GREETING

1913

W. J. P.

Greeting

It
this, the eleventh volume of the Colonial Echo, contains certain memories which, in the twilight days of life, will carry us back to the scenes of our Alma Mater; if it embodies those remembrances which we hold dear;
if it shall serve to kindle the fire of recollections which we would treasure,
then we have not labored in vain

Dedication

Dedication

To one whose life has been spent for the enlightenment of men ; whose unremitting toil for the upbuilding of William and Mary has yielded fruit a hundred fold ; whose wisdom and counsel have been ever a tower of strength in developing a greater institution ; and whose love for the old College will grow brighter and brighter as the evening of life draws near, with its promise of a joyful reflection upon a well spent life.

To John Leslie Hall, Ph. D.

this volume is sincerely dedicated.

The Dream King

So he's gone into his kingdom,
Where the fairies loiter at ease;
Where his broken toys lie waiting
In the Ship o' Seven Seas.
What surprises will awaken
In his blue-eyed baby stare,
When he finds the great, good fairy,
Whom he called his "mudder," there.
Yes, the little king was sleeping
As I held his hand last night,
But I whispered to his spirit
Just one message, ah, so bright!
And I kissed the royal forehead
As I clasped my hands and prayed,
"Tell the good, kind fairy, Darling,
Of the castles that we made."

“ Oh, That We Two Were Maying ”

I remember you sat in the shadows,
    You played and none heard but me ;
A breath came up from the meadows,
    And a wind came in from the sea.

That Spring for so long awaited
    Seemed living at last for me,
All radiant with roses sated
    And fraught with a melody.

Still we lingered there deep in the shadows,
    With no sound from the pastures asleep,
But a perfume blew in from the meadows
    And the deep softly called to the deep.

- Wm. Kabanangh Doty

Ego

This is the song of a Soul, a song eternal and true ;
This is the song of a Soul,—I am that Soul, and you.

Out of the dim primordial fount
I rise and I mount,
I am the Source and the Stream,
The Sun and its Steam,
The Dreamer and Dream,
And the Theme, which is I, belong
To Singer and Song.

I am the Birth, the Life, and the Death,
The Weather and Breath,
Changeless, yet ever changing,
I am the Infinite ranging
The Soul and the God,
Lo, I am You, and You are I, and We are God.

Thou who must live for me, and must die
In travail that I,
Soul of the Infinite Fire,
May live and aspire
To life that is high'r,
Rejoice ! rejoice ! for I,
Having lived, shall die.

This is the Law of the Ebb and the Flow :
I come and I go,
Dea, though the Ways are winding,
And the sorrows of years are blinding,
Eternal am I !
And Time and Tears like wind—blown phantoms pass me by.

This is the song of a Soul,—exultant, eternal, and true ;
This is the song of a Soul,—I am that Soul, and You.

—Martin Feinstein

1911 THE EXCEPTIONAL MEN OF 1911

KENNETH ARNOLD AGEE,
Teddy, Virginia.

CANDIDATE FOR M. A. DEGREE.

Spotswood: Phoenix.

Many come, but few survive. These necessarily are the best. But how do you stick up to this when Kenneth Arnold hovers into your mind? Oh! the exception proves the rule, you say. Well, perhaps! Were we to try to enumerate all the exceptional stunts that Agee pulls off, we fear your kind perusion might be ruthlessly prolonged, your active attention dulled, your convictions shaken.

Would you believe that the same man could live through such things as Editor of the Magazine, of the Flet Het, of the Summer School Annual, President of the Literary Society, win innumerable medals, and try for a M. A. degree without joining the musty gentlemen who, decked in alpaca coat and turned down collar, frequent the volumes which the dust and the spiders have long considered private property? And yet he has done it and (mirabile dictu) still seems fairly sane.

CANDIDATE FOR B. S. DEGREE.

Oh, would ye could say vat ye would in regard to Broadway! His first feat of note performed after coming to sip at this fount of learning was to dodge seventeen bags of water thrown at him at the same time. Since that time his chief characteristic has been dodging out of sight of the inquisitive multitude, and poring over a treatise on "The Preservation of My Curls" in the depths of his room.

The Phoenix Literary Society drew him from this seclusion and placed the laurel wreath upon his brow more than once, but the climax of his College career was reached one night when he wafted sweet songs to the sheltering moon, and allowed his fancy to soar aloft to where the stars of the morning sang together. Yet you have made a man of yourself, Brodowski, and we respect you for it.

1911 THE COLONIAL MAGAZINE 1913

WILBUR ROBBINS DAMERON,
Kinsale, Virginia.

CANDIDATE FOR A. B. DEGREE.

Phoenix.

Hail to thee, Prexie! Dameron left the College to suffer her fate while he went to edify the youth of the land last year, but at the beginning of this session he returned, gracefully accepting the presidency of the Senior Class and the editorship of the Literary Magazine. However, after mature consideration, he decided to give up the magazine so he could devote more time to practice in the art of bluffing, at which his reputation is of the best.

Prof. Dameron takes enough part in the various College activities to show that he is politely interested, and then retires in order to smoothe the wrinkle from his alabaster brow and to remove the whiskers from his angular and massive jaw before he goes over to address the "Dues" on the question of "Voting According to Convictions." (But whose convictions are they?)

In common with that other sterling product of the city of Norfolk, namely, those gushy girls, Puddin' is beautiful and boisterous. Only the gentle lowing of a rhinoceros bull as he plunges his head down into the mirky mire and charges the prey, is comparable to the sad serenades of this sweet singer. Endowed with all the endowments which, in our observation, every graduate of the Brass Band City's High School imagines himself blessed with, Puddin' startled the world and also Williamsburg, in the first spring of his lingerings here, by a most gifted rendition of the ballad, "Playing Third Base as it Should be Played." Till the day when he shall enrich the undertaker, Puddin' will be remembered as the hero who converted a two-base hit into a double play and the championship for William and Mary. And old women shall tell, with broken sobs, of how, single handed and alone, he held back the enemy from our goal line, until, no longer able to distinguish dust from tooth paste, he masticated the holy chaplet of victory. As a student, he is a high mark man. He has played for three years on the diamond, captaining the nine in 1912, and also shining, until injuries handicapped him, as a half back. Puddin' is a member of the Spotswood Club, and a most popular pet.

It is not often that the scribe can shove the tracery of his art upon so noted a soul. A mighty emotion wells in one's breast at the opportunity to do justice to a being so untouched by cruel experience, and so plastic to the moulding hands of the sculptoress. The dreamy clouds of high Ida are none too lofty to surmount the pink and fawn colored brown of "Sambo," the individual who has played so well on the three major Varsity teams, who has been Editor-in-Chiefing the William and Mary Literary Magazine, adorning the Annual staff, presiding the Phoenix, managing the basketball team, debating at finals, creating chaos in classes, and winning smiles from girls for, mercy me! no one can tell how long! Apart from his many offices, for he is like unto a Democrat of 1913, Sambo aspires to be the main velocipede with the fluffy sex, and to perpetuate every bloomin' set of eyebrows, whether pink, vermillion or pistache, in the throbbing metre of his own peculiar sonnets. Men are hoping great things for him, and here in Williamsburg, far out in the wilds of Dublin, Virginia, and up in the stony streets of Staunton, there are young maidens with lustrous orbs, who but await his whispered words. Sail on, O Sambo, boy, and ride well the coming seas! After this the ushers will distribute favors, and the audience will press on to the next page.

1913 ELIZABETHAN YEARBOOK

ARTHUR WILSON JAMES,
Bedford City, Virginia.

CANDIDATE FOR A. B. DEGREE.

K Σ; Philomathean; Spotswood.

The best Brass, says our old college elum, Noah Webster, is made by cementation of calamine. This happy discovery clears up the mystery of what "lil Artha" is composed, and renders clear to the ignorant reader what stuff heroes are made of. When one reads that he has starred for the Philomathean as a Final Orator, Intersociety speaker, as the winner in the State Oratorical Contest, and that he played a leading role in "The Rivals," as given by the 1912 Elizabethans, it is easy to understand that the Petersburg prodigy has bellowed his way to success. Add to this the managership of the football team and positions on the Flat Hat and William and Mary Literary Magazine staffs, and still more impressive is the conception formed of this man's mental make-up. Perhaps the principal complaint registered against him is by the parents of some young buds of the earlier periods of history, the aforesaid parents finding it hard to realize that they, too, were once young and foolish, when they perceive that perfectly good and highly expensive gas burning away in the best parlor at the weird hour of 3 A. M. There is no doubt of his success for just as surely as all things come to him who waits, that much more surely do they fall to him who goes to them.

1911 PROMOTIONAL PROGRAM

WAYNE CARR METCALF.

Williamsburg, Va.

CANDIDATE FOR B. S. DEGREE.

Wayne has a habit of jumping. He jumps at the faculty and drags in the A. A.'s. He jumps at athletics and dens a few monograms in football and basketball. He jumps at the student body and has to put his offices down on paper to be able to remember them; but, sad to relate, when it comes to jumping at the young ladies, Wayne scares them to death. Mark the prominence of his various facial attributes. You know they are the pride of his life, and once when he was way down on the old North State, far away from his mother's knee, some unfeeling brute took the liberty of trying to alter the said expression. The results were terrific, for Wayne said d-m-n. Those who have played against him say that he is a man. The faculty believes it, and the students who know say "Whaine" is all there when it comes to chewing gum. Funny, but they seem to believe it true of him in everything.

1914 SENIOR CLASS

JOHN DAMERON MOORE,
Portsmouth, Virginia.

CANDIDATE FOR A. B. DEGREE.

Philomathean.

John Moore is a student here. Oh, yes he is, or, why else would he be in this immemorial volume? You see, the real reason that you don't know him better, he is one of that kind of students who study. Wait while we summon memory's book before us. Yes, he was a likely candidate for the football team, and often appeared on the gymnasium floor when that championship basketball team of ours was practicing. For some reason or other, he insists on cutting Senior Class meetings, and yet he often makes his influence felt by his level-headed ideas. It is reported that he was once seen with a delicate maiden leaning on his arm, but investigation showed that the young lady had been dropped from an aeroplane, and he was trying to calculate her speed when she hit the ground. Our space is up, our history of this Senior is down.

"But before we go, John Moore,
Here's a double health to thee!"

1914 THE COLLEGE YEAR BOOK 1915

CHARLES HARMON SCHEPMOES,
Charlottesville, Virginia.

CANDIDATE FOR A. B. DEGREE.

Phoenix

Talk about being foiled. Well, if the average citizen should see Schepmoes on the streets of Williamsburg, he would say: "Here he is, Doctor, guess you better take him back and lock him up; he looks dangerous." But men who are on the editorial staff of the Magazine and ex-presidents of the Phoenix, don't stay at that sort of a place. Note the present tense, please. After going through these ordeals, it is difficult to predict the exact result. Charles tried for the baseball team one year, but his success there is rather questionable. We are not quite sure about his relation with the faculty, but somehow or other he seems to be making the required number of credits. He has adopted the plan of handing such rotten stuff to the various editors under whom he works, that they fear to ask him for any more. In spite of all this, his desires seem to be for the welfare of the College, and his spirit has been contributed in putting through quite a few things that have been worth while.

1914 THE COLLEGE YEARBOOK 1913

EARL BALDWIN THOMAS,
New York City, New York.

CANDIDATE FOR A. B. DEGREE.

H K A; Spotswood; Northern Lights;
Philomathean; German Club.

Such a curiosity as we have before you now, ladies and gentlemen, deserves a bolder touch than ours to portray. Earl has successfully completed various projects, among them a year at quarter, Literary Society president and medal winner, Editor of the "Lit," twelve desperate flirtations, and has lived through millions of unsuccessful attempts to be funny. A pun, a poem, a punk production reels from his surcharged brain in dazzling confusion.

E. B. Thomas is rather proud of the way he signs his name, and could we believe him, he is the worst treated person in College, because: some people won't agree with him, some professors refuse to be bluffed, some ideas are determined not to materialize, and some of his smiles are not returned. In spite of all this, Earl Baldwin is a very likable fellow and a rattling good College man.

ROBERT CLARENCE WARBURTON,
Williamsburg, Virginia.

CANDIDATE FOR A. B. DEGREE.

Philomathean.

Bob Warburton has the strangest ways about different things. Who else in College would argue for thirty minutes in a Literary Society about whether the speaker of three weeks ago had on a red tie or not? Who, save he, would turn in his editorials to the magazine on time? What other mortal would delve around in the library for hours to try to find out whether clod and cloud are etymologically connected? He is ex-president of the Philomathean, an Intercollegiate Debater, a would-be Medal Winner, and several other things in a literary line; but, other than this, he devotes his energies towards appeasing the voracious and well-nigh impossible demands of the faculty. He wears his hair long to give a poetical look to his dazzling countenance. The other necessary attribute of a poet, according to Dr. Hall, is not always showing. Shocked? Oh, well! then we'll stop by wishing luck, "Bob Warburton."

1913 THE COLONIAL ECHO 1913

PERCY LEWIS WITCHLEY,
Camden, New York.

CANDIDATE FOR B. S. AND A. B. DEGREES.

Philomathean: Spotswood: Northern Lights:
German Club.

P. Lewis Witchley, if acquaintance be but fleeting: otherwise, "Skip." Having strayed down here, as have so many, he decided the straying was good, and so stuck around. One wonders how he carries all the work he does, for he is Editor-in-Chief of the 1913 COLONIAL ECHO, and active member of the Flat Hat staff, and presumes to take enough work to win scholarships. "Skip" is not over serious, however, even if he has been president of the Philomathean and won a medal as its Final Debater. The Spotswood Club boasts his name, and he is one of the "Northern Lights." The only objection that his fellow members of the German Club have to him is that he loves but one girl, and with that sole exception, is a confirmed misogynist. Being from the Empire State, his dress and manners are alike immaculate, and as he trots his daily path from the dorms to the Flat Hat office, carrying beneath his arm, like Ben Franklin, a huge roll of MMS., one does not wonder at the general spirit of approval that one and all attach to him. Whether it be to smoke a Milo, to enjoy a good time, or to grind for a damned exam, this agreeable bird is willing and able. May the three Sisters be kind unto him, for he deserves exceeding much.

CANDIDATE FOR B. S. AND A. B. DEGREES.

Θ Δ X: Spotswood; German Club.

Halt, down falling twilight! Let not the light touch of even your misty soft caresses disturb the air of sweet tranquillity that has been created. Seldom is such an occasion presented as now. The babe of our Class is looking out from a bran' new engraving at the gummy world about him. Who would think that such a child—oh, mais les enfants terribles!—would be a study hall proctor, the winner of a scholarship, and the chief Peruvian doughnut of our football team? Mark the noble Roman air of this unstained gladiator, a veritable Hercules, fretting and chafing for the Great Battle, and bucking the line like a Mauser bullet digesting its way through a Charlotte Russe. A toast to you, sir; a health to you, Jack, in a glass of my oldest Chartreuse; for damme, Jack, you're a man, every inch o' your height, and I'm the first to admit it. You may not attain to a height where a biplane moves, and you may not cause such a stir as when the Woolworth tower shall fall, but you were born under a lucky star, and it's certain you'll be there, smiling and glad, when the Big Dividends are being handed aroun I.

Senior Class History

"Ipsa scientia potestas est."

It is with some misgiving that the historian undertakes the task of penning the history of the Class of 1913. So illustrious are its members and so numerous are their achievements, that we can hope to set down only a few of them.

Our history, as a Class, begins with the Freshmen of 1909-'10. In that year we beheld with wonder the transformation of half a hundred green, timid-looking "Dues," into the self-reliant and brilliant individuals of the Sophomore Class of the next year.

In the third year we were joined by several young "brilliants" who were Freshmen in 1910-'11, and by a combination of ability with perseverance, have completed in these three years a four-year task.

As is usual, our advance from Freshmen to Sophomores and on to Juniors and Seniors has been marked by a constant diminishing of our number, until now there are left only some thirteen of us. Advancing in our studies, we have by no means neglected athletics or any phase of the College activity which makes up so large a part of College life and training.

Many times we have stood on the side lines, with caps squeezed in our hands, and yelled ourselves hoarse as we watched Wright pull off his famous line plunges, and Games as he executed his errorless work on the diamond. We admire the ease with which Metcalf shakes off his foes and secures results for us on the basketball floor. In after days, when we recall the deeds done by our heroes, our blood will quicken, and we will feel a pride in telling of them.

In Literary Society work, as in every other branch of College activity, we have been well represented. Among the most pre-eminent workers in these lines are Thomas, the orator; Witchley, the Editor-in-Chief of the Echo, and Hubbard, the Editor-in-Chief of the Magazine.

We do not boast that our small band is the survival of the fittest of any Class, for who knows? But we can say that these survivors are fit men, fine fellows, every one of them. We know that our consistent work and upright standing have won for us the respect of all in the College, and will command respect outside when we begin to do the work for which we have been trained.

Since the historian may look into the future on the basis of the past, he predicts that members of this Class will write their names in the history of their country as they have written them in that of their Alma Mater.

HISTORIAN.

Ad Alatrem

My world was chastened, clean and pure,
    The-e many years ago,
As by your side when bedtime came
    I prayed, all hushed and low.

You told me of the stars above,
    And of the earth below ;
You filled my world with fairy folk—
    But that was years ago.

The many dreams I builded true,
    Had you but lived to know,
Perchance had lost their dull content—
    Returned their golden glow.

Class Prophecy

HAIRES of my fathers! Friends of my youth! Why, oh, why, should the mantle of Elijah have fallen upon my poor feeble shoulders? The COLONIAL ECHO answers, why?

Since it came to my knowledge that to me had been relegated the difficult, and perhaps the dangerous task of peering into time and predicting the future of the Class of 1913, I have been racking my brain, through weary days and sleepless nights, until at last I have seemingly accomplished that which well might daunt a braver soul than mine.

By much painstaking care, together with the knowledge acquired in my study of chemistry, I have completed an invention, by means of which I have been able to fulfil my duty as Class Prophet. I am now able to inform each member of the Class just what place in the world he is to occupy. This will enable him to begin at once to qualify himself, so that he may fill his position properly. Of course, because of this power, I shall be looked upon as a public benefactor, so far at least as this Class is concerned.

My invention consists of a crystal globe containing a liquid of great chemical complexity. By subjecting it to various conditions, I have found that images are found within the globe, portraying the futures of respective individuals. Naturally, I take great pride in this invention, which I have christened the Paradimethylbenzaldescope, and with its aid I have learned the futures of all my classmates. It is true that in some cases the results have not been exactly reassuring, and I have discovered that some of the members of the Class are doomed to disappointments and to servitude.

Knowing that you, my classmates, are very anxious to learn what the future has in store for you, I will no longer keep you in suspense.

I had been experimenting with the globe, and as the indistinct outlines of the images took definite form, the stately buildings of a great University came into view. To a certain degree the surroundings appeared familiar, but not until I perceived the outline of old Brafferton, and the president's house, did I realize that William and Mary had at last come into her own. While lost in contemplation of the buildings, I saw a tall figure emerge from the president's house and descend the steps. As he passed down the walk, I recognized the shade of W. R. Dameron, and knew that the president of our Class had succeeded in his life's work and had become the head of his old Alma Mater.

1913 THE EDUCATION NEWS 1913

The next image showed another group of large buildings, evidently a sanatorium, for on the wide verandas I perceived many invalids in chairs, while white-capped nurses moved to and fro. I had a premonition as to which of my classmates was to be found here, so when an aeroplane alighted before the "Executive Offices," I was not surprised to see our vice-president descend from the machine, briskly mount the steps, and enter a door which bore the inscription, P. L. Witchley, M. D., J. H. U., N. Y. Z. Witchley had evidently made a success in the medical profession.

Again the scene changed, and there appeared the thatched huts of a village in the midst of a tropical forest. Scores of negroes were hurrying to a large, open space in the center of the village, where a large crowd was gathered. In the center of this assembly, an impassioned orator, standing on a soap box, swayed the crowd by his eloquence. Evidently some missionary was instructing, with great fervor, the poor, ignorant heathen in this foreign land. Anxious to learn which of our Class had sacrificed fame and fortune for the uplifting of humanity, I turned my eyes to the face of the orator, and, dumbfounded, I recognized Charley Schepmces. Well, Charley was ever a noble fellow who sought to aid and instruct the ignorant.

I was still pondering over finding one of my classmates a missionary in the heart of Africa, when I again glanced at the globe. New images were forming. In the center of a huge amphitheatre containing thousands of people, a ball game was in progress. Numerous banners bore inscriptions showing that this was the deciding game of the world's championship series. The score board showed that this was the end of the fourteenth scoreless inning. The bases were empty, and two men were out. The batter, a short, slender fellow, was calmly facing the pitcher. The first ball pitched was knocked far over the heads of the fielders, and as the runner crossed the home plate amid the wild plaudits of the multitude, I recognized in this King of Diamonds "Pud" Games, of the 1913 Class.

The next image was the interior of a mammoth publishing house. My attention was drawn to an immense stack of books, fresh from the press, all bearing the title: "Wild Bill; or, The Cowboy of Death's Head Gulch." Below the title appeared the author's name—E. B. Thomas, author of Tony Thompson.

1913 THE COLONIAL NAVAL SCHOOL 1913

the Australian Bandit; Calamity Kate, the Pirate's Bride; Petunia Primrose, the Pride of Pumpkin Vale, etc., etc. Thomas was evidently a writer of renown.

The scene soon shifted; this time to a crowded courtroom, where a dark-faced lawyer, with wild gesticulations was pleading before a jury. I recognized in the speaker H. L. Carter of Our Class, and could not help wondering what case he was presenting with so much energy; that if it were an index to his fees, he must certainly be made rich for life if he won his case. I glanced at the Judge, a dignified, portly personage, and he appeared to be dozing. An especially violent outburst on the part of the speaker caused the Judge to start suddenly, and as he raised his face, his wig slipped back, exposing a shiny, bald head. Surprised beyond measure, I recognized in this Judge on the bench A. W. James, the Demosthenes of the 1913 Class. Having succeeded in awakening the Judge, Carter was encouraged to redouble his efforts. He pointed to a tall, masculine looking woman, who was evidently the plaintiff. On her face was a look of determination. In one hand she held a small bundle of letters and a ring. With tears streaming down his face, the lawyer next drew attention to a small man, who, despite a timid, shrinking manner, when his glance fell on the woman, had a scholarly air, and judging from the large diamond that scintillated and reflected the rays of light on the globe, a gold-headed cane, and his general appearance, he was a man of wealth. I recognized in him our classmate, R. C. Warburton. Putting two and two together, I concluded that Carter was defending his old friend of William and Mary days in a breach of promise suit.

The next image was that of a mammoth circus, in comparison with which Barnum & Bailey paled into insignificance. An immense parade was issuing from the main tent, and leading the procession was a rider dressed in sky blue trousers, scarlet coat, and wide-brimmed sombrero. I recognized in this gaily attired personage S. H. Hubbard, the Beau Brummel of Our Class. I was not surprised, for I always knew that Sam would get to the front.

The parade gradually faded, and in its place appeared the outlines of a great city. I could see huge sky-scrapers, beautiful parks, streets congested with traffic, a big harbor in which a fleet of monster battleships and countless other vessels floated, and in the background, on a small island, the Statue of Liberty. In front of a large building, which must have been the City Hall, stood the Mayor and the Chief of Police. A review of the police force of the city was being held, and as company after company passed, a look of satisfaction rested on the face of the Mayor and his companion. As for the Mayor, ye prophet sayeth not who he was, but the Police Commissioner I knew in the old days as our classmate, J. D. Moore. From the look of honesty and determination on his face, I knew his slogan was Reform, and that under his surveillance gambling, grafting, and other evils common in great cities, would, as far as possible, be eliminated.

The scene changed, the interior of a magnificent opera house appearing, brilliant with lights and gaily attired women. Every inch of space was occupied by an enthusiastic audience. I could see that this throng must have gathered to listen to some great star in the musical world. On the stage, dressed in conventional evening clothes, stood the singer, a man of medium height and elegant figure. Evidently he had just reached the climax of a great vocal effort, for the audience, which had sat as if spellbound, broke into wild applause, standing on the seats and waving handkerchiefs, fans, and even hats, to show their appreciation of the artist's ability. Something about him seemed familiar, but the name on the program, Monsieur Jacques L'Halpin De Rito, at first gave me no clue to the great tenor's identity, until, looking at him closely, as he stood bowing to the plaudits of his admiring auditors, I finally realized how much Jack Wright had accomplished since he used to entertain the team on basketball trips.

This brilliant scene faded from view, and in its place a large science laboratory appeared. A short, thick-set man was busily engaged in working at some mechanical device, the nature of which I did not at first understand. I recognized in this figure my old classmate, A. A. Brodowski, who, while at College, showed a very decided penchant for science. My curiosity was aroused concerning the nature of the contrivance upon which he was working, and I watched him closely. Finally he approached a baby carriage, attached to it the mechanism which he had now completed, when, lo! and behold! the carriage began to rock. It continued to rock while A. A. stood and watched it, meanwhile rubbing his hands in glee. A possible connection between what appeared to be a perpetual motion machine and the baby carriage suggested itself to my mind. It has been said that "necessity is the mother of invention," and I had known that while in College A. A. always objected to having his sleep disturbed.

This scene faded, but ye prophet, in his impatience to learn what the future held for him, jarred the pedestal on which the globe rested, and it fell to the floor and broke into fragments. It was too late to construct another, and so he, alone, of all the Class, knoweth not what lies ahead.

The Penitent

I thought to have given to life
A dream and a song or two,
But the dream was short, the song unheard,
And I lost the world for want of a word,
The wonderful world, and you.

O Love at the heart of life !
O Silence fuller than sound !
I have counted my beads at the altar of grief,
Folly, and pride, and unbelief,
So I have given and found.

HENRY RUFUS HAMILTON.

Ham's our president. He's proud of the honor, no doubt, but not nearly as proud as we are of him. Half the wit and humor in William and Mary is secreted somewhere on Ham's person, and it oozes forth in dry chunks at just the proper time. President Hamilton is six-foot-four. He towers above us all and looks down on us. The mystery is how Ham's head knows when his feet are cold. In the dark he might be taken for a telegraph pole, a lighthouse, or a string bean—depending on conditions. Ham hails from the Sou'-west, where they make the famous mountain dew. You've heard of it; it's the kind that can make a sparrow want to fight a game-cock. In spite of it all, Ham's a peaceful sort, and hasn't seriously killed any one yet.

JOHN LEWIS TUCKER.

John is our manager. He can manage anything from a college annual, through a magazine, up to a baseball team. In fact, he's a born manager—a financial genius—and when he starts to make his way in the world, let John D. Rockefeller, J. P. Morgan, and such like small fry look well to their laurels, and, incidentally, to their shekels. Tucker is half Virginian, half Tarheel. His house stands on the border line, the sitting-room being in North Carolina and the dining-room in Virginia. When taking his case in the sitting-room, he is an ardent Tarheel; but in the dining-room—that's different. Stick to it, John Lewis, you'll be a great man some day.

1911-1912 COLLEGE YEARBOOK 1913

MAX "SWEENEY" BLITZER.

"Sweeny" is certainly "buggy," with the particular object in life to discover an enzyme that will make lean people fat and fat people lean. No wonder he is billed eccentric, crazy, and a manufacturer of visionary schemes. No importa! Sweeny is Varsity end, manager Flat Hat, past manager Mountain Echo, and manager of baseball team. Heavens! Is that all? Yes, for the time being. Yet Sweeny is little and cute, especially when the misplaced eyebrow adorns his superior maxilla. Just the same, "Blitz" is an important figure in student activities, and a loyal booster of the College.

JOHN HENRY CATO, JR.

Taking it "root and all, and all in all," Cato must be handed the palm as the best student in the Junior Class. Of course that doesn't in any way interfere with his being a good fellow. In fact, he's always very obliging when a fifth hand is needed for a friendly game of—checkers, for instance. John is rather small, except in two respects. He has a large brain and a large appetite. Those who board with him have learned the virtue of promptness. Verily, the early bird catches the hot-cakes. Cato stands well with the faculty, having passed Senior physics and Botany I in the same year—an almost impossible task for ordinary mortals, but then he's far from ordinary.

1913 THE COLONIAL YEAR 13

CARL WISE HOLLER.

Carl is a Hoosier musician. He came all the way from Terre Haute, Indiana, to show us poor grovelling Virginians how to get real melody out of a baby-grand. Holler is a man of parts. He can play, sing, sew, cook, curl Prex. Tyler, and entertain a widow and two old maids, all in one breath. That's sufficient to entitle any man to a berth in the Hall of Fame. Carl is most charming company—for elderly ladies. We predict that he'll end up by being Secretary of State some day in the future when the suffragettes elect a lady President.

JOHN ELDREDGE TAYLOR.

John isn't the kind of man you'll meet every day. He's unique. He looks funny and is funny—but we love him for it, or rather, in spite of it. John is a big gun in the Brafferton. He is leader in most of the chicken-raids and duck-hunts perpetrated by the Brafferton Indians. Johnny Taylor gave Johnny Cato a mighty stiff race for the distinction of being the best student in our Class—but Taylor lost out when he received only 99 per cent. in Dr. Wilson's history class. Serves him right. We knew he would fall from grace when he took to sporting calico. But if he fell from Grace, he won Gertrude—so what's the odds?

1914 THE COLONIAL YEARBOOK 1913

WILLIAM W. WINSBRO.

"Billy" the boys call him for short. But there's nothing at all short about Bill—he's six foot something and a half, and built like a dyspeptic toothpick. Bill's a rather uncertain quantity, but there's one thing we can guarantee—he'll stand without hitching. Winsbro isn't possessed of any energy at all, kinetic, potential, rotatory or translatory. Not lazy, of course; but just born tired and hasn't had time to get over it. But if Bill's material self is lazy, his mental self is full of ginger, which is a rather roundabout way of saying that he's a good student; nay, even something of a curler. No account of Winsbro is complete without some mention of his ability as a pitcher. But if too much is said the truth will leak out, so we'll stop right here.

HENRY ATWOOD TURNER.

"Kilpatrick" is a basketball player from your heart. As we meander to press, "Kil" has had only two baskets shot on him in seven games—some record! Our one regret is that Henry can't contract typhoid fever about every six months—he looks so pretty with his head shaved. By all the laws of equity and justice, the task of writing Turner's pedigree should fall to the historian of the Senior Class. How Henry could have remained in College so long and still be classified as a Junior, is a mystery. But he's one of us, and we're glad of it. Here's hoping we'll find him in the cap and gown brigade next year.

Evening Song

Swift in the eastern skies
Shadows of night arise,
Chasing the day that dies
Faint in the west.

Soft on the stumbrous air,
Mellodious and sweetly fair,
Quivers the evening prayer,
Herald of rest.

List to the chant that swells,
Sweeter than fairy bells,
Up from the dusky dells,
Humming all love!

Now the day's glorious wane,
Silent, the song's refrain,
Only the stars remain,
Gleaming above.

Sophomore Class History

SEVERAL years from now, after we have finished our College life and have settled down, it will be interesting to read the history of the Sophomore Class. We are too busy now to stop and think of pleasant days spent at College, even if we regard these days as red-letter ones in our careers. We are on the second lap in the most important race of our lives. Two more laps and then not one, but, we hope, all of us will obtain the most coveted prize in existence, a degree from the venerable old College of William and Mary.

We have finished the dreaded Freshman year and now, after a summer's rest, we have returned, full of resolutions and enthusiasm. It is indeed a great pleasure to be back again, especially since we are made to feel so much at home by the hospitable people of Williamsburg.

History deals with facts, and as historian, it is my duty to mention those which will best show the record of the Sophomore Class of 1912-'13.

In our Sophomore year the old College has awakened and taken a new stride forward. Already we feel an atmosphere of newness around us, which tells us that even Williamsburg is progressive. Some of our members who entered as "Dues" long ago, see the changes which take place with a feeling of sadness, and yet we are glad to see our Alma Mater enter a new and brighter era of prosperity. A very few of our members can remember the good old days when great men came to William and Mary—such men as Hopkins and Douglas—who still speak to us from the pages of the old Annuals. Some of us have even attended William and Mary's first Summer School at Dublin; and there are still some who have joined our ranks during the present year.

As we look down the list of the members of the Sophomore Class, we see that the majority of them are known far and wide as curlers; or, in other words, we are a Class of hard students. We have become distinguished by curling, but let me say before we go further, that we were not born great: our greatness was thrust upon us.

1912-13

For centuries the painful duty of hazing has been a burden on our shoulders. The Senior "Dues" have relieved us of this burden, and we are free and have plenty of time to curl. Naturally we have used this time, and have won a reputation as the greatest curling Class in history.

When we say that we are a Class of curlers, we do not mean that we spend all of our time in grinding. We are represented in every phase of College life, from the captain of the football squad to the daily calicoist. It is a hard thing to steer clear of the much dreaded word "flunk," and at the same time take an active part in College life, but there are a few of those rare geniuses among our number. The president of the Athletic Association, who is one of our number, sees to it that we do not get a one-sided education.

In football many were called, but few chosen. Among those chosen were Captain Tilley and six Varsity men, who played well and reflected honor on their Class. We were also represented in basketball. The team this year is one of the best William and Mary has ever had. The prospects for baseball are very encouraging. Besides several monogram men, the Sophomore Class will also contribute some new promising material.

Fully half of the Sophomore Class are present at the literary societies every Saturday night, and are doing good work. We are glad to say that we are well represented in Y. M. C. A. work, several being members of the Cabinet.

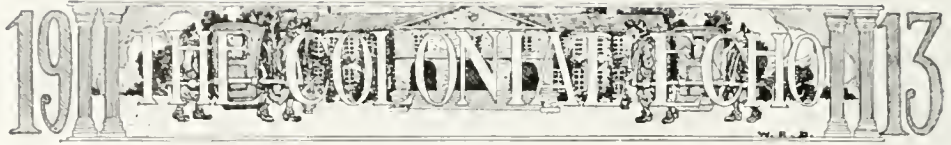

Last, but not least, comes the calico sports, of which we have a large number, who are not only active in Williamsburg, but also spend much of their time in going to the postoffice for certain important letters.

I forget to mention that there is a rumor that there are several pretz on our roll, but this is only a rumor.

The Class of 1915 may not all be successful, but we can surely say that the careful instruction which we have received, combined with our efforts to obtain a well-rounded education, will fit us to play the man in the great campaign of life.

The history of the Class now closes for this year, but we hope that in the future every member of the Sophomore Class of 1912-'13 may be a maker of history, and such history as will reflect honor upon his Alma Mater.

Generations

There was harmony in heaven,
And the angels round about
Heard the little baby shout,
As the elfkins—they were seven—
Puffed their tiny faces out.

There was laughter in the nursery,
As the baby's dimples broke—
Just a funny elfkin joke—
When the sunshine in the nursery
Changed her blocks to baby folk.

Laughter still is in the household,
Still the sunshine lingers there
In the grown-up baby's hair;
In the cradle, somewhat old,
Crows a bran' new bunch o' care.

Freshman Class History

THE history of the Freshman Class, if written in detail, would indeed be very cumbersome, for we proudly boast of the honor of having the largest Class in the history of the grand old College. L'histoire of so many near-great men, who, verdant from the fields of dim obscurity, have come, burdened with a little empirical knowledge, to seek to spell the mystic charms of the goddess Wisdom.

So bold are we in our new undertaking, that, undaunted, we shoulder the burdens of the preceding Class and march on, confident of winning a victory that will shine with splendor in the dazzling light of glory—A DEGREE. How far away we see the diploma bound fast to the Degree Committee by the strong cords—Latin, Greek, and Math! But, hold! Why talk of our high aspirations and leave untold the records of achievements we have accomplished so far? We must not be intimidated, even though the rusty "Sophs" label us "Fresh and Green."

Peculiar as it may seem, our initial existence at William and Mary was ushered in auspiciously in its results. The trodden gridiron yet bears the marks of Ferguson, Shelhorse and Lewis. The Varsity basketball team feels the prowess of Zehmer and Hedrick on the second team. On the diamond we are already confident of victory, for we possess among our number Garth, captain of the team; Shiers, Addington, Allender, and Coombs. Again, the track work of Woods and Muncaster has been of exceptional order. In Literary Society work, the Philomathean is fortunate enough to possess Huffines, the silver-tongued debater, and the untiring efforts of Zehmer has caused the Phoenix to honor him with important offices. Our reputation as business men clearly asserts itself in the person of Frey, the sturdy little Dutchman from Pennsylvania.

Enough as a mere suggestion of what this large Class promises to be. The honors we have won, and those we are planning to win, seem to our glowing vision but an earnest reminder of the greater laurels yet in store for us. Then let us hope that none may fall by the wayside while we march through the four long years, and that all may remain true to ideals that will reflect honor upon the Class of 1917.

The Little Gay God

A little gay god goes winging
Down the sunny, summer days, and
Like a dream remote
Are the songs that float
From the harp that he holds in his hand.

Heigh ho, but the luring listings
Of that harp of the myriad strings
When the marsh frogs' bass
Plays in even pace
With the treble of butterflies, wings.

And flowery fields are smiling
At the kisses of childish feet,
With their airy scorn
Of thistle and thorn,
From the dawn till the day is complete—

Till the little gay god at twilight
Sits on the Dream-Sea strand,
And with softened note
The melodies float
From the harp that he holds in his hand.

To Smile Like That

Across the gloomy sea of jumbled words
So sharp of their purport overline,
You smile : and I must stave rebukings when
You smile like that, oh, little lad o' mine.

Rich berry clusters on a sunny slope,
Gay daisied fields, the distant smell of pine—
Such visions light the blurring pages when
You smile like that, oh, little lad o' mine.

And I would be a boy again, and bear
The halo of a childhood such as thine,
And learn from out thy greater, richer Book
To smile like that, oh, little lad o' mine.

—W.

Phi Beta Kappa History

THE Phi Beta Kappa Society was organized at the College of William and Mary December 5, 1776. The founders were John Heath, Thomas Smith, Richard Booker, Armistead Smith, and John Jones, who "buidled better than they knew." The organization was, in fact, a combination of the modern Greek letter fraternity and the College Literary Society. One of the rules was, "That four members be selected to perform at every session, two of whom in matters of argumentation and the others in opposite composition."

The first stadium of the mother Chapter lasted but five years (1776-1781). In 1781 the British fleet, "bearing Benedict Arnold and his forces," landed near Williamsburg, and the Society sealed up its records and placed them in the hands of the College steward. For many years these old minutes were lost sight of, but, fortunately, fell into the keeping of the Virginia Historical Society, by whom they were returned to the mother Chapter after her revival in 1803. They are now an object of intense interest to every Phi Beta Kappa who visits the College of William and Mary.

During the first period of five years, there were about fifty initiations. Between 1776 and 1778, many of these fifty youths rose into prominence in Virginia; later on, in national politics. In the Virginia Convention of 1788, eight Phi Beta Kappas took a leading part. In the General Assembly of Virginia, about the same time, some of them were very prominent. Of course, the most distinguished of all was John Marshall, who was initiated while attending law lectures in the College, when, as a captain in the Revolutionary Army, he came to Virginia to urge the Legislature to muster in more troops for the patriot army.

Among other prominent men of this era were Archibald Stuart, jurist; John Heath, legislator and Congressman; Berkley, Clerk of Congress; Bushrod Washington, Associate Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States; and William Short, the eminent diplomat. Other names on the roster are Cabell, Hardy, Mason, Fitzburg, Lee, and Madison.

Phi Beta Kappa cannot claim Jefferson as a member. His College days were over when she came into existence, and, as already said, the boys adjourned in 1781; that little band never met again as a Society.

Among the original fifty members was a delicate youth from New England named Elisha Parmelee, who came South for his health. He became a very enthusiastic Phi Beta Kappa, and urged that Chapters be established in New England. On December 4, 1779, a charter was voted to Harvard; five days later to Yale. Parmelee established these two Chapters some time in 1780 or 1781. These two, with the consent of Virginia Alpha, established a Chapter at Dartmouth College. After the suspension of the mother Chapter, the three Chapters named above constituted the whole Society. Brilliant men adorn the rolls of the New England Chapters, among them John Quincy Adams, Timothy Bigeton, Edward Everett, Emerson, Story, Wayland, Parsons, Cushing, Beecher, Allstone, Bryant, Holmes, Longfellow, Sargent, Taylor, Bret Harte, Stedman, Stoddard, Webster, Choate, Woolsen, Curtis, and Lowell.

In 1849 the mother Chapter rose from the dead. William Short, one of her fifty members, revived the Chapter and placed its destinies in the hands of the College faculty. Among the members of that era were Rev. Silas Totten, D. D., President Benjamin S. Ewell, and Prof. Edward S. Joynes. They conferred the honor of membership upon James M. Wise, John S. Hansbrough, W. Robertson Garrett, Alfred M. Randolph, A. S. Farcron, William Land, W. Talbot Walbe, Robert Gatewood, William B. Taliaferro, and a few other distinguished students, whose names are not recorded. In 1861 war again sounded at the College gates, and the Phi Beta Kappa boys threw down their lexicons, bade adieu to the old College, and entered the armies defending Virginia.

From 1861 to 1893 the old mother Chapter slumbered peacefully. Occasionally she would wake up long enough to elect a professor to membership, but rarely went through any form of initiation. In 1893, however, after the College had been in operation for five years under the regis of the State, William Lamb, a loyal son of William and Mary, and a devoted Phi Beta Kappa, determined to revive the Chapter. With the co-operation of the venerable Benjamin S. Ewell, president emeritus of the College; General William B. Taliaferro, vice-rector of the Board of Visitors; Major W. Talbot Walbe, and Rev. Robert Gatewood, he initiated the whole faculty (six) and the College librarian, a man of letters. These seven proceeded to add to the membership of the Chapter. Among the members now are most of the literary men of this State, and some in other States; and a good number of young alumni have been elected on account of their special promise.

In everything in Virginia requiring brains and ability, William and Mary Phi Beta Kappas are generally in evidence, so much so, that it is a badge of honor in Virginia to wear the key of Virginia Alpha, and to be admitted to the annual banquet.

Thomas Nelson Page, when elected by this Chapter, said that it was one of the highest honors he had ever received. Hon. Elihu Root said that the revival of the mother Chapter of Phi Beta Kappa was one of the greatest events of the closing decade of the nineteenth century.

Though originally a Greek letter fraternity, Phi Beta Kappa has long occupied a different position. She does not compete at all with College fraternities. A man may belong to one of these and to Phi Beta Kappa at the same time. As to the secrecy, that is a matter of local custom. In some places there is no secrecy at all. At Harvard, initiations used to be public. The motto, the meaning of the letters, and other supposed secrets can be found printed in any library. Phi Beta Kappa is a "brotherhood of scholars."

At William and Mary there are two classes of members, which might be called ordinary and honorary. The latter, as intimated already, are men distinguished in letters and science, whom the College wishes to honor. The former are old students who have gone out into life and shown some special promise, or won their spurs in some literary or scientific calling. Any student now on the rolls has it within his power to wear the key and take part in the annual "feast of reason and flow of soul," the evening which begins with an oration and ends in "jollity and mirth."

Hubbard beats Witchley and "Jack" Wright out by a small majority.

Best Football Player?

"Jack" Wright gets handsome majority. "Cap" Tilley and "Pipe" Wright run close.

Have You the Dictionary Habit?

MENTAL storehouse, filled with discriminating words made familiar by frequent use, is a valuable personal possession, yet comparatively few of us give any special thought or time to the increase of our vocabulary. We are not sufficiently acquisitive or inquisitive concerning our own language. Most of us go on, year after year, using the same old words, phrases and metaphors, instead of making a conscious effort to acquaint ourselves with the new words that are constantly brought to our attention in reading and conversation. The acquisition of new words has a broadening influence upon the mind, for new words are needed to express new ideas, and new ideas mean mental growth. To be inquisitive as to the exact meaning of a word, to delve into its derivation and assure ourselves of its correct pronunciation and use, means the formation of the dictionary habit. This is the straight road to quickening our interest in words and makes for an enlarged vocabulary.

With the present multiplicity of papers, magazines and books, too rapid reading is the natural, though unfortunate, result. Hasty reading debars us from carefully observing the words. We grasp the general idea, as that is all we think we have time for. We are satisfied to take most words for granted. As a proof of this, try reading slowly and intelligently for a single hour, with a dictionary at your elbow. Do not let any doubtful word escape you. The chances are you will be astonished at the number of words you have been obliged to look up in that short time.

How many people will you find who can correctly define the very commonly used adjective "lurid"? The average person will give a meaning wide of the mark. To most of us the word suggests a brilliant sky or a blazing fire. Your dictionary will tell you that "lurid" means pale yellow, wan, ghastly, dismal and gloomy! Could anything be more at variance with the popular idea of this adjective? This is only an instance of what surprises await us oftentimes by resorting to the dictionary.

The dictionary habit will eventually show its effect in our speech. We shall speak with more knowledge of the fine shades of meaning which distinguish words usually considered synonymous. We shall have a wider range of synonyms and antonyms. A splendid exercise in mental alertness is to practice thinking quickly along these lines. Let a single word set your mental machinery at work!

Mental alertness in reading the daily papers is an important factor towards increasing our vocabulary. I know a keen-sighted reader who fairly pounces upon an unfamiliar word as though it were a nugget of gold! If a dictionary is not at hand, the word is jotted down that its spelling may not escape him. He often copies the sentence in full, to be sure of the context. Not infrequently a search in an encyclopedia will follow the reference to the dictionary. Now, no person with this acquisitiveness and inquisitiveness regarding words can fail to make gigantic strides toward an ever increasing vocabulary. The single word is the nucleus around which, by a little study, we group science, history, art—we know not what—until we begin our little line of research.

Take the word "silhouette," for instance. This takes us back to French history when Etienne de Silhouette was Minister of Finance. So derided was he by the French nation, because of his parsimony, that this cheap, shadow type of portrait was contemptuously called "silhouette," and has so continued to this day.

Our recently completed Grand Central Station in New York, advertised as a practically "stairless station," has brought the word "ramp" into prominence. Outside of the field of architecture, this word was, previously, little known. The average person asks himself: "What is a ramp—what does the word mean?" Your dictionary explains just why this word is used to designate an incline, leading from one level to another, taking the place of stairs. The French verb from which it is taken means to climb gradually, or to clamber upward like a vine. Certainly this tells the story of the modern ramp, simply and satisfactorily!

Modern science of all kinds, the far-reaching uses of electricity, the tremendous interest in automobiling and aviation, are introducing to us an incredible number of new words. If we would be abreast of the times, we must take these into our vocabulary. This should not be done ignorantly, regardless of their derivation and technical use. We should make it our business to familiarize ourselves with the most frequently used terms in connection with whatever is new and interesting in our modern life. The latest editions of dictionaries and encyclopedias are ready to help us. But we must do our part. No one else can do it for us.

Geo. Clinton Batcheller, LL. D.

Y. M. C. A. Year's Work

THIS with no small degree of pride that we record the work of the Y. M. C. A. for this year, for we feel that its influence has penetrated more deeply into the life of the student body. That its influence should be manifested more keenly this session has been brought about by the untiring effort on the part of those active in this work at present, and on the part of those who have gone before. The gratification of reaching a crowning success this year serves as a bountiful reward for those who are endeavoring to promulgate that condition of life exemplified by the Master.

A glance over the work of the past year sets forth several reasons for being encouraged. In the first place, there has been a hearty co-operation between the faculty and the organization. Secondly, there have been secured as speakers, men well fitted to impart that knowledge to students which shall have its marked effect on their attitude toward Christianity. Again, the increased enrollment and enthusiasm of the members have indeed been inspiring.

The year has been full of activities. At the beginning of the session the annual banquet was held in the dining hall. The reception was largely attended, and during the evening those assembled were favored with short talks on various activities of College life by Dr. Young, Prof. Goodwin, H. L. Harris, K. A. Agee, Rev. Whitley, and others. The new men at College became interested, and several enrolled as members.

In the attempt to make this year a banner one, the cabinet, with the aid of Mr. Carl Ball, the Student Secretary, arranged for a series of addresses to be given by men chosen from the various walks of life. The purpose of the selection of such speakers was to put before those intending to enter a profession, certain truths that are ordinarily veiled in mystery. Dr. Clark, of the faculty, ably presented his subject: "Teaching as a Profession." "Law as a Profession" was given by Mr. Gordon, a prominent lawyer of Richmond. "The Relation of the Medical Profession and Religion" was the subject of a very instructive and interesting address given by Dr. Mathews of the Medical College of Virginia. The aim of the speakers was to aid young men in choosing their life's work by picturing to them the good and the bad, the pleasant and the unpleasant, the beautiful and the ugly. In revealing these facts, based on experience, the speakers endeavored to acquaint the men with the obstacles that he would meet and how to overcome them, so that they would be not obstacles, but milestones on his road to progress.

1911 THE COLONIAL REVIEW 13

In February, Dr. Shannon, author and lecturer on Sex Hygiene, was secured by the cabinet. Owing to a pressing engagement, he was not able to give us his entire series of talks, but the general theme of his lectures has made such an impression upon the minds of the students that the imprint will stand the test of time and the earthquakes of opposing theories. His instructive lectures were sure to mould a better future for those who were fortunate enough to hear him.

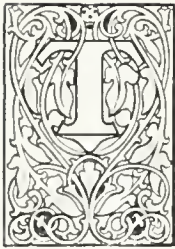

The most important lecture of the year is yet to be given. Dr. Weatherford, world-famous authority on negro life, will give a lecture in April on the "Negro Problem." Space does not permit us to give reasons why we think this question of so much importance, but we feel confident that it will arouse such a keen interest in this field of work that some of us will shoulder the burden of helping the South meet this important question that is sooner or later to be settled.

Besides a distinguished speaker each week, there are also Bible study and mission work classes. This paramount phase of the Y. M. C. A. work has been conducted both by the faculty and by the students. There is held a meeting in each of the dormitories, fraternity houses, and boarding houses, once a week.

With this epitome of the Y. M. C. A. activity, we feel no hesitancy in saying that this year has been a banner one for this phase of College activities, and we predict a glorious future for the splendid organization that has for its ultimate purpose to place young men in closer contact with God.

Athletics

THE opening of the session 1912-'13, from a standpoint of Athletics, was accompanied by a strong feeling of co-operation between the faculty and the student body in regard to making the present session a banner year for athletics. Would that we could say that the present year had met fully the expectations of all concerned. A brief review of the history of athletics during this period gives us a bitter-sweet feeling. Bitter, because of our unsuccessful football year. Sweet, because of our excellent basketball showing and our bright prospects for baseball.

Although we label the football season a failure when we speak of the championship, yet we can look back with a sort of pleasure upon the season that has passed. Is it not a pleasure to know that the team which represented William and Mary on the gridiron fought to the last ditch with sportsmanlike playing? In passing, it is only fair to say that our team played teams that were entirely out of their class, and accordingly some of the best players were injured and were unable to take part in the important games with Hampden-Sidney, Richmond College, and Randolph-Macon.

The basketball season presents a striking contrast. Starting with Metcalf Bros., Hubbard, and Turner of last year's team as a nucleus, Coach Young developed one of the best teams that has ever represented William and Mary in basketball. At present, the championship for the season is tied with Randolph-Macon, who won the only game of the season from us. The manager of our team has made several attempts to arrange to play off the tie, but Randolph-Macon seems content with having the honor tied up.

No doubt, before this article reaches the public, the baseball season for the session 1912-'13 will have passed into history. Accordingly, we are only able to prophesy as to what our success will be; but from present indications, with Capt. Garth, Games, Peachy, Hubbard, Jones, Addison, and Shiers of last year's team, it looks as though William and Mary will bid strongly for another championship in baseball.

The Turkeytrottenfest

(Being the ramblings of a demented Terpischorean who awoke on the morning after that informal hop of the third day of February, in the year of Grace 1913.)

Yes, the Colonel's wife was there,
—It's a bear! It's a bear!—
And the Captain and his Crew,
And the great Alumni, too.
All society supreme,
In a bonton horse-trot dream.
Every maid and matron fair,
—It's a bear! It's a bear!—
Oh, the naughty little boys,
Full of gingeraley joys!
Oh, the dainty debutantees!
Oh, the turkey trotting Aunts!
Bunny hugging, beef and brawn,
Gaby Gliding till the dawn.
—And the Faculty; where were they?
And the Chaperones; where were they?
Up in the air,
Under a chair;
Some in the city and some in their beds,
Sobbing aloud and holding their heads,
Or trotting till break o' day.
Who cares for the old two-step?
Death to the poor stick's rep!
Off with the old, and let us on with the new,
The one step results when you take one from two.
Hurrah! Hurrah! Hurrah!
Trotting till break o' day,
Swinging your shoulders around in thin air,
Woodrow Wil-son condemns it, but what do we care?
Hurrah! Hurrah! Hurrah!
Every little city has a rag dance all its own,
From the San Francisco Grizzly to the Williamsburg Corn Pone;
So its trot! trot! trot! to the strains of the latest song,
And death to the stick who would dare to—hic—say that the rag is wrong!

Alma Mater

Hark the students' voices swelling,
Strong and true and clear ;
Alma Mater's love we're telling,
Ringing far and near.

Chorus :

William and Mary, lord of old,
Hark upon the gale ;
Hear the thunders of our chorus,
Alma Mater—Hail !

All thy sons are faithful to thee
Through their College days,
Singing loud from hearts that love thee,
Alma Mater's praise.

Iron-shod or golden sandaled
Shall the years go by ;
Yet our hearts shall weave about thee
Love that cannot die.

God, our Father, hear our voices,
Listen to our cry ;
Bless the College of our boyhood,
Let her never die.

Songs and Dells of Orange and Black

Give 'em the ax, ax, ax,
Give 'em the ax, ax, ax,
Where? Where? Where?
In the neck, neck, neck,
There! There! There!

Roll up the score, William and Mary
Roll up the score,
You have done it before,
You can do it some more,
William and Mary!

R-a-y, R-a-h! Sssssssssss, boom!
William and Mary!

Well, well, well!
Is that——
Oh, shavings!

With a vevo, with a vivo,
With a vevo, vivo, vum,
It is just as plain as plain can be
That we've got——up a tree,
With a vevo, vivo, vum!

What's the matter with our team?
They're all right,
Who says so?
Everybody,
Who is everybody?
William and Mary.

Halla ca—noo, ca—nec, ca—nec,
Halla ca—noo, ca—nec, ca—nec,
Wah-hee, Wah-hee!
Look at the team! Look at the team!
Look at the William and Mary team!

R-a-v, R-a-y,
R-a-h, R-a-h,
William and Mary!

W-i-l-l-i-a-m—M-a-r-y,
W-i-l-l-i-a-m—M-a-r-y,
W-i-l-l-i-a-m—M-a-r-y!

A Few Pearls from a Chance Observer

If there had been any College Widows living in the Transvaal, the Boer army need never have surrendered for lack of powder.

If there was one thoroughbred horse for every Ford automobile in Williamsburg and James City County, it would take the California alfalfa crop to feed the animals.

That suffragette martyr-march from New York to Washington may be all right, but given her choice between a pilgrimage on pumps and a two hundred mile joy ride on the upholstery of a throbbing Pierce-Arrow, the average woman will never vote.

It takes a pretty good man to win an attractive wife, but it takes a d——d good old maid to win any kind of a man.

In this ambiguous day, when every little movement has a double meaning all its own, the Oracle of Delphi would have nothing on some of our foremost Bunny Huggers.

The Turkey Trot is a paradox sensation, inasmuch as the slower you move, the faster it becomes.

A Methodist Bishop who had never danced, denounced the two-step as wicked. We suppose he will say that the one-step is only one-half as wicked.

Provided that the "horse trot" ever becomes universally accepted, it is easy to imagine the following conversation at the dances of the future:

"Miss Spinache, may I have the second one hundred yard dash?"

"Sorry, Mr. Bazim, I have that, but I can let you have the third running broad jump."

Ethics may be called the defining of indefinite issues, by an abstracted professor, to a class of solid concrete.

Similarly, Logic is the persecution of the reasoning faculty of a young animal.

According to statistics, playing on a dashing football team is a certain guarantee of success as a street car conductor. Probably the main difference is, that while in college the fair collect around the hero, in real life the hero collects the fares.

Anglo-Saxon is a peculiar noise similar to that produced by an amateur player on the trombone.

It takes a good deal of nerve to eat at any college boarding house, but imagine the cast iron nerve it requires to run one!

Besides, some of our foremost College Presidents have gotten their start in life fooling themselves that the horseflesh was venison.

In this age of safety razors, most anybody can scrape his face, but it takes a downright expert to eat with his knife.

Does the average professor tell the same jokes each year because he believes in the pedagogy of repetition, or is he merely absent-minded?

The average conception of the College man as a human Victrola playing "Rah! Rah! Rah" and wearing cerise hose, is probably due to the fact that the responsible artists went directly from high school to the Latin Quarter.

Just as many people think that every man wearing a Windsor tie and needing tonsorial assistance is a second Alfred, Lord Tennyson, so a multitude believe that a College student's life is synonymous with a bottle of red water and a portable corkscrew.

"Why," says our ladye faire, "do they play such a rough game as basketball? I understand they throw baskets on each other."

"O Lord!" we groan, "I told you it was no game for chickens."

"No game for chickens?"

"Of course not, dear. Why, they throw fouls in the baskets."

A literary society without a political ring, is like a vertebrate without a spinal column.

The only way to make some students rise in time for chapel would be to feed them on yeast.

Which does a student increase by studying Latin: his classical or his profane vocabulary?

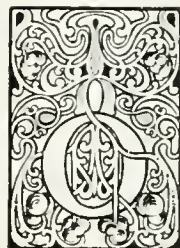

If, as advertised, shaving with a certain kind of shaving soap is delightful, why doesn't the user laugh when he shaves?

A Western university now honors a man whom she once dismissed. What a sad blow to the infallibility of faculties!

Only a cannibal and a seasoned football player know how good it tastes to bite off another man's ear.

E. B. T.

SOME are small and some are tall, and some are fat and chubby; and some are gay as is un fait for an entangled hubby. Their daily fare is one stewed pear and boiled down milk and honey. Their exercise is swatting flies; their chief ambition, money. (On Thursday noons, like homing loons, they rush into their meetings; then far and wide, with childish pride, they send probation greetings. With soul so pure each "prof" de-mure lives on the water wagon; no banquet rare—with students there—could make him get a jag on. The pointless jest, the student's pest, the groundwork of his lecture, the pedagogue, with tongue agog, unfolds his daily texture. Zoology, psychology, no matter what his course be, will be as dry, you may rely, as any 5 o'clock tea. The kindest way to kill or slay such devotees of toil, is simply thus: their beauty muss, and cook in boiling oil.

Jokes and Grinds

Dr. Calhoun: "Mr. Witchley, what was the date of Wallenstein's death?"
"Skip" (dreaming about the world's baseball series): "Ten to four in favor of the Giants, Doctor."

Dr. Wilson: "Have you read the history assignment, Mr. Cook?"
"Dr." Cook: "Yes, sir; but I was unable to find out who was the British General when Cornwallis surrendered at Yorktown."

Dr. Ritchie (in bacteriology): "New, gentlemen, Prof. Keeble has a lame back. What would you find if you should make a slide of it?"

Brilliant Senior: "Little physics electrons riding around on vehicles, I reckon."

Prof. Koontz: "If you graft a white rose on a red one, you will get a streaked one."

"Duc" Brown: "Then, Professor, if you graft a strawberry on a milkweed, would you get strawberries and cream?"

Dr. Keeble (unable to straighten up): "Mr. Griggs, what is the matter with my back?"

Griggs (revelling in Physics): "It doesn't obey Hooke's law, Doctor."

Somers: "Say, Witchley, what do you think is my chance of beating Richmond College in debate?"

Witchley (learning the Apostle's Creed): "Damn poor."

"Duc" Addington (seeing Mr. Agee for the first time): "Good morning, Doctor, are you the President of William and Mary?"

Agee (very dignified): "Not quite, sir."

Addington: "Excuse me. I ought to have known better, for the President is a younger man than you."

1913 THE COLLEGE YEAR 1913

Last fall, on Yorktown Day, Busky Addison and Bob Newton started to walk to Yorktown, and lost their way. After walking a long distance, they came across a farmer, and Bob asked him how far it was to Yorktown; to which the farmer answered, "Twenty miles."

"Come on, Bob," said Busky, "twenty miles! Why, that's not much; only ten miles apiece. Come on."

The following is the reply of a fond father, who had just received a letter from his son, a student in his own Alma Mater:

"My Dear Son.—Accept my heartiest congratulations. I was engaged to the same Miss ——— when I was at William and Mary, and can appreciate the fun you are having. Go it while you are young.

"Your loving

"FATHER."

"Prex" Tyler (in class): "What do the negroes of the Congo region live on?"

"Skip" Witchley: "Watermelons."

Prexie: "Not on your life."

Thomas: "Try sweet potatoes on him, Skip."

Emery (in Astronomy Class): "Dr. Keeble, do you think the world is round or flat?"

Dr. Keeble (after some thought): "Well, Emery, some people think one way and some another, and I'll teach round or flat, just as you wish."

Dr. Hall (in English): "Mr. Shockley, is the following sentence a 'contrary to possibility' or a contrary to fact' condition: 'If I were President, etc.?'"

Shockley: "Contrary to possibility."

"When rain falls, does it ever rise again?" asked Dr. Garrett in Chemistry I.

"Yes, sir; in dew time."

Voices from the back of the room: "Take him out," "Call the cop," etc.

1911 PEACOCK HILL 13

O'Neill, who was voted the most eccentric man in College, has found a most eccentric manner of killing a dog. He is the vivisectionist in Zool. III, and prescribes this treatment in causing a canine to shuffle off this mortal coil in the cause of science:

First: Put him under the influence of ether.

Second: Give him several potassium cyanide cocktails.

Third: Assault him with a crowbar.

Fourth: Shoot him.

Fifth: If the first four do not render him null and void, wait until he dies of old age, and then proceed with the vivisection.

Dr. Ritchie: "Lord Lister was made famous because Listerine was named after him."

Cato (to Metcalf): "That is some new kind of stove polish, isn't it?"

Arthur James was over on Peacock Hill the other night visiting one of the fair damsels on "Fifth Avenue." He was, as usual, talking about himself—a most interesting topic of discussion with James, by the way—and the following dialogue took place between them:

James: "I think that I will come back for an M. A. next year."

She: "O James! why don't you come back for M. E.?"

We are expecting James to be with us next year.

"Buddy" Sawyer had been raising chickens. Unfortunately, he raised them from the henery attached to the College Boarding House. "Buddy" ran up against Dr. Hall, who had heard of his chicken raising proclivities. Dr. Hall took him to task, and while Sawyer listened with downcast eyes and much meekness, the Doctor lectured him on the wickedness of the theft, asking him what he would say in the day of Judgment, when he should be confronted by Mrs. Brown and her chickens. "Buddy" thought a moment, and then looked up and said:

"And you say the chickens'll be there, too?"

"Yes, the chickens'll be there, and Mrs. Brown'll be there, living witnesses against you. What, I repeat, can you say in such a presence?"

"Doctor, I'll say, 'Mrs. Brown, there's your chickens, take 'em.'"

Next to his neat appearance, the most conspicuous thing about "Bill" Adams is his stuttering speech. "Bill" was planning a trip to Richmond some time ago.

"What are you going to Richmond for?" asked Tilley.

"I-I-w-w-want to s-see the l-legislature of V-V-Virginia," stuttered Bill.

"Why do you want to see it?"

"D-D-Don't the l-laws of V-V-irginia g-guarantee f-f-free speech t-to its c-citizens?"

"Sure."

"W-Well, I-I w-want to s-see the l-legislature b-because I ought t-to have t-to have f-free s-speech and I-I haven't g-got it."

Hamilton (in Ecto staff meeting): "What do you think of the idea of having a sponsor for the Senior Class?"

"Pipe" Wright: "I don't think we could find anybody who would be re-sponsible for you, Ham."

John Tyler: "What is the height of imagination, O'Neill?"

O'Neill (after some thought): "I think that the height of imagination would be reached when a man goes up to the roof of a twenty-story building, sets fire to his coat-tails, jumps off, and imagines that he is a comet."

All gaul is divided into three parts, being equally distributed between Warburton, Outland, and Somers.

Dr. Bennett (in his Bible Class): "Who can mention the leading facts about the epistles?"

Davis: "I think they were the wives of the Apostles."

Alice's Adventures in Williamsburg

LICE finished her supper and lay down on the sofa, in order to see more easily a ground hog which gazed at her over the milk pitcher. She knew it was very strange for a ground hog to be behind a milk pitcher, but somehow, with its shiny black hair and small, snappy eyes, in contrast to a rather dirty face, it made her brave, and so, after wondering for a long time whether all ground hogs looked like this one, she spoke to it.

"How do you do?" said she.

The ground hog gazed at her in meditative silence.

"About the same way I have been doing for several years."

Alice did not quite understand, but she was a little uneasy, so she suggested:

"Won't you come along and show me?"

The ground hog took a final look at his image in an oyster shell and started off, saying:

"Come on, or we shall miss the meeting."

They went on to a large building, where the ground hog stopped, pressed a button, and drank from a fountain.

"Why did you do that?" asked Alice.

"Because I was thirsty," answered the ground hog.

This seemed a perfectly good reason, so they went up into a small room where there was a large number of animals. Among them was a pig who grunted continually and smoked a cigar. Near by was a dog with a big brass collar, on which was written, "Positively no Passing," who sat and gazed out of the window. On the other side of the table there was a guinea pig, with absolutely no expression in his face, but who kept on rearranging papers. A lizard stood near the door, looking over his glasses and drawling out ideas about the weather, while a parrot stroked the very few feathers on its head and grinned. Besides these, there was a rabbit who agreed to everything that was said and giggled foolishly at a joke which a terrier, with a red ribbon around his neck, was telling. Over on one side stood two very much frightened roosters.

"Read the charge!" grunted the pig.

1914 THE CONVENTION 1913

Whereupon the guinea pig, after a desperate search, located the papers which he had in plain sight all the time, and read the following:

"On the 8th of January eight roosters took a duck and pulled his tail feathers out. The duck quacked with great might."

Here all the animals looked very sober, and at last the dog said:
"Give me those eight names."

He took them and shut both eyes and wrote Shipped against three names. The other animals clapped their approval, and the lizard started telling a joke.

"Come on," said the ground hog to Alice.

"But why did he mark them like that?"

The ground hog grunted and finally said:

"He does it that way so as to be impartial."

"But how can any one be safe?" asked Alice.

"Oh! you are all right, if you only have the faculty."

As they went down, they passed a wizened up little monkey, who kept on saying:

"I am the guy who put the sodium chloride in the Atlantic, I'm the guy,
I put the soup in superintendent and more in the sophomore;
But the rent in Trent made me lose my lozenge,
So I say again those things oft said before."

"Why does he do that?" asked Alice.

"The faculty have decreed that he must say that ten times four hundred times before he will have said it four thousand times, and he is trying to prove it."

About this time a coon came out and rang a bell, and all the animals began tearing over to where it was.

"Let's go to supper!" invited the ground hog.

Alice went over and sat at a table with four ducks, an old hen, and four roosters.

The ground hog took his butter and dipped it into his coffee.

"Making the strong help the weak!" he explained.

One duck began putting bread crumbs in the milk.

"Why does he do that?" asked Alice.

"So others may know something has been in the glass."

Alice saw that everybody was putting something in their pockets, so she picked up the molasses pitcher and started to carry it out.

1911 REFORMATION NEW GEORGE 113

"Don't touch that," said the old hen. "Thomas Jefferson was the last man who ate any of that molasses, and he is dead now."

"I know it," said Alice.

"Know what?" asked the hen.

"Know that Thomas Jefferson is dead."

"You know nothing of the sort," answered the hen. "It is not permitted that you know anything here."

They went out to where a donkey leaned up against a tree and while he frowned at everybody, gave utterance to the following:

"'Twas Monday and the Dormi-ites
Did James and Agee at the meal,
All Grimsley were the talkallnights,
And the Somers Sectt out Deel.

Beware the Brownoldgrouch, my son!
The Jaws that bite, the food that's not!
Beware the Horseflesh bird, and shun
The fruminous syrupper.

He took his Whirley sword in hand,
Longtime the square meal foe he sought,
So rested he by the Ewell tree
And stood awhile in thought.

And as in Witchley thought he stood,
The Brownoldgrouch, with eyes of flame,
Came whiffing through the campus wood
And hashdreamed as it came.

One, two! One, two! And through and through
The whirley blade went snicker-snack!
He left it dead and with its head
He went horse trotting back.

And hast thou slain the Brōwnoldgrouch?
Come to my arms, my beamish boy!
O Yorktown day! Nine rals! Hurray!
He chortled in his joy.

'Twas Monday, and the Dormi-ites
Did James and Agee at the meal,
All Grimsley were the talkallights,
And the Somers Scott out Deel."

When he had finished, he began collecting all the possessions of the different animals and putting them in his pocket. Alice had nothing to give him, so she started down the street. The ground hog caught up with her before long.

"Where shall we go next?" Alice asked.

"Wherever you want to," answered the ground hog, "as long as you don't look at the ducs."

"I guess I haven't got the faculty," Alice murmured, as she turned on her pillow and went to sleep again.

The Summer Session

THIS characteristic of William and Mary to do new things. It's a habit with her. In the blood, so to speak. The first thing she did was to go straight to the King and Queen and secure a Royal Charter and a Coat-of-Arms. Ordinary charters may do for ordinary Colleges, but when it's William and Mary—well, that's different.

Later, in order to satisfy her desire for new things, she established Phi Beta Kappa, the Honor System, and the Elective System; became a university before anybody else thought of it; and to give variety to the cramped and somewhat monotonous curriculum, introduced to the American College world the study of Law, Modern Languages, Political Economy, and History.

TENTING AT DUBLIN

1911 THE COLLEGE YEAR 1913

BIOLOGICAL LABAROTARY

Latterly, William and Mary has tried to be sedate. She has attempted to keep in mind her years and her dignity, but she has always been in the position of the ancient dame who fondly remembers the balls and the beaux of her youth— who secretly covets the gay gowns and the pink ribbons of the maidens about her. Last year when the juncquils pushed up to welcome the spring breezes and the catbirds began to sing, she felt the old desire stirring irresistibly within her. Spring and youth were in her veins. She must do something new—something sensible, but something different.

1911 THE COLONIAL MIRROR 113

Finally, she hit on the right idea. She needed a summer in the mountains. Other Colleges didn't go to the mountains, but William and Mary had always been a setter of fashions, and she was going to the mountains anyway. She took the train and went. The faculty went; the students went; the books went; the apparatus went; everybody went but Lord Botetourt and Father.

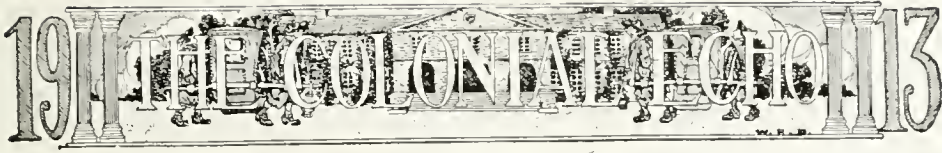

William and Mary enjoyed it immensely. She filled her lungs with the cool breezes of the Southwest. She feasted on juicy bluegrass beefsteak and luscious Dublin apples. She danced with the gallants of Ronaoke and Pulaski with an outer air of demureness, but with the inward spirit of a child in a field of daisies. In the autumn she returned to Williamsburg with pink cheeks and shining eyes, declaring she had had the time of her life.

This summer William and Mary is going to the mountains again. She says she intends to have a summer home and a winter home. Why not? Does your plutocrat freeze in winter and swelter in summer? Not he. In winter he plays golf in Florida, and in summer he fishes in Canada. And isn't William and Mary as good as a plutocrat? Hasn't she a right to spend the winters down in old Williamsburg with the warmth, the blackbirds, and the roses, and the summers in Dublin with the coolness, the chipmunks, and the bluegrass? Just common sense, and in a few years everybody will be doing it.

Seriously, the summer session is a great step forward in the life of the College. To have an opportunity to do real College work in summer and to build up the physical health at the same time in the cool atmosphere of the mountains, means much to the hard-working students and teachers of Virginia and the South. It is characteristic of William and Mary to lead the way in this new work, and may the greatest success attend her efforts in it.

William and Mary Normal Academy

THE William and Mary Normal Academy embraces three years of work in academic branches of study, supplemented by courses for the training of teachers. To enter the Academy, a student must have preparation equivalent to that obtained by completion of the work of the elementary schools. Upon graduation, an Academy student is entitled to conditioned entrance into College, and to a certificate which will allow him to teach in the public schools of Virginia without examination. The Academy is thus a preparatory school leading to College entrance, and also a school for the training of teachers.

Situated upon the campus of the College of William and Mary, using, in part, the same buildings that the College uses; enjoying, in large measure, the material equipment which the College affords; surrounded by the memories and ideals that lend to William and Mary her distinctive charm and power to inspire; the William and Mary Normal Academy, maintained by the College and guided in all matters of general policy by the College authorities, is yet a separately organized institution, with a faculty of seven members, a student body of ninety, and a spirit of its own.

In athletics, the students of the academy have their own teams—football, basketball, baseball, and track—which they organize and control. In literary work they have their own society—the Jefferson—in which they practice composition and public speaking. The College students manage the undergraduate affairs of the college; the Academy students manage those of the Academy. The two student bodies are united under the name William and Mary; they are yet separate.

The Academy is only two years old. It was organized to take charge of the preparatory work which William and Mary has found it necessary to do in order to meet the needs of the State. The many students of preparatory grade who wish to equip themselves to teach, and the many who have no high school in their home communities, can find work in the Academy suited to their needs. It is expected that the Academy will continue to grow, extensively and intensively; for it has a distinct mission to fulfil.

Academy History

THIS indeed with some little mingled feelings of pride that the present historian begins the task assigned to him. First, there comes a feeling of pride that we have anything to record; then follows the "inability feeling;" and, lastly, there springs up a feeling of wonder as to what the future or the past of so many noble sons has been or will be.

Two years ago, with pale faces, we broke loose from our Mother College and began doing things ourselves. We built up quite a little "rep" for ourselves, but we were not satisfied, so here we are, back at the fountain of knowledge. This year our enrollment has increased, our appropriations are larger, and our general outlook has brightened beyond recognition.

An Academy history without some mention of the football season would be as incomplete as a two-sided triangle. True it is that there are some scores that linger in our minds, that we would feign forget, but there are others that we take a just pride in. Our first game, with Blackstone Academy, resulting in a Dick Merrill finish, à la Kornagey, was surely discouraging. Let's forget that, and along with it, the Hampton and second Norfolk games, while we think of how we trimmed Maury High on their own grounds, and Richmond Academy here at home. Yet, better than all, who of us can forget that evening when we played the—we started to say Varsity, but remembering how we were told the day before the game that, as two of the regulars couldn't be gotten, it was only a scrub game. Well, all honor to the scrubs then, for as long as "Jack" Wright held out, they certainly played good ball, making two touchdowns, but in the second half, when "Buskey" started going around ends, and incidentally "Cap" made a touchdown, no one, we think, will deny that that half was the climax of our season, and one that we could justly be proud of. With Booth in the center, Crockett, Corbell, and Addison in their respective positions, and Prof. Goodwin as coach—we are going to win.

A new departure for the Academy was the formation of a Literary Society of its own. Realizing the disadvantage of competition between men of such different literary grade as College and Academy students, the Academy student body took the initiative, and just before the mid-year examinations, met to form their own Society. When the disturbance of the examinations was over, the Society, under its new name, "The Jefferson Literary Society," settled down to real work, and the enthusiasm with which the members are contesting for the medals is a sufficient prophecy of a successful future. We believe, we dare, we achieve, we do things.

Curlers? We have them, too. Some of our beacon lights are Jenkins, West, Young, Savage, Petty, Lawson, Lewis, and Moore.

Each year many of us part; some, perhaps, never to meet again. To these we extend our heartfelt wishes and a request to remember and forever cherish the days when we played around "Old Spotswood" and loafed at the post-office, waiting to receive a letter from "Dad." with a check enclosed.

To One Over the Sea

My mind would hate you, cast you forth, discard;
My heart would hold you, love you, and caress.
My reason recks you worthless with the shard;
My heart enclasps and kisses, still to bless,
And rose-leaves, wafted lavender, and nard,
Revive the legend of your loveliness.

And while my soul is crying: Yet how long!
My heart is binding stronger and more strong,
And while my mind is cutting loose the ties,
I feel the hot tears brimming in my eyes,
And hear the snatches of a distant song—
That poignant song, the strain that never dies.

Academy Senior Class History

WHEN assigned the task of producing a history, the writer did not know what was expected of him except brevity; hence he referred to that authority on every subject, Noah Webster, and found that a history is "a narration of events in the order in which they happened, with their causes and their effects."

As the Academy Senior Class of 1913 is composed of students in so many different courses, the task becomes that of writing a general history; one which should tell of some phase of school life, common to all members of the class. Such is the historian's problem. To him, in the depths of despair, a quotation from Pope comes as a light of inspiration: "What histories of toil could I declare!" Here at last was something common to us all.

It would never do to give in chronological order the events with which this Class has been connected. The historian was enjoined to be brief, and besides, it is not best to lay the direful tragedies to the public gaze. No writer dares tell the real horrors of any battle; and only those who were in the thick of the fight could conceive of the stupendous loss of sleep and note paper. The mere names of Baskerville, Ostwald, Wolfson and Squair yet cause the cheek of the veteran Seniors to pale, out of mercy to those who have survived. This part of the past must be forever veiled in oblivion. It is sufficient to mention the causes and effects of the toil and strife. There are twenty causes which may be mentioned under one general head—THE FACULTY. It is not necessary to explain these causes further. All those who have been in the least familiar with this school will understand perfectly, and further generations had best be left in blissful ignorance thereof. The effects, on the other hand, are truly innumerable. Not even our friendly Webster's Dictionary, taken alphabetically, would supply words sufficient to describe them fully. Among them, however, are agitation, alarm, bother, break-down, catastrophe, mental and physical exhaustion, insomnia, and some forms of insanity.

The Duc's Complaint

John Tyler is my teacher,
I shall not pass.
He maketh me to explain hard propositions
And exposeth my ignorance before the whole class.
    He restoreth my sorrow
    He causeth me to draw
    Parallelograms for my grade's sake.

Yea, though I study until midnight
I shall gain no knowledge,
For originals sorely trouble me,
    Pyramids and prisms
    They distress me.

He prepareth a test for me in the presence of the Seniors;
He giveth me a low grade
My sorrow runneth over
Surely, distress and sadness shall follow me all the days of my life.
And I shall dwell in the Geometry class forever.
