Cubic Corporation – producer of industrial and military electronics for world markets

Electronic tracking systems for determining the positions of aircraft, drones, missiles, satellites and space vehicles have been designed and built by Cubic Corporation and are now operational throughout the free world. These systems are setting new standards of reliability based on the superior design of Cubic AME (Angle Measuring Equipment), DME (Distance Measuring Equipment), and DHE (Data Handling Equipment).

An outstanding example of the capability of Cubic systems is AGAVE, the primary capsule acquisition aid in worldwide use at all 18 tracking sites for U.S. men-in-space programs. Cubic tracking systems offer important advantages in lower costs, greater accuracy, prompt delivery and multiple target tracking capability. Complete systems, including peripheral equipment, are built to well defined specifications using state-of-the-art techniques. They may be easily adapted for real time display or data recording.

Here are typical examples of Cubic tracking systems

MOPTAR: Air traffic control system developed for the Federal Aviation Agency.

MATTS: Three-target AME-based scoring system at Eglin Gulf Test Range.

BICOTAR: AME-based range safety system at Vandenberg Air Force Base.

ADAM: A highly-sophisticated nine-target position tracking system based on combination of AME and DME.

AMRDH: Digital data system for Atlantic Missile Range.

Cubic Electrotape

Cubic has developed Electrotape, a lightweight, easy-to-operate electronic instrument measuring radio-line-of-sight distances from 30 feet to 30 miles –faster, more accurately than other methods. Surveyors save time and money by substituting fast, modern Electrotape for old-fashioned chain and tape methods of measuring distances. Electrotape also offers important advantages over other electronic and optical distance measuring systems.

Industrial Division

Cubic manufactures a complete line of quality digital instruments for precise measurements of DC volts, AC volts, resistance and other values. Reed relay digital voltmeters, a Cubic development, are extremely high speed, accurate, long life digital instruments that have won widespread acceptance in both defense and industrial applications. Cubic also offers economical packaged digital data systems to meet automatic, high-speed testing requirements.

For more information on any Cubic product, write to Cubic Corporation, Dept. WM-2, 9233 Balboa Avenue, San Diego 23, California.

The Coeds

THE COLLEGE OF WILLIAM AND MARY

Senior Ann Eggleston (above) of Norfolk and Junior Glenda Hudgins of Newport News typify today's coeds.

WOMEN!

ON March 15, 1918, the Virginia General Assembly enacted legislation which made the College of William and Mary coeducational.

Strong men wept.

It had, after all, been a man's campus for 225 years. Then too, women were making horrible inroads on the masculine world of that era. They were spearheading that abhorrent crusade which would close saloons and make whiskey-drinking illegal. They were encroaching upon the formerly exclusive male realm of politics, for they would soon obtain the right to vote. To see them also invade the sancrosanct buildings of the old College was almost more than a true-blue William and Mary man could bear.

Students vented their indignation in typical undergraduate fashion. Protests against the coming female invasion appeared in The Flat Hat and William and Mary's impending doom was predicted at a couple of mass meetings. The effect and intensity of the student's objections were mitigated by World War I, which had considerably reduced the College enrollment. Dr. A. P. Elliott, '19, recalls, however, that the young men on campus observed "Black Thursday" for several weeks to revile the day upon which the evil act was passed by the General Assembly.

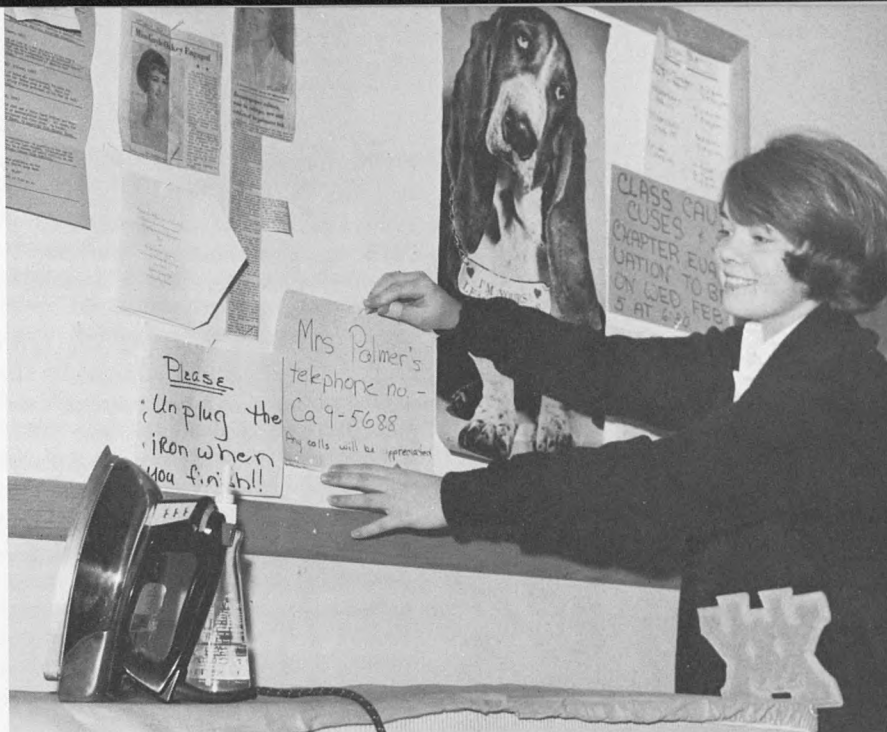

A few months later, undergraduate indignation seems to have evaporated. When the first 24 coeds enrolled in September of 1918, The Flat Hat seemed completely enthralled by the presence on campus of women: "A new atmosphere surrounds the opening of William and Mary for the two hundred and twenty-sixth session . . . it is a momentous event. . . ." Tyler Hall, which became the College's first women's dormitory, was promptly dubbed the "skirt barn" and, presumably, became a popular attraction among the heretofore womenless men students. By the following spring, when Ruth Taylor Conkey, a transfer from Wisconsin, became the first female graduate, The Colonial Echo bragged, "Here is the first of her kind. . . ."

Women won quick acceptance at the undergraduate level. Among alumni, however, mutterings of discontent continued for many years. Indeed, some surviving pre-1918 students still cannot fully accept the presence of women at William and Mary. One crusty old grad regularly vents his indignation in colorful and unquotable notes to the alumni secretary. The fact that his anti-feminine comments come attached to generous checks payable to the William and Mary Fund makes them entirely palatable, if unprintable.

Just as firmly opposed to women at the College, though more moderate in both language and viewpoint, is Dr. Amos R. Koontz, '09, of Baltimore. This devoted, extremely loyal son of William and Mary is quick to explain that he has nothing against women. "I think they are charming, delightful, delicious, delovely," he says. "That is exactly why I am opposed to coeducation. It is not that I do not like the lovely ladies but that I like them too well.

Dormitories and sorority houses occupied by coeds are unmistakably marked by un-male appurtenances like irons, frothy bulletin boards and, fortunately, by pretty misses like Barbara Wallace, senior from Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania.

"If . . . coeds had been in college when I was there, I would not now have a Phi Beta Kappa key dangling from my watch chain, nor would I have gained the academic status requisite for entrance to the Johns Hopkins Medical School.

"If I were sitting in class beside one of the lovely things, it would be difficult for me to keep my mind on the Darwinian theory or Newton's Law," he argues. "This does not mean that I am not a strong man—indeed I am a very stout fellow—but every man has his breaking point."

In spite of Dr. Koontz's fears, William and Mary men continue to win Phi Beta Kappa keys and go on to graduate schools with intellects unimpaired by four years of coeducation. Fact is, constant exposure to women students in day-to-day relationships tends to reduce the shock action Dr. Koontz fears. It seems to result in a normal and thoroughly happy environment for both male and female.

It is pointless and entirely needless to argue with those who oppose coeducation at William and Mary however, for women are thoroughly and irrevocably a part of the College. During one period in World War II, in fact, they were practically all of it. In 1944 and 1945, when male enrollment dropped to less than 200, coeds helped take up the slack created by wartime inroads on college-aged men. Enrollment of women climbed to nearly 1,000. It was not unusual, particularly in upper class courses, to see professors lecturing to all-girl classes.

Coeducation creates an alumni body with characteristics completely different from those of all-men or all-women institutions. In the single sex alumni groups, strong appeals for support are made through the device of class loyalty. But such class associations, so meaningful at some of the male institutions of the Ivy League, are simply impossible at William and Mary. "How," asks Alumni Secretary Jim Kelly, "can a man be willing to die for good old '65 when he is engaged to a coed in '66?"

"The Alumni Society is keenly aware of this problem in class organization but, while regretting it exists, finds strength in a situation colleges like VMI may never know . . . we have William and Mary families. Sex-segregated institutions will never experience the joy we know in the alumni office when a William and Mary boy marries a William and Mary girl."

Kelly adds, "We can predict that in this year's graduating class of 530, about 100 will choose a fellow alumnus as a mate . . . and some of them don't even know it yet!"

About one-sixth to one-fifth of all William and Mary alumni, he figures, marry one another. He notes that of 24 married alumni who are members of the College staff or faculty, 16 have alumnae for wives . . . including the president, dean of students, alumni secretary and editor of the GAZETTE.

Kelly has other interesting statistics about the relationship of coeducation to alumni activity. "In recent years, 70 per cent of a class's contributions to the William and Mary Fund has come from William and Mary families, couples who both attended the College. We also know that 85 per cent of our coeds will eventually marry, 76 per cent of them will have at least two children and of this group, 65 per cent will definitely want their children to attend William and Mary."

Regardless of how thoroughly one accepts the presence of women at William and Mary, it comes as a shock to realize they have been in attendance long enough—46 years—to have had a building named in memory of one who has died. The new women's gymnasium, dedicated in November, was named for Cornelia Storrs Adair, '23. Miss Adair, who earned her degree after having taught in Richmond schools for many years (and was thus somewhat older than the average student), was a nationally-known educator. She was the first classroom teacher ever elected president of the National Education Association.

The fact that Miss Adair was a teacher is perhaps typical of the women who enrolled in the early years of coeducation. Many of their male counterparts also earned degrees in education, for preparation of teachers for the Virginia school system was decreed by the state funds which supported William and Mary. Although many coeds still go into teaching when they graduate, the variety of occupations and interesting activities they enter outside of education—or into which education leads them—defies description. To convey the breadth of their accomplishments, the GAZETTE selected a few as illustrations. The 18 listed here represent merely a sampling; dozens of others have had careers fully as interesting or unusual.

Catherine Teackle Dennis, '21. After five years teaching in Virginia high schools, Catherine earned a master's degree at Columbia and joined the faculty at Woman's College of the University of North Carolina. In 1936 she became state supervisor of Home Economics Education for the North Carolina Department of Public Instruction. Since then she has made Who's Who in America and Who's Who of American Women; been named Tar Heel of the Week by the Charlotte News and Observer and Woman of the Year for 1954 by Progressive Farmer; been awarded the Distinguished Service Award for 1961 by the North Carolina Farm Bureau and for 1963 by the American Vocational Association, and awarded an LL.D. by Woman's College of the University of North Carolina. William and Mary awarded her an Alumni Medallion in 1939 and she served from 1943 to 1950 as a member of the Society Board of Directors. She is a member of Phi Beta Kappa.

Dr. Elizabeth P. Lam, '28. With master's degree and doctorate in the field of social ethics, theology and philosophy, Elizabeth became dean and assistant professor at Occidental College in 1941, went to the Women's College of Western Reserve University as professor and chairman of the Department of Religion in 1944 and then went to Germany in 1946 where she spent three years in educational work. Since 1949 she has been executive associate of the Committee on International Exchange of Persons in Washington, D. C. Her work is concerned with the international exchange of university professors under the Fulbright Act. She deals with arrangements for incoming foreign professors from 35 countries and has travelled extensively.

Dr. Mary Elizabeth Johnston, '33. Although she received her William and Mary B.S. in 1933, she actually attended with the class of 1929, entered Medical College of Virginia and earned both her M.D. and B.S. in the same month. After interning at Johnston-Willis Hospital in Richmond, she returned to her home in Tazewell, Virginia, to practice medicine with her father, the late Dr. Prentiss Dupuy Johnston, Sr. When he died in 1941, Mary faced the war years handling a huge general practice alone. After the war she entered a partnership with Dr. Rufus Brittain. To facilitate their practice, they established the 20-bed Jeffersonville Hospital.

Rhoda Pratt Hanson, '33. In Miles City, Montana, where her husband is a sheep rancher, Rhoda is teaching French in high school and junior college simply because they did not have a French teacher. Teaching, however, is a minor occupation. She is also general agent for Western Life Insurance Company (Rhoda was Montana's Businesswoman of the Year in 1953), is a leading Montana Democrat (husband Roy is Republican), has been to France two or three times (may study at the Sorbonne this summer) and has raised four children: Andy 26, now in Liberia with his wife; Kurt 23, ex-Marine now at the University of Montana; Erika 20, also at Montana U., and Thora 18, preparing to enter nurse's training.

Dr. Elizabeth Burger Jackson, '34. Elizabeth, who received her master's degree at William and Mary in 1935 and a doctorate at the University of Virginia in 1960, is professor of natural science at Longwood College, Farmville. Although science is her professional field, she won national honors on another kind of field. Her prowess and interest in field hockey

Alice Reasoner Herrick, '34. From Williamsburg, Alice travelled to the Philippines with her parents after graduation, for her father, an army surgeon, had been assigned there. A couple of years later she married a career Army man and continued the kind of travel she experienced with her parents. Ankara, Turkey, is her current address, the latest of about 20 she has had since 1936. Waystops have been Hawaii (twice), Japan and several U. S. posts. Her two sons are also currently Army officers, one a graduate of the University of Hawaii, the other a West Point graduate. One daughter is in college at Munich, Germany, and the other is in high school in Ankara.

earned her a place on the United States Women's Hockey Team for nine years. For three years she was captain of the team and was also chosen to represent the U. S. in field hockey in British Guiana in 1939, South Africa in 1950, England in 1953 and Australia and New Zealand in 1956. Back home in Farmville she has been both president and campaign chairman for the Community Chest, is a board member of Southside Hospital and an active member of the Women's and Garden Clubs.

Virginia Drown Smith, '34. By acquiring a husband last New Year's Eve, Virginia made obsolete the letter-heads of William and Mary's Educational Foundation. She is the only woman on its board of directors, which is listed down the left margin of Foundation stationary. Her maiden name must now be changed to Mrs. Boyd G. Smith. Since leaving the College 30 years ago, Virginia has been involved in the operation of the largest laundry and cleaning business in Erie, Pennsylvania, of which she owns half interest.

March 1964

Ruth Cobbett Biemiller, '35. This latter-day archy (see page 5) is a free-lance writer and editor and, since 1952, crossword puzzle editor of the New York Herald Tribune. Her puzzles are syndicated throughout this country and Canada and appear in the paper's European edition. During World War II she wrote and edited The Shipworker at Brooklyn Navy Yard. Her husband, Reynard Biemiller, is art director of the Rockefeller Institute Press and their son Christopher is a sophomore at Cornell. Ruth is a member of the Overseas Press Club and is currently serving a fourth term on the board of directors of the Newspaper Women's Club of New York.

Virginia Mister Walker, '35. She stayed in Williamsburg an extra two years in order to obtain a law degree in 1937. Today she has a position with the following jaw-breaking title: Librarian, Legal-Political and Security Council Branch Library, United Nations Library. "The job is far less important and, at times, far more demanding than the title would indicate," she notes. As might be expected, New York City is her home.

Marion Moncure Duncan, '35. At 18, Marion entered the Daughters of the American Revolution as an organizing and charter member of the Alexandria chapter. Today she is president general of the national DAR, the first native Virginian ever to hold that exalted office. Her DAR career is studded with accomplishments and has led to national honors too numerous to catalogue in a single paragraph. Aside from the DAR, Marion has three sons—23-year-old Robinson in the Coast Guard, 19-year-old Moncure in college and 16-year-old Bruce in prep school—and is an insurance broker, heading the insurance department of her husband's Alexandria real estate-insurance firm.

Virginia Forwood Pate, '40. Widowed and the mother of three—David 19, Kennon 17 and Barbara 15—Virginia was elected president of the Maryland Association of Boards of Education last fall. In her home town, Havre de Grace, she is president and general manager of radio station WASA and a member of the board of education of Harford County. She is the only woman director in the Maryland-District of Columbia Broadcasters' Association and is educational chairman for the scholarship program of the organization.

Dorothy P. Whitfield, '41. After graduation, Dorothy took a short post graduate course in secretarial school, spent a year as secretary in a Newark, N. J., law firm, then moved to Princeton, N. J., to serve as secretary to the director of the Office of Population Research at Princeton University. For the past seven years she has been secretary to the president of the University.

Elizabeth Douglass Munves, '43. Though she's married to a dentist and has an eight-year-old boy and five-year-old daughter, Betsy holds a position as associate professor in the home economics department at New York University not far from her Washington Square residence. It was at NYU she took her master's and doctor's degrees. She's appeared on about 40 television programs, co-authored five books and written innumerable articles on the subject of nutrition and home economics.

Gloria Hanners Peters, '45, and Edie McChesney Ker, '45. Separate stories on pages 11 and 12 tell the interesting stories of these two alumnae, members of what, because of World War II, is virtually an all-girl class.

Eva Atkinson Trombley, '47. Fashion education is her province; she's been on the faculty of New York's Tobe-Coburn School for Fashion Careers for 12 years, was recently named assistant director and dean after serving as dean and fashion coordinator. The school trains young women to be junior executives in the fields of fashion merchandising and promotion. To keep up to date in her field, Eva has made many European trips to attend haute couture openings in London, Paris and Italy. Husband Bill Trombley, whom she met at William and Mary, is Eastern regional group manager for the Home Life Insurance Company. Their son is a contributor to the Saturday Evening Post and other publications.

Margaret B. Hall, '54. Studies at the Metropolitan Opera Ballet School, the American Shakespeare Festival Academy and at Lee Strasberg's well-known acting school have led Margaret into a career in the theatre. She played the young queen with Sir Laurence Olivier in Becket and in January was rehearsing High Spirits, the musical version of Blythe Spirit, written and directed by Noel Coward.

Off Broadway, she's been Little Mary in Little Mary Sunshine, Isadora in John Dos Passos' U.S.A., Telesia in Durrenmatt's The Jackass, Hortense in The Boy Friend and played the lead in Fallout, a musical review. She's played in stock companies throughout the East Coast and has appeared in television on the U. S. Steel, Alcoa and Playhouse 90 programs.

Carolyn Suber Guess, '56. After husband Gene, '55, took a law degree at the University of Virginia, they headed up the Alaska Highway to settle in Anchorage, Alaska. Why?

"Opportunity and challenge," says Carolyn. While Gene struggled to establish a law practice, she did some teaching, then answered an advertisement for a television kindergarten teacher. From 35 applicants, Carolyn was chosen for KTVA-TV's Romper Room program and rapidly built up a large following. As the GAZETTE went to press she was on leave preparing for birth of her second child. Gene's law firm was booming, as was his political stock, for he campaigned diligently on behalf of Governor William Egan.

The Coeds

Glo, the Go Woman

Gloria Hanners Peters and her five unsmothered children.

WILLIAM AND MARY's formidable females become involved in all manner of noteworthy activities after leaving Williamsburg.

Some raise big broods of children.

Many obtain unusual jobs.

A few get involved in politics.

Others become engineers, doctors, lawyers or the like.

A handful appear on national television.

A tiny group achieves national publicity.

Only one, so far as the GAZETTE could determine, has accomplished all of these things. She's Gloria Hanners Peters, '45.

First off, she has five children. Secondly, she spends her summers as a field representative for Mobil Travel Guide bouncing on mattresses and sampling food from Cape Cod through Manhattan to the Jersey Shore. Thirdly, she's a Democratic County committee-woman for Essex County (N. J.) and has attended two national conventions. Fourthly, she's about to obtain a law degree she earned by attending classes at Seton Hall five nights a week. Fifthly, she was the real Gloria Peters who stood up on a "To Tell the Truth" program one evening last June. Lastly, she has been the subject of articles in the New Yorker and about 2,200 newspapers across the country.

In the face of all this, Glo wryly admits, she does not do much cooking any more. "I have a cleaning woman come in once a week. Otherwise the children do the cooking, the laundry, take care of the yard and themselves. They're putting me through law school. And they get all A's in their own schools. Have I got kids!"

She, the children and husband Raymond Peters, who's with American Telephone and Telegraph, live in a 70-year-old home in Montclair, N. J., which, she says, "will never be photographed by House Beautiful but is a palace for the Peters."

A couple of years ago she took a law aptitude test and scored so well she won one of Seton Hall's coveted Centennial Scholarships. As a result, most of her daylight hours are spent in study and five nights a week she's away at school. She gets home at about 10:30 p.m., just in time to say goodnight to her oldest offspring, Sara 15 and Joan 14. The others, Hilary 5, William 9 and Anne 12 are already—or are supposed to be—asleep.

Glo holds William and Mary at least partly responsible for her involvement with law school. The late Professor Theodore Cox befriended her during her undergraduate days and "used to let me stop in the law classes whenever

I had a free period and I loved it but never had any real idea that women were lawyers." Another reason for her interest in becoming an attorney probably lies in her political activity. She is a dedicated member of a group of Essex County Democrats which seeks to overthrow certain party bosses . . . with, as she admits, notable lack of success up to now.

From the day in June that law school closes for the summer until classes resume in September, Glo works as a field representative for Mobil Travel Guides. Her job involves going into hotels, motels, resorts and restaurants along the Jersey Coast, in New York City and on Cape Cod to check the quality of accommodations and food. In eating places, everything from the freshness of vegetables to how garbage is handled comes under her scrutiny.

During the summer, Glo inspects about 500 assorted sleeping, eating and playing establishments. It keeps her busy about 10 hours a day for three months. Although she manages to return home every night when she is working in the New York City or New Jersey area, she must stay on the road for brief stretches when she's checking things on Cape Cod.

"I travel alone," Glo notes. "A field representative isn't allowed to accept even a cup of coffee without paying for it. Who could afford to buy her husband dinner every day?"

When she's on her Cape Cod trips, she has a woman come in every day to look after the children. "But only to look after them," she adds. "The children cook for her."

The obvious question to put to this peripatetic William and Mary alumna is, "How about your husband and your children? Are they resentful and/or neglected?"

Not in the least, says Glo Peters. "Raymond is an angel. He says we should all follow our dreams and he means it. As for the children, they seem to be as excited about what I'm doing as I am.

"If anything, they're better and more self-reliant as a result of their responsibilities than they would have been if I were at home all the time," she added. "In fact, one of them told me just the other day she was real glad I wasn't always S-mothering them like other women."

The Coeds

Edie McChesney Ker at home in Nairobi, Kenya, between safaris.

LIFE on our photographic safaris is roughing it in just the right manner to suit me—luxuriously! The camp consists of large, airy living tents which zip completely, so that no insects or four-footed night visitors can enter; a dining tent, shower tent, a small tent that looks like an outhouse and is, and a kitchen lean-to and two small tents for the African staff. We sleep on spring cots with foam rubber mattresses, dine off gaily-colored crockery and tablecloths and bathe in a six-foot canvas tub or the shower, an opened-topped square tent above which hangs a canvas bag with a horizontal bar at the bottom and chains at either end for turning the water on and off. We even have a paraffin-operated refrigerator which not only gives Americans the ice they long for with drinks but enables us to keep fresh meat longer. We carry all the food we will need for the safari, for the game is protected in the areas we visit and there is no shooting of meat even for the pot; when we exhaust the fresh meat, fruit and vegetables, the multitude of canned foods provides a good variety.

We are waited on hand and foot by nine or ten Africans, who are called "boys" no matter how old they may happen to be. The personal mess boys serve at the table, bring our morning tea and hot wash water at suitable intervals during the day, prepare baths and showers, polish our shoes and do a quick and masterful job of washing our clothes in canvas basins and ironing them with charcoal irons. The cook performs miracles, even baking bread, tea cakes, steamed puddings and creamy custards on his hot coals. The driver for the five-ton four-wheel drive truck which carries our equipment also tends to the needs of our four-wheel drive International safari car; he is a fair mechanic, but if anything serious develops, it is the Jack-of-all-trades White Hunter who then takes over. Travelling with us on our daily game runs are two gunbearers, who are still called by this term on a photographic safari although their only gun bearing comes when they take Don's rifle from hunting car to tent and back. Now their chief function is to stand up through the roof hatches of the car, eyes peeled for game for us to photograph. The porters comprise the rest of the staff; they help erect and take down camp, bring wood and water and do an assortment of other odd jobs.

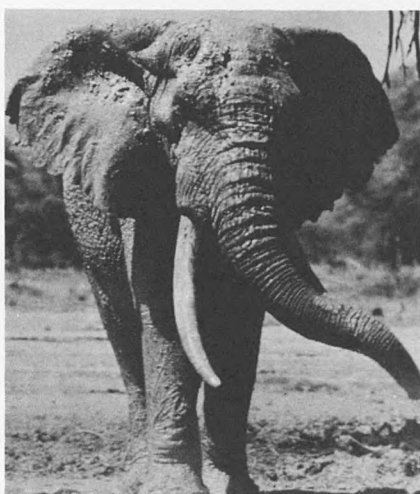

The route of a typical photographic safari includes the widest possible variety of scenery and terrain and the best game country of Kenya and northern Tanganyika. In no one area is it possible to see, and photograph, all kinds of animals. Wild animals can live in the wild only where environmental conditions—water, food, altitude—are suited to their own particular needs. In addition, some species may be too shy to photograph in one place and relatively unconcerned by the presence of cars in another. Thus each section has its own "specialties."

In all the areas visited by our photographic safaris the game is protected, but it is unfortunate in a way that the terms "Park" and "Reserve" have been assigned to these regions where no shooting is permitted. These designations imply that the areas are great open-air zoos where the game is fed or finds its way to the local garbage dump and that the animals there are at least partially tame. Nothing could be farther from the truth. Parks and Reserves have been established to protect game from man, the animals are not fed and there are no fences. Grazing animals move constantly, often out into shooting areas, in search of the best fodder, and the carnivores follow and kill in the normal manner. In short, the game lives just as it does anywhere, but it cannot legally be killed by man. As for tameness, we had a good example of the ferocity of protected animals a few months ago at Amboseli when we were trying to photograph a herd of about thirty elephants. They were feeding peacefully in open, flat country when a young bull at the rear turned suddenly and came trumpeting at us in a very determined charge. We drove off, he returned to the herd, and we approached cautiously again. He charged a second time, we retreated, and this routine continued several times until he recruited a couple of his friends, and then three were seeing us off. By that time all the elephants were aroused and cows screamed frantically as they gathered the calves into a protective circle. Then, unbelievably, the entire herd turned and charged, all trumpeting full blast. Don had made sure he had a good exit route in case they became aggressive, but even so, they charged us for 300 yards and we were approaching a swamp when they gave up. At that, Don had to dodge sharply around a tree and we all gasped once when the wheels spun momentarily on a soft spot. I could almost count the eyelashes on the lead elephant, 25 feet behind the car, when the charge ended. Don said that if anyone had asked him if an entire herd of elephants would ever charge a car, he would have said no, which just proves that wild animals still have a few tricks up their sleeves for even the most experienced hunters.

One of the wonderful things about safari is that you never know what may lie beyond the next clump of bushes or when a commonplace situation will be replaced by the spectacular. Not long ago we were trying to get close to a herd of giraffe, which became alarmed and ran into a thicket of bush and thorn trees. We had nothing more in mind than photographing these gentle creatures when suddenly a lioness sprang up and raced after a baby giraffe. When we reached them a few moments later the lioness lay panting on the ground by her prey and we thought the giraffe was dead. Then, in a flash, the little fellow was on his feet, and with that, a lioness we hadn't even known was around leaped at its throat. It took only seconds and the assistance of the first lioness to bring the giraffe down for good. It is extremely unusual to see a lion make a kill, even from a distance, and we had a ring-side seat for this one, for we had parked only forty feet away from the kill site.

I don't mean to sound bloodthirsty or sadistic by describing witnessing kills, but as some hunters have spent years in the bush without seeing even one, it is an indication of our luck in being at the right place at the right time that we have seen three just this year. Last February we came upon a mother cheetah and two almost full-grown cubs walking across a plain, parallel to each other but one some 100 feet from the next. They were painfully thin and their dispersed positions told us that they were hunting, but they seemed to be going away from what little game was in the area. We had hopes only of photographing them drinking from the nearby donga when suddenly they spied a young Grant's gazelle and all instantly froze in their tracks. Very slowly and cautiously the mother moved off to the right while the youngsters spread out even more to the rear to block an escape in that direction. We could almost see her calculating the distance to be covered when the Grant realized what was happening and took off. In a split second the cheetah went from a dead stop to full gallop, chased the gazelle for 300 yards and brought it down in a cloud of dust. Don timed the chase, and it took just 11 seconds! By the time we reached the kill, moments later, the mother still had the Grant by the throat, the others were digging in and the first vulture had arrived. They ate ravenously, still panting from the run, and within minutes we could see their tummies filling up. They polished off the Grant so completely, even eating the skin and small bones, that nothing but the head and heavy bones remained for the vultures and Marabou storks that lurked hopefully nearby. Finally, when their bellies were bulging, the cheetah went to the donga where they drank, then one by one leaped gracefully across to sleep off the feast in the shade of a tree. There was a sad side-light, though, for Mama and Papa Grant watched the whole thing from

In 1958 Edie McChesney, '45, took a long vacation from her government job in Beirut, Lebanon, to travel in Africa. A feature of the trip was a nine-day camping safari in Kenya and Tanganyika conducted by White Hunter Donald I. Ker. A year later Don Ker safari'd to the United States to camp near Edie's doorstep and in 1960 she made a return trip to Kenya. On March 24, 1962 she married her white hunter, became a resident of Nairobi, Kenya, and a participant in one of the world's most exotic occupations.

Don Ker, a founder and past president of the East African Professional Hunters Association, is founder and director of Ker, Downey and Selby Safaris, Ltd., the largest and best-known firm of its kind in East Africa.

"About seven or eight years ago," Edie relates, "Don became so sentimental about the game that he gave up shooting and now only takes out photographic safaris. This is extremely good from my point of view, for his clients are mostly other couples or family groups who are delighted to have the hunter's wife join the party. But he makes me work; I do the catering. This doesn't mean that I hover over a hot campfire; mostly I plan the meals and our ancient, toothless, excellent safari cook takes it from there."

Here, in her own words, is Edie's description of safari life.

Safaris Are My Life

a distance, from beginning of chase through the final mouthful. But this is the way of Nature and there are thousands of Grants while the cheetah has been reduced to a dangerously low level.

We have had such exceptional luck with leopard that I am almost afraid to mention it for fear of putting a hex on us! We have spent hours watching them just relaxing in trees with their legs and tails hanging down or wadded up among the branches like sacks of meal in leopard-skin covers; climbing up and down trees with movements so supple that the animals seem devoid of bones and stalking through grass, bellies almost scraping the ground and white-tipped tails curved high above their backs.

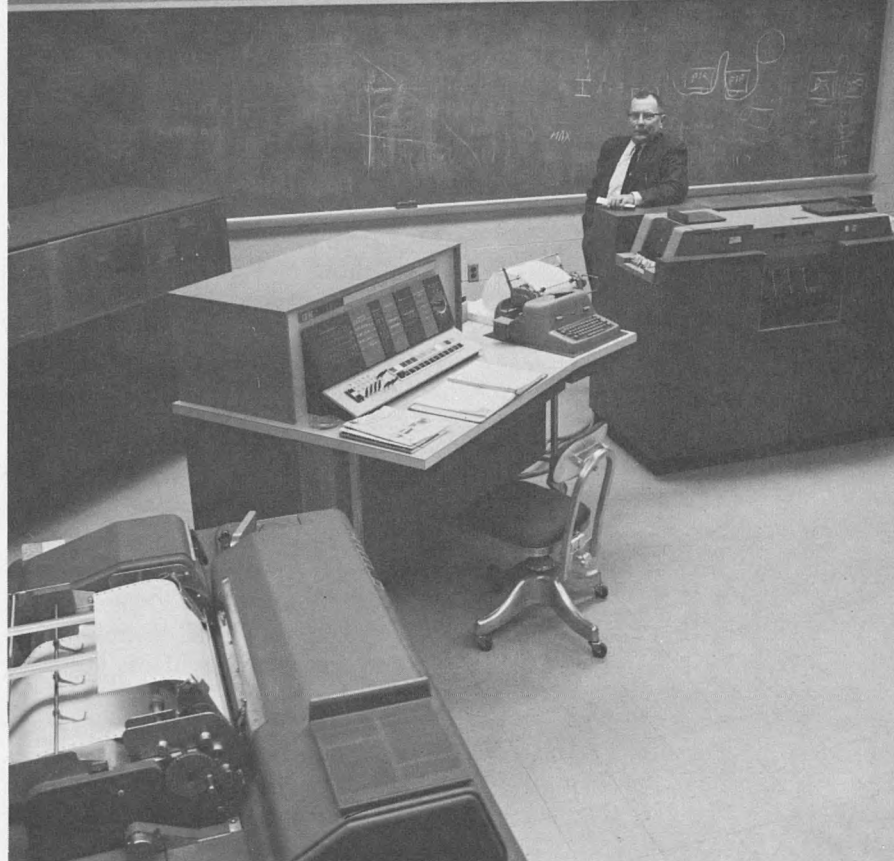

Early one morning we saw a leopardess lying in a patch of sunlight right by the car and presently she ambled in the direction of a donga. We thought we were about to lose her for the day when her attention was attracted by an Egyptian goose, which flew up from a huge hammer-head stork's nest in the crotch of a tree. The leopardess climbed up to investigate, and when she found eggs, promptly took one daintily in her mouth and devoured it. She then ate all the rest of the eggs, jumped to the other side of the donga and continued her way. We caught up with her on the plains and she walked right toward us, stopped, sniffed, then pounced on a mole and gobbled it up. Goose eggs and a mole were a mighty peculiar breakfast for the savage leopard and her behavior was infra dig in the extreme. Then she began looking around and making odd grunting noises and Don realized that she was calling cubs which she had left behind during the night's prowl. Soon she climbed a big tree and lay on an open branch, and for the next hour she kept craning her neck and calling the cubs, often in a loud cough. The leopard's noise is called a cough, but it sounds more like a cross between sawing wood and unstopping a badly clogged drain. She was a magnificent photographic subject, with the sunlight shining on her golden spotted coat and blue sky behind, but we felt very sorry for her as she became distraught when no cubs appeared.

Sensational experiences are by no means a daily, weekly or even monthly occurrence, nor are they necessary for a successful and memorable safari. The sight of animals going about their normal way of life out in the wild where they are meant to be is an unending thrill even to those who have spent years in the bush. Photographic safaris offer the best possible opportunity to study and enjoy the game, for to get good pictures you have to be close to the subject. All animals are interesting just to watch: Thomson's gazelles, or Tommies, with their quizzical little faces, tails that swish constantly back and forth like windshield wipers and their endearing manner of jumping along on stiff legs like pogo sticks; their larger, more dignified cousins, the Grants, with long wide-spread horns and white, squared-off rear ends; fat and sassy zebra, looking so much blacker and whiter than they do in zoos; wildebeest, with their long, mournful faces, buffalo-like horns, beards and manic actions and croaking voices that make it hard to believe they are antelopes; kongoni (the common name for Coke's hartebeest), whose handsome high-steeping trot compensates for its long, dismal face and candelabra-shaped horns; giraffe, with their long eyelashes, sauntering gait and mouths always puckered up; topi, an animal of the hartebeest family, with blue-black leg markings that give it the appearance of wearing hip boots; impala, bounding along in high leaps, one after the other, the males with magnificent lyre-shaped horns; eland, largest of the African antelopes, with long straight horns, dewlap, a marvelously even trot that they can keep up all day and an extraordinary ability to leap over each other's backs; buffalo, possibly the most dangerous of all big game when wounded, but when unmolested a shy, stupid-looking creature with great horns parted and flattened down in the middle and long ears flopping below; elephant, plodding along in their ill-fitting skins, feeding almost constantly, spraying mud, water or even dust over their backs with their trunks and somehow managing to be cute despite their enormous size; rhino, a relic of pre-historic days that seem happiest when wallowing in the mud or dust and contrive to look grotesque and lovable at the same time; baboons, no things of beauty but amusing performers, though some of their actions are disturbingly human; hippo, resting lazily in lakes and rivers with just their great heads with big, buggy eyes and tiny ears visible; dikdik, one of the smallest of antelope, with large oval ears, minute hooves and matchstick horns; waterbuck, husky animals with a regal manner and handsome, symmetrical curving horns on the male; reedbuck, with shiny black button noses and a high bounding gait to carry them through the marshy areas in which they live; klipspringer, lovely little rock-dwelling antelopes which stand on the tips of their tiny hooves and have big, almond-shaped eyes and hollow hair; even the wretched hyena, of which the kindest thing one can say is that it is a necessary evil to take care of the garbage but which has cute black offspring that look like Teddy bears; lions, possibly the most popular of all, with their variety of facial expressions and hair-dos that make one readily distinguishable from the next; these, and many more, to say nothing of the hundreds of beautiful birds of all sizes and colors, make up the African scene. It is all these, plus the constantly changing, ever unpredictable face of Africa that bring people back again and again for another safari, for there is truth in the old Swahili proverb: "He who has tasted honey will return to the honey pot." ❀

The College

March 1964

THE College celebrated its 271st birthday in February with a strong emphasis on science. On Charter Day, which commemorated the granting of the royal charter in 1693 by King William 3rd and Queen Mary 2nd, Dr. Julius A. Stratton, president of Massachusetts Institute of Technology, was principal speaker. His institution was founded in 1861 by William Barton Rogers, a William and Mary alumnus and professor of natural philosophy and chemistry at the College from 1828 to 1835.

The Charter Day program was closing event in a special three-day program during which 15 nuclear research laboratories and government science agencies, including four from Europe, participated in an international Conference on High Energy Cyclotron Improvement. The staff of the William and Mary department of physics, which acted as host to the conference, expected between 50 and 70 persons to participate.

Among the European nuclear research centers which were represented were the European Center for Nuclear Research in Geneva, Switzerland; the Atomic Energy Research Establishment in Harwell, England; and the Universities of Uppsals in Sweden and Liverpool in England. All of the synchrocyclotron laboratories in the United States were represented. These are located at the universities of California, Chicago, Columbia, Harvard and Rochester, and at Carnegie Institute of Technology. The seventh major high energy cyclotron in the United States is currently under construction at NASA's Space Radiation Effects Laboratory at Langley Research Center, Virginia.

The February conference was held in William and Mary's new science center, the William Small Physical Laboratory, which was formally dedicated at that time. Dr. Small was an eighteenth century scientist known as the "beloved teacher" of Thomas Jefferson during Jefferson's student days at the College in 1760-62.

The main purpose of the conference, according to Dr. Robert T. Siegel, research professor of high energy physics at William and Mary, was to exchange information among scientists about potential new uses of high energy cyclotrons in nuclear research. As existing machines begin to approach their full capacity for production of basic research results, all major laboratories seek means to improve the characteristics of these multimillion dollar instruments and ex-

The President Gave a Hoot

HOOTENANNIES, all the rage among today's undergraduates, have given birth to a television program called, of all things, "Hootenanny." It is an American Broadcasting Company network show which graces (or disgraces, according to one's viewpoint) TV screens on Sunday evenings. Each week the program originates at a different college or university.

In the near future, if all went as planned, the program will feature William and Mary. Interested alumni can watch television listings for the date, which was not available as the GAZETTE went to press.

Obtaining the opportunity to appear on national television involved a somewhat tenuous, bumpy route. The story began in late fall when the producers of "Hootenanny" offered to tape the program at William and Mary. This was magnificent except for one factor: the shooting dates were to be January 21st and 22nd. These, unfortunately, fell during the semester examination period.

It has long been a hard, fast and admirable College rule that no extracurricular activities shall be scheduled during examination periods. Even though it meant sacrificing national television exposure for William and Mary, President Paschall and Dean of the Faculty Mel Jones hewed to the rules . . . in spite of fervent pleas tend their functions to new research problems.

The William and Mary conference provided for the first time an opportunity for scientists in this advanced field of study to exchange such information, Dr. Siegel said. Each laboratory was invited to report on its advances in cyclotron uses, to describe the results of improvement programs to date and to establish procedures for communicating future accomplishments.

from students anxious to appear before the cameras.

The administration's refusal to make an exception to its policies brought on one of those periodic outbursts of outraged indignation which are characteristic of undergraduates. The College was missing a splendid opportunity, said a Flat Hat editorial, not only for "free, respectable, national publicity," but to provide students with escape from "the high tension and pressures" of the examination period. So it went. Across the campus, need for study and concentration during examinations was weighed against the golden aura of national television exposure. Study and concentration, needless to say, came off a poor second.

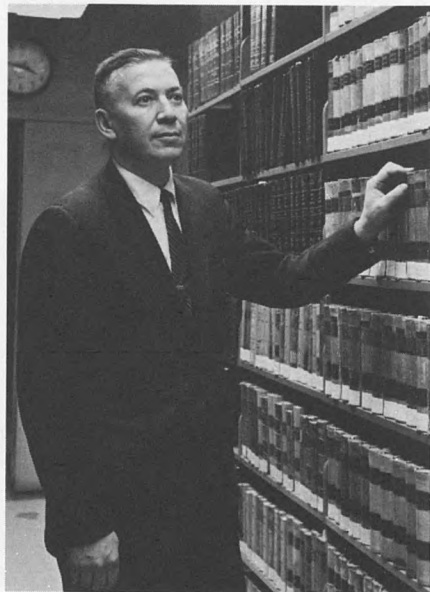

As chief administrative officer, President Paschall was the chief object of student displeasure. Characteristically, he accepted the indignities as the manifestations of immaturity they were. Then, because he is perhaps the undergraduates' best friend, he set about trying to get them what they wanted. Through one or two members of the sometimes maligned Board of Visitors and often criticized Alumni Society, contact was made with certain influential sponsors and ABC officials. The result: "Hootenanny's" producer re-scheduled the William and Mary taping sessions for late February.

Curtis Named Law School Dean

PROFESSOR Joseph Curtis has been appointed dean of the Marshall-Wythe School of Law. He had served as acting dean of the William and Mary law school, oldest in America, since the administrative retirement of Professor Dudley W. Woodbridge in 1962.

Curtis, a native of New York and a graduate of the New York University law school, has been a faculty member at William and Mary since 1948. For the past ten years he has been closely associated with the college's pioneer graduate program in law and taxation, and is widely known as a specialist in tax law. He received his B.S. and LL.B. degrees from New York University in 1934 and 1937 respectively. He served in the Army air corps from 1941 to 1946, attaining the rank of major, and thereafter completed work for his LL.M. degree at N. Y. U.

Dean Curtis is a member of the American Law Institute, the Virginia State Bar, and the committee on small law schools of the Association of American Law Schools. He is a contributor to the annual survey of Virginia law in the Virginia Law Review, and author of tax articles which have appeared in the Virginia Public Accountant and other publications.

Alumni Gazette

The William and Mary law program was established at the urging of Thomas Jefferson on December 4, 1779. The first occupant of the chair of law was George Wythe, a leader of the bar in the late colonial and early statehood periods. The second occupant was St. George Tucker, editor of the first American edition of Blackstone's commentaries.

The William and Mary law program falls into two historical periods. The first, from 1779 to 1861, ended when the college closed its doors for the duration of the Civil War. The second period began in 1922 with the revival of the law school after 60 years of privation following the war. Its present enrollment, at an all-time high of 120 students, would be larger if facilities permitted, according to College officials. The College plans to remodel the present general library building as a new home for the law school upon completion of the Earl Gregg Swem Library.

Woodward To Speak

WILLIAM AND MARY's 271st commencement ceremonies, scheduled June 7th, will feature Dr. C. Vann Woodward of Yale as commencement speaker and the Reverend Frederick Brown Harris, chaplain of the Senate, as baccalaureate speaker. Dr. Woodward, Sterling Professor of History at the Connecticut institution, is a nationally recognized historian. He was Phi Beta Kappa speaker at the College in 1958.

Faculty Award to Altshuler

DR. Nathan Altshuler, whose 1963 Alumni Research Grant—made possible by the William and Mary Fund—permitted him to study in Africa last summer, has been given the Faculty Award for advancement of scholarship. It was presented to him on the 187th anniversary meeting of Phi Beta Kappa in December.

Funds provided by the late John D. Rockefeller, Jr., established the annual recognition of a faculty member for distinguished scholarship and meritorious teaching. The first award,

When the Virginia General Assembly convened in January, it received a proposed budget which, because of a lack of funds, cut college and university building appropriations to the bone. Like other state institutions, William and Mary found its requests for new buildings had been denied. Dr. Davis Y. Paschall (left) and other presidents of state-supported colleges appeared before a joint House-Senate committee to seek restoration of the most-needed items.

in 1961, went to Dr. Leon Golden. The winner last year was Dr. John Lachs.

Initiation ceremonies, held at Raleigh Tavern where the society was founded in 1776, brought 21 undergraduates into membership in Phi Beta Kappa. They were Joel Brook, Kay Burdett, Brenda Crabtree, Hap Crater, Shaune Cruise, Russell Gill, Priscilla Hegeman, Pete Hoyle, Warren Kujawa, Linda Lawrence, Charles Lucas, Jeffrey Marshall, Tom McCullough, Aubrey Morrison, Bob Pavey, Marian Ruddle, Sheila Sawyer, Tony Steinmeyer, Sandra Tolbert, Camm Walker and Lynda Walker.

Doctorate in Physics

THE state council on higher education has approved a proposal by William and Mary to offer a doctor of philosophy degree in the field of nuclear physics. The offering of this Ph.D., which officially began in the current semester, is essentially a recognition of the level of competence which has been attained by the existing curriculum of graduate studies in physics augmented by the faculty of specialists in high and low energy nuclear research, spectroscopy and related fields.

Largest Grant Ever

WILLIAM AND MARY will receive a $400,000 grant—largest research grant ever awarded the College—from the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) for advanced studies in space science. It will cover a three-year period, though one-half will be advanced during the current academic session. Initially, funds will be given to the biology and physics departments. Later funds will be allocated to the physics and other departments.

The College's newly-acquired staff of six nuclear physicists will conduct projects in high energy and other studies will cover spectroscopy, radiation biology, atmospheric phenomena and stress environment.

President Paschall said important factors which influenced NASA's decision included the quality of the physics faculty, the completion of the new William Small Physical Laboratory and the College's proximity to NASA's space radiation effects laboratory now under construction.

A Phi Beta Kappa from Out of the West

Football Coach Marv Levy

IT came as no surprise that Coach Milt Drewer and the College parted company in December. The shocker came a month later when the identity of his successor was announced: 37-year-old Marv Levy, who had resigned at the University of California at about the time Drewer failed to renew his contract at William and Mary.

Contrary to some reports, Drewer was not fired. He was under fire, however, from many quarters. Although his 1963 team played up to its full potential Thanksgiving Day in drubbing Richmond 29-6, the season's record was a disappointing four wins against six losses. It was Drewer's seventh losing season in seven years at William and Mary and his overall record was 22 victories, two ties and 46 defeats.

On December 10th, President Davis Y. Paschall announced, "Mr. Milton Drewer, head football coach, and I have assessed the football situation at the College. After careful consideration of the factors involved, Mr. Drewer has concluded it best not to renew his contract which expires in June, 1964.

"Mr. Drewer is a fine gentleman," added the president, "and has contributed significantly to our sports program during his years of service at the College."

President Paschall appointed Dr. Howard Holland, chairman of the faculty athletic committee, and Athletic Director Les Hooker a two-man committee to recommend a successor. Almost immediately a guessing game began. Well-intentioned alumni and friends of the College deluged Holland and Hooker with suggestions. Prominently mentioned in newspaper reports of prospects for the job were Vito Ragazzo and Joe Mark, former Indian grid greats now on the staff of Alumnus Jim Hickey, who coached North Carolina to a convincing Gator Bowl victory over Air Force Academy as a climax to an excellent season. More than two dozen other names were listed at various times as prospects for the William and Mary job. No one, however, mentioned Marv Levy's name until the announcement came from Williamsburg January 3rd.

His selection may have been the coach-choosing coup of the year, for the nationally-known Levy comes to the College with what seem to be excellent credentials, some of which are astonishingly un-coachlike. To begin with, he is a Phi Beta Kappa, an honor Levy earned quite legitimately as an undergraduate at Coe College, Cedar Rapids, Iowa. If this does not make him unique in the coaching profession, his master's degree in history from Harvard certainly does. Then too, Marv Levy owns a phenomenal memory. This—he called every sportswriter by name after a brief introduction at his first press conference—and a warm, engaging personality earned him first rate newspaper coverage.

"I think football can be fun," he told reporters, "but I don't think it can be as much fun unless you win. We owe it to our players to teach what will make them winners."

Whether Coach Levy can pay that debt remains to be seen. There are indications that he has that combination of talent necessary to produce winning teams. In spite of the frustrations he experienced during his four-year tenure at California, other coaches recommended him highly. Chief among his supporters was Lynn "Pappy" Waldorf, one of the University's most successful coaches. Prior to assuming the California job Levy was head coach at New Mexico University for two years, winning 14 while losing six and earning coach-of-the-year honors in the Skyline Conference for his 1959 accomplishments.

It may require all of Levy's keen intellect and acknowledged ability to keep the Indian football head above water next fall. The schedule, tougher than ever, includes VMI, Navy, Pittsburgh, Furman, The Citadel, George Washington, Virginia Tech, Virginia, West Virginia and Richmond, in that order. He must face these opponents without the services of 13 graduating lettermen, including eight starters.

Chief among his losses will be three linemen who impressed professional talent scouts enough to be drafted. T. W. Alley, surprisingly, was the Indians' highest draft choice in both leagues. He chose to sign with the National Football League Pittsburgh Steelers, who named him on the fifth round. Also signed by the Steelers was Bob Soleau. John Sapinsky decided on the Oakland Raiders of the American Football League.

Another departing senior is Quarterback Dan Henning, who eclipsed Buddy Lex as William and Mary's greatest passer. His 1963 accomplishments, 100 completions in 183 attempts for 1,133 yards, set three new season records. Also a new record were his career totals of 178 completions in 384 attempts for 2,348 yards.

Defensive backfield specialist Dick Kern, whose eight pass interceptions led all the nation's college players in 1963, will also graduate in June, together with such other stalwarts as Charlie Weaver, Bill Corley, Mike Lesniak, Marty Nosal and Dan Armour.

To meet the challenge of his new job, Levy listed his immediate objectives as (1) get to know the players, (2) complete his staff and (3) set up recruiting. Spring practice is tentatively scheduled to begin April 7th. "We'll emphasize three things," he told newsmen, "in this order.

"First, teach fundamentals. We won't be fancy. We'll stick to what we institute this first year.

"Second, evaluate personnel. I have not seen any William and Mary game films and I may not look at any films so I may go into spring practice with an open mind.

"Third, develop toughness. We're going to be lean and quick and tough."

Although Levy acknowledges he will be late in starting upon his recruiting program, he feels that the enthusiasm of a new staff will help remedy this. He also intends to concentrate a great deal upon obtaining Virginia boys and is optimistic about the future. Surprisingly, he disclosed that William and Mary's 60 football scholarships will not create great problems for him. At California he had only 66!

Without criticizing the program or officials at California, Levy indicated that he prefers a smaller college like

William and Mary. "I like the atmosphere and environment, what I've seen of it," he said. "There should be more opportunity to work with the players and get to know them here."

Not Great, But Better Than Expected

EACH year a two-week gap occurs in William and Mary's basketball schedule to free players for first semester examinations. The hiatus, which began this season on January 17th, came after 13 games had been played. Surprisingly, Coach Bill Chambers' team had won seven of them.

In view of his losses by graduation from last year's fine team and the fact that the brand of Southern Conference basketball had become about as good as any in the nation (Davidson, undefeated, ranked fifth in the country; Virginia Tech, sporting a 10-2 record, had toppled the best in other conferences, and West Virginia seemed almost as good as ever), most Indian hoop followers conceded this might be a rebuilding year. In other words, it looked as if William and Mary basketball might be in for a bleak winter.

The fact that the team did better than break even in its first 13 games is high tribute to Chambers, to his determined players and also to Joe Agee, who annually performs wonders with his freshman team, turning over splendid sophomore material to Bossman Chambers each fall. This year, for instance, while the varsity compiled a 7-6 record, Joe's eight-man squad of first-year boys—only one of them on scholarship—won five of seven contests.

Some of Agee's "graduates" have contributed significantly to the success of this year's varsity team. Chambers has used Sophomores Walter Wenk, Bob Eskay, Bill DuPriest, Tim Walter and Larry Paffrath effectively to support Upperclassmen Dave Hunter, Martin Morris, Hugh Miller, Jim Roy and Dan Dickerson.

Key to Chambers' success this season has been his ability to devise a sometimes impenetrable man-to-man defense, one which held the first 13 opponents to an average of about 60 points per game, highly creditable in this era of high-scoring basketball. It paved the way for wins over Hampden-Sydney, Furman twice, VMI, Arkansas State, East Tennessee State and East Carolina. It also kept the Indians within respectable—often threatening—range of the teams it did not beat: West Virginia, Texas Western, Eastern Kentucky, The Citadel, Richmond and Virginia Tech.

As the GAZETTE went to press, eight regular season games, most of them at home, remained. There seemed little doubt that William and Mary would also play at least one game in the Southern Conference tournament scheduled February 27-29 at Charlotte, N. C.

Run, Swim & Change

IN other cold weather activity, Jim Johnson continued his record-smashing ways. Running in the Chesterfield Junior Chamber of Commerce Invitational Meet in Richmond, the Norfolk sophomore won the two-mile run in record time, beating a strong field. During the fall he won both the state and Southern Conference cross-country championships in leading William and Mary to both titles.

Dudley Jensen's swimming team, using the beautiful pool in Cornelia Storrs Adair Gymnasium for its home meets, had a 3-2 seasonal record at exam time. Junior Ron Good smashed his own Southern Conference 60-yard record in one meet. Co-captains Pete MacIntosh and Dick Franklin were consistent point-getters, as were Sophomores Colt Worcester and Art Brettnall.

With the advent of Marv Levy as head football coach, several changes occurred in coaching assignments. Dr. R. Wayne Kernodle, chairman of the Sociology Department, will once more become tennis coach, a job he once held. A member of the biology faculty, Robert Pedigo, will handle the golf team. Ed Derringe, formerly tennis coach and assistant football coach, will devote his time exclusively to the job of business manager of athletics. ☛

Like the Ripening of Wine

FOR a few days after Christmas the Brafferton took on the air of a maternity hospital. Alumni Secretary Jim Kelly, acting much like a father-to-be, fidgeted nervously in his office. In an adjoining room, harassed staff members ploughed steadily through heavy end-of-the-year mail. With increasing frequency as December 31st approached, Jim poked his head through the door to see if the blessed event had occurred. The girls tolerantly shooed him off in the manner of patient, experienced nurses, calmly assuring him that all was progressing smoothly.

With events at the fingernail-biting stage, prospective godfathers like College President Davis Paschall and Alumni President Harvey Chappell phoned or visited Kelly's waiting room. Their questions were the same: "Has it happened?" Until the 30th, the reply was: "Not yet." Then came a flurry of checks which added up to the right total and the Society of the Alumni was delivered of a noble achievement:

For the first time in its 15-year history, the William and Mary Fund went over the $40,000 mark!

Final accounting pushed 1963 Fund receipts to $42,586.47 . . . more than $7,000 better than the best previous year, 1959's $35,500. Also a new high was the number of contributors: 3,247. That is a full 50 per cent increase over last year's 2,167 participants.

To boil alumni performance down to bare essentials, one of every five (not counting the class of 1963, which entered the scene late in the campaign) gave an average of $13.15 to the 1963 William and Mary Fund. Not an overwhelmingly magnificent performance certainly, but considerably better than ever before, promising of great things in the future and deserving of better treatment than accorded by the Flat Hat (see box).

The editorial takes William and Mary alumni to task for the "paltry and shameful $35,000" contributed last year. In publishing it, Editor Bucky Reigelman demonstrated that he is a prime candidate for class agent (he will join the alumni ranks soon),

Excerpt from an editorial which appeared in the Flat Hat October 11th:

The alumni of the school have a . . . role: If they have an interest in the future of the College, if they want to take an active part in the planning now going on, and to influence the basic decisions now being made which will affect the school in years to come, the time for them to step forward with cash in hand is now.

It is an unarguable fact of financial life that the largest say in how a given organization is to be run belongs to those who have the greatest financial stakes in the given organization. In the case of William and Mary, this is the Commonwealth of Virginia (the alumni of the College donated a paltry and shameful $35,000 to their College last year). This is a crucial year for the College of William and Mary; badly needed buildings are being built by the Commonwealth of Virginia because the alumni have not stepped forward with the needed capital; the state has raised faculty salaries because the alumni have not given the financial assistance necessary. The individual $5 and $10 donations (or $25, $50 or $100) do not build a new library, but 50,000 such donations might.

for he displayed keen awareness of the need at the College for alumni financial help. He also showed, unfortunately, something less than complete and accurate knowledge of his subject.

Fact is, alumni contributed only $31,867.98 to the William and Mary Fund in 1962. The Flat Hat credited them with a nice, round $35,000. If the total alumni financial effort—athletics, library books, library building fund and William and Mary Fund—were calculated for 1962, the sum would have been considerably higher than $35,000. If the Flat Hat was referring to the Fund, generally accepted as a barometer of alumni financial support, it was too generous.

The real shocker in the student editorial however, was its reference to 50,000 donations. Counting even last June's class, William and Mary has about 18,000 alumni . . . 16,894 of whom have currently valid addresses in the copious Alumni Office files. Obviously, 50,000 donations would require that all of them send in three checks.

Editor Reigelman—and any other critics of alumni financial support—should also face up to some hard realities about those 16,894 reachable alumni. They include virtually every student who ever enrolled at William and Mary. Approximately half of them never graduated; many completed only one or two semesters. True, some of the latter are among the College's most loyal supporters, but they are exceptions. Generally, students who completed their full four-year term and received a degree are most apt to be loyal, conscientious alumni. Class performance in terms of percentage of participation in the Fund tends to follow the percentage of graduates.

Two groups of classes which possess good ratios of graduates to entering students were those from 1915 to 1925 inclusive and from 1938 to 1943 inclusive. In the former, 30 per cent of the 732 members of 11 classes gave to the Fund. In the latter group, 28½ per cent of the 1,759 members participated. These percentages are considerably better than the all-alumni performance.

Not all of the classes in other years performed badly. Indeed, the Old Guard (1909 and earlier), 1910, 1911, 1927, 1928, 1930, 1944, 1945 and 1949 came close to or exceeded 25 per cent participation. Generally however, where the percentage of graduates fell off because of the Depression or disruptive effects of World War II, there is a reflection in Fund participation.

Another factor which vitally affects the overall performance of the William and Mary Fund is youth. The College's best and largest classes—one-third the total alumni body—have graduated in the past 10 years. Their dropout rates have been the lowest in William and Mary history, for several of them graduated 60 per cent or more of their entering students. Their impact numerically is staggering. The class of 1963, for instance, added more alumni in one year than exist in all William and Mary's classes up to 1925!

This bodes well for the future. Unfortunately, the net effect for here and now is not so good. It is a fact of alumni life that college classes, like good wine, take years to mature and ripen. For the first 10 or 15 years after leaving college, too many other things—like children, jobs and mortgages—preoccupy alumni. Then, mellowing and becoming less harried, their latent interest in William and Mary flowers into that green stuff which provides research grants, scholarships, library books and the like.

In the face of this, perhaps Editor Reigelman and other critics of alumni financial efforts will grant that the 1963 Fund shows an encouraging growth of loyalty and support. It may not be good enough to permit Society officers, class agents, volunteer workers, the alumni secretary or his staff to rest upon any laurels, but it certainly is good enough to permit a modest increase in alumni grants in 1964. As the saying goes, every little bit helps.

March 1964

Proceeds of last year's William and Mary Fund helped support many worthy projects. Here are brief thank-you's from two professors who were among those who received alumni subsidies:

Reports from Recipients

Nathan Altshuler, Associate Professor of Sociology and Anthropology:

THROUGH the generosity of the Society of the Alumni of the College, I was able to spend the summer of 1963 in Africa. My purpose in going was to study mental health programs in Ethiopia, Kenya and Nigeria. I was also able to visit Tanganyika, South Africa, Southern Rhodesia and the Republic of the Congo.

In all of these countries I was impressed with the warmth and hospitality of my hosts and the people I met. Most impressive, too, were the accomplishments that have been made in the health field by a relatively small group of devoted men and women. A mental health program can be no better than the general health program which surrounds it. In some psychiatric units I visited, the physical diseases of the patients loomed as large, if not larger, than their mental illnesses. If one adds to this picture an inadequate staff and poor physical plant, it becomes clear that a psychiatrist will find his day taken up dealing with problems not specifically psychiatric.

In spite of these problems, the work continues and generally, wherever I found a superior program, I would find this combination: a professional, fully trained to carry out his task, backed by an administrator who provided him with the staff and equipment to conduct his business. The water scheme at Nyeri, north of Nairobi, the bilharziasis control program in Salisbury and the psychiatric units at University College Hospital at Ibadan are a few of the many programs which show how much can be accomplished when medical and administrative personnel work together.

The health problems in Africa, as in other areas of the world, are immense. But one must keep in mind that solutions to these problems already exist in still other areas. If men will to do so, ways and means can be found to build solidly a foundation for new world health.

Carl R. Dolmetsch, Associate Professor of English:

THANKS in good measure to some wherewithal from the Alumni Society, one of the strangest teams ever fielded by William and Mary journeyed to faraway Colorado for three weeks last summer and came home from an academic tournament winners. Our team—a foursome of so-called experts captained by psychology professor Stan Williams—also included Jack Moore from the Modern Languages department, John Lachs (our local Aristotle) and myself (a mere literary drudge in such erudite company)—and the occasion was the sixth annual Workshop in Liberal Arts Education at Colorado College, in Colorado Springs, to which we were invited from June 16 to July 5.

There, luxuriating in the mountainous beauty around Pike's Peak, we did some individual and collective hard-thinking about the problems of liberal education at William and Mary and elsewhere and brought home a report chock full of suggestions for the administration and the self-study program. The report is our trophy and we think the College may yet benefit from some of the ideas we picked up in our contacts with educational leaders and colleagues from schools as diverse as tiny Webster College (a Catholic girls' school in suburban St. Louis), Brown University and the University of Hawaii, among others. The distance between Williamsburg and Colorado Springs gave us a perspective on the problems of William and Mary, we feel, that would have been difficult to gain on a local retreat.

Incidentally, when I mentioned to one of our Workshop colleagues from another school that our Alumni Society had helped defray our expenses to the conference, he raised his eyebrows in a look of envious wonderment and said: "Boy, you must have a terrific bunch of alumni at William and Mary!"

We couldn't agree more.

If you sent a contribution to the 1963 William and Mary Fund during January and have not received a receipt, please notify Alumni Secretary Jim Kelly. He reports the theft from his office of 35 checks totalling $435.65 which were received between January 11th and 17th. Since the missing checks were attached to the donors' master, geographic and class cards, their identities are unknown. To determine who they were will require a lengthy, expensive search through the address files, which remain intact. For this reason, the names of 35 contributors are missing from the honor roll.

The stolen checks were payable to the William and Mary Fund, so the thief gained nothing. All he did was disrupt alumni files, prevent proper recognition to those donors and, unfortunately, reduce the 1963 Fund figures. The missing checks would have increased the number of contributors to 3,282 and pushed the money total to $43,022.12.

We greet you at the beginning of 1964 and hope it will be a fine year for all of you. We hope it will be one of determination to be present at our 35th Class Reunion this Fall at Homecoming. Our fondest hope would be to see all of you together at this time.

Today's mail brings a welcome letter from Barton Pattie at Denver, Colo. Barton has been with the Associated Press almost since graduation, served ten years in London and is now Day News Editor at Denver—covering Colorado, Wyoming and Montana. The best news is that he plans to attend our 35th Class Reunion and hopes to see many of his old friends.

We have some more class statistics which we hope you will find interesting. After 35 years and with a present living Class roll of 255 members from the list of deaths reported recently, we have only lost 20 members. It would seem from a longevity standpoint that we are doing very well and we hope this trend will continue for many years.

The deceased: James Robert Addington, Gerald Powell Callis, Edgar Coley Garrard, Floyd Armory Gessford, Emmet Edmonson Givens, Mary Isabelle Richardson Ham (Mrs. A. G. Ham), Genevieve Hofmann (Mrs. Robert Sydney Sherlock), Ashby L. Lawrence, Dr. J. Meriwether Hurt, Elizabeth Starke Martin, Lyne Ella Moseley, Norman John Patterson, Sarah Hynson Penn (Mrs. Henry Walter McAllister), Walter Wallace Rowell, Jr., Katherine Meriwether Scott, Elster Claytor Shortt (Dr.), Early Thomas Terrell, Jr., Robert Jefferson Vaughan, Jr., David Alpheus Williams, and Lloyd Haynes Williams. If you know of any other deceased class members, please let us know so that the list can be brought up to date.

We invite your comments and plans concerning the class reunion.

30

Dr. Delmar F. Weaver has been appointed clinical professor of otolaryngology, College of Medicine, Wayne State University, Detroit, Michigan.

34

The Alexandria, Va., Soroptimist Club named Marion Moncure Duncan (Mrs. Robert V. H. Duncan) "Outstanding Woman of 1963." Mrs. Duncan is president general of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

The William and Mary Tomahawk marks items in class news columns which your editors feel are of more than passing interest to all alumni: noteworthy accomplishments, surprising information or, simply, good stories.

35

G. Bland Hoke, general manager of the Dorado Beach Hotel, has been elected president of the Puerto Rico Hotel Association.

36

Dr. Norman J. M. Murray, superintendent of schools for the Charleroi Area School District in Pennsylvania, made headlines recently when he testified before a committee of the Pennsylvania legislature on quality education. Dr. Murray previously was superintendent of Rye Neck schools in Mamaroneck, N. Y. He has worked on school survey teams in Massachusetts, Connecticut, New York and New Jersey.

Richard A. Velz, director of public and trade relations for A. H. Robins Company, Richmond, has been named assistant to the president. His new assignment will be in addition to his other duties.

Just a few news items this time. I need letters from all of you!

Ned and Carol Gouldman Keiter have a son (Dave) at Carnegie Tech. Anne Reynolds Wood has a Washington, D. C. address and would like to hear from those nearby—5716 Scarsdale Road, Washington 16.

Virginia Bodley Haggardt is living at 101 West 18th Street, Sioux Falls, South Dakota.

Frances Grodecoeur, '39, visited Jerry Murphy Silber and her family at Cape Cod this past summer.

Anne Lee Gordon Abbott, '38, and her husband were surprise visitors at our farm this Fall. So great to see them.

T. Edward Temple

T. Edward Temple, a member of the Board of Visitors and parent of a William and Mary student, has been chosen Danville's Number One Citizen of 1963. In choosing Temple for its 32nd annual award, the Danville Kiwanis Club made it clear his award was not only for his contributions as city manager but also "because his influence has reached into every facet of community activity, whether it be religious, educational, civic or charitable."

39

Mrs. Frank D. Miller (Margaret F. Prickett) and her husband are being transferred from Saigon, Vietnam to the Washington, D. C. area.

I've certainly been delighted to hear a few voices out of the past. One letter is from John Lenwood Owen, Jr. who is a Supervisory Education Specialist with the U. S. Army Signal Center and School at Fort Monmouth, New Jersey. "Len" supervises the military and civilian education personnel who write over 100 correspondence courses for 25,000 students in colleges, universities taking the ROTC Course and Army Reserve Schools conducting the Signal Officer Career Course. In July Len was presented an Outstanding Performance Rating and Sustained Performance Award and was recommended for the Department of the Army Personnel Management for Executives Course which he completed in November. Len's daughter is at Glassboro State College in N. J., his son in High School and another daughter in fifth grade. His address is 114 Lakewood Road, Manassquan, N. J.

Harry Gebauer writes a very concise letter which I quote: "If you are interested, my sordid career since graduation is: I wound up a pilot in the Air Corps—no hero. After that got married to a non-William & Maryite; went to Cleveland as a temporary stop-off—18 years later still here. Glad it wasn't permanent. I have been in the advertising business most of that time and am now with Holt, Rinehart and Winston, Inc. as Central Manager.

"We have a 16-year-old son—6 ft. 1 inch, 180 pounds; played center on the high school football team. Have a boat and enjoy summers relaxing, and haven't seen any of my classmates since 1946." Surely nice to hear from you again after to these many years!

Also appreciated a nice Christmas card from Virginia Wilson Halliday enclosing a very informative newspaper clipping. Virginia is the first president of the Peninsula-wide Heritage Girl Scout Council which serves approximately 4,500 girl scouts in the area. She is active in PTA at High School where her 17 year old daughter and 15 year old son attend. Her hobby is collecting books about England. Her husband is engineer in charge of research at Newport News Shipbuilding and Dry Dock Company, and the family resides at 4027 Monitor Drive, Hampton, Va.

Among my Christmas cards I had numerous notes. Rosa Ellis Long flew to Florida for Easter and in October to Nassau and Miami for the Girl Scout National Council Meeting. She has been busy being chairman of the scholarship committee for Buffalo Federation of Women's Clubs and raising money for their three scholarships.

Jean Clarahan Bratton writes from Northfield, Minnesota that her daughter, Anne, is a sophomore at Carlton College, Dan is in ninth grade and Christine is sixth and learning to play the clarinet, so things aren't too quiet!

Charlotte Bagot White says they love Kansas where they live at 8802 Benson Dr., Overland Park, with their two sons and two daughters.

Alfred Alley sent greetings from Guam where the temperature stays in the humid middle eighties. They just returned from a week's visit to Japan where they "felt it a pleasure to be cold and shiver again!"

Yvonne Johnson Jenkins is "college hunting" for her older daughter and in a couple of years her sister will be following suit. Yvonne says she's glad she'll have her son around for a few more years. He's a first grader at Germantown Academy. They live in Ambler, Penna.

Fran Grodecoeur has changed jobs and is now at Carnegie Tech in Admissions. She hopes to make her 25th reunion in June. We'll look for you, Fran!

Dede Allen Bunch says that her daughter Suzy is loving her second year at William and Mary and getting along fine.

Jane Brandt Wild writes from Winchester, Mass. about her four children. Scott is a sophomore at U. of Cal. at Berkeley, Rod a senior at Exeter, daughter Leslie, 15 and "majoring" in boys, and their youngest 14 on frosh football team at High School. They all had an exciting summer cruising the Nantucket waters in their new 338 auxiliary sloop.

Jane Harden Hanson reports that Tim and his brother have bought a sail (racing) boat and are determined to try the Bermuda races this June. Their daughters are now 15 and 8 and she finds the home-front becomes less and less organized. How well I know what she means!

Ann Terrell Garrett and Jack were staying in White Stone for several days before Christmas and we were delighted to have the chance to see them. We are all eager for they plan to start building their retirement home here near us and spend the summer there.

This fall our family has been in a whirlwind. We learned in November that our daughter, Bambi, had gotten married on September 21 in Dillon, S. C. Of course we were bowled over but John is a fine boy and we are thankful indeed. John Mark Slack, III is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Slack, Jr. of Charleston, W. Va. and Washington, and a junior at Univ. of North Carolina. On November 30 we had a service at Grace Church, Kilmarnock, to bless the marriage and it was a beautiful service. Bambi has been with us since the holidays and Jan. 17 Frank and I will take her to Chapel Hill where we will help her and John get settled in their apartment.

While in McLean, Virginia, over Christmas, we had brief, but pleasant visits with Margie Hoskins and Red Bloxom and with Frank's cousin, "Hunky" Henderson. At our local annual Holly Ball we were delighted to see Tommy and Ginny Smith Strange who were here from Annapolis to present their daughter. I hadn't seen them since their wedding almost 21 years ago! Bob and Kay Hoover Dew also presented their younger daughter, Linda. Joanne, their older, announced her engagement over the holiday.

You all have been wonderful about keeping me posted and I do appreciate it no end. Keep up the good work!

Thanks to a few faithful friends who added notes on their Christmas cards, there is a smattering of news. Peggy Peck Latham and family are still enjoying country living after over a year of being away from the city. Their eldest, Sue, is a freshman at Centenary College. Nancy, next in line, is a junior in High School at Northfield School for Girls in Mass. Nat Nichols Pearson, '42, mentioned that she had bumped into Edna Klinge Ketchum in a Palo Alto grocery store—a pleasant surprise for both. Edna is in the real estate business and has four children. Kay Hoover and Bob Dew were in Williamsburg for Homecoming—had a good time, as usual, for it was Bob's 25th reunion. She reminded me that ours is coming along in the not too far distant future, and we all better start making plans for that big week-end. Jane Scofield Middleton has a daughter at Wm. Smith (Hobart) College in Geneva, N. Y. Their, youngest (of four) is three years old and "great company to his old mother."

Ella Dickinson Hurt says that life goes on about the same for them. Ruth Rapp Thayer had a wonderful 13-week trip to Europe last summer, with their family. They bought a car overseas and managed to visit 15 countries and East Berlin. Their older son entered UCLA this past fall while their younger son entered high school in February. Betty Blair Hilton leads an exciting life. Their oldest daughter has gone to Switzerland to a Canadian school where she will write her fifth year high school exams. David, their 15 year old son, is a skiing and sailing fan. He spent three weeks on the Brigantine on Lake Ontario, two weeks on a canoe trip to Northern Ontario and two weeks bicycling around Lake Ontario—all last summer. The Hiltons, as a family, are looking forward to a winter of skiing, and a summer of sailing. The Mollenkopfs are snowbound at this point with almost a record snowfall for this area. Our older son, John, had a wonderful summer in Europe with two of his friends. Bicycling was to have been their mode of travel, but after a few hundred miles, the bikes were sold and they used their thumbs. By hitchhiking they managed to see much more of the continent, got around a lot faster, and saved themselves many sore muscles. The high spot of the trip was the day spent in East Berlin.

Best wishes to all of you for 1964. I look forward to hearing from many of you during these next twelve months.

Robert M. Wade, Jr. has been named advertising director for the Security First National Bank of Los Angeles, California.

Lieutenant Commander Jean R. Edwards retired on June 30 after 20 years service in the U. S. Navy. At the time of her retirement she was in charge of Naval Accounts Office at the U. S. Naval Station, Long Beach, California.

Walter Kaylin has had his latest book, Another Time, Another Woman, published by Fawcett.

Emily Harrell Lynch is teaching Algebra in Suffolk High School, Suffolk, Virginia. She is also sponsor for the Junior Class and Tri-Hi-Y Club.

*Marilyn Miller Entwisle

Peggy Moore Waldron (Mrs. John Waldron) is with the Registrar's office at the Lawrenceville School. She was widowed in 1962 and she and her two children live at 5 Green Avenue, Lawrenceville, N. J.

Eleanor Haupt Bolen and Waldron, a history professor at Clemson U., represented their college at the installation of the Duke University president. Waldron also coached the Clemson College Bowl team last fall and he appeared with them on NBC television.

Bobbie Widmer Dinwoodie is in Harrisburg, Pa. Her husband did a remodeling job on their home recently and the family, including three daughters, is now all settled.

Mary Louise Lowell Williams visited Williamsburg for her 20th reunion, saw Lois Winder Hudgins, and felt the week-end was just not long enough to see all the changes on campus.

Muriel Koch Ernstmeier writes that Ernie left several months ago for his current duty as 3rd Marine Division Chaplain but she and the children were not allowed to go along so Mu is teaching at a school near Virginia Beach and hopes to meet him in Japan next summer for their vacation. Their daughter, a high school junior, may be a second-generation William and Mary coed.

The Christmas mail bag: From Sunny Trumbo Williams, a report on pre-reunion work. Sunny and Lois Sprattley Donald have arranged through Jim Kelly to have two taverns reserved for the exclusive use of our class when we descend on Williamsburg next October. (You will hear more details about this soon!) Sunny also told of a wonderful summer in Virginia Beach, where she and Rolf built a new house. Living near them there were many alumni—Carol Talbot, '46, Don Taylor, Jean Schoenwolf and Cecil Griffin to name a few.

Marge and Wayne Gibbs are moving again—this time to St. Louis, Missouri. Fortunately the Boy Scouts and Cubs, too, will have chapters in that city for young Wayne, Dave, and Den Mother Marge, who are all presently active in Ohio. Trust their Dad will continue his bowling interest there as well.

Sally Snyder Vermilye and Dyck spent a hot summer in Tallahassee where Dyck taught two courses at Florida State and Sally took one. The children went to camp again in the cool Carolina mountains.

Fran Smith Uhl remembered us with a lovely card printed in Switzerland. I wonder if this was a purchase made last May when Fran and Dick enjoyed a trip to Europe? Fran recently had a nice luncheon with Ginny Knerr, Mary Wilson Sale, and Nancy Wescott Larsen, all of whom live in the Pittsburgh area.

Gloria Brush Miner has moved to 58 Lynwood Rd., Scarsdale, New York and wants you to make note of this new address (just a few blocks from the old) so that you will contact her when visiting the New York World's Fair—or any time!

Also heard from: Barbara Gray, who admits to having been East last summer (did anyone see her??) but expects to be permanently located in San Francisco . . . Ann Swensen White . . . Louise and Johnny Hollis . . . Jeanne Mencke McAfee . . . Emily Snyder Alexander (now a resident of Alexandria) . . . Carolyn Hall Bare . . . and Hallie Rennie Martin who, we're happy to relate, plans to attend that important reunion in October.

Are you making plans in that direction? We shall contact you directly and hope to have a response from everyone!

Our Christmas card notes read thus: "Tine" Stultz Emerson and family are now Raleigh, N. C. residents, having been transferred there last spring. And from Minneapolis to Harrisonburg, Va. was the move made in July by Rennie Keezell Harrison and her family. Bette Freeman Fee, living in San Antonio, Texas, with the other three Fees, vacationed last summer in Florida.

Bart and Kay Tomlinson Bartlett and their children joined Alice White Tomlinson in Ocean Point, Maine during the summer. Kay sent news of the fourth child of Peg Johnson Smart, a daughter. Mary Jeanne Keiger Hansen, now head of Technical Services for the Oklahoma City Public Library, spent the Christmas holidays in California. She was in Chicago for a convention last summer and revisited Michigan State U. where she worked her first year after graduation.

Mildred Gaito Steingress and family—5 children from 5 to 16 years old, have reservations on the Bremen for a European vacation this summer. She and Fred plan to buy a car, the better to see all they can. They also reunited at William and Mary and saw The Common Glory just before it closed.

"Trudy" Crosby, who was with the Library Science department during our undergraduate days, is associated with the new library on the Cornell campus. She wrote that Arlene Murray and her husband are in Beloit, Wis. and Scotty Murray lives in New Jersey. Sunny Manewal Murray and Ken still lead a Navy life.

Our most loyal-gatherer-of-news, who should share the title of co-secretary with us, Dinny Lee McAlinden, had an exciting bit—the arrival of James Lee McAlinden who joined the "corporation" last May at the age of 5 weeks. In a pre-Christmas note she mentioned that Joe was seriously thinking of suspending their Christmas tree because Jimmy was already in the touch-everything stage! Her post-holiday letter was full of gleanings for this issue. Mary Raney Begor's husband is in Bangkok for a year's Army tour, but Mary and the three children are staying in Washington. Flosse Metius Johnson reported on a visit last summer with Small Smith Turner at the Johnson's summer home in the Poconos. Floss' second son, Doug, spent 8½ weeks in the hospital last spring recovering from a broken leg. Fran Smith (have forgotten her married name) met Nancy Westcott Larsen, '43, recently on a shopping tour.

Mary Schaffhirt Barnes' husband, Jack, an Army colonel, is in Korea and the family drove to California to see him off. From Newport, R. I., their route took them to Washington, Fort Benning then west to Fort Ord, Yosemite and finally San Francisco. Mary and her family returned to Washington. Their son, John, Jr., is in his second year at Annapolis.

Daphne Andrews and John Crum added a daughter, Abby Andrews, to their family on Thanksgiving Day!

Betty Aurell and Henry Schutz and their lively crew of six spent the month of August at their Yorktown house, then went to Homecomings and saw the Longacres (Audrey Leach), Freemans, and the Hoitsmas. Betty has been substituting in the local high school music department this year and has had a few visits with Mary Begor.

Have an address for Jane Atkinson, whom we haven't heard of in eons—4831 E. Seminary Avenue, Richmond, 23227.

Vivian Foltz Engelbrecht also visited with Mary Begor in Washington last fall. Betsy Yow Pearce's card was the traditional picture of her three children with son, Mac, in the uniform of his military school. Betsy is working at Redstone Arsenal, Ala. where Bob is stationed. Judy Fisher Allen rushed a holiday message to us, despite 9-to-9 working days. Son Dan is a freshman at Abilene Christian in Texas. Judy hopes to fly East this summer.

By publication time Jean Boyle Herbert and three sons will probably have joined Tom and settled in St. Louis. During the holidays Jean was house-selling in Huntingdon Valley, Pa. and Tom was house-buying or renting in the Missouri suburbs. More about them next issue.

More about many of you good folk who kindly sent us class news! We are making like squirrels and hoarding the rest till next GAZETTE! A class secretary's life is a hard one after the Christmas mail is all reported. So watch for the next installment!

Richard L. Baker has joined the legal department of Allied Chemical Corporation in New York City. He was previously associated with the legal department of the Pennsylvania Railroad.

Dr. Charles Kotsch has been elected treasurer of the Osteopathic Hospital of Harrisburg, Pennsylvania.

Barbara Nycum Moore's parents have retired to Williamsburg, a move thoroughly approved by Nicky. Janet Ginsberg Waisbrot of Pittsburgh, her doctor husband Ed and their three children vacationed on the Italia during the holidays.

Christmas brought a flurry of cards but not too much news from my usual sources. I always hope to hear from some long lost alum.

Shortly after my return from Homecoming I had a very nice luncheon with Eleanor Grant Hart, '49, at the home of Ginnie Lore Von Zielinski, '49. We had a wonderful time talking about the old days, and I am encouraging them to attend their reunion next fall.

In November the New York Alumni had a cocktail dinner party at which we were honored to have Dr. Paschall, Dean Lambert and Jim Kelly. It was quite well attended and we learned a great many things about the college and future plans.

Millie Draper Lippsa wrote that Tina Jones Carr has moved to Philadelphia. Bonnie Wolfgram Ware reports that Jerry Healy, '46, is going to move away from their area and all are most disappointed to see her go.

Bette Hotopp von Aken, husband and daughter have a new home in Somerset, N. J., where they recently entertained her mother-in-law from Holland. Shirley McGuire Rhee reports that her husband Jerry has accepted a position with the National Science Foundation in Washington, D. C., where they will move from Hudson, Ohio.

Guess that about covers the news. Hope you will all be getting your pens out to write Fund checks to the college and while you are doing so, drop me a line.

Best wishes for the New Year to all of you! Hope some of you limber up that writing hand this year and drop us a line.

The College of William and Mary was represented by Howard Hyle last November at the inauguration of Dr. Atwood as President of Emory University. Howard is with the Coca-Cola Company in Atlanta, Georgia.

Another Ph.D. for our class—Fred Tubbs received his Ph.D. degree from Ohio State University in December. This is his second year at State University College, Oneonta, New York, where he is an associate professor. He teaches chemistry and science education.

Dr. William Bangel is Chief of Staff at Mary Immaculate Hospital, Newport

News, Virginia, according to a press clipping we have received. He installed the 1963-64 officers of the Mary Immaculate Hospital Auxiliary at their annual banquet.

Received a welcome letter from Nancy (Noyes) Saffko bringing us up to date. They have three children—two boys and a girl. Bill is teaching at San Diego High School, but does not do much coaching anymore. They love to camp and have camped across country and back. Nancy says they bought a house years ago and never advised William and Mary of their new address, which is 4167 Nemaha Drive, San Diego 17, California.

Another little statistic was added in 1963 to the Surry Harrison (Marie Stevens) household—second child, first boy, name, Tom. Congratulations, Marie and Surry!

Norma Burgess Schrader wrote at Christmas that their newest pride and joy is a 17½ foot cabin cruiser which they acquired last year. Perfect for water skiing and cruising on the James River near Newport News.

Many thanks for the cards with all the notes and for pictures. I'm sorry my column missed the last issue (it won't happen again). We moved just before Christmas and also had both sets of grandparents for the holidays so we have been busy busy busy. Pat Jones Warner wrote on her card that they too have just moved. Liz and Bob Shuman are still in Rockville, Md. and like it very much. Bob and Barbara Harper are back in Richmond. Woody Wayland and family were transferred to Chicago and they really miss Seattle. Jeanne Bamforth received her Master's Degree from the U. of Penn. She wrote that she had spent a week with Nancy Kurtz Falk this summer. Nancy wrote that they had seen lots of people at Homecoming and also during the summer were in Montreal and had seen Libby Macken. Ben is sales manager for Montreal Buick and they have 5 children. Jim Macken is in Vancouver and he also has 5 children. Tita Cecil Myers and husband are now in the Washington area. Nicky Dillard Dewing and Jay are in Springfield, Va. Nicky wrote that Ann Dunn Nock and Claude are her next door neighbors. Joan Walser Nelson and Roy are living in Northridge, Calif. (I will try to look you up when we next go to L.A.) Jane Copland Upshur sent me a note from Newport, R. I. where Giles has been attending the War College. They expect to be in the Washington area after June. Washington seems to be the nesting place for most of the class of 50. Ruth Barnes Chalmers wrote from Houston that Bill Low and his wife live near them now and had been over for dinner. Shirley Lyons Hardwick wrote that she had been in New Orleans since Sept. and would return to England after Christmas. Shirley said this past summer she, Ruth Barnes and Sue Green had had a reunion in London (that is really something for 3 former roommates). Skippy Beecher Scrymgeour is still in Naples. Bruce was selected Captain last spring. Skip says they are practically an official greeting committee and if you would like to be met or sent off from Naples call her at 389690. Harriet Burden Mathews wrote that they have been transferred to Denver and really like Western living. Harriet saw Dorothy Butts before she left the Washington area. Joan Meadors Hawkins are in Cleveland and like it very much. Joanne and Dick Scofield sent a nice note. Jo said they had heard from Audrey and Lou Hoitsma, '49, who are in North Carolina. Robert Cook is Judge of the Common Pleas Court in Ravenna, Ohio. Bob recently represented William and Mary at the inauguration of Dr. Robert White as President of Kent State University. Charles R. Harris has been made supervisor of engineering and loss control division of the Travelers Insurance Companies in Peoria, Illinois. John P. Fox, Jr. has been appointed director of Corning Glass Center. John joined the center in 1954 as assistant to the director and since 1956 has been manager of operations. He is also chairman of the tourist and convention committee of the Corning area Chamber of Commerce and director and membership chairman of the Early American Industries Assn.

I had hoped to hear from more of you at Christmas especially from those whom I have not heard at all or from those whom I have not heard in a long time. I guess Christmas time is such a busy time for you that you did not have time to write. Thus I am excusing you this time. However, I do hope that you will let me hear from you sometime during this new year.

Dr. Marvin F. West is practicing dentistry in Williamsburg, and every Wednesday this year he is driving up to Richmond to the Medical College of Virginia School of Dentistry where he is an instructor in crown and bridge prosthodontics.

Russ Chambliss, Jane, and their two children: Russell, 12 and Patty, 9, recently moved from here to Beaumont, Texas, where he has accepted the position as Manager of the Fine Paper Sales Department of the East Texas Paper Co.

Dr. Waverly Cole is an anesthesiologist at the Medical College of Virginia Hospital. I talked with Whitey on a recent trip to Richmond as we were both shopping in the same store. He is still a bachelor, and I am told he has a very attractive apartment in the restored area of Richmond.

The Williamsburg Medal

The only one of its kind in the world!

No medal joining together this old city and the nation's second oldest college has ever been struck, as far as we can learn. The specially drawn illustrations, costly die work and precious metals needed made it an undertaking that apparently was considered too costly. However, a famous medallion maker has prepared, at the urging of Ray Brown, an unusually handsome medal which you will be proud to present as a gift or use personally as a pocket piece or charm.

The Williamsburg medal is not a mass production item to be picked up anywhere at any time. It will be cherished partly because of the limited number being struck.

been named assistant to the vice president of human relations at McCormick and Company, Inc., a spice, extract and food products firm. Helen Mason Boyle, Bob, and their two children: Robby, 4½ and Mary Blanche, 16 mos. live in Kilgore, Texas. Her mother has recently moved to Richmond, and Helen hopes to get up to see her this summer.

Joyce Festress Garland, Jack, and their three children are living in Amarillo, Texas, where Jack is a Captain at the Air Force Base there.

In July Bob Jenkins was promoted to Professor of Biology at Rutgers Univ. He, Mary, and their three children: Brian, 8, Robbie, 3 and Mary Ellen, 16 mos. live in New Brunswick, New Jersey. Bob spent two weeks this summer in England and Scotland attending meetings. He is busy as a P.T.A. president while Mary works with the publicity, and he has recently filed for the Board of Education election in Feb.

Mary Westbrook Smith and her family live in Williamsburg where her husband Charles is the Chaplain for Eastern State Hospital. Their daughter Becky is in school, and their son Mike is five. Her sister Carol lives in Duluth, Minn. She and her husband George Rose have four children. Mary writes that she often sees Betty Riggins Hastings who has two children, one in school and a three year old daughter.

Charlie Craig and his family live in Raleigh, North Carolina. They have one daughter, Cathy.

Betty Cox Scott, John, and their four children: Carolyn, 9, Johnny, 8, Andy, 6, and Mary Dean, 3½, live in Charlottesville where John is the head of the Navy Research "Project Squid" at the Univ. of Virginia.

Jackie Jones Myers, Averette, and their two children live in Alberta, Virginia, where Averette owns the drugstore. They have recently built a new home.

Ginny Gallaher Sharp, Ed., and their three little girls, Susan, Mary, and Ann live in Rockford, Illinois, where Ed. is a doctor of general surgery. They now have a new home and stay busy with church and medical activities. They plan to come to the American Surgical meeting in Charlottesville in the spring.

Teddy Nicas Maddox, Jim, and their two children, Laura and Jimmy, live in Jeffersonville, Georgia. Jim is a lawyer and has recently moved into his new office.

Connie Carhart Stamm, Walt, and their two boys, Bobby and Ricky, live in Shaker Heights, Ohio. They spent two months this summer on the Jersey shore. Barbara Campbell Borst, Bob, and their four children spent a weekend with them there. While on vacation they bought a twin engine 30-foot Chris Craft cabin cruiser which they named "Ricky-Bob" after their two sons. The Stamms planned to spend Christmas with her family in New Jersey. I think Walt is a salesman for a china company. Connie also wrote that she had recently seen Shirley Sprague Thompson at church and was surprised to learn that Shaker Heights had always been her home.

Alumni Gazette

Phoebe Martin Harcum, Rae, and their two children, Sally and Payten, live in Williamsburg where Rae teaches in the Psychology Department at W&M. They built a new house this year.

Katherine Bell Martin, Tom, and their two children, Tommy and Anne, live at Huntington Station, New York. Tom works with the F.B.I.

Sarah Enos Brown, Jim, and children, David, Mark, and Virginia, live in Washington, D. C., where Jim is a Presbyterian minister. Sarah wrote that she and Jim had heard the W&M Choir in Washington last spring. She is enjoying living in Washington not only because it's an exciting place to live but because it's also a place that so many people she knows visit. Evidently when they come to sight-see they come to visit her, too. Jane Waters Nielsen, Sidna Chockley Rizzo, and Betty Cox Scott and their families have all been to see her there. Sarah has also seen Gwen Batten Perkins and Perk who live in nearby Alexandria; Anne Dunn Nock and Claude who live in Springfield, Va.; and Carol and Roy Lorenz.

Kathryn Gray Bradshaw, Bob, and children, Bill, Brad., and Kay, have recently moved into their new house in Newport News.

Thanks to Hugh Desamper, I have such an interesting letter from Elaine Compton Baker, Jim, and their children, Jimmy and Glenn, who are now living in Madras, India. I wish that I could write each word of it but space does not permit so I will share parts of it with you. They left this country in mid-July and a week later after sight-seeing stops en route at Athens and Cairo they landed in Madras to begin a three-year assignment and a whole new way of life. Jim is a foreign service officer with the United States Information Agency. He and his family are now living in a newly built and furnished governmental house constructed along modern Florida lines with six rooms and three baths. The children attend a small private school which is run along British lines but has children from many different countries. Madras, a city of two million people on the southeast coast of India and only 900 miles from north of the equator, and India were described as fascinating places. The Bakers are learning to adjust to many new ways of life as well as seeing many new sights such as cows and goats wandering everywhere, including the middle of busy streets. Jim's job is audio-visual officer and as such he is in charge of all USIA films and exhibits shown in the four states of South India. In December Elaine and Jim were scheduled to go to New Delhi for an orientation course.

I had a long chat the other day with Ralph Bailey at the Parker Drug Co. store where my pharmacist husband Bev. started a new job in November. Ralph is a Service Representative for the Lloyd Brothers Pharmaceutical Co. He, and his wife, the former Jean Bennett, and their three children live in Portsmouth. Jean teaches at Churchland High School. Ralph and Jean were to leave in mid-January for a trip which his division in the company had won to Mexico City. I also often see Jim Hall who is a Service Representative for the Charles Pfizer Pharmaceutical Co. Jim also lives in Portsmouth.

Greetings from temporarily-snow-covered Georgia! We are slushing through our third snow fall of the season (and the natives are getting restless).

Right to our first correspondent—a most welcome letter from Mary Kay Langan Flegler. To catch you up, Mary Kay married Don Flegler in '55 (Don's a dentist), and they live in Springfield, Va. with their 3 children—Steve, Kathy and Dwayne. Nearby lives Shirley Arndt Lamb and both are active in Chi O Alumnae. About Shirley, Mary Kay writes, she has two girls and her husband is a United Air Lines pilot. At a Chi O luncheon last April they saw Dottie Butts (teaching in Montgomery, Co., Maryland now), Martha Parker Stanley (Dick now works for Texaco in Baltimore), and Molly Parr Earl. Mary Kay also mentions a call from Dot Smith Dashiell who was Alaska-bound and that Jackie Jones Meyers has a new home in Alberta, Va. Ebby Shelton & Sonny Rice come visit the Fleglers from Reedville, and boating is bound to be discussed as Sonny builds them and Mary Kay & Don own one. Her letter goes on to tell of a visit to William and Mary where she heard from Joe Agee that Barbara Bennett Mueller has moved to Nashville and Joann Mitchell Holmes lives in Murfreesboro, Tenn. Mary Kay continues that she saw and talked to Vito Ragazzo one day at church and that she saw George Lex at a P.T.A. meeting. Anyone having M. A. and Buddy Lex's address please send it to Mary Kay at 5403 Clive Place in Springfield. She ended her letter with the item that Evelyn Whitehurst is in Lexington where her husband teaches at W&L Law School.

This seems to have been a year to bring reticent pens to work, and our next letter is from Stanley Sussman who is at present an instructor at Carnegie Institute of Technology. Stan's last letter to us was in '56 after his M.A. in medieval history and from there he began working on his Ph.D. at the U. of Pennsylvania. After a year he accepted the Chairmanship of the Social Studies Dept. of Eron Prep School in N.Y.C. (continuing to struggle with his thesis) and in '61 Stan found himself in London in the Institute of Historical Research of London University. During his time abroad, he also worked at Oxford and Cambridge Universities and in Paris, Florence, Rome and points East, North, West and South! Stan didn't say if his Ph.D. thesis is completed.

You will recall our last column dealt with our medically inclined classmates and it brought forth a letter from Bob Hux who is now a surgeon in Leesburg, Florida. Bob completed his med. school training at M.C.V. and then interned at the U. of North Carolina, followed by a year's residency in surgery at Norfolk General Hospital. In July of '57 Bob reported on active duty with the Navy and completed his surgical training at the U. S. Naval Hospital in Portsmouth, Va. While in the Navy, Bob was surgeon for Task Group Alfa, was aboard the USS Randolph, was at the U. S. Naval Hospital in Jacksonville, and during his last 3 years was associated with Project Mercury as a recovery surgeon and participated in all but two of the recovery phases of the Mercury Shots. Before leaving the Navy, Bob, his wife and three children took a 5,000 mile trip through the East Coast, and had the chance to visit with Gordon Mason who is a practicing ophthalmologist in Johnson City, Tenn. Bob has also recently seen Joe Zullo who is a Chief Surgical Resident at Walter Reed Army Hospital, and then saw Joe again at a meeting of the American College of Surgeons (where Bob was made a "Fellow" of the College). Bob, too, wishes to invite alums visiting Florida to stop in at Leesburg.

Bits and pieces from the desk of Jim Kelly at the Brafferton—Jane Kyle and Bob Mead are living in Reading, Pa. where he is store manager for B. F. Goodrich Co. Bob Landen, after teaching at the U. of Michigan's Dept. of Near Eastern Studies, is on the faculty of Dartmouth College specializing in Asian and Near Eastern History. Bob is also a member of the International Relations Dept. at Dartmouth. A postcard from 6 bis, Rue d'Auteuil, Paris catches us up on Warren Windom. He has visited 40 countries, taught 1 year at Purdue, and is now taking small groups on tours around Europe. Warren invites touring alumni to look him up and he will show them around Paris for (quote) "pleasure, not for business." Janet Buckner Waldman has left 10½ years of active duty in the Navy to become "just a housewife," but just can't get away from it all since her husband is still in Navy Blue. They were heading toward Norfolk.

More news via the Alumni Office—Bob Prince is in Springfield, Ill. as a special agent with the FBI. Roy Anderson is chairman of the art department at Washington-Lee H. S. in Arlington, and the newspaper clipping we have about him also mentions he has a master's in applied art from Alabama and a master's in education from American U. John Leslie, director of development and public relations at Lewis and Clark College, has been named executive vice-president of the American College Public Relations Assoc. (which is composed of 1,300 colleges and universities). Before coming to Lewis and Clark, John had served in the information services dept. of Michigan State and with Ketchum, Inc., a public relations and fund raising consulting firm in Pittsburgh.

Hello to everyone. How about a postcard from you? Please!

Thank you for your Christmas cards and for your enclosed notes. Those heard from were Emmy Ketterson Smith in Richmond, Indiana; Johnny Dalton busily working for the Republican party in Virginia; Chris and "Cadsie" Forman Moe, '52, with picture of their two sons; Marilyn Zaiser Ott from Georgia; Ginny Campbell Furst; Carol Myers Mifflin, '54; Sally Eger Polle in Pennsylvania; Mavis and Al Pacchioli, '52, who have a new home in Potomac, Maryland; "Shan" Duis Carico, '55, in Manhattan Beach, California; Scott and Caroline Young Petrequin; Nan Evans Scott and two children; and Carmen Romeo in Allentown, Pennsylvania.

Shirley Lyons Parker wrote from Atlanta, Georgia, where she, husband Jack '55, and their three children live. Jack is division personnel manager for Safeco Life-co General Insurance Company. Their three children are 4½, 2½, and under one year. They ran into Kippy Kimbrough who teaches at Georgia Tech. The Parker's address is: 2332 Bry-Mar Drive, N.E., Atlanta 29, Georgia. They would welcome company. Also in Atlanta is Anne Hines Fuller. Husband, Bill is Publicity Director for seven southeastern states with National Association of Manufacturers. The Fuller's daughter, Sharon, arrived in March. Their news came in a "Dixie Squire" publication—their original work and cleverly written.

Marguerite Oldfield's latest home address is in Washington. I assume she still is with the American Embassy. Boots Crovo Wickham has moved to nearby Rockville, Maryland. Their neighbors are Jim and Molly Murphy Daniel and four little Daniels.

Ginnie Gary Lupton is busy as Cub Scout Den Mother. Husband, Ed, may be working on a fiberglass boat this spring at Fort Monroe, Virginia.

Harriet Willimon Cabell's letter with much news arrived too late for the last issue. She wrote that Hop Harding is now a dentist in his home town; Bernie Wittkamp, '52, is a doctor, specializing as an internist; Lee and John Munger live outside of Chicago where John has charge of scholarships for Cooke County; Bill Martin is an Episcopalian minister. Harriet and Ben were in Chicago this fall where Ben was presented a merit award at the American Finance Conference at the Edgewater Beach Hotel.

Bev Simonton Kelly is busy with a kindergarten for 60 children in her home and with singing in Bruton Church and with the Williamsburg madrigal singers.

Dick and Dot Hagberg Bower have become ski addicts after their first New England winter. They live in Hanover, New Hampshire. Dot recently took a computers course at Dartmouth's business school.

Bruce and Camille Grimes Henderson, '52, are enjoying their home in Summit, New Jersey. Bruce commutes to New York and is with Mfg. Hanover Bank. They'll be heading overseas again also.

The Woolstroms are patiently looking for Spring. We seem to be plagued with winter colds which make the rounds in our family. We've begun thinking of going to the World's Fair in New York. It would be grand finding some William and Mary grads there too! See you next issue.

54 Mrs. J. Mitchell Brown

West Springfield, Va.

Here we are beginning the tenth year, which means a reunion in the fall. Do plan on being there. News is slim, fortunately for your secretary who is trying to throw off a case of the flu here at deadline time.

Peggy Wells Stiles has a second novel coming out in 1965, appearing first in German. She and her husband, Martin, have just returned from a year in Munich. While there, they met Joan and Bill Schlepfer. Joan was in our class, Peggy says, but doesn't remember her maiden name. They also ran into Jeep Freidman in Paris. Peggy's book is entitled The Strange House at Newburyport, published by Dial Press for young readers.

Betty Bodley Dunker, now living in Hickory, North Carolina has a new member of the family, a little girl, born just in time for Christmas. This is her third child, second girl.

Bill A. May has been appointed manager of the Miami, Fla. Sales Division of Investors Diversified Services, Inc., with offices in Coral Gables.

Carol Myers Mifflin writes of the expectation of a new addition which (or who) may have arrived by the time of this writing. They have two boys now, Rick and Kenny. They were back in Virginia last summer for a visit and may have seen some of you.

Until next time, write and let us know what's happened to you.

(Yolanda Grant)

The wandering Harrells are at it again! Skip got a promotion for a Christmas present and will be working in New York City. We don't have a place to live at deadline time, altho I certainly hope we'll be settled by the time you read this. Send all your news items to the above address until our new one appears in the next issue.

Tommy Martin writes that he, Katherine, and two children are living in Long Island, but hope to return to Virginia. Their third child is expected in March. Tommy says, "It took me 7 years for the first one, but I have come on strong. Tipton told me I was a strong second half ball player."

A fascinating item from Tommy is that Norman Moomjain recently became the owner and operator of the Copain Restaurant located at 50th Street and 1st Avenue in New York City. Norman welcomes all William and Mary Alumni visiting or living around NYC to drop in and say hello, and to have repast at the restaurant. Tommy enclosed an article by the leading writer on restaurants. It is full of glowing descriptions of the Copain and its gourmet delicacies. I really became hungry as I read about Soft Shell Crabs Amandine, Beef Bordelaise, and Black Bean Soup. William and Maryites who have visited the restaurant are Lenny Drake, George Vahos, Charlie Sumner, Al Grieco, Jim Brown, Arnie Lubasch, John Mahoney, Jim Cockrelle, and our informant, Tommy Martin.

Congratulations to Ellie Green Jolley and Jim who now have four children with Susan's arrival on Oct. 12. Anne is 2½, Dave 4½, and Laura 7. The Jollays live in Indian River City, Florida as Jim is with NASA at the Cape.

Dolores Baraffio Zavash invites us for a swim in their new pool if we're ever in Triangle, Virginia. Dolores and Speck have two boys, Kerry in 1st grade, Matt, 2½, and Caesar, the basset hound. They should be settled in their new house by now. Last summer Ann Callihan and Quimby Hines visited the Zavashes. They have three children, Marc, 6, Bruce, 3, and Daphne born last March. They got together with Elaine Pattie Stephens and her husband, Luke, who live down the street from Dolores. The Stephens have two girls, Jennifer, 4, and Suzanne in kindergarten. The three couples stopped by the Bayou Night Club where Hal Posey is playing his trumpet in a Dixieland band.

Dolores also wrote that Jo Ann Stephen-Miners had a baby girl, Jean, in March. They live in La Grange, Illinois.

Carol Kent has moved to a new apartment in Santa Monica, California. She writes that Nancy Lonardelli '57 got married this year and lives in D. C.

Martha Briggs just returned from an 1,800 mile trip in which she did all the driving. She went through Alabama, Georgia, South Carolina, North Carolina, Virginia, Delaware, Maryland, and New Jersey. She had a delightful time visiting the major museums in these states and also visited the Okefenokee Swamp, Pogo's home in Georgia. Martha adds that Mary Ann Taliaferro spent last summer in Mexico and is now teaching in Cheyenne, Wyoming.

From Janie Ottaway Dow comes news that she, Pete, Jennifer, and Peter have moved into a larger house in Grosse Pointe, Michigan. They've also acquired a new dog which Janie says is as much effort as a third child.

Brenda Korns '56 and Bob Cattell '54 were in the Congo for two years and are now at Boston University. Bob is teaching a year of African studies, and they will probably be going back to Africa.

If you took any education courses I'm sure you'll remember Miss Merle Davis. A Christmas card says she's now on the faculty at R.P.I. and enjoying it very much. Dr. George Oliver, who was head of the education department when we were at William and Mary, is now president at R.P.I., and invited Miss Davis to join the faculty in September.

Best wishes to Biji Nunn '58 who will marry John McKnight, a professor at William and Mary, in May or June. Biji is beginning work on her Ph.D. at Penn State.

Thanks for all the lovely Christmas cards and letters. Keep the news coming. Hope 1964 is a wonderful year for you and yours!

Jean (Zwicker) Durant was in Falls Church over Christmas awaiting quarters in Germany, where John has orders. Alice Rannells is to marry David Meyers, from West Orange, New Jersey, on February 1. David is a buyer with Allied Chemical and has an M.A. in business from N.Y.U. They'll live in New Jersey. Anne (Richardson) and John Tankard are building a home in Nassawadox, Virginia, across from Julie (Vakos) and Clyde Nordstrom.

And that concludes the news. Puleeze write and tell me what you are up to.

Hopefully by now all of you are beginning to dig your way out of winter snows and slush and are ready for a good Spring. Many thanks for thinking to send me news over the Christmas holidays.

Lynn Everard and Tom Bear have moved to Dover, Delaware (28 Evergreen Circle) where Tom is assistant professor in Business Administration at Wesley College—they love being back in the college atmosphere and even 1½ year old Laurie seems to like it. When they arrived at Wesley, they found the Dean of Students, James H. Locklear, also a W&M grad.

Alumni Gazette

It was mighty good to see Bob Wood who dropped in recently on his way back to Buffalo where he's working. Heard from Lu Shillat who has 147 students avidly learning World History. Bev Harris and Causey Davis made a most impressive Christmas card and included news of seeing Lorraine Cox and Bruce McGuire and their two children at Va. Beach; that Ginny and Preston Gada are in Boston where Preston is with Mass. General Hospital; that Ginny Anderson and Jack Pollard and daughter are now back in Norfolk; and that Causey is now loan consultant with First Federal Savings and Loan while Bev does some substitute teaching and takes courses at Presbyterian School of Christian Education. Bev would like to know where Carol Ridegway Hall is these days—anyone know?

Bill Ryan's artistic ability was much in evidence on his card. He's still with the same job, same place, etc.; during the summer he saw Judy Crone and Tom Reel who disconcerted him by having not aged—Bill, you make it sound as if you're turning rapidly grey! Patsy Mantz and Walter Gilges sent greetings from Northern Rhodesia (P.O. Box 1500, Kitwe) where they're living in "a friendly community with a moderate pace of life in a near-perfect climate."

I understand that Fred Gibbs, '58, is now back in Canton, Ohio as an assistant minister—welcome home, Fred. Will Webb travelled in Europe in October and seems to have recovered nicely from his heart surgery which is very good news. Will. Bev Harris and Edry Jenkins spent Christmas in Germany where General Harris is now stationed.

Peter Neufeld ('58 class) has just landed a magnificent new position about which he couldn't help but be thrilled—he's the new assistant manager of the New York State Theater, Lincoln Center for the Performing Arts here in the city—many happy seasons ahead, Peter.

Dede Sheets, Pete, and 4 year old Carri Lyon sent news of their recent move from New Orleans to the Boston area. Pete had two months of pediatric rotation at Charity Hospital in New Orleans and Dede says she envies Roney and John Morton whom she called but couldn't reach. Dede mentioned that Fleecy Greene Smith and her family have bought a house in Norfolk (1450 Westover Ave.) and that Boots Koch and Bill Murphy and daughter, Carole, live in Redwood City, Calif. Dede and Pete plan to be in the New England area for two years (Pete's a Harvard Medical Research Fellow) and would like to know the whereabouts of Penny Witzeman Nelson. Dede's Boston address is 58 Hayward St., Braintree 84, Mass.

Pat Muddiman Callahan writes from California that she and Neal have been at Edwards AFB for three years. Neal has been an AF civil engineer Lieutenant while she taught Advanced Second Grade, but as of January 14th, they move to Seaford, Delaware (c/o General Delivery)—Neal will be a Dupont engineer and she a first grade teacher. Pat said Ann Hansbarger Snead had a daughter, Nancy Ann, on October 24th, and that Lee Grenata married Christopher Comstock on December 28th and have settled in Vancouver, Washington.

Hope to see some of you at the World's Fair—Y'All come! Y'All also write!

Many thanks to those of you who have brought, called, and written news for our column. Now we are showing the others which class is the most newsworthy! Those who contribute are exhausting themselves with all their news-making and would appreciate help from the other members of '61.

Susan Bruton Bailey and Dean, living in Yorktown, made news November 2, 1963, with the birth of their first child, Virginia Benton Bailey. Susan helped fill us in on news from other areas.

Those people in Richmond are always doing exciting things, or perhaps they are just better correspondents. In Richmond for the great Turkey Game, Steirling and I visited Fran McLean Pffor and John '60, and we also ran into Marty Zilmer Neely and Dick '60 and Gay Whitlock, who were brimming over with news. Jeanette Ankrum Evans and architect husband Buddy live in Richmond, where Jeanette teaches with Frannie at Southampton Elementary School. Dick Neely works in Richmond for the C. & P. Telephone Co. and Marty teaches history at Brooklyn Park Junior High School. Gay Whitlock teaches fourth grade at Jackson Davis in Henrico County. Jim Osbon '60 and his wife Bea McKay '62 are also Richmond dwellers. Jim works for I.B.M. and Bea teaches in Hanover County. Also with I.B.M. is Eddie Sharbaugh with his wife Drapes Ingles '64 and their baby. Wayne Woolwine, Rita, and children live in Richmond, too, where Wayne is with Lowe's Hardware Company. Paul Verkuil and Fran are living in Richmond while Paul is in the army. Gina Holland Hamilton and Tom '60 are back in Richmond after an army tour at Ft. Leonard Wood. Richmonders report also that Tom '60 and Beth Humrickhouse Secules are in Newport News, where Tom coaches at Warwick High School and Beth teaches first grade. Lee Bowman was married in December to Jim Porach, who is coaching at Prince George High School. Carol Veazey Titmus and Edward live near Petersburg.

In northern Virginia, Priss Edwards and Ann Lichtefeld spend their winters teaching and are always cooking up exciting summer trips. Connie Bowen is working on Capitol Hill for a California Congressman.

South of the border in Camp Lejeune, North Carolina, are Carol Noble Brown, husband Capt. Richard Brown (U.S.M.C.), and daughter Cindy, a year and a half. In Greensboro, Marianne Hodges is working as a graduate assistant in interior design at Woman's College, University of North Carolina.

On the West Coast, several of our class have settled for a time in California. Larry Schalk, his wife, Trudy, and their son are living in Los Angeles. Bob Kilgore writes that Edward A. Witt is in his third year of medical school at California College of Medicine in Los Angeles. Marjorie Odessey and husband Gary Fisher, who were married July 20, 1963, in Norfolk, are living in Sacramento. In San Diego, Hanna Trice Richardson and Jim are stationed with the Navy.

Kay Davenport is studying in England at Oxford University and writes that she is enjoying learning the British ways. Even farther away, Patsy Mantz is living in Rhodesia, Africa, with her lawyer husband.

Some of you have asked what I am doing still in Williamsburg. Believe it or not, we still love this atmosphere. This is my third year of teaching English at York High School. My husband Steirling and I lived in the restored Taliaferro-Cole Kitchen while he worked for Colonial Williamsburg. This fall we moved to "civilian" quarters when Steirling returned to school.

Now, remember that the deadline for the next issue of the GAZETTE will be set just long enough after you receive this copy for you to send me your news.

Christmas cards brought news from our classmates as far away as Baumholder, Germany and as near as Washington, D. C.

The lure of Europe and a summer abroad beckons many of our group across the sea. Gordon and Donna Floyd Fales and David and Martha Bell Laxson plan to spend this summer in Europe. Perhaps, they'll run into Spencer and Mary Steketee Hall, who are living in Cambridge, England, where Spencer is doing graduate work on a scholarship. A long letter from Mike Lyle tells of Army life in Baumholder, Germany. Apparently, it is fairly good, for Mike has toured Luxembourg, Heidelberg, Bonn, Frankfurt, Nuernberg, Trier, the Saarland and Paris, etc. Mike arrived in Baumholder October 1962, by way of Fort Knox, Kentucky, where he graduated second in the class, and Fort Benning, Georgia.

As a memorial to the late Guy Leland Overaker, '62, who lost his life in a military training accident in Germany, a scholarship has been established by Edward Powers, '62, and several other close friends of the deceased. The initial award, in the amount of $125, has been given to Stephen Scott Mansfield of Rockford, Illinois, a senior honors student in American history. Overaker, a native of Springfield, Illinois, was also a major in American history, graduating with high honors.

Bill George writes from Richmond of seeing Jim Osborn, Kirk Gooding, Jim Porach and others at a basketball game he attending with Bob Irby recently. After the Thanksgiving Day game with Richmond, Bill had an open house for some of William and Maryites including Judy Pollard, Ellis, Bob and Cretia Carrico Irby. Bill is now a godfather—to Bob and Cretia's new son, Lee. Bill and Patsy May are living at Fort Bliss, Texas; they are expecting an addition to their family in May. Ilene Carr is a Medical Technologist at Stonewall Jackson Hospital, Lexington, Virginia.

Pete Gyfteas is now in Bogata, Colombia with the Peace Corps. Elena Ruddy and Stacy MacMarlin are living in Richmond, Virginia, and expect to become parents sometime in April. Jan Dresser Jochum, '62, and her husband live in St. Louis, Missouri, where Jan is working at a new department store on their training program. Judy Delbridge recently changed jobs and now works for the Southwestern Publishing Company as an editorial assistant in Cincinnati, Ohio; her main project at the moment is developing with an author and editor a book from the outline to the manuscript to the final product.

Please write in time for the next ALUMNI GAZETTE. Your classmates and I would love to hear from you!

A few letters from '63 class members have trickled in since Christmas which leaves me with the faint hope that I'll hear from a few more of you by the time I write another column. Alan Scott (Scotty) wrote that during the fall he had been traveling throughout the far west as a field representative for Sigma Pi. On January 6 he reported to Officers' Infantry School at Ft. Benning, Georgia. I have news that Harry Green has been at Ft. Benning also, but will be leaving soon to go out West and then to Hawaii for the next year. Also there are Tommy Richardson, Guy Harley and Turk Despard. Nick Brown, '62, recently graduated from Officers' Training at Fort Benning. He and his new bride, Julie Kneen, will be at Fort Jackson. They came to see John and me before they left Georgia for South Carolina.

Peggy List DuVall and Don, '62, are stationed at Norfolk. She is teaching history in junior high school and hopes to be able to accompany Don on his tour of duty. Judy Little was married to Harry Mulky (U. Va.) on December 23. She teaches sixth grade in Alexandria. Jane Turns has an apartment in D. C. and is doing economic research for the Department of Agriculture. Lynn Marmaduke and Penny Guerin share an apartment in Fairfax. Both are teaching. Connie Cone is teaching high school English in Fairfax. Ginny Jacobs is living and teaching in Williamsburg. She is planning to marry Micky McCann, '64, when he graduates in June. Bonnie Barr is living at home in Potomac, Maryland and teaching English in Kensington, Md. Linda Elliott is doing personnel work for a psychological laboratory of Johns Hopkins outside Washington, D. C. and is living in an apartment in Maryland. Sarah Larkin married Lt. Roger Bove (U. Va.) last June, but I have no word on where they are now. Robin Reighley is reporting to Naval OCS at Newport, R. I., in February. Bob Hooper and John Riley are there now. Carol Boardman is teaching the French all about the English language in a small school in Clermont-Ferrand, France. Ann Harvey is studying hard at Exeter in England but enjoyed skiing during her holidays with Maureen and Maureen's husband Jim. Lt. Jeff Allen is stationed at Fort Leonardwood, Missouri, while Lt. Steve Barrett is defending our far-away borders in Alaska.

Lt. Al Saffold wrote that he and his wife Dee Oswald, '66, are stationed at Fort Benning, Ga. In March they will be going to their permanent duty station, Fort Knox, Kentucky. He reports also that Barry and Marty Grantier have Fort Knox as their permanent station.

John Cooter, '61, my husband, finished his six months in the Army at the end of January, returned to work with Price Waterhouse and Company, an accounting firm. We plan to live in Atlanta for at least a year or two. I haven't found a job down here, but I haven't really looked yet. John and I would like to invite all of you whenever you are in Atlanta to call and/or come and see us. There are so many alumni in the area stationed at various places that we should hear from a number of you. Please write, too!
