We also gave him a raise

Policyholders get special treatment from Connecticut Mutual—and good dividends too! This year, we again raised their dividends thus reducing the cost of their life insurance. It's the twelfth dividend increase in the last 20 years. Another reason why this 121-year-old firm is called the 'Blue Chip' company.

College Charter Reaches 275th Anniversary

Committee Begins Plans for a

NEXT FEBRUARY 8, the charter of the College of William and Mary will be 275 years old. That week, the campus community will begin a year-long program of notable events in commemoration of the 275th Anniversary, in recognition of the College's past as well as its present and future.

Charter Day will fall in 1968 on February 10, the Saturday nearest the actual anniversary. That convocation will represent the official start of the Anniversary Year, although for many at Williamsburg, the anniversary began in September when classes resumed. The current academic session is being called, unofficially, the 275th session, and the topic of the commemoration is being discussed widely.

The 275th Charter Day convocation will have a distinctly British air, in recognition of the royal founding and early patronage of the nation's second oldest college. The Rt. Rev. and Rt. Hon. Robert Wright Stopford, P.C., C.B.E., F.K.C., the incumbent Lord Bishop of London, will deliver the major convocation address in his role as episcopal successor to the College's first Chancellor, the Rt. Rev. Henry Compton, Bishop of London in 1693. Sir Patrick Dean, British Ambassador to the United States, will also address the convocation as a representative of the government. One of England's historic Liveries, the Drapers Company, will be represented by its Master, Anthony Packe, and its Clerk, Hugh Farmar. Drapers Company has been a benefactor of the College in recent years by the establishment of exchange scholarships between American and English universities, and through gifts it has made.

The Board of Visitors authorized President Davis Y. Paschall in 1966 to appoint a committee to begin laying plans for the Anniversary Year. An informal group of administrators and faculty began meeting early in 1967 to make preparations and talk over a variety of suggestions. In the summer of 1967, Dean of the College W. Melville Jones visited Bishop Stopford at his London residence to discuss his participation in Charter Day—and the Bishop agreed informally to make the address. President Paschall designated Dean Jones the Chairman of the 275th Anniversary commemoration, and a small steering committee was named to begin work on all aspects of such an undertaking.

The Visitors, meanwhile, granted a special working fund for the commemoration, to finance special publications, academic conferences and symposia, major speakers for campus events, and the unusual expenditures of Charter Day. The Society of the Alumni's Board of Directors had earlier authorized the staff to allocate to the Anniversary the funds necessary to help the commemoration.

Among the other features of the Anniversary Year will be the extensive use of a special commemorative symbol. An often-used expression, "The Alma Mater of a Nation," will be used even more often during 1968-69 to focus on the early contributions of the College to the American Republic. The Post Office Department reported that it no longer issues stamps to commemorate anniversaries of colleges and universities, upon the beginning of efforts to so recognize the College's 275th. A special commemorative booklet, comparing the College's great tradition with its present and future promise, will also be issued, illustrated with color photographs. Special magazine, radio, television and press coverage is planned for the year.

Alumni in major cities across the nation will be joined in a special telephone hook-up during the week of Chapter Day, for a program emanating from the campus. Further details on this program, being planned by Alumni Director Vliet, are found elsewhere in this issue of the Alumni Gazette, together with reports from active Chapters.

Each department within the College is currently involved in planning for a special series of academic meetings and speakers to be offered on campus during the two-semester year. Few of these plans have reached the final stages, but they appear to be varied and ambitious. Student organizations, such as Omicron Delta Kappa, are also exerting special efforts to obtain unusually noteworthy speakers to add significance to the occasion.

The steering committee, under Dean Jones, includes Dr. Donald Ball, associate professor of English; Warren Heeman, Director of Institutional Resources, James S. Kelly, Alumni Secretary and Director of Development; J. Wilfred Lambert, Dean of Students; Gordon C. Vliet; Ross Weeks Jr., Director of Public Information and Gazette editor; and Dr. John H. Willis Jr., Associate Dean of the College and Acting Dean of Graduate Studies.

A larger Anniversary Committee includes one representative from each academic department and school, from the student leadership, and Robert S. Hornsby from the Alumni Society, Mrs. Vernon Geddy from the Board of Visitors, Channing Hall Jr. from the community, and Donald J. Gonzales, vice president-public relations for Colonial Williamsburg.

Coast-to-Coast Alumni Meeting Scheduled Feb. 8

A UNIQUE coast-to-coast alumni meeting on the occasion of the College's 275th Anniversary will be a major feature of the Society of the Alumni's participation in the historic year.

All plans point toward a national telephone hook-up on the evening of February 8, 1968, emanating from the Great Hall of the Sir Christopher Wren Building. As many as 25 cities will be on the special network.

The program would include the tolling of the Wren bell, a William and Mary Choir performance, and remarks by College officials including President Davis Y. Paschall.

The 25 cities where these simultaneous alumni meetings will be set up are San Francisco, Los Angeles, Dallas-Fort Worth, Houston, New York, Chicago, St. Louis, Louisville, Detroit, Philadelphia, Wilmington, Charlotte, Atlanta, Pittsburgh, Boston, Hartford, Miami, Washington, Norfolk, Lynchburg, Richmond, Roanoke, Newport News-Hampton and Williamsburg.

Alumni will be contacted for assistance and suggestions they might be able to offer in conjunction with publicizing the College's rich history and tradition, as well as its present activities. A special 275th Anniversary captain's chair with a William and Mary medallion embedded in it is being advertised beginning with this issue of the Alumni Gazette.

Further information on these and other Anniversary events involving the Society of the Alumni will be made available as plans are brought to fruition.

The Indians Refused to Go To Virginia

Former Alumni Secretary Charles McCurdy '33, recently sent to the Gazette this interesting article entitled "The Indians' Refusal," taken from Benjamin Franklin's pamphlet, Remarks Concerning the Savage of North America, (ca. 1784).

Franklin wrote:

"At the treaty of Lancaster, in Pennsylvania, anno 1744, between the Government of Virginia and the Six Nations, the commissioners from Virginia acquainted the Indians by a speech, that there was at Williamsburg a college, with a fund for educating Indian youth; and that if the chiefs of the Six Nations would send down half a dozen of their sons to that college, the government would take care that they be well provided for,

and instructed in all the learning of the white people;" The Indians' spokesman, in a speech Franklin has labeled "The Indians' Refusal," replied as follows:

"We know that you highly esteem the kind of learning taught in those colleges, and that the maintenance of our young men, while with you, would be very expensive to you. We are convinced, therefore, that you mean to do us good by your proposal and we thank you heartily.

"But you, who are wise, must know that different nations have different conceptions of things; and you will not therefore take it amiss, if our ideas of this kind of education happen not to be the same with yours. We have had some experience of it; several of our young people were formerly brought up at the colleges of the northern provinces; they were instructed in all your sciences; but, when they came back to us, they were bad runners, ignorant of every means of living in the woods, unable to bear either cold or hunger, knew neither how to build a cabin, take a deer, nor kill an enemy, spoke our language imperfectly, were therefore neither fit for hunters, warriors, nor counsellors; they were totally good for nothing.

"We are however not the less obligated by your kind offer, though we decline accepting it; and, to show our grateful sense of it, if the gentlemen of Virginia will send us a dozen of their sons, we will take care of their education, instruct them in all we know, and make men of them."

The College

PROBABLY THE biggest news to come from the William and Mary campus when the 1967-68 session began in late September was the temporary overcrowding of men's dormitories.

The new residences for fraternities, described at length in the October Alumni Gazette, weren't ready for the men when classes opened. Construction delays attributed to the weather, labor shortages and inability to obtain equipment on schedule, made it impossible for the contractor to meet the September 1 completion deadline.

In fact, when classes began on September 25, only four of the 12 units were far enough long to be occupied, and in those four only the bedrooms and lavatories were usable, not the social and dining facilities. Three more units were scheduled for occupancy in late November, and the remainder will probably be in use by the end of the first semester. The men unable to use the new residences were placed in other dormitories temporarily, doubling up on a temporary basis.

For three days, between the start of registration and the beginning of classes, two fraternity groups lived in local motels, and two others used dormitory basements in barracks style, while workmen put final touches on the first four fraternity residences to be used.

Another classroom building, for biology and psychology, was similarly held up and its completion date was moved from September until at least December.

The opening of classes was delayed one week in order for construction men to make as much progress as possible on the various projects and to complete the move of the law school into the renovated old library building. Even there, the College could not obtain delivery on shelving for the law library, so for several weeks the law students took classes in one building, and studied in another. Until additional funds become available, perhaps in 1968, the law school's largest classes cannot be accommodated in the old library for lack of a large lecture room.

Another item of campus news, of course, was the planning taking place for the 275th anniversary. This is described in another article in the Alumni Gazette.

A Richmond newspaper article described how, in limited fashion, mini-skirts and hippies were spotted at the conservative old Williamsburg campus. A Los Angeles alumnus, familiar with these fashions, was nonplussed during a campus visit to find no mini-skirts—which indicates that the real question is how many inches is mini?

College Choir to Perform Yule Music on Television in Major Cities

CHOIR DIRECTOR Carl A. "Pappy" Fehr has 80 voices in his William and Mary Choir this fall and for many alumni, the Choir's "Songs of Christmas" program will bring the campus to the home television screen at Christmas.

The Alumni Office will make every effort this fall to alert alumni in the viewing areas where the holiday program will be seen, as soon as definite information is available on the time of scheduling.

WVEC-TV in Hampton, Va., will again produce the popular television show in the setting of the Wren

Building and the Sunken Garden areas of campus. The College is in the process of "promoting" the program across the country in an effort to enlarge upon last season's 15-station "network."

Tentatively, alumni in these areas will be able to see this year's holiday program (the program won't be filmed until early December, so the stations will not actually schedule the show until they see it):

In Virginia—Roanoke (WDBJ-TV), Harrisonburg (WSVA-TV), Richmond (WTVR-TV), Tidewater-Peninsula (WVEC-TV).

Eastern U.S.—Washington, D. C. (WTOP-TV), Philadelphia (WFIL-TV), Erie (and cablevision network) WICU-TV; Watertown, N. Y. (WWNY-TV); New York (WPIX-TV); Cincinnati (WCET-TV); Akron, (WAKR-TV).

Midwest—Chicago (WGN-TV), Denver (KWGN-TV) and Duluth, Minn. (KDAL-TV); Phoenix, Ariz. (KPHO-TV); Minneapolis (WCTN-TV); Austin, Tex. (KLRN-TV).

West Coast—Los Angeles-Hollywood (KCOP-TV).

The program ordinarily is shown on Christmas Eve or Christmas Day. ❧

Dr. Baldwin stands beside a home-grown Virginia plant, the Big Leaf Magnolia, planted 10 years ago. It comes from Southwest Virginia.

Faculty Profile:

Baldwin Brings World's Botany To Williamsburg

By S. Dean Olson

WILLIAMSBURG is so well known for its historical heritage that another distinction has gone all but unnoticed—except, perhaps, by the man responsible. "I like to think of Williamsburg as the Crytomeria Capital of America," says Dr. J. T. Baldwin, Jr., '32, a professor of biology at the College of William and Mary.

Crytomeria is a lovely evergreen tree from Japan. In 1947, the year after he returned to his alma mater to teach, Dr. Baldwin brought the first Crytomeria to the College campus. Since then, he has planted many more at William and Mary and has given others to the people of Williamsburg until today Crytomeria is one of the Colonial Capital's most distinctive trees.

A cyto-geneticist whose primary interest is the chromosomes of various plants, Dr. Baldwin has devoted two decades to beautifying the William and Mary campus with unusual trees and shrubs. A world-wide traveler who has visited and studied on at least four continents, he has made William and Mary an international campus in an additional sense of the word; his plantings have come from such distant points as Central China, the Himalayas, Switzerland, and Mexico. They represent manifold species—from peach to pine to gum trees, from Arizona Cypresses to valuable boxwoods, from big leaf magnolias to the rare Metasequoia, from natural hybrid oaks of Virginia to unique botanical creations developed by Dr. Baldwin himself.

For several reasons, Dr. Baldwin, who teaches genetics in the Fall and field botany in the Spring, finds satisfaction in the panorama of green he has created. As a horticulturist—one of only two among William and Mary's graduates—he views plants as both his avocation and his vocation. In addition to the beauty of the plants and observing their growth over the years, he and his colleagues in the biology department have found William and Mary's tree-shaded campus an excellent natural laboratory for teaching.

Some of the plants could serve as a tool for teaching history as well as botany. Behind the Marshall-Wythe building, for instance, are two giant redwoods, whose cuttings came from a tree brought by sailing vessel to Norfolk around Cape Horn long ago. When Dr. Baldwin arrived at William and Mary, he noticed that one of the redwoods had been "heeled in" under a big magnolia which prevented the natural expanse of the redwood's branches. The campus had plenty of magnolias, Dr. Baldwin reasoned, but only two redwoods. He finally convinced the College to remove the magnolia after appealing on several occasions directly to the President's Office.

On both sides along the walk behind Marshall-Wythe are lovely specimens of Camellia Sasanquz which bloom magnificently from October to January. Convinced the College should plant sasanques some 20 years ago, Dr. Baldwin prevailed on President John Edwin Pomfret to provide the funds. Dr. Pomfret consented, but before the purchase could take place the superintendent of grounds, who must have had some Scot in his veins, interceded and said it wasn't necessary to spend money, he would get them by another means. The camellias showed up alright, but not the small plants Dr. Baldwin had in mind; instead they were six feet tall. Dr. Baldwin later learned where they had come from: the stadium perimeter at the Norfolk Division of William and Mary, now Old Dominion College. "I still don't know how he pulled it off," says Dr. Baldwin with a slightly perplexed expression.

Dr. Baldwin has an Atlas Mountain cedar near the Bryan complex of dormitories. The tree, which resembles a blue fir, is an obvious attraction to the Christmas-tree hunter with its perfectly formed branches that spiral into a neatly honed peak. Dr. Baldwin planted three trees there 15 years ago. One died, and the other disappeared. As it turned out, the missing tree had fallen prey to a group of Williamsburg young people, who in a rush of Christmas spirit apparently found it irresistible as a Yuletide symbol. Dr. Baldwin, however, felt that finders-keepers neither applied to the William and Mary campus nor to his blue cedar; he did some detective work, sought the culprits out, and charged them a hundred dollars for the tree.

A European cypress located near the west end of the Sunken Garden, survived an assault one night a few years ago by a student who apparently was returning home in his finest clothes from an evening social. Perhaps his date hadn't treated him right, but at any rate, Dr. Baldwin says, the student probably fell over a pipe near the tree and became so enraged that he pulled up the pipe and beat the dickens out of the tree. The boy is gone, but the cypress is thriving, none the worse for wear, which may prove something about survivability at William and Mary.

To Dr. Baldwin, each of his trees and shrubs is an individual. "Perhaps to the untrained eye, they look much the same," he says, "but to me they are as individualistic as people."

In one respect, a group of Eurya shrubs of the tea family behind Ewell Hall prove the point. Dr. Baldwin planted the Euryas to screen a less-than-lovely air conditioning unit. "The Euryas love and thrive in this particular location," says Dr. Baldwin, pointing out that the moist air from the unit must have something to do with their rich, green color and healthy growth. Only a few yards away is a second group of Euryas, planted at the same time, some 15 years ago, but only about half as tall.

Dr. Baldwin gets his plants and seeds from many sources—the Department of Agriculture and various other government agencies, arboreturns around the country, Colonial Williamsburg, and through purchases by the College—but he is ever on the outlook during his travels for new species to decorate the William and Mary campus. Once, while he was in a park in Geneva, Switzerland, he collected seed from some striking European Cypresses. That was 20 years ago, and today descendants of the same trees are thriving at William and Mary; one with an upright habit graces Ewell Court.

Another unusual tree, Metasequoia, found its way to William and Mary by an even more roundabout route. Until 1946 when a group of Metasequoia was found in Central China, the tree was known only by its fossil record. Dr. Baldwin obtained seeds of Metasequoia in Brussels in 1948 and brought them back to William and Mary. The seed had been sent to Brussels, incidentally, by Harvard, which may or may not prove that America's second oldest college really does try harder.

The wonder is that Dr. Baldwin has found time to do so much botanical landscaping at William and Mary. His interest in botany was inspired by Dr. Donald W. Davis, a somewhat legendary biologist at William and Mary, in his senior year at the College. He went on to the University of Virginia to earn a Ph.D. in biology in 1937, then taught at other universities, including Michigan and Virginia, and conducted a two-year research project on rubber in the Great Amazon Valley in South America before returning to William and Mary in 1946.

Meanwhile, his reputation had grown so rapidly that in 1947 the State Department sent him, as a horticulturist, on an economic mission to Liberia. He had hardly returned to America from that project in 1948 when the Government again requested his services as principal botanist in its historical quest for Strophanthus, a plant with compounds that synthesize into the medical miracle of Cortisone, the pain-relieving drug that wrote a new chapter in the treatment of arthritis. The search took him to Liberia, French Guinea, the Gold Coast, Nigeria, British Camerons, French Cameroun, and the Belgian Congo. And finally to Mexico to collect wild yams for the same purpose.

Despite the world-wide breadth of his research, however, Dr. Baldwin eyes the William and Mary campus as one of his finest accomplishments. Hardly a day passes that he doesn't turn his attention to the many different species of shrubs and trees he has brought to William and Mary. He's as pleased to have been able to do it, however, as William and Mary is grateful to have a man of his background apply himself to the art.

"Public institutions generally will allow only designated individuals to do plantings," he says, "but here I've been allowed the privilege of putting out plants pretty much as I please."

Dr. Baldwin thinks that an arboretum should be established at William and Mary. He believes that educational institutions should have a collection of trees just as they have books in a library.

"Books are for pleasure and teaching," he says, "and so is a collection of plants." Certainly no one who has witnessed the beauty of William and Mary's campus would disagree with that.

An Alumna Works for U.S. in Vietnam

Lindsey Stringfellow
Describes Experiences
As 'Kool-Aid Kid'

By Ginnie Peirce '64

I REMEMBER riding a long way with armed jeeps in front and back of our track, out to the perimeter around Da Nang. We went past the ruins of a jeep ambush from the night before and out to an isolated outpost. We had a marvelous time with those Marines . . . we had a program about games of chance. They all liked it fine, and we laughed and joked. Two weeks later they were run over by 'Charlie.' "

An A.B. degree in English from William and Mary, graduate work in playwriting at Yale Drama School, and business training with Civil Defense headquarters in Charlottesville, hardly lead a young woman toward work on a Red Cross Clubmobile in the Far East. That background isn't needed to conduct a recreation program from a mobile unit at a remote outpost in the jungles of Vietnam, to travel by jeep, helicopter, boat or quarter-ton truck over bumpy, dusty roads in 106-degree temperatures . . . or just to be cheerful and smiling for 18 and 19 years old boys who are homesick and lonely, who want someone to talk with, or someone to just plain be there.

"The reason I went into the Red Cross," says Lindsey Stringfellow '64, "is that I saw a newspaper article saying there was an urgent need for volunteers to go to Vietnam."

Lindsey was one of the relatively few Red Cross workers serving in Vietnam, and she returned to America this past year. Some 287 Red Cross personnel are now in 60 Vietnamese locations.

She joined the Red Cross after reading the article, had two weeks of training in Washington, and went to Vietnam. She helped set up recreation centers in Long Binh ranging from tents to air-conditioned quonset huts. She visited field hospitals in Danang, not because it was her duty but because General Walt asked them to. She laughed and joked with malaria-ridden

Marines and shrapnel-injured infantrymen, "but we never showed on our faces what we saw." And she served as a representative, a symbol for the women back home they loved.

"The kindness and courtesy we received was actually a reflection of their feelings toward their women back home. I'm glad I went, but my mother was the best sport about it, because another Lindsey went to the East to another war as a Marine and he didn't come back."

Known as the "Kool-Aid Kids," the Clubmobile workers served on teams of two, setting up temporary recreation centers where the men could relax, play tapes, records or cards, or drink coffee or Kool-Aid. But mainly, these centers were places where the men could relax and get away from the day-to-day routine. "The men would be expecting us. Just to get them thinking, to entertain them, or to distract them from the heat and boredom—that was our purpose. Most guys just liked to sit and look at the girls because 'round eyes,' as they called us, were rather unusual. Our program was chiefly a program of morale . . . if the guys saw girls in that heat, boredom, or during frightening times, they could jolly well stand it, too."

The welfare of the troops was foremost in their minds, but during times to themselves the girls were confronted with the reality of the war. "The crazy thing is that there is no front line, so every place is a potential danger spot. You always feel tense because the local population is extremely distrustful. And the thought is always there that something could happen, particularly since the roads are mined."

But in remembering her experiences, Lindsey highlights the morale factor. "It is very high, especially among the combat troops. In fact, the further you go into the field, the better the morale. It's the ones who have the 12-hour shifts of routine, boring work in the supply and support areas who are tired and demand more of us.

Extension Program: Beyond Chandler's Expectations

Map shows wide geographic spread of program today.

SOME 6000 students who are attending William and Mary classes this year may never set foot on the Williamsburg campus—but don't accuse them of playing hooky. Rather they are the type of student former President J. A. C. Chandler had in mind nearly half a century ago when he said: "There are hundreds, yes, thousands, of people in Virginia who are prepared to enter college, but who have never had the opportunity. Our business is to educate the people and if they cannot come to the College we should go to them."

December 1967

With those words, Dr. Chandler launched the first college extension division in the State of Virginia. Enrollment has since mushroomed from 60 in the first class to more than 6000 annually today but the purpose of the program remains the same. Says E. Leon Looney, M.Ed. '53, present-day director of the Extension Division, "The mission of the program is to provide an opportunity for more Virginians to attend college level courses at a time and place convenient to the people."

This means a radius around the Williamsburg campus of 75 miles—on military bases, in elementary and high school classrooms, in facilities provided by business and industry. This means providing teachers for some 150 classes a semester, covering everything from freshman composition to data processing, and supplying upwards of $50,000 worth of books a year.

And this means 6000 miles of travel per month for Looney and two assistant directors, Henry Purcell and William Story III, M.Ed. '67, for personal visitations to the classroom to show the students, as Looney puts it, that "Someone at the College cares more about them and their educational interests than just collecting tuition and handling paperwork."

Within its broad aim, the program has several specific purposes based on the needs of people who hold full-time jobs or are too far from William and Mary to attend class at the main campus.

"For all properly prepared persons," the program provides an opportunity to secure a broad, liberal education without leaving their present occupation. A second phase is aimed at public school teachers who need to renew their certificates or wish to advance professionally. And for industry and business around Williamsburg, the Extension Division supplies courses by request to upgrade the technical and professional proficiency of employees.

Working out of a small frame house near the William and Mary campus, Division personnel cooperate closely with military education officers, public school superintendents and industry and business leaders to line up the program. From past programs, they develop a "core" curriculum of courses offered each semester, mostly in the basic liberal arts that have broad appeal. From the military education officers they receive an idea of which courses are most in demand. And from industry come special requests for professional and technical courses.

To teach the courses, the Division draws from the Williamsburg campus, then from neighboring and affiliated institutions such as Richard Bland and Christopher Newport College, and finally from an "adjunct" faculty of professional people who have the necessary academic background and some experience in teaching.

"Some of our best faculty come from this area," says Looney, citing Political Scientist Tom Schlesinger, brother of Historian Arthur Schlesinger, and a former Washington correspondent who works for Colonial Williamsburg.

Since the Division must pay its own way, a least 18 students are needed to make up a course. About 80 per cent of the courses offered develop and the percentage is even higher on military bases where many begin their college careers.

"In many instances," notes Looney, "persons have completed college courses through the extension division and in so doing received the impetus needed to continue and complete degree requirements at a four-year institution."

Looney recalled the story of Charles J. Kelton, a chief petty officer stationed at Oceana Naval Air Station, who enrolled in the first college course in 1960 through the Extension Division. Kelton completed the maximum of 30 semester hours through the Division, then enrolled at Old Dominion College where he graduated June, 1963. He subsequently took a teaching position at Linkhorn Park Elementary School in Virginia Beach. His principal, by coincidence, was Gordon Baskin who had taught the first extension course in which Kelton enrolled.

The story illustrates one of the most satisfying contributions of the Division, that of "serving as a springboard for many who without these courses of convenience might never earn a degree."

News Notes from Chapters and other groups gathered in the name of the College of William and Mary

Dallas-Fort Worth—The Riviera Room of the Holiday Inn was the site of the second meeting of the year for this newly chartered chapter. A cocktail party preceded the dinner, following which Gordon Vliet, Director of Alumni Affairs, presented a program on new developments at the College.

Houston—The first organizational meeting for the Houston area was held on October 25 at the Coastal Suite of the Petroleum Club in the Humble Building. Gordon Vliet gave a slide show on the College scene. Arrangements were handled under the direction of Dr. Henry Wilde '53.

Los Angeles—The very successful July 1 meeting was followed by another meeting on October 28 at the Westport Beach Club in Playa del Rey. Cocktails, dinner and a program by Gordon Vliet set the stage for the arrangements, which were under the direction of Rene Henry '54.

Lower Peninsula—The picnic and reception for incoming students was cancelled by heavy rains. President George Mumford will rechannel their efforts toward the Charter Day meeting in February.

New Orleans—John Morton '58 was the prime organizer for an organizational meeting held at Delmonico's Restaurant on October 24, at 7 p.m. The famous steaks provided the dinner, and the Director of Alumni Affairs provided the program.

Norfolk—The September 16 bus excursion to Williamsburg for the East Carolina game was cancelled due to Hurricane Doria. President Bill Prince '55 is looking forward to an active 1968 season.

Lynchburg—A reception for incoming students was held under the leadership of President George H. Bunch, Jr. '38. These programs are very helpful in orienting new students to the campus.

Richmond—The cocktail party reception following the Tobacco Festival game with VMI was a great success in spite of a light rain, due no doubt to the exciting win over the Keydets. There were about 300 persons attending the party at the William Byrd Hotel. The annual meeting took place November 6, and Dr. Woodrow Wilkerson, Superintendent of Public Instruction for Virginia, was speaker.

Roanoke—A pre-game cocktail party and dinner was held at the Patrick Henry Hotel in Roanoke prior to the VPI game in Blacksburg. Gordon Vliet presented a program on the College, and Ed Derringe, of the Atlantic Department, discussed the athletic program of the Big Green. Mrs. Natalie Wright Haley '59 was elected President for 1968. Jack Place '54 served as master of ceremonies.

San Francisco—Following the Oakland Raider-San Diego Charger game on October 29, there was a Bay Area meeting of William and Mary alumni in the Edgewater Inn. The cocktail party in the Colonial Room was followed by a program presented by Gordon Vliet on William and Mary Today. Mrs. Barbara Reagen Sumner '57, whose husband Charlie is defensive backfield coach for the Raiders, was in charge of the reception and arrangements.

Washington—The reception for freshmen and transfer students was once again a huge success, with about 350 persons attending. Gordon Vliet, Dr. Donald Ball of the English department, and two College juniors presented the program for the students and their parents at the Key Bridge Marriott Inn.

H. F. Harnsberger '44, at the inaugural in October of the Rev. Arnold B. Come as President of San Francisco Theological Seminary.

Addison Roberts '35, at the inaugural of Dr. John R. Coleman as President of Haverford College in Pennsylvania, in October.

Thomas Swann Jr. '57, at the 100th Anniversary Convocation of Western Maryland College in October.

Mrs. Walter B. Myers '56, at the inaugural of Dr. Milton Byrd as President of Chicago State College in September.

Indians 27 Navy 16

A quarter-century of defeats at the hand of the U. S. Naval Academy ended October 21 when the Indians staged a fourth-quarter uprising to win 27-16. The shock at Annapolis was countered by joy at Williamsburg, as these pictures by Thomas L. Williams show. The team returned to the Reservation to be greeted by some 1,200 cheering students, faculty and townspeople—and a Wren bell silenced after too-exuberant ringing buckled its supports.

It was the highlight of an otherwise good football season for the Indians, who at first lost to three colleges in a row. The scores were these:

- 38 William and Mary, Quantico 7*
- 7 William and Mary, E. Car. 27*
- 7 William and Mary, Va. Tech 31*
- 12 William and Mary, Vanderbilt 14*
- 33 William and Mary, Va. Military 28*
- 25 William and Mary, Ohio U. 22*
- 27 William and Mary, Navy 16*
- 24 William and Mary, Citadel 0*
- 16 William and Mary, W. Virginia 16*
- 7 William and Mary, Richmond 16*

The Virginia Gazette's cartoonist, Dick Stinely, represented local pride in this follow-up editorial cartoon in the local weekly.

Basketballers Face Season with High Hopes—But Caution

Mitchell's Second Season Brings 'Guarded Optimism'

"GUARDED OPTIMISM" might be the way to describe Coach Warren Mitchell's outlook for the upcoming William and Mary basketball season. He's lost Ben Pomeroy, a two-time all-Southern Conference forward, and the Indians face perhaps their toughest schedule in history, but Coach Mitchell still hopes to ring up at least 16 victories and finish no worse than third in the Southern Conference.

The Indians have a ways to go to achieve that objective. Primarily a "road" team which plays two-thirds of its games away from crackerbox Blow Gymnasium, the Indians meet North Carolina State and Wake Forest of the formidable Atlantic Coast Conference, the University of Massachusetts and perennial champ University of Connecticut of the Yankee Conference, Virginia Polytechnic Institute, an NC-AA semi-finalist last year with most of its players back, and the University of Pittsburgh, the University of Jacksonville and Loyola of New Orleans. Not to mention, of course, such Conference foes as West Virginia, last year's champ, and second place Davidson which has all its players returning but will start, reportedly, three sophomores.

Mitchell, however, isn't unfurling his crying towel. Among his five returning lettermen are last year's top scorer (20.6 points per game), 6-2 guard Ron Panneton, a second-team all-conference pick, and 6-8 center Dave Daugherty who plunked in 12 points per game. Up from the frosh squad is Bob Sherwood who averaged 32 points a game and whom Mitchell is grooming to fill Pomeroy's shoes.

If there's a weakness it's depth, says Mitchell, and that may not turn out too badly if top substitutes Billy Taylor and Mike Johnson shape up to expectations. Both are senior forwards with experience under their belts.

At the other guard spot Mitchell has a junior and three sophomores, ranging in height from 5-11 to 6-2, scraping it out. Scott McLendon, one of the soph candidates, may be "the quickest man in basketball for the first two yards," says Mitchell. The others are Harry Kent and David Stout and junior Jack Downing who rate a plus for speed as well.

Speed is what Mitchell plans to rely on. He says the best offense is a good defense, and the Indians will press hard, trying to shake some balls loose and then fast break before the opposition can recover. Last year the Indians allowed 72.2 points per game, second best in the league, and hit on 47.2 per cent from the field—also second best.

A University of Richmond captain and standout 10 years ago, Mitchell is in his second season at William and Mary. He has two new assistant coaches this year—Hubie Brown, a New Jersey high school coach and former University of Niagara star, and Carl Sloan, a product of the University of Richmond, who will coach the frosh team as well as assist with the varsity.

Mitchell won 14 games and lost 11 in his first season, but as he points out, "If we had won two more games we would have had the best William and Mary record since 1951." If he picks up the 16 wins he is shooting at this year he will achieve that objective.

The Freshman-Alumni game will be held in Blow Gymnasium on January 6 prior to the William and Mary-Loyola of New Orleans varsity game. Coach Mitchell is high on the Freshman team which has "good balance" and should supply "three or four future assets for the varsity." The Freshman schedule includes for the first time West Virginia, North Carolina, VPI and Duke University.

She adds, "I never had contact with military people before and was really gratified to find so many dedicated and fine men . . . no matter how many pacifists rant, those guys are doing their job, routinely with efficiency and high integrity."

She did her job well, too; so well that it didn't seem like a job at all. "We always tried to be cheerful and smiling," despite the high temperature. "Sometimes people thought we were scatterbrained, always running around being cheerful. But we didn't want the guys to see how sad or scared we felt sometimes. I remember seeing 'my girls' with tears in their eyes behind their sunglasses when we stood at attention and watched those guys getting decorated."

In Long Binh, Lindsey was a program director for a nine-girl unit. But she regrets not being able to stay longer. She had her appendix removed—after an emergency "med-evac" by helicopter to the nearby field hospital. And now she's home, working as a staff reporter for a daily newspaper in Elizabeth City, North Carolina.

Her experiences, however, are not forgotten. "When I hear a helicopter or see a uniform, I want to go back. Newsreels make me think of those guys—the normal types who are doing the best job they can. You learn a lot about other people and yourself over there, some good and some bad. Most of all, you learn that people are tougher, physically and emotionally, than you thought. People survive, but it's hard to forget things. I don't wake up crying any more, but a sudden loud noise still makes me head for the ground. It's hard to unlearn reflexes. I can hear those artillery shells rattling overhead and see troops wading through rice paddies, and I often wonder how the infantrymen are adjusting when we saw so little of what war is like."

"But I'm glad I went, but most of all I'm glad I saw how well our men hold up. Never again will I believe the myth of the 'ugly or weak' American. It just isn't so."

S. B. Savage, Jr. of Alexandria, Virginia has been appointed Treasurer-Comptroller of the Export-Import Bank in Washington, D. C.

Marjorie Lanston Fitzgerald of Annapolis, Maryland writes that their second son, John Stephen, has just been commissioned an Ensign, U.S. Navy; oldest son, Michael, is a Lieutenant, USN; and youngest son, Peter, hopes to enter the Academy with the Class of '73. Their father is Rear Admiral William F. Fitzgerald, USN (Ret.) and he is the Executive Director of the U.S. Naval Academy Alumni Association.

I had such a nice letter this summer from Juanice Campbell Ford (Mrs. Clyde W. Ford). Her husband has retired from the Air Force and they're living at 4227 W. Calle Mayor, Torrance, Calif. 90505. Their only son is a third classman at the Air Force Academy and she wonders if other alumni have sons there. Recently she contacted Margo Frankel (Osherenko) who taught Costume for the Theater during our days at The College. She lives in Beverly Hills.

Virginia Brenn Steele wrote from Bloomington, Ind. that her son is entering Miami of Ohio this fall. Charles ("Mike") Stousland '41 is on the faculty there—architecture. She says the campus is much like our old one—"red brick Georgian buildings—brick walks—old trees—beautiful. I was filled with nostalgia."

We received an announcement from the Bergen Country Coaches Association of the resignation of Thomas Della Torre (205 Fairmont Ave., Hackensack, N.J.) as Hackensack High School's head track coach for 21 years, bringing to a close the school's most successful track in cinder history. Tom led his team to 17 winning seasons and in five years were unbeaten in dual meet competition. Della Torre is stepping down in order to give more time to his duties as the school's director of athletics and head football coach. Tom says "My biggest thrill as coach in football and track is seeing so many of my boys go on to college."

Lucie Dreyer Hitchcock (Mrs. Raymond B.) wrote us such an interesting note. She says that her mother's illness and dependency upon them for 10 years has made it necessary for them to keep nurses around the clock and they are so thankful they can do it for her. Their son, Ray, Jr., graduated from the University of Maine and is working as State Forester in Bemidji Minn., is married and has a year-old daughter. Their daughter, Sharon, attended the Vermont College studying Nursery and Kindergarten teaching, married in '64 and has two daughters. Lucie has kept busy as Cooperative Foods teacher and assistant manager of their name local school cafeterias for 14 years. They are a sports-minded family and enjoy their campertrailer, canning, tennis, water and snow skiing, ice skating, hunting and fishing. Both she and her husband devote a great deal of time to their Methodist Church so their hobbies sort of take a back seat to family and work time. Lucie lives at 6 Hilltop Drive, Springfield, Vermont 05156.

Ginny Clauden Allen and daughter, Pam, entertained Ann Terrell Garrett and daughter, Gina, and Joan Harden Hanson and daughter, Kim, at luncheon early this fall to introduce their daughters. Pam is a freshman at College, Gina a sophomore and Kim is entering Bryn Mawr.

Independence. It's what brought me into life insurance in the first place, and what keeps me in it now, after eleven great years!

Because let's face it—there aren't too many fields left that let a man operate independently, yet still enjoy the benefits large companies can offer—pension plans and group insurance, for example. And not too many jobs let you see results in direct proportion to your efforts.

With Mass Mutual I've found all this—with great personal satisfaction to boot. Mass Mutual's reputation in its field is outstanding—in fiscal management, in service to policyholders, in the caliber of its agents. Not to mention $3.4 billion in assets and 116 years of experience.

When you join Mass Mutual, you benefit from that experience and integrity. You get financial backing—while you're training—until you're on your feet. But always with the recognition that you're your own man.

If this kind of independence is what you're looking for, why not write to Mr. Charles H. Schaaff, President, Mass Mutual, Springfield, Massachusetts 01101. By the way, he started out as an agent, too!

It's been a busy and delightful summer. Our son, 14, went into business, fishing 25 crappots each day, and acquired as fringe benefits a grand tan and a fine set of muscles. Ann manned a snack bar at the local boat basin with (Judge) Dick Foster's daughter.

Frank and I had a recent fall vacation and trip to Plainfield and meandered back down thru Cape May, Easton and Patuxent River. We were indeed shocked and saddened while in Cape May to learn of Janet Amundsen Hughes' death in March.

Went to Williamsburg last Saturday to ask Ross Weeks to save a place for '44 news—Now find there is not much. The road to Williamsburg was so beautiful with autumn leaves, it was worth the trip! It was also interesting to see the delightful bookstore, new cafeteria and fraternity complex.

Many are looking forward to Homecoming (which Jim Kelly tells me is one of the biggest events or gatherings today on the East Coast.) Lois and Doug Donald from Charlotte, Jo (Parker) Flint and John (Charleston), Fran (Loesch) Brunner and Bob from Far Hills, Ruthie (Weimer)

Teller and K. T. (Emporia) are a few that I know about.

We had a big W&M dinner in Norfolk in May. Miss Wynne-Roberts and Dean Lambert added a great note to the festivities. Jim Kelly and Dean Robert Hunt (Admissions) gave us lots of college news.

We took our teenagers to Norway in June. In Bergen I pointed out an attractive girl waiting for a tour bus as "looking like a William and Mary coed" and believe it or not, she was! We went out several times with Bill and Jane (Welton) Anderson and their teenagers in London. They'd been touring the British Isles.

Dick Alfriend is the new President of Advance Norfolk, Hunter Andrews is often on the front page for Legislative activities, Ann Kilgore (Hampton mayor) leads "news getters" on the Peninsula. Jean (Boyd) McIntyre is back on the hockey field—teaching at the Norfolk Academy.

At the Pan-Hellenic tea I spied Jean Schoenwolf Preston and daughter Merle (William and Mary freshman). Deal Chandler (Nancy Outland's daughter) is also there as is Jan Freer's.

Norfolk lost its greatest William and Mary alum, Joe Healy this summer, Jerry (Healy) Clay's father, a wonderful man. Alumni with his enthusiasm and love for the College are few.

Hope to see you all at Homecomings. In the meantime please write me your news!

Summer is over here, and leaves and rain are falling. By publication date I suspect Christmas and New Years are the keynotes, and I hope your Holiday Season was a pleasant one, so please save the Christmas card news to share with me—because I surely could use it.

Mary Stuart Mason, of Richmond, Virginia, has been promoted to the position of school libraries and textbooks in the State Department of Education.

I was getting worried there for a while, but the "belle" that saved this edition for us all was Cecy Waddell Cunningham, whom I thank kindly for the delicious long letter. She and Scotty are enjoying their work at the growing Christopher Newport campus, Newport News. Their two children are as so—Ann Westcott is seven, is interested in Ballet, and is in the second grade; Todd is five, a member of the kindergarten set and an enthusiast about active sports. It sounds as if the Cunningham family does a good bit of travelling in connection with the education business—they went to Daytona Beach for a Kellogg Foundation seminar where they enjoyed visiting Carol MacNaill Gettings and Roger. Cecy was sorry that Mary Laura "Sissy" Hoey Bender was not in Fort Lauderdale at the time. She and Fred are in California for a year, but apparently, they plan to return to Florida. The Cunninghams are due for a fall trip to Washington, D. C. and Scotty goes to Texas in November.

Cecy heard from Pam Pauly Chinnis that Pam had been in Seattle to attend the Episcopal Conference there. Both of the Chinnis children had been in camp this summer so Pam and Carter took several trips, including one to Expo. They saw Ann Vineyard Roarch and her family in Missouri this summer, when Pam attended a Mortarboard Convention.

Extension . . .

indicate that more and more people are utilizing that springboard. Since 1960 enrollment has increased from 3502 and 172 classes to 6500 last year and 300 classes.

The growth led this fall to the addition of another assistant director, Bill Story, who has a background in education in Southside Virginia where he will continue to concentrate his efforts with the Extension Division.

Looney has been with the Division since 1959. He served as assistant director until 1965 when Dr. Donald J. Herrman moved full-time into the summer sessions and the evening classes program. Purcell, a retired Naval Officer with a background both in education and accounting, has been with the program since 1962.

Fittingly enough, Purcell received his bachelor's degree from the Norfolk Division of the College of William and Mary, today Old Dominion College. Old Dominion, like Richmond Professional Institute, began as an education center for the Extension Division and eventually developed into a full-fledged four-year institution of higher learning.

Leaders in Two Extensions Die in Recent Months

THE DEATH this year of two men recalled two of the major developments in the College's history of bringing higher education into the home community.

Joseph E. Healy '07 of Virginia Beach, died in late August. An obituary in a Norfolk newspaper recalled that Mr. Healy was one of four men intimately involved in the creation of the old Norfolk Division of William and Mary (now Old Dominion College), when he was principal of a high junior school there.

Mr. Healy was directed in 1930 by Dr. J. A. C. Chandler to "employ a secretary, install a telephone and prepare a catalog" for the new division once arrangements were made to use a vacant elementary school. "I stayed there the entire summer enrolling students," Mr. Healy recalled in an earlier interview.

Following his brief affiliation with the Norfolk Division, he continued as the principal of the Junior high school and later as superintendent of the Virginia School for the Deaf and Blind, Staunton. He also served, after retirement, as assistant doorkeeper of the Virginia Senate and as sergeant-at-arms of the state House of Delegates.

The other death was that of Col. H. W. K. Fitzroy in October, who was the guiding spirit of the St. Helena Extension of the College. The extension was also operated in Norfolk, for returning veterans, from an old, abandoned naval facility. It lasted only two years—from 1946 to 1948—but it was crowded with men interested in advancing their education under any circumstances.

Ed Grimsley '51, who attended St. Helena Extension and then came to the William and Mary campus to finish his education, recalled the 20-year anniversary in his column, Metronome, in the Richmond Times-Dispatch. Col. Fitzroy, following St. Helena's abandonment, had moved to Richmond to head the University Center in Virginia, a position he held at the time of his death.

St. Helena's "campus," Grimsley noted, was dominated by a huge crane.

"The William and Mary campus in Williamsburg," he wrote, "had its statue of Lord Botetourt, but we at St. Helena had our crane, and that was enough."

Patty Wattles Spiegel informed Cecy that her son, Billy, got into the NROTC and is enrolled at the University of North Carolina. There could be cause for kindred souls there as John (former Dean of Men) and Mae Hocutt's son, Jack, is also there and possibly NROTC also.

Richard Bicks of Memphis, Tennessee gave a scientific paper at the American Gastroenterological Association in Colorado in the spring. He has just been promoted to Associate Professor of Medicine at the University of Tennessee.

The Cunninghams were in Williamsburg for the Burgesses Day and ate in the new dining area, The Commons. The architecture has taken marvelous advantage of the Matoaka Woods, and is certainly an improvement over the old dining hall we knew, reports Cecy. They saw Fred and Caroline Frechette, and read of their talented, swimming daughter, Cecy.

Thank you, Cecy, and I promise to say kind words about anybody who sends news and current events!

Aubrey L. Mason of Lynchburg, Virginia was recently appointed to the Lynchburg College Associates which is an organization concerned with the total advancement of that College.

48

In June Laurel Kanner Gutterman of Norfolk was awarded her Master of Arts degree in History by Old Dominion College.

Joseph D. Deigert of Baltimore, Maryland is a Land Developer in Harford County, Maryland.

Allan (Bud) Jones of Alexandria, Virginia writes that he has abandoned the newspaper business after hustling news for nearly 18 years and has joined the staff of Senator William B. Spong, Jr. of Virginia.

James C. Sutherland, 17-year veteran of Ford Division's Southeastern sales operations, has been named manager of the division's Lansing, Michigan district sales office.

Jane Uhlendroff Kempself of Madison, New Jersey writes that her husband, Howard, went to Brussels to set up an industrial safety program for Esso Research and Engineering Company for several weeks where she joined him for a short visit.

Early this year George F. Duborg, Jr. was elected to the board of Arnold Bernhard & Company, a mutual fund manager, and as a vice president of Value Line Securities, Inc. in New York City.

Marilyn Allenbaugh Goodsill of Woodbridge, Connecticut writes that her husband, Stanley, is a partner in the accounting firm of Haskins and Sells and is in charge of the New Haven office. They and their children, Louise 14, Susan 11, and Jeff 5, had a vacation on a dude ranch in Montana last summer which they recommend as a wonderful family vacation. They all golf in the summer and swim and in the winter they ski in Vermont.

Reverend Joseph Dunaway and family have recently moved to 615 7th Street, Radford, Va. where he has assumed the position of Episcopal Chaplain to Radford College and Associate Rector of Grace Church.

Dr. James Siske is teaching American History at Navarro Junior College, Corsicana, Texas.

Trevor Col'bourn has been named Dean of the University of New Hampshire's Graduate School. He assumed his duties in September and is teaching graduate-level courses in American history.

For once I have received some news and I hope more of you will take heed and send me more of the same. Had a card from Jane Oblender Atwater and Howe. Their Charlotte is at William and Mary. She seems to be following in Obi's footsteps and is ranked #2 in the middle states girls. Rick, a high school student, is on the varsity tennis team and Pierce is a player too. Thank loads for the card Obi.

We had a great but short visit from Anne Waring Brown '51 and Linc last spring. It was just great to have somebody finally come to see us. Ann said that they see Nancy and George among others. The evening was just all to short to hear and gather all that they had to say.

My big surprise came when Woody Wayland gathered notes from many at the William and Mary picnic in Richmond. Irb Ingram is living in Richmond with wife and 2 children, boy 5 and girl 7. He is in sales with Humble Oil & Refining Co., Dick Duncan added a nice note but didn't say much about himself and family. He did say that Shirley Green May was at the picnic looking as good as ever. Bob Day and wife Sarah plus 2 girls and 1 boy also were at the picnic. Apparently this Richmond picnic really gets people out. I was thinking of doing the same sort of thing here until I got the overwhelming list. We have a sizable group in the southern California area and should do something about it.

Barbara and Bernard Swann were also at the picnic. Bernard is a partner in Progressive Engineering Co. and Barbara received her Masters degree in Christian Education from the Presbyterian School of Christian Education, Union Theological Seminary, Richmond. They have 3 girls, 15, 13 and 9.

Ann Callahan Chappell and Harvey '48 were also among those at the picnic. They were taking their 2 year old for the first time.

When Woody got all of this information he took off for a trip to Los Angeles and ran into Marv Atkins at the airport in Chicago, consequently I also got a note from Marv. He, Mary, Marvin, Jr. and Debbie are living in Barrington, Illinois. Marv is a Life Insurance representative with Marsh and McLennan and works out of the Loop Offices in the Continental Illinois Bank Building. They would love to see anybody coming through.

Woody also talked with Jim and Phyl Brothwell in Mesa, Arizona and hoped to visit them on his way back. He also added that Marvin Atkins had recently visited Tom Johnson in Staunton, Virginia where Tom teaches at Staunton Military Academy.

Patty Planck Price is living in Bowling Green, Virginia. She and husband recently enjoyed a nice trip to Bermuda.

I really feel like Woody's name should be on this column and I can't tell you all how surprised and thrilled I was to get such a fat bunch of news. I just have one bone to pick and that is with Woody for not calling us, we would have come down to L.A. for the evening to pick up this great hunk.

There were also pictures sent from the picnic and I wish you could all see them.

Joe Brinkley has been elected Vice President of the American Farm School of Thessaloniki, Greece. Previously Joe was Regional Vice President of the Radio Free Europe Fund. The American Farm School was started in 1902 by an American missionary to provide technical training for rural youth of the area. The school has become internationally recognized as a pilot project in rural development attracting students from all parts of Greece and visitors from all over the world. Joe was Assistant to the Treasurer of Colonial Williamsburg from 1954 to 1961. Since that time he has been with the Free Europe Committee, serving as Deputy Director of Exile Political Activities Division, Director of Broadcast Analysis in Munich and as Regional Vice President. As Vice President of the Farm School Joe will be in charge of the Office of the Trustees, located in New York.

C. Tilghman Levering of Baltimore recently won membership in the National Life Insurance Company' eleventh President's Club.

Dr. Milton F. Perry, Curator of the Harry S. Truman Library in Independence, Missouri represented the College at the Centennial Convention at Northeast Missouri State Teachers College on September 2, 1967.

The Morrison's had a very busy summer. We spent every weekend at the beach getting our renters in and out. I was dreading it but after one week's heat in Bakersfield I looked forward to the weekly jaunt. We have all become true beach-combers. We still haven't completed our new house so cross your fingers that we will have a change of address in the spring. Please put ME on your Christmas card list.

The day has at last arrived when your class secretary has very little news to write. Only you can remedy this situation! I hope that you will write me a letter and bring the class up to date on you.

Dick Anzolut who lives at 8317 Chagrín Road, Chagrín Falls, Ohio 44022, represented the College of William and Mary at the inauguration of Dr. Elmer Jagow as President of Hiram College on October 6, 1967.

We had a short but nice visit with Lois Short (Raymond) '50 and her family at the Sheraton Motor Hotel in Richmond in August. Lois, Bob, and their three children had come down from Oswego, New York, for the wedding of her brother. We missed seeing Nancy Alexander '52 who had to leave before we got there, but we did get to see and went out to dinner later with my college roommate, Doris Hamilton (Jones), and her daughter Helen who had come in from Amelia county for the occasion.

In September Bev., my mother, and I went to the Swift Creek Playhouse which is one of the many dinner playhouses springing up in the area surrounding Richmond, to see "The Odd Couple". I mentioned in the last issue that Wilbert Keys had one of the leading roles in this play, and he played the part of "Oscar Madison" so well.

I am writing this near the first of October, and already I have substituted quite frequently at the Colonial Heights

An interesting bit of news came from an interesting source not so long ago. This is one of the rewards of being a class secretary! We hear from people and places others are not so likely to hear from.

The letter I mention was from Ed Click who holds the rank of major, and is living in Costa Rica, where he has been since early 1964. Bringing us up to date on his activities of the past 13 years, he says he is married to the former Barbara Louise Johnson, and they have three children: Michael Edwin, who is eight; Steven Earl, five; and Catharine Elizabeth, who is not quite a year old.

Since being sent to Fort Sill following college graduation, he has been to Alaska and Germany, and to various places in the states which include a long enough stay at the University of Oklahoma to get his masters degree. He is presently awaiting a tour of duty in Viet Nam which will begin in June of 1968.

A postcard came from Kansas City, Mo. from Betsy Barnes saying that she and Marthanne Hodges Luzader got together while Betsy was visiting there with her children in August.

Carol Ann Myers Miffin of Palos Verdes Peninsula, California writes that she, Tom, and their four children are enjoying their life in their hillside home overlooking the Pacific.

Dr. Francis G. Carey has recently been promoted to Associate Scientist at The Woods Hole Oceanographic Institution in Massachusetts.

David M. Heinrich is a Captain in the Medical Corps stationed at Irwin Army Hospital, Fort Riley, Kansas.

Betty Henley Barber of Williamsburg writes that she is working as an aide in the Adult Basic Education Classes at the Naval Weapon's Station. Her husband, Dick is working with children as the York County School Psychologist, and their son, Steve, is in 2d grade.

55

Barbara Sumner, '57 writes that Tommy Koller and his wife who were on their way to the South Pacific for two years to test missiles for Douglas Aircraft stopped in Oakland, California and attended a party with some other alumni after the Raider-49er game in August.

promoted to Commander and Jan has "retired" from a short career (two years) of teaching fourth grade to care for baby #4. Their other children are; Eric, 8, Karen, 7, and John, 5.

Belinda Owens (Watkins) writes that husband, Ed, a major in the Army, is in Saigon, working with TWA at Tan Son Nhut. His tour began last January, so in his absence Binnie is keeping busy by working three days a week at the Mariner's Museum as assistant curator of prints and paintings, working one morning a week as a Red Cross volunteer at the Ft. Eustis Hospital, singing with the Bruton Parish Choir and keeping up with their two children; Caroline, 7 and Stuart, 3.

Joan Marsh (Myers) represented the College of William and Mary at the inauguration of the President of Chicago State College in September.

Hykel Abdella represented our College at the inauguration of the President of St. Bonaventure University in October.

Charles Carter represented the College at the inauguration of the President of Saint Augustine's College in November.

Jim Bryden and family (wife, Betty, daughter, Victoria, 6, and son, James, 4,) are living in Charlottesville, where Jim has been appointed to the faculty of the University of Virginia in the Department of Speech Pathology and Audiology. He has also been awarded a research grant from the U. S. Office of Education. In addition to some journal articles, Jim has had a recent commercial publication, YOUR CHILD'S EXPERIENCE IN SPEECH CORRECTION: A MESSAGE FOR PARENTS. His other activities have included acting as Director of Instruction for Head Start programs and as consultant in language habilitation to school division programs.

Joan Pearce Jabaut of Pittsford, New York writes that husband Ron is a secondary reading specialist for the Pittsford Central Schools and is also teaching in the Reading Clinic at Rochester Institute of Technology.

The first of August brought wonderful news from my freshman and sophomore roommate, Lynn Carr Ladd. She and David have moved to Cherry Hill, New Jersey (forty minutes from Bristol, Pennsylvania) where David has been named superintendent, Agency Department, at the Haddonfield, New Jersey, Casualty and Surety Division office of Aetna Life and Casualty.

Pat and I spent a delightful Saturday evening at our home with Lynn, David, and three-month-old Michael Niven.

John Fronefield has recently been elected Assistant Treasurer of the Continental Bank and Trust Company in Wayne, Pennsylvania. Previous to his appointment, he was Manager of Continental's Morton, Pennsylvania office.

Jack White was awarded his Ph.D. in physics from the University of North Carolina in June of 1965. The next two years he served as captain in the U. S. Army, and currently he is an assistant professor in the department of physics and astronomy at the University of Georgia in Athens, Georgia.

John Tate graduated from Washington and Lee University School of Law in June of 1963. He is practicing law in Marion, Virginia and has two sons, Jay, age 5, and Cam, age 2.

Georgia Smith Williams and husband Dan have moved to Framingham, Massachusetts. They have two sons and one daughter.

Ruth Chambers' paper on Hilton Village in revised and condensed form was published in the spring issue of Virginia Cavalcade Magazine. It was also published in the New Port News Daily Press and in their Sunday magazine, New Dominion.

Michael Smoller recently announced his association with John Montefusco for the practice of law in Newark, New Jersey.

Bob Squatriglia who recently has been awarded an assistantship in the Counseling Bureau of the University of South Carolina is now living in Columbia where he will pursue his studies toward a Doctor of Philosophy degree in Counseling. His wife, Betty Powell '60 and young son, Robbie, are there with him.

Pat and I had a marvelous time with Joe and Anne Chard Ryon and Dean and Missy Griggs Sackett at Nancy Grubbs and Harry Bordner's wedding in early September. Missey, Anne and I were bridesmaids

—a happy William and Mary reunion. Nancy's wedding and reception was a lovely affair.

My husband Pat finished his graduate work this past August, and I love every minute of being home with 11-month-old little Pat. With AAUW, Theta alumnae, and little Pat, my day is a full one.

While visiting Frannie and John Pforr recently in Alexandria, we spent an evening with Pris Edwards Howard and her Army captain husband Ron. He left in late September for a tour of duty in Vietnam. During the same week we spent several days in Springfield with Jane and Paul Bahm, '63, and spent a morning with their neighbors, Carol Noble Braun and five-year-old Cindy. Carol's husband, a Marine major, recently returned from Viet Nam.

Bill Burnside received a Bachelor of Laws degree from the University of Richmond in June. While studying law, Bill served as chancellor of the McNeill Law Society for honor students and as representative to the Student Bar Association.

Army Captain Henry Maar recently completed an adjutant general officer course at Ft. Benjamin Harrison, Ind.

Abby Falvey Albright's husband Phillip completed O.C.S. training at Ft. Belvoir in December of 1966.

Bobbie and Jim Ukrop spent a fall weekend in Radford with Skeets and Phyllis Akers Mink, their daughter, and baby Michael.

Allan Brownfeld of Alexandria, Virginia is working as a member of the staff of the Senate Internal Security Subcommittee and also he writes a weekly column for Roll Call, the Capitol Hill weekly newspaper. He also has contributed a number Susan Shackelford Schlichting and Cort, '64, have been living in Rock Island, Illinois, for two years. Cort is an instructor of economics at Augustana College. He has been accepted in the Ph.D. program in mathematics at the University of Iowa and so is taking courses in addition to his teaching. Susan taught for four years after graduation, but retired this fall to take care of their new daughter, Kirsten. Susan and Cort saw David Adams in Chicago in June. He is still at the University of Chicago, but spent six weeks this summer at Yale learning the Thai language.

Dave and Pam (Johnstone) Hitt have settled in Bend, Oregon, where Dave has his first church. He preached his first sermon there on December 25, last year. Sam and Mary Liz Smith Sadler, '64 were there for a short while after the Hitts moved to Bend, but returned to Williamsburg later. Pam enclosed some interesting statistics about their family: in their three years of marriage she and Dave have traveled nearly the equivalent of twice around the world. Jonathan not quite ten months old, has already traveled the equivalent of half-way around the world! Pam says that she and Dave are learning to slow down and enjoy small-town life and that they do like western hospitality very much.

From Judy Murdock Snook comes some Alpha Chi news: Kathy Dudley Okada and David were in Hawaii in July visiting David's family and on a second honeymoon. Dave is an engineer designer for Mattel Toys in Los Angeles. They expect their first child in March. Jane Rothgeb Jennings and Richard, and son Greg, have moved from Boston to Anaheim, California. Richard is with Beckman Instruments as a patent attorney while he is studying to take the Bar exam. Bill and Johanne Riddick Betsch, and son Lionel, are in Philadelphia where Bill is working for his doctorate at Penn on a teaching fellowship.

Jim Hunter completed his fourth summer stint as a Virginia Beach policeman this year. At school during the winter months, he received an L.L.B. degree from Wake Forest in 1966 and a master's in Law from Harvard a year later.

Jerry Van Voorhis, who returned to the College in 1964 as Assistant Dean of Admissions, has been awarded a fellowship to pursue his PhD in Modern American History at the Johns Hopkins University. Jerry, who anticipates a career in education and public affairs, writes that the main project at Johns Hopkins, in history, is the editing of the Dwight D. Eisenhower papers, in which he will have some part. In addition to serving as Assistant Dean of Admissions at the College, in 1966 as Administrative Assistant to the President of the College, and director of the new Parents Day event.

Walter E. Blayton received his California C.P.A. Certificate in 1965 and graduated from the University of San Diego School of Law in June 1965. He is presently employed as a Financial Administrator for Philco-Ford Corp. in Saigon.

Lee and Judy Leeds Kernell have two boys, Bobby, age three and Charles, 10 months. Judy has been harpist with the Oak Ridge and Knoxville Symphony for three years. Lee plans to finish his doctorate in physics at the University of Tennessee this year.

Steve Barrett is working in New York City for Merrill, Lynch, Pierce, Fenner and Smith as an account executive.

Fran Harris has been named assistant professor of education at Lynchburg College. Fran received her MEd. degree from the University of Virginia and had previously taught in the public schools of Fairfax County and Charlottesville and served as consultant for Title I programs in Madison and Greene counties.

Roger Busch received his Bachelor of Architecture degree this June from Carnegie Institute of Technology.

Kathy McGinnis Block is still teaching first and second grades in a private school near Hollywood, California. Bob now is with the Los Angeles Times as a copy writer.

I have enjoyed very much the letters which I received while in California, as well as those upon my return to the Washington area. But it has been so long since I have seen any of you, so I am hoping to hear from more of you soon.

Jim Bennett writes from San Antonio, Texas, where he is a Captain stationed at Fort Sam Houston attending a branch advance course. After three years of trying he hopes to be in Germany after Christmas. He mentioned he saw Dave Mims in South Carolina last spring; Dave started work for IBM in Columbia. Tom Todd, now an army Captain, is at Fort Stewart as the personnel officer for the post hospital. Jim also asked about Lou Almand and Sally, who have returned from Germany and were last stationed at Fort Sill, Oklahoma, with their two children.

A letter from Carol Evans Tetu brings news of husband Bob's return from Viet Nam in November. January 2, he begins a three-month qualification course to fly helicopters, after which they plan to head for Germany in April. Carol says Joey Krider Delano is in San Diego and expecting her first child in December. Kent left last July for a nine-month's tour on the carrier, USS Coral Seas; he flies a phantom jet over Viet Nam.

Dick Goodwin writes from Cincinnati, Ohio, where he now works for the Bureau of Labor Statistics, Department of Labor, as a Field Economist. He is based in Washington, D. C. but works the Ohio-Kentucky area and soon expects to be transferred to the Chicago Regional Office. Dick relates that his job consists of extensive travel for the collection of data for use in compiling the consumer price index, current wage data, and other economic indicators. Dick also served in the army for two years and went to Korea, as well as working for Newport News Shipbuilding and Dry Dock through last May. Dick mentions having seen Sam Sadler and his wife, Mary Liz; Sam has recently filled the job as Assistant Dean of Admissions at William and Mary, a position formerly held by Jerry Van Voorhis.

Joy Walker Brown and Tom were heard from in Corpus Christi, Texas.

With the Navy, Tom was attending advanced training for the flight program and from there received a three-year tour of duty. I haven't heard where they are now.

Judy Davis Johnson and Ed have temporarily been separated by the army. After attending basic training in Georgia, Ed traveled to Indianapolis for Finance School; Judy works for AID in Washington, D. C.

Patty Vaught recently traveled to London where she visited friends for a few weeks; she is now in Madrid, Spain, where she teaches English at the Briam Institute. She will be there until May or June.

On September 28, I enjoyed the honor of attending the official opening of Chadwicks', the newest restaurant-bar in Georgetown, located on "K" Street at the waterfront. It is owned by Mike Kirby, formerly of Proctor and Gamble, from William and Mary; his partner is Alan Abromaitis. Mike claims that Chadwicks' is distinguished as having the longest bar in Washington, D. C., and I believe him. It's a delightful place and I strongly recommend it for your rest and relaxation while in Washington. Mike and Bonnie Kirby especially welcome all William and Mary alumni.

Toby Sindt is now a resident of Philadelphia, Pa., and teaches English at the Chesnut Hill Day School there.

After an enjoyable trip throughout Europe last summer, Tom Ward and Denny Bing are now living in Georgetown. Tom continues to teach history at Langley High School in Fairfax County.

Jackie Crebbs Peter writes from Fayetteville, North Carolina, where husband Karl is serving as a Captain in the Air Force Legal Office at Fort Bragg, adjacent to Pope Air Force Base. She also announces the arrival of a new daughter, Anne August.

Jackie mentions that Bette Brooks has moved to Connecticut and is teaching after a summer near Winston-Salem North Carolina. Carleen Sundin and Pat (Hudson) Tribble are still teaching in Richmond.

Maynard Williams Randolph and John are supposedly in Williamsburg where John continues his graduate program in Education. They also have a new family addition with daughter, Katherine Vollance.

Jackie received news from Polly Bean Long. She and husband Bill are in Liedwigsburg, Germany with the Army as well as enjoying weekend traveling throughout Europe.

Peter Latkin is in his senior year at New York Medical College writes his wife Margaret Beth Popkin.

Harold Gillies, Jr. writes that after graduation he attended OCS at Newport, R. I. and then married Lynn Jensen, '64. After a honeymoon through New England he reported aboard USS Lake Champlain and served in the Communication Department. This ship was the prime recovery ship for Astronauts Cooper and Conrad and their Gemini 5 capsule in August '65. At the present time they are in Taipei Taiwan and are due to depart in May of 1968. Lynn writes that she is very interested in Chinese cooking. Inasmuch as Taipei is one of the R&R centers for servicemen in Vietnam they hope to see some alums.

Ethelyn Abbott Owen writes that the Reverend Owen will be Associate Peace Corps representative to Liberia. They will live there until 1969.

Sharon Cosminsky Kern and husband Dick are living in Richmond, Virginia where he is with duPont and she teaches 5th grade.

With a visit to San Francisco in the fall, Joanne Arnett Murphy greeted husband, Paul, upon his return from Thailand. Now Paul is completing his army obligations at Fort Meade in Maryland.

I have enjoyed seeing Marcia Ballard on her several trips to Washington from Richmond. Marcia has begun a new career of teaching mentally handicapped children in a private school in Richmond. I have also heard recently that she is engaged to Tom Scott of Richmond.

Bill Corley writes from Saigon, Viet Nam, where he is still serving as an administrative officer with the army's third field hospital. He also mentions that he has enjoyed teaching English to a group of Vietnamese women.

Craig Carison, writes his return from England after two years where he received his Masters Degree from Oxford. After serving a short term of active army duty at Fort Eustis, Craig plans to begin his Ph.D. program here in the states.

Penny Sanders, '65, and I are sharing an apartment in old town Alexandria, which we love. Penny teaches English at Stephen Foster Intermediate School; I have returned to Fort Hunt High School to teach Spanish. Please visit us any time you are in the area; our address is 308½ South Fairfax Street.

Jane Noland received her master's degree in psychology from Wake Forest College last June. She is now working in Charlotte, North Carolina, as an assistant psychologist in the special education division of the school system. Jane spent the summer in Europe, running into Mary Erskin in Rome. Mary has now completed her Peace Corps service.

David Beach has left California and is presently living in Dearborn Heights, Michigan, where he is employed in the Industrial and Labor Relations section of the Ford Motor Company.

After an exciting trip to Europe, Sara Shafer and Marty Boyd have returned to their apartment in Richmond. Sara returned to her teaching job to discover that she would be facing a classroom of second graders rather than "grown-up" fourth graders.

Mary Liz Smith Sadler, Sam, and their daughter, Mary Leslie, are settled in an apartment in Williamsburg. They are glad to be back on the East Coast, and Sam is particularly pleased to be working at the College as Assistant Dean of Admissions.

Melinda Duke Ball and Stuart are now living in Charlottesville. Stuart has completed his service obligations and is now going to graduate school at the University of Virginia. Melinda is teaching school.

I am still employed as a guidance counselor and English teacher at Rock Hill Academy. Two of my students are now at William and Mary writing me letters about people, courses, and buildings that I have never heard of . . . in two years, things change. Let me hear from you.

Marie Fridenstine and Cathy Quirk have moved to Tuscon, where both will be working on Master of Arts degrees at the University of Arizona. They travelled out west via the deep South (Atlanta, New Orleans, and Dallas), and although they were still unpacking at last report, they invite the Class of '66 to come West for a visit.

Robert Jenkins is serving as a Lieutenant in the Third Marine Division in Viet Nam, where he will be stationed until April of 1968.

Also in Viet Nam is Victor Bary, who is serving at Phu Loi with the Army's First Air Cavalry. His wife writes that he was recently awarded a bronze star with the V device for valor for his action during a mortar and rocket attack on his base. Victor will return to the United States in January and will then have five months more to serve with the army after which he plans to work with IBM.

John Cole writes that he is currently working as a supervisor in the Office Operations Department with Mutual Life Insurance Company of New York in their new Service Center in Syracuse, New York.

Robert Kennedy recently completed an officer basic course at the Army School, Ft. Knox, Kentucky. The course covered branch training in armor with special emphasis on duties of a tank platoon leader.

Dena-Kay Wade was recently sworn in as a Foreign Service Officer of the United States. Dena-Kay received her appointment after successfully completing highly competitive written and oral examinations.

Working for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration in Hampton, Virginia are Sheila Thibault Anthony, Gail Morgan Day, (whose husband is practicing law in Norfolk), and Dorothy Hutton Tudor, whose husband John teaches social studies at Warwick High School in Newport News while working on his Master of Education degree at William and Mary at night.

Carrie Flowers Burt is teaching English at Ferguson High School in Newport News, where she was recently made Chairman of the English Department. Carrie is also working on her Master of Education degree.

Jeannie Williams reports that she is giving up her job in Washington and moving West to Texas, and possibly to California.

Cheryl Johnson is teaching English and German at Denbigh High School in Newport News. Also at Denbigh is Joan Lowry Coates, who is teaching social studies. Joan's husband is presently stationed in Viet Nam.

Debby Thomas Pomeroy is teaching first grade at Lee Hall Elementary school in Newport News, where Karen Cottrell Schoenenberger is teaching seventh grade social studies, spelling, music, and physical education!

We were pleased to have a Labor Day weekend visit with Ken and Gail Williams Wertz, who were on their way from Durham, where Ken worked during the summer, to Pittsburgh, where both will continue work on their doctoral degrees.

The saddest news of the summer was, of course, that of the death of Byron Speer in Viet Nam on June 13. Byron was serving with the Marine Corps there. I'm sure you all join me in expressing my deepest sympathy to his family.

Many thanks to those of you who sent me news. I am hoping this winter will bring me lots of news—all good, of course—from the class of 1966. Please write, either to me or to the Alumni Office, and let us know your activities.

Ronald Lovelace of Gladys, Virginia was recently selected to receive the Gold Medal award of the Virginia Society of Certified Public Accountants because he attained the highest score in Virginia on the CPA examination taken in the spring.

I'm not the only person who thinks Washington is a great place to live. Terry Thompson is here working in public relations for John Hancock. Sandy Blackburn is teaching at a finishing school. Jan Koerner is a computer programmer for the Department of the Navy. Susan Szadokierski is working at the National Institutes of Health in Bethesda, Maryland. Ruth Salinger is with American Telephone and Telegraph while roommate Karen Hassmer is working for the Office of Economic Opportunity. In the same apartment complex (Southern Towers in Alexandria) are Joyce Leonard, attending grad school in psychology at George Washington University on a research assistantship from Children's Hospital, and Ricki Groner, now an Internal Revenue agent. Emily Moriarity, awaiting a January, '68 wedding to Buzz Hall (Univ. of Tennessee, '67), is working for the Peace Corps.

Mary Alan Brown and Cindy Skogen are teaching in Alexandria, while Gerry Burks is teaching at Oakton in nearby Halifax.

Living down the street from me are Linda Rains, Pris Walker, Mary Jim Baskerville, and Gerry Thompson. Linda is a staffing specialist in personnel for General Services Administration, Pris is a management trainee for Riggs Bank (the first girl ever hired by Riggs in such a position), Mary Jim is with the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Company, and Gerry is working for a loan company in Woodbridge, Virginia.

Richmond is popular, too. Teaching there are Ann Rand, Pam Mason, Sue Lyons, Chris Coggins, and Ginny Goolsby. Bobbie Cusworth and Karol Holmes are working in banks. Jane Dodrill (Hanson) is there also, where husband Ted is in second year law school at the University of Richmond. Ken Crooks is at M. C. V. and his wife Michelle Lester (Crooks), Class of '66 is teaching in Henrico County.

Rob Fromm, Ron Lovelace, and Jim Boylan are working accounting firms in Richmond. Rob is with Pet, Marwick and Mitchell; Ron is with Lybrand, Ross Brothers, and Montgomery; and Jim is with Ernst and Ernst.

Charlottesville ranks next on the list. Attending medical school there are Larry White and Lynn Skerrett's husband, Smokey. Chip Kirby is at U. Va. in law school. Palmer Sweet is working as an economic geologist for the Division of Mineral Resources in Charlottesville and planning to enter law school there next year.

Flying the friendly skies for United is Mary Strader, while Natalie Ryder is an airline stewardess for Delta. Also working for Delta is Neville Stoneham, a ticketing agent in Atlanta.

In Columbia, South Carolina, are Tron Brekke and Chuck Albertson, in law school at the University of South Carolina. Chuck is also busy as an assistant coach in the athletic department.

Mary Lynn Murphy writes from Newport News where she is teaching English at Ferguson High School. Not too far away is Betty Bishop, teaching elementary school in Virginia Beach.

Judy Ann Tucker writes from Sebring, Florida to say that she is teaching fourth grade at the Fred Wild Elementary School. Also in Florida is Jim Lewis, teaching high school English in Jacksonville.

Going north, we find Candy Dunham (Evert) in Newark, Delaware, where her husband Ray is completing his last year at the University of Delaware.

Mary Nuernberger is busy at Penn State, where she received a fellowship to do graduate work in sociology. Not too far away in New Brunswick, New Jersey, is Sue Benbow, who is working for Johnson and Johnson after spending the summer travelling in Europe.

Billie Cayot is living in New York City and working for I.B.M., while her roommate, Laurie Uhl, is teaching school (trying to get up the down staircase). Pat Bailey is also in New York attending interior design school at Pratt Institute.

Further north, Susan Crawford is living in Connecticut and working for the Hartford Insurance Group.

At graduate school in sociology at Boston University are Ann Winfree and Emma Stokes, Chris Scheid is with them, working toward a graduate degree in chemistry.

As far as I've heard, Larry Marchant is farthest away, doing graduate work at the University of Edinburgh in Scotland.

Gordon Kelly and his wife, Denny Taylor (Kelly), Class of '66, are living in Alexandria. Gordon is working for the U.S. Geological Survey and waiting to go to Ft. Gordon, Georgia, in February.

Jack Lowery spent the summer working as a stunt man in Hollywood, and is now at Ft. Dix, New Jersey.

VIEWPOINT

TWENTY YEARS ago, William and Mary students lived on the site of our present store, played touch football where our parking lot now is. Those were the days of the "Vets Dorms," the "Rubberguts" and "Flying Vets," and cafeteria food so good that many students walked out specially for Sunday dinner. Today, students walk, drive, ride Hondas—any way at all—just so they get to the Williamsburg Shop for its broad and economical line of quality clothing, gifts, notions, housewares, footwear and luggage.

Cubic SECOR satellite surveyor makes first direct coast-to-coast measurement of U.S.

Cubic's SECOR, world's most precise satellite tracking system, recently completed the first direct "single-leap" distance measurement across the United States, from San Diego, Calif., to Herndon, Va. In only 10 seconds, the distance between these points was determined to be 3,628,300.5 meters, or 2,254.5 miles.

More important than actual distance computation was SECOR's ability to accomplish this historic feat. SECOR uses a satellite 600 miles in space to plot and measure the earth with amazing speed and surveying accuracy.

"... a first order geodetic tool..."

After initial tests, SECOR won the highest praise of the surveying and mapping profession.

Army officials noted, "SECOR has the full capability of a first order geodetic tool." In present operations, Cubic's all-weather SECOR system is successfully measuring distances between points of land separated by broad expanses of ocean.

29,000 "ranges" in six minutes...

During a typical satellite pass of six minutes duration, SECOR's four Cubic-built ground stations make approximately 29,000 measurements or "ranges" with 95% success. Within the SECOR satellite, a miniature 7-lb. Cubic transponder acts as a receiver-transmitter.

Tests prove that SECOR can extend control over distances exceeding 2000 miles with geodetic accuracy.

SECOR's far-reaching applications...

Data gathered by Cubic's SECOR will have lasting importance in the fields of geodesy, global navigation and satellite navigation. SECOR will have a role of major importance in space and defense programs requiring distance measurements with pinpoint accuracy. Information about the earth's shape and gravitational field is also being obtained.

SECOR is a product of Cubic Corporation, leader in the field of electronic measuring systems.

For additional information about SECOR, write to: Chief Scientist, Cubic Corporation, Department D-143, San Diego, Calif. 92123.
