Competition between public and private colleges: their need for government funds stirs a new conflict

THE SENSITIVE PROBLEM of a public-private rivalry is confronting higher education these days. The battlegrounds are the state legislatures, where private colleges have been experiencing modest but growing success in a drive to obtain public financial assistance. Last year 13 states enacted laws to provide such support; altogether, some 35 states now have programs offering at least indirect aid to private institutions.

With a long history of independence, the private colleges are undertaking their quest for state funds with some reluctance. That they are undertaking it at all is a measure of how serious their financial situation has become. They realize that the price of state support could be an erosion of their autonomy, and yet their need for funds has become so critical that they feel they must take the risk.

Many public colleges and universities, which rely mainly on state appropriations for their support, are alarmed by the private colleges' campaign. With a limited amount of state money available for higher education generally, the public institutions do not welcome the competition. The conflict comes at a time when overall state support for higher education is rising much more slowly than it did in the 1960's. (State expenditures for higher education this academic year are only 10 per cent greater than last year. The major state universities say the increase is barely enough to help them stay even.) An observer on the public side remarked recently: "The pleadings of the private segment are gaining ground—not nearly enough to save some of them financially, but sufficient to reduce the direct level of funding for the public institutions."

The public-private friction over government aid is not new. For years one of the hardest tasks facing higher education has been to present a united front in appealing for federal funds. The reason: different methods and formulas for distributing the funds would provide a greater share to some institutions than to others. But in the interest of winning Congressional approval for the principle of unrestricted operating grants, public and private institutions managed to submerge their differences.

Today, however, college officials fear that actual federal appropriations are likely to be fairly meager for quite some time. So they have turned their attention to the state capitals, from which nearly a third of higher education's revenues currently come. Some educators believe that the main responsibility for higher education should remain at the state level. If the federal contribution—now about 20 per cent—should grow too large, they argue, there could develop a "nationalized system" with federal controls, while the states might be prompted to reduce their own appropriations.

The private colleges rely on private sources, including tuition, for some 75 per cent of their support. They say they urgently need more public aid in order to compete with the generally lower tuition of their public counterparts. Public colleges get a lot of private support, they say, so why not more public aid for private colleges? In addition, noting that their own enrollment growth is virtually at a standstill, the private colleges insist that they have the facilities to educate many more students. Every student they don't educate is another burden on the state system, they maintain.

In some cases, this view has led to proposals that the public institutions raise their student charges up to the full cost of education, thus enabling the states to channel more funds to the private institutions. The reaction of the public sector has been predictably hostile. Private colleges may have to spend endowment money to offset budget deficits, acknowledges the head of a public university, but he says that can't compare with the plight of an institution like his own, which is prohibited by law from incurring any deficits at all.

As the public-private jousting continues, some officials see a danger to all of higher education. The colleges must end their fighting, says one administrator: "We've done that at the national level, but we can't seem to do it at the state level."

■ Faculty Dismissal: A faculty board at Stanford University has made the unusual recommendation that a tenured faculty member be dismissed. The case involves an associate professor of English, H. Bruce Franklin, who was charged with inciting campus demonstrations last year. In a 5-2 decision, the board made clear that it had no quarrel with the right of the teacher, an avowed Maoist revolutionary, to express his views. The "real issue," it said, was his role in the disruptions.

Faculty members whose views may be considered extreme or dissenting offer "positive benefit" to the university, the board said. It declared that such teachers should be granted the freedom to speak out as long as they don't "infringe upon the free choice of others."

Student committees at the College and its branch colleges were given increased accessibility to the institutions' governing board in action taken in November.

William and Mary's Board of Visitors voted to amend their by-laws to provide that student committees may be invited to attend Board meetings. The by-law amendments give student committees the same access to the Board as faculty committees.

Under the by-law amendments, student committees can be invited to present matters in their interest. Standing committees can also be named by the College president to be available to meet with the Board recommendations from, or consultations with, students are desired by the Board.

In practice, student committees have met with the full Board and special Board committees in the last three years, but the status of these committees has never been written into Board operating procedures.

Marshall Watch At Oath-Taking

A key-wound timepiece that once belonged to Chief Justice John Marshall was carried by newly sworn Justice Lewis F. Powell of Richmond while he took the oath making him a member of the nation's highest court.

The watch was loaned by Jay W. Johns of Charlottesville, who plans to give the watch to William and Mary with the hope that other future new Justices will also carry it for their swearing-in ceremonies. He had acquired the large timepiece from a Marshall descendant.

Johns and Powell both have honorary degrees from William and Mary. The retired Charlottesville businessman has been active in preserving elements of Virginia history and recently gave William and Mary more than $300,000 in securities to endow library collections in early American history. He owns Ash Lawn, President Monroe's home in the Charlottesville area.

Marshall, as well as three of the four other justices from Virginia besides Powell, studied at William and Mary. Powell has had a close relationship with the Marshall-Wythe School of Law and one of those who offered testimony on his behalf during Senate hearings was Dean James P. Whyte, Jr.

Priority Assists Drug Program

"Priority," an association of friends of the College which announced its formation in 1968, has contributed $500 to help further the College's drug abuse prevention program, according to J. W. Lambert, Vice President of Student Affairs, through whom the gift was made. "Priority" is a philanthropic association whose members have decided to maintain anonymity as to its membership, according to Lambert. The donors requested that the gift be announced to alumni.

Althea Hunt Book Fund Established

The death last year of Miss Althea Hunt, founder and long time director of the William and Mary Theatre, has prompted establishment of a book fund in her honor.

It was her desire that in lieu of flowers, memorial contributions be made to the Earl Gregg Swem Library. Consequently, the Althea Hunt Book Fund was established by William C. Pollard, Librarian.

Chad Visitor Now at College

The first American anthropologist to visit the African country of Chad, is now teaching at the College.

Stephen P. Reyna and his wife Gail spent two years in Africa. He was a teacher and researcher in Nigeria and resident of Chad.

When Reyna asked for permission for he and his wife to live with the Barma people in Chad, it took a chain of government meetings and paper signings over a six-month period before permission was granted.

First a cabinet meeting was called to determine whether such a request should be allowed. The cabinet ruled favorably but a formal "authorization" had to be obtained from the President. Then the Minister of the Interior had a form to be completed; the Minister of Education was consulted, and so the chain stretched to the Prefect and Sub-Prefect in the Prefecture of Chari-Baguirmi to the Chief of the Village of Bougoumene.

"I chose that particular village for sentimental reasons," said Reyna. "It had been just 100 years since a German scientist had been to that region and I felt I was continuing the tradition of exploration."

Chad, a landlocked country in the heart of Africa, is bordered by Libya on the North and Niger, Nigeria and Cameroon on the West. The northern part of the country is barren Sahara and the south is wooded grassland. It became a French Colony in 1910; an autonomous republic within the French community in 1958 and an independent country in 1960.

Botetourt Society Studies Libraries

To the extent that a man can be identified by his possessions his books are among the more prominent indications of personal taste. Supporting this belief, the Botetourt Bibliographical Society each year visits Virginia libraries and publishes an inventory of a library.

"A discovery of the same books in different libraries shows the impact of popular ideas on people's thinking," says Dr. Robert Maccubbin, Society committee chairman.

"For example, there is a persistent recurrence in Colonial Virginia libraries of the works of the 17th century German writer, Samuel Puffendorf. This recurrence may show that his ideas were of as much or more importance to the framers of the Constitution and the Declaration of Independence than the ideas of John Locke," says Maccubbin.

Books in older libraries are particularly indicative of a man's interests because books were more difficult to obtain and relatively very expensive in the 18th century. Book owners who wanted to preserve their books, having already bought the pages unbound, paid a bookbinder to hardcover them. In addition, it was necessary to send to England for most books. The public library had not yet come into existence in Virginia.

"Both William Nelson, Jr., and Thomas Nelson owned James Thomson's poem, 'The Seasons,' an inventory of their libraries shows. Perhaps the most popular poem of the 18th century, it is now generally regarded as the first romantic nature poem in English, and the ancestor of Wordsworth's poetry," says Maccubbin. Thomson, an advocate of the value of such ideas as morality in nature, peaceful solitude, and freedom of the imagination, was one of the most popular 18th century English poets. That his poems achieved such popularity in America suggests the prevalence of the same ideas in both countries.

Whereas the medical books in the library of Thomas Nelson obviously reflect his occupation as a physician, a more general library is much more challenging to evaluate. Maccubbin can only theorize about the finding of books about the Near East and Indostan in a Colonial library.

"We reconstruct old libraries from book inventories which are included in accounts of estates and in wills," says Maccubbin. "Most of the libraries inventoried no longer exist." Working with old inventories often necessitates research, since the books are usually identified only by a short title. One book, labeled "King's Pantheon" was finally identifiable as William King's "Historical Account of the Heathen Gods." Another book, with the simple title, "Three Years Travels Through China" was found to be written by a man named Evert Ysbrandszoon Ides.

Book inventories are only one of the diversified cultural activities of the Society, which also sponsors lectures and library exhibits. The series of lectures given every year since the founding of the Society in 1965 have included talks on vampires, Beethoven, 17th century music in Virginia, Hogarth's prints, and the theatre of the absurd.

Former Waiters To Organize

Something unique among alumni organizations is about to be born on the William and Mary campus—The Order of the White Jacket—composed of men who helped work their way through college by waiting on tables in the dining halls.

Conceived not only as a fraternal group but as a means of emphasizing the value and dignity of work in obtaining an education, the Order of the White Jacket is the brain child of numerous one-time waiters but chiefly of three men who served together back in the 1920's. They are Yelverton Kent, retired College Bookstore manager; Arthur A. Matsu, Phoenix, Arizona, real estate operator; and M. Carl Andrews, retired editor of the Roanoke World-News.

Former Gov. Mills E. Godwin Jr. and President-Emeritus Davis Y. Paschall, two of the more prominent Virginians who once waited on tables, have accepted the role of Honorary Chairmen of the White Jackets. The first gathering is planned tentatively as a pre-Homecoming affair.

Since no roll is immediately available, former student waiters are being asked to contact Kent, Matsu or Andrews. Further information will be given in the May Alumni Gazette and a temporary slate of officers designated to plan the October Rally.

Zollinger '27 Renamed to Board

J. Edward Zollinger '27 of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., has been reappointed to the Board of Visitors.

Zollinger, who served on the board from March, 1966 to March, 1970, has been reappointed to fill the unexpired term of the late Russell B. Gill, of Petersburg, Va.

Zollinger is a former resident of

Alumni Gazette

Virginia. He joined IBM shortly after graduation from William and Mary. At his retirement in 1965, he was executive assistant to the President.

He is national president of Sigma Phi Epsilon, a member of Omicron Delta Kappa and a member of the William and Mary Endowment Association.

An active alumnus, Zollinger was dubbed "William and Mary's Ambassador at Large," by former President Davis Y. Paschall. He established the J. Edward Zollinger Scholarship at William and Mary. This fund is used for fellowships for worthy graduate students in physics, history and mathematics.

Dull Declensions Pose Problem

A German professor at the College has tackled what she terms "The Dilemma of the Dull Declensions," and has some thoughts on increasing student enthusiasm for learning a foreign language.

Mrs. Elsa Diduk feels that language classes should provide students not only with something they can use but with something they enjoy, and must be planned for.

She suggests language counseling in high schools as an aid in helping students to bridge the gap between secondary school and college.

"I think we sometimes wind up with students who are taking the wrong language. They're in a particular class simply because that was the language mother took when she was in college or because dad was stationed in that country when he was in the service."

"Or perhaps they've switched to a second language in college because they're not sure enough of themselves to continue with the foreign language they had in high school."

Mrs. Diduk suggests a sampling approach to guide students into language. "Why not some sort of orientation or counseling session to let them hear how the language sounds, see films of what the country and people are like?"

Mrs. Diduk feels it is going to be easier for a student to do well in class when the material is something he is interested in and something he enjoys.

High school counseling, Mrs. Diduk feels, would also encourage students to continue the same language in college. With continuity, the student has a chance to become proficient in a language and is not apt to collect credits in several languages without any firm knowledge of any.

"A good start in the right direction in high school," asserts Mrs. Diduk, might also help close the gap between secondary school and college instruction.

"Some high schools are more experimental in their teaching than colleges are," she said. "I think college classes are generally more traditional and sometimes it comes as a jolt to students who are geared to the type of conversational instruction they've had in high school," she added.

Because many colleges including William and Mary are easing their foreign language requirements for graduation, the "captive audiences" in modern language classes are almost a thing of the past, noted Mrs. Diduk.

Continuing Studies Program Changed

Through the years, tens of thousands of adults—educators, servicemen and professional people—have been William and Mary students without ever visiting the campus for classes. They have been participants in the off-campus extension programs begun in the 1920s and expanded a decade later under President J. A. C. Chandler.

The courses they took, while they offered credit toward a degree, were never part of a degree program and it was not possible to earn a William and Mary degree largely through off-campus work.

While the extension program prospered throughout eastern Virginia, and annual enrollment reached 6,000, its growth brought into sharp focus the question of William and Mary's unique mission as an academic institution.

Should the College expand its "continuing studies" programs to provide more off-campus instruction, even to the point of offering entire degree programs away from Williamsburg? Should standards of admission and faculty selection be the same for on-campus credit offerings as for off-campus credit? How can the College insure that off-campus course work is adequately supported by library resources, computer facilities and other essentials?

A study of these questions was begun two years ago, but not concluded because of the impending change in administrations until last fall, when a new policy was adopted.

Beginning in September, the College's part-time course offerings will be concentrated on the Williamsburg campus and at the Virginia Associated Research Campus in Newport News. Christopher Newport College, William and Mary's four-year branch in Newport News, will expand its evening program to provide additional service to that section of the state. The College will also seek to expand non-credit programs for continuing education.

Elsewhere, William and Mary initiated discussions with state universities which already serve sections where extension work is offered by the College. It appeared early in the year that most of these institutions were anxious to provide the services formerly offered by William and Mary.

In Virginia, the field of continuing education presents a confusing picture to the layman. State institutions compete with each other by offering credit off-campus programs in many sections of the state, including Hampton Roads and Tidewater. Out-of-state universities have also moved into the state with credit programs, some of which offer entire undergraduate and graduate degrees.

New Vice President To Direct Broad Development Effort

A broad-gauged effort to establish college priorities for non-state funds, and obtain the resources to support them, was established at the beginning of the year under leadership of a new Vice President for College Development, Warren Heemann.

James S. Kelly '51 became Assistant to the President to work in alumni development, community relations and other assignments. The Alumni Board will meet in March to select his successor as Executive Secretary.

The new program represents William and Mary's first step to providing a solution to the economic realities of the time—problems which face nearly every institution of higher learning. Virginia government leaders have encouraged tax-supported colleges to seek greater private support. They say it will be difficult for lawmakers to provide a higher level of funding at a time when other governmental programs have new appeal at the grass roots. Chief among these, in Virginia, are the whole range of urban problems, the environment, mental health and other services.

For William and Mary, the proposed 1972-74 operating budget making its way through the General Assembly this spring provides a 24% increase over the previous biennium. Funds for the increase, and other increased budgets across the state, are partly tied to proposals for higher taxation. Even if the tax proposals succeed and the extra money becomes available, the 24% increase goes only part of the way toward solving many of the financial problems which face the College.

A greater contribution toward higher education by the state, over the years, seems an unlikely prospect. The state gave a tremendous boost to its colleges and universities in the last half of the 1960s, and also established a rapidly growing system of community colleges to increase educational opportunity for Virginia high school graduates. The community colleges, urban universities and other institutions willing to increase enrollment to meet state needs, tend to take more and more of the higher education tax dollar.

At William and Mary, where enrollment is tapering off rather than expanding, the effort is being made to find ways to further enrich its programs beyond the financial limits imposed by its role as a state college.

Several organizations now engage in fund raising for the College. Among these are the Society of the Alumni, through the William and Mary Fund; the Educational Foundation, for athletic scholarships; the Law School Association; the school of Business Administration Sponsors, Inc.; and the Endowment Association, which works with individual donors.

The newly emerging development program will seek to encourage, guide and coordinate these existing fund raising efforts and seek to resolve conflicts in scheduling and sources which may arise. Two years ago, a Development Council was established to provide a mechanism for such coordination. The Council includes representatives from each of the fund raising agencies but has not yet become active.

Private giving to William and Mary, through these various organizations, reached $854,000 in 1970 but most of the funds were restricted to specific uses designated either by donors or by the agencies which received them.

Potential additional sources of support include corporations and foundations, neither of which has been approached by the College in a formal way for many years.

Heemann has been actively involved in seeking federal funds for specific William and Mary projects and programs since 1965, when he was named coordinator of research here. He joined the faculty in 1962 as an instructor in English. In 1967 he became director of institutional resources, and in 1969 assistant vice president for sponsored programs. At the same time, he was named director of the Virginia Associated Research Campus in Newport News, a part of William and Mary.

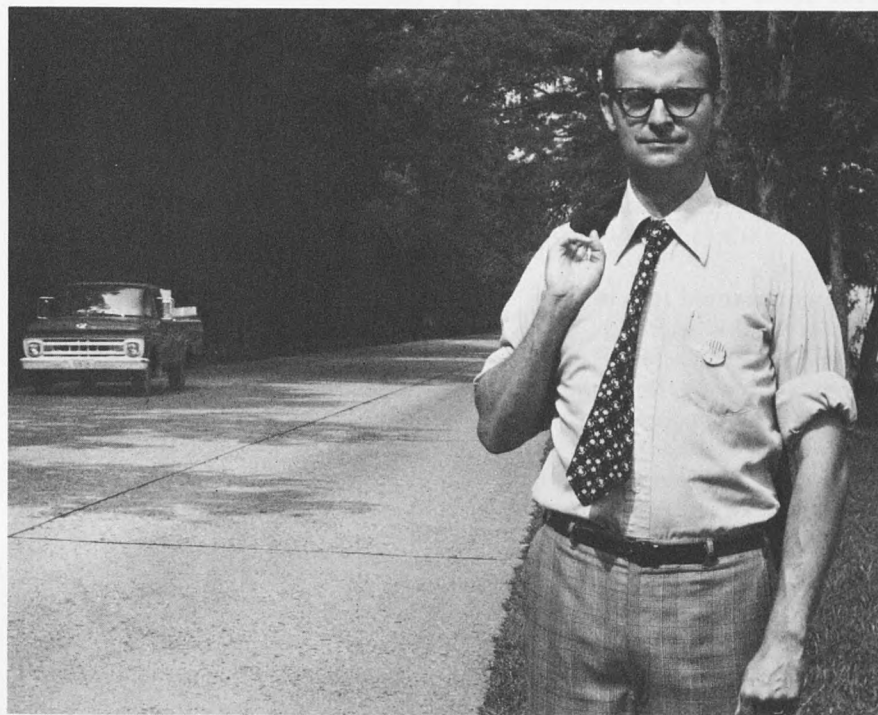

He is a native of Baltimore and holds his bachelor's and master's degrees in English from the University of North Carolina.

Grayson Livens

Academic, Political

Atmosphere

George Grayson hitch-hiking from Williamsburg to Yorktown to further his political campaign

George Grayson, a 33-year-old member of the Department of Government at the College of William and Mary, left the world of theory last year and took a plunge into partisan politics. In February, he announced for the General Assembly against the Democratic incumbent, a respected Williamsburg attorney who has served his district in the House of Delegates since 1954.

Grayson put together a first-rate political organization, campaigned for more than half a year, spent $2500 of his own money, wore out three pairs of shoes—and lost the election. The experience, however, did nothing to dim his confidence in the much-maligned “system.”

“The process generally upheld my belief that the system is open,” he says. “We came from nowhere to get 45 per cent of the vote in the primary election. It proves that if one does roll up his sleeves, there is a chance to gain political power.”

Grayson ran a hard-hitting campaign based on consumer protection, tax reform, and environmental rights. There were more fireworks between the candidates than the district had seen for years, and the election brought out a record vote for a primary. Grayson lost by 650 votes, a respectable margin, but, he points out, the campaign resulted in the registering of 700 new voters and, “we got a number of young people involved in the election process.”

A respected member of the academic community with a book and a number of articles in leading national periodicals to his credit, Grayson decided to run for office so he could take a more direct role in the affairs of government.

“I have been very concerned about how I think power is misused in the United States,” he says. “While academics may have a tangential influence on the course of national affairs, one really has to hold elective office to effectively alter priorities. I had been on the outside looking in for sometime, and I decided to actually try to win political office.”

While Grayson has spent most of his adult life in academics, he has hardly lacked for the spirit of an activist. After graduating from the University of North Carolina with a degree in English and a scholarship to law school at the University of Chicago, he abjured the life of academe and took off for Europe on a coal freighter. Arriving in France in the summer of 1960, he spent several weeks in Paris where he studied French and landed a bit role as a German soldier (by virtue of his Aryan appearance rather than acting ability, he says) in the movie "Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse," and then took a fourth class berth on a ship to Hong Kong, visiting the Mideast, India, Ceylon, and Vietnam on the way. Grayson wintered in Hong Kong and Japan and returned to the United States the following Spring.

Grayson wanted to return to school to get his graduate degrees, but he was broke so he took a job with the Department of the Army working with medical evacuation in transporting injured soldiers back to America. In addition, he worked nights as a motel clerk, and by Fall he had enough money saved up to enter Johns Hopkins' School of International Studies located in Washington, D. C. After studying a year at the Washington location, he went to Hopkins' European Center in Bologna, Italy, where he not only finished up his degree but met the future Mrs. Grayson as well.

Grayson returned to Washington and took two more years of classwork toward his Ph.D. during which he took a special interest in Latin American Affairs. He went to Chile to do research on his dissertation, "The Christian Democratic Party of Chile," the first of several trips he has made to South America over the years. In 1964-65, he spent eight months in Chile and returned for a second trip to complete his research before taking a faculty position at Mary Washington College where he completed writing his dissertation and won his Ph.D. from Hopkins in 1967.

Grayson came to William and Mary in the Department of Government in the Fall of 1968. He teaches Latin American politics and mass movements, and he retains a particular expertise in the affairs of Peru and Chile, which he re-visited in 1967, again in 1969 (on a faculty alumni grant), and a third time in December, 1970. His latest visits enabled him to publish three more articles, including two in the Washington Post.

Grayson maintained excellent contacts with the Christian Democratic Party which held power before the Allende regime, but the new administration, he says, is wary of foreigners asking questions. He notes that the country is very polarized, with 40 per cent of the Chileans looking on Allende as a savior and 25 per cent seeing him as an "anti-Christ." The country has experienced tremendous changes under the new regime in land reform, nationalization of industry, consolidation of the banking system in government hands, and domination by the government of all export trade.

"Because of the nationalization, there will be serious economic disruptions," says Grayson, "but I don't expect Chile to convert into a Communist dictatorship. The democratic traditions are too deeply rooted in Chile for one government to be able to curtail personal freedom or limit individual rights."

Grayson's expertise in Latin American Affairs has won him recognition within the American government. He lectures once a month at the Foreign Service Institute of the Department of State in Washington. Recently, he spent several days at the John F. Kennedy Center at Fort Bragg lecturing to army officers who were being trained for a role in foreign affairs. In addition, he did a program for Voice of America which analyzed the Allende regime in Chile after a year in office.

Some people suggested his academic background might be a handicap in elective politics, but Grayson says it didn't turn out that way.

"I was wary about knocking on doors when I began to campaign," he says, "but the problem—such as it was—proved to be not getting in the door, but out afterwards. People want to talk about governmental issues, and they were pleased to have someone running for office come to their house."

During his campaign, Grayson says he walked the length of the district several times. In fact, he notes, he walked from Williamsburg to Yorktown and beat Thomas Jefferson's record by 23 minutes.

Despite the defeat, he lists a number of accomplishments from the campaign. In addition to registering new voters and involving young people in politics, he initiated a good public discussion on issues that people are concerned about. Moreover, he says, the campaign was an "invaluable individual experience in that it enabled me to combine practical politics with a theoretical approach in the classroom."

A moderate Democrat, Grayson continues active in community affairs. He recently called a meeting to organize a chapter in Williamsburg of the Virginia Citizens Consumer Council to "find ways to save money for consumers and inform the local buying public of marketing, pricing, and advertising practices of local businesses, especially large chain stores."

Grayson's best campaign poster during the primary race showed him with his sleeves rolled up, coat dangling loosely over his shoulder. The father of a 9-month old daughter, he still fits the image. With proper scheduling and the judicious use of baby sitters, he says he is helping raise his daughter on a 50-50 basis with his wife who is a member of the history department faculty at Hampton Institute.

The election defeat last year in no way forecloses another run in the future for public office, he says, but right now, "I have gone from baby-kissing to baby-sitting."

The College inaugurated its 24th President, Thomas A. Graves, Jr. as part of its 279th anniversary Charter Day on February 5, and in turn was urged to pursue excellence as a goal in everything it does.

President Graves was the Charter Day speaker for a program which drew representatives of more than 100 colleges and universities and, on behalf of the Commonwealth of Virginia, Governor Linwood Holton. Chief Justice Harold F. Snead of the Virginia Supreme Court conducted the swearing-in ceremony.

In his address, the President urged members of the William and Mary community to "have the courage, as a college community, not to try to be all things to all people in response to pressures and demands, but rather to stand fast on what we know we can and wish to do exceptionally well, and then move forward with confidence.

"In this way, William and Mary will not only be true to its heritage and its convictions today, but it will also serve the state and nation with distinction," he said.

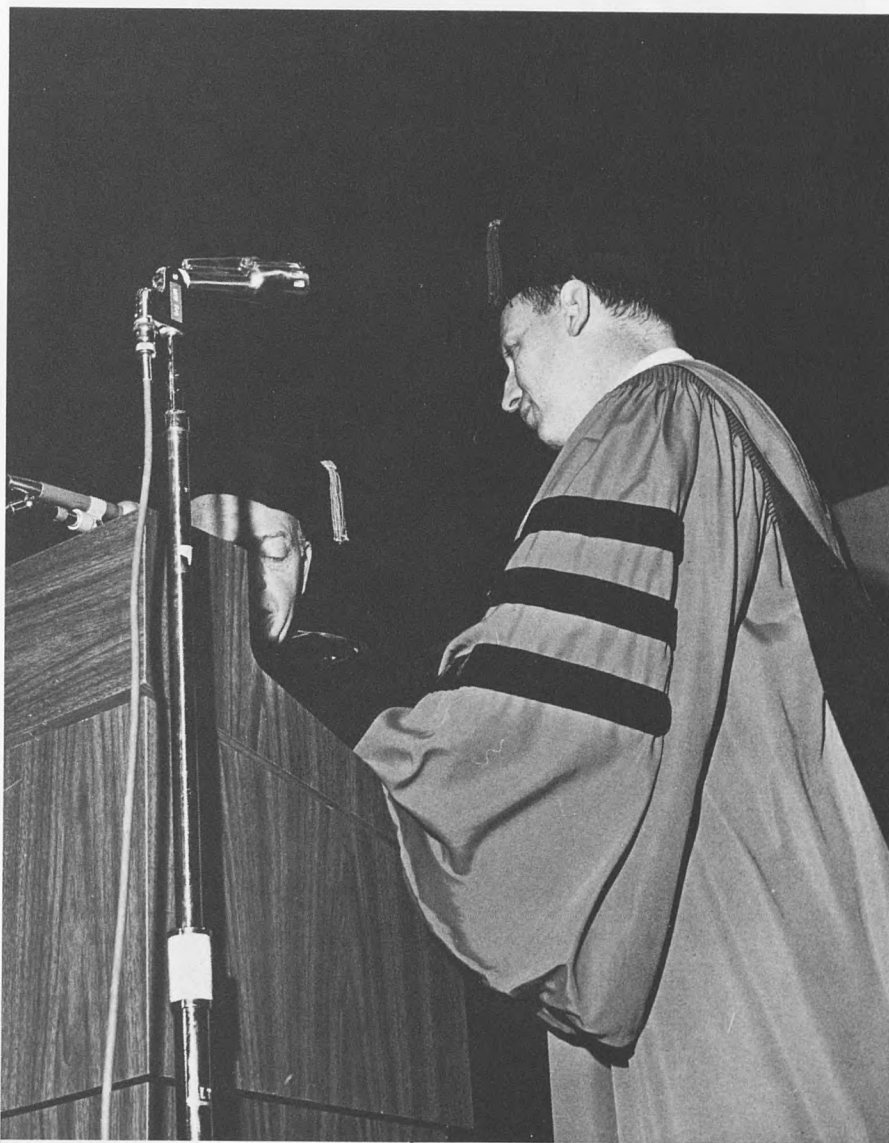

"We are only as good as we think we are. What we do and how well we do it is a reflection of our own self-esteem and self-perception. Without being arrogant or presumptuous, let us as an academic community have the confidence and optimism to teach and to learn, to grow and to serve, with distinction and with humanity," he said.

President Graves urged that the College define its objectives, in a limited and realistic way, and "then work together to meet them, with a goal of excellence in everything we do."

Specifically, Mr. Graves urged that the College remain essentially a small, residential, full-time university to provide the opportunity for faculty and students to relate intimately and creatively. "Beyond our present size," he said, "something of that special magic is lost, and with it would go the chance for excellence in the educational environment of this particular College."

He urged strong efforts to attract superior students from every background, and then to motivate them to achieve their full potential. "Our capacity to care, to care about the student as a person, will be the measure of our success in moving forward in this endeavor, and it will be justification for holding to our present size."

The President recited his support for the strong graduate, professional and research programs and said they help point the way to "preeminence" as a small university.

Mr. Graves said creativity and innovation will require changes and the reallocation of scarce resources to make sure they are being used as effectively as possible. Extra effort will be required to locate new financial resources for both endowment and operating income, outside State contributions.

He called attention to the fact that, as part of its accreditation review, the College will be required later this year to begin its decennial self-study.

"It could not have come at a more propitious time, for not only is the self-study an opportunity for us to look at ourselves in depth and breadth as we are now, but it is an opportunity for us to look ahead as to where the College should go," he said. The study will be completed in late 1973.

"What happens thereafter will depend on the strength of our convictions to hold steady to our limited course and stand for excellence in all that we do."

"We are starting together a new chapter in the history of this ancient college in Virginia, confident in the strength of our heritage and traditions, optimistic in the vitality of our resources, hopeful in the opportunities that lie ahead," he said.

Athletic Program Gets New Leadership

Despite published reports, there is no de-emphasis under way for William and Mary athletics. President Thomas A. Graves, Jr. gave such assurances last fall in announcing appointment of a new Athletic Director and new Head Football Coach.

Talk of de-emphasis started near the end of the 1971 football season, when the Faculty Athletic Committee prepared, at Graves' request, a written statement of current athletic policies.

According to Graves, the statement represented nothing really new—merely a cataloguing of policies which had been developed for the most part over recent years but never put into writing for all to see. The statement is published herewith.

The President, in disseminating the statement, said it may be necessary over time to make some adjustments in priorities and commitments to "maintain appropriate balance and perspective in the athletic program and in the College as a whole." He suggested the primary reason for an athletic program was to provide all students with "opportunities to enjoy a full range of athletic and recreational activities and experiences to which, as members of this College, they are entitled."

In another move, President Graves announced that the number of football grants-in-aid would gradually be reduced from the present level of 88 to a total of 75.

The new Athletic Director is Bernard L. "Ben" Carnevale, 57, Director of Athletics at New York University and long-time basketball coach at the U. S. Naval Academy. He is well-known in sports circles especially for basketball leadership. Carnevale, who takes office July 1, is active in the U. S. Olympics program.

The new Head Football Coach is James F. Root, 39, head coach at the University of New Hampshire since 1968. He is a former Yale and Dartmouth staff member and also has coached at Tulane and the University of Miami. Root arrived in December.

Carnevale succeeds H. Lester Hooker, Jr., who becomes fulltime Director of William and Mary Hall, a major sports and entertainment facility. Root succeeds Lou Holtz, who resigned at the end of the season last fall to take over the football program at North Carolina State.

Text of Faculty Athletic Statement

The College of William and Mary is an educational institution of national character with emphasis and priority on high academic quality and standards. Aside from professional and graduate studies it seeks to offer a broad, thorough undergraduate program focusing on a liberal education for all students. The athletic program of the College should fall fully within this compass as a coordinated, extra-curricular part of the total educational experience of all students. Athletics should be broad-based and include opportunities for participation of all students at a varsity or intramural level within our available financial resources. This means that as wide a variety of athletic opportunities be provided as possible to encourage participation by a majority of the student body.

The purposes of the athletic program of the College require that participants in intercollegiate athletics be truly representative of the student body. They further require that no undue demands be placed upon players and coaches and they be encouraged to enjoy the games as participants in amateur competition rather than as professional performers. It would follow logically from this that a young man coming to the College is first and foremost a student. He should have open to him all the educational opportunities both academic and athletic. Everyone connected with the College should share in the responsibility for insuring that nothing prevents him from taking advantage of these opportunities; no demands should be placed on him that interfere with his education. The opportuities provided for intercollegiate competition should emphasize the developmental character of athletics rather than the professional. Schedules should aim to enhance the image of the College as an educational institution of national standing. This can be accomplished best by promoting athletic relationships with schools of similar national character and with similar adherence to high standards of academic excellence as well as similar athletic programs. As in the academic program as a whole, excellence should also be the aim of athletics; this excellence, however, should not be based solely on the record of games won or lost, but rather more broadly on the basis of how well the goals outlined above are met.

The number of intercollegiate contests scheduled in each sport must be determined by balancing the advantages of such competition with the demands it makes on the student's time. The Committee feels that the important consideration is not the number of intercollegiate games, meets, or matches, but the total time given by the student to these activities. We, therefore, feel that approximately half of the intercollegiate contests should be scheduled on this campus. The extent of engagement in post season competition should be determined by the needs of the academic program and the desires of the students involved.

The Committee has decided that intercollegiate programs are both desirable and feasible provided opponents are selected from schools similar in academic and athletic orientation. Consistent with the principle of a well balanced intercollegiate program, grants-in-aid should be used to foster a balanced program in all sports. The Committee firmly believes that ultimate faculty control of athletic policy is a necessary condition to insure that the goals of the athletic program are met.

The Committee is not involved in the day-to-day administration of the athletic program. This is the full-time duty and responsibility of the Athletic Director who acts as an agent of the College in seeing to it that administrative decisions reflect established policy. At the same time, the Director acts as an agent of his staff in communicating their views to the Committee. The Athletic Director is also an ex officio member of the Committee.

As regards the coaching staff, in keeping with the educational purposes of the athletic program, each coach's goal should be the total development of students. Judgments concerning hiring, promotion or termination should be based, broadly, on the ability of the coaches to carry out the educational mission of the College.

Davis Elected Alumni Society President

At its December meeting, the Board of Directors of the Society of the Alumni elected C. Randolph Davis '50 of Suffolk, president of the Society for 1972. He succeeds Mrs. Pam Chinnis '46, who continues as a member of the Board.

Chester F. Giermak '50 of Erie, Pa. was elected vice president and Allen C. Tanner '46 of Newport News, was re-elected secretary-treasurer.

The budget for 1972 was approved by the Board. A significant addition was an appropriation which will supplement annually the corpus of the Endowment Association fund for undergraduate scholarships which was established in 1958. The Board also approved the payment of rents required for the Alumni Office to move into vacant apartments in the Bright House, adjacent to the Stadium, which in June will become entirely available to the Society as an Alumni House. Plans were discussed concerning renovation of this structure to suit the needs of alumni and the Alumni Office.

The Board of Directors reiterated its support of President Thomas A. Graves, Jr. in adopting a resolution affirming the cooperative spirit existing between the College and the Society. Portions of it follow:

Whereas The Board of Directors of the Society of the Alumni is greatly encouraged by the planned development program of the College in order to assist William and Mary to reach new heights of achievement in its mission as a small, high quality, state university of national character, and

Whereas The Board of Directors consistently has supported efforts by the College to seek new sources of funds and other forms of support for the College, and now pledges to support even more strenuously the programs inspired by President Thomas A. Graves, Jr., and

Whereas The Board of Directors believes very strongly that an independent Society of the Alumni can be of great value towards achieving the objectives of the new program, and

Whereas the status of the alumni of the College, as a body, can be enhanced by greater visibility of the Society of the Alumni among its members and on the campus, in order that a strong feeling of pride may be engendered to help achieve a greater concern for, and willingness to support the College, and

Whereas The Board of Visitors of the College has approved the use of the Bright House as the location of the Alumni Offices and plans are being developed for utilization of this building by the Society of the Alumni beginning in 1972, and

Whereas The Board of Directors, realizing the similarity of purpose and mission of the Society and the College, seeks to establish even closer avenues of communication with the College,

Now, Therefore Be It Resolved

That the Society of the Alumni begin relocation of its offices to the Bright House in January, 1972, making such arrangements with the College for its use as are deemed just, commensurate with the Society's role of service to the College; and

That the Board of Directors shall instruct the Executive Secretary of the Society to communicate and coordinate with the Administration of the College on all matters affecting the Alumni Program.

Contributions to Fund Rise Substantially

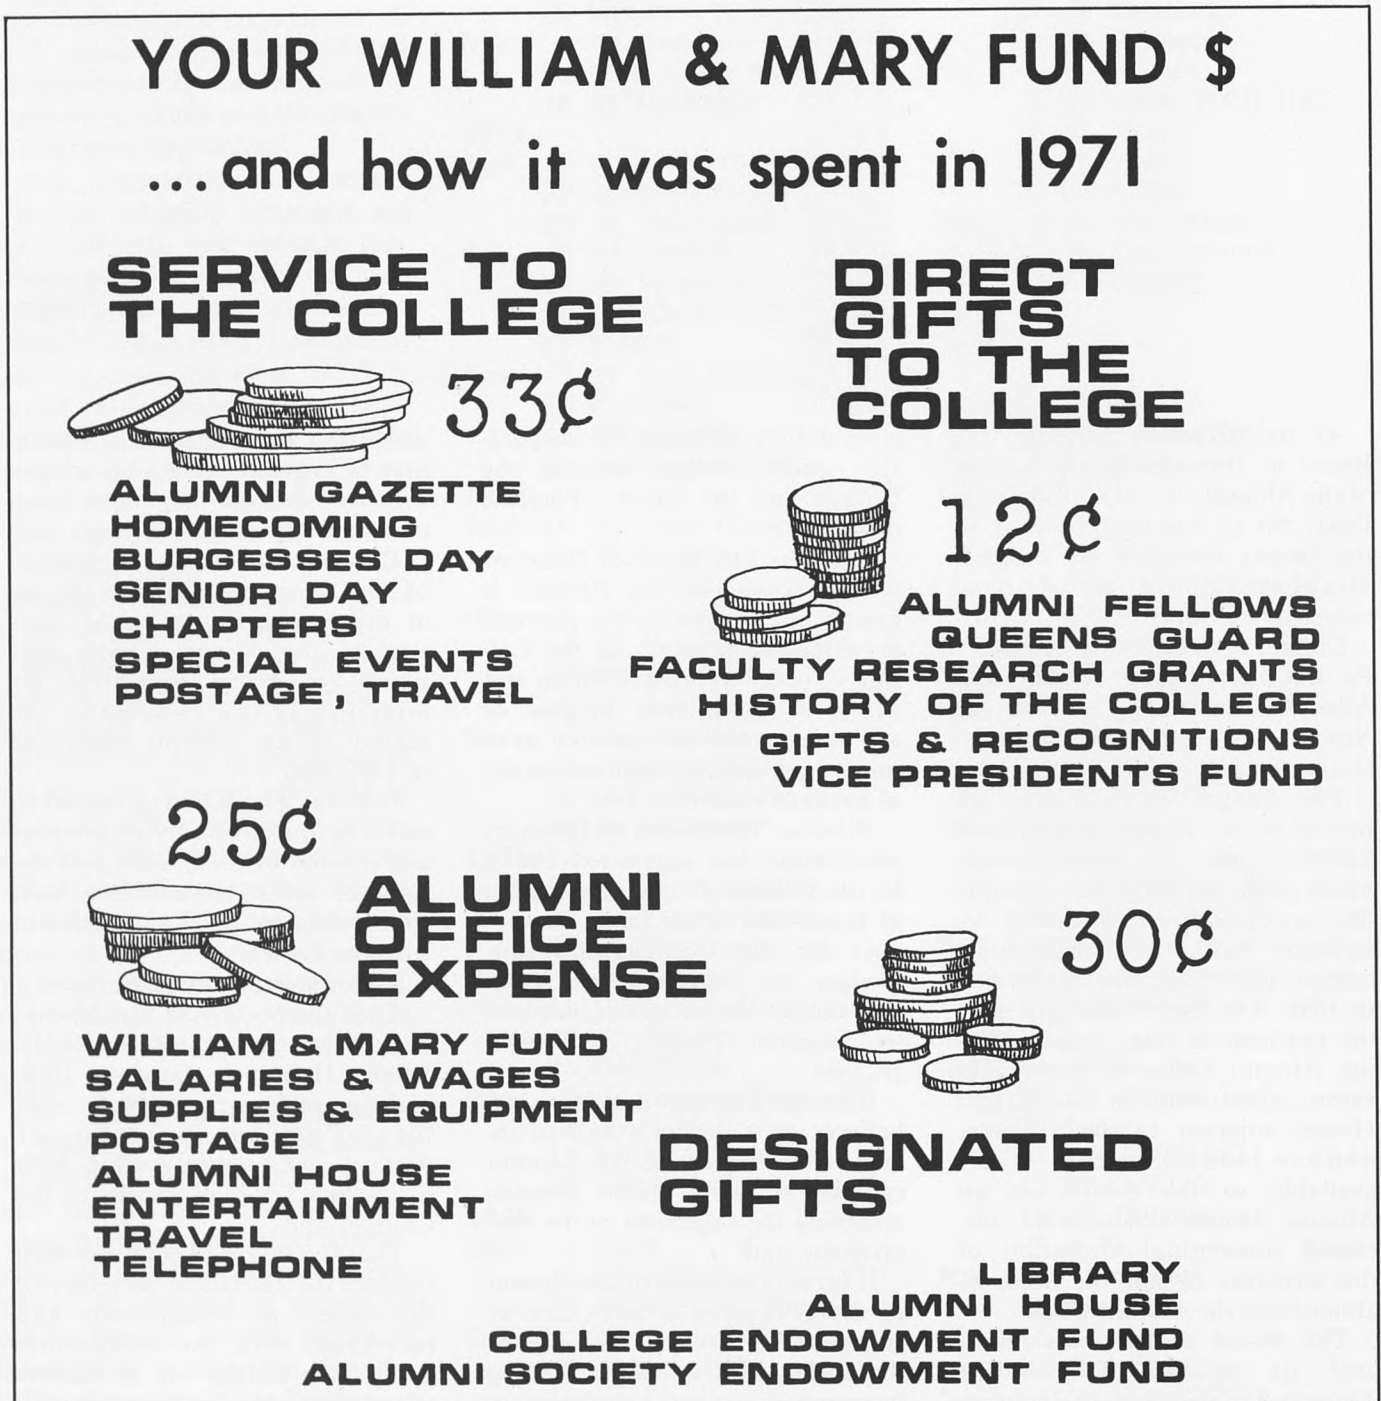

Cash contributions to the William and Mary Fund reached record levels in 1971, with the total rising 24 per cent above the figure for 1970.

A total of $112,000 in direct contributions was received as compared to only $90,000 the year before. Other gifts—gifts of securities, gifts designated to be transferred to other college activities such as the library, etc.—were down by $55,000 to $10,000. However, among the items listed for 1970 was a $30,000 scholarship gift which was transferred, as requested by its donor, to the Endowment Association. There were no such large gifts in 1971 which were sent through the William and Mary Fund for use elsewhere.

For a breakdown on how contributions to the William and Mary Fund are currently used, Gordon C. Vliet has prepared the following graphic analysis:

*Gene Guess:
Alaska
Political Leader*

Gene Guess '55

*Last Frontier
Also Hears
From Wife,
Carol Suber*

As a young law graduate of the University of Virginia in 1959, Gene Guess wanted to play an active role in politics, but he wasn't interested "in becoming one of the courthouse boys and waiting around for the next 20 years to break into a minor post." Instead he and his wife Carol (W&M '55 and '56) packed up their belongings and headed for Alaska where, Gene says, "they could care less about your age as long as you can do what you say you can do."

Some 12 years later, Guess can be pleased with his foresight. He has held nearly every important post in the Alaska legislature; he served major roles in the recovery from the 1964 Earthquake and in the State's adjustment to the fruits of oil discovery; he was named one of the 16 outstanding state legislators in the nation, and at the age of 38, he is the frontrunner for the Democratic nomination to the United States Senate this year.

At William and Mary, Guess did about everything but trim the boxwood to earn his way through school, good training for the rough and tumble life on the Last Frontier. He came to the College on a football scholarship, but broadened his activities to table waiting in the cafeteria, commercial fishing in the summer, and selling and delivering beer to the fraternities. An ROTC graduate, he served six months in the Army and then enrolled in law school at University of Virginia.

A month after graduation, Gene and Carol took off for Alaska where he had lined up a job as Assistant Field Solicitor for the Department of the Interior. He arrived in the state at a propitious time: Alaska had recently been granted statehood, and a number of other young lawyers from the "Lower 48" had emigrated as well. After 15 months in the government post, Guess and three other attorneys set up their own law firm which has grown to 10 lawyers specializing in corporate law, particularly in banking, oil, gas and public land.

Mr. and Mrs. Guess

In 1962, Governor Egan appointed Guess as his regional campaign chairman for Southcentral Alaska. Guess delivered his region and Egan won the election. In 1964 when the Earthquake occurred, Egan appointed Guess as a special assistant to act as a liaison between the financial institutions and the Governor's office. His primary responsibility was to get the banks open and restore an atmosphere of normality to the area as rapidly as possible. The Earthquake struck on Friday; by Tuesday the banks (and as a result the stores) had reopened, normalizing a critical period in the recovery.

Guess won his first term to the legislature in 1964, finishing 7th out of 14 in the Anchorage area. As a freshman, he was named chairman of the House Judiciary Committee, a key committee with jurisdiction over all bills.

Elected to a second term in 1966 as the third highest vote getter from Anchorage, he won the position of minority whip. In 1968, he was re-elected for a third term, this time with the highest number of votes from his district. Operating in a legislature with no seniority system, Guess was named majority leader in the House. Perhaps even more important, however, in the long range was his chairmanship of the Monetary Policy Committee since the state was in the process of receiving $900 million in oil royalties without really knowing what to do with it. Guess's committee set out to shape the monetary policy of the state in relation to the new funds, but its mission was much bigger than that.

"We attempted to prepare government as well as our people in Alaska for a new era," he says. The Committee hired the Brookings Institution to put together a series of Citizens' Seminars to pose the question of what the people thought the future of Alaska should be. The seminars were synthesized into a report which was used as a basis for legislation to change the structure of government itself in the state, particularly affecting environment, education, and consumer issues.

In a second major role, Guess served as chairman of the Legislative Council. He hired an international expert on gas and oil to advise the State on how to deal with the big oil interests, providing an otherwise inexperienced government with the knowledge needed to shoulder a new and major responsibility.

Guess was returned to the House for a fourth term in 1970, again as the top vote getter in his area. Elected Speaker of the House, he continues to shoulder a major responsibility for a young state entering an uncertain, yet potentially productive and lucrative era. As an environmentalist who has sponsored most of the environmental bills passed by the legislature, he is just as concerned about the proper development of the state's mineral and industrial potential. The pressure from national environmentalists to prevent the construction of the Trans-Alaska pipeline has been unrealistic and unfair, he says.

"The national environmental movement is tantamount to class distinction," he says. "The poor, unemployed who benefit from resource development will not tolerate it." He points out that many of the national environmentalists want large sections of the country set aside as wilderness areas which only the rich can afford to visit, with no benefit to the poor.

With proper safeguards, Guess believes that Alaska can very well protect its environment and develop its resources at the same time. The idea fits well with his broader philosophy of what politics is all about.

"Politics is a vehicle to accomplish things," he says, "it's the use of governmental structure to benefit the people. Some look at politics as an instrument to control people. I look at it the other way around."

Gene Guess met Carol Suber at William and Mary where he was president of the senior class and she was the head of the Honor Council. They married shortly after she graduated in 1956, and Carol has been the perfect complement for her husband's career.

Carol has been politically and professionally successful in her own right. She served as Alaska's first Romper Room television teacher and handled panel interview shows for an Anchorage television station. But her most rewarding work comes from her interest in handicapped and retarded children. She has been a volunteer lobbyist in the legislature for seven years, during which the state passed a bill to assure the same treatment in the school system for retarded children as for the normal child. Through her efforts, the state also set up the Alaska Treatment Center to help retarded children.

Carol's influence provides a practical side to her husband's intense activism. When Gene graduated from law school and wanted to go to Alaska, she was willing to accompany him, but not until he had lined up a job in Washington through the Department of the Interior.

Alaska works hardships on people, particular women, but both Gene and Carol, the parents of three children, love the state.

"Alaska is like an emerging country, and those of us who live there consider ourselves very fortunate," Gene says. "We'll never have a major population, but if we can get ourselves squared around on the development of resources, it will become a very viable place. Alaska is a composite of people of other places, and this makes it an extremely interesting place to live. We feel we owe Alaska a great deal."

The reminder of the December 28th deadline for the Gazette caught up with me in California visiting my young Trammells.

"Hail" to the person whose brainstorm produced the "Re-Echo". It was like a visit home!

Speaking of "Home" the brave Alumni who dared the weather for "Homecoming" were Walker Cowles, Cooper Ponton, John Baker, Albert Carlson, Murray Simpson, Andre Goetz, William Lawson, Reva Payne Johnson, James Kemp, Adolph Magnus, Thomas Ferratt, Shelton Baker, Ray Reid, Gurney Reid, Sallie Shumate Legard, and Stirling King. There may have been many more but these are the ones who registered at the Phi Beta Kappa Hall. Next time do make a note if wives or husbands come also.

We do have some classmates to be congratulated on their careers and community activities.

He has been named Chairman of the professional committee for the "Once in a Lifetime" capital fund drive for the Monmouth County Chapter of the American Red Cross. The purpose of the drive is for $150,000 to finish paying for the new chapter house on Broad St. in Shrewsbury. The former building was more than 100 years old. He has also served on the boards of the S.P.C.A. and the Rumson Board of Education.

Do hope the New Year will bring lots of interesting news from all of you to be shared through the Gazette next time.

Greetings, friends! I haven't caught my breath from Christmas yet but I wanted to get a few words off to you before my December 28 deadline.

Thank you, all you dear people who sent me Christmas cards, particularly those with newsy notes for our column. I am writing to each of you.

Had a great letter from Carl Andrews. He is slightly retired, he says, busier than ever with so many interests (including doing a good job for the Alumni Society!). He is chairman of Roanoke's committee for the development of the famous Mill Mt. Park. Also, he has been named a life member of the National Conference of Editorial Writers, which he helped found and of which he was president in 1959-60 and an officer for 7 years. A well-deserved honor, Carl, congratulations!

A note from Bill Morrow makes me nostalgic. We were in a couple of places together and had such fun! He is Director of Alumni Affairs for the Northfield-Mt. Hermon School, with an alumni body of 22,000. This requires a lot of travelling—a southern and West Coast trip is on the agenda in January. He will be in Richmond one night—wish we could see him!

Hughlett Mason sent me a most welcome word from Arlington. The Masons see several of our schoolmates—Elizabeth Lam of Norfolk now lives in Alexandria and has visited them several times. Catherine Burns Plevcan and her husband, who teaches art in Erie, Pa., have also been by to see them. Their oldest son is a physician in Hagerstown, Md. Hughlett also sees Ray Reid, '26, who has recently retired as Supt. of Arlington Schools. Ray plans to move to Blackstone later. Another friend there is Edward C. Johnson, who has been Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Samoa and Judge of the Court of Maritime Claims.

Hughlett has just been awarded the Certificate of Merit for Distinguished Service by the Dictionary of International Biography of London—Another honor for our class! His current book in progress is the "History of Steam Navigation to the Eastern Shore of Virginia".

Max Brockenbrough Hougland and husband are in Williamsburg for the winter months and really enjoying it. I can't wait to see her—it's been a long time.

Billie Shelton Harrison, '28, writes that she is going to build a home in Chatham, Va., near the farm where her mother grew up. She is a successful literary agent, which means she is on her own and can work where she likes. Watch for her, alums in Chatham. She tells me Mary Ribble, also '28, has retired from Social Service work in Virginia.

And now I'll close with a quote from Tiny Grove's Christmas card: "Hope we have a lot of the old gang present for our 45th reunion next fall. They were about the most wonderful people I've known." Thank you, Tiny, from all of us. Y'all come!

As the deadline approaches for the Gazette, there are news items, letters, and Christmas cards from many of our class. Our class President, Edward T. Justis of Chesterfield County has been named to the new position of Deputy Commissioner of the Virginia Department of Vocational Rehabilitation. Ed, who has been one of DVR's two assistant commissioners since April 1967, assumes his duties immediately.

A note from Betsy Price Green says she will retire from her school library work in June. After that she and her husband, Dauba, hope to get in some traveling.

A Christmas letter from Joe James who is now living at Millwood in the Shenandoah Valley near Winchester. They are having a great time getting acquainted with their new neighbors in the vicinity and entertaining friends and relatives.

Gladys Prause Strickler has now retired after 32 years of teaching and has time for growing flowers, reading, traveling and caring for her 92-year-old mother. In June she had nine days in Mexico City with her daughter and family. She is now reading up on archaeology to increase her knowledge about the pyramids.

Hazel Saunders Weaver and her husband took the Maiden Voyage of the "Nordic Prince" with fourteen days and nine ports of call in the Caribbean. Then they had a ten-day trout fishing trip to East Glacier National Park in Montana.

Harry Blair retired from General Motors in Detroit on September 29th, and was given a great retirement party with about two hundred G. M. public relations men in attendance. It was a "spoof" production worthy of the best from Broadway.

A note from Dr. Albion G. Taylor who taught many of you Economics, saying they drove back for a week's visit in good old Williamsburg in September.

Norris L. Thomas and his family have been touring Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, etc. It was their first trip there. He writes that it was a wonderful trip especially on the boat from Portland to Yarmouth, then to Truro, Dartmouth, Halifax.

On a recent trip to Southwest Virginia I had a visit with Carl Gillespie and his wife Betty '31 in their home in Tazewell, Va. Carl's latest honor is his appointment by the Governor to the American College of Trial Lawyers. Carl Jr. is in the law firm with his dad and they also have two married daughters and two grandsons, of whom they are justly proud.

Helen Morton Shanklin lives in Bluefield, W. Va. where her husband, Jim, is a specialist in Internal Medicine at Bluefield Sanitarium. Their daughter, Anne, lives in Charlottesville where her husband, Conrad Warlick, is Associate Dean of Admissions at the University of Virginia. James Jr. and his wife are living in Detroit, Michigan. He is doing graduate work at Wayne State College. Each family has one child.

Susan Carpenter Carter has used her hobby "people" to the advantage of many people especially young people. The wife of Dr. G. Norfleet Carter has contributed a great deal to the town of Boynton, where they live. Beginning with a small group of little girls in 1948 she has devoted much of her time, energy, and love to the work of The Episcopal Young Churchmen of St. James Church. Just a year ago at the annual Christmas gathering which included most of the young people whose lives she had influenced, they paid their respects to her for her years of service with a lovely silver tray. She continues her interest in this group and many other service organizations though she feels some younger people can carry the responsibility while she basks in the joy of well-earned rest and organizes her boxes of newspaper clippings into scrapbooks. Her other hobbies are flowers and arrangements, history and antiques, her very complete doll collection including many representing foreign countries, and playing bridge.

Sally Copenhaver Southworth has retired from the Richmond Public Schools and is enjoying it as much as the rest of us. She and her husband Horace have two grandchildren, one girl and one boy.

Mary M. Parry writes that she and a friend have found a lovely house at 42 High Ridge Road and "have decided to settle in Ridgefield, Conn. until infirmity drives us south." She has spent the major part of two years in St. Paul, Minn. on a family matter and enjoyed the twin cities.

Mary E. Wenger has retired from teaching with 44 years of service and is now working on the script for an historical pageant to celebrate the bicentennial of Shenandoah County in October 1972. She is living in Woodstock.

Eleanor W. James is going to make an album of "now" pictures of the members of the class of '30 for the future reunions. Wouldn't you like to see your friends whether they can make the trip back to Williamsburg or not? Please send me a snapshot of yourself, spouse, children, grandchildren, or whomever you choose to include. Some news of what you are doing would be welcome too.

Good news from the Class of '32 finds a number of alumni still active or semi-active in varied fields of business.

From the Lynchburg News we learn of the many great honors and achievements of Jane Jolliffe Palmer of Purcellville. She was a recent guest speaker at the dinner meeting of the Lynchburg Business and Professional Women's Club. She is National Foundation Development Chairman and past President of the Virginia Federation. She graduated from the College at the age of 18 and is now Senior Guidance Counselor and Class Sponsor of the Loudon Valley High School. She is on the Advisory Committee of Northern Virginia Community College and holds a Certificate of Merit for Distinguished Service to Education and Community. She is listed in the National Register of Who's Who and numerous other honorary groups. Jane has a son and a daughter and four grandchildren and was named Louden County Woman of the Year for 1961.

William A. Bowen writes from Los Angeles, Calif. that he is planning semi-retirement from the business he founded 15½ years ago. He will remain Chairman of the Board and major stock holder in Classified Departments, Inc.

Benjamin R. Bruner of Cumberland, Md. is now Chairman of the Trustee School of Theology Committee of the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary. He is Vice President of the Maryland Baptist Convention. Ben was pastor of the Farmville Baptist Church several years ago and is now Secretary of the Board of Trustees of Fork Union Military Academy. He also produces a TV program—"Good News for Every Man." Ben is married to Virginia Williford, '36, and is listed in the recent issue of Who's Who in the East.

C. Nash Lindsey after 35 years has sold his insurance business in Helena, Ark. and is now Business Manager of the East Arkansas Regional Mental Health Center. Good luck to Red in his new endeavor.

Willoughby Patton has moved from New York to Silver Spring, Md. We will be looking for a new publication soon.

Joseph Spicer lives in Bethesda, Md. and for the past 25 years has been associated with George Washington University in financial administration.

Caskie Stinnett continues to make news and add distinction to a long list of accomplishments. Caskie is now Editor of Travel and Leisure Magazine—a magazine of the leisure class with a circulation based on three million readers. We wish for Caskie the great success we know he will continue to enjoy.

Fred C. Stewart of Franklin, Va. last November was elected President of the Suffolk, Franklin, Tri-County Community Mental Health and Mental Retardation Services Board.

Clarence I. Butte, Jr., M.D. of Matoaka, W. Va. was given a reception last fall in appreciation of his many years of service in that community.

Cameron and Pauline Stanley Ogden are now living in Highstown, N. J., and he is Eastern Region Plant Office Manager for Union Carbides Linde Division. They hope to visit the College more often.

F. Barret and Margaret Parmelee Horton are still enjoying retirement and its slow pace in Mazatlan, Mexico.

Joseph P. Serra, D. M. D. of Westerly, R. I. has a son, Geoffrey Serra, who graduated 1971 with a major in English.

Harriet Council Mead writes that she had a wonderful month's trip to England this past summer.

Lillian C. Maben of Blackstone, Va. as an attendant at summer school fondly remembers Dr. Guy's delightful lectures, Mr. Check's classes and two great ladies—Dean Landrum and Mrs. Campbell.

37

Walter J. Zable of Rancho Santa Fe, Calif. was selected San Diego's Industrialist of the Year 1971, for his achievements in industrial leadership and outstanding contribution to the city in the field of community service.

What a traveling group this class has been the past several months!

Helene Stein Brandon has retired from teaching. She and husband, Tom, took a photo-safari through South and East Africa in September. It must have been quite an experience.

Edythe Dank Lever and husband, Shelby, spent a week in Nassau last May, then vacationed in England and Scotland in November.

Jane Speakman Hauge had a trip to the Barbados in January with husband, Nick.

Jim and Peg Knox are spending the winter in Mexico. They will be back at their Vancouver home in the Spring.

Mildred Albee Babb and daughter, Kathy, plan to visit her son and daughter-in-law, Terry and Anne, in Hawaii this summer. I hope they like the Islands as much as we do.

Nancy Adams Barr must be our star traveler. She left on a round the world trip last September. Christmas was supposed to be spent in India, but we are wondering what the war situation there did to her plans.

It is welcome back to the States for the Charles Mannings. Ella Lee Fulton Manning wrote that they left Bermuda December 31 to return to their Chesapeake Bay home at Port Republic, Md. Chuck has been Consul General in Bermuda for 4½ years and is now retired from government service. In the Spring they plan to build on their waterfront lot on Hilton Head Island, S. C. Their eldest son, Kirk, received his law degree from University of Texas last summer and is now a 1st Lt. in the Army, stationed at Ft. Gordon, Ga. He is being married in the Spring to an U. Texas graduate, who is a hostess with American Air Lines. Charles, 2nd, a student at William & Mary, after a 2 year struggle with an injured leg, has been able to discard cast and brace and walk normally. Ella keeps up with college happenings with him in Williamsburg. Youngest son, Mike, is spending his junior year at St. Andrew's College in Scotland, then will return to graduate from Dickinson College, Pa. Ella Lee wrote that it was their pleasure to entertain the Paschalls when they were in Bermuda.

Gretchen Kimmel Price reports from Spartanburg, S. C. that her doctor husband is still quite busy, but they enjoy travelling when they can get away. 1971 saw the arrival of the Prices first granddaughter and first grandson-congratulations!

A welcome note from Margaret Brett Evans gave the happy news that she married Reese Honn June 13, 1970 in Michigan. After the death of her husband, Bill Evans, four years ago, the Field Enterprises Educational Corporation transferred Margaret from North Carolina to manage the branch office in Dearborn, Michigan. Here she met Reese. After their marriage they worked as co-managers of the Dearborn office until last October 1st. They are now on a year's leave of absence and are back in Margaret's home in Murfreesboro, N. C. The combined family includes Reese's daughter, Laurie, 19, a sophomore at Western Michigan and a son, Greg, 14, and Margaret's middle child, Edgar. Her elder son is married, has a 2½ year old son, and attends Bowman-Gray Medical School. Her daughter, Sarah Helen, married in August, after graduation from Wesleyan College, Macon, Ga. and now teaches in Opelika, Ala. while her husband is finishing pre-vet training at Auburn University. Margaret and Reese are travelers, too—they spent a month in Europe last Fall and loved it.

Many thanks for all the news you sent at Christmas. It's great to hear from all of you, and how else can we get a letter together if you don't write me or the Alumni Office?

Maurine Stuart Dulin wrote the following resume of the annual reunion of our class at Homecoming—held on the rainiest of all Homecoming weekends.

We had cause to really celebrate Herb Krueger having been voted into the W&M Hall of Fame this fall. He is the first of our class to have been accorded this honor. Because of the downpour, the honorees were presented in the new William and Mary Hall. Herb received a silver plate with the W&M seal and suitable inscription. Several impromptu signs were made and posted about our "hospitality suite" to honor "Our Herb."

Twenty-two attended the Class Dinner on Friday night and we mixed and mingled with other reunion groups before and after dinner. The parade was cancelled because of rain, yet many very hardy-types went to the game, and got thoroughly soaked in enjoying the victory.

The post-game party was very well attended with Margaret Krueger's homemade bread and other gourmet items consumed happily. To be sure, the avid golfers were unhappy about the rain, yet we stayed up till 3 a.m. each night talking and enjoying the good fellowship of this weekend.

Those attending included: Bill Altenburg and wife, Dan Blocker, Moe Brill and wife, Fred Brown, wife and daughter, Carl Cassella and wife, Maurine Stuart Dulin and spouse, Lucy Ruffin Green, Lucile Eldridge Harkless, Fred Howard, Herb Krueger and wife, Brad Pulley and wife, George Sands and wife, Lee Shimberg and wife, Jordan Sizemore, J. C. Sturges and wife, Anthony P. (Tony) Wagener, Jr. Fred Brown's daughter was taken ill and had some special care—an appendectomy, I'm told. We believe it all ended well for them, however.

Naturally we miss those absent faces, and hope others will come next year!!! We'd especially like to see you. So try to include us in 1972.

I'm sure I have missed a name or two, but not willfully. All alums enjoyed the Open House and continental breakfast at the President's House. It was a pleasant way to greet our new President and his family.

Good wishes for a very happy and healthy new year.

I was delighted to receive so much news from the Alumni Office for this letter. David Senft writes that change seems to be the order of the day for some of our classmates. Harry Barr is now in the Norfolk area; David Guilan '41 is in Kinchasa, Congo for the next year or so distributing pharmaceuticals representing his own firm; Bob Stainton '41 moved to Ocean City, N. J. for business and residence. Dave is now with the brokerage firm of Harris Upham in Institutional sales. He says "new careers for all of us—keeps one young and hopefully not foolish."

Virginia Brenn Steele returned in October from a fabulous Mediterranean cruise—Greece, Turkey, Malta, Italy, French Riviera—a review of Fine Arts 100. She's "eternally grateful to Messrs. Check, Haber and Rust."

Cornelia Hoge Smith writes that they are proud grandparents of four. Connie says they still go visiting across the U. S. in their Winnebago Land Yacht and "find a great welcome when you're self contained." She loves camping with all the facilities.

Mary Willis O'Farrell went on a 15-day chartered tour of Europe with a group of friends from the Defense General Supply Center, Richmond, last summer and visited England, Belgium, Germany, Austria, Italy, Switzerland and France. They had a ball and really enjoyed the beautiful scenery, art and shopping.

Seymour Shwiler is still working at the Capitol for the Joint Committee on Atomic Energy as Technical Consultant.

John Owen has a married son and daughter and three grandchildren. His son received his Masters Degree in Mechanical Engineering from Rutgers University in June, was married in July, and is now a Second Lieutenant in the Transportation Corps and is currently attending school at Fort Eustis.

Margaret Grammer Russell was awarded the Master of Science Degree in Rehabilitation Counseling by Virginia Commonwealth University at their commencement in June. She is employed as an Employment Counselor in the Peterburg, Virginia Office of the Virginia Employment Commission. She and her husband, Surry, reside in Disputanta.

Alfred Alley is at Sacramento State College and should complete work for his Master's degree in June. He is also working as Vicar of the Episcopal Church in Rancho Cordova. He says that having settled in California he doesn't know when he will get back for a homecoming and maybe there are some alumni in the Sacramento or the Bay Area who could get together annually for a celebration of some kind.

Our Christmas cards brought some additional news: Ginnie Clauden Allen's letter described daughter Pam's European trip, following her graduation from college, and mentioned that she visited Pinky Buell Watt, who has a charming hotel (The Ballachulish) in Ballachulish, Scotland, and also Jack Morpurgo who is now a professor of American Literature at Leeds, England. Ginnie's son Jeff is in his second year at Denver University.

Jean Clarahan Bratton says that with all the kids away most of the time she took the jump from a part-time job to a full-time one as a secretary at Trinity College in Hartford and thoroughly enjoys it. Tuition and time for a course is a fringe benefit so it's back to school too. Son Dan graduated cum laude from Knox and is now working in Elkton, Md. Daughter, Chris, finished her freshman year at Carleton and decided she wanted to take time out before she went back. Her older daughter, Anne, is teaching high school English and Loren, her husband, is a systems engineer at General Electric. They and their little daughter live in Binghamton, N. Y.

John and Marion Milne Barba are taking their family to Jamaica for a family vacation from Christmas to New Year's.

I was happy to receive a card from Robert Klein, but sorry he sent no message.

Besides her activities in National Girl Scouts, Rosa Ellis Long enjoys work as president of Women of St. Paul's Cathedral, Board of Buffalo Federation of Women's Clubs, Episcopal Church Home, member of Press Club, Niagara Frontier Industrial Editors, and G. S. Camp Committee.

Our trip to the British Isles was just fabulous and since then we have been involved in having an addition made on our house. We are now settled in our fancy new bedroom, bath and dressing room and really enjoying it.

It's good to hear from so many of you via the William and Mary Fund envelopes. Keep the news coming!

Robert D. Aldrich writes from Merchantville, N. J. that he has completed 21 years as a special agent for the F.B.I.

Margaret Kelly (Dunham) of Stoughton, Mass., is now teaching physically handicapped children at the Mass. Hospital School near their home. She finds the work challenging and interesting. Son Nelson is a freshman at Temple University and daughter Amy is a freshman at Green Mountain College in Vermont.

Frances Poarch (Langston) reports from Suffolk, Va., that their daughter, Nancy Lou, is a senior at Westhampton College in Richmond and that their son, Darden, is a Junior at Nansmond-Suffolk Academy.

Marx Figley (Willoughby) writes from La Canada, Calif., that she had a wonderful reunion in Taiwan with Bill Morell and Pat Leonard (Morell) ('44), where Bill is attached to the American Embassy. The Ambassador from South Africa, the Ambassador to the U. S., and other fascinating Chinese and British friends joined them for dinner, and Marx was very impressed with the conversation carried on in Chinese. She gives the GAZETTE credit for reuniting them.

Mary Ruth Black (Bowling) has a daughter, Lyunc, who is a sophomore at the College this year. Mary Ruth keeps busy with a high school age daughter and her work as Vice President of the Central Maryland Girl Scout Council.

Trudell Green (Brown) has spent seven years as a school librarian in Rhode Island. She has now joined her husband, who writes editorials for the New York Times, and is living in New York City. Their son Clement is a senior at Southern Massachusetts University. Younger son, Matthew, is a freshman at the University of Rhode Island.

Annette Carter Laird recently had a book published by J. B. Lippincott. Entitled, Exploring from Chesapeake Bay to the Poconos, the book is already in its second printing. Annette writes that she is busy with radio and TV appearances too. "Life is good." Congratulations to you, Annette!

Claire Hulcher McMullan has one daughter who is a sophomore and cheerleader at the University of Virginia and another daughter who is a freshman there. Two other daughters are in the eleventh and sixth grades respectively.

Phyllis Hile McCarthy (Entwistle) writes that she remarried in 1965 and is now living in Vero Beach, Fla. Her son, Jack McCarthy, now lives in Ft. Lauderdale and is married. Daughter, Jane McCarthy, lives and works in Connecticut.

Richard J. Davis also reports his remarriage to Martha Whitfield in 1967. They are parents of a baby boy, and have also adopted a baby girl. Dick serves as President and Chief executive officer of the Virginia Investment and Mortgage Corporation, which is located in Portsmouth, Virginia.

Your secretary and husband have just returned from a League of Cities convention in Hawaii and are having trouble coming down to earth after hobnobbing with other Mayors from across the United States!

Following the presentation, Princess Grace of Monaco was honored at a small dinner party in Houston. Among the guests were Louise Thomas Cooley and Dr. Denton Cooley whom among others the article refers to as Houston royalty.

A nice long letter from Dinny Lee McAlinden brings news of traveling William and Mary friends. The McAlindens' had summer visits from Sunny Manewal Murray and Ken '44 en route to Vermont and from Martha Macklin Smith and Herbert who were returning home to Virginia Beach from Maine. A letter from Sunny reiterates their nice visit with Dinny; also tells of a prospective student tour of the William and Mary campus with daughter Leslie; and a very special visit with their son, his wife and a baby grandson born last April. Dinny's son Jimmy, 3rd grade, and Mary Ann, first grade, as well as PTA, garden club, and politicking keep her extremely busy.

The news response has been wonderful and I am most grateful!

After five years of loyal service Keith Gamble Duncan has retired as class secretary and before turning the job over to her successor, I decided to take this opportunity to visit with all of you.

By now our Tremendous Twenty-fifth is part of history but for those of us who were there, the glow lingers on. And for those who were with us in thought only you may be sure we missed you. Reunions are for remembering and to be sure it was an evening filled with nostalgia and the warmth of friendship and fond memories. It was great to have President and Mrs. Graves join us at our dinner and as he wrote me later, "Being adopted by the Class of '46 was just about the nicest thing that has happened to us and I pledge to you and your classmates that we shall ever be mindful of the honor you have bestowed on us."

A telegram of greeting from Charlie McCurdy brought back wonderful memories of the warm friendship and help he has given our class in years gone by. He is now living in Columbia, S.C. and helping the university there.

Remember the Peterson brothers—John and Walter from our freshman year? Well, Walt is now Governor Peterson—in his second term as such for the great state of New Hampshire! And best of all he and his greatest asset, wife Dorothy, flew down just to be with us that night. It was so good to see him again and to be able to tell him how proud we are of him.

Highlight of the evening was Fritz Zepht's presentation to Dr. Graves of our class gift. Symbolizing our gratitude for the college opening its doors to us, Fritz presented him with a gold key appropriately engraved which will hang in the conference-dining room of the new Alumni House.

So nice to hear from Larry Richardson (Dr. L. W., that is). His son, Steve, is a student at the College and came to our cocktail party to deliver personally his father's contribution to our class gift. Next time hope he delivers Larry, too. Great to see Jinx Stephens Daniel after 25 years and also Phyl Laskey Renick. Our illustrious V-P Dick Baker and Jinny were there—don't know what we'd do without Jinny's spirit and enthusiasm. And Carter and Pam Pauly Chinnis—Pam has done such a tremendous job as president of the Alumni Society and has brought credit to all of us.

It was good to see Tom Dingle down from Chicago, Keith and Tom Duncan, and Betty Cutshall Allman and Ed. Prizes for coming the greatest distance went to B. J. Relph Samuels (who looked super) from Fort Worth and to Harry Carter who brought his very attractive wife, Betty, from Dallas. Running a close second was Dottie Grove Lamberton and Bob who came from Prairie Village, Kansas.

The Philadelphia-New Jersey crowd was there in force: Dottie Hammer, Budd and Betty Lawson Sallada, George and Marcia Levering Balzerit, Al and Janie Fessler Brick, Bill and Tony Lester Kemmerer, Jack and Peg King Storminger, Fred and Millie Gaito Steingress, and Earl and Alice White Tomlinson. From the New York area came Mike and Patty Wheelan Crimi, Bill and Patty Wattles Spiegel, and Ronnie and Lucille King.

With us also were Doc and Donnie Lepper Ware, Dick and Jan Freer Scantlebury, Bill and Cherry Whitehurst Wood, Dr. Charlie Kotsch and Mary Alice, John and Daphne Crum, Jackie and Dale Clark, Bob and Blair Parsons Goff, Dick and Deeks Phipps Shryock, Joan and Eddie King, Bill and Helen Jordan Miller, Bill and Joy Bryan Longworth, Mac and Pris Fuller Downs, Ed and Ann Manson Gatling, Howard and Sally Rue Justis Ranson, and Al and Mary Tanner—Al has served us well as secretary-treasurer of the Alumni Society.

And what would we do without our Fred Frechette? He did such a super job on the Class 25th Yearbook (which we trust you have all received by now and which will bring you up to date on most of us) and gives so much of himself to the College in so many ways. He and Caroline were everywhere as were Ellis and Jacy Bormann Stroup, Hal and Helen Robinson Zeigler, Bill and B. J. Adams Trueheart, George and Doris Brandt Bauer, Maynard and Dottie Fitzcharles Weber (she's the cutest grandma) Carol Talbot Egelhoff, Barbara Nycum Moore, Ken and Monie Price Burbank, and Allen and Jerrie Healy Clay. There now, surely hope I haven't missed anyone.

As a reunion favor to all who contributed to our class gift we have given a special William and Mary First Edition scarf designed by the well known Frankie Welch. Only a limited number of these first edition scarves are available and only to our class. You really can't live without one, they are so attractive. And you can obtain same for yourself (or your wife) by sending a contribution earmarked for the Class of '46 gift, in addition to your annual giving check—do it today—you'll be glad you did! And the same designed cocktail napkins are also available for $1.00 each and can be ordered from the Alumni Office. You'll want a dozen at least for your next party.

Yes, reunions are for remembering—remembering not only our happy times and our friendships but remembering the real reason that draws us back—the College. For deep in the heart of each of us there is a very special feeling for the College and it is this very bond we share that seems to grow in meaning with each passing year. 'Tis said that a class does not mature until it has been out of school twenty-five years. Well, we have now become of age and we have a bright new opportunity to share in this Golden Age of Graves! Let's each of us renew our pledge of loyalty and support to each other and to the College and as we continue to grow in strength together so too shall we help the College make its continuing contribution in a changing America.

See you at the 30th!!

letters. Each year this season seems to creep up faster and have us busier so I appreciate you remembering me. Woody and Yvonne Wayland are still living in New York. Skippy and Bruce Scrymgeour are enjoying retirement in Oakton, Va. Dick and Jo Scofield sent greetings from Ohio. Dick is regional sales manager for Alcoa and does some traveling to Buffalo and the Erie area. Jo is teaching piano. Their daughter will enter college in the fall and son is a happy fourth grader.

Martha Belford Root is a human taxi, aren't we all? Their son is in high school now and daughter in the sixth grade. And also news from the other Roots, no kin, O. B. and Mim Root moved to the San Francisco area after Thanksgiving. Their daughter was married in the early fall. Anne Waring Brown and Lind are still enjoying New Jersey life. Their daughter started college at Duke this fall. Anne has been going to the New York Alumni meetings.

Joan Meadors Hawkins and Buddy keep busy in Ohio. Their son Johnny started college this past fall and daughter will start next fall.

The Blair MacKenzie's have moved to New York state where Blair is on the staff of the new Empire State College.

Ruth Barnes Chalmers still enjoys Calgary but was really looking forward to going to Hawaii for Christmas. Son David will start college in the fall.

Patsy Jones Warner and Bill now have daughter Sally a pre med student at the University of Arkansas. Liz and Bob Shuman will be sending their oldest son off to Lehigh in the fall.

Nancy Kurtz Falck and George seem to keep up with everybody. They went to Homecoming. Saw Eddie Pierce and Gail. She also saw Jean Payne Lewis this fall. Jeanne's daughter Cynthia is a freshman at William and Mary.

Jeanne Bambforth took a year off from teaching and took a trip to Australia and Japan. Got back with time left over so went to Africa. Sounds fabulous.

It seems like everybody has a son or daughter in or entering college in the fall. I still have a year to go. . . .

Dr. Walter S. Nied is living in Decatur, Georgia where he has been practicing dentistry for a number of years.

Tom Banks and wife Lorraine spent last winter in Spain and plan on spending this winter in Mexico.

Ben Hamel wrote that he attended the William and Mary vs Tulane game in New Orleans with Bob Hendrich (1951) and wife and Bob Hamel (1953) and wife.

Our 20th Reunion was so much fun in spite of the lousy weather. The weekend began on Friday when classmates and their families began arriving from places as far away as Texas to Connecticut. They stayed all over Williamsburg, but many of us stayed at the headquarters of the Class of 1951, the Brick House Tavern on Duke of Gloucester Street. Most of us got to greet each other for the first time at the cocktail hour at the Lodge. From there we went to the Class Dinner where eighty or more of us enjoyed some good food and lots of talk. Jim Kelly welcomed us, and later on, each class member present introduced himself or herself and his or her mate or family members if they attended with them. Gordon Vliet, the Director of Alumni Affairs, brought the new President of the College, Dr. Graves, and Mrs. Graves by to meet us. Dr. Graves made a short speech, and we were impressed by him and his plans for the College. Before we were dismissed, Millie Johnson Woodling and Pete were recognized as the couple who had come the greatest distance to attend our reunion. They had flown up from Houston, Texas, and thus Jim presented them with a gift which was a William and Mary travel bag. We also remembered those of our class who are no longer with us. We were saddened to learn of the recent death of Nancy Leigh Hall Gibbs, and we extend our deepest sympathy to George and their family. Most of us went from the dinner to the basement lounge of the Brick House Tavern, the gathering place for partying and good conversation all weekend. There was a bad storm on Friday night, the lights went out, and the humidity and heat were so intense. However, Jim Kelly found some candles which completed the colonial atmosphere for us; the doors were opened for air; and we never stopped talking with the people whom we had not seen for many years who still looked almost the same but were more mature in their thinking and had so many varied experiences concerning families, jobs, travels, schools, etc. to talk about until the early hours of the morning.

Just as it rained on our Commencement Day, and our graduation had to take place in Blow Gym, it rained so hard on the Saturday of Homecoming at our 20th Reunion that the parade was canceled! Casey's did a big business that morning as Bev. and I plus many others hurried there to buy a needed umbrella and boots. We ate a light breakfast at Phi Beta Kappa Hall though many of the alumni accepted the thoughtful invitation of Dr. and Mrs. Graves and ate breakfast at their home. Some of us attended the annual meeting of the Alumni Society. The lunches that were to be served outside were served to the reunion classes and other returning alumni in designated rooms inside Phi Beta. Here again we had a good time eating and visiting together. The game was played as scheduled, and many braved the pouring rain armed with umbrellas, boots, and plastic covers to see the game. The husbands of some of us went, but we decided to visit at the Brick House Tavern or to browse through some of the shops. Some attended the cocktail hour at the Lodge after the game; many attended the Dinner Dance at the Lodge that night; others went out to dinner at various places in Williamsburg, but most of us ended up again in the basement lounge at the Brick House Tavern until late that night. If only I could print some of the funny episodes that took place there over this memorable weekend! The most enjoyable one involved Betty Hicks Wagner, her husband, and "J. P." Morgan when J. P. came to borrow some toothpaste from the Wagners! The rest is

FACT OR FANCY?

IN THE SPRING a young man's fancy turns to thoughts of . . . love, baseball, vacation, new clothes. The fact of it is that you'll get nearly as many different opinions as you have young men. It's probably not too fanciful to suppose that young galahads think sometimes of love, other times of baseball or vacation, and always of clothes. If you know a man like that, tell him about us, and tell him to "Dress Right. Your Clothes Never Stop Talking About You." And when you sum that all up, you have fact, not fancy!

WILLIAMSBURG SHOPPING CENTER, RICHMOND RD. AND MONTICELLO AVE.

hilarious but might be censored! Really, we had such a good time together, and people who were not close friends during college days plus mates who did not attend college with us became friends because we shared this unforgettable weekend. Most of us hope to return for our 25th, and we hope more of you will be with us. Ours is a close class, and our interest in the College has remained high. Let's keep it that way by contributing to the William and Mary Fund, by coming back to visit the College, and by keeping in touch with each other. To do the latter, I hope you will let me hear from you.

I am going to attempt to list the people who returned for Homecoming. If I have left out someone, please let me know. Those who returned: Anne Staples Hobson, Jim Kelly and wife Bev. Lawrence Blum and wife, Bill Fox and wife, Dick Lee and wife, J. P. Morgan and wife Ann, Lucy Keen Bertram and son, Edward Spencer and wife Emily, Ed. Grimsley and wife, Ralph Hart, Harvey Schueler and wife, Tom Brummer, "Mike" Warfield, Norm. and Jean Barnes, Jane Dill Gleason, Bob Hendrich, Martha Hogshire Lex and Buddy, Bernie Nolan and wife, Bob Myers and wife, Wes. Richardson and wife, Robert S. Godfrey and wife, Sarah Enos Brown and Jim, Sidna Chockley Rizzo and Paul, Marge Brown Neal and husband, "Stevie" Bartlett St. Clair and Walt, George Lyon and wife, Katherine Bell Martin and Tommy, Carolyn Hooper Extract, Natalie Keller Morrison, Eli Richards and wife, Millie Johnson Woodling and Pete, Billie Potts Place and Jack, Jane Waters Nielsen and Ray, Marty Schultz Stewart and Bob, Billie Henritze Nance, Bobbie Lamont Redding and Chuck, Hilly Wilson, Jean Fried Jaffe and Jerry, Jim Campbell and Ruth, Charles Jett, Bernard Tunstall, Peggy Jones Raney and E. G., Betty Hicks Wagner and Allan, Hugh Moore, Ann Litts Lucas and Bill, Betty Cox Scott and John, Mary Earhart Jenkins and Bob, Phoebe Martin Harcum and Rae, Joan Smithson Old, Gwen Batten Perkins and Perk, Don Taylor and wife, Ed. Terry Stewart Taylor is living in Montgomery, Ala. with her three daughters; the oldest attends college in Alabama. Terry owns a book and gift shop; she also was Tri Delta's Alumnae Association President last year.

Bill Goggin is Assistant Professor of Education at Virginia Commonwealth University in Richmond. He completed his doctorate in curriculum and instruction in the field of education at U. Va. this past summer. Bill also is busy restoring a 1900 townhouse and planned a summer return visit to his birthplace, Barbados, West Indies.

Charles and Marguerite Oldfield Luckett at present are touring on a three months' home leave in the States. Both Lucketts are with the Consulate General in Toronto, Canada, and will be returning in mid-February for a year and a half stay in Toronto.

Bebe Fisher Arbuckle's letter came from Windridge Farm in Hutchinson, Kan. The Arbuckles including their three children hosted people and ponies from Connecticut to California during the International POA Show this summer in Hutchinson. Daughter, Dana, has won the state girls' tennis championship. Bebe plans to take college courses for teacher certification this year.

Ginny Campbell Furst in Kenilworth, Ill. continues to be extremely successful with her real estate career. She, Bill, and their two children are planning a trip to Italy and Spain this March.

Harriet Willimon Cabell's husband, Ben, is Vice President of a new bank in Tuscaloosa, Ala. Harry has completed her advanced study in education.

Ginnie Gary Lupton, Ed, and their three children remain in Dallas, Tex. where they have been stationed since Ed's return from Viet Nam in February. Ginnie has been taking an income tax course and hopes to work during the "tax season."

Emy Ketterson Smith among other things is part-time Publications Editor at the University of New Hampshire.

Please take time to drop me a note this year. Best wishes to all for a healthy and happy 1972.

(part-time) at Chaffey College in California. She spent the summer in England (six weeks where they rented a cottage in Kent) and Scandinavia, visiting a family in Denmark. Bev has two children, 7 and 3.

Sidney Mook is doing graduate work in urban planning at Michigan State University. He has also done graduate work in economics there. Polly Stadel Wrinkle is doing resource teaching in the Chesterfield County School's Supervisory Department. She is in the Richmond Junior League, and has two boys, Davey 8, and Geoffrey 4. She writes that Cammie Day Montague's husband David is mayor of Hampton as of July 1. Ad Atkins Green is living outside Wilmington, Del. where she and her attorney husband, Peter, have restored the second oldest home in Delaware. Nicky Macy Pease has two children, Judy 10, and Scott 8. They live in Berkely Heights, N. J., and she is busy with supplemental teaching, hospital work, bowling, bridge, Girl Scout co-leader . . .

Virginia Holsinger was in Europe this summer—spent some time in Bad Gastein, Austria, was in Paris at the same time as Emperor Hirohito, and again later with Breznev—so never got to the top of the Eiffel Tower. They closed it so Breznev could visit it. Virginia is working in the Dairy Products Laboratory of U.S.D.A. in Washington, D. C. Eve Mapp Davis writes that husband Skip is going to Africa on Safari for three weeks in February. They have two children, Hugh 9, and Holly 7. Diane Montague Belford is living in Watertown, N. Y., where husband, Bob, now a Colonel, is the Deputy Post Commander at Camp Drum. They moved up from Kentucky in July when Bob returned from Korea—two cars, a horse trailer with two horses, two children, and a cat and a dog.

That concludes my Christmas news. How about dropping me a line, huh?

The job of Class Secretary is especially nice at Christmas with the additional cards and notes I receive from you. This year was no exception, and I hope your enthusiasm to contribute to The Alumni Gazette will continue in the New Year.

Once again I received a card from Karen Thomas Liske with her five beautiful children on the front. They are still in San Antonio, and Karen says she hopes it is permanent. She says their life centers around 4th grader Hans' competitive swimming schedule but she also is active in Brownie Scouts.

By the time this letter is published, Nancy Simmons Manson and her family will be back in Denver, Colo. where Dick has three more years in the Army. This past year he has had a fellowship specializing in children's eye care and surgery in Washington, D. C. Nancy said she and the two boys have had a wonderful year in Washington making short visits to all the city's attractions.

Also in the Washington area are Barbara and Ed Knight and Mary Tyler Faruki. Barbara received her PhD in political science last spring and is teaching at Montgomery College in Maryland. Ed is a research economist at Congress-sional Research Service. Mary Tyler Faruki and her family, which includes two children, are living in South Alexandria. Mary's husband is with the Commerce Department.

Major "Chick" Smith is attending the U. S. Air Force Command and Staff College at Maxwell AFB, Ala. Chick is among 600 select government officials and officers from U. S. and allied armed forces enrolled in the 10 month program. It is a part of the Air University's professional education system to prepare officers for higher command and staff positions. Chick has completed 15 months duty in Vietnam.

From Belgium I received a beautiful hand brass-rubbed card from Mary Ann Curtis Williams. Along with this new hobby, she and Charlie, who has been promoted to Lt. Col., have started working on their masters degree in Education. This was made possible through a program from USC and a year's extension of assignment. They are still enjoying camping in the summer (in France and Spain) and skiing in Germany in the winter. Mary Ann is doing substitute teaching and is a Girl Scout leader. She says they will be in Belgium until August 1973.

As for myself, I have recently changed jobs (within IBM) and am doing administrative staff work in an office in downtown Washington headed up by Tom Eley, Class of '57.

Have a happy spring and don't forget to write.

Your Christmas cards and news were most welcome.

Susan Bruton Bailey, Dean, Benton, Tom, and Sara are moving back to Virginia, this time from Oklahoma. Dean has taken a job with London Fog in the Portsmouth office.

Be sure to look in the March issue of Jack and Jill magazine for "My Father is a Secret Service Agent." Fran McLean Pffor says that the article will have a Pffor by-line.

Sue Whitlow Burgess writes that Art, '60, has completed his M.A. and that in addition to his regular job, they are starting their own business.

Last December George Chapman took his bride Gretchen, a French teacher, on a honeymoon cruise of the Caribbean. They have bought an old home in Alexandria. Last summer they traveled to France, sharing part of the trip with neighbors Al and Ginnie Peirce Volkman.

Bill Nicolai has begun work as copy director with Metromedia in New York.

Pat Singleton Parker, Joe, and four-year-old John moved in September from Boston to Lexington, Kentucky. Joe is at the University of Kentucky Medical Center.

Are there any alumni in the Pocatello, Idaho, area? Barbara Bartley Lish and T. J. live there and would enjoy hearing from other alumni. Their children are Kevin, Scott, and Terri Ann, ranging from ten to five.

Edmund L. Walton is a partner in the Arlington law firm of Simmonds, Coleburn, Towner and Carman. He is a member of the board of directors of the William and Mary Law School Association and he is chairman of the Fairfax County Republican Committee. Recently he was selected for the 1971 edition of Who's Who in American Politics.

Allan Brownfeld has received the George Washington Medal from Freedoms Foundation, Valley Forge, Penn. for his reporting from Czechoslovakia. Allan is the Washington editor of Private Practice magazine and is a special assistant to Representative Philip Crane of Illinois.

Joyce Rivers Forcke was recently appointed executive secretary for the Richmond chapter of the American Society of Charter Life Underwriters.

After nine years in the Navy, Jim Tait has become a civilian and he and Patricia have opened the Plaza Chicken House in Virginia Beach. Jim is also in the real estate business.

Homecoming 1971 was a rainy, soggy affair, but it was great to see many friends.

From the William and Mary fund raising box tops: Robert W. Foigner, M.D., currently is chief of nephrology at William Beaumont General Hospital with the U. S. Army via Washington, D. C., where he saw Charlie White, '61, before his transfer to Germany. Bob invites alumni to drop by. Janet Shapiro Bohm, now in Germany, wonders if there is any alumni organization there for the many servicemen, professors and or wives. How about someone starting one?

Danny Dopp is a vice president of Water Resources Congress in Washington, D. C. while Stuart works at home for a syndicated consumer affairs columnist. Their children Michael, age 6, and Elizabeth, age 4, are in school. Danny is active with PTA; Stuart with Kappa Alumnae.

Sidney Child is working on her master's degree in elementary education at George Mason College and Virginia certification in kindergarten through third grade. She is presently an instructional aide in the step-up language arts program in Bailey's Elementary School, Falls Church, Va.

David L. Smith is vice president and general counsel for Tri-South Mortgage Investors, a real estate investment trust, in Atlanta. Dave and Jane Miller '63, are building a home in Dunwoody, Ga.

Chris Herr writes that he resigned in May 1971 as vice president of data processing and warehousing at Herr and Co., Inc., Lancaster, Pa. to form his own employment agency and personnel service under the name of C. R. Herr Jr. Employment Agency.

Carol and Mike Lyle are presently in Kansas City while Major Lyle attends the Command and General Staff College, having returned from Vietnam two months early to do so. The Lyles next tour may be in Washington, D.C.

Again many thanks to Ann Smith Hughes for the following news from the Theta letter: Susan Griggs Braman and E. J. moved with the Air Force from Wiesbaden, Germany to London last July and expect to be there until 1974. In Miami Donna Floyd Fales and Gordon are busy playing tennis when Gordon isn't working as manager of passenger services for Eastern Airlines and Donna isn't tutoring migrant children in a nearby elementary school, among other things. Their boys are learning to play tennis and swim.

Jane Wright Knotts and Jim live in Dover, Del.; Jane teaches and is active with the Junior Board of the "Y". In Williamsburg, Gil and Polly Scott Bartlett are building a house. Gil practices law and is on the boards of the United Fund and the Cancer Crusade. Polly is busy with Edward, age 2, and the American Association of University Women, of which she is chairman of a presentation on consumerism.

Bunny Becker Harrington and Will, of Terre Haute, Ind., purchased an isolated 86 acre tract of mountain woodland in Virginia last summer. They have built a one room cabin, all by hand during vacations. Pril Nash Brown and Seab live in Wayne, Penn. where Pril teaches nursery school.

Ken and Dorcas Miller Lounsbury have moved to Escondido, Calif., where Ken is city attorney. Both their children are in school now and Dorcas' activities include League of Women Voters, Planned Parenthood and plans for graduate work at Univ. of Calif. Sue Oakley Nelson and Larry live in Alexandria where he is an architect. Kay Christian Sills and Art live in St. Joseph, Mich. where he is with Whirlpool and owns the local franchise on an incinerator product. The Nelson and Sills were in the wedding last summer of Cynthia Isemann and Lt. Cdr. Donald Buxton. After a honeymoon in Jamaica, the Buxtons returned to Alexandria, where Cynthia teaches and Don is stationed at the Pentagon.

Dorcas Brown Bankes and Paul live in Bryn Mawr, Penn. and are active in the cause of Indian rights. Paul is on the board of directors of the Indian Rights Association and Dorcas organized a benefit dinner for Taos Pueblo Indians of New Mexico, including the auctioning of original paintings by Manning Williams. Martha Walton High and Jack live in McLean, Va.; Martha is president of the local Theta alumnae group and teaches Sunday school and Jack is national account representative for Univac.

Linnea Barnes Sandstrom and Dick live in Annandale; Linnea is active in real estate and worked last year with a drug mobile program for the National Institutes of Health. Dick is controller of the C.L. Barnes Furniture Co. Margie Heiney Stouffer and John and children are living in McLean now while John, a Navy Commander, is in the office of the Assistant Secretary of Defense. Ann Smith Hughes and Jim have a second son born last August. Jim is an account executive with the local UHF television station.

In January Ed and I will move to Richmond while the Legislature is in session. Ed will be the youngest member of the State Senate. Another new face in the General Assembly will be Delegate Jeff Stafford, '61, a Republican from Giles County.

Look, up in the sky! It's a bird. It's a plane? No, it's just ever-smiling Karen Hunsberger pursuing her new avocation, skydiving. When she's not floating through the wild, blue yonder, Karen serves as a "personnel staffing specialist" for the Air Force at Wright-Patterson AFB in Ohio. With night-life on the base something less than torrid, Karen fills out her days by attending evening classes at Wright State University.

After tying the knot last Spring, Ron and Cathy Anzalone donned sombreros and ponchos and headed west for an archeological dig at Santa Fe. They write: "we are now beginning work on our Masters Degrees at Eastern New Mexico University." I received a lovely note and freaky Christmas card from Cathy Bryan. She is a Graduate Assistant in the Department of Child Development and Family Relationships at the University of Tennessee. Cathy spent the Fall quarter working with four-year-olds in a nursery school.

Bill Moore began a tour of duty as a Foreign Service Officer in the Fall. In Portsmouth, Va., Sam Warren is in a General Electric Co. training program, currently on assignment as a Financial Practices Administrator. Also in Portsmouth, Robyn Krug and Diane Paisley teach junior high English and second grade, respectively. Jan Ferguson Gaskins and husband Steve '69 have been living in Fort Stevens, Mass., for over a year. Jan is busy substitute teaching in area schools while waiting for Steve's May discharge from the Army. Dick Karelitz "sat for" and passed his C.P.A. exam last Spring and is now finishing up his first year at Boston University Law School.

Three '71 alumni doing graduate work at the College to prepare for careers in special education are Mike Fratkin, Mary Alice McCabe, and Martha Stebbins. Mike is teaching at Gloucester High School, Mary Alice works with nine to twelve-year-old mentally retarded children at Tappahannock, and Martha is doing her intern teaching at West Point Elementary. William H. Spring comes to see us every year about this time. Shouldn't you?

Spring comes early to Williamsburg.

And early spring brings the gentle rebirth of a hundred colonial gardens. You could spend all day in the quiet beauty of the Palace gardens alone.

But we don't recommend it.

Save some time to browse among the historic buildings. Save some time to watch craftsmen work just as they did 200 years ago. Save some time to whistle with the fife and drums.

Save enough time and maybe spring will be home when you get back.

VIRGINIA

You'll want to stay in the historic area.

Over 700 fine guest rooms are offered by the Williamsburg Inn, its Colonial Houses, Williamsburg Lodge and The Motor House. For information, color folder or reservations, write Box CN, Williamsburg, Virginia 23185. Or call 229-1700.

is working in a bakery hoping to save up enough money to be able to travel to Colorado and California during the Summer.

Finally, a note of interest to the many alumni who enjoyed the haute cuisine of George's Campus Restaurant in Williamsburg. After years of saving for a trip to the homeland, owner George Dallas packed away his meat cleaver in December and flew to New York City with his wife, Mary. There they enjoyed a wild weekend of sightseeing and Broadway shows before embarking for a vacation in Greece. Rumor has it that George picked up several new, exotic ways of preparing chopped sirloin.

This 45-pound satellite is changing the face of the earth

*If you want to know where it is—a meter or a world away—
Cubic has the system!*

CUBIC'S SECOR, the surveying satellite developed for the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, keeps introducing changes in the cartographer's art. For example, the system places the Ryukyu Islands a half-mile southwest of where we thought they were. To make such discrete measurements, SECOR employs electronic trilateration. As the satellite makes its pass, signals bounce between its 7-pound transponder and 4 portable Cubic ground stations. When the data is correlated, one station, whose position is only generally known, is located with new precision.

Since 1964, the ground stations have leaped across the Pacific toward Hawaii in the first part of a globe-girdling program. With each satellite pass, stations receive information from 10,000 data points—and tens of thousands of correlations are used for each distance measured. Trilateration is the key to a number of Cubic's significant systems developments. SECOR is more proof that if you want to know where it is—land, sea or space—Cubic has the system.
