Career Counseling:

A new W&M program stimulates students to think about their careers, helps them decide what direction they want to take, and then introduces them to the resources they need to accomplish their aims.

William and Mary's new director of Career Counseling hears the concerns every day from students worried about their futures.

"What can I do with a liberal arts background," they ask Harriet Reid. "Shouldn't I transfer into a more professionally-oriented field so I can get a job when I graduate?"

Ms. Reid's answer, based on conversations, travels, conferences, and interviews with professional people, is an emphatic "no."

"Professional people tell me," she says, "that they want a person who is capable of critical judgment, who can analyze, discuss, learn new concepts, and articulate their ideas -- all of the skills that a liberal education provides. Give me an employee like that, they say, and I will train him in the special skills of my profession."

Ms. Reid calls them the "functional" skills that can provide a basis for a successful career.

"They not only broaden the opportunities but they enable an individual to adapt more readily as salable skills of the moment may become obsolete or economically unrewarding later," she says.

Since she assumed her new position last summer after 10 years in the admission office at William and Mary, Ms. Reid has vastly enlarged the opportunities for students to learn about career planning.

That accomplishment has not been an easy one. William and Mary has some 4,500 undergraduates, but Career Counseling has just two employees -- the director and a secretary. Through the traditional approach of one-on-one counseling -- which still consumes a large amount of her time -- she estimates she is able to see one per cent of the student body in a year's time.

In addition, she has introduced to William and Mary a program that enlists voluntary faculty and administrative help, thus greatly enlarging the counseling service to the students.

Last fall, Miss Reid invited a specialist to the College to train some 20 faculty and administrators in the technique of leading career-planning seminars. Ultimately, the program will have a snowballing effect, with the current volunteers in the program training new volunteers.

Currently, seven of the seminars are in operation, with two volunteers leading each group. The sessions, which run two hours weekly, continue for eight weeks.

In a group setting, the seminars stimulate students to think about their careers, help them decide what direction they want to take, and then introduce them to the resources they need to accomplish their aims.

"Initially," says Miss Reid, "through specific exercises and group discussions, students are encouraged to ask and answer questions about their interests, their talents, their abilities, preferred lifestyle and work environment. They begin to see that one can have control over his life and be happier with work that meets his interests, values, and abilities, than if he selects a job of the moment.

"Subsequently, they learn the techniques to accomplish their goals. They learn what research materials to consult, what schools have the best programs, what life is like in the field they want to enter, and what the people in their field do in their jobs. Students are apprised of the current and predicted job market and encouraged to make alternate plans - to be used as needed."

In his seminar, which he leads with Helen Cam Walker '64, a colleague in the Department of History,

Harriet Reid
Director of Career Counseling

Dr. James J. Thompson works with freshmen and sophomores.

"Many of them, of course, are not thinking about jobs immediately," he says, "but the seminar has them considering their careers so they don't just fall into something later on -- something they may regret 15 to 20 years from now when it is much more difficult to make a change." As a result of the sessions, says Thompson, the students have begun the process of making decisions that most people don't make until much later in life.

Another group leader, Dr. Charles R. Toomajian Jr., director of Registration and Student Records, stresses the purpose of the groups is not to select careers for the students, but to show them the techniques of making a decision on their careers.

"It's not a cookbook approach," he says. "We won't decide their career goals for them, but we will show them how to decide and how to achieve their goals." The approach, he says, has much more long-range value.

"Their goals are constantly changing," he says, "and the techniques they learn now will help them later in life if their careers take a different direction."

Students often enter the counseling with very limited ideas of what opportunities are open to them. One who wants to go into law, for instance, may feel his career is limited to private or corporate law practice.

"We show them," says Toomajian, "that there are all kinds of career opportunities open to an individual with a background in law that do not end at a desk in a law firm."

Charlene Flanagan, a 19-year-old sophomore from Clark, N.J., agrees with that assessment. A foreign language major, she had thought in terms of graduate school and teaching as a career goal. After a few weeks in the seminar, she is thinking of the foreign service and a host of other avenues for a career.

"It's opened up a million new vistas," says Charlene who still has not settled on a definite career goal but who now knows the opportunities available and where to go to learn how to prepare for the various fields and how to learn what they are like.

Building the resource material in the Career Counseling library is one of the "biggest on-going programs" in her office, says Miss Reid, who hopes to expand the library from the traditional books and catalogs to television cassette career presenta-

Committee Named To Advise W&M On Funding Options

The formation of a prestigious Advisory Committee on Special Resources to explore ways in which William and Mary can increase its total program of support has been announced by the College.

The Committee, which includes parents, friends, and alumni of William and Mary, consists of 22 distinguished citizens representing both Virginia and national interests.

The formation of the Committee was announced at the annual meeting of the President's Council held during Charter Day weekend in February. President Thomas A. Graves, Jr. is serving as chairman of the Committee.

Warren Heemann, vice-president for College Development, told the Council that the group had been formed to "study funding options for William and Mary in a period of financial exigency and to assist the College in developing new sources of non-state support."

The College has taken steps during the 70's to further strengthen the partnership of legislators, alumni, and other friends of William and Mary to sustain the momentum of excellence of recent decades.

President Graves noted that he felt encouraged that individuals of such stature as have accepted appointment to the new committee would come together in support of the College as "it moves toward an intensified effort to increase its financial resources."

The members of the Committee on Special Resources are:

J. Bruce Bredin '36, Wilmington, Del., a member of the Board of Visitors, founder and president of the Bredin Foundation which supports secondary and higher education, and president of the Bredin Realty Co. of Wilmington.

Jean Canoles Bruce '49, Norfolk, the new president of the Board of Directors of the Society of the Alumni, and director of the Tidewater Assembly on Family Life of Norfolk.

D. Tennant Bryan, Richmond, chairman of the board of Media General, Inc., publisher of the Richmond Times-Dispatch and Richmond News Leader, and son of former William and Mary president John Stewart Byran.

R. Harvey Chappell Jr. '48, Richmond, rector of the Board of Visitors, partner in the Richmond law firm of Christian, Barton, Epps, Brent, and Chappell, and a 1950 graduate of the Marshall-Wythe School of Law.

Roy R. Charles '32, Norfolk, president of Crestwood Co. of Norfolk, former member of the Board of Visitors, and a trustee of the Endowment Assn. and a director of the School of Business Administration Sponsors, Inc.

Mrs. Walter Chrysler '42, Norfolk and New York, an art benefactor who with her husband founded the Chrysler Museum in Norfolk.

Harold L. Fowler, Williamsburg, who retired from William and Mary in 1974 after 40 years on the College faculty, the last 10 as Dean of the Faculty of Arts and Sciences.

W. Brooks George '32, Richmond, chairman of the board of Larus & Brother Co., a former rector of the Board of Visitors, a trustee of the Endowment Association and a director of the School of Business Administration Sponsors.

Arthur B. Hanson '39, Washington, D.C., prominent attorney in the law firm of Hanson, O'Brien, Birney, Stickle, and Butler, and a trustee of the Endowment Association.

Henry Clay Hofheimer II, Norfolk, chairman of the Virginia Real Estate Investment Trust, a trustee of the Endowment Association, and a director of the School of Business Administration Sponsors.

William S. Hubard '47, Roanoke, vice president and secretary of the Shenandoah Life Insurance Co. and a member of the Board of Visitors.

Carlisle H. Humelsine, Williamsburg, president of the Colonial Williamsburg Foundation and a former deputy under secretary and assistant secretary of state.

John R. L. Johnson Jr. '28, Chadds Ford, Pa., retired vice president of Hercules Inc. of Wilmington, Del., vice rector of the Board of Visitors, and a trustee of the Endowment Association.

Aubrey L. Mason '47, Lynchburg, executive vice president of Mason & Lee, an investment securities firm, former president of the Society of the Alumni, and a vice president of the Athletic Educational Foundation.

Blake T. Newton Jr. '35, Greenwich, Conn., president of the American Council of Life Insurance and a former Board of Visitors member and a trustee of the Endowment Association.

William L. Person Sr. '24, Williamsburg, president of Person Ford, Inc., and Person Motor Co., a current member of the Society of the Alumni Board of Directors, and a trustee of the Endowment Association, and a trustee of the Athletic Educational Foundation.

A. Addison Roberts '35, Rosemont, Pa., chairman of the board and chief executive officer of the Reliance Insurance Co. of Philadelphia and a trustee of the Endowment Association.

Mrs. E.A. Stephens Sr., Irvington, Va., past member of the Board of Visitors and a current trustee of the Endowment Association.

Harriet Nachman Storm '64, Hampton, Va., current secretary of the Board of Directors of the Society of the Alumni and a trustee of the Athletic Educational Foundation.

Hays T. Watkins, Cleveland, chairman, president, and chief executive officer of Chessie System, Inc., the parent company for several railroads and other businesses, and a director of the School of Business Administration Sponsors.

Walter J. Zable '37, Rancho Sante Fe, Calif., president and chairman of the board of Cubic Corp. of San Diego and a trustee emeritus of the Endowment Association.

Utility, Food, Equipment Costs Soar

Inflation Forces Innovation by College

By Marjorie Healy

"It's a volatile thing," says James J. Connolly, the assistant director of buildings and grounds at William and Mary. "We set up the budget two years in advance, then the price changes come in, and we realize that we aren't going to make it."

Connolly's woes are familiar to any university official who has had to cope with the devastating effects of inflation during the past two years. At William and Mary, it poses the dilemma of trying to maintain a high quality academic program in the face of rising prices and fixed budgetary resources.

The most numbing cost increases have come in electricity. In 1974-75, the College budgeted $250,406 for electricity on its 1200-acre campus. In 1976-77, that cost will go to $733,666, nearly a 300 per cent increase in two years.

But that's not all. The cost of fuel oil has gone up too, although William and Mary, through an energy conservation program, actually decreased its outlay for fuel oil between 74-75 and 75-76. Altogether, the cost of utilities (electricity, heat, water, sewage) will increase in 1976-77 to $1,352,565, from $890,362 in 74-75.

In addition, the cost increases came when the College could least afford them. At a time when utility bills were skyrocketing, the Commonwealth of Virginia asked state agencies to return 5 percent of their budgets to the state -- because inflation had increased statewide costs, the recession had reduced revenues to the state treasury, and the Commonwealth foresaw a deficit that, it was by law, prohibited from accruing.

The factors sent administrators in the Buildings and Grounds department hustling for ways to save money. They installed shower flow control valves in the shower heads of student residences; placed signs in buildings reminding people to shut off lights when rooms were not in use; shut off in certain student residences every other corridor light fixture; repaired leaking water taps and valves, and reduced to a minimum the number of boilers used to satisfying heating demand.

In addition, the College introduced a new schedule over Christmas and the New Year's break. The College entirely shut down the residence halls from Dec. 21, 1975, through Jan. 13, 1976, and it sent its employees home for the week of Dec. 21 through Dec. 28, shifting other State holidays to that period so that the heat and electricity for the administrative buildings could be reduced. As a result, the College saved nearly $15,000 over the comparable period of a year ago, and the savings would have been higher except for unusually cold weather during the first 10 days of January.

If buildings and grounds has trouble making allocations match utility costs, other areas of the College feel the crunch too. Since 1970; for instance, food prices for Crotty Brothers, which feeds the College's 1800 boarding students, have tripled, according to Philip O'Doherty, food service director.

Some specific examples: jello, which sold for 32 cents a pound in 1970, now costs 95 cents a pound; eggs have gone from 37 cents a dozen to 56 cents; chicken from 35 cents a pound to 56 cents; ham from 78 cents a pound to $1.49; ketchup (10 lb. can) from 89 cents to $2.19, and tuna fish from $2.92 per can to $4.74.

O'Doherty said inflation jumped from 5-6 per cent in 1973 to 12 per cent annually in 1974-75. Since budgets are set up to a year in advance and nobody had forecast the big rise in 74-75, Crotty Brothers was caught in a bind. "We really took it on the chin," says O'Doherty. Prices have since leveled off and budget adjustments have been made so that some cost increases have been passed onto the students in higher board fees.

He has taken cost savings measures as well, substituting sugar pourers for individual packets, working to eliminate over production, and soliciting bids from additional suppliers.

The measures have enabled Crotty to keep down the board fees to students. While food costs have skyrocketed, board fees since 1970 have increased only 18 per cent - from $275 a semester to $325 in five years.

W.T. Allen, director of purchases and stores, fights many of the same battles in buying supplies for the College. He estimates, for instance, that inflation has raised the total overall cost to the College for office supplies, janitorial supplies, and other stock items by 10 per cent from 1974 to 1975 - or more than $15,000. And, says Allen, that's an improvement from the 1974 increase of 15-20 per cent over 1973.

Equipment has been among the worst inflationary areas. Allen says typewriters, for example, cost about $100 a piece more than they did two years ago. Classroom items such as microscopes have experienced the same increases.

Gasoline and telephone costs are two other problems. Gasoline for state agencies such as William and Mary went from approximately 14 cents a gallon in 1973 to nearly 26 cents a gallon this year. Telephone charges ballooned from $6600 in a given month in 1973 to $10,045 in a comparable month in 1975.

Fortunately, the budgetary powers in Richmond recognized the pressures this year and recommended a sizeable increase for utilities purchases. Administrators like Connolly, however, have no misconceptions that they can let down their guard.

"We plan to continue our conservation measures," he says.

tions and recorded interviews for students. The expansion has been greatly assisted by an $1800 gift from the parent of a William and Mary student.

One ambitious program has Career Counseling filming for TV cassette presentation role-playing sessions on such important job-hunting skills as resume writing and job-interviewing. Unfortunately, the office is still unable to afford the necessary television equipment on which to play the cassettes, but when it is available,

Alumni Give to Library

Donald M. Sweig, '73, has recently given the Paschall Library the book he co-authored with Kenton Kilmer, The Fairfax Family in Fairfax County.

Another new addition to the library is the book George Wythe of Williamsburg, by Joyce Blackburn.

G. Louis Carner, '34, forwarded to the Alumni House a delightful and interesting collection of memorabilia from the William and Mary Flight School, including a propeller, flight helmet and goggles, and other articles and photographs. This material will provide a basis for an article in an upcoming issue of the Alumni Gazette.

Other alumni who wish to share remembrances of the early Flight School, or who have photographs or other materials connected with the School, are encouraged to contact the Society of the Alumni, Post Office Box GO, Williamsburg, Virginia 23185.

Miss Reid hopes to have a considerable file built up.

In another unusual program, she has initiated a series of interviews with successful alumni who talk about their fields and how to prepare for careers in them. The interviews are recorded for the library, and students can either listen to them or read the transcripts. One interview, with Elsie Powell, a law graduate of William and Mary, member of the Board of Visitors, and now a U.S. attorney, has been completed, and a second, with Joyce Stoner '69, on the staff of the Virginia Museum of Fine Arts, is underway.

The alumni interviews tie in with an additional element of the overall career counseling program -- introducing students to individuals with successful professional careers.

"We hope alumni will let our students spend a day or a week with them, following them around, learning exactly what goes on in their profession," she says.

The Counseling office is already plugged into a College program that accomplishes that purpose on a smaller scale. Students have access to a group of special advisors -- faculty and professional people in the Williamsburg community -- who answer their questions and advise them on such careers as architecture, engineering, law, journalism, the ministry, forestry, and landscaping.

That program and the other innovations help Miss Reid accomplish what she sees as the purpose of her office -- bridge-building from an educational institution into the professions.

Nominating Committee Named

A five-member committee to receive and screen suggestions for nominations to the Board of Directors of the Society of the Alumni has been appointed by President Jean Canoles Bruce.

Mrs. Bruce named the following to the committee: J.W. Hornsby, Jr., '50, Newport News, Virginia, Chairman; Mrs. Suzanne Garrett Montague, '25, Hampton, Virginia; R. Bradshaw Pulley, '39, Virginia Beach, Virginia; Mrs. Ann Terrell Garrett, '40, Irvington, Virginia; Raymond T. Waller, '40, Richmond, Virginia.

From all of the names suggested, the Committee will select 10 candidates for five positions on the Board. The names of the nominees will be published in the May issue of The Alumni Gazette. Election will be held by mail during late summer, and the winners will be announced at Homecoming in the fall.

Alumni wishing to recommend names for nominations should send them either to J.W. Hornsby, Jr., 210 Dogwood Drive, Newport News, Virginia 23606, or to Mrs. Bruce at the Society of the Alumni, Box GO, Williamsburg, Virginia 23185. Suggestions should be accompanied by a short written statement of support.

Alumni may also be nominated by petition signed by a minimum of 50 contributors to The William and Mary Fund. Only contributors to the Fund are eligible to vote.

 ON THE THEME
"COLONIAL AMERICA"

WALK THE STREETS OF WILLIAMSBURG, RECHARGE YOUR INTELLECTUAL BATTERIES WITH AN EXCITING WEEK OF LECTURES, SEMINARS, DISCUSSION GROUPS, FIELD TRIPS, ETC. ON ASPECTS OF COLONIAL LIFE AND THOUGHT DURING THIS BICENTENNIAL YEAR.

Program Outline

Each day will begin with a general session and lecture by one of the Colonial Williamsburg collection of experts followed by small group in-depth tours conducted by knowledgeable professional hostesses.

Afternoon sessions will consist of lectures, panel presentations and group discussions by members of the William and Mary faculty on such topics as religion, education, science, theater and the arts of the 18th Century.

Evening programs are planned and are optional, including movies of colonial life and skills, and a concert of 18th century organ music in the Wren Chapel. The opening buffet and the closing Colonial Feast, replete with 18th Century entertainment, are the only evening meal commitments. All other evenings you are free to enjoy your choice of Williamsburg's fine restaurants. Your room will be available through the weekend until July 4 at no extra charge.

Advance readings will be assigned to better prepare enrollees for the experiences awaiting them. It is the hope of the Alumni College staff that each person will be interested in participating so that they will benefit from this unique experience in a unique setting during this very special time in the history of this nation.

President and Mrs. Graves will host a reception for the "College Students" at the President's House (1732) on Wednesday evening, June 30.

Athletic and recreational facilities of the College will be available during free period times for children and adults. The Alumni College staff will assist in obtaining reservations in local eating establishments and at other tourist attractions.

Accommodations

Accommodations are designed to provide an inexpensive vacation for the entire family. Most portions of the program will be available by foot. Rooms and suites will be in Dupont

Dormitory and fees include linen service and medical fee for the College infirmary. Breakfast Monday through Friday and Lunch Monday through Thursday will be in College dining facilities.

Children's Programs

A program for children of alumni attending will be organized around the interests and ages of those children enrolled. Such activities as a tour of the Powell-Waller house in the restored area, the college greenhouse, a fossil hunt, several field trips, and an athletic recreational program, will be coordinated by the Childrens Program Director, and will coordinate with the adult program where convenient and appropriate. Only children between 7 and 18 will be accepted.

Registration and Fees

Reservations will be limited to 100 adults and all applications will be accepted after March 1, with some considerations being given to age and geographic distribution as necessary and if possible. This will allow all alumni to receive the Alumni Gazette and make application.

To register complete the tear-off form below and return with deposit or full payment.

The registration fee covers room, breakfasts and lunches, opening buffet and reception, Colonial Feast and reception, linen service, and all course materials except for books on the suggested reading list.

Colonial Williamsburg admissions tickets good for 25 visits to buildings are included in fees.

Classroom supplies, films, faculty honoraria, bus transportation and a special gift to the College are included in fees.

Adult resident (staying in Dormitory)	$195.00
Commuter Adult	$180.00
Child (Age 7 - 18 only will be enrolled)	$175.00

An enrollment deposit of $100.00 per person is required.

Norfolk Columnist Comments on Morpurgo Book First It Was the Feast, Now It's W&M

Reprinted by permission of the Norfolk Virginian-Pilot

Doggonit. Virginia has done it again, laid claim to another of New England's firsts! The dust scarcely has settled over John J. Wicker's proclamation in 1958 from Richmond that Virginia, not Massachusetts, was the scene of the first Thanksgiving.

And now a history of the College of William and Mary's first two centuries asserts that the college in Williamsburg is older than Harvard University in Cambridge.

Customarily, William and Mary has been designated the second oldest college in the United States and ninth in the seniority in the English-speaking world.

But Dr. Jack E. Morpurgo, professor of American studies at the University of Leeds, England, finds the beginning of William and Mary's life story "earlier than has previously been accepted."

Therefore, he writes, "it is with glee that is not entirely impartial—if with a due sense of the historian's responsibility—that we move the college one place higher in both tables of precedence, asserting boldly that William and Mary is the oldest college in the United States and the eighth in the English-speaking world."

Not only that, he contends that towards the end of the 19th Century William and Mary's claim was conceded when Thomas Wentworth Higginson, writing as Harvard's laureate, opened his poem "Harvard's Greeting to William and Mary" with the line: "Thou earliest college of our native land . . ."

Morpurgo's history, "Their Majesties' Royall College," covers William and Mary's progress through the 17th and 18th centuries. Handsomely bound in green and gold simulated leather, profusely illustrated with color and black and white photographs, the book was distributed to alumni at Charter Day ceremonies February 8. A second printing will go on sale publicly in a month or so at $25 a copy.

The Charter Day gathering in Williamsburg was celebrating the date in 1693 when King

William and Queen Mary approved in London a charter authorizing establishment of "a certain place of universal Study . . . consisting of one President, six Masters or Professors, and one hundred Scholars, more or less . . ."

But Morpurgo carries the origins to an earlier time and ruler when King James I in 1617 directed the archbishops of the Church of England to call upon bishops to take up collections in all parishes for the purposes of educating and converting the Indians in the New World.

In Virginia the order was translated into plans to build a school for white youths at Charles City and one for Indians at Henrico and a college for both at Henrico, 80 miles up the James River from Jamestown.

By June 14, 1619, the University of Henrico had what amounted to a board of trustees, and in less than a year a work force of 100 men, sent from England, had begun building homes on college lands, and probably two buildings, one for the rector of the College and one to house a school for the settlers' children, "the first academic buildings in British North America."

In London July 3, 1622, the Rev. Joseph Copland, a missionary and educator, was appointed rector of the University at Henrico.

Meanwhile, work on the college had been slowed by the Indian massacre of Good Friday, March 22, and then events in England halted its growth.

In 1624 King James annulled the Virginia Company's charter and made Virginia a royal colony; but James died in 1625, and his successor, King Charles, was too busy trying unsuccessfully to save his throne and his head to worry about the college in Henrico. Following Charles I, Oliver Cromwell would do nothing to further the college founded by the Church of England, so the experiment in Henrico collapsed and the buildings fell into ruins. A petition by the General Assembly in 1660 failed to revive plans for a college.

Nevertheless it is at Henrico that Morpurgo finds the roots of William and Mary.

In tracing the origins, the British historian corresponded with the Rev. George J. Cleaveland of Richmond, registrar of the Diocese of Virginia, who has made his own investigations into the University at Henrico.

"William and Mary is not the oldest college in point of construction, but it is the oldest in point of intent," the Rev. Mr. Cleaveland said recently. "It was planned before Harvard was even dreamed of."

For years Dr. Cleaveland has urged the state to sponsor excavations of the site at Farrar's Island 10 miles below Richmond near the north bank of the James. Originally it was joined to the mainland by a small neck of land.

More than 60 years after that start, Commissary James Blair, a contentious Scottish clergyman who became the Virginia representative of the bishop of London, journeyed to London to seek support for a college from King William and Queen Mary. While waiting months for royal grants of funds and land, he persuaded three pirates, each hoping for pardon, to share their loot with the college, and acquired as well a part of English scientist Robert Boyle's legacy.

In guiding the college for 50 years as president, Commissary Blair forced three of the king's governors out of office. He built well. The college became a training ground for revolutionaries.

Thomas Jefferson said that William Small, the college's professor of natural philosophy, "fixed the destinies of my life." John Marshall received his only formal study in law from William and Mary's George Wythe.

The colorful, fact-packed story appears just as William and Mary is preparing to move its Marshall-Wythe School of Law to a site with the proposed National Center for State Courts, an expansion that will add new luster to the old college first or second in the nation.

Reminder To Reunion Year Alumni:

Questionnaires for the 1976 Colonial Re-Echo class directories have been sent to alumni in the classes of 1931, 1936, 1941, 1946, 1951, 1956, 1961, 1966, and 1971. Please complete the forms and return them to the Alumni Office no later than March 15, 1976. If you have not received a questionnaire and are a member of one of the reunion classes, please contact Joan Harrigan '75, Director of Class Activities, Society of the Alumni, PO Box 60, Williamsburg, Virginia 23185 or call 804-229-7545.

ment play the Indians defeated Furman, the defending conference champion, 70-57, and advanced to the second round in Greenville, S.C., against the Richmond Spiders.

Throughout the season, the Indians were led by sophomore John Lowenhaupt, one of the finest all around players in the conference. The 6-5 forward, from Forest Hills, N.Y., led the Tribe in scoring (16.4), rebounding (6.5), assists (80), steals (56) field goals percentage (52.0) and free throw percentage (79.1).

Lowenhaupt was joined by Ron Satterthwaite (16.2 points per game), who, after shaking a mid-season injury and some personal problems, played brilliantly down the stretch for the Indians.

Post season honors were accorded both Lowenhaupt and Satterthwaite as the two standouts were selected to the first and second team All Conference respectively.

William and Mary's track team won both the State Intercollegiate Indoor Track Meet and the Southern Conference Track Meet again this year.

The Tribe won the State meet for the seventh consecutive year and the Southern Conference championship for the 11th consecutive year.

Tribe Track Coach John Randolph was named coach of the year in both meets. Drexel George, the Indians' 280-lb. weight man, was named the outstanding performer in the State Track Meet.

William and Mary's gymnastics team captured its second State Championship in a row this year, setting a scoring record in the process.

The Indians totalled 179.35 points and were led by Mason Tokarz who won five individual titles, setting records in four of the events.

W&M Admissions Questions —And The Answers—

Why does the Office of Admissions at William & Mary wait to notify applicants on April 1, which is later than some other colleges?

We have a selective admissions policy which means that all applicants have to be considered on a relative basis in order to select those with the strongest credentials. This contrasts with some other institutions that have what is known as "rolling admissions." This generally means that the institution has established minimum requirements and students who meet these are admitted in order of the receipt of applications. There are a number of other factors which result in us having to withhold notification until April 1. Some of these are:

1. All applicants are reviewed by at least two members of the professional admissions staff. This procedure provides a fair evaluation of all applicants, but it does require a great deal of time to complete this process, because we annually receive more than 5,000 applications.

2. Many students now apply for admission later than they used to apply. For instance, between January 1, and February 1 (which is our recommended date for applying) of this year, we received 2,128 applications. This places a heavy burden on our clerical and professional staff after the first of the year.

3. Many applicants take the tests of the College Entrance Examination Board in January and these scores are not normally received until late February.

4. The first semester grades for the senior year in secondary school are usually not available until late January or early February. In some cases this information is a factor in the final decision on the application.

5. In reviewing applicants, some immediately stand out as ones that we would obviously admit or deny admission. However, past experience has indicated that it is very difficult to notify some applicants without notifying others, since this inevitably leads to phone calls and letters inquiring as to why such applicants have not been notified. Time consumed in answering these inquiries would slow the Admissions process even further.

Explain the effect of Early Decision on Admissions.

We hope that those applicants with strong educational credentials who have decided that William and Mary is their first choice will apply for Early Decision, under which process students are notified by December 1. This, of course, reduces problems with early deadlines.

Why don't colleges have similar deadlines for declaring enrollment intentions?

In the past, we have attempted to encourage our colleagues at other colleges to abide by what is known as the Candidates' Reply Date (currently set at May 1). This is an agreement sponsored by the College Entrance Examination Board which stipulates that colleges will allow applicants to have until May 1 to hear from other colleges and to make enrollment decisions before they will be required to pay a deposit. Unfortunately, in this time of competition for students, some colleges choose not to follow this procedure and request admitted students to pay an early deposit. This procedure obviously creates a real problem for individual applicants who are waiting to hear from their first-choice college. The only suggestion we can

The theme of history took on added significance at the 1976 Charter Day celebration at Phi Beta Kappa Hall in February, honoring the 283rd anniversary of William and Mary's founding. In addition to a salute to the nation's Bicentennial in an address by British Ambassador Sir Peter Ramsbotham, the assemblage saw Jack E. Morpurgo '38 present the first copy of the special limited edition volume of "Their Majesties' Royall Colledge," a historical account of William and Mary in the 17th and 18th centuries.

Dr. Morpurgo, the first British graduate of William and Mary since the Revolutionary period and a professor of American literature at the University of Leeds, England, presented the volume to President Graves, concluding five years of writing and research on the project, which was sponsored by the Endowment Association under the direction of Arthur B. Hanson '39 of Washington, D.C. The volume is now being shipped to more than 4,600 alumni, parents, students, and friends who subscribed to its publication.

In addition to the Ambassador's address (see full text in this issue of Gazette) and the Morpurgo presentation, Governor Mills E. Godwin Jr. '36 addressed the audience. He noted that the ties between Britain and America are needed more than ever, "because the system of government which English-speaking people have refined is today the hope... for the preservation of a society based on the worth of the individual rather than the worth of a group or of the state itself."

The Charter Day program also included the presentation of the Marshall-Wythe School of Law Medallion to former Watergate special prosecutor Leon Jaworski, past president of the American Bar Association.

The annual Thomas Jefferson awards honoring two William and Mary faculty went to Dr. R. Wayne Kernodle, professor of sociology, and Dr. Alan E. Fuchs, associate professor of philosophy.

Dr. Kernodle received the Thomas Jefferson Award for "qualities which Thomas Jefferson would have conceived as essential to the intellectual, social, and political advancement of mankind."

Dr. Fuchs received the Thomas Jefferson Teaching Award made annually to a younger faculty member "who has demonstrated... the inspiration and stimulation of learning to the betterment of the individual and his society as exemplified by Thomas Jefferson."

'Taking Strength From History'

Charter Day Address by Sir Peter Ramsbotham
British Ambassador to the United States,
February 7, 1976, Phi Beta Kappa Hall, College of William and Mary.

I am deeply honoured that this venerable College of William and Mary has elected to award me an Honorary Doctorate of Law. It is with the greatest pleasure that I now address you as fellow members of the College. In accepting this distinction from your Royal College, Mr. President, I do so as the representative of a sovereign and of a People who look back, over the centuries, to an association with Virginia and this place of learning with affection, with gratitude and with a sense of the history which binds us all.

This is indeed a special year for America and for the Anglo-American relationship. And it is a special privilege to be the British Ambassador to the United States in this, the year of your Bicentenary; and to be called upon to deliver the Charter Day address, on the two hundred and eighty-third anniversary of the granting of the Charter of the College.

But, more than that, I come here today as a precursor. The finest of the British Bicentennial contributions, and the symbol of our lasting affection for this country and for this Commonwealth of Virginia, will be the State Visit which Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth and Her husband, Prince Philip, will be paying to the United States, as the guests of your President, in July of this year - nearly twenty years since their first visit as the guests of President Eisenhower.

To mark this occasion today, in which you honour Her Ambassador, The Queen has commanded me to convey Her warm greetings to the College and to say that She recalls with pleasure Her happy visit to Williamsburg and to this College in 1957; and that She and her husband greatly look forward to Their visit this summer to the United States and to Virginia - which perhaps I may still call affectionately, and not, I hope, too anachronistically, Her 'Loyal South'. She will be going to Charlottesville on 10 July, and will visit the University whose founder, Thomas Jefferson, was perhaps the most distinguished of your many distinguished alumni.

"There was indeed an American War of Independence, but not, I submit, an American Revolution. . . . I would suggest that yours was a rebellion, a rebellion of Englishmen against the State; a civil war if you like, but one in which the contenders on both sides had all been nurtured in the same traditions."

This year, of course, the American Bicentenary gives The Queen the opportunity to repair a striking omission in our history. For reasons which I cannot quite recall now, George III was not invited to be present at the birth of the United States. Yet you can hardly say that he disclaimed paternity, for at an interview with John Adams, then the American Minister accredited to the Court of St. James, soon after the end of the War, King George III said: "I was the last to consent to the separation; but the separation having been made, I have always said, and I will say now, that I shall be the first to meet the friendship of the United States as an independent power."

Many people have asked me why we in Britain should also be celebrating what the great nineteenth century historian, Macaulay, called "the imprudence and the obstinacy which broke the ties binding the North American colonies to the parent state". President Ford asked me a similar question, shortly after we had met together last April, on the Old 'Rude' Bridge at Concord, Massachusetts, to celebrate the two hundredth anniversary of Paul Revere's ride. I was able to assure him on that occasion that we had no hard feelings; and that we felt no embarrassment in joining you in the celebration of one of our defeats - being so few in our history, they were that much more memorable.

But let me clear away one persisting myth. There was indeed an American War of Independence, but not -- and perhaps I can say this only in Virginia -- but not, I submit, an American Revolution. Revolutions are singular things: we recall the French Revolution of 1789 and the Russian Revolution of 1917. But in your case, a revolution of that kind did not really occur. There was no class upheaval; there was no overturning of social or economic values; there was no universal burning desire for a new political system. Benjamin Franklin could still say to William Pitt as late as 1774: "I have never heard from anyone, drunk or sober, the least expression of a wish for separation."

How, then, did the English colonists come to turn against their parent country? They sought independence because it seemed to them to be the only way in which they could maintain their rights as Britons, and fulfill the very ideals which had inspired - and would continue to inspire - the people of Britain, in the search for a more representative and democratic type of parliamentary government and for the full expression of the freedom of the individual under law. You were seeking then to claim no more than the liberties and the balances between the individual and the state which had been evolved, painfully, over more than 500 years of the history of England. From the time of Magna Carta onwards, no-one has been so strong a defender of his own liberty, his peace and his independence as an Englishman. So I would suggest that yours was a rebellion, a rebellion of Englishmen against the State; a civil war if you like, but one in which the contenders on both sides had all been nurtured in the same traditions. Indeed, as President Ford said to the Virginia Assembly only a week ago, the founding of an independent America was an act of political faith, a promise of self-government and freedom, principles long cherished by the British. It was not an act of political rejection.

Why, then, did the conflict come? Every Englishman respects his neighbour's right to freedom and privacy. Edmund Burke put it well in 1775: "An Englishman is the unfittest person on earth to argue another Englishman into slavery." Winston Churchill, of course, with his tongue very much in his cheek, suggested an answer. It is when a foreigner encroaches upon the Englishman's independence that the fur really starts flying. England, he suggested, was ruled at that time by a king of foreign stock - a German. King George III failed to understand the passionate feelings of his people in the distant colonies. He felt obliged to send troops to keep discipline, mainly Prussian and Hessian mercenaries. And so, you see, it became a war between the English and the Germans. And the English won.

In fact, King George III has been much maligned. I commend to your attention a recent scholarly biography of that king, by John Brooke; which I think helps to dispel the popular image of a mad, senile king, a byword for incompetence and stupidity, and pilloried, as you remember, in the Declaration of Independence as 'unfit to be the ruler of a free people'.

He was, I suggest, a humane and conscientious sovereign, who has good claim to be the most cultured monarch to have sat upon the throne of Great Britain up to that time. He was not the ageing figure that American patriots then suggested. He was younger by six years than George Washington, and it was not until thirty years later that he did become too ill to govern. Perhaps it is fitting that the foreword to this new biography has been written by HRH Prince Charles, the heir to the British throne, whose own researches have convinced him that George III has been unfairly treated in the history text books; that he was, on the contrary, a man almost over-dedicated to his duty and the defence of the British constitution, as he saw it. His cardinal error was that he failed to retain the American colonies and, in the search for a scapegoat for this disaster, George III became the obvious target.

"I believe that a major cause of the accumulation of grievances amongst the colonists was a lack of communication--of diplomacy, if you like."

---

Mr. President, I believe that a major cause of the accumulation of grievances amongst the colonists was a lack of communication - of diplomacy, if you like. The King and his Ministers misunderstood badly how widespread were the passions, were the feelings of loyalty amongst his American subjects. They wished to partake more, not less, in the central government. If George III had been able to undertake a Royal tour of the American colonies in the early 1770's, as his descendant will be making this year, I believe that the leaders of the colonies would have understood him better, and he certainly them. Misunderstandings, sometimes accidental misunderstandings, on such a scale, could not arise today. They would at least be muted by the telegram and the telephone, or resolved by personal meetings.

Yet the reason for the greater degree of understanding between peoples in our era is not simply that governments are now able to talk to each other on a daily basis. We must also remember the significant contributions made by non-official bodies and the international channels of communication between them; by the contacts between businessmen, between students and tourists; by the cross-fertilisation of ideas, borne in one place and spread throughout an interested world.

"Mr. President, throughout your Bicentenary, the people of Britain will be with you, focussing on the events of the last two hundred years, on the endurance and the determination of the young nation. . . ."

I can think of no finer, or longer established, example of such productive inter-exchange between our two countries, than this College of William and Mary. You have preserved, with affection and with enthusiasm, the strength of the Anglo-American connection. I am indebted to my friend, Professor Morpurgo (who, as you know, can claim with pride to be the first British graduate of William and Mary since the Revolution), for the observation that the College and its alumni, even in the early days of independence, never succumbed to any anti-British feelings; but remained loyal to the tradition of cultural independence. Of all the colonial colleges, only yours has retained its loyal name, and I gather, too, that despite your comparatively small student enrollment, you have in Britain a chapter of alumni larger than any other American university or college.

As an Oxford man, I am gratified to note that the College was, in its early days, much influenced by Oxford (whereas that 'other place' near Boston has stronger ties with a lesser-known British university). Most of the Colonial Presidents of your College came from Oxford - indeed before your Charter of 1693 there were, I am told, moves to call the College 'Academia Virginensis et Oxoniensis'.

I recognise here many of the qualities of my own University. It is a joy again to be in a place that has seen generations of students graduate - some to go on to great careers, while others, who never achieved fame or fortune, were nonetheless better people for having spent a few years in an academic institution which can proudly call itself the Alma Mater of a nation.

Looking, as I have been able, at the beauty of your buildings and their setting - the Christopher Wren house is, for me, especially evocative - and sensing the atmosphere here of peaceful, yet powerful, learning, I easily recall the disturbing enchantment of my own Oxford college, Magdalen, before the Second World War. I remember one lovely summer evening when my father, a very serious man, Minister of Education in the British Cabinet, visited me in my rooms overlooking the 15th century cloisters; and enquired, rather seriously, what I wanted to do by way of a career. I thought hard, I loved him dearly and wished to give him a truthful answer, and replied: "I should like to retire."

Even though I do not regret that I have had a more active life, outside those cloisters, I am in sympathy with King James I when he said: "Were I not a King, I would be an Oxford man." In America, quite clearly, had one not been a revolutionary - or, perhaps should I say, a rebel - one would surely have wished to be a 'William and Mary man'. I have noted, for instance, in your booklet giving the Vital Facts about the College of William and Mary, the evidence of a truly Oxonian involvement in the events of 1776: the only entry for that year in your Chronology reads as follows: "Phi Beta Kappa, the first American inter-collegiate Greek letter fraternity, was founded by students of the college." That is all. No mention of the Declaration of Independence. Kings and presidents may come and go, but the world stops without fraternities.

Mr. President, throughout your Bicentenary, the people of Britain will be with you, focussing on the events of the last two hundred years, on the endurance and the determination of the young nation; on the frontier spirit, the self-reliance and the drive which opened up the whole vast continent; on the consolidation of one nation after a bitter struggle; on the emergence of that sleeping giant who came to play the decisive role in two world wars; on the unprecedented technological achievements made possible by the accumulation of great wealth; and on the compassionate idealism which has informed this country's assumption of her responsibility as a global power.

But we must also now be looking into the future, into this new era of the last quarter of the twentieth century, which will surely bring some startling changes. We must re-examine the role of government in a free society, to ensure that democracy flourishes in an age where government is becoming increasingly complex, and pervasive. We have to find the solution to that very difficult equation: how to strike the right balance between the need for vigorous, productive growth in a mixed economy, and the insistent demands for more equality and social justice in our societies. We have to consider how the ideals of those who signed the Declaration of Independence, and which inspired so many other nations to seek their freedoms, can best be preserved in a world now where inequalities of national wealth are the greatest irritant to international relations.

For us in the West, the survival of democracy is the most crucial question. The great advances made by science have provided the means to achieve material prosperity and profitable communication on a global scale. Yet the dignity of the individual, which a truly democratic form of government can bestow on a man, or a woman, is no longer assured for many who have it, or more within the reach of those who have not. Democracies today are in a minority around the world: the constituency of freedom is diminishing.

Perhaps communication - universally shared knowledge - brings as many problems as blessings. Certainly envy and intolerance are not born from ignorance. And people become less self-sufficient if they feel, through awareness of everything that is going on around them, that they are only small elements in a great mass. Yet tolerance and involvement are essential ingredients in a thriving democracy.

Young people today, I think, may well feel that they are entering a forbidding world. Throughout the Western nations, there is a sense of uncertainty; a malaise, if you like; an anxiety that the institutions of democracy, as we have known them, will not be able to bear the strains of the complex problems besetting the modern world. And I sense, too, a change in the attitude of the younger generation, in your country and in mine reflected especially in the media.

Every new generation regards the values and achievements of its elders with a critical eye, and most are convinced that they can do better. That is healthy. But now I detect a certain lack of trust, a lack of respect, here and in Britain, which is not quite so typical of previous generations. They decline to give the benefit of the doubt to 'established' authority - of almost any kind - whether it be government or universities, parents or whatever. And too there is a greater sense of confusion. Young people are not so sure, even in the confidence of youth, that they can make the world a better place, or that they can bring up their children into a joyful life.

There is also, I believe, a growing disillusionment (if that is not too strong a word) with materialism in our societies. Many of us today would agree with Benjamin Franklin that, "contentedness makes poor men rich and discontent makes rich men poor". And there are many discontented people in the rich countries of the world.

And yet perhaps the very realisation of this discontent, and of these doubts, can lead to a recasting of our faith in the future.

There are deep, very deep, social problems. There are very difficult economic problems. Governments will have to take painful and unpopular decisions over the next few years. We shall certainly have to adjust our expectations of an ever-improving standard of living. But I believe that we can face such tasks; I believe that our people are prepared to accept a considerable degree of sacrifice, provided that it seems fair, provided that they have confidence in their leadership, and provided that they know what they are being asked to sacrifice and why.

Let us use the period of the Bicentenary to stand back and take a look at where we are going, from a wider perspective. We believe in the ideals of those who gathered in Philadelphia 200 years ago, but can we honestly say that we share their passionate involvement in what they were achieving? Our countries are older now and more solidly established; but the dangers they face are greater. For all the comforts of our often sedentary lives, do not imagine that we are no longer pioneers: we in Britain are - we always have been. And you certainly share our heritage.

"We believe in the ideals of those who gathered in Philadelphia 200 years ago, but can we honestly say that we share their passionate involvement in what they were achieving?"

We are searching now, beginning to, for a new framework in which to manage the increasingly complicated problems of national and international affairs. The world is changing, faster than we realise, and the importance of national boundaries is lessening. We are coming to realise more clearly that our inter-dependence, of which we hear so much spoken now a days, is a political and economic fact.

Governments and individuals, companies and institutions, are too quick, in my judgment, to count the cost of inter-dependence, in terms of less protected trade, greater military commitments abroad, surrender of national identity and increasing diplomatic complications. But this is not a 'take now, pay later' scheme. We are constructing something new: a robust but flexible structure within which strong defence, expanding trade, aid for the less well-off and the rapid progress of science and technology can all be generated at a less than exorbitant cost to our pockets and to our freedom.

None of this can be achieved without energy, tolerance and inventiveness. For some, the temptation to despair is strong. But echoing the words of Governor Godwin, I should like to point to one thing of which younger people here today may not be so conscious as were my own generation. Our two countries, rich in past experience, represent a structure of stability on which the free world can base its hopes for the future. Our long association, our shared wisdom, our deep respect for law and liberty, provide a fund of strength. You as the younger, more youthful, more powerful, and the more resourceful partner, now carry the main responsibility on your shoulders.

So retain your confidence in this great nation. Do not neglect the fact that America is the leader of the Western world; and we shall be looking to some of the present members of this college to lead us, in the years to come, to the assurance of a more contented life.

Mr. President, you have done me a great honour in inviting me to this ceremony today. I leave with you my best wishes for the future success and prosperity of the College of William and Mary. And to those who will be graduating from here, I wish courage, adventure and good fortune.

news and send her our love.

Remember dear ole Dr. King, our school doctor? Marjorie has pictures of him and some of the old buildings of the College. She says if I think anyone would be interested, she will bring them along for our 1976 Homecoming. Yes, by all means do, Marjorie. What sweet memories will be awakened! Thank you for this offer.

Marjorie also tells us she is making reservations for Homecoming 1976. That's a great idea. Why don't we all get busy and do likewise!!

I so admire alumni who keep up with other alumni. Rose Vipond writes that she has identified one of the "unlocated classmates", Anna Gladys Hudson. That's good news, Rose. Anna attended the public schools of Norfolk and graduated in our class at the College. She is Mrs. Charles E. Milteer. Her husband is a retired engineer. They have a son, Everett, who has three children and a daughter, Dorothy (known to friends and family as Dottie) who has two children. Anna has been very prominent in educational circles in Norfolk, having taught in Granby High and is also well known in civic organizations and religious work. She and her husband reside at 503 Talbot Hall Road, Norfolk, Va. 23505.

Rose has also located F. Francis Harris who has been on the "unlocated classmate" listing. She believes the name is Frances (with an "e") and attended the College from September 1921-June 1922. She is presently Mrs. William F. Lyle and they live at 1311 Surrey Crescent, Norfolk, Va. 23508. They have three sons, all graduates of the University of Virginia.

Rose, we thank you for this invaluable information. Now we know whom to set on the trail of "missing persons." I am passing these addresses to the Alumni Office and know they will be grateful.

Ruth Wynne Lee is back at her home in Florida, enjoying the good ole Florida sunshine and taking a "dip" every day. Each day, from all accounts, her calendar is filled. One daughter and her husband and family visited her during the holidays.

Elizabeth and Eddie Islin had a delightful weekend at Mid-Pines, N.C., the first of December. They and three other couples made the trip. The men golfed and played Gin Rummy while the girls shopped and played Bridge - "a very restful vacation" she says. They spent the holidays with Betty, their daughter, and family and wrote, "we so enjoyed being with our grandchildren and just relaxing." They concluded by saying - "A very good New Year to all of our Classmates."

Jessie and Swanson Smith write from Hillsville, Va., "We are having real winter up our way - just 50° above zero yesterday." Wow! That is cold! Let's hope the thermometer is registering warmer weather ere this. They spent more than a week with their daughter, Harriett Funkhouser, and her husband in Fairfax, Va., and to quote, "Such a nice visit and a happy time for us." I know it was - for there is no more happy way to spend our holiday season than that of being with our children and grandchildren.

Dot and Red Campbell, as usual, are travelling. In November they went to Jekyll Island, Ga., for a week of fishing and had excellent results -- and that's "no fish story" either! From there they went down to Dade City, Fla., where they have a lot and there they left their trailer and drove to Miami for Thanksgiving weekend with her brother and his wife. The next trip was to Houston, Tex., where they spent approximately a month with their youngest daughter, Anne, and her family and there they experienced a happy, happy Christmas. Presently they are in Florida where they expect to remain until the latter part of March, at which time they will leave for home. The park in which they keep their trailer has about 400 sites - all filled - and a waiting list. Many activities are scheduled for them. They have a large rec. hall and a separate club house for cards and games. Also, there is a swimming pool, shuffleboard courts, horseshoe pits, golf-driving range and paved streets for bicycling. You name it - They have it! They are located 12 miles southwest of Dade City and 30 miles northeast of Tampa. Dot, you and Red really do move around! I think it is great. Keep up the fun.

From Tony Everett of Norfolk, we learn that never is there a dull moment. Christmas eve found him and several friends at the Williamsburg Inn to which he referred as a place of "charm, beauty, service and elegance, a pleasant change from our drab world of today." He describes the lighting and street decorations as "Christmas time of years ago." New Year's Day was a full one with parties, three open house invitations and a seated dinner. We trust you slept well that night, Tony! He continues, "We are excited here about Barter Theatre of Abingdon, Va., opening a winter season here. They will give four plays over a thirteen-weeks' season." Opening night was January 29. He asked that I spread the word around to come and enjoy a play -- so that's what I'm doing. Tony visited some old friends in Kilmarnock, Va., in January. That is a delightful area, Tony. Stuart and I are frequent guests of friends there.

And now we come to big news!

Charles E. Friend, a University of Richmond professor of law, was a recipient of the University of Richmond's Distinguished Educator 1975 Award. The award, presented to five members of the University faculty, was comprised of a certificate and $1,000. It was created last year by an initial matching grant of $150,000 given by the Cabell Foundation for "the purpose of attracting and retaining outstanding teachers and leaders in learning," according to the University's President.

An additional gift of $100,000 from the Fidelity Corporation and gifts from alumni and friends brought the award program fund to a total of $450,000. The annual earnings from this fund will support the awards program. Charlie received his BA degree from George Washington University, B.F.T. at The American Institute of Foreign Trade, and J.D. at the Marshall-Wythe School of Law at the College. He is the editor of the Virginia Bar Association Journal. Our heartfelt congratulations to you, Charlie. We are indeed proud of you and your award, and especially happy that the College can claim you as well as George Washington University and The American Institute of Foreign Trade. You bring honor not only to the College but to the Class of '25.

From Helen and Stuart White, we are happy to report our holidays were all one could possibly ask for. We took our maid, Lucile, of over 40 years with us to visit our daughter and her family in Richmond for opening of gifts early Christmas morning and brunch to follow. About two o'clock we left for our daughter and her husband's home in Amelia County. There we again opened gifts, later having Christmas dinner. That was our first Christmas in the country. We loved every moment of it, from the crowing of the roosters in the early morn, the singing of the birds, the mooing of the cows and the barking of the dogs to the sounds of the huntsmen in the distance. And then to sit beside the burning logs and listen to sweet music and exchange of stories. What more could anyone ask for!

We do take great pride in the fact that we have a grandson serving as messenger in our Virginia Senate this year, and a granddaughter serving as page in the House of Delegates of the General Assembly. It is a great experience for them and we enjoy running up to witness them "in action." We have just had a happy week with our youngest grandchild, four years of age, who visited us while her mother attended the Antiques Forum in Williamsburg. They live in Abingdon, Va.

I hope all of you will continue to keep the news flowing in. All news for the May issue must be in to me by March 20. I so enjoy hearing from you and look forward with great pleasure to the receipt of each communication. To those from whom I have not heard -- just stop for a moment and write the highlights of your life since last June. We so want to know what you are doing and how life is treating you. To all - don't forget our Silver Anniversary Fund! Send your check to the Alumni Office - tomorrow if you have not already sent it.

May the true meaning of Easter reign within your heart.

27 Leonard Born 990 Chestnut San Francisco, Calif. 94109

A note from J. Thomas Yates of Hagerstown, Md., saying that he is in good health and looking forward to our 50th reunion.

Fairfax M. Berkley of Norfolk, Va., writes that on her way home from the Virginia mountains in August she stopped in Keysville to see her college classmate, William Hogan, who seems to be enjoying his retirement as much as she is enjoying hers.

Since her retirement as a first grade teacher for 19 years, Annetta Rives Gwaltney is living in Spring Grove, Va., where she was bred and born. Her hobbies are outdoors and nature; flowers and limited gardening; and square dancing.

Eleanor Edwards Pitts of Hanover, Penn., is at home recovering from a coronary infraction. Since last July she has been on the disabled list.

Margaret Holman McCoy of Richmond, Va., moved there in 1969 after living in Decatur, Ga., for twenty years.

A flavoured glaciated reward is available to anyone providing information on the whereabouts, history, etc., of Mitchell Borden and his brother who were exciting and interesting members of the Class of 1927.

To reduce commuting time we have moved to the city so we can meet friends, classmates, etc., in a San Francisco atmosphere rather than present suburbia. I do hope to have word from more '27 class so we can plan to relax while we can.

29 Macon C. Sammons Box 206 Shawsville, Va. 24162

Another personal note. My wife, Lena Mac Sammons, whom so many of you knew over the years, passed away on December 15, 1975, at University Hospital, Charlottesville.

Billy Bickers, longtime professor and Chairman of the Department of Obstetrics and Gynecology at the American University of Beirut, Lebanon, recently attained the age of retirement of that institution. Soon to come from the press will be his account of those years as surgeon to the women of Arabia and the entire Arab World, it will appear under the title, "Harem Surgeon." Billy has now returned to his home in Richmond, Va., where he is in the private practice of gynecologic surgery after all those years of teaching and operating in the far away lands of the Arabian Peninsula.

Willie Lee Smith, Aberdeen, S.D., is now enjoying her retirement from 30 years of teaching. The last 15 years were with retarded children. She has a new granddaughter, thus making a total of 2 boys and 3 girls. She visited in Virginia last fall but did not get to Williamsburg.

Nancy B. Ward of Tazewell, Va., is Chairperson of the celebration committee and is involved in many plans for the observance of Tazewell Presbyterian Church's 125th birthday next September. They are writing history and compiling a pictorial directory.

Gladys Prause Strickler, Fredericksburg, Va., enjoyed traveling with her husband with Sacramento Senior Citizens through the Pacific Northwest and Canadian provinces of British Columbia and Alberta last summer. In Sacto she saw Jenny and Monk Little and enjoyed reading her copy of "Cows On The Campus."

31 Hampton W. Richardson 600 Lafayette, NE Albuquerque, N.M. 87106

This is the last newsletter from Hampton as he has submitted his resignation as Class Reporter. His commentary will be sorely missed. Hampton's resignation necessitates recruitment of a new reporter. Who will volunteer to be Class Reporter? If you are interested, please write to the Alumni Office, Box 60, Williamsburg, Va. 23185.

Julia C. Coleman recently presented the Paschall Library with a copy of the 1901 Colonial Echo which had belonged to a relative, Horace Hall Chalmers.

Loula Connelly of 6511 West Franklin St., Richmond, Va., 23226, retired from the Virginia State Department of Education on Jan. 1, 1975. She had taught home economics in the schools of Fauquier Co., James City Co., and Lawrenceville. She joined the Virginia State Department of Education in 1946 and retired as Assistant State Supervisor of Home Economics Education. Although a native of Lawrenceville, Va., Julia will continue to live in Richmond, Va., her home in recent years.

Mrs. Betty Smith Wayman of Kilmarnock, Va., retired after 41 years with the Bank of Lancaster, Kilmarnock, Va.

Randolph Hardy McLachlan of Harwick, Mass. 02645, Box 234, writes that he and his wife are enjoying life on Cape Cod and keeping busy in the Garden Club, Church, and AAUW. Mac is also a wood carver.

Pauline Shumate Phlegar of Pearisburg, Va. 24134, Box 401, and her husband, Paul, visited seven countries in South America in 1975.

Elizabeth Ervin Higbee and husband of 10805 Ellicott Rd., Crestmont Farms, Philadelphia, Pa. 19154, have recently returned from a tour of the Balkans and Russia. They will be attending Homecoming this year, the 45th reunion for Elizabeth.

33 Mrs. T. Leonard George (Betty Chambers) 5708 West Franklin Street Richmond, Va. 23226

Happy New Year Everyone!

The day after I sent in the last news report, I had a letter from Rhoda Pratt Hanson of Box 867, Miles City, Montana. She and her husband are connected with the Blue Caboose Travel Agency. They have worked in the international Au Pair exchange program for years. Rhoda is an outside salesman, and as such had an extended trip to Europe last summer, plus three weeks visiting friends in France. She also went with a group of travel agents to Russia, where they visited in central Asiatic cities of Samarkand, Tashkent, and Bukhara as well as the important cities of Moscow and Leningrad. Mrs. Beverly Clark of Atlanta Ga., who graduated in 1967 was also in the group. Rhoda stopped in Paris on the way home and spent a few hours with Jack Tuttle and his wife. Jack is head of the Atlantic Institute there. Several years ago, Rhoda had a visit with Alice Herzberg Galea of Canberra, Australia. Alice is teaching there. As Rhoda says the William and Mary alumni get around.

On November tenth, Leon and Helen Rubin of Manchester, Conn., attended the Hartford, Conn., Alumni Chapter Meeting.

Though W. and M. alumni are scattered, they do bump into each other. I had a letter from Mabel Prouse Djang of Sacramento, Calif., who started as a student in 1929, but who graduated in 1932. She found herself sitting next to Ruth Skeen Going, at a church dinner. Ruth was a member of the debating team while she was at W. and M. She did not attend all four years as she was a transfer. Last fall, she and her daughter, Beth, visited Williamsburg and the campus.

Margaret Thompson Wyatt of Highland, Calif., who has been a librarian for the San Bernardino County, plans to retire in the spring of 1976. She and her husband became proud grandparents in August, 1975. Maybe Margaret will get to Homecoming next fall, as Laura Elizabeth and her parents live in Springfield, Va.

Harry R. Cross of Dover, Delaware retired from the service in 1969, then became a director of the Dela. Oilmen's Association, and retired from that in 1974. He is presently a Legislative Consultant. Good luck to you in this new capacity!

Elizabeth Sparks Dow and her husband had an interesting trip to England to the Royal Windsor Horse Show, and then a visit to other parts of Great Britain to interview prospective lecturers for her husband's lecture bureau. Elizabeth's home is at Monkton, Md.

"Red" Maxey where are you? Here's a message from Owen E. McBride of 10029 W. Denham Drive, Sun City, Ariz. He wants to hear from you. Owen has had his second heart pacemaker, and is doing fine in the Arizona sunshine.

Jean Walker Ogden of Chevy Chase, Md., has retired after nineteen years of work at Woodward and Lothrop's Department store. (Isn't being retired great, Jean?)

We are all very proud of R. Bruce Johnson of Richmond, Va. This past summer he completed 27 years as Assistant Technical Director of "The Common Glory," and has been selected to appear in the Bicentennial Edition of Personalities of the South, and also Notable Americans of the Bicentennial Era. He has been a teacher in Henrico County for many years, and has been an officer in the Henrico Teacher's Association.

Mary Virginia Rigg Fisher of Las Vegas, Nev., has also been honored by her state. Her poem Angel Hands has been adopted by the Nevada Federation of Women's Clubs as its official memorial poem. She has had poetry published in Science of Mind Magazine and The Las Vegas Sun, and has received an invitation to join "World Poetry Society International. She has her biography in "Who's Who in American Women" and the "World's Who's Who of Women".

I also had Christmas cards from Janet Simes Tribble who is enjoying her retirement from many years of working in the school system. Janet still lives in East Moriches, N.Y. Jene Cook Bancker is busy doing volunteer work. She is helping to compile the history of Madison, N.J. by searching through old papers and books in their library. Margaret Shipley of Washington, D.C., spent a weekend with me on the Potomac River last summer.

Now for a bit of personal news. Remember during the depression how we were lucky to be able to afford the bus to bring us back after the Christmas holiday. This year my granddaughter who is a student at W and M, and who lives in Florida was able to get a ride in a private plane with a friend of her fathers to Patrick Henry Airport. How times have changed! Was Patrick Henry Airport there in 1933?

Yours 'til the next time,

35 Mrs. J. Paul Kent (Eleanor A. Martin) 616 Campbell Avenue Altavista, Va. 24517

Marguerite Stribling Vermillion of Williamsburg was recently presented by the Exchange Club of that city their Book of Golden Deeds in recognition of her many contributions to the community. Congratulations!

L. Parker Buck of Demarest, N.J., has been Assistant Treasurer of Ford, Bacon and Davis, Inc., for several years and now is also Assistant Secretary. He has four grandchildren including twins and expects to retire in 1978.

Chris W. Sorensen of Hollywood, Fla., retired in 1971 from Cranford Post Office. He is enjoying many activities and keeping busy.

Cameron and Pauline Stanley Ogden of Hightstown, N.J., enjoyed the fortieth reunion and were amazed at the number of our class present.

Doris Ervin Houston of Asheville, N.C., attended homecoming with her husband, W. Traynhan Houston of the class of '37, who was recently retired. Although the football game was disappointing, the OWJ weekend and get together was the high light of the weekend.

Claudine Moss Gay Bryant of Washington, D.C., is AMWA Pres-elect., AAFP delegate, member of D.C. Medical Society and DOCPAC Boards.

Born to Alice Janise Hardy (Hawkins) '68 a son. Congratulations to the proud grandmother, Elise Barnes Hardy of Alexandria, Va.

There were about fifty members of our Class registered at the Alumni House during Homecoming. It was a real privilege to be present on this occasion and renew old acquaintances. I sincerely hope it will be possible for more to attend the next reunion, however, I realize the years are not in our favor. The following persons were registered: Mason and Hazel (Johnson) Sizemore, Halifax, Virginia; Ned Scott, Norfolk, Virginia; Bruce Kent, Rocky Mount, Virginia; Cameron and Pauline (Stanley) Ogden, Hightstown, New Jersey; Charles B. Fuller, Waltham, Massachusetts; Woodrow W. Bralley, Nassawadox, Virginia; Max W. Doman, Battle Creek, Michigan; Hudson R. Lankford, Franklin, Virginia; Maxey Kremen, Lynn, Massachusetts; George L. Weinbaum, Newton Centre, Massachusetts; John Hocutt, Newark, Delaware; Joe May, Hood, Virginia; Anne Nenzel Lambert, Williamsburg, Virginia; Blake Prince, Jr., Greenwich Connecticut; Dorothy Prince Oldfield, Westfield, New Jersey; Jim Mallonee, Jr., Wilmington, Delaware.

Sumner Paisner, West Roxbury, Massachusetts; Ann Northington Westlow, Richmond, Virginia; Hanna Severin Nash, Emporia, Virginia; Jane Whittake Crittenden, North East, Pennsylvania; Chester Starkey, Richmond, Virginia; Frank Manning, Dumont, New Jersey; Eleanor Martin Kent, Altavista, Virginia; Margaret Hedgecock Ogburn, Baltimore, Maryland; Dave Agnew, Norfolk, Virginia; Margaret Edgar Knight, Chesapeake, Virginia; Mary Edwards Harris, Bena, Virginia; Elizabeth Mitchell Berry, Washington, D.C.

Helen Addis Taylor, Gaithersburg, Maryland; Virginia Mister Walker, Capeville, Virginia; Jane Gilmer Wilhelm, Leesburg, Virginia; Weaver Reed, Virginia Beach, Virginia; Ernest W. Goodrich, Surry, Virginia; Elise Barnes Hardy, Alexandria, Virginia; Fred and Polly Schmidt, Newport News, Virginia; Jessie Lee Thompson, Morristown, New Jersey; Maxine Kanter Meltzer, Norfolk, Virginia; Mildred Hodgson Hendrickson, Virginia Beach.

I regret to report the death of Frank Barret Horton in Dallas, Tex., during September. He and Midge Parmlee Horton had planned to attend our reunion. We extend to Midge our deepest sympathy.

Fred and Polly Schmidt of Newport News, Va., attended the post-game party when W&M played Rutgers in New Brunswick, N.J.

Murray and Evelyn Trinkle were present at the alumni chapter meeting in Providence, R.I., in November.

Please remember I would be delighted to receive information about any member of our Class.

37 Dr. Elmo F. Benedetto
Director of Athletics and Physical Education
Lynn Public Schools
Lynn, Mass.

Jane Miller Elia, 9 Orchard St., Middletown, N.Y., 10940 is quite thrilled about her son's progress as a junior at Georgetown University Dental School. Jane keeps busy chasing after her two granddaughters and grandson.

Kathryn Vaden Sparrow and Charles K. '34 have been returning to Williamsburg more than ever now. Charles J. is enrolled as a member of the freshman class. They reside in Martinsville, Va., P.O. Box 426.

Despite her husband's retirement from the United States Public Health Service, Florence Allen McAnally is kept pretty busy at her High Point, N.C., home where a private practice of medicine is flourishing. They have three children and four grandchildren. The oldest son is a mechanical engineer who has three motor patents registered in the U.S. Patent Office.

Marguerite Daisy McMenamin has returned to her home, 2402 Chesapeake Ave., Hampton, Va., after living for 25 years in Philadelphia. She is presently employed as a social worker with the Peninsula Agency of Aging in Newport News.

My good friend and roommate, Joseph J. Marino, has finally retired from active football coaching and teaching after 35 years of a successful career in New Jersey and New York. Joe captained the 1936 football team and was later named to the Hall of Fame. His son Jimmy graduated from William and Mary in 1975 and intends to follow in his dad's footsteps as a teacher-coach. His daughter, Jane, is a crack sophomore athlete at Adrian College in Michigan.

39 Frances L. Grodecoeur
810 Howard Street
Monongahela, Pa. 15063

Happy New Year! Let's continue to keep the '39 column filled with news of our classmates.

During a business trip to the West Coast (Northern California) and Arizona I spent some time with Dot Spense and Don Druckemiller. They live in a great location on Squaw Peak and from their living room can look out on the City of Phoenix. The sunsets, coupled with the lights going on in the city, make for spectacular viewing. Dot is Chairman of Pupil Personnel Service in Carl Hayden High School and is very active in the Women Deans Administration and Counselors Association, of which she is Immediate Past-President. During the past year she served on a panel in Dallas, Tex., at the meeting of American Association of School Administrators. The subject was "Year-Round Schools." She, also, attended a Chicago conference of the Accrediting Association of North Central Schools and Colleges. Don is President of Annex Sales Co., food brokerage. The Druckemillers are avid T-Bird fans and own two handsome classics, 1955 and 1956 (one black, one white). They belong to the International Classic Thunderbird Club and the Arizona Chapter. We had a "western evening" at Rawhide, an 1880 town just outside Phoenix. It was complete with a shootout as we strolled around the dusty street looking in shops.

I had a brief visit with Ann Sherman Smith '40 at Laird Travel Service where she is a travel agent. Ann is widowed, has two sons and a daughter. She had just returned from a trip to South Africa, but I cannot report on that since we really did not have much time together. Ann's address is 5970 North 83rd St., Scottsdale, Ariz.

During the fall several chapter meetings were held throughout the country. Fred Howard attended the Boston cocktail reception at which President Graves was the guest of honor; and our class was represented at the D.C. area meeting, a pre-game reception before the W&M-George Washington University basketball game, by Lee and Esther Shimberg, Seymour Waxman, and Henry and Alma Strand.

I am sorry to report the sudden death of our classmate, Jack Thompson. Known to thousands of high school students as Uncle Jack, he had dedicated himself to teaching and counseling young people. After graduation from William and Mary, Jack got his master's degree at Rutgers, then taught at Admiral Farragut Academy before returning to Arms Academy (where he had been a student) in Shelburn Falls. He taught there until he became principal in 1956. His most recent post was at Greenfield High School where he was a "guidance counselor and honest friend to honor students and drop-outs alike." The account in THE SPRINGFIELD (Mass.) UNION was headed "You Don't Ever Replace People Like Uncle Jack".

Elaine Woody Walker writes that son, Andy, will be in Pittsburgh as Asst. Prof. in Psychiatry at the University of Pittsburgh Medical School - all of which means that she'll surely travel "west" and I can see her - first time since graduation in '39!

Pearl Buegher Reid and husband, Joe, have been travelling again. This time Dubrovnik, Yugoslavia, Turkey and three islands. Domestic travel included a 3 1/2-week tour of California and Canada - much impressed. Their daughter, Pat, and her husband moved to Phoenix last May, another area for the Reids to explore!

Dot Hosford and Herb Smith, along with Herb's sister, did an extensive tour of the East last summer - New England, Williamsburg, Pennsylvania Dutch country in Pennsylvania, Wisconsin, Glacier Park and more.

Marjorie Bowman Fowler and husband are team teaching language arts to Grades 3 to 8 in the Alexander Montessori School in S.W. Miami, Fla. Before this private school post they were teaching in the public schools but, in Marjorie's words, "were eliminated by the economy".

Powel Wartel and his wife, Beatrice, are proud grandparents of a granddaughter, Mikele.

Fred Howard writes that he was married on September 27, 1975, at the Old North Church in Boston to Stephanie Surowiec. His son, Stephen, was his best man and his daughter, Patricia, a bridesmaid. The Class of '39 send all good wishes to Fred and Stephanie. Let's hope that we can meet the bride at Homecoming next fall.

Lt. Col. Daniel J. Blocker, Jr., is a purchasing agent for East Tennessee State University. His address is 404 West Locust Street, Johnson City, Tenn. 37601.

Mildred Mode Owen-Hughes met Malcolm Robinson recently at a Masonic meeting held at Queen's College where he is Headmaster. Mildred has retired from chairmanship of Olave House, a World Guide/Girl Scouts Centre in London, but remains active in the Movement as Division Commissioner in Somerset. She wonders if the English branch of William and Mary alumni has gone out of existence.

Margaretta Foreman Hargraves has changed her name and address. She and H. Gordon Blundon, Jr., were remarried November 8, 1975, and are now living in Richmond, Va. 23226, at 5305 Kingsbury Road. Her husband is Director of Program Management of the State Highways Department.

John Hodges, Director of College Residences, since 1973, has resigned his post because of health reasons. John is a native of Williamsburg and the son of the late Dean and Mrs. W. T. Hodges. Before his most recent post he had served 31 years with the Army, including a three-year term as professor of Military Science and Director of the ROTC Program 1969-72 at the College. John plans to enjoy his hobby of antique car restoring and to work on the 18th Century home which he had moved to Williamsburg. Sounds great, John. Good luck and enjoy yourself.

Barbara Brown Heimerl sends news of her family. John J. Heimerl '72 is Chief Engineer for Bay Cities Communications and is also broadcast announcer. His wife, Debbie, has transferred to Christopher Newport College now that they have returned to the Peninsula. Son Robert is a senior at Madison College. In the fall of '71 he spent a semester studying in Tehran, Iran. Barbara hopes classmates will stop by their home at 403 Artillery Road in Yorktown, Va., 23609 - especially during the great Bicentennial Celebration.

Keep in touch.

41 Mrs. Robert C. Dew, Jr.
(Kathryn Hoover)
"Plainfield"
White Stone, Va. 22578

The Hartford, Connecticut Alumni Chapter met last November 10 and classmates attending were Harriet McCarthy Purtil, Bill St. John and Gene and Shirley Ellis.

Margaret Mitchell Mollenkopf wrote that she and Bill spent a delightful few days in October visiting their Jim and Nancy and first grandchild in the wilds of Colorado. They hauled water, chopped wood, cooked on a woodstove and enjoyed primitive living - it was worth all the inconveniences getting to see grandson Jesse. Last June, Mickey and Bill spent several weeks in England and they plan to be in Williamsburg next fall for Homecoming.

A long Christmas card note from Chuck Gondak reported that he and Tillie are still playing golf in sunny California (Tillie is their Club Champion with a 7 handicap). Their daughter, Christine, a graduate of Stanford and the U. of California Law School, has just passed the state bar. Chuck said that they had heard from Ruth Rapp Thayer and she and Bill are building a home in Northern California. The Gondaks, Thayers, and Vick Carbonaro are hoping to attend our 35th reunion in the fall.

Dick Kaufman wrote that he retired as Assistant Principal of a New York City Junior High School the end of January. He and Riff plan a long vacation now and hope to visit in Florida, Texas and Williamsburg before returning home in April. Their new address is RD #2, Mt. View Road, Patterson, N.Y. 12563.

Mary Spitzer Etter (486 W. Market Street, Harrisonburg, Va. 22801) retired from teaching in June, 1975. She has been recently listed in "Personalities of the South" and will be in "Notable Personalities of the Bicentennial Era (1976)". In Sept. 1975, Mary was elected an elder in the First Presbyterian Church of Harrisonburg.

Beverly Boone Jones (124 Croydon Road, Rochester, N.Y. 14610) wrote they had taken their antique car on its first Glidden Tour and had a fantastic time. They also have their first grandson.

Since leaving William and Mary, Douglas B. Harlow has been a fighter pilot, bomber pilot, commercial pilot and an industrial engineer. His address is Rt. 2, Howard City, Mich. 49329.

Please don't forget to fill out and mail the biographical questionnaire for the Re-Echo Class Directory which was sent out in January.

Greetings from the Gentle City. Congratulations to Jackie Fowlkes Herod on being named CHRISTMAS MOTHER of the YEAR in Richmond. That is quite an honor.

Had a nice note from Mary Louise Lowell Williams. She has been teaching math in Pennsylvania for the past fifteen years, and is planning a well-earned vacation. She and Al had a great trip to Scotland, England and Wales. It will be difficult settling down to work again.

Elizabeth Douglass Munves is still teaching at Med. school in New York.

Bill Pope and Les Davis ('49) have recently completed a study of wild life in The Dismal Swamp. Their findings are to be published in The National Geographic. This news was sent to us by Harry Cox.

Nan McClellan James writes about translating current Soviet journals in La Jolla - just for fun. She is also enjoying her grandchildren and sunny California.

Helen Marshall Fedziuk has a daughter, Betty, in the College.

Jeanne Wolf Theen writes that her son, Jim, is now a doctor serving his residency at the University of Minnesota. Son, John, graduated from Washington University in St. Louis in 1974. He is administrative assistant in the trust department of the First National Bank in Alton. Jeanne and her husband own and operate two insurance agencies in Alton.

Happy Birthday everyone!

Christmas cards and letters arrived sharing news of many classmates. Ahner Pratt, who is employed as overseas coordinator for the Navy Department, writes from Kensington, Md., that he and Libby '49 have acquired a house at Cape Cod where all of the family vacationed last summer. Libby especially enjoys painting there as well as at her own studio, where she hibernated early in '75 to get ready for a one-man show at Spectrum Gallery. Libby also had a fine trip to Russia. Sally works at Georgetown U. running a computer in the library, George is a student at Hobart, and David is in high school.

Nancy Speakes Tibbets and Colby, who live in Mahasset, N.Y., had all their children together last summer for a fine reunion. In January they attended their son Mike's wedding in Johnstown, Pa. Daughter Nancy, who is still in Colorado, is doing her student teaching and will graduate in March. Nancy had recently talked to Hannah Leonard Merrick, '44. Jack is retired from the Navy.

Dot Johnson Blom and John had a great trip to Germany and Switzerland in Sept., and also became proud grandparents in '75. Daughter Laurie and her husband are at the U. of Del., and daughter Ann will graduate from there in June. Marion Lang Van Dam also of Hasbrouck Heights, N.J., writes that she and Ted had a nice visit with Mary Raney Begor in Bowie, Md., in October.

Sunny Manewal Murray and Ken enjoyed having all of their family home during the holidays. Sunny had recently seen George and Nancy Holland Blanford in Tampa.

Nancy Gibb Jones writes from Moreland Hills, Ohio, that their 3 sons are married, and Nancy and Bill now have five grandchildren. Jean Handy Smith and Bob, who live in Pittsburgh, recently visited them.

Warren Spratley and "Kakie" live in Hampton. Their daughter Catherine is married and is a '72 graduate of Mary Baldwin. Son Philip is a junior at Hampden-Sydney. Warren is Senior Vice President and Area Executive Officer, Virginia National Bank, Newport News.

From Hopewell, N.J., comes news of Dinny Lee McAlinden who stays busy doing volunteer work in mental health, serving as secretary of the Garden Club of N.J., belongs to the Photographic Society of America, is involved in local politics, does volunteer library work, and is active in the P.T.A. and Girl Scouts. Dinny and Joseph's two children are James, 12, and Mary Ann, 10.

Sara Sturges, Jeanne Nelson, and Jane Craig Beaver '43 attended a William and Mary Chapter meeting in the D.C. area in Dec.

Cato and I enjoyed several trips to Norfolk in Dec. and had visits with Sunny Trumbo Williams '44 and Rolf, Jeanne Schoenewolf Preston and Page, Jane Whitmore Whitmore '47 and Pete, and Jean Parker Land '43 and T.I.

In early Dec. we were there for an especially wonderful occasion. On Dec. 6 Jean Boyd McIntyre '44 and Ben R. Lacy III were married in Christ and Saint Luke's Episcopal Church. She was escorted to the altar by her son George Lee McIntyre, Jr., of Norfolk. Among the two families present at the ceremony and reception, William and Mary was well represented by members of Jean's family. Present were her daughters Betsy '74 and Debbie, who is a sophomore; her brother Bill and his wife Daisy Jens Boyd; another brother Bob; his wife Sarah Miller Boyd, and their son John who is a senior. A lovely reception and dinner were held at "Remwood", Smithfield, the James River country home of Sarah and Bob Boyd of Norfolk. Sunny, Rolf, Cato and I were in the wedding party. Later in Dec. we visited Ben and Jean in Front Royal. In Jan. they attended a convention in Roanoke and had visits in High Point and Bristol.

Jeanne and Page were in Emporia in Jan. en route to Florida where they visited Audrey Hudgins Thompson and Buck.

Sunny was also in Emporia for a visit. In Nov. she gave a wonderful Christmas program for a garden club meeting here.

A number of alumni chapter meetings have been attended recently by members of our class. Dabney Carr attended the meeting held in Washington prior to the basketball game with George Washington University. In Boston, Audrey Allein Hoitsma attended a cocktail reception at which President Graves was the guest of honor and in Atlanta David Henritze attended a gathering held for Georgia alumni and current students home on vacation.

Virginia Murphy Krahenbuhl took a trip around the world last summer. She has been living in Japan for the past three years where her husband is a vice president with the Union Bank of Switzerland. Floyd Joyner has a daughter in her freshman year at the College. Joan Felix Degenshein is presently manager of sales communications for Revlon, Inc. She has co-authored a book Successful Cosmetic Selling which is in its second printing. She and her husband live in Newton, N.J.

Tuga Wilson Clements lives in Gastonia, N.C., where she is working part-time as an elementary school media specialist. Her son is a freshman at the University of North Carolina and her daughter is in high school. Vann Rhodes is living in Miami, Fla., where he is the Director of Development for Dade County's Department of Housing and Urban Development. He has recently completed the work for his masters degree in Public Administration at Nova University.

Martha Daniel Cornwell lives in Chevy Chase, Md., where she works for the town government. Her son David has graduated from Bates College, Lewiston, Me., and her son John is a junior at Furman University, Greenville, S.C. Betty Hedrick Vertiz and her husband went on the Northern Virginia Bar Association Council's cruise "Holy Land Discovery" last fall accompanied by their niece who is a student at the College. Dot Dettmer McLaughlin and Ben have a son attending Duke University and another son in high school.

Edith Sherman MacDonald's son was married in January after graduating from Rutgers. He's employed in Hartford, Conn., as a computer programmer. She also has another son and a daughter who's a freshman at Boston College. Edith spends a lot of her time doing work for her church. Jay Hardison lives in Roanoke Rapids, N.C., where he is principal of a middle grades school. Lynn Graves Whitaker has a daughter who was married this past summer, a son who's also married and another son who's a junior in high school. Jackie Andrews McKeon is enjoying teaching school. She and Harry have a son at Temple University and another boy in the ninth grade.

Barbara Seifert Meyers and Mike went on the Alumni Society's Egypt tour. Their oldest daughter is attending Lawrence University in Appleton, Wis. Mary Wilcox Rietman has a daughter at VPI. Elaine Campton Baker and Jim are living in Manila where Jim is editorial coordinator of the Regional Service Center, one of the printing plants which the USIA operates to print its publications. Elaine reports that living conditions in Manila are very pleasant and she has plenty of leisure as she has two live-in-maids. Their son, Glenn, attends the International School there. Their other son has completed his sophomore year at Reed College and is now living in Docton, Wash.

Thanks to many of you, I have some news to share with our classmates that will stretch over two issues. I have appreciated and enjoyed your notes on Christmas cards and on William and Mary Fund envelopes. I know that the class will be glad to hear from you, too. Why don't more of you let us hear from you?

Kitty Nottingham Keith wrote that she flew up to Indianapolis, Ind., to Sater Clay Ryder's funeral. She also sent a clipping about Sater which I had shared with you in an earlier issue. Kitty lives in Spartanburg, S.C., with her doctor husband. They have four children. Their oldest son graduated from Washington and Lee and is now in medical school. Another son is a student at Clemson, and their daughter will enter college next fall. Their fourteen-year-old son will be around home for a while.

Several of our classmates have attended alumni chapter meetings which were held in their areas recently. Ed Extract attended the one in Washington, D.C., which was a pre-game reception on December 4, before William and Mary's basketball game with George Washington University. Walt Milkey attended the one in Hartford, Conn., on November 10, which was a cocktail reception. Mary Null Clontz and her husband attended an alumni meeting in San Antonio, Tex., where they live. Dr. Graves and Mrs. Gordon Vliet spoke at this meeting.

Jim Rehlaender, we are very proud of you. Jim was recently honored by the City of Paris, France, with their Medal of Honor and was awarded the Legion of Honor from the French Government. These high honors were accorded Jim as a result of the successful marketing program he has developed for several French products. Jim and Tink '53 and their family still live in Switzerland. James Jr., graduated from William and Mary last year.

G. Bernard Smith, Jr., an officer-shareholder in the Newport News firm of Eggleston, Smith & Co., has recently been elected vice president of the Virginia Society of Certified Public Accountants. He is the immediate past secretary-treasurer of the Virginia Society of CPA's. The 2,000-member society chose its officers for the 1975-1976 fiscal year at its recent annual meeting in Virginia Beach.

Nan Jones Hodges wrote that she is having a very interesting time appearing on local television and radio and making a movie as well as lecturing on research techniques in historic preservation in communities in southern Michigan. When not exploring local history, she works for the education of gifted children at the local and state level. Nan lives in Ann Arbor, Mich.

Do you remember that last year I wrote in detail about the hospital fair of which Lucy Keen Bertram was chairman? Well, I have decided if you need somebody to raise money for a good cause, call on Lucy. The net profit from the fair was $22,500. Altogether she has chaired activities over three years netting $45,000. Next year she will be the hospital auxiliary treasurer. Currently she is assistant treasurer and working in Emergency. Her son David is a freshman at Duke University in Durham, N.C. Lucy lives in Scarborough, N.Y.

Peggy Jones Raney is a teacher of reading in the sixth and seventh grades in the public schools in Brunswick County, Va.

John L. Dawkins has been named president of the C.B.C. Industrial Battery Division of Chloride, L.T.D., an international company. He is married to the former June Lochenour '48, and they live in Overland Park, Kans.

Dr. Melissa Warfield is now employed by the Eastern Medical Authority and lives in Norfolk, Va.

Holmes Bailey, better known to us as Cleve, is now the president of Portescap U.S., 730 Fifth Avenue, N.Y. 10019.

Colonel James S. Kelly, Commanding Officer, Headquarters, Fleet Marine Force, Atlantic Mobilization Staff Group, turned over his post to Colonel Desmond C. Wray, Jr., USMCR, during a change of command ceremony on September 13, 1975, at Marine Barracks Parade Field, Norfolk Naval Station. Jim has served as Platoon Commander and Executive Officer of the 97th Special Infantry Company located in Newport News, and eight years in Richmond, as the Operations Officer of the Staff Group. The Headquarters, Fleet Marine Force, Atlantic Mobilization Staff Group, located at the CINCLANT complex, Norfolk, Va., is under the operational control of Lieutenant General Robert L. Nichols, Commanding General FMFLANT and administrative control of the fourth Marine Aircraft Wing, Naval Air Station, New Orleans, La. It is composed of twenty-two officers and thirty-seven enlisted personnel, and the Staff Group is on hand constantly for mobilization with units of the Fleet Marine Force, Atlantic.

Ina Saville Grundmann is now living in Titusville, Fla., and like many of you, she has been busy with volunteer work. She was assistant church treasurer and United Thank Offering chairman in Cocoa Beach before moving to their present location last October. She also worked on the church bazaar for two years and in the Y Indian Maidens. She was also a volunteer aide in the elementary schools. Her husband works for McDonnell Douglas at Cape Kennedy on the Delta Project. In 1973, her oldest daughter graduated as a registered nurse from the U. of Southern Colorado at Pueblo, and her daughter number three, as Ina calls her, is attending El Camino Jr. College at Torrance, Calif., and studying business. Last May, daughter number five won her division in the Elementary Science Fair in Biol. Sciences. She won the gold trophy, and I am sure was a proud second grader after all of the hard work on her project on "Insects". Ina's only son is on the honor roll, in the Beta Club, in NSF, and plays soccer. Her daughter number four had the lead in the senior class play last June and sung in the school chorus. She graduated from high school in June.

By now you are beginning to receive information concerning our reunion which should remind you that this is our big year. We will be getting together for our 25th Reunion on the weekend of October 8-10. So many of you are writing me from all over that you are planning to be there. I have alerted every member of my family that that is my weekend of all the weekends this year. I am looking forward to seeing you in Williamsburg. In the meantime, how about one of you volunteering for my job? The new policy is to have a new reporter every five years. The class needs your help, so if you have the time, please let me or the Alumni Office know that you are interested. It really doesn't take a lot of time; it just takes a little time and lot of interest in and care about the class.

On October 18, after the William and Mary-Rutgers University football game, a party was held at the Somerset, N.J., Travelodge Motel. Eighty alumni from N.Y., N.J., Conn., and Va., attended, including John Mahoney of Scotch Plains, and Penny Brown Moon of Flemington, N.J., from our class.

Several alumni chapter meetings were held this fall. A pre-game reception prior to the William and Mary-George Washington University basketball game on December 4 in Washington, D.C., was attended by Joe Campagna and Bunny Belford. Cocktail receptions were held in Hartford, Conn., on November 10 and attended by Joan Danskin and Thomas Kemble and in Boston on November 11, attended by Carl Gieg.

Harriet Collins Spann's husband, Dick, decided a few years ago that he wanted to change careers. After having worked for several years as an engineer, he attended law school and last year was graduated and began practice in Lancaster, Cal. Harriet keeps busy as a hospital and "Y" volunteer and on the Children's Home Society Auxilliary.

Anne Carver Coirini's husband, Emilio, is the architect who designed the Peachtree Plaza in Atlanta, Ga., which is the world's tallest hotel.

Sara Jane Blackmore Knight is teaching at Yorktown High School in Arlington, Va., and is Social Studies Dept. Chairperson. Her son, Patrick, is a second year law student at William and Mary. She sees Shirley Staubs Jay, who is the school librarian at Yorktown, often.

Yolanda Grant Harrell is a tour guide at Independence Hall in Philadelphia, a real bicentennial occupation!

I made it through the first quarter of nursing and will be studying pediatrics during winter quarter. This is the type of nursing in which I eventually hope to specialize, so I am really looking forward to it.

In closing, I would like to ask that when you do send news, please be sure to include your name. Without it I can't print items which might be quite interesting to all of us.

There's a great deal of news this time and I hope to be able to plow my way through the snow to get to the Post Office and get this off. We have at least two feet of the nasty white stuff on the ground and more comes down every day. It's about this time every year that I envy those of us who live in more temperate climates.

The following is "lifted" entirely from a Kappa newsletter. Eleanor Baird Millard recently moved to Columbus, Ohio, and claims that Kappa Headquarters is beautiful! Elizabeth Shell Allen is substitute teaching in Chula Vista, California, where she plans to stay indefinitely. Barbara Edwards Ashworth is currently studying to be a respiratory therapist in Tyler, Texas. Along this line she was the recipient of the Texas Society of Respiratory Therapists scholarship. Jan Charbonnet Crocker is keeping busy with lots of tennis and serving as vice president of the Fort Lauderdale Junior League. Elizabeth (Annie) Gilbert is currently directing a county project for student/community involvement in Drexel Hill, Pa.

Roger K. Schauf has been appointed as sales manager of United States Transmission Systems, Inc. (USTS), the domestic communications unit of International Telephone and Telegraph Corporation. Congratulations, Roger! Prior to this Roger served as manager, telecommunications, for Pfizer, Inc., and was an active member of the International Communications Association and the Communications Managers Association of New York.

Dr. Slaughter

Congratulations are in order, too, for Dr. Terry W. Slaughter, who was elected vice-president of the American Society of Oral Surgeons this past fall. Terry practices in Salinas and Monterey, California. In addition he has served on the board of trustees of the national surgical specialty for the past four years. He also is chief of dental staff at three hospitals in Salinas and serves at a number of other hospitals in the Monterey area. What a busy life he leads!

There was a large William and Mary party in Somerset, N.J., October 18, following the William and Mary - Rutgers game. About eighty alumni were in attendance. Those from our class were: Ben Field, D. Mahoney, Carl Anderson, Fred Shaffer and Barbara Lynn Wheeler.

Speaking of Barbara Wheeler, she writes that she is back in school full-time studying dental hygiene at Union County Technical Institute. Barbara says that between the work load, studying, three children, husband and house, things are always hopping at their home in Summit, N.J.

There have been several alumni chapter meetings, one of which was in Boston on November 11. Barbara Sumner attended the cocktail reception at which President Graves was the guest of honor.

Arthur King Fisher, who lives in Parksley, Va., is a busy man too. He's the Assistant Superintendent of the Accomack County Public Schools and serves on the Parksley Town Council. He's also Chairman of the Planning Commission. He recently wrote a history of his Masonic Lodge.

A tardy congratulations to Jo Ann Thompson Walberg who writes that she earned a Master of Arts in Education from William and Mary in 1973.

Mary Jane Webb Wilson writes that she is still working full-time as Manager of Development for the New Jersey Educational Computer Network. She's in Design and Programming of software packages for the eight New Jersey State College Administration Offices. (I hope I got that right, Mary Jane!) In addition she is a rock hound and into lapidary arts and also lists traveling as a hobby. She says she has three college-bound teenagers.

Danny and Nancy Gavan Mottola write that they are living in Jackson, Miss., where Danny is Vice President in charge of Store Operations for the W.E. Walker Stores. They are the parents of three children.

I had a nice note from June Richard Hearnkness who says she finds her library work as challenging as ever and that it has afforded her great travel opportunities. June says her older daughter, Diane, has been accepted at William and Mary and they are both delighted. In addition to work and family, June says a project proposal for a Young Adult (teens) Services program submitted by her as Library Director at the Ridley Township Public Library has been awarded federal funding under LSCA Title I. an enormous responsibility and will require a great deal of work, but June says they are unique with this concept in their county and state and it will be a demonstration project. I'm sure it will be quite rewarding.

Suzanne Tully McCarthy writes that she earned a Master's Degree last May. Congratulations, Suzy! Suzy, Nancy Beery Thomas and Carolyn Thomas Jones all wrote about a weekend reunion they and their families had last summer at Nancy's. Guess a good time was had by all.

I also heard from Vanessa Darling Prigge at Christmas. She says her college-bound daughter, Jennifer, is going to Dartmouth. From what I hear, she is quite an outstanding young lady!

The nicest vacation I've heard of in a long time was taken by Pam Cartin Johnson and her husband Ludwell and their daughter, Abby, last summer. They sailed away on the Q.E. II for England and Italy. Mary Ripley Barry and her daughter, Leslie, were there to see them off. Pam also mentioned a visit from Shirley Ross Wood last summer. Shirley's son, Steve, is going to be a freshman at William and Mary in the fall. Just for old time's sake, Pam and Shirley took a tour of good old Jefferson Dormitory. Just the thought brings back memories!

That's all the news for now. I hope I'll be hearing from more and more of you. A belated Happy New Year to all.

While Homecoming 1975 was raging in Williamsburg, a mini-reunion was being held in the Chevy Chase, Md., home of Matt and Carolyn Washer Rubin and four-year-old David. Matt is an administrator with the National Institute of Education in D.C. Two of those attending were thoughtful enough to send information gleaned for the Gazette. Thanks, Dottie and Sallye. Dottie Nowland Gabig and Jack came from McLean with daughters Laurianne, age 8, and Karyn Leigh, age 6. Jack is a tax attorney in D.C. Sallye Branham Nahill and Charlie, '60, were enroute home to the Philadelphia area with daughters Julie, age 9, and Kristin, age 7. They had been at the Williamsburg reunion also, but had left baby Brad at home with grandmother. Ann Jensen Stern and Al came from Ardsley, N.Y., with daughters Keelan, age 8, and Leslie, age 5. Al is an attorney with an admiralty law firm in New York City. Ann has developed an interest in calligraphy. Also from New York, Louise McDowell Battist and Jerry brought Melissa, age 9, and Scott, age 6. Jerry is a lawyer with Kodak and Louise is on the Penn Field, N.Y., Planning Board. Paula Wolpow Hoffman and Buddy drove up from Newport News with daughters Ann Claire, age 5, and Hallie Kay, age 3½. Buddy has his own rental business in the Tidewater area.

Susie Ragland Farrington and Tom, '60, came from Upper Marlboro, Md. Daughter Kyle, age 10, was with them, but son Tad was ironically on a field trip to Williamsburg. Tom is an attorney in Prince Georges County, and Susie works for the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Co. in Hyattsville. Patsie Spencer Libby and Joe brought Lynn, age 8½, Jennifer, age 5, and Reed, age 2. Joe is with Acacia Insurance Co., and they live in Fairfax. After re-reading my account of this reunion, I am struck by two phenomena: Many of our classmates have attorney husbands, and of these sixteen offspring the daughters outnumber the sons twelve to four!

A delightful Christmas note from Betty Parker Featherston and Aubrey told of their late October trip to Israel for the Second World Conference on the Holy Spirit. Betty is Director of Christian Education at St. Giles' Presbyterian Church in Richmond, and Aubrey is an engineer with Brymner, Youngblood, and Sharp. Their children are Spencer, age 11, and Trip, age 7.

Patricia Singleton Parker and Joe have moved to Miami, Fla., where Joe is Professor of Pathology at Jackson Memorial Hospital. Their children are John, age 8, and Nancy, age 3. Stacy and Elena Ruddy, '62, McMarlin live on post at Ft. Belvoir, where Stacy is dermatologist and head of the Department of Medicine at DeWitt Army Hospital. They have six children. Bill Clayton is teaching surgery, urology, and physical diagnosis at Navy medical school in Wichita Falls, Tex. He recently was awarded a Navy Commendation Medal and passed the urology boards.

Mary Fuller Osborne writes from Colorado Springs, Colo., that she is a C.P.A. Her husband Ed teaches at the Air Force Academy. Burt Laskin is an accountant for the U.S. Government and lives in Arlington. Allan Brownfeld writes a three-times-weekly newspaper column appearing throughout this country plus in England, Sweden, South Africa, and other countries.

Spud Tatum and Catharine live in Montgomery, Ala., from which Spud operates a waffle house franchise in Alabama and Mississippi. Their children are Hunter, age 4, and Heather, age 1. Back in Virginia, Edward Henderson is general manager of the Quality Inn - Iwo Jima and the Cherry Blossom Motor Inn, both in Arlington.

My last report of Carol Noble Braun, Dick, and family was that they were headed for Beirut, Lebanon. As you can imagine, before they unpacked they were evacuated. Jane and Paul Bahn have kept us advised that the Brauns eventually arrived in Karachi, Pakistan, on the Indian Ocean, where they expect to live for the remainder of Dick's tour. They have passed the half-year mark of living out of a suitcase, as they are waiting for a house to be prepared that will afford them some creature comforts that Americans have come to expect. Dick is regional commanding officer and directs Marine operations connected with American embassies in many countries (18, I think) in North Africa and Asia.

The job of class reporter is undergoing a change. Beginning with each class's reunion year, a new reporter will be appointed for the five-year term until the next reunion. Any of you out there interested in taking over the job? After all these years, you all should be grateful for a fresh approach! Our class has been very helpful; only one Alumni Gazette deadline has found me with no information for our column. To put your name in the pot, please call or write the Alumni Office or me.

A very eventful year has passed since my last column. It has brought a great many changes to our lives. Larry has been extremely busy. During this year he has finished his residency, taken (and passed) his specialty boards, made more than ten major trips to meetings and studies, and gone on active duty with the Navy. Larry is heading the radiation oncology division at Bethesda Naval Hospital and likes his work there very much. At home our March baby arrived on April 1, 1975. At 9 lb. 3 oz. Rob was quite an April fool. In May we took the boys to Charleston, S.C., Disney World, and the beach. In June we moved out of our house in Charlottesville and spent three weeks waiting to get into our house here in Washington. July also brought us a larger sailboat which we keep on the Chesapeake Bay and sail on almost every weekend from April to January. In October we took the boys to San Francisco and Seattle for two weeks. December brought ten house guests for Christmas week and a lot of news from fellow class members.

Before I relay that news, I would like to thank Mary Stedman Gordon for the great job she did writing this column during my year's "vacation."

Like Mary, we have found that the Washington area is home for dozens of William and Mary alumni. In November I received a phone call from Linda Trice Smith, who had discovered that she lived two blocks from us. She and her husband Gus have chaired the tennis committee for our community this past year.

We were Christmas shopping at the Hecht Co. nearby and ran into Sue Hopkinson Sutherland, who is managing a large part of that store at Montgomery Mall, one of Washington's largest shopping areas.

Dwaine and Marie Harrell came by during the Christmas holidays with their son, Christopher. At 18 months, Chris is a real charmer. Dwaine continues as a psychologist with the Newport News Public Schools.

Bob McIvor spent December traveling, as usual. He flew first to San Francisco and then on to Hawaii where he spent a week with Buzz and Kathy Hawkins Donehower. From Hawaii he flew to Australia, then to New Zealand, back to Los Angeles, and finally to New Orleans to see the Penn State game before heading home to Richmond, Va.

Joan Speer Henderson wrote that she is still selling real estate and is now living in a condominium at Vero Beach, Fla. She enclosed a picture of her three-year old daughter, Lauren, who is a real beauty.

We also had a card from Joan Simpson Dainer and her family. They are living in Portsmouth, Va., where Mike '66 is finishing a residency in obstetrics and gynecology at Portsmouth Naval Hospital. They, too, have a sailboat which they use not only for family cruising but also for racing. Their "wins" so far include second place in each of the Langley, Azalea Festival, and Norfolk Naval Sailing Association regattas and third place in the Governor's Cup Regatta. Joan's Irish Setter Jack has also been winning some honors in dog shows.

Barbara Baird Pyle and her husband, Paul, have a new addition to the family. Their daughter, Elyse Kimberly, was born on November 17, 1975. Paul is now the personnel director for Zinsco Corporation, a division of G.T.E. Sylvania, in Hampton. They are buying a home in Poquoson, Va.

Tron Brekke is an agent with the FBI. He is now living in the Washington, D.C., area.

Jeff Gaber and his wife Sharon are now living at Fort Polk, La. Their daughter, Meredith Lee was born on June 17.

Chuck Sievers graduated from the Marshall-Wythe School of Law and is now practicing in the Manassas, Va., area.

Tom Witty graduated from the Medical College of Virginia School of Dentistry in 1971. After two years in the U.S. Navy, he is now in private dental practice in Newport News. He and his wife, Connie, have a daughter, Lisa Diane, who was born in April 1975.

John Brooks is now an assistant professor in the theatre department at Loyola University of Chicago.

Missy Crowgey is now associated with the Galveston Independent Schools, Galveston, Tex.

Shirley Harkess is working part-time as an administrative intern in the Office of Academic Affairs while continuing her duties as an assistant professor in the sociology department at the University of Kansas in Lawrence.

Terry Bennett is now associated with the firm of Skeeters and Benett.

Dave Heenan has joined Western Air Lines.

Jim Deinlein has returned to his hometown of Charlottesville, Va., where he is practicing law in the firm of Barrick, Feil and Deinlein.

Billy Williams is the Manager of Planning and Customer Service for Burlington Printing Service Company of Burlington Industries, Burlington, N.C. His second daughter, Jennifer Michelle, was born on August 18, 1975.

Tom Stewart is leading a busy life. He is the Instructor of Classical Languages at Casady School in Oklahoma City, Okla. He also teaches journalism and mass communication. His wife, Marren, is the Dean of Girls at the same school. They have one son, Adam Wayne, who is two years old. Tom and Marren both spent the summer of 1972 in Italy on Fulbright Scholarships.

Louise Hudgins Williams is employed by N.A.S.A. - Langley Research Center in the area of Noise Reduction Research. She is interested in metaphysics and parapsychology and would be interested in talking with or forming a study group with classmates who have a similar interest.

Jim Chipps is the Chief of Data Processing at the U.S. Military Academy Computer Center at West Point. He wrote that Sam and Laura Daughtry Smart are also stationed at West Point. She is an optometrist at the post hospital. At Homecoming this past year Jim and his wife had a reunion with Randy and Teri Bell, Mike and Beth Smith, John and Barbara Spellman, and Tom and Kathy Davis. Mike Smith was married in August 1975 to the former Elizabeth Sheets.

Jay Mansfield is associated with the Landmark School, a Learning Disabilities Foundation, as an educator. He and his wife have a four year old son Jeffrey and are expecting their second child in May.

Rebecca Jones Byrd is doing a pediatric residency at Duke University Medical Center.

Sherri Carpini West is an instructor at Brookdale Community College, teaching World History. In her spare time she enjoys playing tennis and is working for NOW, the National Organization for Women. Her husband, Bob, is in practice with a private firm at the Jersey Shore. He enjoys sailing hobbie cats and bugging around in his Austin-Healey.

John Lippert graduated from the University of Cincinnati Medical School in 1971. He finished a residency in radiology at Emory University in June 1975. He is now doing a two-year tour in the Air Force and is based at U-Tapao Airfield in Thailand. He is married to the former Katherine Polisini.

Ann Clark Womeldorf has left her job at Georgetown University Library to work in the U.S. Senate Library at the Capitol Building.

Jane Brower Terry has a part-time position at a consultative psychiatrist at the U.S. Public Health Service Hospital in Baltimore, Md. In addition to that work, Jane enjoys her two-year old twin daughters and fox hunting on weekends.

Jean Lusardi is teaching chemistry at Woodbridge High School and coaching the girls' basketball teams.

Carolyn Grant Hart had an interesting article about her basketry workshops, courses, and an upcoming book in The Danbury Connecticut News-Times. She has been involved in the Indian program at the Eliot Pratt Education Center in New Milford, Conn., where her husband Dan is the Director.

Pris Walker Shea attended the alumni chapter meeting in Washington, D.C., before the basketball game with George Washington University.

Rick Wiggins attended the chapter meeting in Hartford, Conn.

69 Mrs. John D. Wintermute (R. Donnan Chancellor)
502 Wolfe Street
Alexandria, Va. 22314

Billy Dunn came to visit us several days before Christmas. He had just returned from South Africa to visit his family in Newport News for the holidays. He thoroughly enjoys his international assignment with Target, Inc., a package goods company and predicts his next move may be to Europe, perhaps Holland.

Living in Rockville, Md., are Don and Mary Hurn Korte. Don received his Ph.D. in Pharmacology from the Univ. of Tennessee Medical Units in Memphis, and is currently serving as a captain in the Army at the Walter Reed Army Institute of Research. While living in Memphis, Mary ('68) conducted medical research at a Veterans Administration hospital.

Jim Purtil wrote asking that I take him off our list of lost souls! Jim reported that he was married in 1973 to a Univ. of Mass. graduate. Jim and his wife, Kibbi, have a daughter, Carey Leigh, born in June 1975. Jim has been a realtor since graduation in the town in which they reside -- Glastonbury, Conn. Jim is also very active in sports and does quite a bit of officiating on the high school level.

I called Lynn Andrew Ellenson in NYC recently and learned that she had just been hired by CBS. She took a Katherine Gibbs course and said this was most helpful in obtaining her new position. David is in rabbinical school, and daughter Ruthie just celebrated her third birthday in December.

Chris Taylor Nance is teaching English at Hayfield Secondary in Fairfax and husband George is practicing dentistry. Chris and George are living in Springfield.

At the Third General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in America, Edwin Elliott was elected Recording Clerk. This essentially makes him one of the assistants to the principal continuing officer of the church.

A Christmas card from Rick and Jane Youngblood Spurling reported that Rick is now working in a libel and slander "chambers" in London. Jane keeps busy with a service club, an art class, and riding. Johnathan is now in a small hospital for children in Wiltshire, which is about 35 miles from London. Rick and Jane are living in a house that was originally 15th century, and Jane says it combines modern conveniences with old world charm.

Living in Scarsdale, N.Y., are Donald and Frosty Hoskins Friedman. They recently chartered a 50 foot sailboat with three other couples and sailed the Greek Islands for two weeks. Although Frosty's card did not mention this, I believe she is still with AT&T and Donald is with IBM.

From Ypsilanti, Mich., Gale Dehn Paisley writes that Larry is still with Marriott Personnel -- Farrell's division. He is now handling the Midwest, rather than the East Coast. Three-year-old Lisa is now attending nursery school two mornings a week (on a farm, no less, where she helps feed the animals and plant and "harvest" the garden!) Gale adds that Lisa seems to enjoy it, and that she enjoys the extra time for herself.

Ann Chancellor writes that she received her MFA from Boston University, and is presently designing costumes and teaching at Emerson College in Boston.

Peggy Sothoron is still in Laurel, Md., and is teaching at Parkdale High School. Peggy was made coordinator of her program, and is now teaching half day and supervising work-study students the remainder of the day. She is working on her MA at the Univ. of Md. and hopes to be a full-fledged administrator soon.

A Christmas visit with Marty McGuire Keating found her looking very well and happy. Marty left Hale and Dorr law firm in September, and has begun her own silk screening business. Michael is practicing law in Boston, and they enjoy many New England skiing and sailing trips.

Randy Bell received his Master's degree from Cambridge University in England, and is currently working for the State Department in Washington. He was previously assigned to Frankfurt, during which time he was promoted from vice-consul to consul. While assigned to Frankfurt, Randy was married and he and wife, Karla, returned to Washington last April.

Tom and Jane DeFrees Massey are living in Japan, where Tom is a Navy lawyer.

Thelda Kestenbaum, who graduated from the Univ. of Va. Medical School, is serving as a resident in dermatology at the Memphis Veterans Administration Hospital.

Sam Roakes writes that he served in Germany in the Army from 1970 to 1973, and is presently assigned to Fort Carson, Colo., as an Operations Officer, 4th Infantry Division. Sam was married while stationed in Germany in July 1972 to Pat Shaw. Sam received his Master of Science in Management from the Univ. of Arkansas, and is currently living in Colorado Springs. His next assignment, which will be June through December 1976, will be the Air Defense Artillery Advanced Course at Ft. Bliss, Tex.

Don and Ruth Johnson McGlothlin are stationed at Ft. Knox, Ky., where Don is a captain in the J.A.G. Corps. Their first child, Sean Patrick, was born on March 19, 1975.

Barb Johnson married Ricardo Valencia on December 26th. Barb is with Aero Peuro in NYC, and I believe Ricardo is also.

Living in Fredericksburg are Melvin and Frances Herring Reynolds. Frances has been elected to the Board of Directors of the Red Cross for Spotsylvania County and she also serves as secretary of the local chapter. Melvin is an engineer with Stone and Webster at the North Anna Power Plant.

Linda Lacy Hughes writes that Mark received his Master's in Urban Affairs from VPI in August 1974. While in Blacksburg, Linda worked in the VPI Library. They are now living in Newport News where Mark is the Senior City Planner. Linda is substitute teaching, and plans to attend graduate school in reading or guidance education.

Wynne Whitehurst very kindly sent me the Chi O newsletter once again. Wynne is still at NVCC as a counselor, and in addition is taking courses in drug abuse as well as accounting. She is also enrolled in a seminar in rape crisis counseling, as she plans to be working as a volunteer for the Fairfax County Rape Crisis Center.

Toni Biordi has written AT&T's first program for women in management. In addition, Toni is doing management training throughout the northeastern U.S.

Tom and Kathy Friedman Bright moved back to D.C., last April, as Tom accepted the position as press secretary to Congressman William S. Cohen of Maine.

Living in Virginia Beach are Bob and Linda Freeman Holmes. Bob has opened his own law office, and Linda is teaching at Western Branch High School in Chesapeake.

Bob and Judy Chase Kahn have purchased a home in Oakland, Calif., where Bob is in private law practice.

Bill and Judy Gordon Mentlik have moved to Mountainside, N.J., where Bill is a patent attorney. Judy is working as a kindergarten teacher and devoting a good bit of her spare time to making stained glass.

Living in Alexandria is Ann Nelms. Ann is working for Xerox Corporation.

Andy and Missy Galloway Parker are living in Williamsburg where Andy is with William and Mary. Their daughter, Lara, is attending school in Philadelphia.

Teaching at Hayfield High in Springfield is Kaye Pitts.

Jake and Ginger Graef Smith have moved to Poquoson, Va., where Jake has opened his own law practice. Ginger is working on a Federal Title IV-C project where she is resource teacher and in-service training teacher in reading for eight schools in York County.

Living in Upper Montclair, N.J., are Ray and SuSu Williams Villarosa. SuSu is clerking for a large law firm in Newark and Ray is with Federal Electric in Paramus.

Other news in the Chi O newsletter included the following. Les and Anne Bradstreet Smith's twin daughters are now four and son Brad is two. Johnny and Janet Ackroyd Ellis are still in Virginia Beach, where Janet is working for the City and Johnny is in insurance. In the Richmond area are Joe and Linda Kalen Trice. Peggy Riordan Simms plans to move to Atlanta.

Class members attending alumni chapter meetings recently include: Susan M. Wiggins in Hartford, Conn., on November 10; John Keiter in Boston on November 11; and Robert Brown, John Tozzi, Barbara Wade, and Steve Gaskins in Washington, D.C., on December 4. President Graves was the guest of honor at the Boston area chapter meeting and the D.C., area meeting was a pre-game reception before William and Mary's basketball team took on George Washington University.

My job at The President Ford Committee (Ford's campaign national headquarters) continues to get busier and more frantic day by day the closer we get to the election. Despite the long twelve-hour day, it really is terrifically exciting. Our housekeeper is taking wonderful care of fifteen month Baby Peter while I'm gone, so all is working out quite well. To add to my busy schedule, Doug and I have been invited to have our house on tour in February (one of the ten homes on tour for Alexandria's Bicentennial Celebration). Doug is still the Director of Federal Marketing of Compress in Washington.

Please take just a moment to let me know what you are doing. Looking forward to hearing from you!

71 Craig Windham
Chevy Chase, Md. 20015

Foresaking his beloved rank of Post Office pigeonholes, Tom Rees reluctantly re-entered the world of academics this fall. Now a student at Georgetown Law, he completed his metamorphosis from blue collar worker to cultured student by taking a part-time job at the National Portrait Gallery. "Sak" enjoys tinkering with such interesting artifacts as original Edison Talking Machine cylinders which pass across his desk. Each gallery employee is entitled to have a portrait of his choice from the storage collection hung next to his desk. Tom's choice, a huge, life-size portrait of Ethel Merman, arms akimbo, buckskin blowing in the breeze, from her role in "Annie Get Your Gun."

The novelty of the new town traffic light has worn off in Spartanburg, S.C., where Chris Cheney continues her work as Director of Special Education for a county district. She lives in a house that has been described as "a bush with a roof" and has recently entertained such luminaries as Bev Diggle-Knoll. Visitors are treated to a whirlwind tour of "Sparkle City" (Spartanburg?) which includes a stop at the local N.O.W. Headquarters, where Chris is active. Cathy Bryan writes to announce her wedding this month to Ed Johnson and to set us all thinking about the upcoming 5th Anniversary Reunion. "Wish we could do something unusual, like a keg party at the draft board." Cathy also suggests a class gift to some worthy cause, such as the King Scholarship Fund ("like what are the 'in' causes around the College these days?--God forbid we shouldn't be relevant.") Do you have any comments or ideas? Let me know, and we'll give them an airing.

Don Pulliam is overflowing with enthusiasm about an "out-of-this-world year." He got his Master's in 1974 and is now a PhD candidate in Space Physics at the University of Wisconsin in Madison. His dissertation concerns a project with which he has been involved for several years: "we built an experiment which flew in a Javelin sounding rocket 500 miles into space. It operated at 80,000 volts: the highest voltage we think has ever been flown into space." The launching, from Manitoba just south of the Arctic Circle, must have been a great experience--Don describes dazzling auroras, nonchalant polar bears, blizzards, and windchill factors of 90 below. The experiment was a success. Don's wife, Joanne Dukeshire Pulliam '72, is a Disability Claims Adjudicator for Social Security and big on the Madison tennis circuit. Don and Joanne spent last summer camping in such spectacular locations as the Badlands and the Tetons.

The "Where Are They Now?" Dept. continues its success in smoking out fellow alumni: Kent Laikind is a First Lieutenant in the U.S. Army, commanding an infantry unit in Baumholder Federal make for such students is that they contact the college which has admitted them and request an extension of the deadline; then, if absolutely necessary, they should pay a deposit to their second choice college, with the understanding that it may have to be forfeited and considered as an educational investment if they are later admitted to an institution they prefer. It is not fair to expect colleges with competitive admissions such as ours to change sound procedures merely to be one of the first colleges to notify its applicants.

Is it possible to change the timing of your notices?

We are very concerned about the impact of the timing of our notices; however, because of our current policies and staffing, it does not appear practical for us to speed up our notification date. We did a follow-up study several years ago of those who were admitted and decided not to enroll. Only 30 out of 384 respondents indicated that the late notification date was a factor in their deciding to attend elsewhere. Therefore, although it is difficult for those individuals who have become involved in earlier deadlines, it does not appear that this is a significant factor in our losing capable applicants with strong credentials since they are normally applying to institutions with procedures similar to ours.

How can students get some indication in advance of official notification of their chances for admission?

We publish information about previously enrolled students in the form of a profile which is included in our publications that are sent to prospective students. By careful review of this, applicants can make some generalizations regarding how they compare to previously enrolled students, but obviously they will not have definite information until the selection process has been completed. The members of the admissions staff are in the same position in this regard since our admissions decisions are controlled by the number and quality of applicants each year.

I wrote a recommendation for a prospective student. How can I get information regarding the action that the admissions staff takes on this person?

This has always been a very sensitive issue because of the problems in notifying third parties of action taken on individual applications, particularly when the decision is made not to admit. This can cause resentment by some applicants since it may not be the type of information they they would like to have released. With the recent development of federal guidelines and legal action regarding confidentiality of records, we have become even more concerned about this matter. We are therefore reluctant to release such information other than to individuals directly involved. However, I do recognize the problem of our alumni in their relations with individuals in their community. Maybe the following suggestion will help: when a student or parent asks you to write a letter of recommendation to the Admissions Office, make an agreement with them that you will do so provided that when they receive their letter of notification they will contact you and advise you of the decision. This will allow the individual applicants to make the decision of whether or not they want this information released and will also help our alumni be better informed in this regard.

Republic of Germany. "P.S. That's near Kaiser-slautern on the map." (courtesy of Capt. Waldo Miller). Marian Godbold Harris and husband Jim are living in Richmond, where both work in the Classified Ad department of the Richmond News-papers. She sends news of Sandy St. John, who's now living and working in San Francisco. John Bartholomew has finished his ROTC obligations and is living in Richmond. After a year as a Psychology Assistant in a N.Y., mental hospital, Nick Lucchetti drifted back to Williamsburg and was involved for 10 months with the archeological excavations at Kingsmill. Nick enjoyed this work so much that he enrolled in a Master's program in the Anthropology Dept. of Florida State University. He lived with Jeff Trammell '73. Following 6 months off to work for the State of Virginia and the archeology department of Colonial Williamsburg, Nick expects to get his degree in June. "I hope to return to the 'Burg to participate in the possible excavation of a sunken Revolutionary War ship in the York River." Nick reports that Neil Gewirtzman and wife Marsha Seidman Gewirtzman are alive and well in Livingston, N.J., and he also asks that Steve Wilson write him at Box 1923, Williamsburg.

For those who have asked, the Where Are They Now list is based on a precise, scientific formula which pinpoints those who have never written in with news, or those from whom we have not heard in some time.

Continued inclusion on this ignominious roster can only be prevented by sending in news of yourself (anonymous informants welcome). This month's list: Sharon Maiers, Matt Klimczak, Suzanne Barnett, David Lemon, Sarah Chapman, Bill Petty, Phil Budahn, Kathy Betton, Catherine Cox, Robert Kipps, and W.R.C. Munsey. (By the way, your own nominations for this list are welcome).

'71 Alumni have been turning up at chapter meetings around the country. Suzanne Steagle attended the Providence, R.I., meeting in Nov., Bill Lotz and Mark and Pat Shriver were on hand in Atlanta at year's end, Dan and Bobbie Ferrari were at the Nov. meeting in Honolulu, and Karen Niles, Jim Callear, Kathy Schilling, and Marira Boundy were seen at a D.C., reception prior to the mighty Indian's close loss to G.W. in basketball.

Finally, Cathy Tully quit her job as Juvenile Court Counselor in Williamsburg and moved to "Sin City" (Las Vegas) where she worked as a cocktail waitress at the Union Plaza Hotel and Casino. "My costume is "unreal!" As of October, she planned to spend the winter traveling in Europe.

Only one more installment before next fall, so get those cards and letters in by the end of this month, and have a great spring!

Stuart Martin dropped me a letter way back in November. He expressed his confidence in my getting his news into the Gazette correctly. Sure enough, it did make it, but Stuart's letter was too late for one deadline and managed to get lost for another. Sooner or later, though, all the news I get, does show up in print sooner or later, so please write and be patient! By now Stuart and his wife, Barbara, '71, should be well into the restoration of their four-story, brick townhouse in Richmond. They were just about to go to settlement on the 150-year-old house when I heard from him in November. At that time Stuart and Barbara, who were teaching in Suffolk, had plans to conduct their second Comparative Cultures Seminar, traveling to Paris, Brussels, Riems, and London. This one will be April 10-18, and if it's anything like the first one, it sounds like it should be great.

Stuart's former roommate, Steve Glessner, is at UVa. in his third year of medicine and has had the misfortune to suffer third-degree burns while frying chicken! Hopefully he has made a full recovery now.

Lou Bjestad is married and doing graduate work at Riverside, Calif.

Several of our classmates have attended alumni chapter meetings around the country. Attempts are being made to form a Washington, D.C., area chapter, and there was a cocktail reception before a December basketball game with George Washington University. Dave Adams, Kathy Zimmerman, Marie and Roy Bosco and I were there from our class. I talked with Marie and Roy, who are in their final year of law school and looking forward to graduation.

In Boston John Pagan and Janice Gardner were at a chapter meeting held in November.

Evy DuBois and Jane Rehmke attended a post-game party in Somerset, N.J., when W&M's football team played Rutgers during October.

Here are some whereabouts of a number of people, sent to me from the Alumni Society office. Dennis Painter is married and working on an MBA at the College.

Linda Charles Dill is a senior research lab technician at the University of Missouri in Columbia, Mo.

Pamela Hume is employed by Christian Broadcasting Network in Portsmouth, Va.

Marsha Kays Campbell is teaching in Fincastle, Va., where husband, Louis Campbell, '72, is Assistant Commonwealth Attorney.

Adrienne Weinberger Schuette has a Master of Public Policy and works for the Michigan State Legislature.

Laurie Baker Manning and Charles '72, are enjoying living in Warrenton, Va., where she teaches school.

Howard and Jeanne Gregory Lebow are in Richmond where he is a medical student at MCV, and she teaches drama and English.

Harleen Harper Dizer lives and teaches in Fairfax County, where she and her husband, Tom, have bought a new house. They enjoy working with a Junior High Youth Group at their church.

John Douglas Sterrett is in dental school at the University of Tennessee. He likes Tennessee, but misses Virginia too.

Art Barksdale received his MBA from Emory University and is now with Metropolitan Life in Atlanta. He was reported to have spent a recent weekend raving around in Winston-Salem. Art, raving around? Who would ever believe it? That's it. Be sure to write.

Well gang, I have the dubious honor of being the Class Reporter for the next few years and since my New's Year's resolution was to sit down and compile all I know and have heard about our class, here goes:

I am living in Greenbelt, Md., and working in Washington for A.T.&T. I am in a management program with my first assignment in the sales department. Alumni are numerous in this area; at the pregame reception before the William and Mary - George Washington University basketball game on December 4 were Sandy Wilson, Linda Cleek, Joan Harrigan, Betsy Fitz, Lynn Smith, Kitty Boyle, Debbie Rutledge, Chris McKechnie, Jan Rivere, Leanne Dorman, Gerry Megas, Jim DiSculle, and Wayne Lee. Betsy, Lynn and Linda are all working on Capital Hill; others in the area include K.C. Jones Lin, now teaching music in Virginia schools, Dodge Havens, Kim Faris, working at the American Anthropological Association.

Williamsburg and graduate schools seem to have claimed a lot of graduates. For those who don't know, Van Black is back as Area Coordinator for the Bryan Complex district and living in plush quarters in Old Dominion. William and Mary just wouldn't be the same without Van. Marcia Carl is the GRA in Barrett and working on her Master's in education, and Joan Harrigan is director of chapter programs for the Society of the Alumni. Studying law at Marshall Wythe are Wyatt Bethel and Sharon Pandak, and in the MBA program at William and Mary are Tom Ferguson and Jim Gilstrap.

Other graduate students include: Debbie Rutledge - Johns Hopkins in Baltimore, Md. - environmental biology.

Mike Malpass - University of Wisconsin at Madison, Wisc. - anthropology.

Mike Beamer and Cam Griffin - Penn State University - Public Administration.

Jim Barksdale - Business at Columbia University.

Tykie Tobin - University of California for a Master's in management of the arts.

Kathy Marshall - University of Virginia - special education.

Anne Davis - Virginia Commonwealth University - Master's in Urban Studies.

Mark Miars - University of Cincinnati Law School.

Cynthia Lewis - Harvard Law School.

Bruce Cleland - University of Virginia Medical College.

Ellis Maxby - Eastern Virginia Medical School.

Candae Deen - University of Mainz, Germany - Master's in history.

Bill Smyth - University of South Carolina - Master's in history concentrating on southern cultural and intellectual history, also has a graduate assistantship.

Reggie Clark - University of Florida - Business Administration (and also training in track)

Steven Chabot - Salmon P. Chase College of Law of Northern Kentucky State College, Covington, Ky.

Jim Weekley - Northern Illinois University - has a graduate assistantship to coach debate - Master's in communications.

Honors received - our class is becoming famous!

Carmella Maurizi - Honorary Mention winner in the Top Ten College Women Contest of 1975 sponsored by Glamour Magazine.

Sylvia Chappell - special guest editor in August issue of Mademoiselle, now a copywriter in Richmond working for Thalimer's.

Dwight Shurko - 1974-75 editor-in-chief of the Flat Hat won first prize in the features category of the National Honorary Awards competition sponsored by the Pi Delta Epsilon National journalism honor society.

And the class is beginning to scatter. Connie Warren has joined Busch Gardens on a permanent basis as sales representative responsible for tour development. Also in Williamsburg is Mandy Linden, now working with the Head Start preschool program. Kathleen Burke is Virginia's first female feed inspector working in the Norfolk area following completion of a training program with the Department of Agriculture. Janice Lloyd Banks is also in the Norfolk area working at the Old Dominion University while husband Charley, '73, is working on his Master's in Marine Biology. Diane Gropper and Brenda Joyner are sharing an apartment in New York City. Brenda is working with A.T.&T. Long Lines and Diane has started with Chase Manhattan. Also in the big city, Lana Boone Swan and Dave Fedeles.

Well, there's a lot I don't know and I've probably left out half of what I've heard but this is long enough for now. Please write and let me know what you all are doing. I need all the help I can get for this. Thanks and hope to hear from you soon.

Co-eds Move Into Monroe

Monroe Hall when it was completed in 1924 . . .

If the walls could talk, they could probably tell some good stories at Monroe Hall. But let's hope they can't, at least not for the foreseeable future, while the new occupants -- 144 coeds -- live there.

Since it was completed back in 1924, Monroe has been occupied by men (except for two years during World War II), but now the women have taken over -- all part of a shift necessitated by the College's $3.4 million renovation of five residence halls.

The newest occupants will find Monroe much more livable than the men they displaced. Occupancy has been reduced from 168 to 144, and the $735,000 renovation has resulted in such improvements as updated plumbing, heating, and wiring; expanded kitchen facilities, the addition of laundry facilities, and new multi-purpose lounges that can be used for meetings, seminars, study, and recreation.

One thing that has not been changed, however, is the basic soundness of the structure. When the College released the picture at the top shortly after Monroe was completed more than half a century ago, it called Monroe "one of the new type of dormitories built at the College . . . a thoroughly fireproof structure containing memorials to many distinguished alumni."

The renovation of two residence halls -- Old Dominion and Monroe -- has now been completed. Next in line are Jefferson, Chandler, and Taliaferro. The entire project is expected to be completed by January, 1978.

. . . and the renovated interior today.
