Comment:

HOW DOES one measure the capability of an entering class of students?

The Admissions Office each year must evaluate the applications of more than 5,500 prospective freshmen and another 500 or more hopeful transfer students.

By the standards it uses to measure potential, the Class of 1974 is impressive.

For example, more than 68 per cent of the freshmen graduated from the top tenth of their senior classes. Last year, it was 65 per cent. In 1959, it was only 25 per cent.

On the Scholastic Aptitude Test score basis, the current freshmen scored a mean of 607 on the verbal section, and 624 on the math. That is comparable with 1969, and nearly 100 points each above 1959.

These are not the only criteria applied to applications, however.

Of the total freshman complement of 873, the Admissions Office found that 847 took part in one or more extra-curricular activities in school. Further, 771 were active in two or more such programs, and 441 were active in four or more. The most popular activity was the Honor Club, followed by service clubs. Newspapers, yearbooks, musical organizations and others were also popular in the pre-William and Mary days of the current freshmen.

Adding to these credentials is the fact that the class has 59 National Merit Scholarship winners or finalists, and 218 who received letters of commendation from the competition. There were 114 captains of varsity athletic teams.

Eight per cent of the class are children of alumni, and 14 per cent are graduates of private secondary schools.

The 873 freshmen were chosen from among 5,504 applicants, of which 3,056 were from out-of-state. Only 281 non-Virginians were enrolled, however, compared with 592 residents of the state. There are 475 men and 398 women. Of the 209 transfer students from 768 who applied, 107 are men and 102 women; 34 are from out-of-state, the remainder from within Virginia.

Of the Virginians, 25 per cent are

Proposed Alumni House

Here is an architect's conception of the proposed Alumni House described below. At left is the colonnade entrance to Cary Field. The existing Bright House (formerly Kappa Alpha Fraternity) is in the center, flanked by one of the two new wings which would be erected as part of the plan. The drawing, by John Morton '58, shows how the setting might appear during Homecoming, with tents for various classes arranged around the lawn.

from Northern Virginia, 21 per cent from the Peninsula section; 14 per cent from Richmond and its area suburbs; nine per cent from Tidewater and five per cent from the Piedmont area. The other 26 per cent are scattered around the state.

BACK RENT: After a lapse of four years, William and Mary has again paid up its rental. A group of students and the head of the ancient languages department, Dr. J. Ward Jones, presented Governor Linwood Holton with an original verse in Latin on November 4. The presentation was made one day before the deadline set by the Charter for the annual payment of rent in that form.

The last time such a presentation was made was in 1966, when Governor Mills E. Godwin, Jr. '36, visited the campus for Burgesses Day. Prior to then, a presentation was made in the 1930s, but available information indicates no other rent payments were made after 1776.

Governor Holton declared the rent was paid up, and the delegation journeyed back to Williamsburg.

CLASS GIFT: The Class of 1970, as part of its gift to the College, contributed $536 to the new Department of Religion for the purchase of library books. Dr. James C. Livingston, head of the department, said most of the money will be used to begin the "Class of 1970 Collection in Religious and Social Ethics."

"Because of the widespread interest among members of the graduating class in the field of contemporary social ethics," he said, "the Department considered it appropriate as a memorial to the class."

ALUMNI HOUSE: Illustrated above is the proposed Alumni House, a project presented in November to the Board of Visitors for study. The drawing is part of a presentation made by John Morton '58 of New Orleans, an architect, who studied the former Kappa Alpha House next to Cary Field, and prepared preliminary plans for its conversion.

The former fraternity house is now known as the Bright House, and is used by the College as apartments for faculty and staff.

The Alumni House would include alumni offices, accommodations for guests, and social and dining facilities. It is surrounded by extensive parking areas and its location next to Cary Field makes it ideal for football weekends, as a headquarters for returning alumni.

Until now, alumni headquarters have been on the older section of the campus, with limited space and almost nonexistent parking facilities. Currently, the alumni office is in the second floor of Ewell Hall, formerly old Phi Beta Kappa Hall, and there are no overnight accommodations or social facilities available to William and Mary men and women.

Reporting on: advice to alumni on campus unrest ... a critical money shortage for colleges and universities

■ Alumni Responsibility: Pointing to a need for "reconciliation" as its central theme, the President's Commission on Campus Unrest addressed its recent report to many segments of the campus community, as well as to political leaders and the general public.

"Even when there is no disorder on the campus," the commission said, all those involved in higher education must accept "greater responsibility for the well-being and revitalization" of academic institutions. The panel, headed by William W. Scranton, former governor of Pennsylvania, offered this advice to alumni:

—That they "refrain from hasty judgments on complex university problems and . . . avoid stereotyping entire groups because of the actions of a few of their members."

—That alumni not insist "that universities remain changeless, or be surprised if their institutions are not the same as they were when the alumni were students."

—That "constructive criticism and sustained financial support from alumni are essential to the vitality" of colleges and universities, many of which are in an "unprecedented financial squeeze." The commission added that "disagreement with specific university policies or actions should not lead alumni to withdraw their general support from higher education."

Speaking more generally, the panel warned that continued intolerance and hostility between young people and other citizens would threaten the "very survival of the nation." It called on President Nixon to use the prestige of his office to "urge all Americans, at once, to step back from the battlelines into which they are forming."

By the time the President received the commission's report, his views on campus violence already had received wide public attention. In a speech at Kansas State University, he declared that only the academic community—not the government—could "save" higher education. In a subsequent letter to educators, he said there could be "no substitute for the acceptance of responsibility" by college administrators and faculties for campus order.

Then, in a surprise move, the President asked Congress to authorize immediate federal intervention in cases of campus bombings and arson. The request was quickly approved and signed into law, although some legislators warned that it could result in "prowling FBI agents" and encourage an "aura of repression."

■ Hitting Bottom? The long-expected "financial crisis" in higher education has struck with such force this year that college administrators can scarcely find words strong enough to describe it. "The Day of Judgment is upon us," says one. "It is here—now." Another says the money shortage is so grave that it outranks student dissent as the main problem of the 1970's.

The situation is acute because several factors have come together at the same time. Inflation, soaring educational costs, declining stock prices, lagging federal aid, public hostility to increased state support—all have combined to put a tremendous drain on institutional budgets, especially those of private colleges. At least a score of colleges have closed in the past year or so, and many others report substantial operating deficits.

With tuition rising almost everywhere, small private colleges seem to be in particular danger of pricing themselves out of business. Admissions people report an accelerating shift of enrollments from such institutions to state universities and to low-cost community colleges close to students' homes. A growing number of private institutions have had to seek state support to supplement their income from private sources.

At the established public institutions, meanwhile, officials say that the steady rise of state aid in recent years has failed to keep pace with their expanding needs. State appropriations for higher education's operating expenses in 1970-71 have topped $7-billion—a new high—but for many public institutions that apparently is not adequate. "Austerity operations are becoming a fact of life," says one of their associations.

Federal aid is not picking up much of the slack. A government agency reports that the growth of U.S. financial support, which averaged about 24 per cent in the mid-sixties, has slowed considerably since then.

■ Limited Access: Despite the addition of some 600 colleges and universities in a 10-year period, more than half a million high school graduates a year fail to continue their education "simply because they happen not to live near an accessible college," according to a study by the College Entrance Examination Board. It showed that only 789 of 2,600 two- and four-year institutions in the country could meet the test of "accessibility"—nonselective, within reasonable commuting distance, and costing no more than $400 a year in tuition and fees.

Davis Y. Paschall to End Term as College President

President Davis Y. Paschall '32 will resign for health reasons next August 31, after slightly more than eleven years as William and Mary's chief executive. He agreed to serve the College after that time in some other appropriate, part-time capacity.

Announcement of his resignation was made November 7 at the regular meeting of the Board of Visitors. It was accepted with regret by the Board, which said it would take steps in the near future to select a successor. Dr. Paschall's announcement was made only a few days after "Highlights of Progress," his ten-year report, was mailed to alumni, parents and friends of the College.

Dr. Paschall, 59 years old, became the 23rd President of his alma mater on August 16, 1960, after serving for three years as State Superintendent of Public Instruction.

Retiring two months prior to Dr. Paschall will be Dr. W. Melville Jones, vice president for academic affairs, who reaches the mandatory retirement age of 70 in June, 1970. He joined the faculty in 1928 and has been the chief academic officer of the College for most of Dr. Paschall's tenure in office. Dr. Jones had originally planned to step down in February, but agreed to remain until June in the light of Dr. Paschall's intention to resign.

Because the Board was taken by surprise at the resignation, it had no time to draft at its November meeting a formal resolution accepting it and setting forth the steps which will be taken in the light of it.

Dr. Paschall, who typically spent 16 to 18 hours a day on College affairs during the past ten years, made his decision based on his doctor's advice to reduce his heavy workload or face a serious illness. He apparently concluded that, in light of the increasing pressures on a college president typical across the nation, he could not do so without relinquishing his presidential responsibilities.

He and Mrs. Paschall (Agnes Winn '31) had purchased a summer home, Riverwood, on the Chickahominy River several years ago, and they are in the process of renovating it as their permanent home once they leave the President's House next year. It is about ten miles from the campus, and is located where the Chickahominy joins the James River, a peaceful setting in sharp contrast to the noisy, congested locale of the President's House near Williamsburg's main intersection.

Advice to Entering Freshmen

By Carson Barnes, Jr.
Dean of Students

EACH OF YOU has paid the College of William & Mary a great tribute—with over 1,200 colleges to choose from, you have selected William & Mary as a college where you wish to spend the next four years.

William & Mary has in turn paid you a tribute—the College, which counts among its alumni Thomas Jefferson, John Marshall, James Monroe and Benjamin Harrison has screened, tested, interviewed, analyzed and found you, not only competent to succeed here, but has selected you from over 6,000 applicants as one most likely to succeed. ♦

Almost half of you will prove us wrong—approximately 40% will not succeed. Why then, will only 60%, 6 out of 10, succeed in earning the degree for which you come?

Some will marry and take a job to support a family.

Some will withdraw because of injury, ill health or emergency at home.

Some will just plain lose interest and join the working world.

Some will fail to meet the academic standards.

None of you will be forced to drop out because of either inability or unavailability of funds to continue.

For those of you who will not succeed a commitment by you today could change the unfavorable results. With the possible exception of injury, all of the casualties I have mentioned could be avoided, right now, by a simple commitment or decision on your part.

The decision: to put your academic work first, ahead of all else, and if necessary, to the exclusion of all else.

Is William & Mary for me? That is a question some of you will ask yourselves sometime during the year.

The decision to enroll at William & Mary has already been made and, for most of you, it has been a sound, valid, and wise decision.

Unfortunately, a few of you are here not by personal choice but because parents wanted you to attend college, your friends were making application for college and it seemed the thing to do, perhaps even to delay for awhile military service or simply because you were unable to decide, with any certainty, what you wanted to do in life.

(Since the young ladies selected a coeducational institution we can assume that, you were not without some knowledge of the presence here of a great many young men.)

Some of you will come to me or another Dean during the session to discuss withdrawing from William & Mary—you may be somewhat surprised to find that we may agree with you that you should withdraw. If a college education and degree is not essential to the kind of life and vocation you desire, you may be wasting precious time and money.

I'm to talk about college opportunity—not to preach.

Opportunities at William & Mary are numerous—so numerous, that should you attempt to enjoy all of them, you will surely fall into that 40% who fail the primary goal—of completing the four year degree program. More important than the degree itself, however, is the knowledge to be gained and, hopefully, the wisdom to use it for yourself and mankind. Several opportunities are worthy of comment: (the primary one is, of course, the opportunity to concentrate in over 20 different subject fields).

1. The opportunity for developing lasting friendships from among your classmates, members of the faculties and

What does a Dean say to nearly 900 new collegians from all over the nation and world, who enter college in uncertain times? Reprinted here are the remarks of Carson Barnes, Jr., Dean of Men from 1959-1970 and current Dean of Students. They are worthwhile reading for parents, especially, and William and Mary alumni.

the Williamsburg community. Some of your relationships may even exceed friendship—you may find the one with whom you will choose to spend the rest of your life—(frightening isn't it gentlemen?)

2. The young men, particularly, will find many opportunities to participate in intercollegiate athletics and intramural sports. Your dormitories and fraternities will sponsor teams in 23 different sports.

3. Both men and women will have an opportunity in February to choose whether you wish to join a fraternity or sorority.

Approximately 35-40% of our students join such organizations. The rewards of close friends, opportunities for leadership within a small group, can be highly beneficial if you have some time to participate and can afford the extra expense. Joining a fraternity or sorority is not essential to your adjustment or enjoyment of college life, but it is a choice you will freely make.

4. Other extracurricular opportunities—Activities not specifically related to your academic courses are termed extracurricular activities and these opportunities abound at William & Mary.

At 7 p.m. Wednesday in Phi Beta Kappa Hall, the Student Association will sponsor Interest Night. This is an excellent opportunity for you to become acquainted with the many extracurricular activities and to talk directly with upperclass students who are participating in them.

The Flat Hat is a weekly student newspaper which chronicles the daily affairs of the College. Its editors are usually anxious to recruit freshmen to their newspaper staff. You will find the same true of the William & Mary Review, a literary publication published twice a year by student editors and the Colonial Echo, the College annual.

The College offers many musical opportunities for its students. Participation in the College choir, chorus, band, orchestra and small vocal and instrumental groups is possible for interested and qualified students. Faculty and students participate in the William & Mary theatre presentations of musical productions.

Theatre productions, intercollegiate debate council, the College television and radio studios, the College service clubs, Alpha Phi Omega and Circle K offer a full spectrum of student extracurricular activities.

Perhaps never again will you have the unique opportunity to be exposed to the heterogeneity of people, attitudes and philosophies as during the next four years. The wide difference in attitudes and beliefs and values which you will encounter in your contacts with fellow students and others in the College community may, at first be confusing, even upsetting, but this is an opportunity to observe, evaluate and to choose, hopefully, your own life course with more conviction and wisdom than would be possible otherwise.

A word of caution here—if you explore the unusual and the views of others, you should do so with two ground rules:

You must explore the views of others with a tolerance for their right to have and to express views different from your own.

In the exploration of differing views, you must always attempt to discriminate between the logic of the words expressed and the wisdom (or effects) of adopting the views as a pattern for your own personal actions.

You will probably never again find such a convenient opportunity for personal contact and exchange with professors who are experts in so many academic areas. You should

‘You will never again experience the newness, the excitement and the stimulation of your college years.’

initiate, create and expand these opportunities whenever possible. Don't be afraid of the professors' superior knowledge, but respect them for it. Through such contacts you will touch the essence of the intellectual life at William & Mary.

You have an opportunity for dissent, to be critical—perhaps a greater freedom to be critical with less consequences than at any other time in your life. (Don't overdo it) We do not seek to graduate students who are content with the mediocre, the drab, the commonplace, the immoral in their lives and society, but those who will ever seek to improve themselves, their work and their surroundings. Your time in the saddle will come quite soon—a few years from now and I hope you will have some workable solutions to the problems you inherit.

Our efforts at William & Mary are toward open channels for expressing one's self responsibly. Responsibly is in a manner where we do not seek to injure others or to ridicule them for their ideas and where the right to obtain an education in an environment free from coercion, threat or violence is paramount. Dissent can be productive but it can be expressed in a variety of ways other than mass disruptive activities or mass demonstrations. Some of history's greatest social changes have been made as a result of dialogue by small groups of men expressing differing views but recognizing the integrity and the unique responsibilities of each other.

As members of our College community, you have the opportunity to enjoy, at nominal cost, cultural, educational, social and athletic events of all kinds:

Cultural—Under the auspices of the Committee on Arts and Lectures, the College seeks to provide its students opportunities for enjoying a wide range of public lectures, concerts and exhibitions. The William & Mary Concert Series annually offers to students, faculty and area residents 4 or 5 performances by outstanding artists of the professional concert stage.

Educational—As a member of the University Center in Virginia the College participates in a visiting scholar's program which annually brings to the campus public lectures, readings and seminars, a great many distinguished scholars in all fields of learning, renown authors and artists, and leading figures in public life.

Athletics—In athletics, you can have an opportunity to participate or to support as a spectator championship wrestling, swimming and track teams. Our football teams participate against some of the best—University of Miami, West Virginia, Navy and Syracuse. You will have an opportunity to see our basketball team open on December 5 in the new convocation hall against North Carolina and to participate against the number 2 team in the country, the University of Jacksonville.

As a last comment, let me remind you of the most significant opportunity of all. You will never again experience the newness, the excitement and the stimulation of your college years. The opportunity to enjoy these years and your days at William & Mary is here for those who can grasp it. Do by all means seek some pleasure, some appreciation of the many opportunities and some pure fun.

If at times you find “the establishment” frustrating, try to maintain a “sense of humor” which, incidentally, most of us within the establishment find helpful at times.

Let me offer some suggestions which you can apply immediately—some of which you have heard many times before.

1. That the only stupid question is the one you do not ask. Question your faculty advisor and your professors—find their offices and find out their office hours. For men students each men's dormitory has a Resident Counselor (law student) and several dormitory managers (upperclassmen), find out who they are and the office hours of the Resident Counselor. For the women—each residence hall has a housemother or Head Resident; House President and freshmen counselors (upperclasswomen). Get to know them and seek their advice.

2. Take notes in class. Rewrite them, if necessary, and review them frequently.

3. Go to class and get ahead of the course. Try to stay a chapter ahead in your reading assignments.

4. Find a place where you can comfortably study. It should preferably be your room but have a 2nd, 3rd or 4th choices.

5. Don't over-estimate your ability. If you fail to do the reading and required work of the course, your native intelligence and SAT scores will be worth exactly “0” in tabulating your grade for the course.

This morning, as a part of your Orientation to William & Mary, I have offered some unsolicited advice—

After registration for classes, very little advice will be offered unless you solicit it from your advisor, professors, resident counselor or a Dean.

Flat Hat, College Observer, Newsletters

Communications Abound as Students Set New Patterns of Publishing

THE VOLUME of communications media on campus increased sharply this fall, a localized reversal of the national trend toward monopolies in the field.

Two regular newspapers for students are now published, and the Flat Hat is now twice-weekly. The Student Association issues its own mass-distributed weekly newsletter; the Student Bar Association has a periodic Amicus Curiae newspaper; there is a weekly faculty newsletter supplemented by a periodic number devoted to personal accomplishments. The campus radio station, WCWM, is also on the air nearly all day, seven days a week.

The College Observer is published on Tuesdays by the local Virginia Gazette, although it is the product of a staff of students. The Observer, distributed free to all students and faculty, is also inserted in the regular weekly edition of the local newspaper sold to subscribers and on the news stands. In one sense, it is the culmination of efforts by some students to establish a competitive editorial voice on the campus. In another sense, it is a way for local merchants to reach their prospective customers among the students and faculty.

The Observer carries editorials, customarily signed, and "guest columns," reviews and the like.

The Flat Hat's emergence into a twice-weekly (Tuesday and Friday) newspaper was projected before the emergence of the new competitor. Formerly, the Flat Hat was printed in the plant of the Virginia Gazette on a weekly basis. Rising prices and less flexible deadlines at the local plant prompted student editors to review alternatives. Their conclusion, backed by a special faculty-administration committee which met last summer, was that the Flat Hat could purchase its own photo-typesetting equipment, prepare its own layout ready for the offset camera, have the printing done 60 miles away, and come out twice a week—all for about what the weekly edition had formerly cost.

The meaning of this is that after the current academic year, when the $10,000 equipment outlay is paid off from revenues, the annual cost of producing the Flat Hat should decrease sharply—even at twice a week. It means that editors must drive on Tuesdays to Ashland, Virginia, north of Richmond, to have the tabloid Flat Hat put to press and printed; and to Franklin, Virginia, near Suffolk, to have the Friday edition published. But it also means that the news content is almost up-to-the-hour.

Meanwhile, editors of the Colonial Echo—the yearbook—say they plan to publish this year in two volumes, the first of which would be available in the spring while seniors are still on the campus. The other would be printed for early summer distribution.

The College

It was a good year for "name" speakers at the College, as campus organizations started their seasons early in the fall.

Among the early notables on the schedule was consumer protection specialist Ralph Nader, invited by the Thomas Jefferson Inn of Phi Delta Phi Law Fraternity. He was to talk on "The Law and Environmental Hazards," reflecting on his recent efforts to draw attention to ecological issues.

The three-year-old College-Wide Reading Program announced a full roster of speakers beginning with Secretary of the Interior Walter J. Hickel, whose appearances among younger groups have often been controversial. The Reading Program's theme this year is "Man and His Environment." Among others on the schedule for the year is Chicago's Saul Alinsky, the man who specializes in organizing groups for political action.

The current director of the Internal Revenue Service, Randolph W. Thrower, was among speakers at the 16th Williamsburg Tax Conference, sponsored by the Marshall-Wythe School of Law for Virginia tax attorneys and accountants. Richard W. McLaren, the chief anti-trust official in the present national administration, was among the speakers for a two-day symposium on anti-trust and international trade, co-sponsored by the law school and the American Society of International Law. The symposium was developed by Professor E. Blythe Stason Jr.

Meanwhile, the perennial question of the Commencement Speaker was being aired by members of the senior class. The Class of 1970 had invited Sen. Edmund S. Muskie of Maine, and the current seniors favored New York's Mayor John V. Lindsay as first choice among 10 possible invitees.

Student Bar Earns Distinction

The Marshall-Wythe Student Bar Association has been awarded the most outstanding chapter award by the Law Student Division of the American Bar Association.

The local chapter was cited for its active program over the past year which included establishment of a student placement program for law graduates and second year students seeking summer clerkships.

The chapter was also instrumental in working for passage of the Model Court Rule in Virginia, approved by the General Assembly, which permits third year law students to represent indigent clients in court without compensation.

The Law Day program on campus last spring and publication of the student newspaper "The Colonial Lawyer," as well as many social activities were listed among the accomplishments of the Marshall Wythe chapter.

The award was announced at the annual convention of the American Bar Association.

Trouble-Shooters Being Trained

A program to train "trouble-shooters" for the emotionally disturbed child in the public schools, is currently being undertaken at the College.

Under a two-year cooperative program with the Norfolk city schools, the Division of Special Education of the School of Education is training crisis-resource teachers to staff selected schools in Norfolk. The project is being funded by the Department of Health Education and Welfare for the Norfolk division.

The program will train teachers to work with emotionally disturbed children, giving them help on a short term basis so they can return to regular classes rather than being isolated in special education classes.

The program was initiated by Dr. Douglas Prillaman of the School of Education's Special Education Division, who is serving as liaison between the college and the Norfolk schools. Dr. Prillaman who joined the William and Mary faculty in 1969, has worked in the field of special education, both as a teacher and supervisor in Portsmouth and later in Arlington.

The concept of the crisis-resource teacher is an attempt to keep as many children as possible in the main stream of education. It has been found, said Dr. Prillaman, that children placed in special education classes tend to stay there. They become accustomed to the self-contained classroom and the security of a small pupil-teacher ratio.

Staff Appointments, Changes Made

Several changes in administrative positions greeted the advent of the fall semester.

John E. Donaldson, an assistant vice president of the College for two years, became Associate Dean of the Marshall-Wythe School of Law, a position which had been vacant since James P. Whyte Jr. became Dean.

Harlan Schone was made Acting Dean of Graduate Studies for the arts and sciences, succeeding John E. Selby in the post. Schone, a physicist, has responsibilities for graduate programs offered by the Faculty of Arts and Sciences.

Dr. Selby became Acting Editor of the William and Mary Quarterly, published by the Institute of Early American History and Culture. He temporarily succeeds Thad Tate, who is on leave for a year to undertake a research project under a fellowship from the American Council of Learned Societies.

In the Admissions Office, Mrs. Lillian Poe of Hampton has become Assistant to the Dean of Admissions. Mrs.

Poe, who is working especially among prospective black students and those already enrolled, holds her bachelor's degree from Hampton Institute and her master's from the University of Virginia. She is a candidate for William and Mary's Ph.D. degree in history. Her appointment at William and Mary is for the current academic year.

Graduate Program Conferrals Spiral

By next summer, the College will have awarded more than 2,050 graduate degrees since graduate programs were stepped up in 1964, the State Council of Higher Education has been told.

The report on graduate studies was made during the State Council's biennial visit to the campus.

The large share of graduate degrees expected to be conferred during the period 1964-71 are in the areas of education, law and business administration. Among other disciplines, physics, mathematics and biology have the largest numbers.

Currently, the report said, the College has an enrollment of 851 graduate students, full and part-time. In the seven years covered by the study, total head-count graduate enrollment is 6,350.

Campus Regulations Codified in Booklet

MAJOR POLICIES and regulations governing student activities at the College have been codified in a new student handbook mailed in August to the homes of its 4,000 students.

The publication reflects recent decisions of the College Board of Visitors—after consultation, in many instances, with student leaders—and provides clear definitions of conduct which is prohibited, as disruptive.

Among its sections is one which concerns “disruptive conduct or interference with the normal functions and activities of the College,” and which is aimed at preventing acts which interfere with William and Mary's mission as an educational institution.

Other sections cover the Honor System, the 1968 Statement on Rights and Responsibilities, by-laws of the Board of Student Affairs, the constitution of the Student Association and the constitution and by-laws of the Women's Dormitory Association.

As a general statement referring to conduct of students and their social and extracurricular life, the Handbook says:

“While wishing to keep to a minimum the number of narrowly defined regulations and thereby to encourage a sense of responsibility on the part of each student and a general atmosphere of freedom on the campus, the College believes that it has an obligation to require that degree of order and satisfactory conduct which will permit the fulfillment of the educational purposes with which it is charged by law.”

“Concerted group action to violate College regulations, or interference with or disruption of College classes or other normal functions of the College will not be permitted.”

The section defines “normal functions” of the College as well as “disruptive conduct.”

Another provision restates the College's policy forbidding entertainment of persons of the opposite sex in dormitory rooms, except during established open houses. Conditions which govern open houses will be distributed in September.

The Handbook also establishes a security system for women's residences under which night security clerks will be assigned to upperclass women's dormitories between closing hour and 6 a.m. The clerks will see to the security of the buildings, admit women returning to them after curfew and maintain records involved in administering new curfew regulations. Under the new rules, sophomore, junior and senior women may remain out of their residence after curfew if parental permission is provided in writing.

Pollard Papers Given to Swem Library for Archive Collections

THE PERSONAL and professional papers of John Garland Pollard, Governor of Virginia from 1930 to 1934, have been given by members of his family to the College of William and Mary's Earl Gregg Swem Library.

The papers, numbering more than 15,000 items, join a growing collection of the papers of many noted Virginia leaders from colonial times to the present including, most recently, former Governor William M. Tuck and former Senator A. Willis Robertson, Jr.

The gift was made by Mrs. John Garland Pollard, his widow; and John Garland Pollard, Jr., Charles P. Pollard and Mrs. H. Lee Boatwright, Jr., his children.

William C. Pollard, Librarian at William and Mary, said use of the papers by researchers is restricted temporarily, until the library's manuscript department completes its inventory of them.

The College's Board of Visitors, in a resolution adopted at its September meeting, expressed its “deep appreciation” for the “generous gift of the papers of this esteemed public servant.” It called Pollard a “distinguished statesman, lawyer, educator and humanitarian.”

Pollard, who died in 1937, was a member of the Virginia Constitutional Convention of 1901-1902, Editor of the Code of Virginia of 1904. Attorney General of Virginia in 1914-17, and then a member of the Federal Board of Contract Adjustment and of the Federal Trade Commission until 1922.

That year, he became head of the College of William and Mary's School of Government and Citizenship. Following his term as Governor, he was chairman of the federal Board of Veterans Appeals, under an appointment by President Roosevelt, which position he held until his death.

Among his other positions, Pollard was the first mayor of Ginter Park, now named for him. He also served as mayor of Williamsburg from 1928 until he became Governor in 1930. While he was mayor, he worked closely with the Rev. Dr. W. A. R. Goodwin and John D. Rockefeller, Jr., in their efforts to further the restoration of the historic areas of the community.

Dr. James Roherty

Faculty Profile

Pentagon Specialist Heads Government Department Program

By S. Dean Olson

DR. JAMES M. ROHERTY is chairman of the Department of Government at the College of William and Mary, and he admits that writing a book is no job for a department chairman. It has taken him nearly five years to complete Decisions of Robert S. McNamara (University of Miami Press; Coral Gables, Florida, $7.95), but the scholastic community should be grateful for his perseverance because the book provides the first substantial look at the role of the Secretary of Defense in national security policy since that office was established at the end of World War II.

Dr. Roherty says the office has been filled by men who were either "generalists" or "functionalists." The generalist is more the politician, one who appreciates the complexities of the defense establishment and who reaches his decisions after weighing carefully the views of all the various role-players—the uniformed military, the career civil servants, industry experts. The functionalist, on the other hand, imposes change from the top, relying often, as McNamara did, on those "initiates" he brought to the defense establishment.

McNamara, Roherty says, tried to over-systematize the department with his cost effectiveness approach. While the system was not necessarily bad, he adds, McNamara introduced too much too rapidly without consulting the traditional role players in the major defense decisions.

"The tendency of the decisions coming out of this process was too conservative," he concludes. "It put too much premium on cost and too little on development of new techniques and new weapons systems. The result was that innovation almost came to a halt, although this has been offset over the past few years by a broader appreciation of all the variables."

Roherty's book is an effort to assess the role of the Secretary of Defense in the national security process rather than an attempt to sum up the McNamara years. He is convinced the office requires a "truly political man" because the national security policy process has so many variables that do not lend themselves to an easily systematized reduction. McNamara, himself, Roherty believes, has a greater appreciation of the complexities than when he went into office under President Kennedy in 1961.

Roherty has devoted more than ten years of research to the national security policy process, and his counsel has been heard by the highest offices in the land. In 1969, he was appointed to the staff of the President's Blue Ribbon Defense Panel, charged with the broad charter of studying the entire organization, structure, and operation of the Department of Defense. The Panel, headed by Gilbert W. Fitzhugh, chairman of the Board of Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, issued its Report last July. The Panel made some sweeping recommendations on organization of the Defense Department— recommendations which Roherty in staff meetings had advised against. The minority position prevailed in the final analysis, however, because Secretary of Defense Melvin Laird subsequently rejected many of the recommendations.

Roherty's association with the national security process had a much less auspicious beginning, however. Fresh out of high school in 1944, he joined the Navy as a seaman apprentice, and after basic training was assigned to the Armed Guard, the Navy's program for protecting merchant convoys crossing the Pacific. After the Japanese surrender, he was assigned to the 7th Fleet Staff which was involved in the moving of Japanese armies from China back to Japan and of Chiang Kai-shek's army from south central China to Manchuria to fight against Mao Tse-Tung's forces in the Chinese civil war.

Discharged in 1946, Roherty returned to Seattle where he had met his future wife on his way to the Pacific, and then continued to his home at Madison, Wisconsin, where he enrolled in the University of Wisconsin. After his sophomore year, he transferred to the University of Washington in Seattle where he and his fiancée were married. He received his undergraduate degree in history, and stayed for another year to attain his masters degree in political science before returning to the University of Wisconsin where he studied for his Ph.D. as the first recipient of the Robert M. Lafollette, Jr., Scholarship, named in honor of the famous Progressive Party senator.

After receiving his Ph.D. in 1956, Roherty taught government at Marquette University and Mount Mary College in Wisconsin. In 1963, he accepted a visiting professorship in the Department of Government at William and Mary. When the man he replaced decided not to return, Roherty was named a permanent member of the government department faculty. Two years later when Dr. W. Warner Moos became director of the Marshall-Wythe Institute for Research in the Social Sciences, Roherty was named chairman of the department.

Dr. Roherty has overseen some sweeping expansion in the five years of his chairmanship. The faculty has doubled, from six to 12 full-time members; the number of majors in government has increased from 100 to more than 200, making government the largest department on campus in terms of concentrators; and the new masters program, instituted in 1967, has 25 students engaged in courses or actively pursuing the thesis. In addition, the department offers two imaginative ancillary programs. In one, undergraduates can serve as summer interns in legislative, executive, and political party offices, providing them a more realistic picture of political life than the classroom can give. In the other, graduate students in the Community College Teaching program in the School of Education can take the bulk of their work in the government department, grounding them in a specific discipline for their teaching.

The government masters program is structured along traditional lines, and it leads rather naturally, Dr. Roherty says, to continued study for the Ph.D. degree. The department, however, is rethinking the concept of the program with a view toward providing a more diversified curriculum that would produce the "government careerist" with a liberal arts background. The new concept would emphasize interdisciplinary study, trading on William and Mary's strong programs in such fields as law, business administration, economics, and history.

"The actual demands put upon a young government careerist," says Dr. Roherty, "require a strong grounding in the liberal arts because he may be called upon to make judgments in so many different areas. There is scope and opportunity for the young man to make his views felt in government, but he must be appropriately educated to do so."

Dr. Roherty's views are based on practical as well as academic experience.

He has been a consultant to the National Aeronautics and Space Administration since 1967, and in 1968 he took a year's leave of absence to serve as a special assistant to the administrator for University Affairs at NASA. His job was to help certain universities set up programs in the social sciences, under NASA grants, to study earth-oriented implications of the space program.

The work with NASA has given Dr. Roherty a deep appreciation of the benefits of the space program. Weather satellites, for instance, can give almost instantaneous weather data, providing tremendous economic savings in such areas as agriculture. Earth resource survey satellites can provide for the first time an inventory of the World's agricultural, mineral, and forest resources.

While the satellites can provide the information, a wide array of social scientists is needed to deal with the problems of acquisition, interpretation, and dissemination. This is where the social science programs in the universities are being utilized. Lawyers and political scientists are being trained to look at international cooperative aspects of the satellite program. The University of California has an earth resources program to study ways of using information on forest resources. At the University of Wisconsin, a NASA program has been established to work with the weather satellite program. Roherty serves as a liaison man between NASA and these universities, and he continues periodically to visit the universities to advise NASA on the progress of the programs.

Roherty sees his study of McNamara as a partial one, and he hopes that others, including McNamara himself, will help round out the assessment of this very important office. Roherty has now turned his attention to the emerging Japanese military establishment, which has borrowed many of its concepts from the American military. Dr. Roherty has established a good relationship with the National Defense College in Tokyo. This may prove mutually beneficial, since the Japanese will probably be as interested in his views on defense as he is in theirs.

A Brief Report On Homecoming

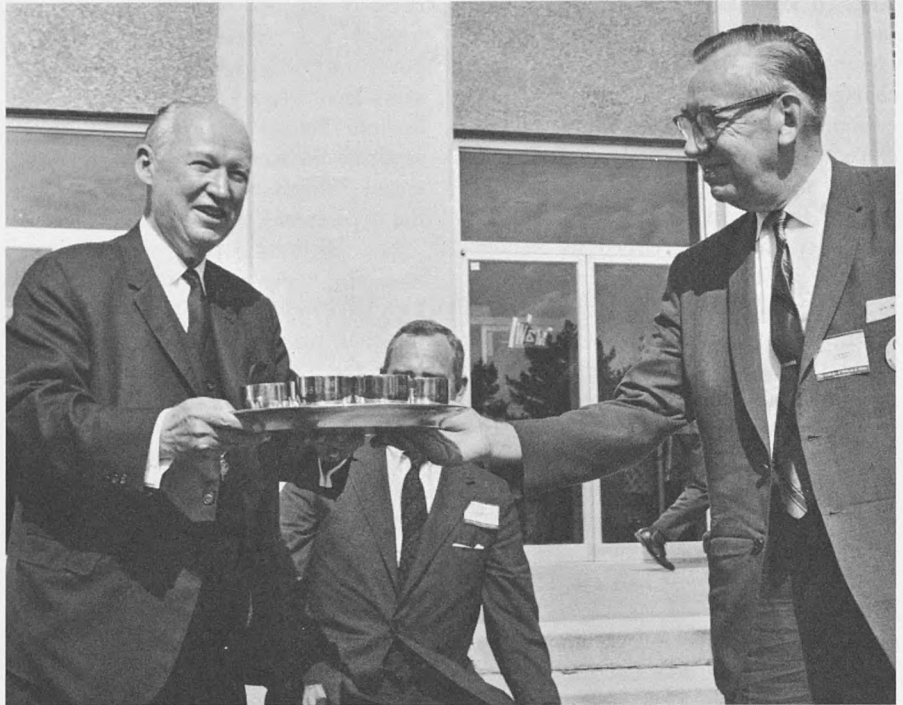

Homecoming 1970 has come and gone, and so have thousands of alumni who journeyed to Williamsburg on an unseasonably hot day to join their friends from all over the country.

The following pages are devoted to a photographic report of the weekend, including the traditional pictures of each of the reunion classes. Copies of these photographs may be ordered from Thomas L. Williams, 119 Matoaka Court, Williamsburg, Va., 23185, at $1.75 each including mailing expense.

Among highlights of the weekend were the presentation by the Society of the Alumni to President and Mrs. Davis Y. Paschall of 10 pewter Jefferson cups, one for each year they have resided in the President's House. In addition, as the result of the work of Hugh Haynie '50, an aging keg from the Kentucky bourbon country was given Dr. Paschall, adorned with the coat of arms, a corncob pipe and dangling Phi Beta Kappa and Omicron Delta Kappa keys.

Separate articles follow on the election of new members of the Alumni Board and the presentation of Alumni Medallions. Members of the Board of Visitors whose terms expired in March were also presented the traditional colorful scrolls in honor of their work.

The Homecoming Parade down Duke of Gloucester Street was carried off with fewer spectators than before, and with fewer floats, but with as much spirit as is customary. The Sunset Review in the Sunken Garden was, as always, impressive.

President Davis Y. Paschall receives a gift of ten pewter Jefferson cups from John E. Hocutt, representing Society of the Alumni Board.

Alumni Re-Elect Four Directors and Mrs. Gibbs

Four incumbents and one new member were elected by Alumni to serve on the board of directors of the Society of the Alumni.

Re-elected to a three-year term were Paul K. Lapolla '41, LaJolla, Calif., vice president of DRM Books; Allen C. Tanner '47, Newport News, Va., head of a firm of certified public accountants; Dr. Guy W. Daugherty '34, of Rochester, Minn., cardiologist at the Mayo Clinic; and Chester F. Giermak '50, of Erie, Pa., executive vice president and general manager of Eriez Magnetics. Newly elected member is Mrs. Marjorie Retzke Gibbs '44, Somerville, N. J., a former publicity writer and continuity editor for WBBM in Chicago.

The five chosen were selected from a field of fourteen which included three members of the class of '70, including class president Robert A. Beason, Whiteville, N. C.

Lapolla, is the Director of Psychology Today Book Club. From 1955-69 he was senior editor at Random House, Inc., and former editor with Doubleday and Co. He is credited with the creation of the Holiday Magazine Travel Guides and was author-editor of the Doubleday Mutual Baseball Almanac.

Tanner received his law degree from W & M and attended Columbia, Harvard and the University of Richmond. He is currently serving as secretary-treasurer of the Alumni Board, and is a frequent lecturer at local, state and national tax institutes. He was the founder of the Peninsula CPA Society and has held all elective offices in the Society. He is also president of the Virginia CPA Society.

Daugherty received his M.D. from the Medical College of Virginia and was in private practice with his father in West Virginia before becoming a Fellow in Medicine in the Mayo Foundation. He was made Head of Section of Cardiology in 1958. He is a member of the American College of Physicians and many other professional societies.

Giermak serves as a director of Eriez and Eriez of Canada, Ltd., and is a member of the Executive Committee of the Process Equipment Manufacturers Association, and a director of the Americans for Competitive Enterprise Systems and the Sales and Marketing Executives Club of Erie.

After an active undergraduate career as "Pan Hel" president and news editor for the Flat Hat newspaper, Mrs. Gibbs joined the staff of WBBM in Chicago. In 1950 she married Wayne F. Gibbs, Jr., '44, who is with Good-year Tire and Rubber Co. She has served as Class Secretary for five years and has been active in alumni activities.

The Alumni Medallion

Alumni Medallions given for "services and loyalty" were presented to five outstanding alumni at the annual meeting of the Society of the Alumni.

Awards were made to the Rev. John Boyd Bentley, '19, former Bishop of Alaska; Aubrey A. Roberts, '35, President of the American Association of Insurance Companies; Dixon L. Foster, '44, Judge of the 12th District Circuit Court; Ernest Linwood Wright, '15, President Emeritus of Darlington School; and Robert S. Hornsby, '41, a member of the City Council of Williamsburg.

Bishop Bentley, a native of Hampton, attended Episcopal Theological Seminary. He went to Alaska as a missionary from 1921-25, was named Archdeacon of the Yukon, 1930-31; Suffragan Bishop of Alaska, 1931-42, and Bishop of Alaska, 1943-47. He served as Director of the Overseas Department and Vice President of the National Council of the Protestant Episcopal Church from 1948 until his retirement in 1964. He holds honorary degrees from the Theological Seminary in Virginia, General Theological Seminary, New York; and St. Paul's University, Tokyo. He served as assistant minister at Bruton Parish Church in Williamsburg from 1926-30. Bishop Bentley currently resides in Hampton.

Roberts received an LL.B. from Temple University and began his law career in 1938 when he joined the Reliance Insurance Company as an associate counsel. In 1961 he was named Executive Vice President. In 1962 he became president of Pilot Insurance Co., of Canada; in 1963 President and chairman of the Board of Central Standard Life Insurance Co.; in 1964, President and Chief Executive Office of Reliance Insurance Co.; in 1964, President of the American Equitable Assurance Company and President of the New York Fire Insurance Co.; in 1968 he was made President of the American Association of Insurance companies and President of the National Association of Casualty and Surety Executives.

He is a former member of the Philadelphia Crime Commission and he currently occupies the No. 2 chair of the Pennsylvania Hospital Board of Managers, the chair originally held by Benjamin Franklin, the founder.

Judge Foster is a member of the law firm of Foster, Clarke and Johnston in Lively, Va. He was president and director of Irvington Boat Basin, Inc., Chesapeake Banking Co.; past president of the Northern Neck Bar Association and a member of the Virginia State and American Bar Associations. He is a member of the Board of Supervisors of Lancaster County and a former member of the Irvington Town Council. He served as president of the Alumni Board in 1968 and '69. He was appointed Circuit Court Judge in 1967.

Wright received his M.A. from the University of Virginia and a Doctor of Pedagogy from Davidson in 1945. He was headmaster of Darlington School in Rome, Ga., from 1920 until 1954, president from 1954 until his retirement in 1963 when he became President Emeritus. He is a former member of the Board of Regents of the Georgia University System, 1959-65, a trustee of Shorter College and Thornwood School, and was on the College Entrance Examination Board, 1951-54. He has been president of many educational associations of local, state and regional nature, a member and frequent office holder of many historical societies in Virginia and Georgia including the Northern Neck Historical Society, and has participated in many civic activities.

Hornsby is a petroleum marketer and real estate developer and a member of the City Council of Williamsburg. He is Board Chairman of the Hornsby Oil Co.; President of the Heritage Development Co., Heritage Realty Co., Middle Plantation Holding Co., and a member of the Board of Directors of the United Virginia Bank of Williamsburg. He is a member of the Board of Directors of the Williamsburg Chamber of Commerce, the Peninsula Industrial Committee, and the Daycroft School of Greenwich, Conn. He is a past president of the William and Mary Alumni Society, 1961 and '62, the William and Mary Alumni Interfraternity Council, Virginia Petroleum Jobbers Association, and the United Fund. He is a former member of the Board of Trustees of the Williamsburg Community Hospital.

the face of the earth

*If you want to know where it is—a meter or a world away—
Cubic has the system!*

CUBIC'S SECOR, the surveying satellite developed for the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, keeps introducing changes in the cartographer's art. For example, the system places the Ryukyu Islands a half-mile southwest of where we thought they were. To make such discrete measurements, SECOR employs electronic trilateration. As the satellite makes its pass, signals bounce between its 7-pound transponder and 4 portable Cubic ground stations. When the data is correlated, one station, whose position is only generally known, is located with new precision.

Since 1964, the ground stations have leap-frogged across the Pacific toward Hawaii in the first part of a globe-girdling program. With each satellite pass, stations receive information from 10,000 data points—and tens of thousands of correlations are used for each distance measured. Trilateration is the key to a number of Cubic's significant systems developments. SECOR is more proof that if you want to know where it is—land, sea or space—Cubic has the system. Rolf Kennard and Del are planning on being at their forty-sixth Homecoming. From the way they looked last year, they will likely be around for their seventy-sixth. And I hope we have a large class delegation on hand to celebrate with them.

While this year is not a reunion for our class, Mildred and I will be at Homecoming to see some of my old friends in the class of 1925. Since most of us are beginning to run a little short in future Homecoming years, I encourage as many as possible to attend Homecoming each year hereafter. It's a heart-warming experience.

Had a nice, newsy letter from Edgar Taylor. He retired as president and part-owner of the Adjustors Group, Inc. in Norfolk a couple of years ago. He and his wife now live in Urbanna, at his old home place on the beautiful Rappahannock River. He has a small workshop and enjoys refinishing furniture but mostly it sounds like he fishes! He is directly across the river from Ed Wilshin. Ed (Taylor) has a broken knee and is slowed down temporarily, but he says he can still get in and out of his boat! He had three brothers (beside himself) who graduated from W&M —Isn't that a good record?

Hughlett Mason sends his regards—He is a consulting Engineer with office in Arlington, Va., and he is Dr. A. Hughlett Mason. He has recently completed a short biography of Charles Mason, distinguished astronomer and geodesist of the Royal Observatory, who in this country delineated the common boundaries of Penn., Delaware, Md., and Va. It will be published by the American Council of Learned Societies. We all are proud of him.

Alfred Alley sent me a copy of The Chanticleer Chapel News telling of his retirement as Chaplain, Colonel, after 20 years active duty as a USAF Reserve Officer. We shall be interested in hearing what your retirement plans are, Al.

Jack Garrett, who is a Navy Captain in the Supply Corps, is also retiring from the Service and he and Ann take up permanent residence here on Carter's Creek October 1. Their youngest daughter, Jean, will be married in November in Alexandria making their fifth wedding in the family in three years. Quite a record!

Louise Ely Nestle writes that their three children are all in college now: Dick, a Junior at MIT, Jim entering Freshman at Stetson and Steve entering Freshman at Claremont Men's College. More power to you, Louise!

In August we had an unexpected call from Arthur and Patty Nixon Arms of Geneva, N.Y. who had sailed up from Easton, Md. and anchored at the Yacht Club. We had a drink together on board their sloop where Patty and I caught up on the thirty years since we'd last been together, and then boated to dinner.

Our daughter, Ann, attended one day of classes at Virginia Commonwealth University in Richmond, as a Junior transfer from Averett, and decided it was too liberal for her and requested to withdraw. She was offered a job in the local bank where she worked this summer so she's with us again this winter and we're happy to have her.

I really am enjoying my retirement from teaching. I've gone with Frank on a couple of business trips and more recently on a wonderful bus trip to Winterthur and Longwood Gardens. They are both indescribable places.

Frank and I have cancelled our reservations for Homecoming and are sorry we won't be seeing everyone attending, but this is the only time we could arrange a long-planned family reunion here. The following weekend Margie Hoskins and Red Bloxom are cruising up from Norfolk on their yacht and will anchor in our cove for a visit.

Let me hear from you all—a Christmas card would be great!

Jack Geddes reports he and Mary Ellen together with Carolyn and Vince Lusardi will see us at Homecoming. Jack is still in the broadcasting business in New York and living in Conn. and Vince is a Chevrolet dealer in Brookneal, a bank director and amateur golf champion. Carolyn and Vince's youngest daughter is attending William and Mary.

Larry Pettit writes that he and Margaret wish they were able to attend every Homecoming but have pledged to be in Williamsburg for our 30th Reunion in 1971. Larry has just joined the F. C. Tucker Realty Co. and will be selling residential properties on the northside of Indianapolis which, he reminds us, has just become the nation's 12th largest city! Margaret is employed as a Home Economist with Purdue University Extension in Indianapolis, son Brad is a senior at Bradley University and daughter Suzanne is a high school senior. Margaret and Larry served as chairman for their Presbyterian Church Committee which sponsored a month work-study program for 43 German young people from Hamburg during July. The Pettits would love to see any classmates who happen to travel in the Indianapolis area.

Betty Boyd Parson and Bob spent several days with us in August and we had a glorious time "catching up". More about them later when I verify facts.

Many thanks to each of you who responded to my plea for news. See you at Homecoming.

Hi Classmates!

It's hard to believe that I'm sunbathing at Sandbridge the week before Homecoming. Hope the weather is as beautiful next week. I'm off to Williamsburg tomorrow to get this there in time.

Our class was doin' lots of traveling. Had a card from Ann James May and George from Europe. Dot Agurt Edmunds and Dave and the girls were there. We took our two also and Lesney and I were trying to see who remembered our Fine Arts 200 the best! Dot has a Theta daughter at the U. of Florida. Mary Atkinson also had a Theta daughter there. It's fun for me to see how many of our class and '43 have Tri-Delt daughters—Gunesh Guran, Pat and Dot Harper, Hal and Evie King, Gladys Scott, and Nancy Chandler and Webster. Incidentally, Nancy's sister Jean Outland Chrysler and Walter have just given sixty to eighty million dollars worth of paintings and objects d'art to the City of Norfolk!!!!

Emily Snyder Alexander's Kay is a sophomore, a Kappa. Dyck and Sally Vermyle have a freshman daughter—met her last week. The Hollises (after two girls) have a son at the College. Jo Parker Flint's Debbie is a sophomore. Jan Freer's gal is a senior. Our junior daughter says the alumni's kids are the "neatest".

There was a long letter from Elaine McDowell Fuerst. She and her husband are profs at the U. of Guam. They've done lots of traveling in that area, were planning a trip to Expo. I envy them. Rolf's just back from Japan.

Bill Morris is another busy guy. He taught in '69 in the summer as a Fulbright. In '70 he delivered a series of lectures and conducted seminars at London College. After London he was to speak at a world meeting on medical law in D.C. on Dental Jurisprudence.

You wouldn't believe! As I typed this just got a call from Lois and Doug Donald in Charlotte. Hung up and there was Martha Macklin Smith on the line. All coming to H'coming. Others planning to be there are the Kable-Griffiths from Charleston, Brunners (Fran Loesch), Weimer-Tillers, Jane Welton Anderson and Bill, Bill Bauman, Martha Kight Bugg and Waddy, Jean McPherrin Morris and Harrell, Jean Boyd McIntyre, Jean and Page Preston. Dixon and Nancy Foster and Rolf and I are going to '45's dinner. A group of our teenagers are coming again. Have such a good time every year, and they've gotten to know each other so well.

Ed Brown wrote that he and wife, Betty Ann are now living in Toronto where he is General Manager of Doyle Dan Bernbach Advertising. Last year Ed had the same job but they were in Mexico City. Ed was reminiscing and realized that he is now a Lt. Colonel in the Army Reserves, having graduated in the first ROTC class from William and Mary. He was wondering how the other eleven members of that class had fared. Let's hear from you.

Dr. E. Rae Harcum, professor of psychology at William and Mary has been appointed to a ten member Research Evaluation Committee of the Virginia Department of Mental Hygiene and Hospitals. Dr. Harcum has also been re-appointed for another one-year term as a member of the National Academy of Science-National Research Council Committee on Vision.

Received a nice letter from Tom Banks. He was looking forward to attending the William and Mary—University of Miami football game. He was hoping to see Ed and Jim Ward, John P. Morgan, Al Fitzgerald, Betsy Booth and perhaps Lou Creekmur who has just moved to Florida. Tom and Lorraine are planning a trip to Spain via Luxemburg, Heidelberg and through France. They plan to motor and stay at castles and paradors. Tom and Lorraine really take the greatest trips.

That is all for this time but you lucky people who can get to Homecoming please take pity on me and send me lots of news for the next issue. I am really thrilled and flattered when I get a letter from some of you that I rarely hear from. Thanks this time to Ed Brown and Tom Banks.

Bob Mahaffy and wife, Maxine, now have five children. Bob left the active ministry in 1967 and entered the teaching profession working with seventh graders. Next year he will become Jackson Elementary School Principal in Newport News, Va. He completed his Master's this summer and will continue studying toward an advance degree.

Class Agent Caroline Young Petrequin now is practice teaching and hopes to receive her Master's Degree in June. The Petrequins camped at Jamestown this summer and enjoyed a visit with Vivian and Dudley Jensen.

General Electric in August moved Nancy Yowell Starr and husband to Erie, Pa.

David Potts, Diplomatic Courier, in September, flew from San Juan, Puerto Rico, to Santo Domingo. On the return flight to San Juan he hand carried Moon Rock #4 to our Southern neighbors and made a similar trip to Caracas.

Army Lieutenant Colonel Tom Lewis received the Legion of Merit in ceremonies near Long Binh, Vietnam in June. He was cited for exceptionally meritorious service from July 1969 to June 1970 while serving as Chief, Logistics Readiness Division, Office of the Assistant Chief of Staff for Logistics, Headquarters, U. S. Army, Vietnam, and as commanding officer, 3rd Ordnance Battalion. Tom also has been awarded the Bronze Star and Army Commendation Medals. Reassignment will be as executive officer of the Seneca Army Depot, Seneca, N. Y. He is married; his wife, Jane, at present is in Texas.

Memo: Do not forget your contribution to our William and Mary Fund. How about a word from our class who attended Homecoming? Please write today.

It's a small world! The latter part of August my family and I were down in the vicinity of Bristol and Abingdon, Va. picking up our oldest daughter after five weeks of camp, and we saw a familiar face which I associated with William and Mary. It was indeed Al Gross, who had been practicing dentistry in Alexandria which really seems right next door to us, until this past spring when he and his wife got the yen for Williamsburg, a symptom we all get now and then. But, Al did something about it. They decided to move. Now Williamsburg is their home and he has set up his practice there.

Due to a fairly busy summer, I missed my July deadline for The Gazette (which you might have noticed), so news of all our active class members is a little delayed. I promise to do a better job in the future.

Halls of higher learning still claim some of our classmates. Bill Davidson is completing his Doctorate in educational administration at Temple University where for the past two years he was a teaching associate. In July he was made principal of the Pottsville, Pennsylvania High School. He and his wife and three children are living in Pottsville. Harriet McCreary (Fraser) did graduate work at the University of Colorado before moving to Pittsburgh where her husband was promoted to regional manager for Smith, Kline and French Labs.

Bill Morris is presently Program Director for the Prince George's County Maryland TB and Respiratory Disease Association. This past year he worked toward air pollution legislation as well as legislation to control tuberculosis in nursing homes. He and his family are living in Kensington, Md.

The fields of law and banking have attracted several of our classmates. Garn Webb and Ron Dusak are both practicing law as well as Pat Milmoe who is married, has three children, and is living in New York City. Don Snyder, who received a Master's Degree in business administration from Rutgers University, is working in the Economics and Financial Research Department of the North Carolina National Bank. He is married to Carolyn Thackston, and they have two children. George Feild has been promoted to assistant vice president of the Bank of Virginia in Roanoke. George joined the bank in 1962 after graduating from the Virginia-Maryland Bankers School at the University of Virginia.

Other bits of news from far and near . . . "Chick" Smith is a Major in the Air Force stationed in California. Charlie Liberty is working for the Manpower Association of the Department of Labor in Washington, D. C. And Betsy Triber (Peccatiello), Larry, and their four children have moved to a 20 acre farm in Tallahassee. Larry is defensive back-field coach at Florida State. Betsy says Tallahassee is almost as pretty as Williamsburg and would love to show it to any visiting William and Mary folks.

I received some very sad news of the loss of Ann Hansbarger's (Snead) husband who was killed in action in Vietnam last December.

On a business trip to Boston in the spring, I had a delightful visit with Judy Dickerson (Bullock—'60) and Marty Andrus (Gillfeather). Judy and husband Bill were living in Boston for a year while Bill attended the Sloane School of Management at M.I.T. They are back in Atlanta now. Marty has a housefull of adorable children (who all look like Marty), but she has found time to work daily on a book she is writing for children.

Linda Lavin continues to make headlines! The New York Times had a tremendous write-up this summer on her and her husband, Ron Liebman. Linda is appearing in "Last of the Red Hot Lovers" on Broadway, and Ron is in "Room Service".

Looking forward to your post-Christmas notes.

Fortunately for our column we have had a newsy summer. Thanks to all of you who have written—wish I could answer every letter.

In August, Fran McLean Pforr, Cameron, and Robyn breezed in for a short visit. Their big news was a move to Seattle, Wash., where John, '60, has transferred with the Secret Service. He had been guarding President Nixon since the campaign. They anticipate a more settled way of life since John won't be touring the world with the President.

Martha has been taking flying lessons. Susan Griffin Ricketts recently traded in a classroom full of children for one of her own, Rebecca Keith. Barbara cleverly notes that college forgot to prepare us for our motherly roles and wonders how she missed "Girl Scout Leader 102."

Gay Whitlock called to say she was attending Marianne Hodges' wedding in Raleigh to David Hogg. In July, Gay attended the Phi Mu National Convention at French Lick, Ind. As national scholarship chairman she presented a talk at a scholarship luncheon. Gay is with the Henrico County Schools' counseling department. She reports that Margie Odyssey Fisher and her daughter visited Margie's mother in Virginia Beach in August. Gay also has news of Mike Glass, who has left Metropolitan Life Insurance Company in New York City and is working for Dreyfus Company. His office is right across the street from a Playboy Club.

A booming film-making company in Atlanta, "Interfilm—Cinema East", has J. Hunter Todd as its president and founder. Since he organized the film in 1966, it has made more than one hundred and thirty films and has received almost fifty international awards from major film festivals in New York, San Francisco, Chicago, Cannes, Edinburgh, Brussels, and elsewhere. He has recently been producing a theater short for HEW to be narrated by Gregory Peck. Part of the summer he was to have spent in Europe producing six films on Israel, plus additional filming in other countries. His specialty is filming from a helicopter for television and movies. Remember how we used to see him behind that camera all over the campus and around Williamsburg?!

While we were spending part of our vacation in Williamsburg during the summer, I talked with Susan Bruton Bailey. She and Dean and their three children were vacationing in Yorktown and had their young daughter, Sara Rives, baptized there. They are becoming accustomed to life in the deep South—Oneonta, Ala.—but do find it different from Virginia. They expect to be there for a while longer with Blue Belle, Inc., before being transferred.

A note from Phyllis Eason Galanti reads: "My husband, Lcdr. Paul E. Galanti, USN, has been a prisoner of war in North Vietnam since June 1966. I have received seven letters from him during this time. The prospect for release of these men looks far away unless American people become interested and concerned."

For those of you who care to write letters to try to influence the prisoner of war situation, here are two addresses and some conditions that you might mention specifically: Office of the President Democratic Republic of Vietnam Hanoi, North Vietnam and The Honorable Andrei Gromyko Minister of Foreign Affairs Moscow, U.S.S.R. Urge that: All injured prisoners be released as soon as possible. All names of prisoners be publicized. All prisoners be allowed to exchange mail with families. An impartial inspection be made immediately of prisoners facilities. Prisoners receive proper diet and medical care.

Ginny Jacobs McKann writes that she and Mickey and son Jonathan moved this August from Pasadena, Md., to Grainsville, Fla. After four years with the National Security Agency, Mickey has accepted the position of acquisitions librarian at the University of Florida.

Ginny gave news of other classmates in her letter: Bonnie Barr Gilliam is returning from Germany where her husband, Mike, has been in the service for three years. She has two daughters. Gial West (Westie) Fretwell is teaching school now. She has a son two years old. Linda Elliott Simon and John live in New York City where he is getting his law degree and masters in business administration. He already has a PhD in chemistry. Linda is working as a computer programmer.

Harry and Lynn Green have moved from Richmond to Wichita, Kan. where Harry will be a Regional Sales Representative for Reynolds Metals Company. Richard Bassuener received his M.B.A. last May from Wharton School at the University of Penna. Dick will be working in Tampa, Fla., with General Telephone and Electronics. Tom Bosserman has been ordained a Lutheran pastor. He received his bachelor of divinity degree, cum laude, from the Lutheran Theological Southern Seminary, Columbia, S. C., and his master of theology from the University of Edinburgh, Scotland. Tom accepted the call as pastor from Holy Cross Lutheran Church in Herndon.

Lynn Cooper Hutton shared her news in a long, interesting letter (which I wish all of you would take time to write occasionally). Bob and Lynn still live in Newburyport, "the Cape Cod of the North shore of Massachusetts" and are eagerly awaiting the birth of their first child in October. Lynn's husband is still with Honeywell, Inc., although he has started a Kodak Camera store and professional studio with a friend, which he eventually hopes to work at full time. Lynn had her hands full with the setting up and running of their enterprise until recently. Lynn sent along news of Lynn Cooper Pease, who was widowed two years ago and who will live in Roanoke permanently. Lynn Pease's children are Scott, 7, and Tamarine, 5. Emily Delk Cross, Dennis and their two girls have moved to Stow, Mass. Lynn urges anyone from our class living in their area to get in touch with her.

Capt. Dave Buckle writes from Saigon where he is serving as the 4th Infantry Division Liaison officer to USARV and MACV. When he returns home in January he will be a civilian again. Dave married Claire Ruth Bethel, '64, in August 1963. Claire completed her studies while Dave was working on his masters in physics at William and Mary, which he received in 1965. He was nearing the completion of his PhD when "the Army called." Claire and their two boys are living in Richmond.

Sarah Larkin Bove started teaching in September at the Clarendon Methodist Kindergarten. Her two boys, Jonathan and Christopher, will be attending there. Mrs. Alfred G. Volkman
(Ginnie L. Peirce)
306 Prince Street
Alexandria, Va. 22314

Greetings—this is Joanne Arnett Murphy substituting for our class secretary, Ginnie Peirce, who, as I write this, is honeymooning on Cape Cod following her October 3rd wedding to Alfred George Volkman. Al, a native of Baltimore, is a graduate of Valparaiso University in Indiana. Having served as an Army Intelligence officer in Viet Nam, Al is now a contracts negotiator for the Department of Defense. He and Ginnie have acquired a charming old townhouse in Old Town Alexandria which they will be busy redecorating.

At the gala reception following Ginnie's wedding, I enjoyed seeing many William and Mary graduates. Paul and I stayed with Bobbie Mulcahey who attended with her fiancé, Bill Frazier. Bill, a VPI graduate, is a marketing representative for IBM. Bobbie and Bill will be married November 21 and will also live in Old Town Alexandria, only two blocks up Prince Street from Ginnie and Al. Bobbie is still teaching secondary French at Madison High School. Gretchen Scherer has returned to the East following a four year sojourn in San Francisco where she acquired a master's degree. Gretchen is now living in Georgetown and is teaching French at Northern Virginia Community College. Gretchen was escorted to the wedding festivities by Tom Ward who is in the process of restoring his Capitol Hill townhouse, getting his master's degree, and teaching Ancient Civilization at Langley High School. Gretchen reports that Patty Vaught is alive and well and living in San Francisco where she is working for an insurance company. Also attending Ginnie's wedding were Penny Sanders Buck '65 and her husband Jim. Penny is teaching at Fort Hunt High School and is involved in many activities, recently she won a local tennis title. Jim is now going to Georgetown Law School at night. It was grand to see Judy Hall Halesky '63 and Paul who have two little girls and own a home in Fairfax County. George Chapman '61 and his fiancée Gretchen Nacke, Ginnie's former roommate, were there. George and Gretchen will be married December 19 and they too will reside in Old Town which is becoming a true William and Mary enclave.

W. Samuel Sadler was named acting Dean of Men at the College effective August 1. Sam has been assistant Dean of Admissions since 1967. Harriet Nachman Storm of Hampton was appointed in July as a member of the Campus Environment Committee of the College.

A letter from Steve Mansfield reveals that he was married on July 18 to Dawn C. Strom in their mutual hometown of Rockford, Illinois. They are living at Virginia Beach. Steve, in addition to his duties as an assistant professor of history at Virginia Wesleyan College, has been named Coordinator of Academic Affairs at the college and thus is having a busy and challenging year. Steve also reports he saw Bill House and his wife recently who have moved to Virginia Beach where Bill is with the National Cash Register Company office.

Bert Anker is engaged to Beverly Elsa Lieberman of Hollywood, Florida, and a November wedding is planned. Bert is a CPA with the Basic Construction Company in Newport News.

Elaine Hoover is working on her Ph.D. and teaching Spanish at the University of North Carolina after completing a two year stint with the Peace Corps as a teacher in the Columbia University system in South America. Elaine is residing in Durham, North Carolina.

Joyce House is living in Bethesda, Maryland, and working in Washington, D.C. for the U.S. Army Behavior and Systems Research Laboratory as a research psychologist.

Tony Steinmeyer is living in Arlington, Virginia, following his tour of Army duty. Tony is working for the Justice Department in Washington, D.C. as an attorney in the Appellate Section, Civil Division. Tony reports that he spent his last year in the Army in Korat, Thailand, which proved to be a most interesting and pleasant assignment.

Nancy Ratz Viets and Mark have moved to Kansas City, Missouri, where Mark has opened a new office for the architecture firm for which he has been working in St. Louis. Nancy and Mark expect their first child in November.

Karen Patrick Martin and Ralph have moved to Elk Grove Village, Illinois. Karen is kept busy by her two young daughters.

Sue Trice Fieglein and Mike have moved from Houston to Philadelphia where Mike, in addition to his engineering position, is attending graduate school. Sue is teaching secondary science and math and their son is in nursery school.

Marcia Ballard Scott is teaching secondary English and Tom is busy as director of the Bolling Brook Home for Boys in Middleburg, Maryland.

Paul and I are living in Bronxville, New York as he is an associate with Cresap, McCormick and Paget, Inc. in New York City. I have "retired" from teaching as we expect our first child in April.

Ginnie will resume the column for the next issue, so do note her new address and let her know of your activities.

First of all, I can't resist telling you about the mysterious letter I received the other day. It was written anonymously by the mother of one of our (male) classmates. She started off by stating that she wasn't going to sign her name to the letter and that she was writing because "some of the alumni are bashful about writing with their news." She attempted to conceal the identity of her son by including in the letter news of several of his friends. But of course she made the error of giving far more detailed information on her son and on top of that I just happened to know that her son was from the hometown given on the postmark of her letter. Anyway, I appreciated the letter very much even though I did think it was pretty comical, and hereafter welcome any letter from any and all mothers whose sons and daughters are too "bashful or modest" to write themselves!!

Now for some class news . . .

Chris Sherman is living in Washington and is serving as Assistant Editor of Strauss Editors Report, a weekly newsletter to news media executives. Chris spent last year pursuing a Masters at Stanford, and is presently working on his thesis.

thoroughly enjoyed teaching seventh grade Virginia history. Last summer, she went to a University of Virginia graduate seminar in social studies, after which she travelled out West. Kaye spent a week with Glen and Jan Ernstmeier Brodie in San Diego, and then went on to Hawaii. She later flew to San Francisco and was graciously entertained by Bob and Judy Chase Kahn and SuSu Williams. Kaye is now back in Richmond teaching, as well as taking a U. Va. extension Reading graduate course.

Kaye also passed on the news that Andy and Missy Galloway Parker are expecting a child, and that Joe and Linda Kalen Trice are living in the Richmond area.

Tom and Jane DeFrees Massey write from Dimbokro, West Africa that they are half way through their tour in the Peace Corps. They write that they have found it to be a very profitable, challenging, and in general a very enjoyable experience. They are living in a small town of about 25,000 on the edge of the rain forest where for ten months the temperature ranged from 100-120 degrees. Jane and Tom are both teaching English to 7th, 8th and 9th grade African students. During the summer months, they learned the local language, ate with a family in a small village, went sight-seeing to the nearby towns on small motor bikes (no volunteers can have cars), and Tom spent many hours drawing the countryside, which Jane added is really beautiful.

Dick and Mary Masters Dickinson are living in Atlanta, while Dick is studying for his M.B.A. at Emory and Mary is working for a bank. THE STORE WITH A HEART
 IN THE HEART OF TOWN

Yours and 47 Other Families Can Enjoy a Life in Williamsburg of Uncompromising Privacy and Comfort

Barclay Square is a community especially designed for adults with one of America's most famous and desired addresses. As the area's first residential condominium, it has a living style perfected for the demanding person.

In achieving luxurious privacy, the developers of Barclay Square have left 70 percent of its densely wooded land in its natural state...and built in acoustical safeguards far in excess of what is normally considered luxury.

Indeed, Barclay Square offers a work-free life style as private as you choose it to be. You may entertain friends in your own vast and private outdoor living area, jog or stroll over a half-mile of wooded walkways, exercise or sauna bathe in a health room.

There is also the comfortable knowledge that an Elizabethan Play, a football game or the super market is five minutes away or less via your car (carefully hidden under your home) or Barclay Square community transportation.

Barclay Square is a way of life you owe yourself.

A SELECTION OF FOUR DISTINCTIVE FLOOR ARRANGEMENTS:

$41,900 - $44,900

Entrance to Barclay Square will be on Route 143 at the intersection of the Colonial Parkway, approximately 2 miles east of the Williamsburg Information Center.
