Plastic Security

It now takes a plastic card (left), somewhat like the ubiquitous credit card, to enter one of the College's residence halls in the wee hours. The card-key system was installed during the summer in an effort to increase security in a time when keys can be duplicated almost anywhere. Introduction of the card-key came with an end to enforced curfews and traditional limitations on movements of students among their residences. Each resident of a hall has his or her own card, coded to unlock one outside door in that particular hall. Each building is locked after midnight, and unlocked at 7 a.m. If cards stray into the wrong hands, the locks may be recoded and new cards issued to residents. When any student residence hall develops a plan to insure individual rights of privacy and freedom of personal choice and movement in the hall (and compatible with the academic objectives of the College), then it will be permitted self-determination as to who shall visit the building and under what conditions. The policy of self-determination on curfew and visitation was approved by President Graves last spring "to encourage students to take responsibility for the conduct of their own lives, within the overall policies of the College and applicable laws."

One More

New this fall on the campus is a Social Sciences classroom building (left), constructed to the west of Phi Beta Kappa Memorial Hall. It now houses the Departments of History, Government, Economics, Sociology and the Marshall-Wythe Institute. A new infirmary is currently under construction, and an appropriation was made last spring by the General Assembly for a new chemistry building. When the chemistry department vacates 50-year-old Rogers Hall, it will be remodeled for additional law school space.

Queen Mary is Liberated

There are those who say Queen Mary II was the person most responsible for helping the Rev. James Blair obtain the College's royal charter in 1693. Whether or not that is accurate, she has come into her own in these days of Women's Liberation. The College Bookstore has found a big seller in the T-shirt (left) which puts Mary ahead of William. The shirt is worn by Miss Janice Margary, a junior, who enjoys the joke but is not part of the growing Women's Liberation movement on campus and throughout the nation. For another look at William and Mary's image as expressed by T-shirt and sweatshirt manufacturers, see page five.

Registration 1972

As the size of the College's undergraduate student body was growing substantially during the 1960's, so were the headaches attributed to course registration procedures. Until this fall, the three-day exercise took place in Blow Gymnasium — and serpentine lines of waiting students often were forced to stand hours in the rain. Some labeled the process chaotic. A lengthy study completed last spring suggested retaining the arena-style operation, but it was switched over to commodious William and Mary Hall (cover) and various procedural changes were made in the hope that many of the system's faults could be eliminated. Additional changes will be made next year, including a pre-registration survey taken early enough to permit departments to adjust their schedules and class sizes before the fall.

With the Parents

Parents will receive an announcement shortly outlining plans for a Parents Day program November 10-11, in conjunction with the at-home East Carolina University football game Saturday afternoon. Full particulars on the schedule, room reservations, and football tickets are being prepared. The program is one feature of the newly organized Association of Parents, headed by a steering committee which met September 2. An article on the Association appears elsewhere in this issue of the Gazette.

About the Gazette

This is the second issue of the Alumni Gazette in its new format, and we hope you will find it as fresh and informative as readers say they found the first. For most of the past 40 years, the Society of the Alumni has published the Gazette as a quarterly magazine, for an audience of alumni. Its cost, borne by contributions to the William and Mary Fund, began to creep past the $30,000 level and at the same time the production schedule became longer and longer. A study conducted by the Society found that the annual cost could be cut nearly in half, that production time could be reduced three-fourths, and nine issues a year could be produced in the new format. More news about alumni and the College can now be published, and the audience has been broadened to reach parents and students — in short, the entire William and Mary family.

The College

Class of '76 makes modern College history

The class which graduates exactly 200 years after the American Revolution began has 1,134 students — thought to be the largest in College history. They were chosen from 5,826 applicants, about ten percent higher than a year before.

The profile of entering students (the Class of '76) shows that 549 are men and 585 are women. There are 767 Virginia residents and 367 out-of-state freshmen. The class showed a major upward shift from previous years in terms of secondary school class rank. About 74 percent were in the upper tenth of their graduating classes; in recent years, the percentage was about 65 percent. The mean scores on College Entrance Examination Board tests rose several points from the previous year, too.

Out-of-state applications to the College continue to outnumber those from within the state. More than 3,400 applications came from non-residents, and not quite 2,400 came from Virginians. The longstanding Board of Visitors policy to maintain undergraduate enrollment at 70 percent in-state was continued this fall.

More alumni children were enrolled this fall than last year, not only in terms of numbers but in percentages. There were about 62 alumni children enrolled in the Class of 1975; in the Class of 1976, there are about 90.

All but a few of this year's entering class took part in secondary school extracurricular activities; many held leadership positions in various organizations and athletic teams. There were 100 editors of their newspapers; 24 student body presidents; 21 senior class presidents; 161 valedictorians and salutatorians; 97 yearbook editors; 33 magazines editors; and 159 varsity team captains.

Graves goes nationwide to meet alumni

The Alumni Society's "Operation Involvement" program of enlarging alumni participation in Society and College activities will include taking William and Mary to 20 key areas outside Virginia in the United States and England between now and June. Parents are also welcome.

President Thomas A. Graves, Jr. is making plans to appear at most, if not all, of the 20 meetings as well as many of those within Virginia.

The first six of these meetings have already been scheduled as follows: Miami, Fla., October 4 (at home of Iver M. Brook, 111 East Sunrise Ave., Coral Gables); St. Louis, Mo., October 31 (contact Kenneth S. Kranzberg, 1 Nob Hill Lane, University City); Cincinnati, Ohio, November 1 (contact Bernard J. Nolan, 1437 Herschel Ave., Cincinnati); Louisville, Ky., November 2 (contact Hugh S. Haynie, Louisville Courier-Journal); Wilmington, Del., November 16 (contact John J. Crum, 1231 Crestover Rd., Wilmington); and Boston, Mass., November 30 Marriott Motor House (contact Ralph Levine, 215 A Street, Boston).

Plans for additional meetings are being made in New York, New Orleans, Houston, Dallas, San Diego, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Baltimore, Washington, Detroit, Chicago, Pittsburgh and Philadelphia as well as in England. Details will be announced in the Gazette and by mail.

A member of the Class of 1976 gets an assist from roommate, mother, and little brother as she moves into duPont dormitory on September 2nd. Orientation saw over 1,000 freshmen arrive in the rain to begin life at the College. Traffic jams, long lunch lines, and hand-painted welcome signs also typified the day.

William and Mary achieves federal support milestone

The College of William and Mary is ranked 48th in the nation in terms of general financial support from the federal government for science programs, for the last fiscal year.

The College's total of $629,000 ranks above such institutions as the University of California at Berkeley, MIT, the University of Chicago and Michigan State. All of the funds were granted by the National Science Foundation, largely to the Department of Physics for a departmental development program.

In terms of total federal financial support for academic science, MIT ranked first with more than 98 million dollars. William and Mary was not among the highest-ranking 100 institutions in total support.

Society taps five for Medallions

The 1972 Alumni Medallions will be awarded at Homecoming to five persons, including a former Governor of Virginia. The recipients were selected by the Alumni Board at its June meeting, and announced prior to Homecoming by vote of the Board. Customarily, names of Medallion recipients are not disclosed until the awards are actually conferred.

The former Governor is Mills E. Godwin, Jr. of Suffolk, who attended William and Mary with the Class of 1935 but went on to law school prior to completing his bachelor's degree. He holds the honorary doctor of law degree from the College and has been honored by many organizations for his civic and political leadership. He was Virginia's 66th Governor, from 1966 until 1970.

Dr. Jack Morpurgo, professor at the University of Leeds, England, who was the first Englishman to graduate from William and Mary in modern times, will also receive a medallion. He was the subject of an article in the September issue of the Gazette. With Dr. W. Melville Jones, retired Vice President for Academic Affairs, and Dr. Edward Riley of Colonial Williamsburg, he is working on the "history of the College" project.

A Medallion will be awarded to Dr. A. F. Chestnut, '41, Director of the Institute of Marine Sciences of the University of North Carolina, who was President of the Society in 1966. He joined the Institute in 1948, after completing doctoral requirements at Rutgers. His list of professional accomplishments is long, and he also has been active on a number of committees related to the sciences.

Mrs. Elizabeth Burger Jackson '34 of Farmville, Va., a world figure in women's hockey, will also receive the Medallion. Professor of natural sciences at Longwood College, where she has been a faculty member for 34 years, Mrs. Jackson holds several leadership positions there. An honorary leadership society at Longwood annually presents a scholarship award named after her. She is also well known as a Farmville area civic leader. She was a member of U. S. Women's Hockey Teams from 1939 until 1954, a delegate to hockey conferences in South Africa, Australia, England and New Zealand, and was named in June to the All-Time U. S. and Reserve Teams of the last 50 years.

A pioneer in the field of travel promotion and development, Thomas G. McCaskey '35 of Williamsburg, will receive the Medallion. He is a long-time member of the Colonial Williamsburg staff and has been a Vice President since 1961. In recent years, he has been advisor and consultant to visitation projects in a dozen cities and counties, in eight states and the Caribbean. One of his major programs concerned planning in the Historic Mall area of the U. S. Capitol for the National Park Service. He holds memberships on the boards of a number of travel organizations and restoration projects and was the 1968 recipient of the Virginia Travel Council's highest honor for his work in originating programs at Colonial Williamsburg. His son, Glen E., is currently a member of the Alumni Board.

Parents Association selects officers, states objectives

Seventeen men and women have been named to the Steering Committee of the newly established Association of Parents, which has the mission of promoting understanding and support for the College among a number of constituencies.

Elected chairman at the September 2 organizational meeting was Alfred W. Craft, Jr. of Virginia Beach, parent of a sophomore. Mr. Craft, an alumnus of the College, is senior vice president for the Virginia Beach region of First & Merchants National Bank.

Other officers are Kenneth L. Woodfin of Alexandria, a Rear Admiral in the Navy, vice chairman for freshmen; Rob Roy MacGregor of Ridgewood, N. J., vice president of the Travelers Insurance Co., vice chairman for freshmen; Howard T. Cohn of Madison, N. J., vice president of ITT, vice chairman for sophomores; Robert Eller of Kinnelon, N. J., vice president of the Good Humor Corp., vice chairman for juniors; Robert P. Gardner of Suffolk, vice president and controller at Planters Division of Standard Brands, Inc., vice chairman for seniors; and Mrs. Arthur H. Gordon of Norfolk, president of S. H. Fried, Inc. and vice president of Arthur Gordon, Inc., vice chairman for graduate students and recent graduates.

A statement of objectives adopted by the Steering Committee says it shall "promote better understanding of the educational programs, policies, and needs of the College of William and Mary, through general meetings, and through personal contact; to interpret the benefits of a liberal arts education, as well as the benefits of the professions of education,

W&M dominates Tobacco Festival

The 24th annual National Tobacco Festival in Richmond will feature William and Mary in more than one way.

The Indians meet Virginia Tech on Saturday, October 28, at Richmond City Stadium for the Tobacco Bowl game. Tickets on the William and Mary side can be purchased through the William and Mary Athletic Association in Williamsburg.

The other William and Mary aspect of this year's two-day festival is that W. Brooks George '32 is Chairman. George is chairman of the board of the House of Edgeworth, the tobacco manufacturing firm in Richmond, formerly known as Larus and Brother Co.

business and law, to its members, to friends, neighbors, and parents of prospective students; to participate in the William and Mary Career and Summer Placement programs which assist graduates in obtaining desirable positions in their chosen spheres of employment as well as assisting students in securing summer employment related to their career interests; and to promote the development of William and Mary by lending personal financial support whenever possible, and by assisting in gaining support from corporations, foundations and other individuals."

Eastern Virginia makes good digging

William and Mary's reputation in the field of archeology continues to grow, it seems, each time a spadeful of earth is turned in Eastern Virginia.

Dr. Norman Barka, professor of anthropology, and Leverette Gregory, director of field operations, have turned up a number of significant historical finds in the last several years. One major dig in May, however, promises to be even more significant.

Among remains expected to be unearthed at the site of Flowerdew Hundred Plantation in Prince George County, near Hopewell, is the first windmill ever to be built in America. The site is also the location of an early 17th century village once known as Powhatan Town.

The Flowerdew site is important, Dr. Barka believes, because very few remains of the early 17th century have been unearthed in previous digs in this section of America.

The Jamestown site, for example, has disclosed a great deal about 18th century life but little of the 17th century because of gradual erosion from the James River which has made 17th-century Jamestown largely inaccessible. Flowerdew, on the other hand, has not been affected by river erosion.

The plantation was founded in 1618 by Sir George Yeardley, governor and captain general of Virginia and was named for his wife, Temperance Flowerdew of Norfolk, England. Current owners of the site are Mr. and Mrs. David A. Harrison III of New York, who are helping finance the investigation through a foundation they established. A decade may be needed to complete the project.

The current Board of Directors of the Society of the Alumni posed for a formal picture during one of its recent meetings at the Alumni House. Seated, from left, are Paul K. Lapolla, Glen C. McCaskey, Allen C. Tanner, secretary-treasurer; C. Randolph Davis, president;

Alumni Board nominates ten

Ten persons have been nominated to fill five seats on the Board of Directors of the Society of the Alumni. Ballots will be mailed to all contributing members in 1971, and results announced at Homecoming. The three-year terms begin in December.

The nominees are Harold M. Bates '52 of Roanoke, an attorney; Mrs. Jean Canoles Bruce '49 of Norfolk, director of family life education for the Health-Welfare-Recreation Planning Council; Colin R. Davis '50 of Suffolk, an executive of the Ferguson Manufacturing Co. and incumbent President of the Society.

Also, Fred L. Frechette '46 of Richmond, independent writer-director-producer of films; Dr. Merritt W. Foster, Jr. '40, Richmond physician and psychiatrist; David D. Henritze '49 of Atlanta, president of Insurance Underwriters, Inc.

Also, J. William Hornsby '50, Mayor of Newport News and an attorney; the Hon. Gregory G. Lagakos '35 of Philadelphia, Judge of the Common Pleas Court of Philadelphia; Bernard J. Nolan '51 of Cincinnati, supervisor of community affairs of the Proctor & Gamble Corp.; and Mrs. Harriet Nachman Storm '64 of Hampton, former women's editor of the Daily Press and now a graduate student in education at the College.

The nominating committee was headed by Mrs. Betty Hicks Wagner '51 of Richmond, a retiring member of the Board. Other retiring members are Mrs. Pamela Pauly Chinnis '46, past President; Howard H. Hyle '48 and Hugh S. Haynie '50.

Work-Study celebrates its 30th

The 30th anniversary of the College's Work Study Program will be observed with a special reception at Homecoming. The reception is being staged by a group known as War Workers — those who took part in the War Work Program at the College in 1942, which later became the Work Study Program.

Fred Frechette of Richmond has organized the reunion and is also working on an informal history of the program. Among the alumni are men who became the first student waiters at Colonial Williamsburg taverns. It was through the program that a number of students were able to complete college educations despite limited finances.

Chairmen selected for fund drive

The "New Era" goal for the Society of the Alumni annual fundraising drive, the William and Mary Fund, is $300,000, up from $175,000 in 1971.

The alltime high goal is one major change in the Fund this year. The other involves a new approach in key areas of Virginia.

Within Virginia, the Society is organizing a special person-to-person contact campaign in areas of major alumni concentrations, including Richmond, Roanoke, the Lower Peninsula, Tidewater and the Washington area.

General Chairman is W. Brooks George '32, former Rector of the Board of Visitors, former President of the Society of the Alumni, Alumni Medallion recipient and holder of an honorary degree conferred in June. George is chairman of the board of the House of Edgeworth, the tobacco manufacturing company.

Area chairmen selected are George Ritzel '53, Richmond; William Hubard '46, Roanoke; William Mirguet '62, Lower Peninsula; Bill Thompson '28, Tidewater; and Mrs. Pamela Pauly Chinnis '46, immediate past president of the Society, Washington.

The Class Agent program, so successful in the past, is being used to contact alumni throughout the rest of the nation.

The new Alumni House renovation project will receive $100,000 of the Fund budget. The "New Era" campaign will also seek to extend current programs of the Society, to finance ways to achieve greater involvement of alumni through expanded chapter activities, and to help inform alumni more thoroughly through the Alumni Gazette and other means.

A special task force fundraising effort, conducted by William L. Person '24 of Williamsburg, a member of the Alumni Board, has provided a base for first-phase construction and redecoration of the Alumni House. This group is composed of persons who, in addition to their usual contributions to the William and Mary Fund, are pledging $1,000 or more over a three-year period.

Faculty Profile

J. Scott
Donaldson

BY S. DEAN OLSON

Scott Donaldson is an ex-newspaper reporter who turned respectable in the mid-60s, earned his Ph.D. at the University of Minnesota, and accepted a position in the Department of English at the College of William and Mary in 1966. His newspapering background, however, has held him in good stead in the academic world where "publish or perish" is a dictum overstated but not taken lightly.

In five years at William and Mary, Donaldson has turned out two books, innumerable magazine articles and book reviews, and several successful scholarly proposals, two of which have won him lectureships abroad. In 1971-72, he spent the academic year in Finland on a Fulbright Lectureship, and this year he is in England at the University of Leeds as a Bruen Fellow.

"As a newspaperman," says the prolific Donaldson, "I acquired an almost deadly facility for turning out material." The difference in the academic world, he adds, is that "as a good scholar you have to stop yourself to see if you have read enough, thought enough, and know enough before you put something into print. As a newspaper man, you don't always have enough time to ask the questions, let alone answer them."

Donaldson took his B.A. and M.A. in English at Yale and the University of Minnesota and his Ph.D. at Minnesota in American Studies. He combined the two with some five years experience as a local government and suburban newsman to write "The Suburban Myth," a probing look at the modern American suburb during the 50s and 60s — its lifestyle, its politics, its religion, and its architecture. Published in 1969 in hardback, the book came out in paperback last fall.

His latest book, "Poet in America: Winfield Townley Scott," was published this fall. It examines the life and work of a New England poet who died in 1968 of "too many drinks and too many pills," in Donaldson's words. Donaldson brought a new man's inquisitiveness and a scholar's perseverance to the study. He poured over 900 copies of correspondence, traveled all over the country to interview people who knew the poet, and examined every piece of his work he could find.

Donaldson likes to get so close to a subject, he says, that "you start living in their skin."

Donaldson's father was an inventor who founded Donaldson Co., Inc., which manufactures air cleaners for automobiles. But Scott himself went off to Yale in the late 40s to study English. He returned to Minnesota to take his M.A. and then served a three-year hitch in the Army, mostly in Japan in security.

After the Army, he hooked on with the Minneapolis Star as a local government reporter, but after a couple of years he decided to strike out on his own. He started suburban weekly in Bloomington, Minnesota, in competition with another newspaper. After three years, during which neither newspaper made much money, Donaldson bought out his competitor. He ran the paper on his own for three more years, then merged with a chain of 28 newspapers and became executive editor of the entire chain.

Donaldson didn't like the new setup, however, as well as he liked putting out his own product. He retained his interest in the chain, but left active newspapering to study for his Ph.D. at Minnesota.

After finishing his book on Winfield Townley Scott, Donaldson launched into perhaps his most ambitious project — a major work on Ernest Hemingway. A number of books have been written on Hemingway, but none the way Donaldson wants to look at him.

"No one has tried to blend the fiction and life of Hemingway," says Donaldson, "and to learn about his thinking and writing together." Donaldson's study — which he plans to call "The Mind and Art of Ernest Hemingway" — will study the writer from the standpoint of morality, love, friendship, religion, sport. Donaldson began the work during the summer with grants from the American Philosophical Society and the College.

Donaldson thinks of himself as a generalist rather than as a specialist, although his major interest is the condition of the artist in contemporary American society. A popular instructor who won kudos in a student evaluation of faculty, Donaldson stays close to his antiquated black typewriter in his office located in one of the old fraternity lodges. When he's not pecking out a scholarly article or working on a book, he may revert to his old ways and do a fun piece. In 1967, he traveled with the football team during its successful sojourn to Annapolis (William and Mary 27, Navy 16) and did an anonymous "mood" article on team for the Flat Hat.

In England this year, Donaldson will lecture English — and some American — students on American literature, concentrating on Fitzgerald and Hemingway.

He will do a lot of research and writing, too, on Hemingway, which should speed the day when his welcome book on the great American writer is published.

F. H. C. revived once more

BY WILFORD KALE

America's first college fraternal organization — The F. H. C. Society — was revived last May here at the College of William and Mary.

Originally formed on Nov. 11, 1750, by a group of college students and faculty members, the F. H. C. was quite active in the 1770's prior to the Revolutionary War, at which time the organization disappeared from the college scene. After a revival in the early 1900's, it lapsed again in 1943 when most of its members departed the college because of World War II.

The initialed society — F. H. C. — has commonly been referred to as the "Flat Hat Club" throughout the college history. Members have never divulged the real meaning of initials and today after yet another revival the secret is still preserved by the new fraternity brothers.

Thomas Jefferson, St. George Tucker and their law teacher — the imminent George Wythe and a much written about — but little known James Innis were among the early members of the F. H. C. Society, which predates by 26 years the more famous and nationally recognized Phi Beta Kappa organization, which was also founded by students at William and Mary.

Like Phi Beta Kappa, F. H. C. dissolved during the Revolution, but unlike the nation's first Greek-letter fraternity, it was not revived here in the nineteenth century and it established no chapters in other American colleges.

F. H. C., to the delight of its members through the years, was strictly a William and Mary tradition. Dr. Jane Carson of Williamsburg, in her book "James Innis and his brothers of the F. H. C." notes that the organization survived historically in occasional references to it in the private correspondence of fraternity brothers, in one certificate of membership, three medals and one book from their library.

Jefferson, in two letters, writes about the F. H. C. society, which flourished when he was at the college in 1760-62. "I am an entire stranger to the P B K Society (Phi Beta Kappa)," he wrote. Its history and its objects its existence is known to me by hear-say only. The contrary supposition has probably been founded on an F. H. C. Society which existed at Wm. & Mary College, when I was there, of which I was a member, that was confined to the alumni of that institution."

Another Jefferson letter to Thomas McAuley said: "I have heard of the Alpha Phi Beta and Kappa Society, but never understood either its location or object. When I was a student of Wm. & Mary College of this state there existed a society called the F. H. C. Society, confined to the number of six students only, of which I was a member, but it had no useful object, nor do I know whether it now exists."

Lawyer St. George Tucker and his friends often spoke fondly of the society and of their wish to revive it after they had left the college. Tucker, late in life, remembered with nostalgia "our own little select friendly set" and longed "to give the cordial, friendly shake again."

The original F. H. C. was primarily dedicated to social and fraternal goals, as witnessed by their motto "Stabilitas et Fides." The revived group will work "to preserve the history and traditions of the college," explained J. Wilfred Lambert, William and Mary's vice president for student affairs.

Lambert and Dr. Harold L. Fowler, Dean of the faculty of arts and sciences, were the permanent secretary and treasurer, respectively, in 1943 when the Group held its last meeting. It was through their efforts that they were able to officially revive the F. H. C. Society last spring after several students had expressed interest in the old organization.

"Some students, led by Robert W. Storm Jr. approached me regarding the society, its origin and questioned if it could be revived. I was pleased with their interest," Lambert explained.

He noted that over the years, several students have suggested the revival of the F. H. C. "But I wasn't impressed with the students or their interest," Lambert recalled, "and did not give them much encouragement."

Behind the efforts of Storm who was elected the Society's current president, Lambert and Fowler decided to pursue the reinstatement of F. H. C. A canvass of the membership during the last 40 years showed most of the old members "favorably inclined" toward the revival, Fowler added.

Lambert, who was elected as faculty member in 1936, still retained the old secretary's minutes and records from the organization's last meeting, 29 years ago in the spring of '43. In the final days of classes, just prior to graduation, the initiation ceremony for the new members was held in the great hall of the Sir Christopher Wren Building on the college's historic campus in the building where the first F. H. C. society members attended college and probably held their "secret" meetings.

The ceremony was identical to the one held there three decades ago and very similar to the initiations conducted more than 200 years ago in colonial times.

The reviving organization is composed of four faculty members and six students. In addition to Storm, the other students are Robert D. Bacher, Glen W. Clatterbuck, Daniel W. Gepford, Philip B. Eastham Jr. and John R. Vile. Two William and Mary alumni, who currently are on the faculty, were also inducted: Dr. Richard H. Prosl, associate professor of mathematics and Dr. Miles L. Chapell, assistant Professor of Fine Arts.

Patrick Stoner brings theatre to Charlottesville

BY S. DEAN OLSON

Two years ago the Albemarle Playhouse in Charlottesville was a foundering dinner theatre which was fortunate to attract five couples to a performance. That was before Patrick Stoner ('69) and four other William and Mary graduates arrived on stage. Today you are lucky to get a seat on a peak evening. The Playhouse plays to capacity audiences, and during a six-week run of a show, more than 4,000 will push through the turnstiles.

An alumnus of Howard Scammon's William and Mary Theatre, Stoner brought community spirit to the Playhouse. When he first took a part in a show in the Fall of 1970, he was astounded by the disinterest of the townspeople. "Our image was non-existent or very bad," he says.

When he took over as managing director a few months later, Stoner immediately set out to remedy the problem. He involved the theatre in a Jaycee telethon, took the players to various schools to lecture the children on theatre, began a weekly radio show called "Backstage" to orient the community to theatre in America, and brought special charity organizations to the shows free of charge.

The approach won the minds and hearts of the people in Charlottesville. Today when he walks down the streets, people stop Stoner frequently and thank him for what the Albemarle Playhouse has done for the community. Disinterest has turned into avid support of the Theatre.

"Most of all," says Stoner, "the experience has taught me a community can fall in love with a group of people."

Stoner and his wife Joyce Hill ('68) had no plans to stay with Albemarle when they became involved in the production of "The Odd Couple" in 1970. Stoner had finished up his M.A. in drama at the University of Virginia, and the couple had a month before Joyce had to be in New York to complete her masters at NYU in art conservation. After that brief experience, however, the couple decided to return when Joyce had completed her degree and sign on full-time.

Before long more William and Mary graduates signed on with the company. Ed Godshall ('66), who was studying for his Ph.D. in German at UVA, came on 24-hours notice when the musical director resigned suddenly.

Bill Brooke ('68) was at the University of North Carolina graduate school when Stoner put in a call to him to take a key part in "How to Succeed in Business..." Brooke not only responded immediately, but stayed on with the company.

Larry Raiken ('71) was on his way to Rutgers Law School and stopped in Charlottesville to say hello to his old friends. (Both Raiken and Brooke had been in Stoner's wedding.) Raiken continued on to Rutgers, but after thinking it over a couple of weeks, he was back in Charlottesville with Albemarle.

Raiken stayed a year. He is now back in school at the University of North Carolina, but in drama, not in law. Like the other William and Mary grads., the Albemarle experience has touched Raiken's life.

Stoner will move on this month after his wife Joyce, selected as one of the outstanding young women in America, completes a project with the Bayley Museum. Stoner leaves behind a significant mark in Charlottesville. "Professional and informal..." by Washington Post standards, but more importantly, by community standards, he has given the people of Charlottesville a theatre that is now a part of their lives.

Faculty men more than Sunday morning quarterbacks

BY WILL MOLINEUX

Each of the three suburban districts immediately surrounding Williamsburg is represented by a William and Mary faculty member, serving as an elected county supervisor.

Representing Jamestown District of James City County is John E. Donaldson, professor of law.

Representing Berkeley District of James City County is Jack D. Edwards, associate professor of government.

And representing Bruton District of York County is George D. Cole Jr., assistant professor of business administration.

Each supervisor won his seat last year in contested elections (Edwards unseated Supervisor Charles L. Quittmeyer, dean of the School of Business Administration) and each is now serving his first term in office. Donaldson is a Republican; Edwards and Cole are Democrats.

Each supervisor won his seat last year in contested elections (Edwards unseated Supervisor Charles L. Quittmeyer, dean of the School of Business Administration) and each is now serving his first term in office. Donaldson is a Republican; Edwards and Cole are Democrats.

But it was their personal feelings regarding a citizen's obligation of public service which drew each man into local politics, although in different ways.

Donaldson just drifted into politics as a natural result of his increased participation in a number of community affairs — a successful redistricting effort, an unsuccessful campaign to adopt the county manager form of government, a successful school bond referendum. For his civic work, Donaldson was named one of Virginia's five outstanding young men of 1971 by the state Jaycees.

Edwards, impatient with the apparent short-sightedness of officials in one of Virginia's fastest growing counties, felt he had to seek office "or give up being a critic." An outspoken exponent of the need for planned development, he has offered many revisions to the county zoning ordinance and, largely at his urging, the county has hired its first professional planner.

Cole, who had long thought of entering politics, ran because of his close personal and family association with York County and because of a conversation he had, when he was a college student, with the late Francis Pickins Miller, the young Turk in the old Democratic party of the Byrd-dominated years. Miller's philosophy of the importance of involvement in local politics "just burned a hole in my head," Cole recalls.

All three supervisors have found their off-campus political roles "utterly fascinating," as Cole put it, a bit frustrating, very challenging and time consuming.

Donaldson finds that local elected officials too often have to deal with day-to-day management problems of administering a county. Still, he has become more aware "of the opportunity of local government to be a positive influence on the community."

Edwards finds the multitude of problems facing local officials challenging, but frustrating because so many of them are outright insolvable, or the supervisors can't find a solution or they are unable to agree on one.

Cole, who finds that his constituents often want the impossible, believes that most people don't understand the limits of local government in Virginia where state agencies serve counties divided into regional planning districts.

For both Donaldson and Edwards, their work at the courthouse has a practical application to their college classrooms. Edwards has gained new experiences and insights which he brings to his students of American government and politics. Donaldson is preparing an elective course in urban land use.

All three faculty members bring varied backgrounds to their work — on and off campus.

Donaldson, a native of Richmond and a graduate of the University of Richmond, received his law degree in 1963 from William and Mary where he was president of the Student Bar Association and editor of the law review. He later earned a master's in law at Georgetown University.

For two years he worked with the Internal Revenue Service in Washington and is a nationally recognized authority on the exempt status of non-profit organizations.

He joined the William and Mary law school faculty in 1966. In the intervening years he also has held two administrative posts, assistant vice president of the college and associate dean of the law school.

Edwards, a native of Stanely, North Dakota, (a town smaller than the district he represents) received his bachelor's degree from Macalester College, a law degree from Harvard and a Ph.D. from Vanderbilt. He joined the William and Mary faculty in 1962.

Cole, a native of Newport News, is a former clergyman. He studied sociology at Duke and was graduated from the Yale Divinity School in 1943 and years later earned a doctorate in education at Columbia.

During World War II he served a military pastorate on Hawaii and later in churches in New Jersey and Connecticut where he was a minister of education. Because he found preaching an unsatisfactory medium for him, he sought new approaches to his congregation in the dramatic arts and once staged the play "Murder in the Cathedral" in a church.

In 1961 he left the ministry to become a management consultant in the New York area and later returned to the Peninsula where he worked for a while at the Newport News Shipyard. It was Quittmeyer who urged Cole to teach in William and Mary's extension program and, in 1968 when a vacancy occurred in the School of Business Administration, to join the college faculty.

All three — Donaldson, Edwards and Cole — think faculty members should, as good citizens, be active in community and public affairs. They believe, and rightfully, that their participation in local government is a demonstration of William and Mary's local citizenship.

Now Buster O'Brien wears a white hat!

BY S. DEAN OLSON

Buster O'Brien, the former scourge of William and Mary football, is back on the field this fall, but this time he's on the right side. The ex-University of Richmond quarterback who rewrote the Spider record book, is a second year Marshall-

Wythe law student and an assistant to Jim Root new head coach of the Indians.

O'Brien shredded the William and Mary defenses in 1967 and 1968 in leading Richmond to 16-7 and 31-6 victories. The 1967 victory over one of Marv Levy's finest ball clubs was particularly frustrating for Indian fans, eliminating their Southern Conference championship hopes. O'Brien says it was one of the best games he ever called.

In 1968, O'Brien led the Spiders to a fantastic 49-42 victory over the University of Ohio in the Tangerine Bowl. He completed 39 passes for nearly 500 yards, and on the basis of that performance and his extraordinary senior season, he was named to the South team in the Coaches All-American game played in Atlanta. One of the coaches was Jim Root.

O'Brien played for several pro teams after graduation. He was drafted by Denver, but opted for Ottawa in the Canadian Football League after the Canadians offered him the biggest rookie contract in their history.

O'Brien enrolled at William and Mary in the fall of 1971, but arrived on campus too late to help out Lou Holtz' coaching staff. This fall, however, when he dropped by to renew acquaintances with Coach Root, Root signed him on as a student assistant.

O'Brien works with the receivers and quarterbacks. A past master at picking apart defenses, O'Brien has been an enormous help to the Indians' two talented but inexperienced field generals, Rip Scherer and Billy Deery, particularly in the early weeks of practice when Root was recovering from a kidney stone operation.

O'Brien's knowledge of pro-style offenses may make All-American candidate David Knight even more formidable than he has been the last two seasons for the Indians. O'Brien, who has thrown to such great receivers as Walker Gillette and Jim Livesay at Richmond and Gene Washington and Charlie Taylor with the '49ers and Redskins, says Knight has as good a pair of hands as he has ever seen.

One man who is not pleased by

Buster O'Brien

O'Brien's presence at William and Mary is Spider coach Frank Jones. Jones, who O'Brien considers a second father, taught the ex-Spider star the Richmond offense inside and out, and O'Brien plans to put the knowledge to good use when the Indians meet Richmond in their traditional rivalry.

O'Brien has no mixed feelings about loyalties, however.

"I'm one hundred percent for whomever I am with," he says. "I hope Richmond wins every game except the one we play with them."

If Jones is distressed by O'Brien's William and Mary presence, there are two compensations. Jim Whyte, the Dean of the law school, says O'Brien is a fine student. "He's personable and cooperative," says Whyte, "and he'll make a good lawyer."

Moreover, there is his wife, the former Karen Oetjen, a William and Mary alumna who is probably the one responsible for setting the ex-Spider phenomenon straight in the first place.

Bill Deery, Rip Scherer vie for QB slot

When new head coach Jim Root took command of the Indians last spring, he had a problem very much to his liking: which of three outstanding young quarterbacks would succeed mighty mite Steve Regan.

John Gargano, who backed Regan last fall, had the inside track on the basis of a superb performance against the University of North Carolina. Filling in for the injured Regan, Gargano passed for 283 yards and ran for another 106 in a 36-35 loss to the Tar Heels.

But Gargano had no stranglehold on the job. Bill Deery, a 5-10 170 pounder up from the freshman squad, showed extraordinary running skill in the two Spring games. In six carries, the breakaway speedster gained 108 yards, and in both games his team came out on top. In a fall football roundup, Deery won plaudits from Playboy magazine which cited him as one of the South's top prospects.

Rip Scherer, a six foot, 175-pound junior, intended to let neither Gargano nor Deery win the starting job. A "smooth passer and talented technician" in the words of sports information director Barry Fratkin, Scherer didn't play much as a sophomore, but won praise in spring practice for moving the team and "getting the job done."

In the three weeks Root and his staff had to prepare the team before the first game against Furman, none of the three emerged with a clearcut edge. But Gargano reduced the competition when he left William and Mary after two weeks and followed former coach Lou Holtz to North Carolina State.

Two days before the final game, Root announced that Scherer would probably start, primarily on the basis of more experience than Deery, and perhaps because of the pass-catching talents of All-American flanker David Knight.

Fans, however, can expect to see plenty of Bill Deery. Root's highly flexible I formation offense is geared to both quarterback's talents. An all-purpose offense, it provides the setups for the option, the power play or the pass.

Deery is one of several fine sophomores who will see lots of action. Both Terry Regan, Steve's younger brother, and Doug Gerhart are in the backfield; Dick Pawlewicz won the starting berth at tight end; and Mike Stewart and Mickey Outten replaced veterans in the defensive backfield.

A few days before practice began, the personable Root suffered a kidney stone attack and went under the knife at Williamsburg Community Hospital. His able assistants guided the team until Root returned, only a week later, to oversee practice from an electric golf cart.

Root's Indians have a good shot at the Southern Conference championship, but they are by no means the only power in the conference. Citadel and Richmond both fielded seasoned teams, and East Carolina posed as a darkhorse threat.

But Root was carrying no crying towel as the Indians opened the season at home against Furman.

"We inherited a good team," he said, "and we have the responsibility of maintaining the confidence that people have in the exciting football William and Mary has played. We hope to turn that excitement into wins."

The Alumni House

A History of the Bright House and its Plantings

BY J. T. BALDWIN, JR.

The Business Office, College of William and Mary, has copies of Abstract of Title to the Bright Property (V. M. Geddy, 1928) and to the Bright House Property (Ashton Dovell, 1946), these being respectively two hundred seventy-two acres and ten acres. It is prophetic that these properties were once called "New Hope" — prophetic because the new campus is on that land, and developments there foretell a new phase in the history of the College.

"The College of William and Mary was originally built upon a tract of 330 acres (purchased from Col. Thomas Ballard, 1693), most of which has been sold off. Only about thirty acres remain" (William and Mary Quarterly 10, Series 1:91, 1901). Records of the city of Williamsburg and of the County of James City were destroyed by fire in 1864, so title of record for the College land can not be traced beyond that date.

However, a deed of trust recorded August 5, 1848, and re-recorded July 4, 1864, shows that title to one hundred thirty-two acres, including the ten acres of the Bright House Property, was once before vested in the College and that Samuel F. Bright, proprietor of nearby Porto Bello Plantation in York County, paid $1989 to the "President and Masters or Professors of the College of William and Mary in Virginia" for "New Hope." In his account book for "Porto Bello" and for "New Hope" — the account book now in the Swem Library — he recorded on p. 46: "Purchased College Lands in Oct. 1847.....It contains by Survey 132½ acres." His son, Robert Anderson Bright, student at William and Mary, 1854-1855, bought four hundred sixty-three acres (including "New Hope" and "College Land") from his father for $10,500, May 30, 1866; Robert deeded his property, four hundred forty-two acres, June 30, 1871, to William H. E. Morecock, Trustee. William Henry Edloe Morecock was for many years clerk of the County Court of James City County.

Robert Anderson Bright's three children — Robert Southall, Alexander McCauley, and Nannie Mumford — inherited his estate; McCauley died intestate and unmarried, so ownership of his share passed to his brother and sister.

On Oct. 1, 1923, Robert S. Bright, et al., of Philadelphia, deeded to the College for $33,000 "All that certain tract, or parcel of land, situate, lying and being in the County of James City, Virginia, containing two hundred and seventy-four acres (274) more or less.... The property hereby contracted.... being all the unsold portion of the property conveyed by deed from Robert A. Bright to W. H. E. Morecock, Trustee, dated June 30, 1871....., excepting that the vendors expressly reserve to themselves ten acres of land fronting on Richmond Road, together with the brick residence and out-buildings thereon."

The above reference to the "brick residence," i. e., the Bright House, is the earliest that I have come across for this building: it is possibly a post-Civil War structure. Another house in Williamsburg, dating from the eighteenth century, was lived in by Samuel F. Bright and was likewise known as the Bright House: it was destroyed by fire in 1873 (Tyler's Quarterly Magazine 31: 225, 1950).

Nannie Mumford Bright Cook and her husband, October 1, 1923, deeded their one-half interest in the ten-acre tract to Robert S. Bright. On May 19, 1932, Robert and his wife, Caroline deBeelen Lovett Bright, sold a parcel of this land to the Right Reverend Andrew J. Brennan, Roman Catholic Bishop of Richmond, for $1400. Robert S. Bright, formerly of Williamsburg and of Philadelphia, resided in Frederick, Maryland, when in his will dated September 28, 1942, he left the Williamsburg property to his second wife, Mary McCaw Bright; he lived at the Jefferson Hotel in Richmond from October, 1942, until his death there on December 18, 1943.

The Bright House tract was conveyed to George A. Nea — acting for G. T. Brooks, Sr. — by deed from Mary McCaw Bright, et al., for $17,500, June 21, 1944, and was sold by George A. Nea and his wife, Anne Hall Nea, to the College for $25,000, February 27, 1946. In May, 1947, the College — unwisely, in my estimate — sold a parcel of land adjacent to the property of St. Bede's Catholic Church to St. Bede's for $4,000.

Evidently the Bright House was under lease to the College prior to its purchase by the College of William and Mary, for, as related to me by Dr. Richard L. Morton, Chancellor Professor of History, Emeritus, on July 18, 1972, he and Earl Jerome Grimes (died December 15, 1921; memorialized by the Clayton-Grimes Biological Club) — both of them World War I veterans and young instructors at the College — rented the house in the fall of 1919 from President J. A. C. Chandler. The building was in a state of advanced disrepair, so the two men set about making renovations in anticipation of the arrivals of their brides-to-be. The Mortons lived on the first floor; the Grimeses, on the second. A kitchen and other facilities and a breeze-way were in the basement, and there was a big front porch. That summer the families had a good garden. But soon they had to vacate the house for occupancy by Mr. and Mrs. Oscar W. Shewmake; President Chandler had brought him in to be head of the law school. Dr. Walter A. Montgomery, Professor of Ancient Languages, succeeded the Shewmakes as tenant. In January, 1925, according to Mr. Herbert Ganter (July 1972), Kappa Alpha took over the building as a fraternity house. In 1949, the College renovated the structure and made it into apartments for the faculty at a cost of $95,000 (Mr. Vernon L. Nunn, July 1972); for example, the last three deans of women lived there: Katherine Jeffers, Dorothea Wyatt, Birdena Donaldson. Now, 1972, as the Bright House becomes Alumni House, another chapter is added to the history of this building.

Few trees on the Bright House grounds survive from the time of the 1946 purchase by the College: two mulberries by the front entrance to the building; a loblolly pine to the north; and to the south a volunteer red cedar; six seedlings of a huge black walnut which is now gone; a fairly big red maple; and, near the stadium, a handsome specimen of American beech.

The late Charles F. Gillette, landscape architect of Richmond, Virginia, designed the basic plantings, executed in 1953 by Mr. Ansel D. Rorer, landscape superintendent for the College. The boxwood hedges are outstanding: they are of plants of a clone propagated by Mr. J. B. Brouwers, former landscape superintendent for Colonial Williamsburg. These and other plants of this clone filled a field and were sold to the College for $1,200; the plants are now about twenty-five years old. The bayberry or wax-myrtle hedges are impressive, and especially effective is the shield planting of loblolly pine along Richmond Road. In addition, Mr. Gillette used crape-myrtle rather extensively, and west of the house cherry-laurel and three live-oaks; also, near the house, two white oaks, flowering dogwoods, and an American beech. In the circle east of the house are two groupings of American hollies, of which only one tree is male; a single individual is completely effective for the pollination of the nearby females: these specimens were dug from the College woods.

Various noteworthy trees are additions to the Gillette scheme. Near the black walnuts is a small American beech of historical and probable horticultural significance. Its provenance is the Walsingham Academy woods where I observed it to have contorted branches, a most attractive habit of growth. Robert McCartney moved the tree to the Colonial Williamsburg nursery. Dr. John P. Baumgardt pruned this specimen before the audience of the 1968 Garden Symposium, and it was later put in its present location. A red oak has a special interest: it was used at the request of President Alvin Duke Chandler to block a view of the rear of the Bright House as seen from Richmond Road. Mr. Rorer grew the three seedlings of basket oak and purchased from MacDonald's Nursery the three fine and fast-growing specimens of willow oak. And he also grew from seed an unusually beautiful American holly and located it west of the house. Nearby is a winged elm from the College wood and a bigger American elm. Grown by Dr. Bernice M. Speese are four seedlings across the church and in the southwest part of the grounds seven specimens of Lawson cypress from seed collected by her in 1946 from a tree in Maymont Park in Richmond. Present also are four large-leaved cucumber-trees grown by me about ten years ago from seed of an old specimen on the grounds of Marshall Lodge in Williamsburg. Going west on Richmond Road one sees in the circle east of the Alumni House six striking live-oaks which Doctor Speese grew from 1947 acorns collected in the Seashore State Park. Globose and with branches to the ground these trees are wonderful to behold.

Robert Calkins has had a record of achievement of which the Class of '25 is very proud. He taught six years at Stanford, nine years at the University of California at Berkeley, six years at Columbia, six years at the General Education Board, fifteen years as President of Brookings Institute, three years at the University of Southern California, and one year at the University of New Hampshire. He says he is now "mixing declining commitments with treasured time for reading and relaxation." He deserves it!

Mavis Magee Gibbs of Hopewell, Va. was recently made an honorary member of the Virginia Extension Homemakers Council. She began her career after attending the College, Radford College and Wayne University as a graduate dietitian at St. Lukes Hospital in Richmond. She taught home economics in Virginia for four years.

Have heard from a few old friends. Louise (Liz) Love Jones has written a couple of times and I was so glad to hear from her. Remember what a great dancer, swimmer, and basket ball player she was? She and her husband live on a farm at Buffalo Junction, near Clarksville. They are both recovering from injuries received in an automobile accident, but she hopes to make it to Homecoming.

Had lunch recently with Pattie Hunter Clarke of Whaleyville. She looks great - really like she did in college — and is just as much fun. She and F.O. have two sons — one a lawyer in Norfolk, one with the F.B.I.

Hughlett Mason is in Newport News seeing to the publication of his new book: "History of Steam Navigation to the Eastern Shore of Va." The Mariners' Museum here will supply him with some excellent illustrations.

Last word from Art Matsu was about the Order of the White Jacket, of which you read in the May and September issues of the Gazette, an organization of former student waiters which will be founded officially I think at Homecoming. What a fine group of men those white jackets produced! Carl Andrews, Quinby Hines, Meb Davis, Jack Wolbert and Cy Lambert are also working on it. Guess you saw the picture of Dr. Paschall and Yel Kent modeling a jacket in the May issue.

We know you will be saddened to hear of the recent passing of Hazel Saunders Weaver, which will be reported under Vital Statistics.

Ralph B. Long, professor of English at the University of Puerto Rico, has been named to be a member of the Open Court Editorial Advisory Board located in La Salle, Illinois.

We wrote in a recent issue about Thomas H. Christie retiring from teaching at Washington-Lee High School at Arlington after 43 years, but we failed to mention anything about his children. Tom, Jr. is retired baseball coach of Madison High in Vienna; Jean Christie Myers is a missionary in the Bahamas and Elizabeth is married to a science teacher, Jonis Baker, at Yorktown High in Arlington.

Francis B. Glenn, superintendent of Waynesboro public schools since 1947, has announced that he will retire in 1973 at the end of his present term of office. Active in his profession, Francis has served on a number of local, area, state and national groups working in education.

Dr. William M. (Billy) Bickers, American University of Beirut, Beirut, Lebanon will retire in June 1973. His two daughters both live in Richmond. The youngest daughter is married to Joseph Greenwood and the older married to James Walsh. His son, David, is in New York at the Rockefeller Institute of Medical Research, engaged in the study of immune responses. He expects to devote his life to academic medicine and not go into clinical practice.

Elizabeth Allen, Mrs. Roswell P. Snead, began her teaching career by teaching English at the Fluvanna High School, Fork Union, Va. In 1939 she married Ros and until 1942, when he entered the U. S. Army, they lived in Blacksburg, Va., where he was a member of the VPI Business School faculty. Since 1946, when Ros left the Army, they have lived in Richmond, Va., where Ros is with the Harris Flippen Sports Store.

Liz and Ros have two children. Dr. Robert Snead, presently completing service in the U. S. Army at Fitzmmons Hospital, Denver, Colo., is married and has two sons. Margaret Snead Henry is working in the Psychology Department of the Public Schools of Concord.

Liz has been active in PTA, church work, the Tuckahoe Women's Club, and is currently president of the Church Women United.

Herbert G. Stewart, better known as Herbie, left William and Mary to continue his musical training at the Juilliard School of Music and the Guilant Organ School in New York City, where he studied piano, organ, and voice. In 1933 he established the Stewart School of Music, Portsmouth, Va. The School, of which he is the director, teaches piano, organ, and voice.

The following are some of the highlights of Herbie's music career: pianist for the Portsmouth Lions Club since 1935; organizer of the Portsmouth Community Concert Association in 1939, and was its president for five years; served as chapel, post, radio, and theater organist while in the Army during World War II; organized the Portsmouth Chapter of the American Guild of Organists in 1952, and was its first Dean; was consecrated and certified as Minister of Music in the Methodist Church in 1960; with his father, wrote "God Will Answer Prayer," which is widely sung in churches of all denominations in the United States and Canada; composed the cantatas "Star of Bethlehem" and "Sing Noel," which have had 15 TV presentations; organist for the Portsmouth Bowl in 1960; organist for all Tides home baseball games in 1961, and wrote "Play Ball Tides," Elco Theater organist in 1961; taught over 100,000 music lessons; trained over 100 church organists, composed hundreds of compositions for piano, organ, voice, and chorus; and is the conductor of the Chancel, Youth Altar, Junior Choral Crusaders, and Cherub choirs at the West End United Methodist Church in Portsmouth.

Herbie's life has been wholly music with the exception of time off to attend William and Mary football games. He and his wife Idoline have no children, but the void has filled through his work with children in teaching music and directing children and youth choirs. They enjoy travel and have made eight trips across the United States by different routes, including Canada and Mexico. Last year, Herbie was named Trustee for the William and Mary Educational Foundation, representing the Portsmouth area.

Al Danzig writes that he and his wife have two sons and a daughter; Richard, a married son, is Executive Vice President of the Warren Co. Pennsylvania Chamber of Commerce; Douglas, their other son, enlisted in the Marine Corps right after high school and was discharged as a 1st. Lieutenant and is now pursuing a college degree; their daughter is married and has two daughters. Al is Deputy Commissioner, Department of Motor Vehicles for the State of New York in Albany.

W. Howard Mann of Grétna, Va. has retired as District Conservationist of the Soil Conservation Service of the U. S. Department of Agriculture with area headquarters in Chatham.

Fred Eilers, a member of the University of Evansville Art Department of Owensboro, Ky. was the guest lecturer in March at the Owensboro Art Guild, demonstrating portrait painting in oils. Fred has exhibited nationally and has been listed in "Who's Who in American Art."

An April news release from the State of Connecticut, Commission on Special Revenue announced the appointment of Stephen E. Lenzi of North Branford as Staff Coordinator of the State Racing Division. He served in the legislature from 1961 to 1967 and introduced bills in the legislature to legalize horse racing. His job will be to coordinate all the various sections of the State Racing program namely, horse racing, harness racing, dog racing and Jai Alai. He is the founder of the Connecticut Racing Association, Inc. and has lectured extensively throughout the State.

I received a card from Larry Pettit in May saying that Herb and Jane Young were visiting for the weekend to attend the Indianapolis "500." Although Larry and Margaret have lived in Indianapolis for twenty-two years, this was the first time for all of them to see the race.

A note from Margaret Mitchell Mollenkoff said they had been in Norway where they visited the family of their former AFS student. Mickey and her family spent the rest of the summer in Maine.

Robert B. Vining wrote that he had just made reservations at the Lodge for Labor Day weekend when he and his wife will take their younger son, Paul, to the College for enrollment in the class of 1976. Son, Bob, Jr., received his BA degree from William and Mary in 1966, his law degree from the University of Missouri and after spending almost three years in the FBI, he joined Bob Sr. in his law practice in Clayton, Missouri representing management in labor relations. Their middle daughter, Kathy, enrolled at William and Mary, class of 1969 but departed in the middle of her junior year to get married. She and her husband and family are now living in St. Louis and Kathy is finishing her college work at the University of Missouri by attending the evening division on the St. Louis campus. What a wonderful William and Mary family.

Bob also reports that Ray Walker is living in Southweare, N. H. Three of his and Alecia's

Ask about our free trial offer.

Signing up for Army ROTC in college is not a major commitment. We suggest that you give it a try. Take the Basic Course during your freshman and sophomore years. See what it's all about. You'll find that it's only a few hours a week.

That's not going to get in the way of classes, study, sports or other activities. At the end of your sophomore year you'll know for sure if you want to continue.

If you decide to go on with the ROTC Advanced Course, you'll be paid $100 a month during your last two years of school, although you'll have to agree to complete the program and accept a commission, if offered.

You'll be earning your degree and commission at the same time. It's even possible for you to go on to graduate school. Then serve as an officer later.

You will also find it to be a very attractive offer for a profession after you complete your education.

And, you may be interested in the Army ROTC Scholarship Program. Scholarships are available for one, two, three or four years.

For complete information you may contact the Professor of Military Science, Room 1, Blow Gymnasium, The College of William and Mary, Williamsburg, Virginia 23185.

the college since 1969. He has a master of arts degree from Michigan State University.

I will be teaching eighth grade English again. As always, I am still singing and enjoying music. Our church choir is working on "The Messiah" for Christmas. This brings back memories of my first solo with the William and Mary Choir when we sang from "The Messiah" our freshman year at the College. That reminds me that I am looking forward to attending the William and Mary Choir Reunion in Williamsburg along with my sister, Sue Reese Glasco, '59, in May 1973.

Congratulations to Army Lieutenant Colonel Peter Hino who recently was graduated from the U. S. Army War College in Carlisle Barracks, Penna. Peter entered the Army in 1953 and was stationed last at LAlbuquerque, N. M. He holds two awards of the Legion of Merit, four awards of the Bronze Star Medal, six awards of the Air Medal, the Joint Service Commendation Medal, and the Army Commendation Medal.

Gordon and Nancy Yowell Starr and their two children have been transferred by General Electric from Schenectady, N. Y. to Erie, Penna. They have visited with Scott and Caroline Petrequin and their four children and with Gene and Connie Carhart Bohlman and their two children in Berwyn, Penna.

From Country Club Hills in Illinois Lee Granger Munger writes that husband, John and Clyde (Buddy) Barker have competed in several "Over 40" cross-country and track meets in the Chicago area. John won the most valuable athlete trophy at the Mid-West Masters Tournament sponsored by the Sterling Illinois Park District.

Anna Inge Jump and her husband Gordon, write from Glendale, Calif. Both had parts in their church production of "The Music Man." Gordon is very active in the television industry with commercials such as Parkay Margarine, Ice Blue Secret, Union 76 made on location in Williamsburg, Pringle potato chips, and Kellogg's waffle product. He also has had parts in several TV shows: Dick Van Dyke Show, Partridge Family, Doris Day Show, Brady Bunch, Love American Style, Bewitched, and others. The jumps are happy to say that their remodeled home is now completed.

Richard "Rick" Gonier is now an elementary school principal in East Brunswick, N. J. He has been a teacher, junior high school vice principal, and Math Science supervisor. He and his brother, Ron, a former W&M student, also operate the family insurance business. "Rick" and his wife, Ellie, have two sons.

Our daughter, Mary Lou, is busy preparing for college at Indiana University of Pennsylvania. That is our latest news; please write and tell me yours.

While many of us this summer spent long hours watching the national political conventions on television, some of our classmates were taking a more active role. One of these was Gracie Munson Nichols who announced her candidacy for Representative to the Missouri Legislature. Gracie has served as Democratic Committeewoman from St. Charles. In addition, she is a member of the St. Charles Democratic Club, chairman of the Election Laws Committee of the League of Women Voters, and is active in numerous other community and church organizations. Gracie and husband, Nick, took time from her campaign this summer to visit family and friends in Virginia, including Frances Gilliam Slocumb who is teaching but hopes to begin work on her PhD in psychology; Doug Fridrich who is with the Geological Survey of the Interior Department; Anne Brown Lanman and myself. Carolyn Bacon, who was to be included in the reunion, did not arrive back in time from the Republican National Convention. She is on the staff of Senator John Tower from Texas.

On a trip this summer to visit Ellen Roach Price in Richmond, I visited with Anne August Blunt who was married in July in the Wren Chapel.

Bill Henderson, a specialist in the Civil War era, has received recognition for a course entitled The United States: 1856-1877 which he is teaching at Richard Bland College. The class is the largest assembled to study this particular period of American history. Bill has done graduate work in history at the State University of New York at Albany and Radford College. Another worthy achievement is Dick Prosl's induction into Phi Beta Kappa.

Frank Simmons assumed the position of Managing Editor of Newport News Times Herald. He is married to Carolyn Dewey (Class of '60) and they have one daughter and are expecting their second child in December. They recently were visited by Anna Glen Cox Wittekind and family who were on their way to Heidelberg, Germany where they will be stationed for three years.

Phyllis Garris Powers and Bob moved back to Portsmouth this spring. Bob is the Executive Officer on the USS Lawrence based in Norfolk.

Dave Bottoms' newest title is Prosecuting Attorney of North Pelham, N. Y., to which he was appointed February first.

Judith Meyer Schultz, president of Cincinnati Zero Population Growth, has been appointed to the national advisory council of the Office of Environmental Education of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare. She is assistant professor of biology at Raymond Walters General and Technical College of the University of Cincinnati. In her work with population control she has helped a television station produce school programs on population as well as conducting courses for teachers.

Dr. Charles Pridgeon Jr., assistant professor of English at Marietta College in Ohio, has been elected vice president of the college chapter of the American Association of University Professors.

Pat Singleton Parker and Joe have moved to Lexington, Ky., where Joe is on the staff at the Medical Center of the University of Kentucky. They enjoy the absence of industry in that picturesque country. After all, air pollution would be injurious to the health of Kentucky's famous horses! The Parkers' daughter Nancy arrived just before Christmas.

While vacationing with Paul and Jane Bahn, we helped welcome Carol Noble Braun, Dick, and daughters back to Springfield for a visit after moving a year ago to Albany, Ga. That Gary Street gang never quits!

The Gunns have been enjoying our new neighborhood and discovering fellow alumni neighbors. Polly Stadel Wrinkle, '58, and Davis live nearby and introduced us to Barbara and Harry Lee Watson with a July Fourth celebration. Steirling is assuming the job of area manager for the Chesterfield County branches of Bank of Virginia. With civilization moving out our way along Route 60, he should keep rather busy.

Receiving the Alpha Chi newsletter is always such a treat because Judy Murdock Snook does such a great job keeping up with everyone. Here follows all of the Alpha Chi news: At Manhattan Beach, California, Kathy Dudley Okada and Dave have bought a 20 year old house to remodel, within walking distance of everything and close to Mattel (Toys) where Dave works. Their twins are in a co-op nursery and Kathy took an "excellent course in figure drawing and finally is getting back to doing more art work." They spent Christmas in Hawaii with Dave's family. Marie Lynn Hunken Caldwell and Martyn have just finished building a new home out in the wilds (Judy does not say where). Ilona Moody Salmon's husband is working on his instrument rating and commercial license after getting his private pilot's license in the Air Force. Sally Siegenthaler finished work on PRODUCTIVE THINKING and had "an editor's dream come true — an acknowledgment by the authors in the Guide." She will be taking a fall trip to Hawaii and San Francisco to meet the authors, who are professors at Berkeley. Dale Harris Cohen and Dick, '61, went to Disney World over the Christmas holidays in their Winnebago. Joe, '64, and Bonnie Higgins Barnes have two children to keep Bonnie busy. Joe is involved with the Oakland Park Zoning Board and serves as President of the Oakland Park Civic Association, in addition to his job with a local accounting firm. Jane Rothgeb Jennings has been President of the AX Alumnae Club in addition to serving as room mother and a volunteer teacher's aid. Her husband Richard has formed a new law firm located in Newport Beach — Paulson, Madsen and Jennings. George and Liz Holland Lunger are very active in their Church. George has his private pilot's license and is planning to work toward his instructor's license. Liz serves as registration chairman of the co-op nursery their children, Marie and John, attend. Penny Stenbo Sapolsky and her husband were at the U. of Michigan last winter, but returned to MIT this summer. Judy mentions that she and Don saw Pete and Ann (Burgess) Siegenthaler, Dick and Dale Cohen, Ken and Pat Thomas Ogren, and the Owen Knoppings at Homecoming last fall - in the rain (what else in Williamsburg?!). Don took a course in Health Systems Management at Harvard this summer and will receive his second master's this fall, this one in Education from St. Josephs in Philadelphia. In addition to teaching two kindergarten groups on alternate days last year, Judy took a graduate course at the Penn State Extension and a First Aid course with Don at the high school. This fall she will teach a four year group five days a week and is looking forward to the challenge.

Cameron Blandford has recently been appointed purchasing agent for stock-maintenance of the Newport News Shipbuilding and Dry Dock Company. He is also currently working toward his master's degree in business administration at the College. Cameron, Marcia, and their three children live in Newport News. Sandra Ingle has received her Master of Arts degree from Wichita State University. Jim Hunter has been promoted to assistant general attorney in the Norfolk and Western Railway law department. He received his law degree from Wake Forest and a master's degree in law from Harvard Law School. He joined the N&W in 1969 after serving as an Army officer for two years. Geneva Jamison Wertz is living in Wiesbaden, Germany, where her husband, Capt. Daniel Wertz, is stationed. Geneva taught high school English in Elizabethtown, Penna., and St. Louis, Mo., after graduating from Roanoke College. Phillip Albright has been named to the executive committee of the County Republican Party in Battle Creek, Michigan. Eric Winger has joined the staff of Merrill, Lynch, Pierce, Fenner and Smith in Asheville, N. C., as an account executive. Eric holds a master's degree from the American Institute for Foreign Trade. LCDR Robin Reighley has completed Naval Destroyer School in Newport, R. I., and is serving as chief engineer on the USS Mahan (DLG 11) in MAT 72. Robin and Sue along with daughters Stephanie and Jennifer are calling San Diego home. Cathy Watts Long was working for the child welfare worker licensing day care centers. David, '62, is still with the Social Security Administration and has transferred to the Bureau of Health Insurance. Cathy and David moved to Atlanta in February.

Linda Neese Schilling presently is with the Frederick County Welfare Department as a case worker. She and five-year-old Sara live in Winchester, Va. Richard and Betty Lewis both coach a girls' (pre-teen) basketball team and the team has won the title of Virginia Beach City Champions for the second season. Bill Harris, vice president of retail administration for United Virginia Bankshares, has been elected president of United Virginia Spotswood in Harrisonburg. Bill earned his master's in business administration from Old Dominion and holds a graduate certificate from Stonier Graduate School of Banking at Rutgers University. Bill Kron, who teaches at Avon Old Farms School in Connecticut, was awarded a Certificate of Advanced Study at Wesleyan University's graduate summer school for teachers. He holds an M. S. degree from Hofstra College.

Tom Vice was in Greenville the day William and Mary played Furman in the Southern Conference Basketball Championship this past spring. John and I sat with him at the game and reminisced about the College. Tom and Georgine live in Sandy Springs, just outside of Atlanta, Ga., where Tom works with Chubb and Son. They have a little boy, Mike, 1½, and were expecting their second child in May.

Nestled in Southside Virginia is the small town of Clarksville (pop. 1,700), home of the famed Clarksville Times, now under the aegis of editor Bill Sizemore. Bill's associate editor is his fiery wife, the former Mary K. Lamont. Certainly the social zenith of the summer was the wedding of Tim Groves and Betsy McAlister in Williamsburg on July 1. The matrimonial event drew 71 alumni like flies to a melting popsicle. On the even of the espousment, Ellen Griffith, Judy Nauman, Nancy Terrill, Sarah Mays, Beth Golladay, and Debby and Bob Coleman threw a great alumni bacchanalia, complete with gallons of homemade sangria. Pilgrims from near and far arrived throughout the evening to the applause of their classmates: Scott Davis from Nebraska, Will Hausman and his own betrothed, Pat Russel, from Texas, Sue McGowan and Darien Colyer from Atlanta, Grant Antaramian from Philadelphia, Jean Roberts from Savannah, Cathy Bryan from Tennessee, and Skip Stiles from Toano, just to name a few. Ken "Julius" "Moto" Sanders, employed by the U. S. Public Health Service during the summer, in-pounded two quarts of the sangria wine for later analysis. This fall, Ken continues his study of veterinary medicine. Also present was Tony Thiel, apparently in a final fling before returning to law school at Georgetown University. After a restful night at Steve Knoll's idyllic Toano estate, Tom Rees, Jerry Coyne, best man Kenny King, and I donned tailored blue suits and assisted Tim in the picturebook colonial wedding.

Frank and Darnell Hoose finally made it to New Hampshire, where Frank will serve as research assistant to the head bio-chemist at the University of N. H. They expect their first child this month. Gail Granger Warren has joined the management training program at North Carolina National Bank in Charlotte; she is currently a branch planning analyst. Bill Matson, Jim Almond, and Walt Stowe are entering their second year at the Marshall-Wythe School of Law.

From the Army Home Town News Center's prolific computer come several informative print-outs. Laurence Mallory graduated from the clerical school at Ft. Knox. Lee Roxbrough finished a nine-week Air Defense Artillery Officer Basic Course at Ft. Bliss, Tex. Scott Lodge completed a twelve-week Field Artillery Officer Basic Course at Ft. Sill, Okla., last spring. And Time Kavanaugh ended his basic training in March at Ft. Jackson, S. C.

Laura Keyes Simpson and husband Walter said goodbye to Williamsburg this summer and moved to Buffalo, N. Y., where Walter will study philosophy at SUNY. Sharon Seymour turned in her Williamsburg Lodge waitress uniform and headed south for Miami. Sharon is now a social worker at Homestead Air Force Base where she is in charge of the CHAP Program for handicapped, dependent children. "It's interesting and fun, but sometimes hard for a civilian to adjust to the Air Force way!"

Received a letter from Cindy Goodrich laden with class news. Cindy, after working at a Falls Church bank for a year, is now studying for her M. A. in City and Regional Planning at Catholic University in Washington. During the summer she spent several weeks touring Europe with Alice Scantlebury. Alice finished work on her Master's in Special Ed. in June at Peabody College in Nashville and is now teaching multi-handicapped children in Philadelphia. Frances Jones Aylor teaches high school English in Mechanicsville, Va., while her husband attends the School of Pharmacy at the Medical College of Va. Les Zimmerman is a sales representative for Xerox in Arlington. In neighboring Alexandria live Bruce and Jan Holzer Sasser. Jan is employed by the American Petroleum Institute in Washington. Bruce works for the National Park Service and attends graduate school part-time at Catholic University. Pat Gang and Suzann Wilson also reside in Alexandria. Pat works in the library at the Smithsonian Institute. Carol Lawall and her husband, Bill, live in Virginia Beach. Carol teaches school in nearby Ocean View. In Richmond, Sandra Garnett works for Wheat, First Securities, Inc.

Linda Sue Birkhead was married to Wayne Ralston in 1971 in Falls Church, Va. They are living in Manassas, Va., where she works with two doctors.

Don deWilde is the resident tennis pro at the Holiday Inn of Freeport, Grand Bahama.

An interesting summer for yours truly. I created a lawn mowing cartel called Green Power Lawn Care Co. and managed to turn a handsome profit by using child labor. And in July I journeyed to Miami Beach to cover the Democratic Convention for a couple of radio stations. Keep writing; next news will be in the December issue.

Vital Statistics

In the September edition of the Alumni Gazette, the Vital Statistics section listed Donald Irvin Pratt as married to both Anne Houghton Moore, '70, and Kristina Eileen Maddocks, '70. The item should correctly have read: Anne Houghton Moore, '70, and Donald Irvin Pratt, June 12, 1970. Kristina Eileen Maddocks, '70, and Stoddard Donelson Jones, March 6, 1971. The Gazette regrets the error.

If you want to know where it is—a meter or a world away—
Cubic has the system!

CUBIC'S SECOR, the surveying satellite developed for the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, keeps introducing changes in the cartographer's art. For example, the system places the Ryukyu Islands a half-mile southwest of where we thought they were. To make such discrete measurements, SECOR employs electronic trilateration. As the satellite makes its pass, signals bounce between its 7-pound transponder and 4 portable Cubic ground stations. When the data is correlated, one station, whose position is only generally known, is located with new precision.

Since 1964, the ground stations have leapfrogged across the Pacific toward Hawaii in the first part of a globe-girdling program. With each satellite pass, stations receive information from 10,000 data points—and tens of thousands of correlations are used for each distance measured. Trilateration is the key to a number of Cubic's significant systems developments. SECOR is more proof that if you want to know where it is—land, sea or space—Cubic has the system.
