

Homecoming 1975

A city police officer called it the biggest crowd ever to assemble for an event in Williamsburg. And that included Queen Elizabeth's trip to the colonial city in 1957.

What drew them -- more than 25,000 people, according to city police captain Andrew Rutherford '54--was another stylish Homecoming Parade. The crowd even exceeded last year's Homecoming Parade, perhaps the best in the College's history, when 22,000 assembled.

The Parade proved the topper of a busy weekend that included several dedications, the announcement of the results of the Alumni Board of Directors election, the presentation of the Alumni Medallions, the OWJ dinner, the crowning of the Homecoming Queen and her court, and, in the only negative note, a 22-8 football loss by the Indians at the hands of Ohio University.

All nine sororities and 11 fraternities entered floats in the Homecoming Parade, which was judged by four alumni: Jack Bruce '49 of Norfolk, Mrs. Marjorie R. Gibbs '44 of Akron, Ohio, Blake T. Newton, Jr. '32 of New York, and Mrs. Elaine Elias Kappel '55 of Pittsburgh. The fifth judge was Mrs. Jenny Whitlam, representing Williamsburg.

In addition to the sorority and fraternity divisions, won by Chi Omega and Sigma Chi, the Parade included an open division, won by Ludwell Dormitory.

The entries constituted the best of some 44 floats and marching units in the Parade, which had as its theme "A Child's World of Fantasy." Also in the Parade were Homecoming Queen Sherry Hanson, a sophomore from Arlington, and her court: Teresa Sato of Annandale, Pat Giermak of Erie, Pa., Martha

Homecoming Queen Sherry Hanson with King's Dominion Friend

Hughes of Lorton, and Kathy Lawlor of Paoli, Pa.

On Friday, the College dedicated the new Rogers Hall and the Martha Barksdale athletic fields. The Rogers dedication included the dedication of a plaque in honor of the late William G. Guy, popular chemistry professor at William and Mary.

On Saturday, at the "Luncheon on the Lawn" held before each game, the Alumni House was dedicated with C. Randolph Davis '50, president of the Society of the Alumni Board of Directors presiding. President Graves and W. Brooks George '32 recognized the efforts of several prominent alumni in bringing the renovation of the House to completion including Dr. Davis Y. Paschall '32, president emeritus.

Receiving the Alumni Medallion this year were Dr. Paul Gantt, a 1942 graduate of the Law School; Charles Eugene Stousland, Jr. '41, chairman of the department of architecture at Miami University of Ohio, and the first husband-wife team to receive the medallion: James Campbell, Jr. and Dorothy Baynham Wilkins Campbell of Aiken, S.C., both of the class of 1925. The class of '25 has now received more medallions than any other class.

Two alumni were elected to the Board of Directors of the Society for the first time. They are Thomas M. Mikula '48, headmaster of Kimball Union Academy in New Hampshire, and R. Bradshaw Pulley '39, an insurance executive from Virginia Beach.

Re-elected to three-year terms were Jean Canoles Bruce '49 of Norfolk, J.W. "Bill" Hornsby, Jr. '50 of Newport News, and Harriet Nachman Storm '64 of Hampton.

College Awaits Word On New Law School Building

Word on whether the College would have its new law school building, and thus avoid for sure the steps which could lead to disaccreditation, is not expected until January.

Earlier this year, the American Bar Association wrote that it would begin a series of procedures which ultimately could mean disaccreditation, if the College did not show progress toward a new building and better law school resources by December 1, 1975.

In mid-October, however, the ABA's accrediting consultant visited the campus at the request of President Thomas A. Graves, Jr.

Following a series of meetings with top college and law school officials, the consultant told reporters that he was satisfied that good-faith efforts were being made by the College and Commonwealth to resolve the law school's deficiencies.

Moreover, he added, it was evident that December 1 was too early a deadline to provide a complete response to the questions of resources and facilities. The General Assembly will not adopt the 1976-78 budget until March, 1976, after recommendations it will receive from the Governor in January.

The ABA consultant stipulated, too, that the quality of the law school's educational program, faculty and students was not at all in question. He did reiterate that the building used for the law school (the old College Library, renovated in 1968) was the worst facility of all accredited law schools, that the library was deficient in facilities, staffing and acquisitions budget, and that salaries were below the national median.

The net effect of his meetings at the College was to delay, for a few months, the possibility of ABA action regarding the school's accreditation.

The budget limitations facing Virginia have prompted many political leaders to defer judgement on whether a new building can be funded or whether it would be deferred until the economic picture brightens.

President's Report Due This Month

As a cost-saving move, the 1974-75 President's Report will be made available by mail to alumni, parents and friends who request a copy of it.

The Report, to be available about November 10, covers the academic session which ended June 30.

In prior years, all alumni, parents and friends received the Report in November--for a total of about 33,000 copies. By restricting the distribution to those who actually request copies, the College will save an estimated $6,000 from its current limited budget.

Requests should be mailed to the Office of the President, College of William and Mary, Williamsburg, Va. 23185 and copies will be sent promptly, until the supply is exhausted.

Excerpts from the Report will appear in the December issue of the Alumni Gazette.

Faculty Compensation

For decades, it has been said that there must be something special about William and Mary that keeps its best faculty from moving elsewhere, because it certainly isn't the salaries and fringes.

Various theories exist on that "something special," none of them conclusive. By all yardsticks, the William and Mary faculty is of nationally ranked quality but undercompensated.

The latest nationally published figures show that William and Mary's average faculty compensation is about ten to twelve per cent below the average at comparable small universities which are State-supported. Translated, that means a full professor at William and Mary earns $2,250 less in salary and fringe benefits than his colleagues, as an average, at similar public institutions across the nation. Faculty in other ranks are similarly below average in compensation.

Within Virginia alone, the William and Mary professor earns, as an average, $7,800 less a year than his counterpart at the University of Virginia; $3,200 less than a colleague at Virginia Tech; $1,900 less than at Washington & Lee and $1,700 less than at the University of Richmond. The full professor at Virginia Commonwealth University, which until 1962 was a branch of William and Mary, earns $2,600 more than the professor at William and Mary.

The 1974 self-study of William and Mary concluded that "salaries at William and Mary are low in relation to the quality of the student body and to the quality of education offered at the College." Many, if not most of the comparable small State universities which are ranked for reporting purposes with William and Mary, are regional or local institutions, compared with William and Mary's national reputation and selective standards.

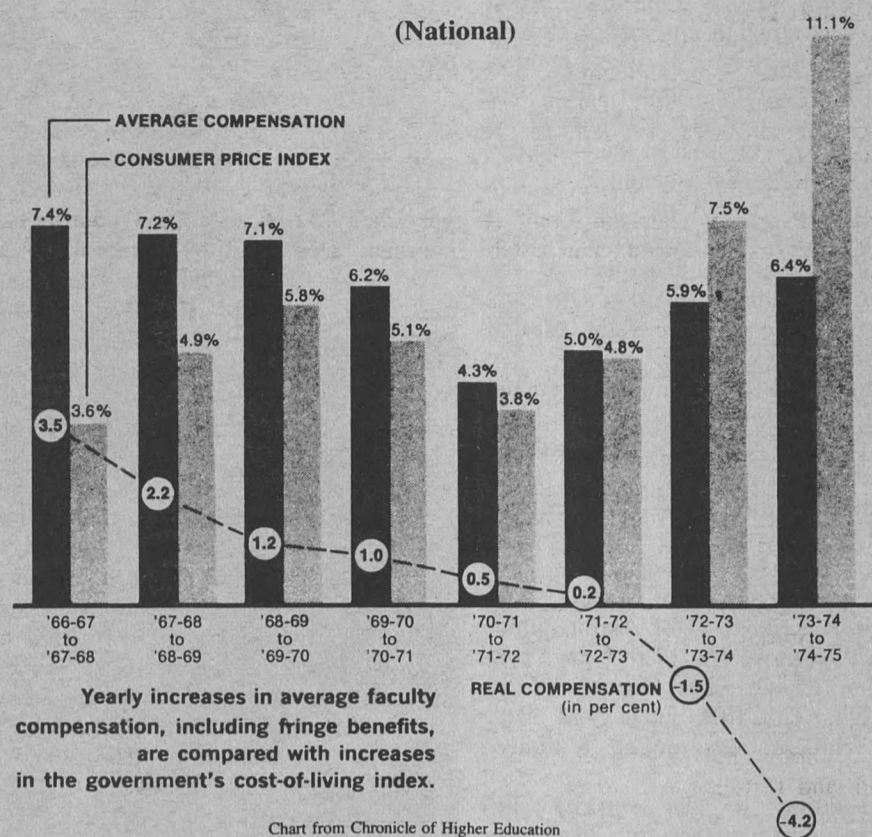

Among the higher-ranking small State universities, according to compensation, are such institutions as Pennsylvania's Slippery Rock, Clarion and Millersville State; Maryland's Bowie and Frostburg State, the State University of New York's arts and sciences campuses at 13 regional locations (almost all formerly teachers' colleges), and the University of North Carolina at Greensboro, to name only a very few.

The figures, published in the Chronicle of Higher Education, showed that 58 colleges and universities have average compensation figures for all faculty (including the most recently hired instructors) which exceed the average of William and Mary's full professors.

One of the compensation factors at many colleges and universities, not available to William and Mary faculty, is the "fringe package." The package available at most private colleges, and many public ones in other states, includes subsidized housing; tuition assistance for faculty children at colleges and universities of choice; paid insurance benefits which cover families as well as employees; disability income protection; and retirement plans in which faculty may invest more than the required contribution, and in which the employer makes a direct contribution.

Benefits not included in compensation, but available at most senior institutions, include regular sabbatical leaves for professional improvement and a release of pressure and other special opportunities. The fringe benefits for full professors at William and Mary amount to 7.1 per cent of total compensation, all of which comes from State benefits for all State employees. At comparable institutions across the country, fringe benefits amount to anywhere from 10.5% to 24.5% of total reported compensation.

Faculty Compensation and the Cost of Living

... and Productivity

How hard do faculty work?

William and Mary faculty took part in an October survey designed to estimate the range and extent of activities performed by faculty at Virginia's State-supported colleges and universities.

The survey was conducted by the State Council of Higher Education (SCHEV) as the result of legislation enacted during the 1975 session of the General Assembly. All persons holding faculty rank at William and Mary reported on the time they spent in specified academic, administrative, research and support work during the week of October 19 to October 25. SCHEV results will be reported in 1976.

One object of the study is to show the workload differences among fields of study and among the varying levels of instruction. It was also designed by SCHEV to collect data to "respond to future questions posed by legislators, public groups and institutions."

There are those who assume that faculty members work only when they are actually teaching - some nine to twelve hours a week. Others recognize that outside the classroom, the teacher spends at least that much time preparing for his classes and yet more time counseling students and grading their work.

But a study conducted in 1974, involving a sample group of William and Mary faculty, indicated for the first time the real breadth of a faculty member's responsibilities and how much time it took to carry them out well.

As reported in the Alumni Gazette last spring, the results showed a work week ranging as high as 75 and 80 hours of professional activity.

The study, comparable in some respects with the one now underway at SCHEV, showed that time is typically spent at William and Mary in the following ways:

Preparing for, teaching, and following up with students on classroom activities.

Service on faculty and college-wide committees, both those which make basic academic policies as well as those which study and make recommendations on institutional matters.

Research and preparation of scholarly articles, reviews, scripts and other activity which contributes to teaching effectiveness, professional standing, and the advancement of knowledge.

Participation in the activities of learned societies, through which scholars share new developments in their fields. Because of the prominence of many of William and Mary's faculty in their fields, and because Williamsburg is a popular conference site, the College's teachers probably find themselves on more conference committees than most of their colleagues elsewhere.

A number of faculty are also involved in community-related volunteer work that reflects favorably on William and Mary's record of local service. A large number, especially in education and business, serve as consultants to area institutions and businesses.

The professional life, at least at William and Mary, is not the relaxed calling that has been stereotyped in the past.

Endowments Fund Faculty Positions at W&M

In addition, Dr. Swindler is chairman of the Advisory Board to the Supreme Court Historical Society and a consultant to the Judicial Conference of the United States for Bicentennial Planning. The latter body is charged with planning the Bicentennial activities for all of the federal courts.

Maurice Warwick Beresford is holding the James Pinckney Harrison Chair of History, the first endowed chair established under the Eminent Scholars Program. It was endowed by Mrs. Harrison to honor her husband, who was a distinguished Richmond businessman.

A native of England, Beresford has been a professor of economics at the University of Leeds since 1959. He attended Jesus College and two parts of the Cambridge Historical Tripos before receiving his M.A. degree in 1945. He has held positions as a lecturer, reader, dean, and chairman of the School of Economic Studies at the University of Leeds since he joined the faculty there in 1948.

In recent years, Beresford has expanded his historical archaeology research to the 16th and 17th centuries as well as to the Middle Ages and has continued to contribute to a variety of publications.

Beresford is recognized worldwide as a pioneer in innovative techniques for studying archaeological sites with aerial photography. His several books on the subject, including The Lost Villages of England, were some of the first to concentrate on the historical significance of archaeological finds.

Dr. Arthur T. Andersen, who holds an endowed position in economics, is an associate director of the Office of Special Programs of the U.S. General Accounting Office in Washington, D.C. He holds a B.A. degree from the City College of New York and a Ph.D. from Harvard where he studied under the distinguished scholar Carl Kaysen.

Dr. Andersen, who is associate editor of the Industrial Organization Review, has been a senior economic affairs officer with the United Nations and a chief economist for the Atomic Energy Commission. In addition, he has held positions in the area of economics with the Federal Trade Commission and on the staff of the Antitrust and Monopoly Committee of the U.S. Senate. Dr. Andersen is a former faculty member at Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Boston University, and Virginia Tech.

A widely published novelist, Herbert Burkholz, is the new writer-in-residence in the Department of English under the Eminent Scholars Program. Burkholz published "Mulligan's Seed" during the summer. Described by Burkholz as a "caper novel," it follows two other successful books by Burkholz, "Sister Bear" and "The Spanish Soldier."

For the past 12 years, the New York-born writer has been a "voluntary expatriate" on Ibiza, a small Balearic island off the coast of Spain, where he concentrated on writing "surrealistic biography" that reflects his own personal attitudes and lifestyle.

Burkholz follows an alumnus, Stephen Marlowe, in the position of writer-in-residence. Six undergraduate students have been specially selected for a writing seminar supervised by Burkholz. While he is at William and Mary, Burkholz will work on a sequel to "The Spanish Soldier" called "Benedictus."

The two faculty appointed under the scholars program in Music are Dora R. Short and H. Earle Johnson.

Mrs. Short, who has studied music since the age of five, served as first violinist with the distinguished group, the Feldman String Quartet, for 28 years. In addition, she has been concert master of the Norfolk Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Russell Stanger. She performed as a soloist with the Peninsula Symphony Orchestra, Norfolk Symphony, and the Roanoke Symphony. She has performed a wide repertoire in violin recitals as well as chamber music in Virginia, Maryland, Washington, D.C., North Carolina, West Virginia, Maine, and New York.

Mrs. Short is former faculty member of the Summer Chamber Music School at the University of Maine, which is directed by Joseph Fuchs, head of the violin department at the Julliard School of Music. She is also on the faculty of the Julliard School of music.

Mr. Johnson is a former music critic for the New Haven Register who has published widely in the musical field.

He is the author of five books and several scholarly articles in such journals as "The Musical Quarterly," "The Journal of the American Musicological Society," and "The Journal for Research in Music Education."

Johnson received undergraduate degrees from Boston University and Yale and his masters degree from Yale. He has also studied at Harvard University.

"The Future is Now"

By Bob Sheeran '67

Head coach Jim Root has been looking for the right ingredient to instill some life into what has been an inconsistent offense for the Indians.

"We have not been able to field the same offensive unit from one game to the next and that sure hasn't helped our efforts," commented Root, whose Indians are 0-7.

The Tribe skipper met with his staff and came up with an idea which he felt might inject new life and establish spirited competition among the offensive personnel. The coach has sent in the "Frosh Connection," a group of first year players who have seen a great deal of playing time but not always together. Featured in the "future is now group" is quarterback Tom Rozantz, tailback Lou Biondi, fullback Jeff Vanderbeek, wide receiver Mike Burgess, skilled end C.J. Harrington, and tight end Ken Cloud.

"No, this is not a gimmick. All these kids are proven players and I think their going in as a unit will help our game", stated Root. "They work together in practice and it has developed a sense of pride in addition to a real competitive situation among themselves and the upperclassmen".

Against Homecoming opponent Ohio U., The Frosh Connection scored the Tribe's only touchdown and in their other series, they have moved the ball well.

"Sure, they make some mistakes, but the good which is being gained by doing this far outweighs the bad, for both the present and the future", concluded Root.

Call it what you will, the Tribe staff is confident positive results are stemming from the William and Mary "Frosh Connection."

Tribe Runners Capture 13th State Title

Coach John Randolph's cross-country runners are doing it again - tearing up the competition while winning their 13th straight State intercollegiate title.

In what was supposed to be a rebuilding year, the Indians have defeated all of their opponents except one -- Penn State, ranked fourth nationally.

Among the Tribe's victims is Georgetown University, ranked seventh nationally.

William and Mary has defeated Quantico, the University of Richmond, North Carolina State, East Carolina, Virginia Tech, the Pennsylvania Track Club, and the Baltimore Olympic Club. Its only defeat was by the slim margin of 22-25 to Penn State.

The Tribe won its 13th state title despite the absence of its top runner, Chris Tulou, who as busy taking his graduate record examinations.

William and Mary now looks forward to the Southern Conference tournament on Nov. 1, the NCAA regionals on Nov. 8, and the nationals on Nov. 24.

Dobson Shines in Pan-Am Games

Coach Randolph found one of his former track stars, Charles Dobson, carrying the United States colors in the recently concluded Pan American games. Dobson, who graduated last summer, placed 5th in the 110-meter high hurdles after making the U.S. team by finishing second in the qualifying competition.

Dobson is the first William and Mary athlete ever to participate in the Pan Am games.

Two long-time participants in William and Mary athletics were honored at halftime during the Homecoming football game between the Indians and Ohio University. Ben L. Carnevale (left), athletic director, presented plaques of appreciation to trainer John "Dusty" Rhodes (middle) and equipment manager Frank Cody. Each has served the athletic program at William and Mary for 25 years.

Tribe Soccer Team Has Best Year

William and Mary's soccer team is off to one of its best years in recent history.

Coach Al Albert's Tribe has run up a 7-3-1 record and seems a cinch to win the Northern Division of the Southern Conference for the first time since 1972.

The Indians' likely opponent for the Southern Conference championship game scheduled for Williamsburg Nov. 8 is Appalachian State.

Among the Tribe's wins is a 10-0 victory over arch-rival Richmond. The only disappointment during the season was a 5-4 loss to Old Dominion University in the state soccer tournament.

This year's record indicates a bright future for Tribe soccer. The team is led by three freshmen, including Kip Germine, Virginia's top scholastic soccer player last year.

College Named Site of Special Education Meet

One of ten regional conferences on international education will be held at William and Mary next spring.

The College is one of twenty-three colleges and universities selected as co-sponsors for meetings of the Board of Foreign Scholarships special project, "International Education: Link for Human Understanding."

The institutions were chosen by the project advisory committee composed of former Senator J. William Fulbright, chairman; James H. Billington, director of the Woodrow Wilson International Center for Scholars; Charles Blitzer, Assistant Secretary for History and Art, Smithsonian Institution; John E. Dolibois, vice president for development and Alumni Affairs, Miami University; Wallace B. Edgerton, president, Institute of International Education; John Hope Franklin, Professor of History, University of Chicago; Rogers W. Heyns, president, American Council on Education; Barbara W. Newell, president, Wellesley College; Alan J. Pifer, president, Carnegie Corporation; James B. Reston, New York Times columnist; and Chen Ning Yang, Einstein Professor of Physics, State University of New York at Stony Brook.

Invited participants will include all current and former Fulbright scholars as well as educators and civic leaders in the area. Members of the William and Mary community, students, faculty and staff, will be invited to attend the public sessions of the conference.

The ten one-day conferences will be preliminary to an International Convocation on International Education to be held at the Smithsonian Institution in Washington, May 18, 19, and 20.

James C. Livingston, Dean of the Undergraduate Program, served as chairman of the initial planning committee which submitted a proposal in competition for one of the ten conference slots. Members of the committee included Carl Dolmetsch, chairman of the English Department; Rolf Winter, professor of physics; Richard Terman, professor of biology; and Thad Tate, director of the Institute of Early American History and Culture. A planning committee which includes the initial members and several others will be announced later.

One of William and Mary's most treasured traditions, the Honor Code, will undergo a thorough examination in a committee study that will look at the whole range of judicial systems in the undergraduate college and the graduate schools.

President Graves has appointed a committee consisting of faculty, administrators, students, and one alumnus to study the judicial systems and report back to him by March 1, 1976.

Several areas of the College have requested the study, the most recent of which was the undergraduate Honor Council, which administers a system first established at William and Mary in 1779 under Thomas Jefferson.

The Honor Code itself, however, is only one aspect of the study. Since the 1960s, a number of changes have taken place nationally and at William and Mary which have cast doubt on whether or not the judicial systems were being administered as effectively or as equitably as possible.

President Graves' charge to the committee suggests the variety of influences that have come to bear on the judicial systems at William and Mary.

"Some of these include a new emphasis on the values of privacy, the implications deriving from the rights of the majority, sex discrimination regulations, the law as it affects matters such as confidential records, the broadening of rules of residential self-governance, extensions of due process, evolving definitions of the educational responsibilities of students and of the College's responsibility to students, and revised social outlooks in general."

One particular concern of the Committee will be the approach to judicial matters at William and Mary - whether one unified system should replace the various judicial components in the schools and other areas of the College.

As a result of the growth of the schools of law, education, and business administration and the introduction of self-determination in the dormitories, the components of the judicial system have proliferated. Various regulations are now administered by as many as seven different bodies at William and Mary -- the residence hall councils, the student affairs staff, the Committee on Discipline, and the three judicial systems in the professional schools, as well as the Graduate Arts and Sciences. In addition, state and local laws sometimes overlap regulations within the College.

"The number of different judicial bodies, each operating independently of the other," notes one dean, "raises the question of equal treatment college-wide."

In the dormitories, residence hall councils have been charged with administering self-policing regulations to enforce discipline. This has led to an elaborate appeals process to ensure due process, and some students and administrators question whether the process has become too unwieldy.

In addition to these concerns, the Committee will look at whether or not the College should have rules and regulations which parallel existing state and federal laws. In some cases, a student could be punished more than once for the same offense as a result of the parallel laws. Still another concern is whether academic punishments such as suspension should be given out for non-academic infractions.

Beyond all of these concerns, the Committee will take a thorough look at the Honor Code and its administration. Council members subscribe to the tenants of the Honor Code, notes committee member W. Samuel Sadler '64, Dean of Students, but they want to be sure the code is as effective and fair as possible.

William and Mary is by no means alone in its concern about its judicial system. In an article entitled "Are Honor Systems Doomed," The Chronicle of Higher Education says the system survives at only a few military academies and a handful of public institutions.

"...in the eyes of many...across the country, honor codes...are anachronisms," says the Chronicle, "relics of an era when higher education was reserved for an elite few who shared common cultural and social values."

Honor codes depend on the assumption that individual students will take the responsibility for the integrity of the system by reporting violations.

Chairs Committee

Yet, in our society, notes Sadler, "we are taught from early life that it is wrong to tell on our friends." In addition he notes, there is an attitude prevalent among the student culture to "do your own thing" and leave others alone to do theirs.

Dr. John E. Selby, Graduate Dean of Arts and Sciences, will serve as chairman of the Committee. Other faculty on the committee are Lynn D. Doverspike, associate professor of physics; Frank A. MacDonald, professor of philosophy; Alan E. Fuchs, associate professor of philosophy, and William F. Losito, assistant professor of education.

Students are David Nagle, the undergraduate student ombudsman; Douglas Pinter, a law student; Jane Tylus, a member of the Honor Council; Mark Weinstein, graduate student in business administration, and Gayle Yamada, chairman of the Honor Council.

The alumnus on the committee is the Rev. Tom L. Bosserman '63, minister of the Trinity Lutheran Church in Newport News and a former chairman of the Honor Council. Other members of the College community will serve as consultants to the committee.

Charter, Commencement Speakers

The Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare and the British Ambassador to the United States will speak at two major occasions at William and Mary next year.

David Mathews, 39, Secretary of HEW, will give the Commencement address at the College next May 16 in the historic Sir Christopher Wren Courtyard.

Sir Peter Ramsbotham, British Ambassador to the United States, will deliver the 1976 Bicentennial Charter Day address on Saturday, Feb. 7, in Phi Beta Kappa Hall.

Mathews, former president of the University of Alabama, was named by President Ford as the HEW secretary on Aug. 8. He is the youngest member of Ford's cabinet.

As secretary, he heads a department of 129,000 employees responsible for more than 350 programs and an expenditure of about one-third of the federal budget. Before he became the HEW secretary, Mathews served for six years as president of the University of Alabama.

He was the youngest president ever appointed to head that school.

Ramsbotham, 56, has been ambassador to the United States since March 1974 when he succeeded the Earl of Cromer. Prior to 1974, he was ambassador to Iran.

Secretary Mathews

His diplomatic career began in 1948 when he joined the British Foreign Service. After two years in Berlin during the blockade, Sir Peter returned to the Foreign Office in London to head the newly-established international oil section. In that capacity he participated in the 1951 negotiations between the British government and Iranian Prime Minister Mussadek.

In 1953 Sir Peter was appointed Head of Chancery in the British delegation to the United Nations in New York. Four years later he returned to the Foreign Office and in 1960 was appointed head of the Western Organizations and Planning Department. There he worked closely with Edward Heath, who was then in charge of the first negotiations for Britain's entry into the European Common Market.

Following an appointment in Paris, he was promoted and appointed British High Commissioner in Cyprus, his first post as head of a British diplomatic mission abroad. Two years later he became Ambassador to Iran.

William Small -- Jefferson's Teacher

The professor to whom Thomas Jefferson gave credit for having "fixed the destinies of my life" was a relatively unknown Scotsman who, ironically, returned to Britain after six years in Virginia.

The professor was William Small, who crossed the Atlantic in 1758 to teach at William and Mary. He had earlier obtained his master of arts degree from Marischall College, Aberdeen, studying under Joseph Black and developing a friendship with James Watt, the inventor of the steam engine.

Small took over the chair of natural philosophy at William and Mary. He was one of a half-dozen professors and masters at the college, which was chartered in 1693. About 100 students were enrolled in the grammar school, the philosophy school, the divinity school and the Indian school.

The unassuming Scot enlarged his duties in 1760 from teaching physics, metaphysics and mathematics to the field of moral philosophy, which included rhetoric, logic and ethics.

Small brought to William and Mary the lecture system of teaching, which had become fashionable in Europe. It was believed to be the first time a professor gave regular lectures in a colonial college. He also was instrumental in introducing classroom demonstrations of physics principles to the American form of higher education.

Jefferson's favorite professor left little recorded information about himself. He consciously spurned honors, societies, publications and the other trappings of the professional academician. He appeared to have preferred anonymity, exerting himself to help improve others instead.

One outstanding testimony to Small's talent and influence does remain, however. It is a paragraph in the autobiography of Thomas Jefferson, author of the Declaration of Independence. Jefferson enrolled at William and Mary at the age of 17, two years after Small's arrival. At the age of 77, Jefferson wrote:

"It was my great good fortune, and what probably fixed the destinies of my life, that Dr. William Small of Scotland was then professor of mathematics, a man profound in most of the useful branches of science, with a happy talent of communication, correct and gentlemanly manners, and an enlarged and liberal mind.

"He, most happily for me, became soon attached to me, and made me his daily companion when not engaged in the school; and from his conversation I got my first views of the expansion of science, and of the system in which we are placed. Fortunately, the philosophical chair became vacant soon after my arrival at college, and he was appointed to fill it per interim, and was the first who ever gave in that college, regular lectures on Ethics, Rhetoric and Belles Lettres," Jefferson continued.

Small also introduced Jefferson to attorney George Wythe, who later became the first American professor of law when the post was created in 1779 at William and Mary. By then, Jefferson -- as governor of Virginia -- was on the college's board and directed a reorganization which led to the establishment of the chair in law.

Historians have suggested the Declaration of Independence is formulated on principles enunciated by the foremost logician of the time, William Duncan. Duncan was William Small's teacher at Marischall.

Small's return to Britain, where he took a medical degree and obtained a practice in Birmingham on recommendation of Benjamin Franklin, has been attributed to his yearning for the refinements of city life. In Birmingham, he joined such notables as Boulton, Priestley, Watt and the potter Josiah Wedgwood. His moral and financial support of Watt's work helped his inventor friend through the frustrations of completing the first steam engine.

Small also continued to support William and Mary, even from England. He purchased and shipped an elaborate set of "philosophical apparatus," as it was then called, including barometers, telescopes, lenses, an electrical machine and prisms. At the time, it was the best collection of its sort in American and helped further the application of Small's teaching style throughout the colonies.

He died in February, 1775 at the age of 40. Three months after Small's death, Jefferson sent him six dozen bottles of Madeira wine as an assurance of his personal affection despite the revolutionary thunderstorms against England which were brewing in the colonies. Jefferson had not been aware of Small's death.

Today, William and Mary is a small, state-supported university with about 4,000 undergraduates and 1,400 students who are enrolled in master's, doctoral and professional programs in the arts and sciences, law, business, education and marine science.

Its observance of the Bicentennial is based on the theme, "Alma Mater of a Nation," in recognition of the numerous early American leaders who were William and Mary alumni. Among them were Thomas Jefferson, James Monroe, John Tyler, Peyton Randolph and John Marshall.

W&M Admissions Questions —And The Answers—

[EDITOR'S NOTE: Readers are invited to send in their questions on undergraduate admissions problems or admissions matters of general interest. They will be answered in this column by Robert P. Hunt, Dean of Admissions, Box 60, Williamsburg, Va. 23185.]

Is it necessary for applicants to have a personal interview with a member of the admissions staff?

No. Applicants for admission have an opportunity to present personal information with their application which is reviewed by members of the admissions staff. In addition, we request individuals to submit a recommendation from a teacher or administrator who knows them on a regular basis. However, we do feel that it is important for prospective students and parents to visit before enrolling, in order to get a "feel" for the institution, which is difficult to obtain from printed material and other sources.

What is the procedure for visiting the campus?

Partially because of our unique location, we get many more visitors than most other colleges. While we are delighted with this popularity and are always pleased to have visitors, it has necessitated procedures that will best provide information to prospective students and most effectively utilize our staff time. Therefore, several years ago we established a program of group information sessions, which are held at 10:00 a.m. and 2:30 p.m. weekdays and at 10:00 a.m. on Saturday mornings. (During November, February and March--peak months for application review--these sessions are not held on weekday mornings. During June, July and August, the Office of Admissions is closed on Saturdays.) The normal procedure in these sessions is for a member of the staff to show a 20 minute slide/tape presentation which is prepared and updated regularly with the help of students, faculty members, and administrators. The purpose of this is to provide an overview of the college and answer questions which are asked on a regular basis. After this showing, a student and a member of the admissions staff answer questions. (Individuals tell us that they find it very helpful to hear other student's questions.) Following this a student guide walks around the campus with our visitors. We are always happy to talk with prospective students and parents (who are welcomed and encouraged to attend the group program) after these sessions on an individual basis if they desire to do so.

How can individuals arrange to participate in a group session?

They should write or call our receptionist and advise us of the time and date they expect to be on campus. Provided there is time for mail to reach the individual, a confirmation of this date and time will be sent, as well as a temporary parking permit and map of the campus so that they can find us. (We are located in Ewell Hall, rather than James Blair, where most of the administrators are. This results in some confusion for visitors locating our office and parking continues to be a problem.)

Because we are anxious to continue to improve our procedures for providing information to prospective students, we distributed last spring an evaluation form to individuals who visited the campus. Although the sample was rather small, I was pleased with the results which indicated that 76% of the visitors who responded indicated that in comparison to other institutions that they visited, the reception and information that they received at William and Mary was excellent, 24% found that it was good and, fortunately, no one indicated that it was either fair or poor.

W&M Fund Drive Reaches $52,000 in First 3 Weeks

The William and Mary Fund drive is off to one of its best starts in history.

With just three weeks gone in the campaign, which continues until next June 30, alumni had pledged or given $52,840.72. Last year, the total amount raised was $227,897.

Nearly $50,000 in cash has already been received by the Office of College Development, which administers the campaign. The Office has received or had pledged more than $10,000 from 390 alumni who have never given before.

The average gift is $31.26. So far, 1690 individuals have either made a gift or a pledge.

This year's campaign chairman is James S. Kelly '51, former executive secretary of the Society of the Alumni and now assistant to the President at William and Mary. Kelly has written letters to all alumni asking for their participation.

This is the Silver Anniversary for the William and Mary Fund, marking its 25th year. Appropriately, says Len A. Meyer, director of Annual Giving at William and Mary, the participation by alumni so far in the anniversary drive has been "most encouraging."

College History Due in February

The book, "Their Majesties' Royall Colledge," offered earlier this year to members of the William and Mary family, will be published February, 1976.

Though literature offering the book indicated the February publication date--simultaneous with the College's Bicentennial Charter Day Convocation--it was evidently not clear to some subscribers.

More than 4,200 copies of the first edition of the book have been purchased in advance, which by book trade standards makes it a best-seller in today's book market. In addition, 300 individually hand-made volumes will be made to meet subscriptions to the collector's limited edition.

Campbells Give Painting of Wren to Alumni House

Dot and Red Campbell, '25, have given a painting of the Wren Building to the Alumni House. The painting, by Peter Rex Denby, was presented to Red Campbell upon his retirement from Western Electric. The Campbells presented the gift to the Society during Homecoming weekend.

Two brass Palace Warming Room Sconces have been given to the Alumni House by Betty King Hundley, '53, and Posie Hundley, '54.

The Paschall Library has recently received books from Wilford Kale, '66, and Julia Woodbridge Oxrieder, '46. Several alumni have given Colonial Echoes to the Library. However, the Colonial Echo for 1901 is still needed. If an alumnus has this issue and no longer has a need for it, it will be appreciated if he will forward it to the Paschall Library, Society of the Alumni, Post Office Box 60, Williamsburg, Virginia 23185.

The Many Faces Of Homecoming

There were many faces in the Homecoming activities of 1975, and they exemplified the variety of events that took place during the weekend. The event that drew the biggest crowd was the Homecoming Parade, represented by a member of the Homecoming court (upper left), a little girl in the crowd (bottom, left) who was held spellbound by one of the characters from King's Dominion, and one of the imaginative fraternity floats in the Parade (below). Later in the morning, alumni gathered for the dedication of the Alumni House as W. Brooks George '32, who helped raise the money to renovate the House, and C. Randolph Davis '50, president of the Board of Directors of the Society of the Alumni, unveiled the plaque for the House. In the afternoon, alumni gathered in Cary Field (above, middle) to watch the Indians lose to Ohio University, despite the excellent performance by freshman quarterback Tom Rozantz (above).

WHITE JACKET

The Order of the White Jacket, which has grown to more than 300 members, held its annual dinner on Thursday evening of Homecoming. Among those in attendance were (above left) Lee B. Todd '27, the new president of OWJ; Governor Mills E. Godwin '36, James S. Kelly '51, assistant to the President at William and Mary and chairman of the William and Mary Fund drive currently in progress, and M. Carl Andrews '27, the outgoing President of OWJ. Above, Governor Godwin proudly displays his OWJ insignia, and at left, several of the OWJ members gathered for a photo at the "Luncheon on the Lawn" Saturday morning.

ALUMNI MEDALLION RECIPIENTS

Receiving the Alumni Medallion at Homecoming were James Campbell Jr. and his wife, Dorothy Baynham Wilkins Campbell, both class of 1925; Dr. Paul Gantt, a 1942 graduate of the Marshall-Wythe School of Law, and Charles Eugene Stousland Jr., class of 1941. With the recipients are President Graves (far left) and C. Randolph Davis '50, president of the Society of the Alumni Board of Directors. Mr. and Mrs. Campbell are the first husband and wife team to receive medallions.

The February issue of the Virginia Bar News contained a profile of Chief Justice Lawrence W. I'Anson. Justice I'Anson's picture was on the cover.

E. Carlton Macon of Norfolk, Va., is semi-retired but selling real estate, sailing, golfing and generally enjoying life.

Miriam Silberger Goodman of Washington, D.C., spent a month in Sarasota and took a Caribbean cruise.

Dr. M. Weldon Thompson of Lynchburg, Va., spent 21 years at Lynchburg College serving as Professor of Education and Latin American studies and later as Dean of graduate studies, from which he has retired. He also retired from the Navy with the grade of Captain.

Received most interesting letter from Edward C. Joyner, M.D. of Suffolk, Va. Ed was at William and Mary from 1921 to 1924 at which time he left to enter Medical College of Virginia in Richmond. In 1928 he graduated from Medical College of Virginia, receiving his diploma from Dr. W.T. Sanger, President of MCV. While Ed was standing in line with the Class of 1928 at Williamsburg, Dr. J.A.C. Chandler requested that Dr. W.T. Sanger, who was on the staff at the time, to give Ed his B.S. degree which meant that he received his M.D. degree and B.S. degree in two different cities and two different colleges by the same person within a few days. Ed is still practicing medicine in Suffolk, Va., has been Chief of Staff of Louise Obici Memorial Hospital on two different occasions, and has been awarded the first citizen of Suffolk by the Local Cosmopolitan Club.

George R. Whitley of Arlington, Va., is retired from the U.S. General Accounting Office.

Rose Mountcastle Flannery and husband, Vern, who has been retired from government service for the past nineteen years have travelled all over the world. Because of the vast knowledge and enjoyment they have derived from this, they have acted as tour directors for senior citizens. They spend their winters in a travel trailer park with approximately fifteen hundred people. Last season they had eleven tours, the longest of which was a fifteen-day trip to four of the Hawaiian Islands. This season they plan another trip to the Caribbean. Her husband is the author of the duplicate bridge book, "The Irish Bidding System", and teaches and conducts games. Rose assists in the women's aquatic exercise classes. They spend their winters in Mesa, Ariz. They will be returning to the campus for her 50th reunion in 1978.

Elsie Beebe Swezey and her husband moved from Wilmington, Del., to her hometown of Lewes, Del., when Frank retired after 40 years with the DuPont Co. They had built a home there in anticipation of retiring and are enjoying living at the beach at the mouth of the Delaware Bay. Their only daughter, Joan Bird, has been living in Cambridge, England for the past four years and they have visited her twice. On the first trip they took a side trip to Spain and Portugal and on the second trip they toured central Europe. They enjoy having some of their six grandchildren at the beach in the summer. Elsie keeps busy with the work of the Hospital Auxiliary, of which she is now president. She has been interested in the work of the American Association of University Women for many years.

Dot and I visited friends, John R. Feagler, M.D., and his lovely wife, Susan, in Omaha, Neb., during September. John is a hematologist and a lecturer in his specialty. We have been friends for several years. We also visited another friend, Raymond W. Reeves, D.M.D., in North Palm Beach for several days.

Charles M. Smeltzer, known as "Bud", wrote that he has retired from the Marine Department of Texaco, Inc., and that he and his wife, the former Peggy Layman (class of '39) have moved to their Deltaville, Va., dream retirement home, "Wind Swept", which is located on the Piankotank River, just off the Chesapeake Bay and about 45 miles from Williamsburg. Bud also retired from the U.S. Coast Guard Reserve in 1971 as a Lieutenant Commander. Bud and Peggy are coming to Homecoming and are looking forward to seeing classmates and friends.

It was good to talk to Frances (Walker) Kersey and her husband, William, on September 24th. They said that their daughter, Susie Page, a graduate of Randolph Macon College, had recently been married to Lieutenant Kenneth Patrick Cathcart, U.S.A., a graduate of the University of Oklahoma and presently stationed at Fort Sill, Okla. Frances and William will miss Homecoming this year for the first time in many years. They, like many of us, are looking forward to our 40th reunion in 1976.

Our class was one of several classes which attended the College during extremely trying times - economic, political and social. A large number of us were forced to find ways to help meet the cost of our education, either in part or fully, even though the cost of an education at the College was quite low at that time. Students found ways then and I recently learned that present day students are also finding ways to help themselves. One student has organized a unique venture called University Creations - William and Mary Series, with other series to follow. I believe that his venture will be successful and I wish him good luck.

By the time you read this Homecoming 1975 will be a beautiful memory. For all of you who didn't show this is to say that we all missed you! Right now is a good time to consider our 50th Class Reunion which comes in 1988 - and we are hoping for a great turn out at this time. I may be jumping the gun, but I don't want any of you to forget it. Hold out October 1988 for a great old time!

Any of you in the greater Williamsburg area should be interested in a movement afoot around here to form and maintain a greater Williamsburg College of William and Mary Alumni Chapter. Be on the look out for announcements from time to time on this subject.

Any news you have of our class would be greatly appreciated.

I spent August in Atlanta at the Federal Bar Association Convention and lectured on the "HEW Grants Appeals Board" and listened to Linda L. Watkins speak on "Flow Down Requirements to Contractors and Subcontractors Under Grants". Linda is with the Office of Chief Counsel, Urban Mass Transportation Administration.

Saw John D. Sours (1966 and J.D. 1969) who after he captained in Vietnam and the Pentagon from 1969 until 1973, joined the Atlanta law firm of Smith, Currie & Hancock, one of the biggest law firms in the south on construction contracting and labor relations.

Saw Philip Paschall, who passed the Philadelphia Bar and successively held attorney positions with the Department of Agriculture and Interior.

Tea Co. He was previously serving as president of the chain, one of the largest in the country. He was honored in Johnstown, his hometown, in October 1972 when he received the 10th annual achievement award of the Inter-Service club council. We are all proud of Bob's achievement, and wish him continued success.

Anne Dobie Peebles of Carson, Va. has been adding to her laurels too. She was recently named "Unsung Virginian of 1975" by the Virginia Association of Electric Cooperatives for her contributions to the Community. Anne, a member of William and Mary's Board of Visitors, was on the State Board of Education from 1961 to 1970 and was its president from 1969 to 1970. She is also a trustee of the Medical College of Virginia Foundation and the Patrick Henry Hospital for the Chronically ill.

One third outstanding achiever in yet a different field is Iver M. Brook, who was awarded a Ph.D. in Marine Science by the University of Miami in May. His dissertation was "Some Aspects of the Trophic Relationships among the Higher Consumers in a Seagrass Community (Thalassia Testudinum Konig) in Card Sound, Florida". What an impressive title! Congratulations to all three of them.

Wayne and Marge Gibbs, have moved again, this time to Akron, Ohio. It's hard to keep up with them.

Several William and Mary alumni from the Tampa Bay area were privileged to meet recently with Stanley E. Brown, Director of Corporate Relations and Placement, of the College. We met over lunch in Tampa to discuss ways of helping the College with funding. It was an interesting meeting and good to see some of the other area alumni. Tentative plans were also made for a Tampa Bay alumni get-together. Among those attending the meeting were George Blandford, '43 and Nancy, '48, who are always among those saying "yes, we'll help" when William and Mary asks. They returned to Tampa two years ago, and George has been very busy with a new drywall supply business. Elaine West, '48 and Ruth Austin, '48, also of Tampa attended as did Betty Sue Shane, '71, who moved to Tampa 3 years ago from Baltimore. Annis McLean Fluharty, '45, of St. Petersburg also attended and was very happy because her son just returned home from overseas service. She said that Mary Gray Smith has been home from Beirut on a month's leave for her daughter's wedding. Mary said Beirut's political climate has been unsettled to say the least. Husband Bruce will soon be finished with his architectural duties in connection with the U.S. Embassy there and they will be on their way to another post soon.

Elizabeth Seay Grey of Staunton, Va., writes that she has returned to work as a Welfare Licensing Specialist on the staff of the Department of Welfare in the Valley Regional Office. They license day care facilities for children as well as child caring institutions in the fifteen county areas served by their regional office.

David and I are off to Europe for six weeks, and during our travels will visit our daughter, Susan, an architecture major, presently studying in Florence. We'll be thinking of you all at Homecoming and will have a beer to toast you all, at the Oktoberfest in Munich. Cheers to all.

I have asked Sunny Trumbo Williams to pinch-hit for me for the next newsletter as she will be at Homecoming, and I will not, so please send her your news for the next news letter.

Fall of '75 finds us, the '46'ers, involved, achieving, travelling, doing all kinds of things. Read on, and you'll see what I mean.

In Little Rock, Ar., Betty Ellett Lile says she has more non-paying jobs than she can justify! She gives Bible lectures for her church, has published one book in connection with the lectures; and lives in Little Rock, and her son is a senior in high school. Among her activities, Betty works for the Ark. Heart Association and the Baptist Medical Center.

Wouldn't all of us who majored in English love to have been in Williamsburg this past spring when Ennis Rees read some of his poems to an English class? He and Marion were up from Columbia, S.C., to visit with the College, and his mother, who lives nearby. Ennis, an English Professor at the University of South Carolina, is working on a new book in the form of a journal about teaching, poetry and related matters. Marion has her Master's of Social Work degree, which she took at the U. of S.C. They took time out this past summer for a month-long trip to England, Scotland and--for the fourth time--Ireland.

In Memphis, Tenn. Dr. Richard O. Bicks continues as Clinical Professor of Medicine at the University of Tennessee College of Medicine; and is Chief of GI at one of the University Hospitals. Recently, he was selected to be on the Executive Committee of the National Foundation of Ileitis and Colitis. All of this occupies most of his professional time, but in terms of extra curricular activity, he is now President of the Memphis Opera Theatre, which is the sixth largest company in the U.S., estimated by the audience they play to. He thoroughly enjoys the meetings of Opera America and the artists of the operatic world. Dick's oldest son is a sophomore at Brown University; another son is going to graduate from high school this year and his daughter is a high school freshman. When Dick visited Williamsburg this summer, he said he found the town twice as large, and four times as crowded as he remembered it--but even more beautiful.

Speaking of Williamsburg, if you're there in the Springtime, you could easily bump into Charles Kotsch and wife Mary Alice, who enjoy going down then for visits. Charlie is an osteopath in Harrisburg, Pa.

If you're at the College in the fall and winter for some of the home games, look around for Priscilla Fuller Downs and husband, Mac. They live in nearby Charles City county, and enjoy both the football and basketball games there.

Did you know that two of us are serving on the Board of Visitors? One is Pam Pauly Chinnis, who also served for two terms on the Board of Directors for the Society of the Alumni. Pam and husband, Carter, live in Alexandria, Va. They have two children, Ann and Carter, Jr. The other '46'er is William S. Hubbard. Bill is an officer in the Shenandoah Life Insurance Co. in Roanoke, Va. He and wife, Elizabeth, have four children--William, Jr., Gay, Virginia and Thomas.

Although their names are in the rosters of later classes, because of The War or other reasons, the following were fellow freshmen of the Class of '46:

"Woody" Aron is a real estate appraiser in Richmond, Va., and his daughter has the distinction of becoming the first qualified woman real estate appraiser in that city.

"Dusty" Ash is Comptroller for the Eskimo Pie Corp., headquartered in Richmond.

Fred Flanary is a CPA in Williamsburg, and served many years on the James City County Board of Supervisors.

Dick Duncan is a general insurance agent with his own agency in Richmond, Va.

Come next year, the Time Machine is going to spin us, chickens, and tell us we're supposed to be approaching our 30th Reunion. Let's do something about it. The Reunion, that is!

Oh to be in Williamsburg now that fall is here!

If all of you were disappointed in not having a class letter in the September issue would just drop me a postcard with a bit of news, we'd have a terrific letter the next time!

Some interesting news about Julia Woodbridge Oxrieder. She attended a Virginia Folklore Society meeting in April at Furum College and read a paper "Heeple Steeple or London Bridge: A Discussion of Variet Forms and Genres". She has now had three articles accepted for publication in the Kentucky Folklore Record. She is also compiling information for a book on her father, Professor Dudley Woodbridge, who taught in the Law School at William and Mary for nearly forty years. Julia is an advisor for the Bicentennial Committee in Newport News, and also for R.S.V.P. (a retired persons society) in Newport News. She has a brother who is also an alumnus, who has published several bibliographies.

We also have news of Helen Lou Black, a native of Pulaski, Va., who was society editor of the Martinsville Bulletin for 24 years. She has recently been appointed Woman's Editor of the Southwest Times of Pulaski. Helen was very active in community service while in Martinsville. She chaired the committee to establish the first school for mentally retarded children there. While serving on many boards of directors of health related organizations, she also served as president of the Martinsville Council of Garden Clubs, Longwood Garden Club, Business and Professional Women's Club and Patrick Henry Girl Scout Council. She was a charter member of the Martinsville-Henry County Women's Club and organized the Music Study Club. She is listed in Foremost Women in Communications, Who's Who of American Women, Personalities of the South, Dictionary of International Biography, the Library of Human Resources and will be included in the International Platform Association and Who's Who in the United States. Congratulations, Helen!

For those of you who remember Lucy Laib, of Louisville, Ky., she would appreciate any news from you. She has suffered a stroke and her address is Christopher East Nursing Home, 4200 Browns Lane, Louisville, Ky., 40220.

A short note from Mary "Maybe" Watson

Walker in Coronado, Calif. She has recently been promoted to Assistant Secretary/Loan Officer with Home Federal Savings and Loan of San Diego. She is still active in Coronado Hospital Auxillary, DAR, and Colonial Dames of the 17th Century. Can't take Virginia out of the girl, can you Maybe?

As for us, daughter number 3, Amy, is a freshman at Purdue this year, leaving only one chick in the nest. The house is getting quieter. Would love to fill it with sounds of opening letters from many of you. Take a few minutes right now and let us know what you've been up to!

As I reviewed our class records, I found what has to be the most exotic address of all our alumni: Layton Zimmer lives in the Kingdom of Tonga. The Atlas shows Tonga as a tiny dot in the South Pacific, about 3000 miles south and slightly west of Hawaii. Known as the Friendly Islands, the group has a population of around 80,000. How about a line from you, Reverend? Bill Hickey, who lives in Oradell, N.J., attended a summer session on Irish Literature and History at the University College Dublin. While over there he had an unexpected thrill. He was visiting the Law Library at the University of Edinburgh and there, prominently displayed, was the current issue of Crime and Delinquency Literature which carried one of his articles! I, too, had an unexpected surprise-chatting with Ann Hines Fuller, '53, at a brunch at a Restored Home in Alexandria. Bill is in real estate, condominiums, in the suburban D.C. area.

Sharon is 12 and Scott, 6. She was catching up on the news with Nancy Messick Ray. Nancy's family includes 6 children and they live in the D.C. area. "Transitions, Inc." is the name Ron Barnes chose for his new consulting firm in Topeka, Kan. According to Ron, it was established to help people understand and adapt to the changes in their lives. The idea is that people who understand the many transitional factors which shape their lives can become proactive - they can affect their own futures, and thereby, the possible futures of their world. The program is designed for persons, groups, organizations and institutions experiencing transitions in various types of areas. He will be doing both consulting work, assessment, diagnosis, management development-as well as giving presentations, lectures, workshops, seminars and studies. Because I was amazed at the deceased list of members, and because so many new "found" members have been added to our "mailing" list, I felt you too would be interested:

Jack, Buchheit, Agathangelos Christophides, Grace Cocke, Peggy Hughes Taylor, Beth Quynn Williams, Roger Reid, Roy Cecil Tyler, Mary Snyder Spitzer, Mary Ann Walker, and Gene Zane. How about adding me to your Christmas card list and include a line or two about your world. While '52 class news is preferred, our class is one that often had members suddenly called up for National Guard or Reserve active duty. Your class status may have been officially changed when you returned, but if you haven't reported your news, we'll take it all!

Graham Pillow, last spring, became Director of Medical Computing at the University of Virginia Hospital in Charlottesville. For the fourteen years prior to that he was Director of Computing and Institutional Studies at Christopher Newport College in Newport News. Jane was Registrar at Christopher Newport for nine years until 1974. She then became Administrator for the Virginia Tidewater Consortium for Continuing Education. Jane's still involved in music, as a kind of part-time job; she sings and plays the autoharp for groups and meetings.

Mary Maples Dunn and her husband have appointments this year to the Institute for Advanced Study in Princeton, N.J. Mary is writing a book on women and religion in Colonial America.

Frank (Sonny) Cowling is vice president of the Carpenter Brothers Insurance Agency in Newport News. He and his wife, Pat, have two children.

There are three kinds of people. Those who make things happen. Those who watch things happen, and those who have no idea what happened. In reporting the news of the class of '56, I believe my classmates are those who ... available now at $4.00 including tax and handling.

This newly issued 11 x 14 inch print, a facsimile of a mid-19th century lithograph based on Thomas Millington's watercolor, has been published by the King and Queen Press for the Bicentennial. The King and Queen Press, an activity under sponsorship of the Society of the Alumni, will publish selected items of special interest and value to the William and Mary family. Income from the sale of these items, ordinarily not seen elsewhere, will be invested in the production of further published materials.

make things happen! Who else, for example, could be appointed by the governor of Alaska as one of two consumer representatives on the Alaska Public Utilities Commission? Unfortunately, because of her new appointment, Carolyn Suber Guess will be leaving her post as chairman of the Alaska Educational Broadcasting Commission. Because of the success of his first book, PRESIDENT AND CONGRESS, published in 1972 by the Free Press, it is now being revised for the second edition. The second book the author has written, PRESIDENTIAL SPENDING POWER, is being published this fall by Princeton University Press. This book is the university's number one selection this year, has been adopted by a political affairs book club, and will be nominated for a national book award. And, the author is working for the Congressional Research Service of the Library of Congress. The author, one of our classmates who makes things happen is Lou (Bud) Fisher. Bud, congratulations! And, who can forget "Turtle," Mary Warren, who lives in Williamsburg and has invited the entire class of '56 to stay with her in '76 (and we're all invited to a cocktail party, too!). No, not really, but she did say we could eat hot dogs at her place and smell steaks cooking in the King's Arms Tavern. Turtle said Dr. Lance Trusty and wife Jan were in Billsburg this summer with their two sons. She also mentioned that after 20-some years of collecting material (it's called junk, Turtle), she finally threw away some pictures, wedding invitations, etc. from her old college days and even campaign literature from George Seiler's campaign for freshman class president. Imagine, another 80 years and that stuff would be considered antique.

Not to be left out, Turtle mentioned her dachshund's name is Peter--and yes, Turtle works for Colonial Williamsburg. Do look her up when you're in the area. Clarence (Bud) Leeds wrote in last time about his position at Simon's Rock Early College in Great Barrington, Mass. Hope all of you read the September 6, 1975 issue of Saturday Review--great article about the college. "Early" college means the college accepts capable 16-year-olds after they have completed the 10th grade--Harvard and William and Mary can now breathe easier, Bud! You had them scared for awhile. Imagine the College being the 3rd oldest instead of the 2nd--ole' Sir Christopher Wren would stand on his head.

With the new Busch Gardens in Williamsburg, motel reservations are getting even more difficult to get--for '76, be sure to write or call for your reservations several weeks in advance of next October's homecoming (October 8, 9, 10).

Virginia is the state with the most '56ers. Alaska, Arkansas, Oklahoma, Rhode Island, Wisconsin, and Wyoming have the least number of '56ers--one each. Your quiz for next time--which states (there are 3) have the second highest number of '56ers? Hint: one state is in the west; 2 in the east.

Keep continuing to make things happen. I really like to report on each of you as to what you are doing, so keep me informed. Your reporter will be starting a "Where Are You?" question in the next issue. The person or persons named has better write and let me know what they're doing--or else---

Bill Corley has been appointed hospital director at the Milton S. Hershey Medical Center of the Pennsylvania State University as of June 1. Bill and his wife, Angela, have one child.

I am very grateful to Claudy Tucker Barnes who wrote a great letter giving lots of news of W&M graduates who are in the Virginia Beach area. Claudy was enjoying the last days on the beach and had spent time with Judy Hawkins Coddling '63, and her four children who were visiting. She also had seen Karen Patrick Martin this summer who is very happy living in South Carolina and Alice Hall Horne whom she hadn't seen in ten years.

Claudy reports that 'Butch' Kitchin and wife, Jan '68, are good friends. Butch teaches physical education and coaches at Virginia Beach High School and Jan is studying at Old Dominion full-time in Library Science.

Bill Pippin is Director of Television at the innovative Plaza Junior High School and is still a bachelor.

Bob Joynt is a banker at Virginia National Bank and lives only a block away from Claudy. Bob has two children, Robert and Catherine.

Charlotte Elder Marriott has a son born last year as well as a daughter.

Claudy wrote that Susan Griggs Braman, '62 was at the beach due to the death of her father.

George Chappell, '65 and Joan were also in town on their way to being stationed in Hawaii for three years with the U.S. Army. George has completed his doctorate at Syracuse University.

Many thanks, Claudy for the column. Bill Mirguet of Newport News, Va., was promoted to Senior Vice President of First & Merchants National Bank of the Peninsula in September.

Brigitte Schmidt, '65 who is working toward a PhD in Literature at the University of California, San Diego, and is living in La Jolla.

On October 2, I worked a charter to Leningrad sponsored by The Smithsonian Institute. What a pleasant surprise to see Carolyn (Zeul) McFarlane and husband, Randall, on board! When they return from their tour to Russia, Carolyn will be finishing her PhD dissertation in sociology with Cornell. She and Randall live in Arlington. Randall (Dartmouth, '70) graduated from University of Pennsylvania Law School and is an attorney in Washington, D.C. Carolyn gave me the whereabouts of a few others in our class...

Josephine (Roberts) Gaines earned a PhD in English at University of Pennsylvania and currently teaches at Louisiana State University.

At the University of Michigan, Thomas Friedlander is earning a PhD in botany specializing in dogwoods.

Stationed at Fort Hood, Tex., with wife and son, Glen, Jr., Glen Marshall is a captain in the army.

Fred and Barbara (Waesche) Cummings are practicing law in New York City. Fred (Dartmouth, '70), and Barb earned their J.D. degree from the University of Pennsylvania in 1973.

Mary Ann (Whyte) and Tim Donoghue live in Falls Church, Va. Mary Ann teaches in Fairfax County.

In Toledo, Ohio Kathy (Netzey) and Roberto Franco announced the birth of their first child, Roberto Anthony on August 5. Roberto is an associate professor in the Department of Medicine at the Medical College of Ohio. Kathy, a resident in Pediatrics at the Medical College Hospital, received her M.D. last June. They recently moved into a fifty year old house in Toledo.

Marilyn (Koch) Quaintance, a visiting industrial psychologist for HUD, travels extensively mainly, to Boston and Chicago, to assist in the development of assessment centers to select employees. Marilyn and John (69) live in Arlington. John teaches gifted children (fourth, fifth, and sixth grades) in the Fairfax County school system. He completes his masters in educational administration this fall.

A note from Lin Stocker said that now that foxhunting season has started, again, she is in ecstasy! Lin will ride in several hunts in Northern Va., this fall.

More news via the Chi Omega Newsletter! With a view of Pike's Peak from their home, Joanne (Deacon) Ego and husband, Jim, are pleased with their move to Colorado Springs. Both earned Masters at Colorado University--Jim in Information Systems and Joanne in French. Joanne hopes to teach in a junior college.

Having settled into a large colonial house in Medford, Massachusetts, Barbara (Pate) Glacel teaches political science at Suffolk University on Beacon Hill, while preparing for her PhD exams. Husband, Bob, attends M.I.T. Both should have happy news in January, as "Junior" Glacel is expected to arrive!!

Marianne Lester bought a victorian house in D.C. where she works for an Army publication.

In September, Rhonda Curry spent several weeks in Spain.

Over the past few months, the Chi O's had quite a few birth announcements--Leslie (Wild) Frankovitch had a boy, their second child; Becky Breedan Gaeta had a girl, Laura; Kathie (Asplund) Munson had a girl, Kristina Michelle.

The Chi O's are looking for Karol Kulik and Anne Rainey Sims O'Toole.

WILLIAMSBURG, VIRGINIA 23185

NOVEMBER 1975

W&M's Endowed Scholars

Six outstanding scholars on the William and Mary faculty this year are having their salaries paid wholly or in substantial part from income on endowments now established at the College.

In each instance, the income produced by the College-held endowments is matched by funds provided by the Commonwealth of Virginia under its Eminent Scholars Fund, established in 1964 under the first administration of Governor Mills E. Godwin Jr. '36.

In addition to the six professorships now filled under the program, two other positions, recently established, are unfilled. They are the J. Edward Zollinger Professorship in Business Administration and the Dudley Woodbridge Professorship of Law. They will be filled for the 1976-77 academic term. Both were recently established by action of the Endowment Association.

Funded under the program this fall are positions in law, history, economics, English, and two in music.

In the School of Law, Dr. William F. Swindler, a legal historian of national reputation, occupies the John Marshall Professorship of Law. He is presently the only permanent faculty member named to one of the endowed professorships.

Well-known to alumni, Dr. Swindler holds five degrees including a Ph.D. in Journalism and an LL.B. He has published nine books including two that are used by a number of universities in their classes on constitutional law. Dr. Swindler is currently involved in a project that has taken him three decades to assemble: a 10-volume collection of the constitutional documents on each of the 50 states.
