Comments: Of names, clovers and 'Doc' Billups

THAT BUILDING: Last summer, the Board of Visitors changed the names of two of the campus's older buildings, Marshall-Wythe and the Old Library. The former library, now occupied by the Marshall-Wythe Law School, was given the appropriate name of Marshall-Wythe. The old Marshall-Wythe (partly used as an administrative headquarters) was renamed James Blair Hall, in honor of the founding President of William and Mary. The Board realized that it had never honored the Rev. Mr. Blair. In the future this building will be remodeled as the administrative headquarters on campus, so it can appropriately be named after the first president.

Naturally, the process of shifting one building's name to another was not without its confusion. To save perplexing faculty and students at registration time this fall, the name-change was delayed until October 15. About 500 students, inspired by a Flat Hat editorial, held a spirited outdoor rally at just before midnight October 14, calling attention to the magic moment of 12:01 a.m. the next day, when the new names legally applied.

Despite this attention, the Flat Hat concluded that most students will probably refer to the newly-named James Blair Hall as "that building across from Blow Gym."

'TIP-TOE THROUGH:' A love letter to Williamsburg published in Fletcher Cox's new Virginia-based magazine Emphasis serves as a reminder of how many have come to William and Mary from outside this section of the state, and have decided to settle in Williamsburg after graduation. Some 600 alumni reside in the immediate "Old Capital" area!

The "love letter" accompanied an article in Emphasis by Will Molineux '56, a New Jersey native who now is manager of the Williamsburg bureau of the Newport News Daily Press. Will was quoted as saying, "Where else can you watch the king and queen of Thailand picking four leaf clovers in their bare feet . . . and see the President of the United States lectured to in church?"

Frequently, interesting items and worthwhile news of both campus and alumni are lost in the shuffle of magazine production. These short notes henceforth will appear in "Comments:" on this page, and we invite contributions to this special feature. The contents listing now appears on opposite page.

AULD LANG SYNE: Another alumnus who settled in Williamsburg and now is chairman of the Board of the Peninsula Bank and Trust Co., Robert A. Duncan '24, is doing his best to add more color and pageantry to this historic community. Duncan, a man proud of his Scots ancestry, has organized a Saint Andrew's Society of Williamsburg, a sociable and charitable group which encourages its members to wear the kilt, to take up bagpiping and Scottish dancing, and to study Scottish culture. Among other alumni who helped form the group, of which Duncan is charter president, are Duncan Cocke '32 and Thomas C. McCaskey '36. Several faculty and students also have affiliated.

NEW PRIORITY?: Those students who held placards during the visit to William and Mary of former Vice President Richard M. Nixon (see story elsewhere in this issue), earned kudos from newsmen and columnists who were weary of reporting on hecklers and obscene posters in vogue at other campaign stops.

Wrote the Chicago Tribune's columnist Willard Edwards: "An early morning fog shrouded the nation's oldest academic building, in Williamsburg, Va., where Nixon spoke. Huddled in the haze, when Nixon arrived at the 273-year-old Christopher Wren Building of the College of William and Mary, was the usual knot of students, waving hostile placards, which have become an inseparable feature of this Presidential campaign in 1968.

"These demonstrators were different—they were well behaved. Their cards bore messages witty rather than vulgar. They did not shout or heckle . . . when one of their number started to chant an anti-war cry, a roar of 'Quiet!' silenced him. As an exercise in courteous dissent, it demanded admiration."

THE 'OLD MAN': A national wire service carried a photo of President Paschall presenting Mr. Nixon with a medallion in recognition of the Anniversary of the College, and which has been given to distinguished visitors and others.

One major city newspaper's caption concluded: "Presentation of the medallion, struck to commemorate the 275th anniversary of the college, was made by Dr. Davis Y. Paschall, its founder."

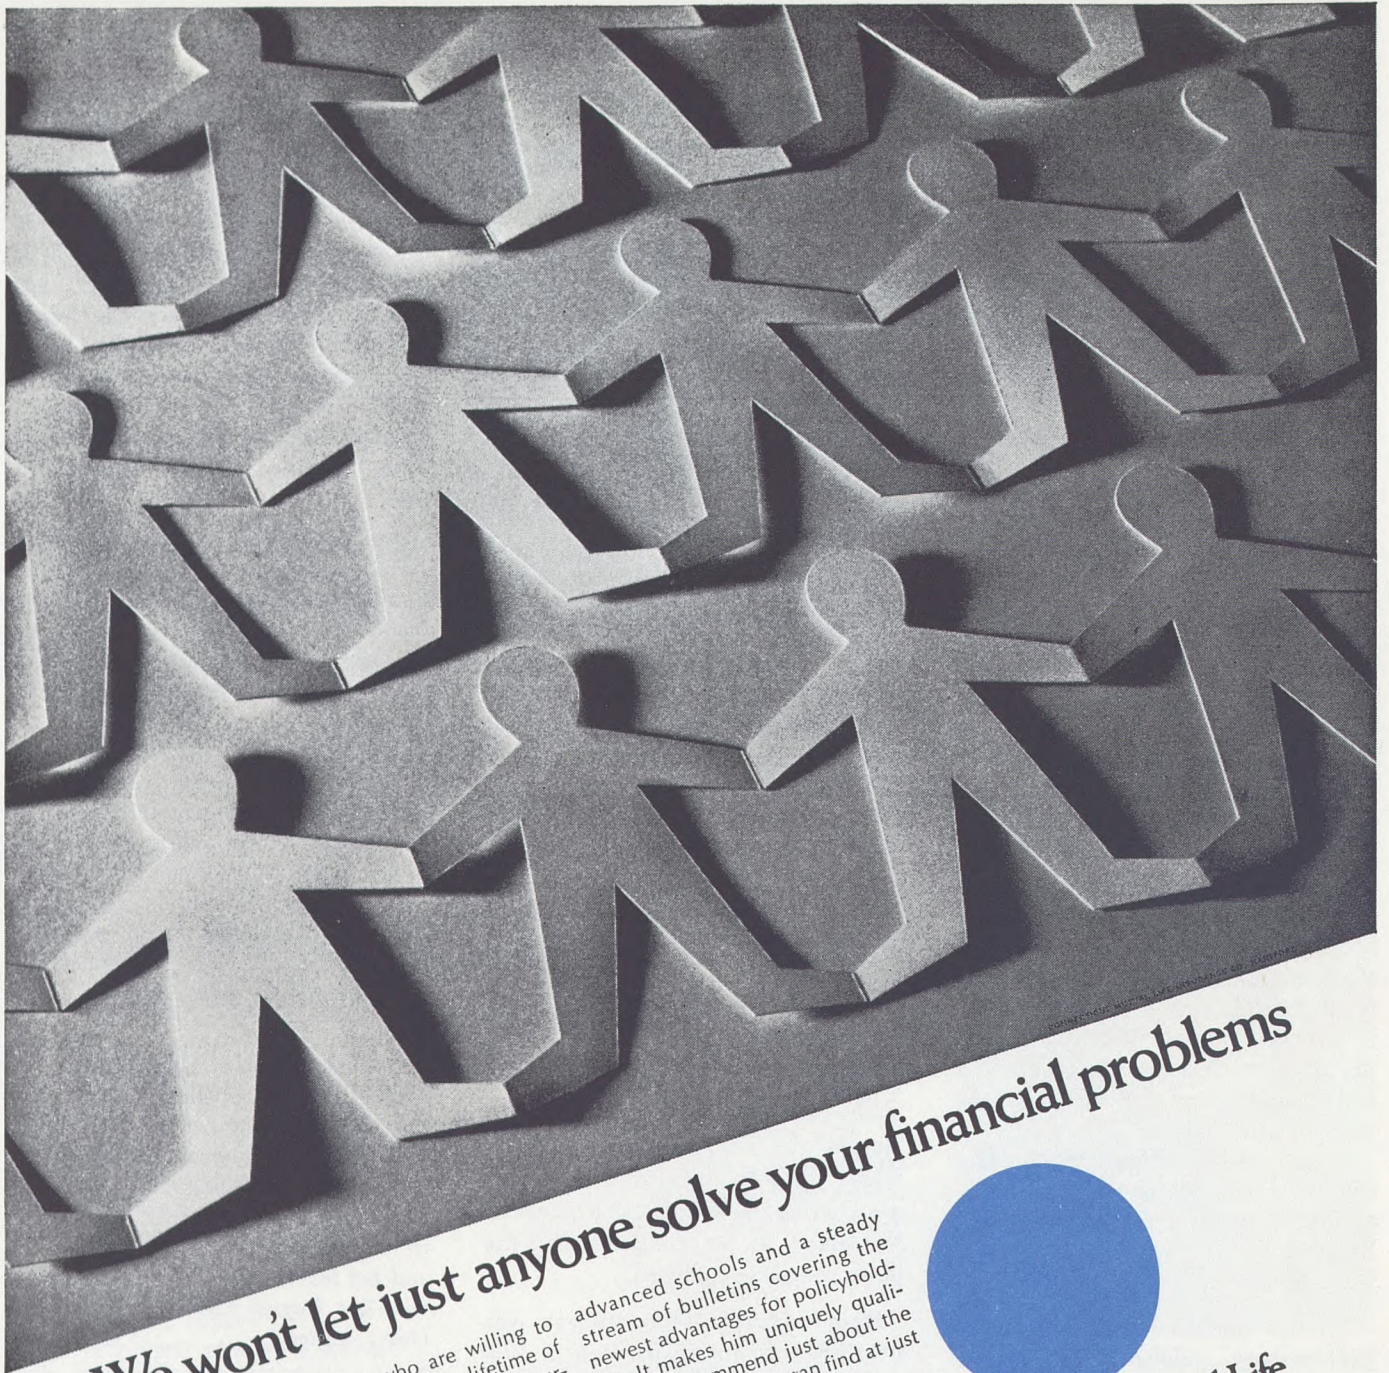

Dr. Paschall showed a copy of the clipping to members of a committee to which he belongs, and remarked this gave him "seniority over all of you."

PROUD ALUMNA: Patricia Amole Megale '58 of Freeport, N. Y., reports that four members of her immediate family have earned six degrees from William and Mary. Her mother is Mary Raleigh Amole '33; her husband is Joseph L. Megale '53 (M.Ed. '58); and her brother is Roger L. Amole '64, who last August also earned his J. D. (law) degree.

'DOC' BILLUPS: Mrs. Ramon Guy Hutchison (formerly Alyse F. Tyler) is making a collection of the "words of wisdom," advice and anecdotes of the late beloved "Doc" Henry Billups, the longtime mentor of the Wren Building, along with campus humor pertaining to students and faculty. She'd like to have recollections of alumni, who may address her at 4902 Sulky Drive #204, Carriage Hill Apartments, Richmond, Va. 23228.

SMALL WORLD: Two department heads at William and Mary. Dr. James Roherty of government and Dr. Kenneth L. Bick of geology, came by separate paths to Williamsburg from the same midwestern small city, Janesville, Wisconsin.

Law School:

New Building, But Applicants Crush Facilities

Marshall

Wythe

*At last, the students have a building to
call their own*

THE BUST OF George Wythe, the legendary 18th century law professor, in the lobby of the Law School at the College of William and Mary has a bemused expression that might be described as sadly pensive or benevolently contemplative. The expression draws various interpretations, but one professor probably best sums up the feeling of the Law School faculty when he says: "He has probably just learned of our latest annual appropriation."

To men in a hurry to get things done, annual appropriations are rarely sufficient to carry out the progress they envision, and the Marshall-Wythe School of Law buzzes with the sounds of progressive minds. And while the Law School may not have as yet reached the heights they—or the bust of George Wythe—envision, it seems well on its way to becoming one of the better law schools in the nation.

This year, for example, enrollment was approximately 200, four times the number that were enrolled only a decade ago. While quantity is no indication of quality, it is noteworthy that the Law School accepted last year only one of every seven applicants, evidence that Marshall-Wythe is one of the more difficult schools in the nation to get into.

Actually, Marshall-Wythe would rather have accepted double the number of students that were finally admitted. "We could have taken twice as many students," says one professor, "with no sacrifice in quality—the applicants were that good."

This is the other side of the coin. Despite major gains in both facilities and faculty, the Law School is still unable to satisfy the demands made upon it for enrollment. In the fall of 1967, the Law School moved from the dingy quarters of Bryan Hall to the old library which had been vacated when Earl Gregg Swem Library was constructed. The building had been undergoing renovation since 1966, and by Fall, 1967 the front half had been completed, providing new quarters for the law school library, faculty offices and two classrooms. The second phase of the renovation will provide additional classrooms, a moot court, and offices for the Law Review and Student Bar Association. When this is finished, the Law School once more will be able to teach all of its classes under one roof.

This is progress by anyone's standards, but it is still not fast enough to

*The law school faculty poses on the lobby steps of their new building. Foreground, from left: Arthur W. Phelps, Associate Dean James P. Whyte, Dean Joseph Curtis, Dr. William F. keep up with the demand for enrollment into Marshall-Wythe. As one professor notes, "We are practically out of the building before we move into it." The new facilities are adequate for the current enrollment of 200, but the Law School cannot increase above that level until even more facilities are found, and most of the faculty agree, "It is a shame to have to turn down all of those fine applicants."

Actually, in one form or another, the Marshall-Wythe School of Law has been "out of the building" for some time now. In 1967, as one example, the Law School began its Exeter program of summer law studies abroad, the first of its kind in America. Students from law schools across the nation can enroll for the summer session at William and Mary, which teaches the program in England in cooperation with the University of Exeter. The credits, in turn, are transferred back to the home law schools of the students and applied toward their degrees. The program enables the students the opportunity of studying in the Mother Country of common law, and has grown so popular that enrollment has virtually doubled in the two years it has been held.

The Exeter program grew out of an exchange of professors between Exeter and William and Mary during the 1966-67 academic year, when Dominik Lasok of Exeter came to William and Mary and Arthur Phelps of Marshall-Wythe went to Exeter. In effect, says one professor, "We just followed Professor Lasok back to Exeter."

In other ways, too, the Marshall-Wythe School of Law has been making its presence felt beyond its borders. The William and Mary Law Review, now published quarterly, has grown from a humble mimeographed internal publication to a 1200-page printed document subscribed to by more than a thousand other American law schools and individuals. Authors contributing to the Review have included such renowned legal minds as Chief Justice of the United States Earl Warren and Judge Philip Jessup of the World Court.

The Law School has become a virtual partner with Federal Publications, Inc., of Washington, D. C., in conducting semi-annual conferences on government contracts. The William and Mary coordinator is Dr. William F. Swindler, who has conducted the conferences for the east for the past three years. Originally an annual conference, they have now been scheduled twice a year in Williamsburg and include subcontracting as well. Federal Publications has been so pleased with the arrangement that they have asked William and Mary to co-sponsor its western conference in Phoenix this year and another government contracts conference at Cape Kennedy.

The Law School has been equally active in attracting top legal minds to William and Mary. Last year, the Law School established the annual G. B. Sherwell Lectures, which are funded by a gift from Mrs. Maria Sherwell Baumert of Garden City, New York, whose family occupied the George Wythe House in Williamsburg during the 19th century. The lectureship brings to campus distinguished legal minds for a discussion of contemporary developments in the law. William T. Gossett, the President of the American Bar Association, was the 1968 speaker.

The Law School also awards periodically the Marshall-Wythe Medal to a leading judiciary or legal figure who has made a contribution of national significance. Last year's recipient was Roger Traynor, the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of California.

While building its reputation exter-

nally, the Law School is making strides in strengthening its internal structure. In one of the key areas, the law library, Marshall-Wythe now has the second largest law school library in Virginia, behind only the University of Virginia. Only a few years ago it lagged in last place. With 50,000 volumes—double the number of 10 years ago—the library is now described as “adequate,” but one professor says, “We need a major infusion of funds to make it a truly great library.”

In faculty, too, the Law School is making advances. There are now 10 full-time faculty and three part-time, and the school has been adding new faculty at the rate of one a year. The current faculty is distinguished by professors such as Dr. Thomas C. Atkeson, who established the highly successful graduate program in law and taxation, and prolific writers such as Dr. Swindler. Dr. Swindler’s 1965 book on the Magna Carta was adopted by the Lawyer’s Literary Club. His new two-volume work, “Court and Constitution in the 20th Century,” will be published in 1969, and has been selected for the same honor by the club.

The faculty are also involved in practicing aspects of the law they teach. Swindler, who teaches constitutional law, serves as general counsel to the Virginia Constitutional Revision Commission. James P. Whyte, Jr., associate dean of the Law School, is a specialist in labor arbitration who is called on frequently as a consultant. He is also serving on the Constitutional Revision Commission, as a special counsel to the sub-committee on the bill of rights.

Professor Atkeson is a member of the Virginia commission to study revenue resources, and the Dean of the Law School, Joseph Curtis, is on the commission which is studying conflict of interest in Virginia government.

Established in 1779 when Thomas Jefferson appointed George Wythe to the chair of law and police, the Law School was the first in America. One of Wythe’s early students was John Marshall, third Chief Justice of the United States, whose name, along with Wythe’s, has been given to the law school. Altogether, four justices of the Supreme Court studied at William and Mary including Philip Pendleton Barbour, John Blair, and Bushrod Washington, George Washington’s nephew who served with Marshall on the Court.

From 1779 until 1862, when it was shut down by the Civil War, the Law School operated with a total of six professors, including St. George Tucker, who edited Blackstone’s commentaries on the laws of England.

The Law School reopened in 1922 when it was named after Marshall and Wythe. Until World War II, enrollment remained in the neighborhood of a hundred students annually, but it dropped to around 50 during the War and didn’t begin to recover again until the middle ’50s. From 1927, the professor who formed the nucleus of the faculty was Dudley Woodbridge, now Professor Emeritus, who served as Dean until 1964 when Joseph Curtis succeeded him upon his retirement. Dean Woodbridge’s reputation as a teacher became statewide, and today his “Virginia Barnotes” are still compulsory reading for all Virginia law graduates preparing for the state bar examination.

Enrollment began to increase sharply about 1958. From 1958 until 1963, the number of students doubled, and from ’63 until 1968 it doubled again, reflecting the “baby boom” of the ’40s which was beginning to show up in the nation’s graduate schools. In 1963, the College began to look around for better facilities for the Law School, and selected the old library for renovation. By last year, the Law School had more than 500 applicants for the freshman class, but only 70 could be accepted.

That is probably one reason for the sadly pensive look on George Wythe’s face. When more funds can be found for even larger facilities and an increased faculty so all qualified applicants can be accepted, George Wythe’s bemused expression may become one of nodding approval.

Scene from 1967 Choir Telecast

FOR THE FOURTH year, viewers in a number of cities will be treated to a Christmas telecast by the William and Mary Choir. For the first time, the program—videotaped in the Wren Yard—will be in full color.

The Alumni Office will again attempt to alert alumni in areas where the telecast is scheduled—and last year, well over half of the nation's population was in these areas.

So far, these stations have planned to use the half-hour show: WVEC-TV in Hampton, Va. (which produces and originates the program); WTVR in Richmond, Va.; WDBJ-TV in Roanoke, Va.; WSVB-TV in Harrisonburg, Va.; WTOP-TV in Washington; WSOC-TV, Charlotte, N. C.; WSIX-TV, Nashville, Tenn.; WSAV-TV, Savannah, Ga.; WVUE-TV, New Orleans, La.; WGBH-TV, Boston, Mass.; WICU-TV, Erie, Pa.; WJW-TV, Cleveland, Ohio; WLWI-TV, Indianapolis, Ind.; WGN-TV, Chicago, Ill.; WTCN-TV, Minneapolis, Minn.; KLRN-TV, Austin, Tex.; and KCOP-TV, Los Angeles, Calif.

Also, WPIX-TV, New York; KERA-TV, Dallas, Texas; and WAKR-TV, Akron, Ohio; WQED-TV, Pittsburgh, Pa.; WFIL-TV, Philadelphia; WHAS-TV, Louisville, Ky.; and KPTV, Portland, Ore.

It's expected that the program will be shown on a number of other stations, many of which were considering its use at the time the Alumni Gazette went to press.

Leading Authors Schedule Lectures

The new College-wide Program of Readings and Lectures will attract to campus the authors of three of the five books chosen under the 1968-69 theme of "Man at the Mercy of Himself."

The program, which got under way this Fall during freshman orientation, is designed to stimulate "the life of the mind and to promote inter-disciplinary thinking among members of the College community," according to Dr. J. Scott Donaldson, assistant professor of English and director of the program. A number of alumni who returned for Homecoming took part in seminars based on the program.

The authors are Joseph Heller, author of "Catch-22," who will visit February 20-21, 1969; Glenn Gray, author of "The Warriors on March 25-27, 1969; and Michael Harrington, author of "The Other America," who will visit April 9-10, 1969.

They will discuss their work with students, faculty and others in the College community who are taking part in the program.

B. F. Skinner, author of "Science and Human Behavior," will be out of the country but will possibly be represented by one of his several "disciples," or "Skinnerians," as they are known. Senator J. William Fulbright, author of "The Arrogance of Power," said he could make no commitments until after this fall's campaign for reelection.

The innovative College-wide program also involved a film series. A series of Swedish director Ingmar Bergman's "religious trilogy," were shown and discussed. The films were "Through a Glass Darkly," "Winter Light," and "The Silence."

The committee which developed the program includes three students, six faculty, an administrator and a campus minister. Financial support is from a variety of sources, including contributions from sororities and fraternities on campus.

"Mountain Chicken" Research Continues

A William and Mary scientist has begun the second phase of a study of one of the largest frogs in the world, found only on the tiny British West Indies island of Dominica.

Dr. Garnett T. Brooks Jr., a biologist and ecologist at William and Mary, is conducting the project which is part of a four-year biological survey of Dominica undertaken by the Smithsonian Institution. The Archbold Foundation and the Bredin Foundation are providing financial backing. The latter foundation is that of J. Bruce Bredin '36.

Known as the Crapaud, the frog Dr. Brooks is studying weighs up to three pounds and is known as "mountain chicken" to the islanders because it lives in the mountains and tastes like chicken. A highly edible individual, the Crapaud provides one of the few sources of protein for the 60,000 Dominica inhabitants.

In the first phase of the study, Dr. Brooks surveyed the overall life history of the Crapaud, determining its food habits, reproductive cycle, and distribution on the island.

The second phase will consist of a population study in which he will determine the Crapaud's movements, growth rate, breeding behavior, density and survival rate, and the spacing of individual frogs within a population.

Dr. Brooks will conduct the study by marking of high density population areas with numbered stakes, catching and marking the frogs for future recognition, and observing their future positions, size and general behavior at subsequent captures.

While the purpose of the study is primarily scientific, the information gathered may lead to an economic boost for the tiny Caribbean island.

John T. Archbold, president of the Archbold Foundation and a plantation holder on Dominica from Upperville, Va., foresees the possibility of farming the frogs commercially for export to the United States.

If the experiment were successful, Dr. Brooks noted, it will halt the approaching extinction of the Crapaud, which is rapidly disappearing from Dominica because of its high edibility. During World War II when it was difficult to ship meat to Dominica, island inhabitants made heavy demands on the Crapaud and nearly eradicated them, a trend which has continued to the present day.

Once abundant on the island, the Crapaud today probably numbers no more than 50,000, Dr. Brooks said.

New Appointments In Staff, Faculty

New chairmen have been named for the Departments of Chemistry and Modern Languages, President Davis Y. Paschall has a new Administrative Assistant, and there is a new Director of the Summer Session.

Dr. S. Y. Tyree Jr., professor of chemistry since 1966 when he joined the faculty after 20 years at the University of North Carolina, succeeds

G. R. Brooks compares ordinary, Dominican frogs

Dr. William Guy, professor emeritus, as head of the Chemistry Department.

Dr. J. Worth Banner, professor of modern languages and a member of the faculty since 1949, was named head of the Modern Languages Department to succeed Dr. Pierre Oustinoff, who now is devoting full time to teaching. Last year, Dr. Banner served as acting head of the department while Dr. Oustinoff was on a leave of absence.

In the President's Office, S. Dean Olson, formerly News Director and a regular writer for the Alumni Gazette, has become Administrative Assistant to the President. Olson joined the College in 1967 after teaching journalism and assisting in public relations at the University of Alaska. Mrs. Barbara Ball, wife of the English Department's Dr. Donald Ball, a veteran of 10 years of news writing experience, became an Information Officer in Olson's place.

Dr. Paul N. Clem, professor of education, was appointed Director of the Summer Session, which now is a part of the School of Continuing Studies. He succeeds Dr. D. J. Herrmann, now Dean of the School. E. Leon Looney, former Director of Extension, is now associate Dean of the School of Continuing Studies, in charge of both Extension and Evening College programs.

Anglo-American Series Outstanding

A three-day Symposium on Anglo-American Relations Oct. 8-10, brought to the campus of the College of William and Mary, internationally known experts in the field of Anglo-American affairs who explored the ties between the two countries on a chronological basis from the past to the present and with a look into the future.

The Symposium was part of the 275th Anniversary celebration at the College and was planned by Assistant Vice President J. H. Willis, Jr.

Prof. Henry Steele Commager of the faculties of Amherst and Columbia University opened the Symposium with an address on the past and present. Paul Scott Rankin, formerly with the British Embassy in Washington, served as moderator for a panel of British and American newsmen who discussed "The Influence of the News Media on Anglo-American Relations."

Members of the panel were Joseph C. Harsch, news commentator for NBC-TV in Washington; Peter Lisagor, Chief of the Chicago Daily News Washington Bureau; Leonard Miall, BBC representative in the United States; and Louis Heren, Chief Correspondent United States and Associate Foreign Editor of the London Times.

The final session of the Symposium featured Drew Middleton of the New York Times, who spoke on the future of Anglo-American relations.

Bar President Was Shernell Lecturer

William T. Gossett of Detroit, president of the American Bar Association, delivered the second annual G. B. Shernell Lecture, sponsored by the Marshall-Wythe School of Law. His lecture was on "In the Keeping of Lawyers," based on a phrase used by the late Justice Felix Frankfurter.

Whitaker Elected Auditors' President

Floyd Whitaker, internal auditor at the College of William and Mary for nine years, has been elected president of the Association of College and University auditors, an international group representing the college auditing field.

Election took place at the organization's convention at the University of Iowa.

Nixon Visit Recalls Spirit Of U.S. History

FORMER Vice President Richard M. Nixon chose William and Mary for one of his few campaign visits to a college campus, as his front-running effort to become the next President moved into high gear.

Mr. Nixon spoke October 2 as the guest of the College Young Republican Club to a select audience of about 150 in the Wren Great Hall. It was an address which, it was said, was geared largely to the television audience, with about ten TV cameras aimed at him.

From a platform in front of the Great Hall's fireplace, beneath the huge portrait of Queen Ann, Mr. Nixon said he was pausing briefly in the election campaign to "examine our past for some keys to our future."

He said that America's history has shown that "the American spirit" reappeared time after time in moments of national crisis and change. Today, he asserted, "I believe that the American spirit is reappearing now to demand the return of . . . personal freedom." He defined personal freedom as "room to turn around in life . . . the right to grow in your own way, to learn what is not yet being taught; it is both the right to privacy and the right to participate . . . not a license to disrupt, but a liberty to dissent; not a duty to destroy, but an obligation to challenge."

He was introduced to the audience by Robert Irvin '69 of Atlanta, president of the Young GOP. President Davis Y. Paschall presented Mr. Nixon with a medallion commemorating the College's 275th Anniversary, while Mrs. Nixon looked on.

The Nixon visit also called for a private video-taped conversation in the historic Blue Room, with student leaders representing four universities which have been the scene of student disruptions. The conversation was scheduled to be televised at a later time at campaign expense.

Mr. Nixon, in referring to William and Mary's place as the second oldest college in America, joked that he would rather not get into any arguments over which institution came first—because the last time he debated with a Harvard man, he lost, a reference to the 1960 campaign against John F. Kennedy.

Mr. Nixon provoked some criticism from students when he chose not to address about 1,200 who gathered in front of the Wren Building after his Great Hall address. About 50 supporters of Vice President Humphrey had lofted placards near the Wren steps, and aides to Mr. Nixon evidently felt the scene would embarrass their candidate. The Humphrey supporters later quietly attempted to confront Mr. Nixon as he returned to the Wren Building for the video-taping session, but he moved cheerfully through the group and, after the taping, left by a different door.

The one-day visit to Williamsburg, and an appearance that same night in Norfolk, were Mr. Nixon's only direct campaign activities in Virginia.

President Paschall, in cooperating with the Young GOP in permitting the visit, said that the College would react similarly to requests from recognized student organizations on behalf of other Presidential candidates. ❁

Dr. David Clay Jenkins

Faculty Profile:

David Jenkins, Puppeteer and Welsh Scholar

By S. Dean Olson

A COUPLE of decades ago David Clay Jenkins received a Fulbright Scholarship to study contemporary Welsh poets at the University of Wales. He left Wales for America again two years later, the master of puppets as well as Welsh writers.

His interest in puppets evolved quite by accident. Jenkins was wandering one day along the beach of Cardigan Bay near the town of Aberystwyth when he noticed a crowd gathered around a man with a puppet show. Punch and Judy would cudgel and slap each other, and each time a boat would come into shore, the puppeteer, whose name was Humo, would change the routine.

"It was an excellent example of improvised theatre," Jenkins says. "I became so fascinated that I returned regularly and by the time I left for America again I had memorized the whole routine."

Dr. Jenkins is a professor of English at the College of William and Mary, but, as the story illustrates, his interests extend far beyond that particular discipline. He is an authority on the 'illegitimate' theatre of 18th century London. In Williamsburg, he plays the recorder with a group known as the "Ill Winds." He has at various times studied Chinese, Welsh, and Spanish, and during a stay in Mexico one summer he learned about free-hand drawing and helped edit a magazine. At William and Mary he began the Foreign Film Society and a series of improvised Christmastime plays performed annually by students in the Wren kitchen. After sleuthing the work of a suspected forger, he has become something of an expert on handwriting. He doesn't say so, but judging from his inquisitive nature Jenkins probably knows something about the sea since he quite often goes to Europe by coal freighter.

Dr. Jenkins finds all of these interests useful in his teaching. "You understand drama and literature better when you go into these sideroads," he says. "You learn about all sorts of things—cities, popular tastes, history, people. I am a teacher. My job is to teach freshmen, sophomores, juniors, and seniors, and you sometimes need all of your interests and diversions to maintain their attention."

Jenkins has occasionally found other rewards in his variety of interests. After he returned from his Fulbright studies, he earned a masters degree at the University of Alabama and then went to the University of Iowa for his Ph.D. At Iowa he studied in Paul Engle's prestigious Writer's Workshop under poet Robert Lowell. Like most graduate students, he was strapped for finances so he picked up extra money by performing his puppet show in parks and for school children.

Jenkins began researching the world of puppets and marionettes in 1953. "Information is lacking on the subject," he says, "because scholars have skipped this art, since they seem to believe it is really beside the point. I disagree, however. I think it is one of the last forms of improvised theatre."

Arriving at William and Mary in 1956, he began delving into the history of puppetry in Williamsburg in the 18th century. This eventually led to a monograph which he wrote for Colonial Williamsburg. The gentry of that period, the study indicates, apparently had an appreciation of the art since George Washington used to enjoy marionette shows performed by Peter Gardiner in a theatre on the Duke of Gloucester Street. Gardiner's puppets were about four feet tall and were operated by wires. His interest in puppets has taken Dr. Jenkins to London on occasion to study the 'illegitimate' theatre which evolved after all but two legitimate theaters were closed by a licensing act passed by Parliament in 1737. Among those thrown out of work by the act was Charlotte Charke, an employee of dramatist Henry Fielding who turned to novels, among them Tom Jones, after the licensing act temporarily sidelined him as well. To get around the new law, Charlotte Charke began a marionette show, borrowing generously from Fielding's plays. She performed in a small, off-beat place known as the James Street Theatre, and she and other members of the 'illegitimate' stage perfected their craft to such a degree during this period that it hit its apogee among sophisticated Londoners.

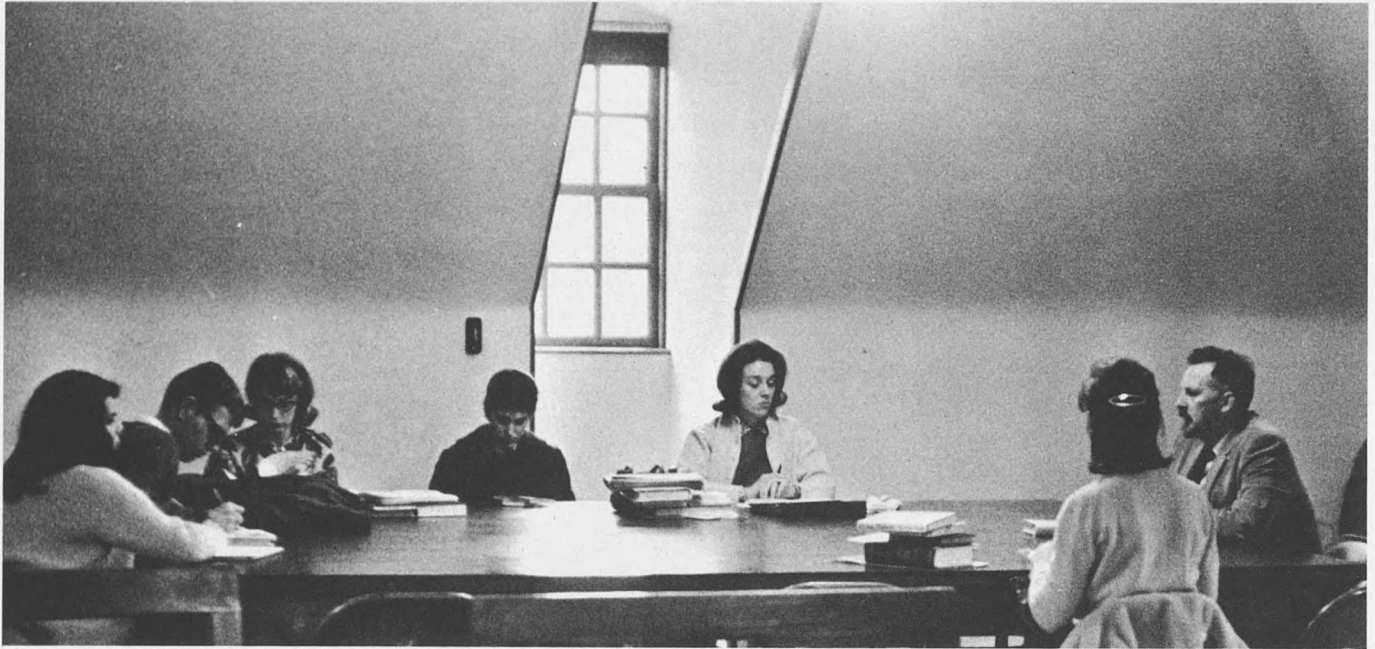

Dr. Jenkins has thoroughly researched the era of Charlotte Charke. He has learned about her repertory, and he believes he has located the site of the James Street Theatre in London. He has also fairly well determined the physical structure of the Theatre. As an interesting sidelight, he notes, the north side of London, where the theater was located, was destroyed by a fire which started in a bawdy house. Ironically, today the area still retains much of its ribald flavor.

Jenkins' idea of a good time is to go to the library and do research, which may partly account for the quantity of information he has gathered on so many different topics. His major work is on Dylan Thomas, the volatile Welsh poet who died in America in 1953. Jenkins has been expanding research connected with his doctoral thesis with emphasis on that period of Thomas's life from 1934 until his death.

Typically, Jenkins' study goes beyond what might be considered the boundaries of routine research. Thomas won fame primarily as a poet and short story author, but he also wrote and produced a number of documentaries during the 1940s. Jenkins has managed to gather together good prints of these documentaries, and they are being shown at William and Mary this year—the first time they have been shown in America. Jenkins is also studying some feature length motion picture scripts which Thomas wrote, but which were never produced.

Another of his interests is Gorony Owen, the great Welsh poet who was a master of humanity and master of grammar at William and Mary from 1758-60. Owen, whose work has gone comparatively unnoticed beside the other great 18th century William and Mary luminaries, died in 1769, and was buried in Lawrenceville, Va. Partly due to Jenkins' efforts, the College will honor Owen on the 200th anniversary of his death by bringing to William and Mary a prominent Welsh author to speak on the occasion.

For a number of years, Jenkins has studied the work of John Payne Collier, a Shakespeare scholar who has long been suspected of forging manuscripts attributed to Alexander Pope.

In a study he titles "Flies in Amber," Jenkins believes he has finally pinned two forgeries on Collier, who, he says, "wanted to avoid being forgotten when he was dead."

Jenkins spent two years in the Army as an occupation soldier in Europe, and then entered the University of Alabama where he received his bachelors degree before embarking for Wales in the first group of students to study under the Fulbright plan. He spent two years at the College of Aberystwyth of the University of Wales. Wales since has become something of a second home, and he visits that country each time he returns to Europe. Since 1949 he has been back four times, including last summer.

After studying at the University of Iowa under Robert Lowell, which Jenkins describes as a "unique experience," he came to William and Mary in 1956 as an instructor. He was promoted to assistant professor in 1958, to associate professor in 1964, and to full professor during the past year.

During his 12 years at William and Mary, Dr. Jenkins has continually broadened his academic horizons, generally with various types of grants. During one summer he wrote a short novel on a grant awarded by the College. During another, he was a Fellow in Asian Studies at the University Center in Richmond in connection with a study he did on Ezra Pound's translations of Chinese poetry.

Dr. Jenkins spent the 1967-68 academic year at the University of North Carolina under a cooperative program in humanities co-sponsored by UNC and Duke University. The highly regarded program enables the recipient to study in his major field of interest. In addition to doing research on Dylan Thomas, Dr. Jenkins studied Welsh while he was at North Carolina.

Dr. Jenkins believes specializing narrowly is a mistake, but he also adds that, "You are bound to do some things that are absolutely useless because it is so easy to get excited about so many things." In addition, he says, "We have such an avid curiosity that we tend not to care whether anyone else knows about what we have uncovered. But who can say where the benefit comes. We can just do our best."

In addition to his scholarly research, Dr. Jenkins is an accomplished creative writer. Some of his stories are collected in a volume known as Summer: Sun and Shade, and one of his short stories was published in The New Yorker. Since he teaches creative writing, Dr. Jenkins believes it is necessary "to do" before you can teach, a philosophy that seems to permeate all of his work.

Aside from Football, Homecoming Was a Wonderful, Gala Occasion

EVEN THOUGH the Indians were eaten up 41-0 by the Ohio University Bobcats, Homecoming 1968 was its successful best. An estimated 3,000 alumni returned for the weekend, which brought sunshine back to Williamsburg after a dreary, threatening week.

The weekend began Friday, with a "reorientation" program and bus tour of the campus to acquaint returning alumni with the growth of William and Mary into a modern university and with the $22,000,000 new campus area.

Friday afternoon's activities included two new ones: An autograph party presided over by Miss Althea Hunt, longtime director of the William and Mary Theatre, whose book "The William and Mary Theatre—A Chronicle" had arrived from the press only that morning. The Theatre had arranged for dozens of its own alumni to return for the event.

In addition, two members of the faculty took charge of Alumni Seminars for about 70 who registered. The seminars were based on books in the innovative College-wide Program of Readings and Lectures described in the May, 1968 Alumni Gazette and again briefly in "The College" section of this issue.

Friday evening there were the usual class dinners, attended by about 400, which followed the traditional Sunset Parade ceremony in the Sunken Garden. The ceremony, which helped begin the weekend with a touch of color and pageantry, also honored alumni who had died during the preceding year.

Saturday morning's festivities began with the long and colorful Homecoming Parade down historic Duke of Gloucester Street. Police estimated that a crowd of 6,000 lined the avenue as judges watched the floats from a reviewing stand in front of the colonial courthouse. Phi Kappa' Tau's float, based on the theme "Guess Who's Coming to Dinner," took first place in the fraternity division and the Kappa Alpha Theta float, "Noah's Ark," won out in the sorority competition. An honorable mention, in the tradition of true Southern hospitality, was awarded to a float entered by the Richmond Alumni Chapter of Ohio University.

Miss Susan Holmes Small, a Kappa

Following the parade, alumni gathered in front of Phi Beta Kappa Hall for the annual meeting of the Society of Alumni, to eat lunch "under the big top," and to have class photographs taken.

Following the football game—the worst defeat in a decade for William and Mary—the alumni joined for a social hour and dinner-dance. Most seemed a bit weary when the weekend was through, but all agreed that it was a wonderful experience.

Four Medallions Go to Alumni

The 1968 recipients of the Alumni Medallions included two past presidents of the Society of the Alumni, the first out-of-state member of the Board of Visitors and the U. S. Ambassador to Brazil.

The medallions were presented by Dr. Davis Y. Paschall, President, at the Society's annual meeting on the Saturday of Homecoming Weekend.

The recipients were John Willis Tuthill '32, Ambassador to Brazil; Blake T. Newton Jr. '35, of Greenwich, Conn., the out-of-state member of the Board and President of the Institute of Life Insurance; Harry D. Wilkins of Eastville, Va., past president of the Society and a current member of the Board of Visitors; and R. Harvey Chappell Jr. of Richmond, past president of the Society who is also a member of the governing board.

President Paschall also presented citations and portfolios of memorabilia to recently retired members of the Board of Visitors: W. Brooks George, former Rector; Dr. H. Hudnall Ware; John P. Harper and Charles K. Hutchens. Dr. Ware and George are from Richmond, Harper is from Norfolk and Hutchens is from Newport News.

Five are Elected To Alumni Board

Two new members, and three current members, will serve three-year terms on the Board of Directors of the Society of the Alumni as the result of mail balloting this fall. Results were announced at the Society's annual meeting during Homecoming.

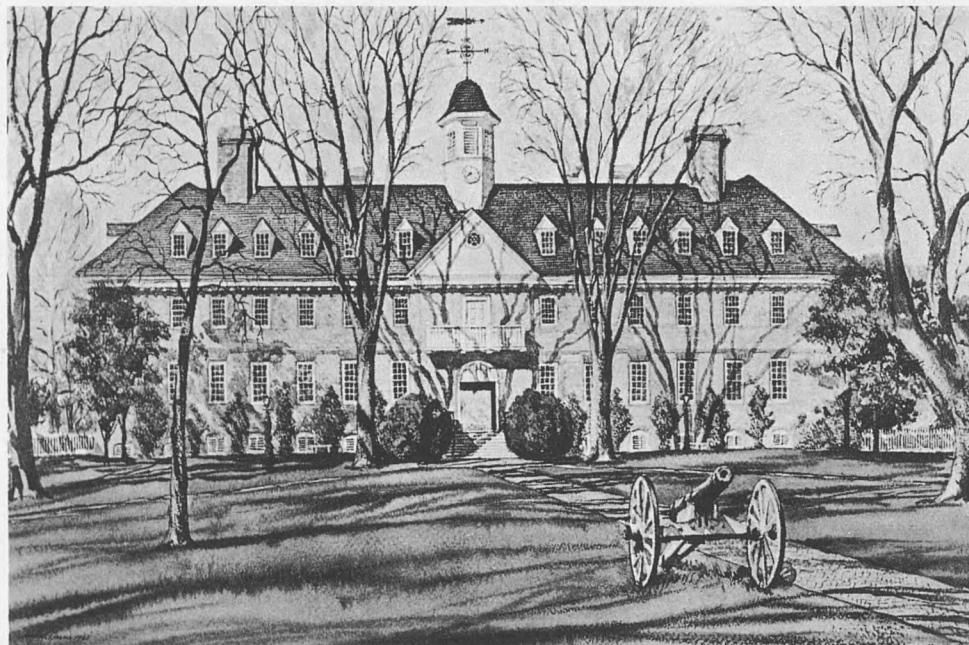

The re-elected members are Robert A. Duncan '24 of Williamsburg; John E. Hocutt '35 of Newark, Del.; and William E. Pullen '22, of Richmond, Va.

The new members are Donald G. Griffin '42 of Norfolk, Va. and Mrs. Jane Harden Hanson '42 of Potomac, Md. She is the wife of Arthur B. Hanson '39.

The William and Mary Fund letters have recently been mailed to the class. The Society of the Alumni decided on a somewhat different procedure, with a shorter contributing period, starting on September 16 for The 1968 Fund. After such a fine gain in 1967 over 1966, we hope every member of the class will contribute so we will surpass our giving in 1967. Please send your gift directly to the Society of the Alumni at the College.

Some interesting statistics have come to light from the Fund letters. Some of the class are returning to Virginia to live upon retirement. From the class roll we now have 233 living members, with 151 living in Virginia. The others by states are as follows: Alaska 1, Alabama 1, Arizona 1, California 4, Connecticut 1, Delaware 2, Florida 9, Georgia 1, Illinois 1, Kansas 1, Louisiana 1, Maryland 9, Massachusetts 2, Michigan 2, Missouri 1, Montana 1, New Hampshire 1, New Jersey 7, New York 12, North Carolina 4, Ohio 1, Oklahoma 1, Pennsylvania 1, South Carolina 3, South Dakota 1, Tennessee 2, Texas 2, West Virginia 5, Washington, D. C. 1, Puerto Rico 2, and Beirut, Lebanon 1.

A clipping from a Bradenton, Fla. newspaper reports that Tevis Huguely is the director of the Manatee County Utilities System. He formerly was City Manager of Melbourne.

We hope you have us on your Christmas card list as we look forward to hearing from you at this time of the year.

Homecoming weekend was splendid for our class and our reunion—we had a marvelous get together for the dinner at the Lodge Friday evening, the room was filled and we had such a gab fest that we were the last group to leave! I trust you have all received your Colonial Re-Echo and caught up on the activities of the class, so to get this in the mail in time for the deadline—both post office and printer—here are those who were there:

Our class president, Horace Dyer and wife, Doris; Elizabeth Hay Frazer; Verna Saunders Harwood; Pauline Obst Pyle; Martha "Pete" Moreland Thomas, Nita Ligon Morse, Charlotte Hinson Jemmott; Mildred Albee Babb; Helene Stein Brandon and Tom; Bankhead Davies and Dixie, Cy Arons and Norma; Bradbury Gilbert and Maude, Frank Ritter and Lucette; George and DeeDeeBunch; Ada Stuart Holland; Harold Kyle and Anne; Carl Buffington and Louise; "Al" Iverson Almand and Grace; Elizabeth Rumsey Weber and her mother, Mrs. Rumsey; M. Gill Piquette and a delightful lady from India, Mrs. Swaran Seth Dhawan. Harvey and Sally Shuler again were the couple travelling the longest distance. Bill Greene '39 dropped by to say hello.

President Paschall came by to welcome us back to the campus and urge that we especially take time to visit (1) the Wren Building which has been renovated, and (3) the Lord Botetourt statue in the new library. Dixon Foster, President of the Alumni Society spoke a few words of greeting and Jim Kelly, Executive Secretary, introduced Gordon Vliet and his attractive wife, Lee.

We were delighted to have with us the following alumni and their wives: Judge Robert Armistead, John Mapp, Bud Metheny, Mo Brill and Dave Agnew.

The picnic Saturday drew some we hadn't seen earlier—Mollie Waters Christie and Bill, Fran Jenkins Taylor and Vaughn, Virginia Betts Chapman and Joel, Bob Simpson and his wife and Jane Speakman Hauge and Nick. Dr. Carney Pearce and his wife were registered but I missed seeing them.

Congratulations are in order for Flora Kearney who has recently become Associate Professor of English at Ball State University, Muncie, Ind. After graduation, Flora earned her Ph.D. at the University of Maryland and later took an M.S. degree at the University of Illinois.

Mary Katherine Edinger Wallace of Sunnyvale, Cal. writes that she went to Washington, D. C. in October 1967 for American Institute Planners Conference on the next Fifty Years. She saw Tim Hanson who was planning to race his boat to Europe during the summer. She spent a delightful weekend with Joan and Coleman duPont talking planning and preservation, cruising on the Chesapeake.

Our older son, John, was married in August, with the wedding taking place in old Christ Church, Cambridge, Mass. The ceremony was performed by the Reverend Dr. Pierce Middleton, husband of my college roommate, Jane Scofield. It was great seeing the Middletons again and our day together even gave us time to catch up on all that had happened in the last few years.

Please remember The William and Mary Fund Drive. A contribution to this is one very tangible way we can be part of the future of the College, as well as part of its past. When you return your Fund envelope, do add a few lines of news for your class letter.

News is a little skimpy from '44 this time. Hope the Class Agent letters we wrote will bring forth both news and donations!

Entered our daughter at William and Mary the 15th of September. Saw Dorie Wiprud Diggs and Skippy (Helen) Myers (daughters) and Bill Way (son).

It was a beautiful hot day in Williamsburg and I felt like I was reliving my past. Both Blow Gymnasium and Dean Lambert looked just the same! Jean Schoenwulf Preston and Louise and John Hollis both had daughters working on orientation.

Saw Ann Hitch Kilgore (Mayor of Hampton) in a news flick with Muriel Humphrey doin' a little "politicking."

Read in the paper that Vince Lascara (married Betty Lyons) has assumed command of the Navy Fleet Material Support Office in Mechanicsburg, Pa. He is a captain.

Am at the airport en route to St. Louis. Thursday Fran Loesch Brunner and Bob arrive here. We'll all head for Homecoming—Griffiths (from Charleston—Joan Kable)—Tillars (Ruthie Wilmer) from Emporia, Vermyles (D.C.) Alexanders (Emily Snyder) D.C. Entwistles. Hope to see you all there. Lotsa news then—next time.

Lots of news this time, so here goes—

Audrey Hudgins (Thompson) writes that she hopes to fly from Orlando to see a football game at Randolph Macon College this fall since her son, John, will be on the team there. John graduated in June from high school where he was president of the student council, honor society member and on the varsity football and baseball teams.

Audrey's husband, "Buck", is in the frozen concentrate business in Florida, and active in little league and boys club activities. He loves golf. Audrey plays golf, also, when she isn't busy with her sons, PTA, car pools, etc. The other two Thompson boys are Bobby, 16, and Steve, 11. Bobby likes hunting and fishing. He worked for a taxidermist who taught him to mount his own ducks and quail, and he is now doing it for friends. Steve plays little league baseball, and loves being a sixth grade patrolman.

When Bobbie Sanford (Vieham) shops in Orlando, she and Audrey lunch together. Bobbie lives in Melbourn Beach, Fla. Audrey also sees Jeanne Schoenewolf (Preston) when she visits Virginia once a year. Jeanne's oldest daughter, Peggy, was married recently.

Greetings come from Charles Marasco, though because of the war, he isn't sure whether he belongs to our class, or 1949 when he graduated. Charlie is with the First Boston Corporation, an investment banking firm in New York City. He lives in Bedford Village with his wife, a Navy "brat" from Arlington, Va., and their two sons and two daughters. Dick Whiting, class of 1941, is a neighbor of the Marascos.

From Anna Belle Koenig (Nimmo) comes news of her travels. She returned in July from Russia and a trip to East Berlin. She found the Russians to be a happy, kind people in a magnificently beautiful country. 1967 took Anna Belle to Greece and the Holy Land where she was in Israel during one of the common border scrapes, and crossed no man's land carrying her own luggage. Also in the Nimmo travels are visits to William and Mary friends.

Barbara Bellin (Lawless) lives in an ocean-side home in Westport, Conn. and teaches art in a school nearby. With her husband and three children, Barbara recently had a trip to Alaska. She and Anna Belle met in New York this summer for lunch and the Modern Art Museum together.

Virginia O'Connor (Puth) and Alvin live in Mitchellville, Md. Al is a psychologist for the government. Anna Belle enjoyed visiting their country woodland home, which they have built mostly by themselves.

Ruth Moss (Eurie) teaches school in Norfolk. She and her husband Tom have two girls. Anna Belle visited them on a trip east.

Eleanor Yates (Schuler) visited the Nimmo's with her husband and children. The Schulers had a western vacation from their home in Woodstown, N. J. and drove up from Colorado Springs to Golden, Colo. where Anna Belle lives.

Dale Myers and his family live in Salem, Va. and he is an attorney with offices in Roanoke. Dale, his wife Jean, and three children spent the month of June in St. Petersburg Beach, Fla. where they vacation each year. Ricky, age 16, is a high school football player. Kim, their second son is 10, and Amanda is 9. Dale is active as vice-president of the local chapter of the William and Mary alumni association which usually has about 75 members in attendance at meetings. The October meeting was to be held just prior to the William and Mary—Virginia Military Institute game at Lexington, with a speaker from the athletic department of the college, and Dale was looking forward to seeing all area alumni present.

Twenty-three years are a long time, and alumni near Charlotte Timmerman (Hilton) in Leawood, Kansas are few and far between, she writes. Timmy was glad to see Ann Vineyard, her husband and son at Easter when Ann was visiting her family in Galena, Missouri. Timmy's husband, Carl, is a manufacturer's representative, and they have lived in the Kansas City area for 20 years. The Hiltons have two girls and a boy, Betty, 17, Mary, 11, and Barry, 14. Timmy has been involved with her children's activities, and church work, and all the family play golf.

Abner Pratt and his wife, Libby, class of '49, live in Kensington, Md. Abner is a Personnel Services officer in the Navy Department in Washington. Libby is a working artist. She teaches water color and is a member of the Spectrum Gallery in Georgetown, where both she and Abner paint. The Pratt's daughter, Sally, is a freshman at Middlebury College. Their son, George, is in junior high and plays football, and David, age 5, just entered kindergarten.

Abner and Libby see Harry and Doris Yost Sizemore who live in Arlington, and Peggy Ballentine (Stock) who is a neighbor in Kensington.

News from Pat Riker (Pimbley) arrived from Switzerland. George was there for several months doing research work in math, so Pat and the three children went along. Their oldest son met a daughter of Terry Teal (Crutchfield) at a drama group in Geneva, and also at a swimming pool, so Pat again learned it's a small world. The Pimbley's expected to be back in the states for a visit at Pat's home in Princeton, N. J. for a visit in October, then on back to Los Alamos.

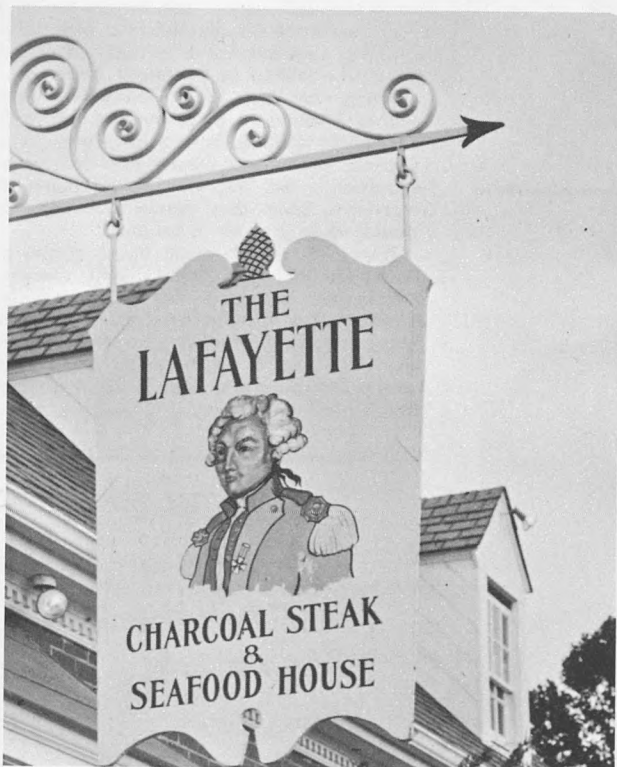

After hearing from Pat, I called her college roommate, Jane Heiney (Bliven) in Englewood, N. J. for a telephone visit. Jane's husband, Bud, works in printing production for Time magazine. They have three children, two boys, and an adopted daughter. The Blivens vacationed in Wisconsin this year, using their tent trailer. Jane hears from Betty Motley (Glore) in Louisville, Ky. Betty and Scott have a daughter.

Mary Jane Chamberlain (Howard) again sends news of friends and Richmond alumni. The Howard children continued their swimming this past summer. Vaughan, Jr. qualified to swim at the Olympic trials in California but did not make the team. Their daughter, Alene, spent a recent weekend with the family of Claire Hulcher (McMullan) on the Potomac River. The McMullans have four daughters and live in Richmond.

Eleanor Harvey (Rennie) has been made head teacher at the Richmond Cerebral Palsy Center School. She and daughter, Nan, age 11, enjoy dancing and performed in a mother-daughter number at a dance revue this spring.

Scotty Harris (Rechenbach) is working for a ladies apparel shop in one of the Richmond suburban shopping centers. Her husband is principal of Albert H. Hill Jr. High School. Their older son is a senior at Randolph Macon, a daughter is a sophomore at the University of Tennessee and the younger son is a freshman in high school.

The Rechenbachs visited the Bev Clowes (Evans) family in Pittsburgh this fall. The five daughters in the Evans family are in five different schools—Cochran School of Art in Washington, D. C.; Keuka College in N. Y., and high school, junior high, and elementary school in Pittsburgh. Bev is interested in the Louise Thomas (Cooley), wife of Dr. Denton Cooley of Houston, was pictured in Life Magazine, August 2, 1968, when the feature article was published about her famous husband, the heart surgeon. Also in the pictures are their five lovely daughters.

Bettymay Becan (Gaston) has three daughters. Patty is 17, Barbara, 15, and Betsy, 12. Bet loves working in her studio as a photo colorist and free-lance artist. Her husband, Dick, works for Newport News Shipbuilding and Dry Dock Co., and they live in Hampton.

Mary Ellen McLean Hall and husband Bob live in the Albany, N. Y. area. They enjoyed a vacation on Cape Cod at Eastham this summer with their daughter, Barbara, who is starting junior high this fall.

While passing through Harrisonburg, Va. this summer on our way south, I talked to Rennie Kezell (Harrison). She, Bill, and two sons were again involved with little league baseball. Bill is a salesman of fruit tree sprays for a chemical company. Rennie had heard from Ann Wilson (Taylor) of Crewe, Va. that her daughter goes to Mary Baldwin.

It was wonderful to get so many letters this time. Keep up the good work, so that we can stay posted on class members.

There is a back-to-the-earth movement for the Class of '47.

Marjorie Williams Walters and Bob bought a farm in Richfield Spring, N.Y., near Cooperstown. Marjorie and her two boys kept busy this summer riding the tractor. The rest of the year Marjorie is a successful interior decorator in Hohokus, New Jersey.

Farm number two is in Vermont. Thelma (Scotty) Murray Smith and George bought their farm three or four years ago. Making a pond was their summer project. Scotty, who has been on our missing list, lives at 109 Jean Street, Ramsey, New Jersey. George has recently been made chief auditor for the Federal Reserve Bank in New York City. They have two boys, Donald and Stephen in high school.

Alice White Tomlinson, '46, gave me news of Beth Spain Newman. Alice and her daughter Jennifer visited William and Mary in June looking into the possibility of Jennifer's admission in 1969. They stopped in Richmond and visited Beth and her two boys. The Newmans had just bought a farm on the James River.

Alice, by the way, owns a farm in Maine, which she enjoys decorating with antiques.

We have had the most hectic summer that I have ever spent. The first part was spent fixing up our house at the beach and getting it rented and the rest was spent in getting the old house ready to sell and getting into our new house. It will be a long time before I want to build again. We really love the new house and please everybody note the new address and please remember to send me a Christmas card with a note on it. We moved the middle of August and two days later Bob took off for Peru leaving the girls to settle in. Never was I so glad to see September come, Bob return and school start.

If it weren't for Nancy Kurtz Falck my column would about end here. Thanks loads for the following Nancy. Dick Scofield wrote that they are all well in Cleveland. Dick saw Phil Dulaney in Las Vegas while on a business trip to California. Phil was on his honeymoon.

Pat Stringham Venable wrote from Rio de Janeiro. Chuck is at the Embassy there and they find it a very pleasant place to live.

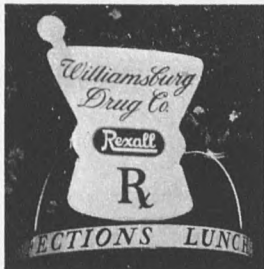

I think this one was from Sis Schaff (don't know married name). and forgive me if I have the wrong Sis. Sis and John have three children, a six foot junior in high school and Steve who will be in the fourth grade.

Nancy saw Patsy Jones Warner while she was in Washington on a business trip with Bill. Nicky Dillard Dewing had Patsy, Janie Copland Upshur and Nancy over for lunch. Liz Daniels had Pat over to her house in Maryland. Sorry that didn't take notes it would really give me a column.

Jeanne Bambforth spent three weeks in Puerto this summer. Virginia 'Skippy' Beecher Scrymgeour is hoping that Bruce will be transferred to Washington, D.C. Nancy has been very busy working for the William and Mary fund. If you haven't received your letter from your agent don't forget that every little bit helps.

This 45-pound satellite is changing
the face of the earth

*If you want to know where it is—a meter or a world away—
Cubic has the system!*

CUBIC'S SECOR, the surveying satellite developed for the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, keeps introducing changes in the cartographer's art. For example, the system places the Ryukyu Islands a half-mile southwest of where we thought they were. To make such discrete measurements, SECOR employs electronic trilateration. As the satellite makes its pass, signals bounce between its 7-pound transponder and 4 portable Cubic ground stations. When the data is correlated, one station, whose position is only generally known, is located with new precision.

Since 1964, the ground stations have leaped across the Pacific toward Hawaii in the first part of a globe-girdling program. With each satellite pass, stations receive information from 10,000 data points—and tens of thousands of correlations are used for each distance measured. Trilateration is the key to a number of Cubic's significant systems developments. SECOR is more proof that if you want to know where it is—land, sea or space—Cubic has the system. It is the end of a lovely September day, and I am in the mood to write this because Doris Hamilton (Jones), my roommate in the Alpha Chi house for two years, came by for a visit this afternoon on her way from a district teachers' meeting. She is still enjoying teaching mostly Spanish and some English classes at Amelia High School. Her two children are both in school now. George is in the eighth grade, and Helen is a first grader.

Richard V. Warner has been elected Vice President of the Southern Division, Wood Products Group, Potlatch Forests, Inc., with headquarters in Warren, Ark. He served as General Manager of this division since October 1963. Dick's long-time association with the lumber industry began with vacation-time employment at Southern Lumber Company in Warren during the years 1943 through 1951. He served as Methods Engineer beginning in 1953 until entering military service with the USAF from 1954-1956. He rejoined Southern Lumber Company in 1956, by then a Division of Potlatch Forests, Inc. After graduation from the College he went on to get his master's degree at the Univ. of Arkansas. He is a member of the Board of Directors and the Executive Committee of the Southern Pine Association; He is on the Board of Directors of the National Oak Flooring Manufacturers Association and the Arkansas Wood Products Association, and is a past director of the Southern Hardwood Lumber Manufacturers Association. He is also active in the civic affairs of Warren. He is married to the former Shirley Daugherty, and they have two children, Kathy 15, and Rick 14.

Dr. Harold E. Cox who went on to receive his Ph.D. from the University of Virginia after graduating from the College, is now an associate professor of history at Wilkes College in Wilkes-Barre, Pa. where he has been since 1963. Prior to that he was an assistant professor of social sciences at Temple University in Philadelphia. He was in the Army from 1954-56 and joined the Reserves in 1956. He has recently been named sergeant-major for the 157th Infantry Brigade, the largest Army Reserve unit in the nation. Before joining this group, he was sergeant-major for the 479th Artillery Group. The 157th is headquarters at Easton, Pa., a 102-mile trip from Dr. Cox's home at 80 Virginia Terrace, Forty Fort, Pa. He estimates he has logged more than 10,000 miles commuting to and from his Reserve units. He also is an expert on the history of electric railways and has written several books and articles, chiefly on the Philadelphia Transportation Co.

Bill Stone, the former principal of Colonial Heights High School, is the new Supervisor of Instruction for the Greensville County School System. He still lives here and commutes to Emporia each day.

Jackie Jones (Myers) '52 wrote from Alberta in August that she had seen Hugh Moore at the Virginia Dixie Youth Baseball Tournament in Lawrenceville during the summer. Hugh who lives in South Boston, Va., is a National Director of this program.

In the September 3, 1968 edition of Look there is an article on "Our Angry Teachers," and there is a statement by Ted Géhlmann in this article. He received his Master's of Education from Temple U. in 1961 and also played professional football. He is now teaching biology in a high school in Doylestown, Pa., where he lives at 202 North Clinton Street.

Bernard Mikula, Professor of biology at Defiance College, is doing outstanding work in teaching and in research in plant genetics. He recently had a Visiting Fellowship from the Center for the Biology of Natural Systems, at Washington University in St. Louis, and, by invitation, spent his sabbatical year there.

Edwin M. Extract of Arlington, Va. writes that his son, Andy, has arranged his Friday evenings during football season. He just started at Yorktown High School in Arlington 10th grade and made the varsity football team—first string defensive tackle. Andy is 15, weighs 206 lbs. and is 6 ft. 1 in. tall.

John R. O. McKean formerly headmaster of Kingswood School Cranbrook, Bloomfield Hills, Mich., and the former Dean of Students at Allegheny College, Meadville, Pa. has been named Dean of Hobart College in Geneva, N.Y. He and his wife, the former Ruth MacDonald of Oxbow, Me., have two daughters.

As the years go by I find that I am receiving more clippings and news concerning the achievements of each of you as you go through life, and how proud I am that you are a member of our class. This is one of the assets of this job. My only regret is that I do not hear from more of you. I know that each of you is contributing a great deal to the world around you, and how I wish you would let me hear about this and about your families so that I could share it with our class. Also, don't forget that a great bit of our success in life can be attributed to the education we received at the College, Jay and I traveled back to Williamsburg for my 15th reunion and had a grand visit. At this point I can't seem to remember who was in which class or what face belongs to which name. Forgive me if I missed seeing all of our class. Write and complain and I'll be sure to mention you in our next issue!

We enjoyed chatting with Ed and Betty Kustrup Sheahan from Pelham Manor, N.Y. Ed is the National Marketing Manager for Federal Pacific Electric Company. Betty is busy with their four children, P.T.A., Federated Women's Club, Junior League, and Kappa Kappa Gamma Alumnae.

It was so good to talk over old times and new changes with our Class President Carmen Romeo and his wife, Carol, who soon is expecting their fifth child. Carmen now is Labor Relations Manager with General Electric in Waynesboro. We missed seeing "Barbie" Schwartz Smith and Jim, '52, also with General Electric in Philadelphia. They brought their four children along including their new 2½ month-old son.

Joe and Carolyn Burt Hume kept up their record of attending every Homecoming since graduation. They came from Ridgewood, N.J. Joe is Director of Sales at Unit Printing Corporation.

We also enjoyed seeing Jim, '51, and Bev Simonton Kelly, Jim as you probably know is Director of Development at William and Mary. Bev is a busy mother of three and active in church work at Bruton Parish. She also sings with the Williamsburg Madrigal Singers. They both are excellent "ambassadors" for the College.

Caught a glimpse of or chatted with several graduates—the Marvin Wests, '52; Randy and Sue Hines Davis; Gordon Vliet, '54, and his new bride; Ted Filer; George Ritzel who is addition to being an Insurance Agent is a member of the William and Mary Richmond Alumni Board; "Widdy" Fennell and his wife; Russ and Page Beck Gills—there are four Gills, still Page has time to belong to the Bay Colony Garden Club, Friends of Music, Inc., and does volunteer work; the Tom Martins—he is with the FBI; David Potts who is a Diplomatic Courier in the State Department; Betty Ann Wills Wallace, '54; Nancy and Sam Keyian who now has a staff job with Stage Decoration and Supplies, Inc., in Greensboro, N.C.; Jerry and Ann Johnson Harris—Jerry is a builder while Ann among other things manages their two sons and is president of the P.T.A.; Harry Kostel; Jim and Molly Murphy Daniel—they have four children and Molly is a Systems Analyst; Bob Cattell and his wife—Bob is with the Foreign Service; Bernie and "Baby" Bell Hall—Bernie is in the investment business and they have four children; Don and Betty Stephan Layne—Betty teaches while Don is a Marine Colonel on a tour of duty in Washington, D.C. They have three children and are active in P.T.A.; Dr. Jim Campbell, '52, and his wife, Ruth, who is a pediatrician; "Perk" and Gwen Batten Perkins; Mel Neuman; Carroll Baskett; Eddy and John Dalton; the Jim Soods—Jim is General Manager and Vice President of Advances Computer Techniques Corporation.

I believe I saw Posie Hundley and his wife Betty at the festivities. Posie is an Assistant Sales Manager with I.B.M. while Betty tends to their three children and belongs to the North Dallas Parents League and Ninety-Nines, Inc.

Bill and "Bobbie" Bowman Allison were at Homecoming. Bill in addition to dealing with Government bonds in Wellesley, Mass., for Aubrey G. Lanston Co., Inc. is a Town Meeting Member, in the Boston Investment Club, and in the Town Advisory Committee. They have four children and looked just great.

Don Wolfe came all the way from Chicago where he is in the printing business. He also is active in Theta Delta Chi Alumni activities. He mentioned that Pete Giblin is with Eastman Kodak in San Francisco; Gerry and Ann Allred Atwater are in Syracuse, N.Y. where Gerry is in the banking business; Sally and "Howie" McCallen live in Metuchen, N.J., where "Howie" is District Manager of N. J. Power and Light Co.; Randy Hoes is in Wayland, Mass.

We also talked with "Mitch" and Peggy Bunting Mitchell. In addition to being a Supervisor for Western Electric Company, Bob is an Associate Professor at Rutgers University. Peggy teaches 5th grade now. They have two children and are still golf enthusiasts.

Dr. "Bernie" Wittkamp, '52, and his most attractive wife Darrell, '55, made one of their frequent trips to Williamsburg. Also saw Chuck, '51, and Bobbe Lamont, '52, Redding who have had several '53 visitors at their Falls Church home. They were Bettye Zepht who still works for the government in Washington, D.C.; Ann Hines Fuller whose husband, Bill, works with the Nixon Campaign. The Fullers in September had their second child, a boy; "Bebe" Fisher Arbuckle and family; Ann Rixey Boyd whose husband, Ed, is a Navy Captain. Ann sells "weathered bronze" garden statuary and assists a French cook in cooking classes. They have three children; and "Evie" Abdill who lives in Washington, D.C., and teaches in Montgomery County.

Jack and Helen Barber Stabile from Pittsburgh attended the weekend festivities and brought their three children along. Helen belongs to the Pittsburgh Symphony Society and Jack is a Parking Executive and Consultant. Joe, '52, and Eloise Bryant Agee were also there. Joe is Assistant Professor of Physical Education and is Golf and Soccer Coach at William and Mary. Eloise is Church Librarian of the Methodist Church in Williamsburg and is Vice President of the College Woman's Club. The Agees have four children.

The 1968 March issue of National Geographic describes Layton and Nan Child Zimmer's home in Tonga. Their address is Box 147, Peace Corps, Nuku Alofa, Tonga. Layton is Director of the Tongan Program of the Peace Corps. The Zimmers recently spent a year in the South Seas with nine months spent in Fiji. They have two children.

Dr. Raymond Bridgers is attending NYU for the year. He is studying the behavioral sciences under a Federal Grant. His oldest daughter attends State University College at New Paltz. Raymond has just finished teaching his tenth year at S.U.C. in Oswego, N.Y.

Ginnie Gary Lupton and Ed have finished a tour of duty in Hawaii and are back again

We have news of Peggy Ives (Emerson) as a career woman in Perrysburg, Ohio. She and George (1952) have built a new home and she has returned to the business world, working in the Office of Economic Planning of Toledo (War on Poverty) as a Research Assistant and Information Representative.

Ed Click, now a major, wrote for an address recently and I was aware, suddenly, that he was writing from Viet Nam. Maybe that wasn't news to many of you, but it was to me.

James B. Duff of Convent Station, N.J. writes that he is working as General Product Manager for Scovill Mfg. Co. in Newark, N.J.

I would like to be deluged by letters of your doings. Long time, no hear.

55 Suzanne Duis Carico of Manhattan Beach, Cal. writes that Dave is Industrial Relations Manager—Glass Container's Corp., a subsidiary of Hunt Foods). He is also studying law—passed "Baby Bar," the California first-year law students' exam, required to get credit and continue studying for the bar in California.

Betty Lowe Eaton of Portsmouth, Va. is back there awaiting her husband's return from Vietnam in February 1969.

Mary Jane Stoneburg of the Chautauqua-Cattaraugus Library system in Jamestown, N.Y. joined the staff of the Ellen Clarke Bertrand Library at Bucknell University in Lewisburg, Pa. in October.

Last spring, Norman L. Trusty was made an associate professor of history at Purdue University Galumet Campus in Hammond, Ind. After graduating from William and Mary, Norman earned his M.A. and Ph.D. degrees in American History at Boston University. His special research fields are in the pre-Civil War era, with particular concentration of slavery conditions and sectionalism. He became an assistant professor of history at Purdue in 1964, after teaching at Ohio State University and Boston University over a period of six years. Norman is married to Janet Mason, also of our class, and they have two children.

Charles E. Clark has assumed the newly-created position of manager of Colonial taverns at Colonial Williamsburg. While continuing to serve as manager of King's Arms, Charles will have general supervision of all three Colonial taverns, including Christiana Campbell's and Chowning's. Charles joined Colonial Williamsburg in 1954 as a costumed waiter at King's Arms while attending William and Mary. He later became assistant manager of the tavern and is a past manager at both the Williamsburg Inn restaurant and Campbell's Tavern. He is married to the former Patricia Ann Gray and the father of two daughters.

Lcdr. Vern Arvin is back from a Vietnam tour of duty and will now teach Political Science at the Air Force Academy.

H. James and Susan Van Volkenburgh Abdella of Jamestown, N.Y. wrote that the new Buffalo Bills football coach is Harvey Johnson, '43. He hired as offensive line coach, Marvin Bass, '43 with Dan Darragh, '68 as starting quarterback. They say this has really made solid Bills' fans out of them!

Robert B. Hauck was named "Man of the Year" by East Hunterdon, New Jersey, Jaycees last year and is included in the 1968 edition of "Outstanding Young Men of America." He is a former mayor of Readington Township, and was president of the Hunterdon County Municipal Officers Association last year. He received his diploma in 1959 from the American Academy of Funeral Service. He is a former second vice-president and nominee for the first vice-president (at the time of the news release) of the Tri-County Funeral Directors Association. He is a past president of the North Hunterdon-Clinton Kiwanis, past president of the East Whitehouse Fire Company, and past treasurer of Jubilee Council, Knights of Columbus—and that is just a quick summary! He and his wife Ann have one son.

One correction in the Re-Echo: Betty Jane Keel is living in Lake Hiawatha, New Jersey. There must be others, so please bring your Alumni Office up to date. Received a note that Roger Smoot works in a restaurant in Eau Gallie, Florida.

Just spoke to Bev Burgess Burchette who told me that Biji Nunn McKnight is teaching full time at William and Mary now. Fred and Judy Gibbs spent the night with the Burchettes after homecoming week-end. Judy is expecting a baby in March. They called Wiley Herring in San Francisco where he is with Allen Organ Company. Bev said that Tom Lightner is presently stationed in Germany. Stephanie Amato Hathaway and husband Curtis were at homecoming. They are living in Roslyn Hills, here in Richmond.

It was so good to see everyone again. Please keep in touch.

My apologies for no news in the last issue, but a miscarriage incapacitated me for a while. All is fine now, and I am happy to report to you.

Gary Lewis has been appointed regional director of operations, Southwest, for the Motor Lodge Division of the Howard Johnson Company. His new offices are in Arlington, Texas.

David Ladd has been promoted to administrator, marketing department of the casualty and surety division at the home office of Aetna Life and Casualty, Hartford, Conn. Pat and I hated to see Lynn and Dave leave our area. We last saw them in late August when they spent the night with us while on their way to Ocean City, Md.

Janet Caldwell Elling and husband Mike are in South Iran, where Mike is head of Economics and Statistics for the International Iranian Oil Consortium. They have four children, Karen (six), John (four), Jennifer (three), and Stephen (fourteen months).

I received a pleasant letter from Danny Newland. He attended law school at George Washington University. Currently he is a trial attorney for the Chief Counsel Office of the Internal Revenue Service in Pittsburgh, Pa. He and his wife, Ellen, see Al and Karen Athearn quite often.

Congratulations are in order for Dick Rinker. Recently he was the recipient of the Medford Lake, N.J. Jaycees Distinguished Service Award for community service, leadership, and business or personal success.

Miles Chappell is one of ninety-six winners from thirty-six graduate schools of the Woodrow Wilson Dissertation Fellowships. His graduate doctoral study is being done at the University of North Carolina.

Thanks once again are sent to Judy Urian Lownes. Ken and Judy attended Peggy Clement's wedding to Barry Haines last December. Charlie and Sally Branham Nahill were also guests.

Meci Carlson Coffey is expecting her third child soon. She visited the Lownes with her son, Jac and daughter, Beth.

Judy and Ken have bought 2½ acres in Pennwood, Pa. for their dream home. Judy keeps active; in September she began her ninth year of teaching.

Since I was unable to attend Homecoming this year due to John's leaving for Viet Nam the middle of October, I asked Mary Frances Bonner to be "guest columnist" and report on the activities of those attending the festivities in Williamsburg:

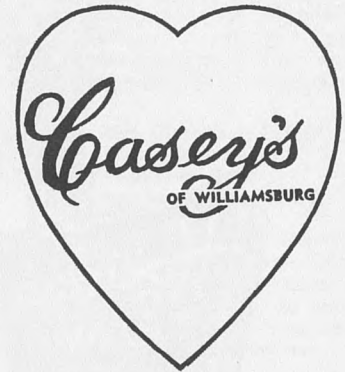

I appreciate the opportunity to be guest columnist, but unfortunately I was unable to attend Homecoming because I had to go to St. Paul, Minn. My roommate, Mary Kay Walsh and also Diane Stuart Perry and Ann Harvey Yonkers attended and reported to me the happenings and activities of some of you. The rest of you who were there and they did not see you, please write Judy Cooter.

John and Gerry Slifka are stationed at Fort Eustis where he is taking a Transportation Career Course. Kenny and Carolyn Birch Knowles and their two children are enroute to a new Navy duty at San Diego, Cal. David "Bucky" Showker is working in Staunton, Va. as Assistant Supervisor of a Detention Home for Juvenile Delinquents. He is also part owner of a Cabaret Club in Staunton. Martin O'Donnell is with Air Force Intelligence in Alexandria, Va. At the same time he is working on his Master's degree. Bill Niccoli is working in the advertising department of McCall's Magazine. He lives in Manhattan and loves being a bachelor! Sharon Hall is now living in Arlington, Va. and working with the Department of Army at Cameron Station. You also can find her on Thursday evenings playing touch football with the Young Republicans! John and Judy Linton Heald and daughter have a new home in Arlington. John works with IBM in the same office as Jaconette "Jackie" Murphy. Jackie is really a "jet-setter" in all senses—Among her many travels she included a trip to Europe this summer. Her job at IBM is taking her to Norfolk for two months—until middle December. This will interrupt her flying lessons which she has been taking for a couple of months. Bruce "Irish" O'Hara is working for a disposal diaper company in Cleveland. He is another one who is enjoying his bachelor life. George Chapman has been working for the Council of Governments in the Planning and Budget Section for the last year and half. Danny Driscoll and his wife, Joan, had come down from their home in Pittsburgh for Homecoming. Chuck and Cynthia Fulwiler Puskar in Pittsburgh also have two children now and were unable to make it down to Williamsburg. Chuck is working for IBM which seems to be a popular company for '63 William and Maryites and/or their spouses. Crellin James Byrd's husband Bob is with IBM in Richmond. They, incidently, have had their second child—a second boy.

Barbara Ann (Babs) Beaumont Anderson is kept busy in her delightful home in Simsbury, Conn., taking care of their two-year-old son. Her husband, Gene, owns a men's clothing store—"The Clipper Shop" in Simsbury. Those of you in the Hartford area might drop in there sometime. Stuart and Fran McCampbell Ring have moved again (California to D.C. to Norfolk). He is at the Staff Command College. They now have two children. Everybody was happy to see Kaye Shaffer Allen at Homecoming. Her husband, Lou, is a lawyer with the largest law firm in Newport News. Another Newport News couple is John and Charlene Stafford Gravely. They have two children and he is working for a stock brokerage firm. In Washington, D.C. is another stock broker, Richard "Dickie" Franklin. His brother and sister-in-law, Jay and Pat Farrell Franklin live in Fairfax with their two children. Jay works in D.C. for Smithy Realty Company. John and Helen Swayne Mertz celebrated the fifth reunion by the birth of a little girl in Washington, D.C. Diane Stuart Perry is leading quite an active life in Annandale, Va. Included in this is trying to keep up with her blonde-haired, three-year-old, George, Jr.

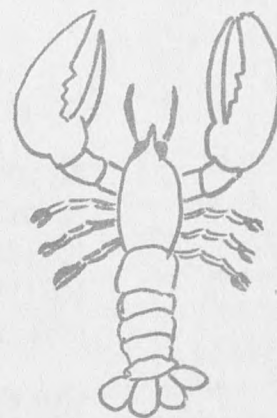

Robin Reighley is stationed in Bermuda with the U.S. Navy. He is living there with his wife and two little girls. Lynn Thomas Richbourg and her husband, Donnie, and their two children have a home in Bowie, Md. He is Staff Assistant, Appropriations Committee, U. S. House of Representatives. Kent Delano has finished his duty with the Navy and now is flying for Pan American Airlines. J J and Shirlev Pinkston Jennings and their little girl are living in Alexandria where Shirley is teaching elementary school. William "Bill" Depuy is attending American University in Washington, D.C. Chip Domminger is presently with the U. S. Department of State—but working at the Pentagon. Suzanne Spillers lives within walking distance of her job as programmer at the Navy Department in Washington. Mary Kay Walsh returned to the Washington area last October after a year and a half in Denver, Col. She is now working for the President's Committee on Mental Retardation—a job which has allowed her to go to many interesting places including the White House.

Marilyn Sterner Keith and her husband Don have just had a little girl "Megan." Her husband is with Irving Schwartz Institute for Children and Youth in Philadelphia.

Mary Kay took up skiing while in Denver—and both she and I visited our sisters in Denver last spring—and included a week's worth of skiing in the Rockies. I also visited my homeland of Washington State, and included California and Oregon late this summer. I am presently working with U. S. Health, Education and Welfare Department; and teaching at John Robert Powers Modeling and Finishing School as an extra interest.

Some people MaryKay and Diane saw at Homecoming but were unable to talk to were Glen McCaskey, Carroll Owens, Cameron Blandford, Harry Green, Neil Fridenstine, Jim Gudinas, Dale Thoma, Peter Sturm, Margaret Cushman and Armen Bohadurian. I hope that all of you will write Judy and keep her posted on your activities—we are all interested.

Following is the rest of Judy's regular column:

From several letters written this summer, comes the following information: John Heenan has been a System Analyst Specialist in the area of Business and Research for Hunt Wesson Foods since the first of the year. Betty Risser Heenan has been president of the Los Angeles Alumnae Association of Kappa Kappa Gamma for the past two years and attended the national convention in Columbus, O., this past June. Betty writes that Tinkey Williams Puravet and George have moved to Seattle, Wash., after having lived in the Los Angeles area last year. Tinkey is teaching high school French. She and her husband, who is French, enjoyed a summer trip to his home in France.

Thomas Cullen Dalton, who received his Master of Education from the College in 1963, is presently working toward his Ph.D. at the University of Virginia. Formerly a Chesapeake high school principal, he has recently been named to the faculty and administrative staff of Longwood College.

Bob and Lucy Lawler Huggett are back in Williamsburg. Bob received his master's degree in July and took a job at the Virginia Institute of Marine Science. Lucy is teaching in Newport News.

What a pleasure it was to receive a surprise phone call from Carol Anne Wylie Swaggler. She and Roger were in Washington at the end of the summer camped in the Library of Congress where Roger was doing research for his dissertation. Through a teaching assistantship and fellowship, Roger hopes to complete his work this year. They have been living in Columbus, Ohio. Carol Anne mentioned that Bruce Potter is now serving the Peace Corps in the States as a member of the Latin American desk; Kincey works for HUD in the Model Cities Program.

Additional news from the Swaggler's: Sheila Sawyer is working on her Masters while doing social work in New York. Also in New York is Marcia Eaton, who is teaching. The Reigelman's are in Iowa City where Bucky is working on his Ph.D. in English at the University of Iowa.

Steve Mansfield writes from Norfolk. Upon graduation from the University of Virginia last summer where he was an instructor in the history department, Steve received his Ph.D. and is now an assistant professor of history at Virginia Wesleyan College.

I should like to thank Jackie Krebs Peter for her alumni news letter. After completing their military tour in Germany, Polly Bean Long and Bill are now in the Washington area; Polly is now teaching here. Bette Brooks is now living in San Francisco and works for the affiliated office of the Connecticut General Insurance Company. Upon receiving her M.S. in biology, Karen Back is now attending medical school at Emory University in Georgia, and is considering pediatrics as a career. Carleen Sunden Rollins is in Richmond where husband Dixon is attending medical school. Jackie and Karl Peter have been living in Fayetteville, North Carolina, where Karl serves as a Judge Advocate at Fort Bragg. They are looking forward to moving to Williamsburg this April.

It was a pleasure to see Bill Corley this fall for a visit on his way to Williamsburg. Bill works for the firm of Booze, Allen, and Hamilton, Management Consultants in Chicago. He says he is doing quite a bit of traveling to Canada, projecting hospital expansion there, as well as visits to Williamsburg to see his fiance; Bill plans to be married this March.

John Randolph and Maynard have been living in Williamsburg; John is now the Head Track Coach at William and Mary.

Craig Carlson '65 is teaching English at Augsburg College in Minnesota; Craig is being married in December.

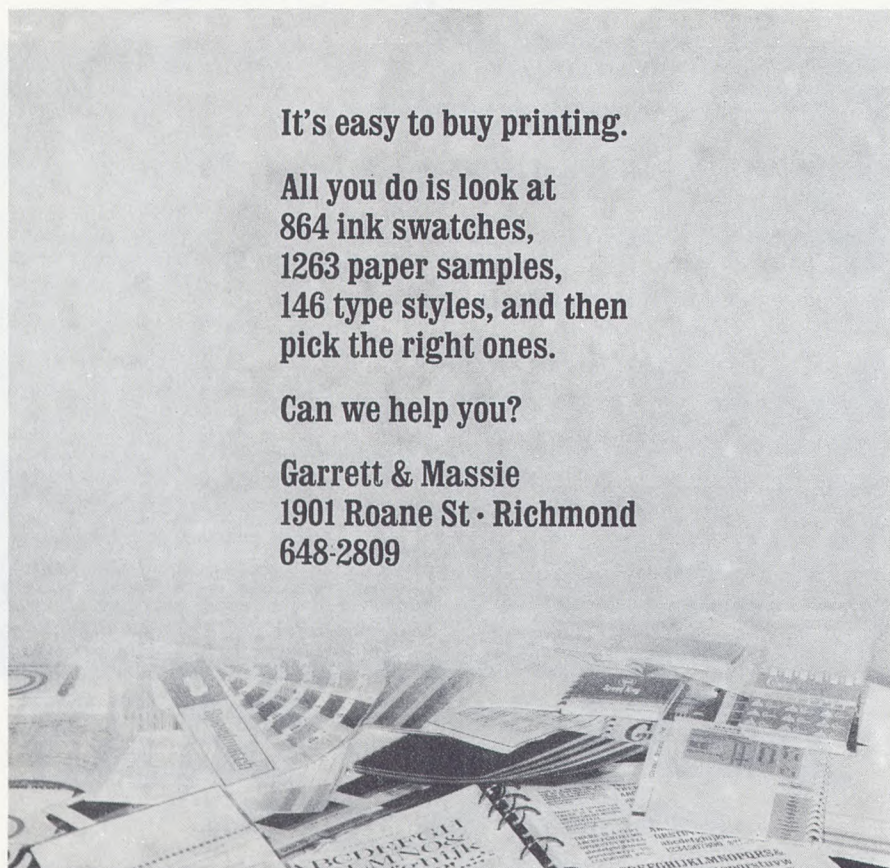

Joanne Arnett Murphy and Paul now reside in Philadelphia where Paul attends Wharton Business School concentrating in International Business; Joanne teaches high school English.

After a year teaching English at the Briam Institute in Madrid, Spain, Patty Vaught has returned to Charlottesville and works at the University of Virginia library.

This fall, quite a crew from William and Mary was involved in the Arlington Theater production of "A Funny Thing Happened On The Way To The Forum." Jim Perry produced the show while Denny Bing served as director. Tom Ward, who teaches World Civilization at Langley High School in Fairfax County, played the lead role. Other members of the cast included Bobbie Mulcahey, Judy Davis Johnson, Steve Lopez '62, Judy Childs '62, and Ginny Reid '61. It was like "old home time."

The Air Force sends news of Major Philip D. Cox who recently completed his final combat mission over Vietnam. Major Cox served as one of the 15 pilots who introduced the A-37 tactical fighter with the 604th Air Commando Squadron at Bien Hoa.

The Class of 1968 of George Washington University announced that Ed Watters has received his M.D. degree. Ed served an elective in tropical medicine during his senior year at Phebe Hospital in Monrovia, Liberia. He is now an intern at the Mercy Hospital in Pittsburgh, and plans a residency in internal medicine.

Anne F. O'Hare of Plainfield, N.J. has been promoted to programming analyst in the Prudential Insurance Company's group annuity department. She is active in the Junior League there.

After completing his service with the Navy last February, Hugh Miller worked at the Securities and Exchange Commission in Washington. He was married last June to Pat Jackson of Norfolk. They are now living in Atlanta where Hugh is enrolled in the MBA program at Emory University; Pat is teaching fifth grade. Last spring, Hugh had the opportunity to see Priscilla Hegeman Skjei and Steve '63 at the University of North Carolina. Priscilla is working on her Master in education and Steve on his Ph.D. in city planning.

James Meek wrote that he finished a Ph.D. in Biochemistry at the University of North Carolina last August. He is now spending a year doing postdoctoral research in Sweden.

John H. Randolph and Gay West Wilcox both received Master of Education degrees from William and Mary in August.

Charlie and Anne Weaver are expecting another child in March. Charlie is still football coach at Denbigh High School in Newport News.

I am looking forward to hearing from all of you soon. Have a good year.

Fortunately our classmates' activities are more varied than my own. I am still teaching here in Charlottesville while my husband finishes medical school at the University of Virginia. Malinda Duke Ball is also back for another year of teaching while Stuart completes his last year of graduate school. Pat Ward is continuing her studies here at the University.

Kim Routh Gaines and her husband Pete are living in New York City. Pete works for the New York Telephone Company. Kim has changed jobs and is currently working as a travel counselor for Virginia in Rockefeller Center. Ellen Rennolds Brouwer works in the same office.

Janet (Beers) and Felix Bandann III met at Union Theological Seminary in New York City in 1965 where they were both studying for the Masters Degree in Philosophy of Religion. Since they were married, they have been working in Harlem with the New York Urban League's Street Academy Program, an effort to encourage and help high school "drop-outs" continue their education into college.

B. J. Rudman has gone to the Netherlands on a Fulbright Scholarship for a year's study, completing his Ph.D. in economics. Last year he taught introductory economics courses here in the States and, during the summer, worked for the Treasury Department in Washington, D.C.

Nancy Mitkiewicz returned from her Peace Corps service in Biafra and Tanzania last August.

Carol Miller Olson and Don came back to Tidewater from Charleston, South Carolina, for Don's last Navy assignment. They are living in Virginia Beach where Don is attached to the Amphibious Force. Mary Lynne Kerby Bowman and Darby have joined the ranks of Navy families. Darby finished law school at the University of Virginia last June.

Marcia Anderson Partch spent seven weeks in France at a summer institute in preparation for another year teaching French at Bayside High School in Virginia Beach.

Bobbi McDermott, who thoughtfully provided much of the preceding news, has left Warrenton, Va., where she taught science at Fauquier High School. Bobbi is now living in Atlanta where she spent the summer working as a "Kelly Girl."

Bobbi also reported that Tom Corbin has been teaching English at Fauquier High School in Warrenton.

Ann Meade (Baskerville) Simpson sent a long letter concerning news of interest. Bob finished law school last February and went in the service in March. Now, after three moves, they are living in Sunnyvale, California, about 40 minutes from San Francisco. Anne Meade has seen Barbara Wampler Melby and her husband Tom at their home in San Francisco. Ginny (Blount) and Denny Nagel are also in California, now living in Los Angeles.

Steve "Rat" Merrill's wedding last June provided an occasion for many William and Mary graduates to get together. Diane (Owens) and Bill attended the wedding, leaving their home in Augusta, Georgia, where Bill is now stationed. Denny Owens was on hand with the news that he will be going to law school this year at William and Mary. Rusty Sharp was also able to get to Virginia Beach for the ceremony.

Mel Booker and Billy Wellons have passed their bar exams. Jay Anthony is out of the

SIMILARITY

IN SOME WAYS, a good clothing store is like a beauty parlor. The objectives are much the same—spruce you up, bring out the best in you, even make you feel better. At the Williamsburg Shop, the customer's transformation, however, is sartorial rather than tonsorial. Our store, of course, offers numerous other pleasant experiences above and beyond its department for ladies' and gentlemen's wear. Try our sections devoted to gifts, notions, housewares, footwear and luggage. Above all, remember: "Dress right, you can't afford not to. Your clothes never stop talking about you."

Army after a tour of duty in Korea. He planned to go to graduate school this year.

Linda Combs is working at Virginia Beach and Marty Boyd is still employed in Richmond.

Ann Singleton Beebe and Matt are now settled in Grants, New Mexico. Matt is enjoying his job with the Kerr-McGee Nuclear Fuels Division, working as a mining geologist. Ann has been busy house hunting and working with the William and Mary Fund.

Mary Liz Smith Sadler, Sam, and their daughter Mary Leslie are now living in College housing behind Sorority Court. Sam is working on a Masters Degree while continuing to work in the William and Mary Admissions Office. He has been "on the road" this fall with College Night programs.

Tricia Davis Cleveland and Bill are still in Wailula, Hawaii. Sara Shafer has moved out of a quonset hut into more permanent quarters in Okinawa where she is teaching in an Armed Forces school.

William L. Wellons, who received his J.D. degree from William and Mary in 1968, has been appointed filed claim representative in the Hampton office of the State Farm Mutual Automobile Insurance Co.
