK, is planning to attend Radcliffe this year to do graduate work in Philosophy on a fellowship granted her by that institution. She also attended a conference at Wellesley this summer where she had many pleasant discussions under the guidance of Dr. and Mrs. Alexander Meiklejohn. Ruth Evelyn Rapp, '41Bs, was attending Columbia this summer doing work in Psychology. Peggy Lehair, '41Bs, says that she was taking part of her work on her master's degree there before settling down to teach physical education in a private school in New York City. Peg says that the most peculiar thing about the whole situation is that she will be coaching her teams to play against the teams of her old Alma Mater. Mildred Russell, '41Ba, is working in a law office in New York City and plans to attend the Brooklyn Law School in September. Dorothy Yates Judd, '41Bs, is head of the physical education department in a private girls' school in New Jersey.

Eugene Webster Ellis, Jr., '41Bs, is working at the Naval Air Station in Providence, Rhode Island, as a material checker for the contractor. Richard Wadams Earle, '41Ba, is with the DuPont Company in Arlington, New Jersey, and Thomas Crawley Davis, Jr., '41Bs, PBK, is working for DuPont in Charleston, Indiana.

Mildred Raye Jennings, '41Ba, has been with the Plymouth Playhouse this summer and seems to be making out quite well. When I received a card from her she was touring with the players in nearby-towns in "George Washington Slept Here." William Stephen Parry, '41Ba, writes that he is working for Price, Wateshouse & Company, Public Accountants, and at present is working over at the Warner Brothers Studio, Hollywood. He says he spends his lunch hours roving around seeing how "Mr. and Mrs. America's favorite entertainment is made." Dorothy Miller Ogden, '41Ba, is also on the west coast. What she is doing is unknown. She may be heading for Alaska to study conditions for a sequel to "Peace Brothers, It's Wonderful"! . . .

Lawrence Albert Pettet, '41Ba, who has perpetuated our class activities in one of the best issues of the Colonial Echo since 1800, is a traveling auditor for the Jersey Central Power and Light Company, and is already looking forward to Homecoming with as much enthusiasm as most of us. Jean Ridgeway Cox, '41Ba, is secretary in a lawyer's office in Norfolk, and she writes that she manages to have lunch quite frequently with Ellen Elizabeth Butt, '41Ba, who is also working in Norfolk.

Mary Nelson Williams Hiden, '41Bs, who finished in summer school, is planning to be at the University of Pennsylvania this year to do graduate work in Chemistry. Betty Maxine Boyd, '41Ba, is working here in Philadelphia in an employment office. A safe place, I'd say.

Marion Edith Craft, '41Ba, PBK, writes that she has been working for Best & Company, Fifth Avenue, for the summer and perhaps may be there this winter. Elizabeth Reynolds, '41Ba, has been camping in New England for the summer and Jane Dorcas MacNeil, '41Ba, has been "guarding her fleeting youth at the Country Club," Richmond—to quote her, second hand. Marie Elizabeth Hellers, '41Ba, was teaching this summer, where, is unknown. Nancy Wood Chisholm, '41Ba, last heard from, was heading to Virginia Beach, putting mileage on that "smooth" new convertible she got for graduation. Beverly Adams Coleman, '41Ba, we hear, is working in the library at Agnes Scott College, Decatur, Georgia.

H. Haddon Dudley, '41M, has become president of Chowan College, Murfreesboro, North Carolina.

Julian Murray Howell, '41Ba, is principal of the school at Laurel.

Nancy Dickinson Johnson, '41x, graduated in June from the Columbia Presbyterian Hospital School of Nursing in New York City.

Clifton Holland Kreps, Jr., '41Ba, PBK, has been awarded a scholarship for graduate work in Economics at the University of North Carolina for the session 1941-42.

Walter Sparks Measday, '41Ba, PBK, has been awarded a scholarship for graduate work in Economics at Duke University for the session 1941-42.

Carl Andrew Muecke, '41Ba, PBK, is state supervisor of a defense clerical assistance project, Richmond.

Eleanor Rowan, '41Bs, is student dietitian at the Flower and Fifth Avenue Hospital, New York City.

Donald Paige Reid, '41Ba, PBK, is in the Disbursement Accounting Department of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Company of Baltimore. Don, with Frederick Henry Arend, '41Ba, and Ralph West Hart, '41Ba, lives at 18 East Madison Street, Baltimore, Maryland.

As for me, I started work just two weeks after graduation with a firm of Insurance Brokers in Philadelphia, and am still trying how to decipher my boss's up-state Pennsylvania Dutch, and having rather a bad time of it. Still, it's great to be independent, though rather a lost feeling not being able to return to rainy walks, Restoration, the Wren Building, Phi Beta Kappa, cokes, beer at the Greeks and all those familiar things that we all will remember fifty years from now, when our grandchildren are graduating from that "great institution," and we are saying, "I remember when . . ."

Please don't forget to drop me a line and let me know where you are and what you're doing. I'll answer any of you who write and 'specially those of you in the Service who like to get a letter now and again.

MARJORIE TAYLOR GILDNER, '41Ba, Permanent Secretary,
33 Forrest Road, Springfield, Delaware County, Penn.

1942—

Victor Angelo John Raschi, 42x, signed with the Newark team of the International League.

Robert Tepper, '42x, has been appointed assistant naval attaché, American Embassy, London. He is an Ensign in the Naval Reserve.

1943—

James Gilmer Heath, '43x, is training at the Bombing and Gunnery School, Fingal, Canada, preparatory to being sent to England as a pilot in the R.A.F.

Deaths

Warner Throckmorton Langborne Taliaferro, '76Ba, on June 4, 1941. A member of one of Virginia's and the College's most distinguished families, Dr. Taliaferro, for many years, had been one of the oldest graduates of the College which he entered in 1874 and from which he received his degree in two years.

In 1892 he became associated with the Maryland Agricultural College, now the University of Maryland, and remained in active service until his voluntary retirement in 1937. He instituted courses in practical agriculture and agricultural science and made such a name for the College and himself that in 1916 he was the recipient of the honorary degree of Doctor of Science.

At William and Mary he was honored by election to Phi Beta Kappa and was one of the first recipients of the Alumni Medallion in 1934. The Taliaferro family has long been associated with William and Mary. His father, Major General William Booth Taliaferro, was a graduate in the class of 1841, and was President of the Board of Visitors from 1888 until his death in 1898. Three brothers were also students at the College: James Lyons, '74; William Churchill Lyons, '92x, who survives; and, Edward Carrington Stannard, '96x.

Roberts Bledsoe Moore, '94x, on September 21, 1940, in Newport News. He is survived by his son, Roberts Cosby, '28x.

1901—

Thomas B. Hurst, '01x, on January 10, 1941. He is survived by his brother James, '99Ba.

1906—

William Edward Colonna, '06x, on May 24, 1941, at his home, Newport News. He is survived by his son, William Edward, Jr., '35Bs.

1920—

Miles Parker Omohundro, '20x, on July 28, 1941, at his home in Washington, D. C. Dr. Omohundro received his medical degree from the University of Virginia and had three and a half years training at the Mayo Clinic. He was a member of the American Medical Asso., and the Urological Asso. Are You Pestered by Life Insurance Agents?

A certain man of affairs complained that he was "pestered by life insurance agents."

To this a friend replied, "You should feel flattered. Their 'pestering' you indicates that you are regarded as prosperous, in sound health, and disposed to respect your responsibilities. Don't start worrying until the life insurance boys begin to pass you by."
