A 19th-century "magneto-electric machine," thought to have been given the College in 1859 by John Tyler, is among the scientific antiques to be placed in a museum on permanent display this fall in the William Small Physics Building. The $40 unit, thoroughly modern for its time, contrasts with the $14,500,000 Space Radiation Effects Laboratory described in an article beginning on page four.

Space Effects Lab Fast Becoming A Leading National Research Center

ACADEMIC AND government research are thriving in a three-year-old marriage at the William and Mary operated Space Radiation Effects Laboratory which is rapidly evolving into one of the nation's leading research centers for high energy physics and aerospace exploration.

Heavy demand on the 600 million electron volt synchro-cyclotron, which forms the heart of the 14.3 million dollar laboratory, keeps the huge instrument humming night and day, seven days a week, 95-98 per cent of the time.

Demand for time on the accelerator is so heavy, in fact, that experiments must be scheduled at least six months in advance, and even then only half of the requests can be granted.

Except for 16 hours maintenance time every two weeks, the cyclotron is in operation constantly, sometimes with as many as four experiments going simultaneously. The laboratory staff is now beginning a schedule which will try to accommodate on a regular basis several experiments at a time on the cyclotron.

The laboratory, which forms the nucleus of the Virginia Associated Research Center—a Graduate Center of the College—is operated by William and Mary under contract from the Langley Research Center of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

The arrangement accounts in part for the heavy demand on the laboratory, since NASA-sponsored scientists and those from academic institutions use the cyclotron on an equal-time basis.

The cyclotron, one of the two largest of its type in the United States, is a duplicate of an accelerator in Geneva, Switzerland. Under controlled conditions, it enables scientists to study aspects of outer space by simulating bombardment by protons, electrons, and other hostile particles that occur in the radiation environment outside the earth's atmosphere.

"In space," says SREL's director, Dr. Robert T. Siegel, "there are fluxes or streams of protons and electrons with energies or velocities similar to those available in the laboratory.

"By varying the outputs of the machines, the different velocities of particles encountered in space can be produced in the laboratory with intensities much greater than those in space."

The protons, which come mainly from the sun, are most numerous during the eruption of a "solar flare" when huge streams of gases erupt from the sun. The electrons are mostly found within the Van Allen radiation belt.

What the laboratory does in effect, says Dr. Siegel, is to provide beams of these particles from the accelerators which allow ground simulation of the radiation environment in outer space.

Besides the major cyclotron, the laboratory has two smaller accelerators of three MEV and 10 MEV, a data acquisition system, radiation target areas, a beam dump, muon channel, and a beam transport system into which the major accelerator feeds.

Installed at a cost of more than a million dollars, the beam transport system gives SREL added flexibility over other laboratories because it enables scientists to regulate the energy of the cyclotron. Instead of a fixed energy flow of 600 MEV, SREL scientists can work under conditions ranging from 600 MEV down to 100 MEV, allowing them to do experiments under one roof that had to be done at several different laboratories previously because of the lack of flexibility available.

Currently in the process of its first substantial equipment expansion since the laboratory opened in 1965, SREL recently installed a new meson channel consisting of a sequence of magnets which funnel pions and muons to the experimental area with many times the efficiency of present systems. The channel was designed by Dr. Herbert Funsten, assistant director of SREL and a William and Mary physicist.

In November, the laboratory's major proton target area, into which protons are shot, will be enlarged and a "beam dump" will be installed to produce a low background situation for experiments.

The expansion is an example of how the laboratory, in Dr. Siegel's words, is constantly changing to accommodate the needs of experimenters. He describes the laboratory as "extremely well equipped" for its mission of studying radiation effects, nuclear physics, radiation biology, and elementary particles.

A youthful professor of physics at William and Mary, Dr. Siegel became director last fall when SREL came under the sole responsibility of William and Mary.

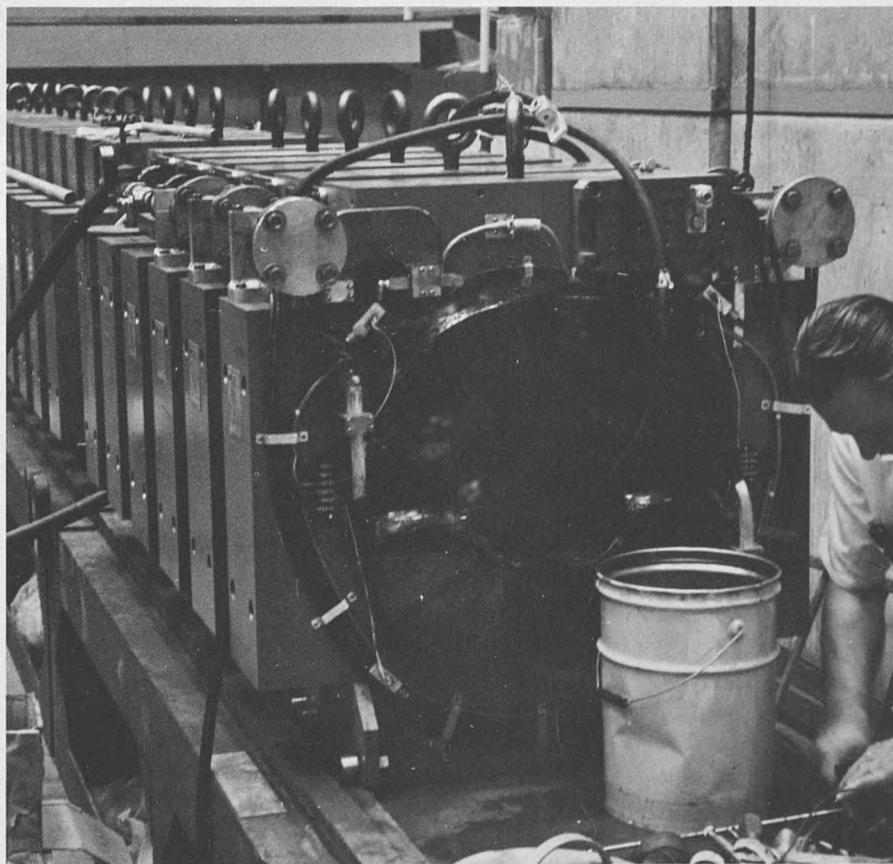

The administrative change replaced a cooperative arrangement whereby William and Mary shared responsibility for SREL and the Virginia Associated Research Center with three other Virginia institutions—the University of Virginia, Virginia Tech, and the Medical College of Virginia.

The changeover, however, has done nothing to slow the busy pace with which scientists from the institutions use the laboratory. Besides the Virginia institutions using the laboratory, scientists from such far-flung locations as the University of South Carolina, Florida State University, Auburn, Emory, the University of Rochester, and Cal Tech have performed experiments on the cyclotron.

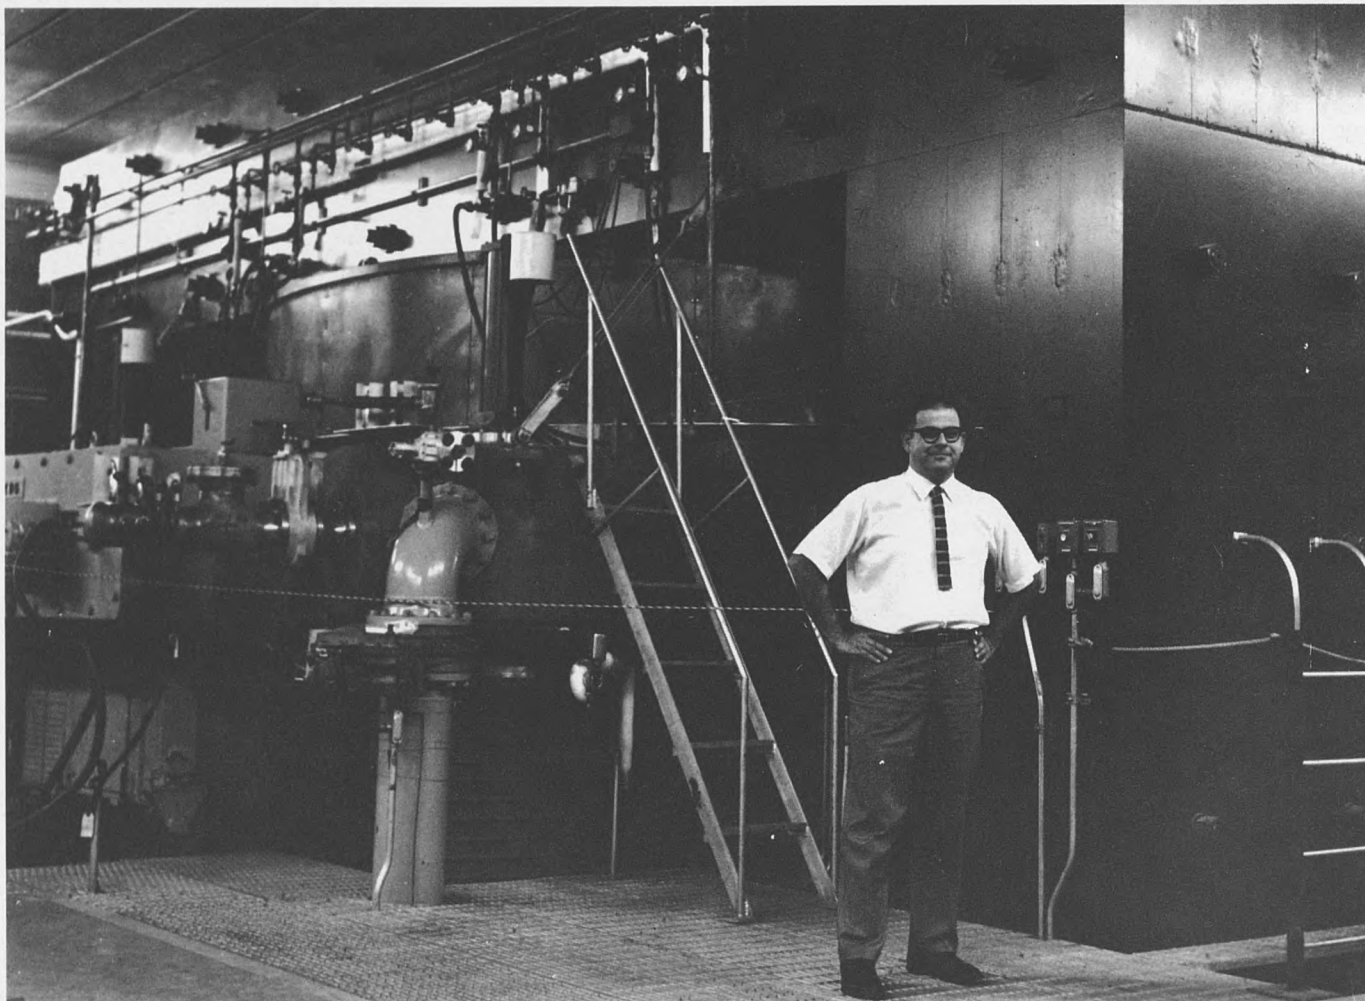

October 1968

Dr. Siegel stands before the "heart" of the synchrocyclotron

The research facility has proved an especially valuable asset to William and Mary, whose physics department emerged from a dark basement and settled in new quarters about the time SREL was completed three years ago.

The department, which has attracted physicists such as Dr. Siegel, who came to William and Mary from Carnegie-Mellon University, at an increasing pace since SREL opened, produced William and Mary's first Ph.D. recipient in the school's 275-year history last summer. Since then, six others have received Ph.D.'s at William and Mary, four in physics, with much of the research being done on SREL's cyclotron.

The proliferation of scientific publications by university and NASA-sponsored experimenters is another measure of the laboratory's importance to the research community. Since last September eight publications in scientific journals by university scientists alone and many additional reports have resulted from research at the laboratory.

NASA scientists have been equally busy on the cyclotron, studying such problems as the effects of a space radiation barrage on space vehicles during future voyages to the moon and beyond, the calibration of charged particle detectors to be flown aboard orbiting space craft, and the effects of radiation on films that will be flown in space.

The list of government and other organizations using the laboratory indicates the national scope of research undertaken at SREL: Langley Research Center, the Goddard Manned Space Flight Center, the Manned Spacecraft Center in Houston, the Lewis Research Center, the Marshall Space Flight Center, the USAF School of Aerospace Medicine in Texas, the Environmental Science Services Administration in Colorado, the Space Physics Laboratory of California, the Idaho Nuclear Corporation, the Texas Nuclear Corporation, and Battelle Northwest of Richland, Washington.

The laboratory is located between William and Mary and Langley Research Center on a 110-acre wooded site in the city of Newport News. A staff of 65 is engaged in operating the laboratory, including two assistant directors, nine full-time scientists and engineers, and 50 scientific and technical personnel.

NASA, which built the laboratory, spends between one and two million dollars annually for its operation. But the money seems well expended in "bringing outer space down to earth" for the benefit of mankind's knowledge of the effects of the environment outside the earth's atmosphere.

'Chronicle' of W&M Theatre Covers Althea Hunt's Years

By William A. J. Bowen '32

TICKET TAKERS, set painters, prop men, playwrights, electricians, directors, on down to the very actors—you, the legion of 3,000 alumni whose varied lives and careers are the better for having participated in the theatre and for having known Miss Althea Hunt—prepare yourselves! (With five bucks.)

The William & Mary Theatre—A Chronicle (1926-1956), three years in the compilation and writing, will be "on stage" at a publication party on the eve of this year's Homecoming, at 4 p.m., Friday, October 11. Audiences invited, too. It is the work of 18 authors covering the first 30 years of the 41-year history of institutionalized W&M theatre, plus an epilogue written by Jeanne Tracy from Moscow. She was a freshman during Miss Hunt's last year of directing. And it all begins, of course, with a prologue by William Morrow who was in Althea Hunt's first production in 1926.

Records, letters, memories, precarious haps and mishaps, triumphs, and even a purple leather covered diary, are the content of The Chronicle. "The raw material of any such program," writes Miss Hunt in her introduction, "are people—with stage fright, egoism, and sensitivity. They are emotional, gregarious, spoiled, creative. . ." The authors, in the reflective maturity of their years, and from the stances of their multifarious adult pursuits and environments scattered over 10 states (four from Connecticut!) and two foreign countries, offer a delightful variety of styles and memories and values. And each, in his separate time, had come to the fount for only one-tenth of the total partaking that has been Dr. Althea Hunt's; and more lately that of Professor Howard Scammon's, an early student of hers (and author of one of the chapters) who now heads the expanded Theatre & Speech Department. Despite this refreshing, often sparkling, and always nostalgic but individualistic story telling, it all strings together like a matched set of pearls. The reason, no doubt, is Miss Hunt and the twig-bending contributions she made upon them, and me, and her legion of 3,000.

But enough of that, before I get into trouble. She has admonished me: "Please don't eulogize me!" And what Miss Hunt says, Miss Hunt means. What Miss Hunt tells you to do, you do.

Old friends and old memories are at the heart of this book. Yet it tells a very important history, too. The William & Mary Theatre rose almost at once to national stature and has continuously enlarged upon it. Bravely from its beginning, it not only ignored the inadequacies of the old Phi Beta Kappa Hall (handsomely replaced today, as the reward of fire), but had the naive courage to expand its activities beyond the confines of the campus, with extensive road trips, high school and community directing and producing, the Yorktown Sesqui-Centennial Pageant, radio shows, and just about any project that came along. Miss Hunt was not intimidated by Shakespeare so she did it and did it well, her able cast little noting that she was almost as new at this formidable task as they. Today these things are taken in routine stride by the Department. But through it all it is the people that have made the W&M Theatre vibrate and makes The Chronicle a memorable book to read and to keep.

In the engulfing 275-year traditions of the "olde colledge", the kaleidoscopic Chronicle actually embraces the latter 15% of that history, all well within the memory of many of us. Because we are Players still, we dare to be chronicled in our own time. It is not for the 3,000 of us alone, but for our friends and classmates, and for that sine qua non of any play—our brave audiences. SWS

President Paschall presents Dr. Guy a Medallion at Commencement.

PRESIDENT DAVIS Y. PASCHALL was named this spring to the 11-man Commission on Constitutional Revision, a group established by the General Assembly to draft changes in the state's 1902 Constitution for consideration by the voters in 1969.

Dr. Paschall was the only non-lawyer appointed to the Commission by Governor Mills E. Godwin Jr. Also on the Commission is U. S. District Judge Ted Dalton '24 of Radford, and former Gov. Colgate Darden Jr., onetime Chancellor of William and Mary.

Dr. William F. Swindler, professor of law at the College, was designated General Counsel to the Commission.

William and Mary's involvement in constitutional revision was followed by the appointments of two other members of the faculty to state study groups.

They were Thomas C. Atkeson, Chancellor professor of law and taxation (now emeritus), named to a group studying the future tax resource picture for Virginia, and Joseph Curtis, Dean of the law school, to a commission probing Virginia's conflict-of-interest law and studying possible need for revision.

Guy, Atkeson, Reboussin Retire

A century of teaching experience was lost this summer by the retirements of three longtime faculty, including the much-beloved and respected Dr. William H. Guy, Chancellor Professor and Head of the Department of Chemistry.

Retiring with Dr. Guy were Thomas C. Atkeson, Chancellor Professor of Law and Taxation, and Dr. Marcel Reboussin, professor of modern languages.

Dr. Guy completed 43 years on the William and Mary faculty this year. At Commencement exercises, President Paschall presented him with a 275th Anniversary Medallion in recognition of the principles and devotion which Dr. Guy represented. He is a past recipient of the Thomas Jefferson Award.

Atkeson had been on the faculty for 14 years, and prior to that was Deputy Director of the U. S. Internal Revenue Service. He established and carried on the nation's first Master of Law and Taxation degree program. Dr. Reboussin had been at William and Mary for 22 years, and entered retirement to conduct research and to write.

The Board of Visitors honored the three in resolutions adopted in June, giving them designations as professors emeriti.

Dr. William Guy, in role of marshal, leads his final Commencement Procession of seniors past the President's House this past June.

Sizeable Grant Aids Social Sciences

A grant of nearly a quarter million dollars from the National Science Foundation will support a three-year curriculum study and enrichment program in the social sciences. The grant will help provide faculty in five departments the time off to evaluate various aspects of their course offerings and resources, and to launch new innovations in their respective fields. The departments involved are government, sociology, anthropology, psychology and economics. The project, coordinated by Dr. John M. Willis Jr., Assistant Vice-president of the College, will begin this fall.

Hutcheson, Jennings Are Honorary Doctors

Retired U. S. District Judge Sterling Hutcheson of Boynton and John M. Jennings of Richmond, Director of the Virginia Historical Society, were awarded the honorary Doctor of Laws degree at this year's 275th Anniversary Commencement program.

Judge Hutcheson is a member of the Class of 1917 and a former Board of Visitors member who served as Rector for a term. Jennings is a 1938 alumnus who began his career on the staff of the William and Mary library.

Rep. Gerald R. Ford of Michigan, Minority Leader in the House of Representatives, was speaker for the Commencement program. The Rev. Walter Kennedy of Newport News, minister of the First Presbyterian Church there, delivered the Baccalaureate sermon.

More than 900 received their degrees in the traditional Wren Yard ceremony. Included were five who obtained the Ph.D. degree, first conferred in 1967 at William and Mary.

Christopher Newport To Go Four-Year

William and Mary's branch college in Newport News, Christopher Newport College, will achieve four-year, degree-granting status by the spring of 1971 under a program of escalation set in motion by the Board of Visitors.

The college currently is a two-year college, established in 1960. Richard Bland College in Petersburg, William and Mary's other branch, remains a two-year college at the present time.

Two former branches of William and Mary have become Virginia's first urban universities. Richmond Professional Institute this summer was merged with the Medical College of Virginia to become Virginia Commonwealth University. Old Dominion College in Norfolk voted to adopt the name Old Dominion University in 1969. Both branches were made independent in 1962.

Three Alumni Named to Board

Governor Godwin has appointed three alumni, two of whom were presidents of the Society of the Alumni, to the 17-member Board of Visitors. They are John C. Swanson '30 of Danville; Harry D. Wilkins '24 of Savage Neck and R. Harvey Chappell Jr. '48 of Richmond. The latter two served as presidents of the alumni organization. Also named to the Board was Willits H. Bowditch of Yorktown.

Walter G. Mason of Lynchburg was named Rector of the Board to succeed W. Brooks George '32 of Richmond, who was not eligible by law for reappointment. Ernest W. Goodrich '35 of Surry was named Vice-Rector and Frank W. Cox '24 of Virginia Beach was elected Secretary.

Government Head Studies NASA

Dr. James Roherty, head of the Government Department, is on a year's leave of absence to serve as special assistant to the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's administrator for university affairs. He will help develop graduate programs in public administration to educate administrators who can apply aerospace technology and management systems to urban problems.

He was one of a dozen senior political scientists chosen for a fellowship program by the Council on Graduate Education of the American Society for Public Administration.

Reorganization & Rights

Reflecting William and Mary's emergence as a university-level institution, the Board of Visitors this summer revamped the administrative structure to provide for additional key positions and to alleviate some of the growing burdens of the President's Office.

The Board abolished the four-year-old position of Dean of the College, and also its recently added subordinate post of Associate Dean of the College.

Instead, academic governance will be carried out by a Vice President, who is Dr. W. Melville Jones, longtime member of the English Department, former Dean of the Faculty and lately Dean of the College. Such areas as student affairs, the five separate Schools within the College as well as the main faculty, student aid and placement, institutional resources and other activities will be under the Vice President's charge.

The Board created two new positions of Assistant Vice President, under Dr. Jones. It appointed former Associate Dean of the College John H. Willis Jr. to one assistant vice-presidency, and John E. Donaldson, 30-year-old associate professor in the Marshall-Wythe School of Law to the other. They will divide various responsibilities.

The Vice President, the Bursar, the Alumni Secretary-Director of Development and Athletic Director now remain the only officials reporting directly to the President, compared to more than 20 when reorganization was begun in 1964.

A policy statement put into effect in September spelled out such rights as free speech, free press, peaceable assembly, and their accompanying responsibilities. Called "A Statement of Rights and Responsibilities," the document provides specific avenues of communication within the College community, and sets up a new Board of Student Affairs to help carry out the Statement's provisions.

Among provisions of the Statement are sections on equal access to admission and facilities without regard to race, color, creed or national origin; confidentiality of student records; the right to an orderly environment; the right of free inquiry, expression and peaceable expression; the right of a free student press and the means of student involvement in institutional life.

It assures that appropriate forums will be provided for legitimate meetings, but that groups shall not invite speakers under indictment or having been convicted of crimes involving moral turpitude. It provides for restricting attendance to "the College family" at meetings where presence of the public might promote disorder, and limits outdoor assemblies to the new campus area to avoid interfering with normal College operations. It requires adherence by student publications to the canons of ethical journalism but provides no advance external censorship of material in them.

The Board of Student Affairs will designate certain student leaders to meet from time to time with the Board of Visitors, an extension of student involvement in institutional affairs.

New record-keeping system, replacing standing card files, speeds up contact with 20,000 alumni around the globe.

Annual Fund Grows; Seeks $100,000 in '68

THE 275TH ANNIVERSARY of the College has brought with it a new concept in the William and Mary Annual Fund. As the needs of the College have increased and the growth of the Fund has made the impact of alumni giving of increasing importance the Alumni Office has revamped the total program of solicitation. Replacing the class agent system of one agent per approximately every 100 class members is a new program of Class Chairmen, with agents for approximately every 10 class members. It is felt that the closer contact each agent will have with a smaller group will result in contributing becoming a much more personal expression.

The goal for 1968 is $100,000 and an increase in contributors to 6,500, up from 4,000. As of July 1, the first quarter of the goal had been reached with the main effort yet to come.

The highly successful Anniversary Donor program of the 1967 campaign is being expanded into higher plateaus of giving. The significant increase in the '67 giving was due in large measure to this new innovation, based on the 125th Anniversary of the Alumni Society in 1967. There was an increase in contributors of 250, and an increase of approximately $25,000 in cash contributions.

The Annual Fund drive is being concentrated in the fall rather than its first appeals going out in the early spring and continuing through December. The new program is concentrating on major donors in the late spring with the canvassing of the entire alumni body to begin in September and working strongly through the fall terminating in December.

The Fund Committee is also preparing, in conjunction with the Alumni and Development Offices, a five-year plan of alumni giving to give direction and purpose to their efforts in support of the growth of the College.

The increase in giving evidenced in the 1967 Fund has afforded the Society the opportunity to establish up to five new faculty honorariums, by which the recipients will be known as Alumni Fellows. This is in addition to the grants for faculty research during the summer which have proved beneficial to faculty members so honored and to the College. Other uses of the monies received, in addition to maintaining the office and staff of the Society, are faculty salary supplements, undergraduate scholarships, faculty recruitment funds, partial support of the Queen's Guard, and assisting such events as the General Assembly reception, Burgesses Day, Homecoming and chapter functions.

Faculty Profile:

Quittmeyer's Career Comes Full Circle

By S. Dean Olson

THE CAREER of Charles L. Quittmeyer in one sense has come full circle at the College of William and Mary. He began as a student 30 years ago when he was inspired in his study of economics and business by Professor Charles Marsh, who later helped him secure a position with the government. Dr. Quittmeyer later returned to his alma mater at Dr. Marsh's invitation to join the business administration faculty. This fall he will be associated again with his former mentor when Dr. Marsh becomes a part-time lecturer in Dean Quittmeyer's School of Business Administration upon his retirement as president of Wofford College.

Dr. Quittmeyer likes to be where the action is, but sometimes the action comes in very heavy doses even for a busy man of his nature. This summer in his Bryan Hall office, for instance, he lamented the fact that five of his faculty had fallen by the wayside since spring with a variety of misfortunes ranging from overexhaustion to a double hernia.

If Dr. Quittmeyer had lost five faculty members six years ago when he returned to William and Mary for the second time to become head of the Department of Business Administration, he would have had virtually no faculty left. Then the Department of Business Administration had six on its faculty. Today the School of Business

Dean Quittmeyer views construction of new Mathematics-Computer Center classroom building, to house School of Business Administration next year.

Administration has nearly 20 full and part-time faculty, including two former college presidents, and the second largest graduate enrollment in Virginia.

It is probably no coincidence that the dramatic growth in business administration at William and Mary began with Dr. Quittmeyer's arrival in 1962. A Phi Beta Kappa who received his A. B. in economics in 1940 from William and Mary, Quittmeyer went on to an M.B.A. from Harvard's prestigious graduate business school and a Ph.D. from Columbia University plus a wide range of experience that included teaching at two other major universities.

Dr. Quittmeyer's practical education began shortly after his graduation from William and Mary. Dr. Marsh, who was heading up a transportation investigative unit with the government, asked him to come to Washington as a junior economist, a position Quittmeyer remained in until 1942 when he joined the Army. In the Army, he showed the same ability to get ahead, entering as a private and rising to captain and commander of an 110-man field artillery unit before his discharge in 1946.

After the Army, Quittmeyer entered Harvard for a year to pick up his masters degree and then went with a Hartford insurance company as a contract specialist. He left the insurance company after a year to accept an invitation from Dr. Marsh to return to William and Mary as an assistant professor of business administration.

Dr. Marsh continued to have a positive influence on his former student's career. He interested him in research on the travel and fishing industries in Virginia and the Chesapeake area, subjects on which Dr. Quittmeyer has since become a leading expert, and he helped Quittmeyer get a doctoral fellowship to Columbia's graduate school of business. Finishing up his course work over a two-year period, Dr. Quittmeyer returned to William and Mary in 1952. He remained until 1954 when he took a position with the University of Buffalo on the first step of a journey that would lead him back to his alma mater once again eight years later.

After three years at Buffalo, Dr. Quittmeyer went to the University of Virginia as an associate professor of commerce, but four years later he was lured away by an offer from the Technical Operations Corporation to serve as an operations analyst on a project to study Army strategy into the 1970s.

The work involved some of the best minds from a variety of disciplines including physics, mathematics, and psychology as well as business, who formed teams to analyze the Army's future.

"It was very interesting," Dr. Quittmeyer recalls, "to see the type of results you can get by using men of different minds and backgrounds." On one project, Dr. Quittmeyer worked with a mathematician-physicist to study how an Army unit of task force size could perform its mission and survive under both conventional and nuclear warfare conditions.

"Before long," he says, "we were working like one mind."

Like the rest of his varied experience, the techniques he learned there came in handy when Dr. Quittmeyer was selected a year later to head up the business administration department at William and Mary. With six faculty, the department had around 50 junior and senior concentrators, but both the changing economic conditions in Virginia, especially on the Peninsula, and the revitalization that had come to William and Mary under President Paschall's new leadership indicated that expansion was essential.

"The Peninsula was developing rapidly with the influx of industry," Dr. Quittmeyer recalls, "and there were scientists, military personnel, engineers and many others who wanted graduate courses in business. The leadership at the College was in sympathy with expansion. Dr. Paschall revved us all up to see how much we could do."

Dr. Quittmeyer mapped out the first of yearly-updated five-year prognostications on the business administration needs at the College. Besides an expanded faculty and curriculum, he set out to build as quickly as feasible a graduate program directed to the needs of the Peninsula.

Approved by the Council on Higher Education in 1966, the program became operational in June of that same year. Since it attracted a large number of part-time students, most of the classes were scheduled in the evening. By August, 1967, the first class of nine received M.B.A. degrees and by this fall the total number of graduates had risen to 40. Because the program draws students from all over the Peninsula, some of the courses are given at William and Mary's graduate center in Newport News, the Virginia Associated Research Center. Of the 20 courses offered this fall in the program, four are given in the afternoon and the rest in the evening.

The response to the program has been more than even the School of Business Administration can handle.

Due to resources, enrolment has had to be limited, but even so, by this fall the program had become the second largest in the state, next only to the University of Virginia in enrolment. William and Mary's application is now up for consideration before the American Association of College Schools of Business, the blue ribbon organization for business schools in the United States.

The success of the graduate program and the rapid increase in undergraduate enrolment, which had reached 180 concentrators by this fall compared to the 50 when Dr. Quittmeyer arrived, led to the elevation of the Department to a School of Business Administration earlier this year. Dr. Quittmeyer was the natural choice to serve as Dean.

In the new organization, Dr. Algin B. King serves as associate dean in charge of the undergraduate program

Levy's Fifth Season May Be Longest

MARV LEVY begins his fifth season this fall as coach of the William and Mary Indians, and from several indications it could well prove his longest.

With 16 of last year's 22 starters gone, the Indians face their roughest schedule since Levy came to William and Mary, and possibly the roughest in College history. All six conference foes are improved over last season when the Indians finished with a 2-2-1 record, and among the non-conference opponents are such perennial powers as Syracuse, Pittsburgh, and Ohio University, the favorite in the Mid-American Conference.

Levy, who believes the key to a winning team is balance, applies the same philosophy to an analysis of his team's prospects. Neither pessimistic nor optimistic, he just gives the facts, ma'am, and they can be neatly summarized in this fashion: "Can speed, enthusiasm, and height make up for inexperience?"

While the Indians will be dominated by sophomores this fall, a junior and three seniors will be relied on for the key punch. Jim Cavanaugh, a one-year letterman who led the nation in receptions for a while last year, will be a constant threat at split end. His opposite number is Ted Zychowski at tight end, a senior who was quarterback Dan Darragh's other key target last year.

Terry Morton and Jeff Lund, a pair of swift breakaway runners, will start at the halfback spots. Both are experienced seniors who are expected to provide the running balance to keep the defense off balance for Cavanaugh and Zychowski's pass receiving.

With Darragh's graduation to the professional Buffalo Bills, just who will throw those passes was a key question during early fall practice. Levy had four candidates for quarterback, all "adequate" passers with converted defensive halfback Jimmy Laycock having a slight edge on the basis of an outstanding spring game in which he completed four of four passes. The other candidates are sophomores Bubba Hooker and West Meeteer, an outstanding runner, and senior Ray Barger. Jack Dean, a 195-pound senior who saw service at end last year, will fill out the backfield at fullback.

Except for lettermen Ralph Beatty at tackle and Bill McKinnon at guard, the rest of the offensive line will have to be rebuilt from several promising sophomore candidates, Levy said.

Losses from last year's team were the heaviest on defense, however. Nearly irreplaceable will be linebacker Adin Brown, the All-Southern Conference selection who was drafted by the Denver Broncos. Levy has Dave Holland and Charlie Jackson, both lettermen, for that position.

Ward Ellis is back at one of the defensive ends, while Al Cheatam and Jon Bilbo, both non-lettermen, will try for the other one. Levy has some good talent up from the freshman squad trying for defensive tackle, also hard hit by graduation. Burt Waite, a letterman, will fill the mid-guard spot.

The secondary, where only one letterman—Jim Barton—is back, is a real source of concern, Levy says. While several sophomores show promise, there is not a lot of size available for that area of the defense.

With only 14 lettermen returning, the season outcome will depend heavily on what talent and savvy the sophomores show.

Levy says he views 1968 as a building year, and while he shows no undue pessimism, he noted early in the fall that, "We don't figure at this point to be as strong as last year."

Much could depend on one other factor, a welcome addition named Jim Daniel to the Indians. Daniel, who was out of school last year, is a kicking specialist with good distance and accuracy. And anyone who has witnessed such frustrating games as last year's tie with West Virginia can appreciate a well placed field goal.

Lost Shoe Costs Terry Donnelly Olympics Trial

William and Mary's top trackman

FOR WANT of a shoe the race was lost, but because of the shoe a place was won.

That was the strange case of William and Mary's Terry Donnelly who lost a shoe competing in the Olympic Trials at Los Angeles July 29. Donnelly was running in the pack in second place with six laps to go when another runner inadvertently stepped on Terry's foot while clearing a barrier and tore his shoe off.

Donnelly, the Southern Conference's premiere trackman for the last two years, finished the last six laps barefooted, maintained sixth position for four more laps, but painfully dropped to 11th at the finish, his feet blistered and his hopes dashed for making the Olympic team.

Any other year Donnelly would have been finished, but this Olympiad, the Committee is making sure that it picks the best possible team and has allowed upon appeal several runners with hardship cases to advance to the final trials at Lake Tahoe in September.

Donnelly immediately appealed to the committee backed up by the fact that he had run the fastest collegiate time in the nation (8:46.2 in the IC4-A) and was the top American finisher in the steeplechase in the NCAA Championship (Australian Kerry Pearce finished first).

Donnelly's case was heard and approved, sending the recent William and Mary graduate to Lake Tahoe for the chance to become one of three American representatives in the 3000-meter steeplechase.

Donnelly is a relative newcomer to the event. After placing fourth in the NCAA Indoor Mile, Terry confided that he was through running the mile, an event in which he was the Southern Conference record holder. "Those guys have too much speed," Terry said of Jim Ryun, Dave Patrick, et al.

During the outdoor season Terry ran the two mile, the 880 and a mile here and there without any spectacular times. Then, for his first steeplechase race of the year, he went to the Penn Relays and won the Championship of America in a new Penn Relays record time of 8:53.7. Donnelly then ran a 4:05.8 mile in placing second to freshman teammate Howell Michael in the Southern Conference Meet after breaking his own conference mark in the steeplechase with an easy 8:59.3 time.

Donnelly began to think of the Olympics seriously when he ran a sparkling 8:46.2 in the IC4-A to win and set a new record. The time was just a fraction off the Olympic qualifying time.

With a 12-man William and Mary contingent, Donnelly went to the USTFF meet in Houston, running the mile and then headed into the NCAA Meet hoping to bring William and Mary its first NCAA Track champion. Donnelly placed second to world record holder in the two mile, Australian Kerry Pearce of Texas at El Paso. By placing second Terry qualified for the Olympic trials at Los Angeles.

The lanky native of Arlington, Virginia has not always been a winner. Confused and disinterested in school work, Terry dropped out of Washington-Lee High School his sophomore year, went to New York to work, but quickly came back knowing he needed a better education. He started running track which gave him a new interest in school. He made good grades and his senior year, at the William and Mary track he won both the mile and the 880 in the Virginia High School Group I-A Championship. That caught Coach Harry Groves' attention and Donnelly was at William and Mary.

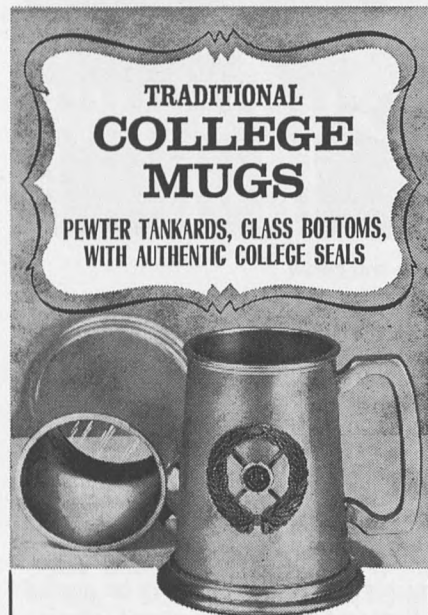

For two years Donnelly ran in the shadow of Jimmy Johnson, who set the pace for William and Mary's dominance of Southern Conference track. Then, his junior year with Johnson graduated, Donnelly came into his own, started breaking Johnson's records methodically and setting new standards for the Southern Conference.

Now Donnelly is one of 11 steeplechasers in the nation battling for an Olympic berth. The competition is the best, but Donnelly is by no means washed up if he doesn't make the team. The United States' best in the event is 31-year old George Young. Distance runners mature late and for 21-year old Terry Donnelly there are more Olympic trials, but right now Terry is intent on justifying the committee's faith in his appeal.

and acting head of the Department of Management. Dr. John Quinn is head of the Department of Accounting and Dr. George Cole, a newcomer to the faculty this fall, serves in the new position of Director of Conferences. Dr. Anthony Sancetta is in charge of the graduate program and Dr. Leland Traywick, who joined the College last fall after serving as president of Omaha University, is director of the Bureau of Business Research, which issues monthly indexes on the economic condition of the state and the Williamsburg area.

The faculty moved into the old Law School quarters in Bryan Hall last fall, but when the new mathematics and general classroom building is completed the School of Business Administration will occupy the third floor.

Dr. Quittmeyer has seen to it that the growth of business administration has done nothing to dehumanize William and Mary's traditional concern toward its students. He continually encourages informal get-togethers between students and faculty and other events such as bringing speakers to the campus for the students.

"Each of our students is an individual," Dean Quittmeyer says, "and each has his own beliefs, assumptions and mores. At this stage of their development they can be hurt instead of helped if they aren't supported in the correct way both as individuals and as groups."

For Dean Quittmeyer, all of the demands make for a busy day, but he still manages time for community work and for his family—Maureen, his wife, and their children Peter, David, Andrew, and Jane. As a boy he used to love to fish with his father and brother in the hilly country around Peeksville, N.Y. where he was born. "I don't get much time to do that anymore," Dean Quittmeyer says, but that reminds him of another fact in his background which may partly explain his success. His father was a high school principal with an A.B. from Wesleyan, an M.A., a Ph.D. and an LL.B. from Yale. His brother, who is a vice-president for the American Sugar Company, has a law degree and Dean Quittmeyer has the masters and Ph.D.

"That just about puts even with Dad," Dr. Quittmeyer smiles.

Congratulations, Al, we hope you'll come east this move so we can see you at Homecoming.

Congratulations also to Mrs. Jason T. Pate for her re-election as president for the Maryland Board of Education, of which she has been a member since her appointment by Gov. Tawes in 1959. Dinny, among her many honors, has been accepted as one of 50 participants in a two-week seminar in July in Management-Development, School of Business, Harvard University. Dinny's son, David, a graduate of American University is presently a teacher in the Harford County school system, and daughters, Kennon and Barbara, are senior and sophomore at William and Mary.

Tommy Della Torre, who has left the field of active coaching at Hackensack, New Jersey, High School for the past 22 years, was honored for his years of service at a dinner at the Neptune Inn on March 17. Tommy made a great contribution to the youth of the area and the impact of his leadership has been felt by students, parents and the entire community. Our congratulations to you too, Tommy, for your fine accomplishments!

Our weekend neighbor, Capt. John H. Garrett, will soon be leaving Virginia to take over his duties as Commanding Officer of the Electronics Supply Office Great Lakes, Illinois. We'll surely miss seeing Jack and Ann and all their family and look forward to his retirement and having them here permanently.

While in Richmond shopping one day recently we ran into Dr. Carney and Anne Cross Pearce and daughter, Susan, who is to celebrate. Saw Cec and Donald Griffin and Pat and Dot Harper. It was nice to think that alumni all over the country were gathering.

Their two youngest daughters are still at home—one in high school and the other in junior high. Thanks Peg for your note.

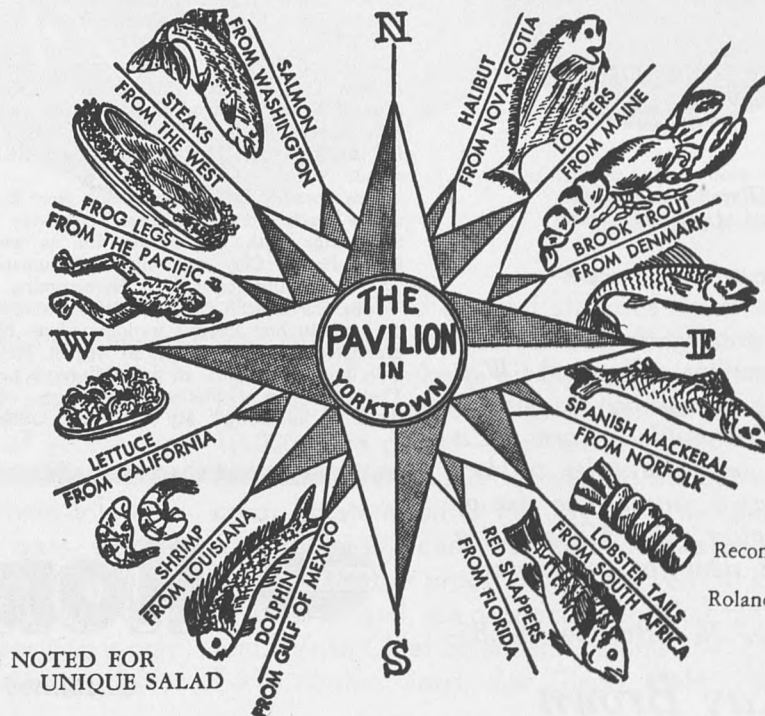

Dot Lindquist Swan sent an interesting letter which might be titled: "How to Get Your Daughter Married in Six Weeks When You Planned on Six Months." Karen discovered early in February that she would have enough credits to finish up in March rather than in June and decided to be married in the spring rather than during the summer as had been planned. Dot went into high gear and on March 23rd, a few days after Karen's last exam, she was married in a small, but lovely, wedding ceremony in Cleveland.

Mary Wilson Carver Sale wrote that Pittsburgh had fifty at the dinner she went to; she sat with Fran Smith Uhl and Dick, and Barbara Anderson Cook '42. She also saw Ginny Kerr Smith and Nancy Wescott Larson, '43. Mary Wilson's daughter will be a junior at the College. Her second will enter the U. of Delaware. Nell is an eleventh grader and she has a son in the seventh grade. Last summer they had a visit from Barbara Gray Macandray and Stewart from San Francisco. She had also run into Jean Handy Smith recently. She lives seven miles from Mary.

Have just this minute come from a luncheon that Jean Boyd McIntyre gave for Emily Snyder Alexander who is moving to Alexandria. Emily told us about a great Alpha Chi reunion in May in the D.C. area. This group has met every five years since graduation. Among those at Sally and Dyck Vermilye's old restored town house in Alexandria (and their husbands) were Edie Berhardt Thompson, Hazel Riggs, Emilia Garcia Carlson (from Plainfield), Pam Pauly Chinnis, Ailine Mims Traylor, Elie Rheuby Volonte from McLean and Jane Craig Beaver. Both Emily and Jane are married to Navy Captains. Ailine's husband is a General. It sounds like a great group, and I hope I left no one out.

Jeanne Fleur McQue Richardson's husband, a Navy Admiral is much in the news—heads 6th Fleet. They'll be living in Europe.

I read with interest Life's article on Dr. Denton Cooley, the surgeon who has done more heart transplants (six out of eight successful). He and Louise Thomas Cooley live in Houston with their five daughters. She looked great. I understand that Julie Rowan lives there also.

Another W&M husband in the news is Robert Drew Harrison, new President of Wanamaker's. Ebie Berkeley Harrison is from Norfolk.

Rolf and I had a ball last spring going to New York for lots of nice parties for King Olav of Norway. Mayor Lindsay and his wife gave a terrific dinner at the Brooklyn Museum. He gets my vote! Her family is from Richmond.

Lois Spratley Donald and Doug were here at the beach for three weeks. They were at Sandbridge with us on the 4th as were Gerry Healey Clay and Allen (Cincinnati). They're looking forward to Homecoming.

Jean Schoenwolf Preston briefed us today on her daughter Peggy's wedding plans. She graduated from the College in August. Merle will be a sophomore at the College, a new Theta. She's an orientation gal and guess who she'll be orienting? My daughter, Lesney.

We are really excited to think that she'll be at W&M. I do hope some of you are sending sons!

I saw Audrey and Bob Longacre at their son's graduation in June. Connie Curtis Laws and Pay and Rolf and I went up to see Mary Lou McGoodwin's daughter graduate, Portland was too far for her family to come again so soon.

Jean Preston recently sailed to Tides Inn and spent an evening with Dixon and Nancy Foster. Ruthie Weimer Tiller was visiting Jean last week. Will stay with us at Sandbridge for wedding.

Louise Spalding Hollis had a mother and W&M daughters luncheon the other day. She has one who graduated in June and a junior (Pi Phi). The gals had a good time teasing us about the "good old days"—and they were, weren't they?

The Gazette mailed me an interesting clipping about Erma Runals (Mrs. John) of Niagara Falls. She had addressed a Republican Woman's Forum on Urban Renewal. Erma graduated from Cornell Law School, is Executive Director of S.P.U.R. and has been a member of the Board of Education.

Sorry to read about the death of Arthur C. Livick. He transferred to W&M from Hampden-Sydney. In '53 he was selected second most outstanding young man in Virginia.

Went to New York recently and spent night in Wilmington with Dorie Wiprud Diggs. Talked to Fran Loesch Brunner in New Jersey. Her Susan will be at Mt. Vernon next year.

Had a call recently from Norfolk Airport. Joan and Max Griffith's gals enroute to Europe.

Got a clipping about Lt Col. Thomas Jefferson Stevens being awarded Bronze Star for outstanding duty in Vietnam. Saw Colonel Ben Reed and Fran at their daughter's graduation.

If you feel left out of this column, I haven't seen ya—or I haven't heard from you—get busy!

This 45-pound satellite
the face of the earth

*If you want to know where it is—a meter or a world away—
Cubic has the system!*

CUBIC'S SECOR, the surveying satellite developed for the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, keeps introducing changes in the cartographer's art. For example, the system places the Ryukyu Islands a half-mile southwest of where we thought they were. To make such discrete measurements, SECOR employs electronic trilateration. As the satellite makes its pass, signals bounce between its 7-pound transponder and 4 portable Cubic ground stations. When the data is correlated, one station, whose position is only generally known, is located with new precision.

Since 1964, the ground stations have leap-frogged across the Pacific toward Hawaii in the first part of a globe-girdling program. With each satellite pass, stations receive information from 10,000 data points—and tens of thousands of correlations are used for each distance measured. Trilateration is the key to a number of Cubic's significant systems developments. SECOR is more proof that if you want to know where it is—land, sea or space—Cubic has the system. creative stitchery, her newest interest.

The Quinto's have two children, David and Elizabeth. With Marilyn, they saw Yosemite and Sequoia in the camper, and all enjoyed a family vacation to the Grand Tetons. Mac says she spends most of her time on horseback, but is active in the Art Center, Heart Association, and Pi Beta Phi Advisory Board, along with the usual community things.

Louise Thomas Cooley is the wife of Dr. Denton Arthur Cooley, the Houston surgeon, now famous for his heart transplant operations. Time magazine, May 17, 1968 contains a good article about him and his work, and many other magazines and papers have covered his world famous operations.

Jean Clark Ford is working at the Southern Bank of Norfolk now that the children are grown. She and Virgil heard from Dr. Charles F. Marsh that he is retiring as president of Wofford College soon and will return to Williamsburg. (He will teach part-time in the School of Business (Administration).)

Lee Dorman, president of an automotive bolt and nut company in Cincinnati, took time to write of his recent visit to the campus with his wife, Ruth. Their oldest daughter, Lois, was in the class of 1968, and Lee mentioned the crowd of 7000 on the Wren Building lawn for the graduation ceremonies—far too many for Blow Gymnasium in case of rain. Their second daughter enters Sullins College this fall, and the youngest hopes to attend William and Mary after graduating from high school in two more years. Lee and Ruth promise to attend our coming 25th reunion.

We owe special thanks to Mary Jane Chamberlain Howard who has agreed to gather news of the Richmond area. She did a tremendous job for this issue. Mary Jane will be librarian at the new Elizabeth Holladay Elementary School in North Richmond when it opens for the 1968-69 session. The four Howard children are looking forward to another summer season of swim meets. The oldest son, Vaughan, Jr. has just completed his first year at Princeton and expects to try for a place on the Olympic Swim Team. The second son, Chris, attended Boys State at William and Mary in June and was selected for Boys Nation at Georgetown in July.

Rachel Lynn Jorgensen and family live in Doylestown, Pa. and drove over to Princeton to meet the Howards there for dinner one Saturday last February. The Jorgensens expect to vacation in New England.

William Harrison was transferred to Jacksonville, Florida from Richmond when Seaboard merged with the Atlantic Coast Line Railroad. He and his wife have a daughter, Susan.

Jane Atkinson continues her work as chemist in the clinical laboratory at Medical College of Virginia. In June, she purchased a new air-conditioned car and looked forward to the summer months.

Catsy Stump Grubbs and Charles have two children, a boy 13, and a girl 11. Catsy is a substitute teacher in Henrico County.

R. C. Williamson and wife Betsy have three sons. They drove their oldest, Rick, to Annapolis in June, after he received an appointment to the Naval Academy.

William H. Taliaferro, Jr. received his B.A. from Carson-Newman after World War II. He studied for a Bachelor of Divinity at Southern Baptist Seminary in Louisville and then received a Master of Education degree from the University of Virginia. He and his wife, Anne Black, a Westhampton graduate, work for the Henrico School Board.

Willie Anne Boschen Wright and her daughter went on a European Art Tour during the summer of 1967. The daughter is interested in following her mother's footsteps and hopes to study art. While Anne's son is in the Class of 1969 at Georgia Tech. At present, Willie Anne is working on a series of graphics.

Eleanor Harvey Rennie is working on her Master of Education degree at Virginia Commonwealth University, formerly R.P.I. She is a teacher at the Cerebral Palsy Center. The Rennie's have three children, the oldest a boy, who will apply to William and Mary for the Class of 1973.

April and was to marry her college sweetheart in Margery's home town, Bay City, Michigan, during the summer.

Matilda O'Brien Chamberlain and family will spend their vacation at their summer home in the Thousand Islands. They live in Syracuse where John works for General Electric. Their oldest child, Nora, will be ready for college in the fall of 1969.

Dr. Arthur Merrick Bushey left our class on Navy orders in 1943 for the University of North Carolina. Still a bachelor, Dr. Bushey makes his home with his parents in Baltimore, where he has acquired quite a name for himself because of his dentistry for physically handicapped and mentally retarded children. The Baltimore Evening Sun, February 28, 1968, included a page with story and pictures describing his work as director of the James Lawrence Kernan Hospital and Industrial School of Maryland for Crippled Children, Inc., and telling of how his dental clinic minimizes trauma for these children.

A nice letter from Mary Elizabeth Jones Price, also in Baltimore, brings us up to date on her family. Slizie was busy all spring designing and making costumes for the Friends School production of West Side Story. Her two older children were students there, and she had fun working with the boys and girls in production. Her daughter Betty graduated from Friends and will attend Randolph-Macon Women's College in the fall. Betty hopes to major in dance, having studied ballet for fifteen years. Tom at 17 is an Eagle Scout, brother Chris is also a Scout and father Tom is Chairman of the Troop Committee. Their youngest child is Diane, age five.

Slizie sometimes sees Doris Brandt Bauer, who lives nearby, and corresponds with Mary G. Jones Vliet, who has been ill and had several operations. She is reported to be getting better now. How about a personal report, Mary G.? Slizie writes that Mary Wilson Carver Sale has four children, one at William and Mary, and one to the University of Delaware. Midge Webster Hoffmeier with two children, lives in California.

Marion Lang Van Dam and Ted have their students home for the summer. Tom attends Franklin and Marshall College and Gregg, their second son goes to the Lawrenceville School. Their nephew, John, who makes his home with the Van Dams, graduated in June from Trinity College and will enter medical school this fall.

The Bloms will be visiting colleges this summer looking for a school of Home Economics for our daughter, Laurie, a high school senior. We hope our younger daughter, Ann, is our prospect for William and Mary. We will visit Abingdon as usual in August, and hope to gather lots of news for the Gazette while in Virginia.

A May visit to Washington, D.C. gave me an opportunity to talk to Nancy Grube Williams who was knee deep in interior decorating projects—furnishings for lawyer-husband Jim's new office, plus a big addition to their house. She impressed me with such terms as Chinese Chippendale fence railings for balconies, and the works. She sounded busy, good humored and all was progressing nicely.

Also had a fine chat with Manuel Toregrossa, who lives on the Virginia side and works for the Defense Intelligence Agency

His sixth child—a fine boy—had just arrived and all was well. Manuel belongs to our class even though he rushed through a bit and graduated in 1945.

Fred Frechette has enlarged his business operation. His Commonwealth Motion Pictures has merged with Jack Turner Photography to form Commonwealth Films, Inc., Richmond.

Polly Krotts Wright and Mel did the "in" things with our group, I bet—they attended their son Tom's high school graduation in Fresno, California.

More congratulations to Pam Pauly Chinnis for being elected to the Vestry of Epiphany Episcopal Church in Washington. This, along with being President of the Mortar Board Alumnae Club of Washington, promises to make next year an interesting one for her.

And to make your next edition more interesting for you, let me suggest you write in choice news items right away—otherwise I'll discuss Michigan weather, and then you will be sorry.

Something new has been added. You have a new secretary. Please stop right now and add my name and address to your Christmas card list. What better time to jot down news of yourself or your classmates as you hear from them!

It is always a pleasure to catch up with lost classmates. Elaine Miller (Rosenberg) writes that upon leaving William and Mary, she completed her degree at George Washington University in 1947 and married Jack Rosenberg. They live in Alexandria where Elaine is working with Jack in their real estate firm, Classic Realty Ltd. Elaine has three children, a son at the University of Tennessee, and a daughter and son at T.C. Williams High School in Alexandria.

Allen Sullivan wrote that he and his family attended the William and Mary-Massachusetts basketball game at Christmas in nearby Hartford, Conn. Allen lives in Fairfield, Conn. While there he had a chance to talk with Jim Hickey, who is the new athletic director for the University of Connecticut. Allen hopes to attend Homecoming.

Edith Horn has changed jobs. After 18½ years in the photographic division of the Navy's Bureau of Aeronautics, she is now in the industry liaison section of the Procurement Information Division of the Contracts group. She finds the work more interesting. Edie commutes to Washington from her home in Towson, Md.

Please, everybody, note that we have a new address and please take advantage of it. We will be moving into our new home as the Gazette goes to press. After waiting so long I can't believe that it will soon be a reality.

Had a long letter from Ruth Barnes Chalmers. She and Dave now live in Calgary, Alberta, Canada. Ruthie is very pleased over the move they had just purchased a house across from a park with a lake. Sounds great. Ruthie has become quite the golfer and seems to be winning trophies all over the place. Dave is President of Jefferson Lake Petrochemical, a subsidiary of Occidental Petroleum. I always have to stick in a plug for Oxy.

Hugh Haynie was awarded an honorary degree by the University of Louisville at its 170th Commencement, Sunday, June 9th. Hugh received an honorary Doctor of Humane Letters degree. He has been editorial cartoonist for the Louisville Courier-Journal since 1958, and his work is syndicated to 60 American newspapers by the Los Angeles Times Syndicate. Our congratulations to you, Hugh.

Now please some of you sit down and send me some news. Two pieces is not a very good showing. Let me hear from you and don't forget the new address.

Thanks to Bill Schroeder for his quick answer to my question in the last issue. If you remember, I asked what he did besides give awards because I had seen a picture of him presenting an award to a restaurant owner in a local newspaper. However, there was nothing in the article under the picture that told about Bill's occupation. So Bill wrote to me, and now I have some information to pass on to you. He is a partner in two restaurants in the Roanoke area (Lendy's) and has an interest in two more restaurants in Blacksburg and in Vinton, Va. He was presenting the award in his official capacity as Chairman of the Board of the Virginia Restaurant Association. He is the immediate past president of this state organization. He is married to the former Anne Marie Menefee '50, and they have three daughters: Debbie (13), Teri (11), and Karen (6). They have been living in Roanoke since 1958 when he and his partner, Jack Young, opened their first restaurant. Jack is married to the former Margaret Brewer '49. Before coming to Roanoke the Schroeders lived in Richmond for five years where he was with Dixie Container Corp. Before that he spent two years in the U. S. Army. He wants any of you who might be coming through Roanoke to please call or come by to see them. Their address is 4556 Royal Oaks Drive, Roanoke, Va. 24018.

Spring is the time of year for alumni to hear from the resident coach, and so it was with Vito Ragazzo, the V. M. I. football coach, who was in Richmond to speak to the Richmond V. M. I. alums in May. Vito was having trouble with his back which he had hurt several days before in Lynchburg when he was starting a round of golf. VMI went 6-4 last season, its first non-losing campaign in five years, and Vito was painting a bright picture to the alums because most of his team would be back. Again I have a picture and an article before me as I write this. I wish that I could share all of these pictures that I receive or clip with each of you. So many memories come flooding back when I look at them as I know they would with you.

Phoebe Martin Harcum, Rae, and their two children will be back in Williamsburg this year where Rae again will be on the faculty. He is one of ten men on the faculty to be chosen as Heritage Fellows. These men along with five Alumni Fellows who will be sponsored by the Society of the Alumni, were recommended by the respective Deans to be the first recipients of two special fellowship programs announced in February by Dr. Paschall at the College's 275th Anniversary Convocation.

In the last paragraph you read of one of the ways that the Society of the Alumni helps the College. I hope that you will remember this when you are asked to contribute to the William and Mary Fund in the fall. The College needs our support in this important time in its history, and I hope each of you will try to make a contribution. Our class has been responding so well, and I hope more of you will be heard from this year.

Nan Jones Hodges and three of her four boys visited us for an afternoon in July while they were here visiting her parents. She and I enjoyed a long chat while our children played and got acquainted. Her husband is a doctor and works for the Food and Drug Administration. For a change of pace as a busy mother she started this winter to serving as a guide each Friday in the air and space part of the Smithsonian Institute. They live in Alexandria. She had recently heard from Evie Carr Fortner. Her husband Robert, an Episcopal minister, teaches religion at Vassar College, and he was given a sabbatical which they spent in Jerusalem from August '67 until May '68. They have two children, Benjamin (6) and Ned (3).

I did some part-time teaching from January until the last of May at the local junior high school. For three weeks in June I took a William and Mary Extension course in Modern Grammar in Petersburg. This completes the six hours I needed to renew my teaching certificate. At the moment we are getting ready to leave for our vacation at Nags Head, N. C. We are having a busy summer as I know you are, too, but I hope that when school starts again and you have a free minute once more you will write me about you. I need to hear from you so that we will have news for the next issue.

Hello to everyone. I hope you each have an available air conditioner to help you through our hot summer weather! Let me hear soon about your vacations. Don't forget Homecoming on October 11, 12, 13. It's our 15th reunion so let's all plan on a fabulous fall weekend together in Williamsburg.

Jay and I enjoyed visiting with Jim and Barbara Schwartz Smith at our home this summer. Jim saw John Krog and "Hilly" Wilson recently and also added that Connie Carhart and her husband live near the Philadelphia area.

I have received further interesting information about John Flanagan and his recent promotion to Army Lieutenant Colonel. He recently completed an assignment with Headquarters MACV in Vietnam and now is attending the General Staff College at Ft. Leavenworth, Kan. In the Vietnamese campaign John has earned the following medals and citations: Vietnamese Medal of Honor, first class; National Defense Medal; Vietnam Service Medal; Army Commendation with three clusters and the Bronze Star Medal. John and his wife, Mollie, have four children. John's dad died this winter and was buried with full military honors. Congratulations, John, on your many accomplishments from your classmates at William and Mary!

A. Lowe Lunsford, III and Sue Journee, his wife and their two children moved during the summer to Johannesburg, South Africa. He is Sales Manager for Esso Africa.

(Editor's Note: The Alumni Gazette, as a matter of policy, does not publish obituary material simply because so many of our alumni are outstanding in their fields and we do not normally have the information to appropriately describe their contributions in detail. Allan C. Brownfeld is the author of the following tribute to F. J. Patrick Riley Jr., who was killed in a tragic automobile accident in July near Fort Eustis. His wife Anne Klare '66, her Class Secretary, was not seriously injured. Pat Riley was known by so many, as a student and later as a William and Mary teacher, that we would like to share Brownfeld's tribute with alumni.)

"For those who live it, life remains a perpetual mystery. We perceive bits and pieces of its meaning as we go along, but rarely do we appreciate its unity or any sense in which we partake with others of some small margin of the universal.

"The death of the young is always a time for mourning and for grave reflection. We lament those who have departed, but in the midst of our lament we ask ourselves what we have made of our own lives, and how we can do better with that part which remains.

"Pat, who was 32 and was married only a little more than a year ago, led a life which was as closely involved with William and Mary as anyone I know.

"Pat graduated in 1957 and his undergraduate years were hectic. He was a champion member of the debating team and his column in The Flat Hat was read by all, and was criticized by many. Though many disagreed with his conclusions, none doubted his sincerity and deep conviction. He was an active member of the Newman Club, and for many years seriously considered becoming a priest. But his religion was not cloistered and was in and of the world. He decided that his Christian vocation was best to be fulfilled in teaching and it was in this direction that his career turned.

"Pat taught for five years at Woodrow Wilson High School in his native Portsmouth, received his Master's Degree from William and Mary, and in 1962 joined the faculty of the College's school of education. He taught courses in philosophy and psychology of education and was known throughout Virginia. Students from colleges throughout the state flocked to Williamsburg each summer to take Pat's courses. "Here is one teacher of education who has something to say," was his students' reaction.

"And what Pat had to say was essentially a discussion of the nature of man as the Judeo-Christian tradition understands it. He rejected the materialism of the modern age, and persisted in believing that man was created in God's image, that children were people with immortal souls. If a teacher did not understand this, Pat believed, he should not be a teacher.

"This past year he served as principal of Lee Hall Elementary School in Newport News, and had just accepted a new position as Assistant Principal of Princess Anne High School in Virginia Beach. His career was only beginning, for he was just deciding what it was he wanted to do with his life.

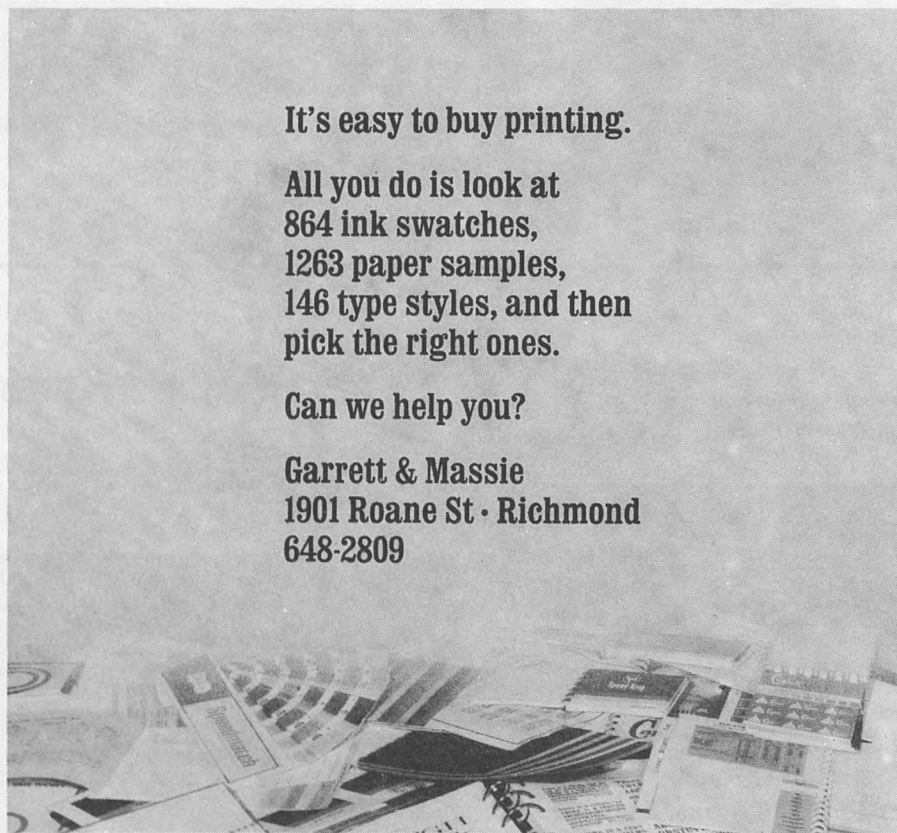

"It is, at this point, obvious that Pat was a dear and close friend of mine. His influence upon me was profound, and I know that his influence upon hundreds of William and Mary students was equally profound. He introduced me to the writings of G. K. Chesterton, and in remembering Pat Riley it would be helpful to recall one of his favorite passages from Chesterton's classic defense of religion, Orthodoxy. Discussing the advice he had received from older men when he was a boy, Chesterton noted that "They said that I should lose my ideals and begin to believe the methods of practical politicians. Now, I have not lost my ideals in the least; my faith in fundamentals is exactly what it always was. What I have lost is my old child-like faith in practical politics . . . No; the vision is always solid and reliable. It is the reality that is often a fraud."

Pat Riley never lost that vision. That he died at so young an age is our tragedy. He believed in eternal life and I trust that he shall find it. It is we who remain who must mourn our loss."

You are planning to be at homecoming, of course! Unfortunately I have very little news at this time. None of our classmates has written and my telephone sources have told me nothing. Do please come to homecoming. Give me lots of news.

Ned and I and our 2 boys visited with Margaret Mullins Ansty, her husband Dig and their 3 children, Martha 7, Charlie 5½, and Hugh 2 years at their vacation cottage on the Rappahannock for an over-night visit. She told me that Bobbie Ramsey Brooks is finishing her M.Ed. requirements from William and Mary.

The Andy Powell family is back in the U.S. from Brazil. Hope to give you more news in the next issue. The alumni office sent me this one piece of news as we were painting our family room and it was misplaced. Please forgive me.

Mount Hermon, Mass.

This is being written six days before the "big day" of my life—my marriage to Carroll Bailey. We have been in charge of the Social Program of the Mount Hermon and Northfield Schools for four years and decided we have done enough good works on blind dates for everyone else so would try it ourselves! We plan to study at Oxford this summer but will be at the above address after August 15th. If the following seems muddled, you might chalk it up to the best excuse I have ever had to be muddled!

Stephen and Margaret Topp are living in Aiken, S. C. where he is part of the advanced Operations Planning Group for Dupont's Savannah River Project and teaching Physics at night school at a branch of the University of S. C. Steve received his Ph.D. in Physics from the University of Virginia in January 1962. Their address is: 300 Deepree Place, S. W., Aiken, S. C. 29801

Tom '56 and Judy Crone Reel are in Leola, Pa., where Tom is a medical sales representative for the Ortho Pharmaceutical Corporation. He occasionally runs into Mike Richardson in the same company who has been promoted to a divisional manager in Memphis, Tennessee.

From Claymont, Delaware, comes word from Pat Foushee Jacobs whose husband is now with Dupont in Wilmington. They had enjoyed being in Greenville, N. C. where Pat received the award of Jay-C-Ette of the Year. They have two children, Michelle and Bradley.

Chiles T. A. Larson has joined the staff of Mason & Co., Inc. as director of public relations and advertising. The firm's headquarters is in Newport News.

Hopefully, in some serene summer moment, you can find time to jot a note. Though I do not always make deadlines on time, there is no need to try if you have not sent along a word.

Have a happy summer.

Joseph K. Alexander, Jr. '60, of Laurel, Md., is one of the major scientific experimenters for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's recently launched radio astronomy explorer (Explorer 38).

A physicist with the NASA Goodard Space Flight Center in Greenbelt, Md., he has both his B.S. and M.A. degrees from William and Mary. He is a member of the International Scientific Radio Union, the American Astronomical Society and the International Astronomical Union. Married to the former Diana Titolo of Westwood, N. J., he is the father of Kathryn Lynne, 4 and Stephen Joseph, 2.

In addition to being co-experimenter for Explorer 38, he manages a Jupiter monitoring network which keeps a 24-hour watch on the radio energy coming from Jupiter. He joined the Goddard staff in 1962 after serving as a physicist at the National Bureau of Standards.

Allan Brownfeld has been working as assistant to the research director of the House Republican Conference and has co-authored a little book of cartoons and commentary called "Obadiah, and The Decline of the Great Society."

Sue Whitlow Burgess, our neighbor, has retired from her Latin teaching at Tucker High School. Art, '60, is purchasing agent for E. R. Carpenter Co. Sue reports that Gail Dorset Washburn has been living in Richmond for about three years. Gail received her master's degree in the classics at the University of Washington in Seattle, where she met her husband Don. Their daughter is one year old.

Gordon Johnston has recently joined the law firm of Mitchell, Sharp and Mitchell in Vero Beach, Florida. After leaving William and Mary, Gordon was graduated from Florida State University and received a law degree from the University of Florida.

Since returning from France, Carolyn Washer Rubin has been working with the international exchange programs administered by the U. S. Office of Education. Her husband Matt is a training officer with VISTA.

Charles Jones, a vice president with Commercial and Savings Bank in Winchester, was chairman of this year's Apple Blossom Festival's Department of Public Entertainment. He and his wife Karen have two sons, Christopher and Cameron.

In May, Army Captain Stacy McMarlin received his third award of the Bronze Star Medal in Vietnam.

Charlie White has been awarded a master's degree from the Fletcher School of Law and Diplomacy at Tufts University. He is now serving at the Pentagon in the International Affairs Division of the Judge Advocate General's Corps.

Gay Whitlock will work on her Master's degree this year in Elementary Guidance at the University of Miami in Coral Gables, Fla. She is a recipient of a National Defense Education Act Fellowship.

Let's hope that you all hear lots of news at Homecoming and pass it on to me for our column.

Marcia Hoffman was married on May 4 to Joseph E. Bures of Flushing, N. Y., an attorney for Screen Actors Guild. On their honeymoon Marcia and Joe arrived in Paris in time for the demonstrations but managed to get out before the more serious riots began. Marcia writes that Erik Howell is doing a running part on "The Guiding Light" soap opera. Look for Marcia on TV these days; she is doing TV and radio commercials with some success. I'm sorry she didn't mention the specific ones.

Sandy (Morrissey) Roberts and Kenny were married in Sept. 1962 after his graduation and settled in Newport News where he was employed by the shipyard. They subsequently bought a house and in 1965 Kenny took a job with a local real estate firm. In July 1967 through the W&M Placement Office, he obtained a job with Chubb & Sons, Inc. in the surety bonding field, which necessitated a move to New York City for the training program. The Roberts are now living in Evanston, two blocks from Lake Michigan, and plan to remain there for three to five years before being transferred again. Their son Greg is now 2½ years old.

Fran McCampbell Ring writes that Stewart's tour (Navy) at the Pentagon ended in July and they will be in Norfolk for five months while he attends the Armed Forces Staff College. In January 1969 they are looking forward to returning to California for 2-3 years. Fran gave diving lessons this summer at their pool to encourage some youngsters to become interested in competitive diving.

Ann and Wilbur "Otis" Johnson are still at Guilford College in Greensboro, N. C. where Wilbur is in his fifth year of coaching football. In recruiting talent for Guilford, Wilbur sees various alumni: John Graveley in Norfolk and Dan Armour in Richmond, both with Mason & Co.; T. W. Alley at Randolph Macon where he coaches and Arnie and Ronnie Jones in Northern Virginia; Tom Secules in Annandale. Wilbur saw Calvin Cox in New York while attending the National Coaches Convention. Calvin was in brokerage training school. Betty Bowman Urich and Chick and their son live in Sterling, and Gayle Oahey Hancock and Tony live in Birmingham, Mich. Richard and Eliza Grey Wright have a son and daughter and a new house in Abingdon. If anyone has word of Sandra Dixon and E. J. Bowen, please let Ann know (4 Dana House, Guilford College, Greensboro, N. C.).

Kitty Canady Farrin wrote that she was married last August 26 to Lt. George Farrin, '63 USNA. In June George was on the nuclear attack submarine, Scorpion, when it was lost at sea. I am sure the members of our class join me in offering condolences to Kitty. She plans to move to San Diego and go back to school. Kitty writes that Liz Tiedeman Wright is now in Denver where Dennis is doing his internship at Fitzsimmons Army Hospital. Becky Hamner, Hartley Campbell and Jane Pierpoint are still working in D. C. Jan and Charlotte Savage Grey are at Ft. Knox, Ky. Ruth Temple Billmeyer and Jim are living in Norfolk.

In October Ann Harvey married Charlie Yonkers, an attorney with Sellers, Cannan and Cuneo in D. C., a firm which specializes in Government contract and administrative law. Ann is working for Resource Management Corporation where she is presently participating in an analysis of the national impact of the war on poverty. Ann and Charlie planned a canoe trip in Ontario, Canada, in July with Ann's sister Laurette, '65, and Maureen Culliton, '61, and her husband Jim. Maureen and Jim just returned from 18 months in Calcutta, India. Laurette is teaching junior high in San Diego.

Ann writes that Jackie Murphy, who is still at IBM has added to her travels with a trip to Jamaica and a trip to Europe, all within 6 weeks! Recently, Ann and Charlie visited Don and Marilyn Sternes Keat in Philadelphia. Marilyn is expecting her second child in the fall and already "has one energetic and fascinating child named Preston." Val Simms completed 2 years teaching government at Bishop College, Dallas, Tex. in June. She spent the summer in Boston developing a second-year curriculum for educationally deprived college students. In the fall she will join the faculty of the Federal City College in Washington, D. C., and begin work on her dissertation as part of the Ph.D. program at Georgetown Univ.

Judy Murdock Snook writes that her husband, Don, '61, has begun work toward his Ph.D. in history and philosophy of science (concentrating on medicine) at the University of Pennsylvania. He will attend school part-time and continue as Assistant Director at Jefferson Hospital.

Jim Gudinas recently received the Bronze Star Medal in ceremonies near Pleiku, Vietnam for meritorious service in ground operations against hostile forces. Karen is living in Alexandria.

David Lloyd Jones received his Master of Business Administration degree from The American University in June.

My husband, John, '61, was called back into the active reserves in April and we spent the summer at Ft. Benning while his unit was re-organized and trained. He will be going to Vietnam in September. Our son, Michael, and I will continue to live in Greenville, while making frequent trips to McLean to see our families.

It has been a joy to hear from and about so many of you. It seems that the summer proved to be productive as well as enjoyable for most of us.

It was a pleasure to hear from Carol Evans Tetu now in Darmstadt, Germany, where Bob is flying for the V Corps Artillery. Carol has been indulging in a German conversation course, the Heinerfest, as well as sightseeing to nearby Heidelberg.

Upon return from Viet Nam last April, Joey Krider Delano and Kent are back in San Diego where Kent awaits release from the service this fall. Carol also writes that Shauneen Cruise Hutchinson and Bill are in Hartford, Connecticut, where Bill is in the Army Reserve and working for Neighborhood Legal Services; Shauneen is teaching high school English.

Carolyn Muddiman Patterson writes that husband Abe was graduated in June from the University of Virginia School of Medicine. This fall he begins his internship in Pediatrics at the University of North Carolina Memorial Hospital. Carolyn plans to do private home tutoring of deaf and hard-of-hearing students, as she did in Charlottesville.

Beverly Ritchel Bach writes from Fairfax where she and husband, Bruce, have lived for a year upon his completion of law school in Richmond; Bruce is Assistant Commonwealth Attorney in Fairfax. Beverly is also proud to announce the birth of their first child on April 28, F. Bruce Bach, Jr., or alias "Butch."

Ed Watters writes of his wife, Comly, and himself, who both returned from a two-month stay in Liberia where Ed was taking a special elective course toward his M.D. While in Liberia, he ran into Ethelyn Abbott Owens whose husband is in the Peace Corps there. Ed received his M.D. degree in June from George Washington University. He is now interning in Pittsburgh and Comly is teaching school.

Lee Orr writes of completing his M.B.A. from Cornell Graduate School of Business last spring. He is now a technical sales representative with the American Cyanomid Company and is living in Bound Brook, New Jersey.

CYMBALS

HARMONY IS important, regardless of its application. It is necessary in music, in color, in personal and business relations. At the Williamsburg Shop, we believe in harmony of style, but we also believe that the well-dressed person stands out, like the sound of the cymbal stands out in an overture. If you always remember that your clothes never stop talking about you, we know you'll dress right, and that we'll be welcoming you to our many departments on a steady basis. And, we'll help you select some "cymbals" of clothing harmony that will make you stand out, whatever the occasion.

The summertime, much to my disappointment, brought little news of the Class of 1966. I was happy, however, to hear from some of you, and hope that the rest of you will take the time, if possible, to let us know what you are doing.

Kathleen Carr received a Master of Arts degree from the Fletcher School of Law and Diplomacy, Tufts University, in June.

Larry Walk spent the summer working for the Head Start program at Williamsburg-James City County's Norge Elementary School. He is now teaching fifth grade at Norge.

Jerry Johnson completed Air Force Officer Training School in February, and was commissioned a second lieutenant. He is stationed at Keesler Air Force Base, Mississippi, where he is doing further study in electronic communications.

Fletcher Cooke is living in Washington, D. C., where he is working for the Department of the Navy. Also in the Washington area are Charles and Faye Allen Joy. Charles is studying at the Virginia Theological Seminary in Alexandria, while Faye is teaching in Loudon County.

Robert Kennedy is now a First Lieutenant in the Army, and is stationed at Fort Meade, Maryland.

Patricia Williams is currently a Lecturer in the English Department of La Trobe University at Bundoora, Australia. Pat had continued her studies at the University of Virginia after graduation from William and Mary, and received her Master of Arts degree in English in August, 1967. Although she finds life very different in Australia, Pat is enjoying herself there a great deal.

Karen Cottrell Schoenenberger is a guidance counselor at Thorpe Junior High School in Hampton, Virginia, and is living in Williamsburg while her husband Mike ('65) is stationed in Viet Nam.

Mary Sherman Taube writes that she is living in Gainesville, Florida, where both she and her husband, John, are working toward advanced degrees in physics. Also in Gainesville is Cricket Stoneburner Garies, who is working toward a master's degree in psychology while her husband Joel is a student in Broadcasting.

Cathy Quirk and Marie Fridenstine are at the University of Arizona where each is in the second year of her graduate program, Cathy in history, and Marie in sociology.

John and Dorothy Hutton Tudor spent the first half of the summer visiting John's relatives in England. John spent the rest of the summer attending summer school at William and Mary, where he is working on his Master of Education degree.

Martin Shelton and Robert Tomes received their Doctor of Law degrees from William and Mary in June. At the same commencement, Paul Bennett, Bill Humphreys, Dave Kern, John McCarthy, and Larry Walk received their Master of Education degrees, as I did.

I hope all of you are enjoying your new status as graduates.

As those of you who came to class meetings knew, we had $1,000 to buy a gift for the College. The final decision was reached after exams. Bruce Oliver and his committee, using the class survey to aid them, decided to give $100 to the Martin Luther King Scholarship and $800 to the College Wide Reading Program. Previously $100 was also given to the Student Association for their mimeograph machine.

As of this writing, I have not heard from very many of you but here is what I've heard:

Happily married couples now include Carol Schofer and Kenny Farino, '67, who are now living in Kansas; Robin Wood and Sheldon Mann (U. Va.) who are residing in Alexandria; Mary Yeager and Ben Hubbard; Jane Marsella and Bob Drake; and Olivian Boggs and Jimmy Boone (Princeton).

Gaye Minton and Martha Goodwin are social workers in White Plains, N. Y. They have an apartment in Briarcliff Manor. Working as an editorial associate for the American Motors Magazine is our star journalist, Debby Duel. She is rooming with Glenda Dameron who is teaching third grade at Bucknell Elementary School in Alexandria.

Teaching Sixth Grade at Greenaire Elementary School in Fairfax is Sandy Abitt. Sookie Alvis also has a teaching position in Fairfax.

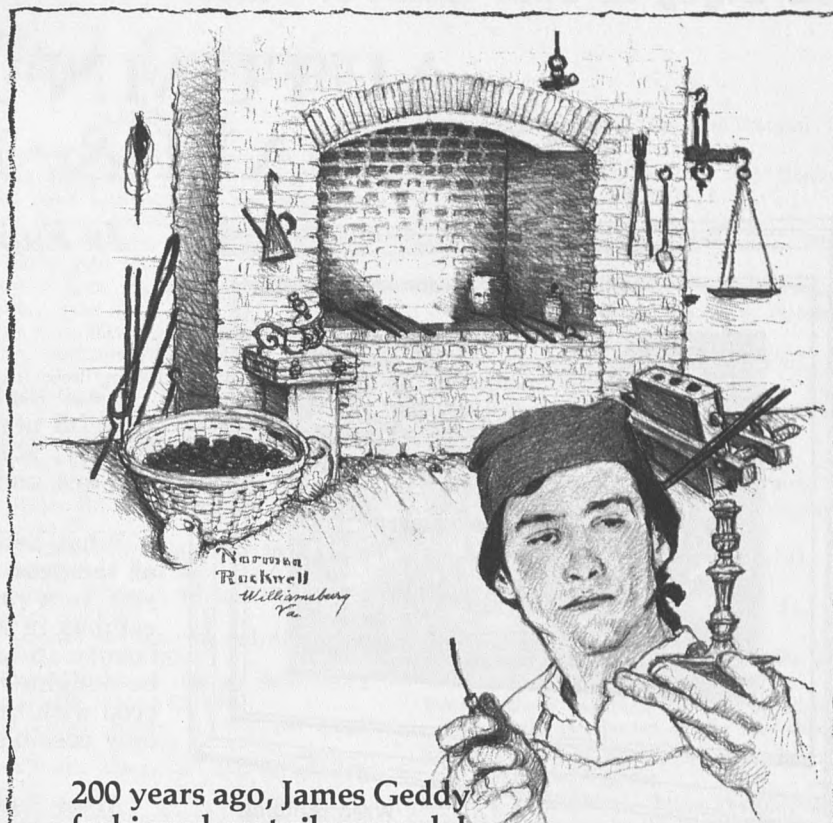

Gretchen Barney and Juana Cottingham are computer programmers for General Electric in Roanoke.

Suzanne Snedegar is working in Hubert Humphrey's office.

Robert T. Wandrei is now associated with du Val Radford in the practice of law in Bedford.

In Princeton, N. J. Sue Scruggs worked for the Educational Testing Service. She married Doug Woodman (Washington and Jefferson College) who is a Physics graduate student at the College. They are living at 630B Prince George Street in Williamsburg.

As for myself, I am working for IBM up in Poughkeepsie, N. Y. If any of you are ever up in that area, please stop by and see me. Also, please write so I'll have some information for this column.

200 years ago, James Geddy fashioned neat silver work here. Just as we do today.

James Geddy lived and worked in a two-story house on the edge of Palace Green, a little removed from the center of activity in Williamsburg.

So he wooed customers with resourceful salesmanship. "The walk may be thought rather an amusement than a fatigue," he advertised in The Virginia Gazette.

And his customers must have been amused, for they came to Geddy for teaspoons and tongs, spurs and shoe buckles, buttons and brooches and brandy warmers.

The handsome Geddy house is one of four original eighteenth-century buildings recently added to our exhibition program.

Come see how a colonial silversmith lived, and watch artisans work just as they did 200 years ago.

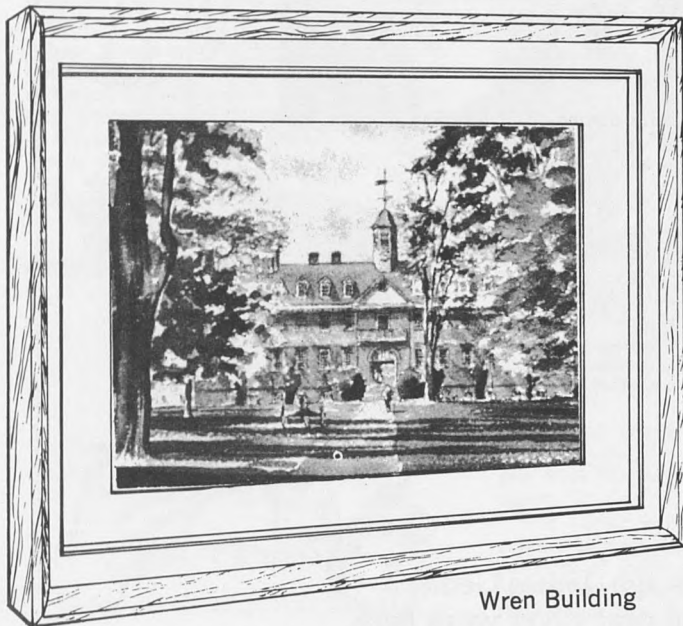

We think you'll still find it rather an amusement.

In Superb Sparkling Watercolors

by Peter Sawyer

Yes! Right now you can enjoy an exciting and colorful new idea in decorating your family room, library, student's room, office—A gift to delight the eye and stir the spirit!

What better time . . . the most nostalgic season of the year . . . to treat yourself, or someone near you, to a rare gift that recalls the splendor of the campus in all its brilliance . . . so universal in its beauty and appeal that even friends of alumni will be delighted to own these paintings expertly rendered with the unmatched spontaneity and freshness only possible with watercolors.

Artist Peter Sawyer was chosen to do the series because of his unusually fine, free technique which has won him national recognition as an award-winning watercolorist. He has captured in these paintings the very essence of William and Mary

Each full-color scene, measuring 11" x 14", matted, is individually rendered (NOT a printed reproduction) on the finest watercolor paper.

The very low price of $3.50 for each painting matted and ready for framing (only $12.50 if ordered in sets of four) is possible only as an introductory offer of the College Watercolor Group, a gathering of expert watercolorists who seek to create the widest possible appreciation for the medium of watercolors — and to introduce you, reacquaint you, or renew your delight in the marvelous, spontaneous, and refreshing world of watercolors.

For your convenience, you can also order these distinctive paintings framed with glass in handsome, hand-crafted frames of grey-brown wood with inset of soft-toned grey linen, delicately highlighted with inner border of gold trim, to add dignity and beauty to any decor and color scheme. These are available for an additional $4.00 per painting, shipping and handling charges included.

So at a fraction of the actual value of this rare set, we make this initial offer—with full money-back return privileges. For a perfect gift to yourself—to alumni and friends alike—FOR IMMEDIATE DELIVERY, RETURN THE NO-OBLIGATION COUPON TODAY.

An addition of distinction to any decor
