ALU/INI GAZETTE of the Clege of William and Mary

A Liberal Education: Our Common Heritage

I feel very privileged to represent at this podium the sixteen Colonial Colleges that are being recognized as part of this Founders Day

We are, in some ways, a mixed lot, ranging in age from 340 down to 200 years; having student bodies at the undergraduate level from under 400 at St. John's to over 7000 at Pennsylvania;

representing today both the simple college from which we each began to the multi-purposed complex university that some of us have become. We are both coeducational and single sex; public and private, and somewhere in between; we are non-sectarian and church-affiliated; we are located in ten of the original thirteen states, in the largest cities and in the smallest towns. After two hundred years and more, in many ways we represent the diversity

mission of each of these original Colonial

As I have examined the history and present of America itself.

celebration at The College of Charleston.

"My one simple plea on this Founder's Day . . . is for each of us to reaffirm the mission of his college in the year of its founding, articulate again the values of a liberal education."

About this article

The value of the liberal arts in an increasingly career-oriented, technological society is the subject of intense discussion and hot debate throughout the entire educational establishment these days.

As a college devoted to the liberal arts and sciences as its primary educational mission, William and Mary has a special stake in these discussions and debates--for they affect the planning of youngsters and the planning of state and federal support as well.

President Graves, in his recent annual reports, has focused on this controversy; his most recent report was devoted almost entirely to a positive exposition of the William and Mary concept of a high-quality liberal education to students and society alike. His articulation of that position has been stepped up during a number of recent speaking engagements. Among these was the address he presented March 5 to the Newcomen Society in North America. Later this spring he will address the graduating class at Old Dominion University, Norfolk's urban university which once was a William and Mary branch.

It was especially appropriate, however, that he "represent" the colleges and universities which were founded before 1776, as the speaker at the College of Charleston's Founders Day program on March 20--as president of the second oldest college, an alumnus and former administrator of the oldest college, and an alumnus of the fourth oldest college. The College of Charleston (1770) conferred the honorary Litt.D. degree on President Graves, citing him for his leadership and contributions in America and abroad to the betterment of higher education.

Dr. Graves used the occasion to, once again, advocate the historic and continuing importance of the liberal education to contemporary society. His remarks, entitled "A Liberal Education: Our Common Heritage," follow:

Colleges, however, I have been struck by one overwhelming common denominator among us, beyond the simple fact that we were all founded 200 or more years ago. Each one of us, today as at our founding, is committed, in important ways, to the values of a liberal education. The standards by which we offer and measure education are articulated in many different ways, but our colleges, together, remind me of Alfred North Whitehead's definition of a liberal education, as education for freedom.

Almost a half century ago he said, "What we should aim at producing is men (and women) who possess both culture and expert knowledge in some special direction. Their expert knowledge will give them the ground to start from, and their culture will lead them as deep as philosophy and as high as art", (in search of freedom).

I would like to spend a few minutes this morning sharing with you some thoughts about this commitment of ours. I see it not only as a search for freedom, but essential if we are to retain our freedom.

We have moved nationally, in the past three years, into a period of relative scarcity and deficits which is unprecedented for most of us, who have reached adulthood since the depresion years of the 1930's. Many of us, having grown up in John Kenneth Galbraith's "Affluent Society", are faced with an uncomfortable and troubling adjustment. For perhaps the first time we are confronting the spectre of being forced to cope with something less than all we desire, individually and as a nation; of having to exercise some degree of self-discipline; of being increasingly regimented as individuals by a government which must try somehow to make national ends meet.

We are faced as a country with the prospect of economic stagnation, and as a people with the leveling off of the American dream. We have lost a degree of confidence in ourselves, and we are finding that some other countries have lost confidence in the United States. For the first time since the Second World War we may need to face the probability that our country is no longer number one, in the complex of the international political, economic, and military power structure. Furthermore, we may find that we no longer have the resources and influence to do much about it. The signals that affect our lives as individuals, and as a nation, have changed. Are we ready?

Over the past thirty-five years we have become, not only used to, but dependent as a nation and as a people upon an abundance of material things. We have become dependent on material things both for our present satisfaction and our sense of expectation about the future. Now, abruptly, the American dream of unlimited opportunity, in a land of plenty and power, may be slipping away. We may be awakening to what will be, for some, a period of failing hopes and disillusionment.

The danger is real. As we are forced to make fundamental shifts in our national and individual priorities, all too many of us may not have the inner resources and character to face the depressing reality of having less than our heart's desire. As our values have become more materialistic in the years of expansion and affluence, our spiritual values may have drifted away. Only we can be the judge of our inner resources, but we may have little on which to build. The values, beliefs, and strong commitments of the students at our colleges 200 years ago, who were willing to sacrifice their lives for their country, may no longer be there to support us. The way is not entirely clear for America in the years ahead. The material beacon which we may have followed too easily and for too long has become clouded, and the light of ideals seems to be in shadow.

I paint a somber picture of our Nation's Bicentennial. But I am not suggesting that we go into mourning for what might have been. Nor am I going to present, on this Founders Day, a gloomy prospect for the next 100 years. I thoroughly disagree with Gore Vidal, who in connection with his new book, 1876, has recently been quoted in Time as saying, "I should think a year of mourning would be highly salutary--for our lost innocence, our eroding liberties, our vanishing resources, our ruined environment."

Now is the time to turn such a prospect around. Especially in times such as these we must have hope. Last fall the Honorable F. David Matthews, speaking to the annual meeting of the American Council on Education,

Cont. on P. 7

Budget Change Helps But College Still Short on Student Aid Help

March should help blunt the pressures for increasing tuition in future years at William and Mary

The Assembly went on record as favoring a more equitable allocation of State tax-fund appropriations among institutions of higher education in Virginia.

William and Mary is in a position to benefit from the provision since, in the current budget year, 37.1 per cent of its educational budget comes from tuition. By contrast, the University of Virginia receives only 26.8 per cent of its' educational budget from tuition. The percentage at the community colleges in Virginia is 17.9 per cent. To many, the General Assembly action comes none too soon in order to preserve William and Mary's ability to offer an education equal to many fine, highly endowed private universities - but at a cost, because of its state affiliation, well below those same institutions.

That double edged advantage attracts many of the nation's finest students to William and Mary, but it may be in danger of disappearing. William and Mary is no longer an inexpensive school to attend; in fact, spurred by inflation and shrinking state support, tuition increases since 1970 have made the College the most costly state institution in Virginia. Costs for in-state students are now $2250 - up from $1250 in 1970; for non-residents, they have risen from $2184 to $3588.

The problem is compounded by insufficient financial aid -- the traditional means by which institutions have offset high costs for students without the means to pay, allowing them to open their doors to students from all levels of society.

In 1975-76, the College could offer only about 10 per cent of its students financial aid - compared to 40-60 per cent at peer institutions. With a certified financial need by William and Mary students in 1975-76 of $916,845 and actual resources of $414,767, more than half a million dollars in financial need went un-met at the College.

William and Mary, of course, does not go wanting for qualified applicants; in fact, it has about six applica- general fees alone have increased by Assembly before it closed up shop in not the point, says Dr. James C. Livingston, Dean of the Undergraduate Program.

The excellence of a university, says Livingston, depends both on the quality of the faculty and the "academic quality of its students." And there is no relationship between a student's academic ability and his financial resources.

Livingston adds: "A college with inadequate financial aid can expect to lose scores of its best applicants to other colleges with better financial aid programs. The consequence must certainly be a decline in the quality of a university itself."

William and Mary faces a similar problem on the graduate and professional school level where a substantial number of students require and merit financial assistance that the College cannot give

While the College received $450,000 for graduate fellowships, traineeships, and assistantships this year from Federal, State, endowment, and private income, the needs are much greater.

In arts and sciences, for instance, fellowship funds have not increased in the last five years while tuition and

An action taken by the General tions for every opening. But that is 40 per cent. The School of Business Administration could offer only 34 of its 180 graduate students financial assistance which amounted to less than $30,000. At the University of Virginia, the business school has a half-million dollar loan fund from private sources available for graduate financial assistance.

> With no large endowment available, William and Mary relies on a variety of sources to get money for graduate study. And all of them, according to the Office of College Development, pose problems.

"Federal funding is subject to shifting policies," says Stella Nei-man, director of sponsored programs, "and in the recent years, this support has declined significantly. Corporations and foundations are usually unwilling to commit themselves to more than one year's support at a time, making it difficult to know how much money we can offer graduate students in advance."

At the same time, she points out, enrollments in the professional schools of business administration, education, and law continue to climb, placing a heavier burden on the College's already limited resources. The result is insufficient funding in all areas of professional and graduate study.

What that means, says Dr. William E. O'Connell, Jr., associate dean of the School of Business Administration, is that the School "loses some highly qualified students to other schools simply because they can give financial aid.

And that can diminish the reputation and quality of a university, according to Dr. John E. Selby, Graduate Dean of Arts and Sciences.

Research is vital to the freshness of the overall university," says Selby, "but it is virtually impossible without good, though not necessarily large, graduate and professional programs.

"In all fields, the interaction of undergraduate and graduate professional students is beneficial to both. Simultaneous activity in many areas and on many levels is the sign of a vibrant intellectual community from times," and only nine said they which undergraduate, graduate, fa- cheated "often." which undergraduate, graduate, faculty and community all profit.

attract the best students, and help them, whatever their economic class, the university will suffer."

College Holds First Statewide Minority Meeting

The first state-wide conference for minority students at Virginia colleges and universities was hosted March 20-21 by the Black Student Organization at William and Mary.

Some 57 delegates from minority groups on 15 campuses attended the William and Mary meeting.

As an outgrowth of the meeting, plans are being formulated for establishing a permanent state-wide coalition of minority students.

The William and Mary Black Student Organization organized the meeting in cooperation with Leroy O. Moore, the College's Director of Minority Student Affairs.

College Study Finds Judicial Systems Okay

The Honor Code and judicial systems at William and Mary are basically sound and should undergo no fundamental changes.

That was the major finding of a committee appointed last October by President Graves to evaluate the student judicial systems and recommend ways in which to improve

Chaired by Dr. John E. Selby, a professor of history and Graduate Dean of Arts and Sciences, the Committee concluded that the honor and judicial systems function adequately and "enjoy the overwhelming confidence of the College com-

While no sweeping changes were recommended, the Committee did suggest several housekeeping changes that would achieve more uniformity and integration among the judicial systems of the undergraduate college and the schools. The Committee concluded that the various systems had "developed relatively independent of each other."

The Committee recommended the establishment of a Judicial Advisory Committee, composed of chairpersons of each honor council, the Dean of Students, the Graduate Dean of Arts and Sciences, and the Deans of the Schools of Business Administration, Education, and Law, or their designees.

The new committee would both facilitate communication between the various judicial systems and sponsor a "continuing educational program reminding students and faculty . . of the meaning of the honor system."

One change the Committee recommended against was the reintroduction of the so-called "rat fink" provision of the Honor Code. Dropped some five years ago, the provision says failure to report an honor violation by another is an honor violation in itself.

Based on a survey of some 2091 students, the Committee concluded that cheating at William and Mary was not a threat to the grading system. Of the 2091 who responded to a questionnaire, 162 admitted they had cheated "once," 158 a "few ty and community all profit. While this represented 16 per cent 'But without the resources to of the students who responded, the Committee pointed out that "as a percentage of the thousands of opportunities for cheating over the course of the respondents' combined careers at the College, the effect is less frightening."

42 per cent of the faculty and 60 per cent of the students who responded had not observed an instance of cheating in up to five years.

The Committee recommended several ways of strengthen residence hall councils, which govern life within each hall. One recommendation called for a greater range of penalties for infractions in dormitories, including financial reimbursement for damages caused by a student and the termination of a student's room contract with the College.

President Graves thanked the Committee for its "careful and comprehensive" report and asked Dr. George R. Healy, vice president for academic affairs, to implement the recommendations in all appropriate

ALUMNI GAZET of the Clege of William and Mary

April, 1976:

Volume 43, No. 10

Editor, Ross L. Weeks, Jr. Associate Editor, S. Dean Olson Art Director, George A. Crawford, Jr. Class News, Trudi S. Neese Vital Statistics, Mary T. Branch Typesetting, Sylvia B. Holmes

Established June 10, 1933, by the Society of the Alumni of the College of William and Mary, Box GO, Williamsburg, Va. 23185; monthly. Second-class postage paid at Williamsburg. Subscription rate $5.00 a year. Officers of the Society are: President, Jean Canoles Bruce '49; Vice President, John F. Morton Jr. '58; Secretary-Treasurer, Harriet Nachman Storm '64; Executive Vice President, Gordon C. Vliet '54. Board of Directors: To December 1978: Jean Canoles Bruce '49, Norfolk, Virginia; J. W. Hornsby, Jr. '50, Newport News, Virginia; Thomas M. Mikula '48, Meriden, N. H.; R. Bradshaw Pulley '39, Virginia Beach, Va.; Harriet Nachman Storm'64, Hampton, Virginia; To December 1977: Glen E.McCaskey'63, Hilton Head Island, South Carolina; Norman Moomjian '55, New York, New York; John F. Morton Jr. '58, New Orleans, Louisiana; William L. Person '24, Williamsburg, Virginia; Patricia King Sell '58, La Jolla, California; To December 1976: Harold M. Bates '52, Roanoke, Virginia; Marjorie Retzke Gibbs '44, Akron, Ohio; Elaine Elias Kappel '55, Pitfsburgh, Pennsylvania; Raymond T. Waller '40, Richmond, Virginia; Hiflsman V. Wilson '51, Lutherville-Timonium, Maryland.

Board of Visitors

John R. L. Johnson, Jr., retired vice president of Hercules, Inc., has been elected Rector of the Board of Visitors of the College of William and Mary.

Johnson, who succeeds R. Harvey Chappell, Jr., of Richmond as Rector, has been a member of the Board since 1970. A former president of the College's Society of the Alumni, he is a member of the class of 1928, holds an M.A. from William and Mary, and is a 1935 graduate of the Harvard Law School.

The newly elected Rector is a native of Franklin, Va., and now resides in Chadds Ford, Pa. His career included two years as an assistant librarian at William and Mary before undertaking his law studies. He joined Hercules, Inc. of Wilmington, Del., in 1936 and became the company's general counsel in 1949. He was elected vice president and member of the executive and finance committees in 1955. He is a member of Phi Beta Kappa, the board of Blue Cross-Blue Shield in Delaware, the Delaware State Chamber of Commerce and the Delaware Crime Commission. He is a member of the Endowment Association Board and the Advisory Committee on Special Resources for the College.

Four alumni and a former William and Mary athletic director and football coach have been appointed to the Board of Visitors of the College by Governor Mills E. Godwin Jr.

His father, John Rochelle Lee Johnson, taught English at William and Mary, and the new Rector established in 1972 a graduate fellowship in his memory.

The outgoing Rector had served two consecutive terms in that post. He was not eligible for reappointment to the Board after 1976.

Other officers of the Board who were elected at the March meeting are Frederick Deane, Jr., of Richmond, chairman of the board of the Bank of Virginia Company and a Board member since 1970, Vice Rector succeeding Johnson; and Mrs. George B. Falck '50 of McLean, Secretary succeeding W. H. Bow-ditch of Newport News, whose membership on the Board was completed earlier in March.

The Board also named as chairman of its standing committees the following members: Johnson, Executive Committee; Deane, Finance Commit-Mrs. Falck, Buildings and Grounds Committee; Dr. George D. Sands of Williamsburg, Academic Affairs Committee; Johnson, Honorary Degrees Committee; William Hubard of Roanoke, Development and Alumni Affairs Committee; Mrs. Pamela Pauly Chinnis of Alexandria, Student Affairs Committee.

Johnson

Chappell

Governor Names 5 New Visitors; 2 Re-appointed

Board Approves

Recipients For

Commencement

Honorary Degree

Board Elects

J.R.L. Johnson

as New Rector;

as Vice Rector

Frederick Deane

The new Visitors are Joseph E. Baker '50, Edward E. Brickell '50, Herbert V. Kelly '41, Raymond T. Waller '40, and Milton L. Drewer, Jr., who served as athletic director from 1957-62 and as football coach from 1957-63.

Four prominent individuals, including the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare, will receive honorary degrees from William and Mary at the Spring Commencement in

Two other current members of the Board were reappointed to three-year terms. They are William S.

The four are Dr. F. David Mathews, the Secretary of HEW, who will deliver the Commencement address; Thomas Roy Jones, an industrialist, consultant, and leader in business circles; Dr. Robert Martin Coles, research psychiatrist at Harvard University; and Dr. Henry Rosovsky, a 1949 alumnus of William and Mary who is the Dean of the Faculty of Arts and Sciences at Harvard College.

Mathews is on leave as president of the University of Alabama. The youngest member of the Presidential Cabinet, he will receive the honorary degree of doctor of humane letters. Jones, a resident of Gloucester, Hubard, an insurance executive from Roanoke, and James E. Kilbourne, a doctor from Petersburg.

Baker is an attorney in Norfolk, where he has been in private practice since 1964. Brickell is division superintendent of schools at Virginia Beach. A former assistant to the president during the tenure of Dr. Davis Y. Paschall, Brickell received his Ed.D. from William and Mary in 1973 and a certificate of advanced study in 1970.

Kelly received his law degree from William and Mary in 1943. A past president of the Newport News Bar Association, he is an attorney with the firm of Jones, Blechman, Woltz & Kelly in Newport News.

Waller, who is a member of the Board of Directors of the Society of the Alumni, is an investment broker in Richmond.

Drewer is president of the Clarendon Bank and Trust Co. of Arlington, Va. In addition, he is in his second term as president of the State Chamber of Commerce.

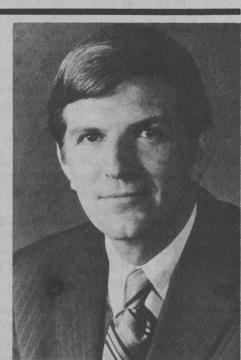

Both Baker and Kelly are officers of the Athletic Educational Association.

Va., is the immediate past chairman of the Board of Directors of the School of Business Administration Sponsors, Inc., at William and Mary. Active in behalf of the business school for a number of years, he will receive the honorary degree of doctor Coles is a psychiatrist and author who has both lectured at William and Mary and voluntarily consulted regularly with members of the faculty and administration in the area of childhood training and education. He will receive an honorary doctor of humane letters degree.

Rosovsky is a noted economist who is also distinguished in the field of East Asian studies. He will receive the honorary degree of doctor of

The Board of Visitors announced the names of the degree recipients at its March meeting.

Mathews

The Board of Visitors approved the promotions of 31 faculty members at its meeting in March at William and Mary. Twelve faculty were promoted to full professor.

Promoted were: From Associate to full professor son, Law; Roy L. Pearson, Business Administration; Charles F. Perdrisat, Physics; Douglas R. Rendleman, Law; James E. Smith, Business Administration.

Henry Aceto, Jr., Biology; Donald L. Ball, English; James W. Coke, Modern Languages; Tom A. Collins, Law; Robert J. Fehrenbach, English; Franz L. Gross, Physics; John F.

Assistant to Associate professor

James R. Baron, Classical Studies; Robert B. Bloom, Education; Marion M. Brown, Theatre and Speech; Randolph A. Coleman, Chemistry; John H. Drew, Mathematics; Joanne B. Funigiello, Modern Languages; Lavach, Education; Michael T. Madi- Ronald A. Hallett, Modern Languages; Ann T. Lambert, Physical Education for Women; Donald J. Mess-Business Administration; Patrick H. Micken, Theatre and Speech; William G. Poole, Jr., Mathematics; James B. Savage, English; Joseph L. Scott, Biology; Gary A. Smith, Modern Languages; Ronald R. St. Onge, Modern Languages; Jesse S. Tarleton, Business Administration; Janet Tomlinson, Physical Education for Women; Ronald C. Wheeler, Education.

Board Approves 31 Promotions for Faculty

THE SOCIETY OF THE ALUMNI OFFERS A UNIQUE EXPERIENCE....

ALUMNI COLLEGE-JUNE 27 to JULY 2, 1976

"COLONIAL AMERICA"

WALK THE STREETS OF WILLIAMSBURG, RECHARGE YOUR INTELLECTUAL BATTERIES WITH AN EXCITING WEEK OF LECTURES, SEMINARS, DISCUSSION GROUPS, FIELD TRIPS, ETC. ON ASPECTS OF COLONIAL LIFE AND THOUGHT DURING THIS BICENTENNIAL YEAR.

Program Outline

Each day will begin with a general session and lecture by one of the Colonial Williamsburg collection of experts followed by small group in-depth tours conducted by knowledgeable professional hostesses.

Afternoon sessions will consist of lectures, panel presentations and group discussions by members of the William and Mary faculty on such topics as religion, education, science, theater and the arts of the 18th Century.

Evening programs are planned and are optional, including movies of colonial life and skills, and a concert of 18th century organ music in the Wren Chapel. The opening buffet and the closing Colonial Feast, replete with 18th Century entertainment, are the only evening meal commitments. All other evenings you are free to enjoy your choice of Williamsburg's fine restaurants. Your room will be available through the weekend until July 4 at no extra charge.

Advance readings will be assigned to better prepare enrollees for the experiences awaiting them. It is the hope of the Alumni College staff that each person will be interested in participating so that they will benefit from this unique experience in a unique setting during this very special time in the history of this nation.

President and Mrs. Graves will host a reception for the "College Students" at the President's House (1732) on Wednesday evening, June 30.

Athletic and recreational facilities of the College will be available during free period times for children and adults. The Alumni College staff will assist in obtaining reservations in local eating establishments and at other tourist attractions.

Accommodations

Accommodations are designed to provide an inexpensive vacation for the entire family. Most portions of the program will be available by foot. Rooms and suites will be in Dupont

Dormitory and fees include linen service and medical fee for the College infirmary. Breakfast Monday through Friday and Lunch Monday through Thursday will be in College dining facilities.

Children's Programs

A program for children of alumni attending will be organized around the interests and ages of those children enrolled. Such activities as a tour of the Powell-Waller house in the restored area, the college greenhouse, a fossil hunt, several field trips, and an athletic recreational program, will be coordinated by the Childrens Program Director, and will coordinate with the adult program where convenient and appropriate. Only children between 7 and 18 will be accepted.

Registration and Fees

Reservations will be limited to 100 adults and all applications will be accepted after March 1, with some considerations being given to age and geographic distribution as necessary and if possible. This will allow all alumni to receive the Alumni Gazette and make application.

To register complete the tear-off form below and return with deposit or full payment.

The registration fee covers room, breakfasts and lunches, opening buffet and reception, Colonial Feast and reception, linen service, and all course materials except for books on the suggested reading list.

Colonial Williamsburg admissions tickets good for 25 visits to buildings are included in fees.

Classroom supplies, films, faculty honoraria, bus transportation and a special gift to the College are included in fees.

Adult resident (staying in Dormitory) $195.00 Commuter Adult $180.00 Child (Age 7 - 18 only will be enrolled) $175.00

An enrollment deposit of $100.00 per person is required.

REGISTER NOW — CLASS IS FILLING UP

End Ma We	ase enroll persons in the Alumni College closed is a deposit of $100.00 per person Full ke checks payable to Society of the Alumni - A will require dormitory accommodations for cancellation Policy: Full deposit is refunded uposits will be refunded only if replacement persons.	payment is enclosed Check # Llumni College. Full payment du persons. We will commute p to 60 days before opening day.	e 15 May 1976.
NAME_Please print all i	nformation	CHILDREN:	Age
CLASSSPOUSE	CLASS(ifApplicable)
ADDRESS
Street
City	State Zip Code
Telephone: Home	Business AC

FURTHER REGISTRATION INFORMATION AND FORMS WILL BE SENT UPON ACCEPTANCE. NO APPLICATIONS WILL BE ACCEPTED BEFORE 1 MARCH 1976. ONLY WRITTEN APPLICATIONS WILL BE ACCEPTED. PLEASE NOTE CANCELLATION POLICY.

the washington program political forecast the program

It was the day after Gerald Ford's unexpected defeat in the North Carolina presidential primary, and at campaign headquarters in Washington, the behind-the-scenes leaders of the campaign were re-evaluating whether Ford's hold on the Republican nomination was weakening.

For 20 William and Mary students participating in the new Washington Program, it was a question of being in the right place at the right time. Advertising specialists, press agents and computer experts--though a little disturbed by the President's set-back--were all available to give students an inside look at the mechanics of a political campaign.

The visit to the President's campaign central was just one segment of innovative academic program designed to take advantage of the vast resources in the nation's capital. During two days of round-table discussions, students learned to expect the unexpected from an assortment of political forecasters and journalists. Before the program was completed, discussion leaders had predicted everything from the demise of the Republican party to a rebirth of public trust in our national government.

Journalist Clark Mollenhoff

During the first session of the Washington Program, students studied the changing roles of political parties both on an ideological and grassroots level. A follow-up session scheduled for April 12-14 will focus on the character of American presidential leadership. Senator Hubert H. Humphrey, an "un-announced candidate" for the Democratic nomination, will be a special guest. Other speakers on the agenda include Milton Friedman, special assistant to the president, and James Reston of the New York Times.

In selecting speakers for the premiere Washington Program, Dean of Students W. Samuel Sadler said the steering committee sought experts from conservative, moderate and liberal camps. Discussion leaders ranged from Howard Phillips, head of the Conservative Caucus, to Richard Conlon, director of the liberal Democratic Study Group, and Haynes Johnson, managing editor of The Washington Post. All the discussion leaders had been warned in advance that student participants had researched the status of political parties and would not be satisfied to serve as passive listeners; they wanted straight-from-the-shoulder responses to questions seldom answered in textbooks or newspapers.

The guest speakers usually answered candidly and without apologies. When one student asked Eddie Mahe, Jr., executive director of the Republican National Committee, what the current philosophy of the party was, he said that his overriding concern was not party philosophy but the job of getting Republican candidates elected.

Conservative Caucus leader Howard Phillips said that Mahe may be focus on issues in education, comsoon looking for another party if Ford can't hold on to the White House. Although his philosophy is conservative, Phillips said that he hopes for a Democratic win in November and the demise of the Republican party. Then, Phillips predicted, conservatives throughout the nation would band together to form a new party and save a country he described as "hell-bent for disaster."

The first "Washington Program" class

Less than an hour later, James Sundquist of the Brookings Institution told students that he thought Phillips was "living in a dream world." He noted that the Republicans have been left for dead a number of times and survived to regain control of the nation.

On the second day of the session, the discussion centered on the press and its influential role in American elections. Clark Mollenhoff, Pulitzer Prize-winning columnist and author of a number of books about the exploits of politicians, talked about his brief--and uncomfortable--stint in the Nixon administration. "What an experience," he sighed. "You just can't have experiences like that without going through war."

Although the first two sessions of the Washington Program were concerned with politics and government, future sessions of the program will munications, science and the arts in an attempt to take full advantage of Washington's wealth of knowledgeable people and interesting places.

By locating the discussions in or near the offices of the speakers, the administrators of the program have attracted a number of the most respected--and busiest--personalities in the city. It is rare that Washington's opinion-makers can find the time to visit campuses, particularly during an election year, and the College seldom has the funds to pay travel and honorarium expenses. By utilizing the lodging and meal services at the Washington 4-H headquarters, the College has been able to offer the three-day trip to undergraduate and graduate students for $40 per session.

President Thomas A. Graves, Jr., described the Washington Program as "an exceptional educational venture" that serves to prepare students 'to make professional and leadership contributions to Virginia and the Nation." Graves will travel to Washington to participate in a segment of the April program. Alumni and friends of the College currently involved in the Washington political circles have been of vital assistance in arranging the discussions. Three alumni attended portions of the first program--Susan Lee Aheron, '72, press aide to Congressman M. Caldwell Butler; Andrew Alford, '72, aide to Congressman Robert W. Daniels; and Alan Brownfeld, '61, syndicated columnist and long-time congressional aide.

As the Washington Program expands its horizons and begins to focus on a variety of disciplines, Sadler said the College will depend on the continued participation of alumni in both the planning and execution of the program. He added that by talking in depth with highlymotivated students, alumni and guest participants will be brought into closer contact with the College and with "the ever-changing attitudes and concerns of higher education in general."

In the long run, the success of the program will depend, Sadler concluded, on "an awful lot of give and take" among students, professors, concerned alumni and the personalities that make Washington a hotbed of national affairs.

Richard Conlon of the Democratic Study Group

Intrepid Alumni Travelers Visit EGYPT

By Tina Jeffrey

If you ever longed to be transported back 2,000 years in time, you could have been -- on the William and Mary Alumni Tour to Egypt, Jan. 14-22.

Around 120 intrepid W&M travelers, plus 50 from George Washington University's alumni association, made up a charter flight departing Dulles Airport on a wintry day, arriving in Cairo 12½ hours later in sunshiny 60-degree weather.

Outside the modern Egyptian cities, villages appeared to be about like they were centuries ago. Fellahin, or peasants, live in mudbrick houses, farm and land with primitive implements, and every family member works - grown-ups, children, donkeys, camels, water buffalos, and horses. Non-productive family pets are seldom seen. Women carry huge loads on their heads, and they stroll to the community well to fetch water in clay pots unchanged from Biblical times. Father goes to market riding on a small donkey loaded with fresh vegetables in huge baskets on either side. Mother washes clothes by hand in the Nile or in irrigation ditches. It seemed like another world, another time, to travelers from 5,000 miles away, just arrived on a jet plane.

We were surprised to see that so many Egyptians in 1976 still dress in traditional galabias (long, flowing robes) and headdresses. Men wear mostly white, blue, or striped ones, and women choose the customary black. And although females are no longer veiled in public, many of them still cling to the idea and have swaths of material draped around the head and neck area. After inhaling a lot of the Egyptian dust and sand, we decided veils across the face were a nifty custom.

Cairo, largest city in the Mideast, is overpopulated by mankind, beast, and vehicles. There are almost 8 million people, half a million cars, and Allah knows how many donkeys and horses. We were amazed at the traffic: those driving vehicles blow horns as loudly as possible and speed ahead, blissfully expecting everything to move out of their way. Crossing a street is hazardous; if a car or truck doesn't clip a pedestrian, a bicycle or donkey-drawn cart may!

At every tourist spot, persistent hawkers sell local items such as jewelry with "genuine" scarabs; beads; stuffed miniature camels; alabaster carvings of Nefertiti or the Sphinx; sandstone carvings of mummies; or cameldriver headdresses. Good-natured bargaining is expected as part of the game -- the longer a tourist delays his purchase, the better the price.

W&M visitors compared deals in the buses after each session. "I got two camels for a dollar." "Ha, I got six camels for a dollar." "My crocheted hats were a dollar apiece." "I bought three for two dollars, plus a Muriel cigar."

For Jeanne B. Etheridge, '39, Williamsburg, Egypt was a dream come true, for she had taught the glories of ancient Egypt to Williamsburg school children for a number of years. "I never thought I'd see it all," she said, feasting her eyes on the Pyramids, Sphinx, and Abu Simbel.

The first order of business in Egypt -- getting some Egyptian money -- proved somewhat difficult because the hotels, kept passports for three days. Nothing daunted, we found an in-house band and an American Express office at the Nile Hilton Hotel a few blocks away and were ready to go to the Khan el Kahlili bazaar, miles of dirt-floored shops almost as good as the Williamsburg Pottery!

W&M travelers found that Egyptians like both the American and the American dollar. One shop-owner grinned broadly and commented, "Americans are No. 1 with us, Russians are No. 200!" Another man on the street, expressing his approval of U.S. President Gerald Ford, twinkled, "You wanna trade President Ford for President Sedat?"

Most Egyptians seem to be in the business of selling something. Farmers sell produce; in cities, street stands peddle everything imaginable, from postcards to bread to used bearings and hoses. Men with old Singer sewing machines sit in front of minuscule shops and manufacture galabias for sale. Fellows with carriages and horses merchandise rides, and the friendly guys who help give tourists street directions turn out to be perfume salesmen.

Two W&M tourers were over 75 years of age: D. Gardiner Tyler, '20, and A. G. Copland, both of Charles City County, Va. They kept up a pace that appalled even younger alumni. Mr. Tyler was observed clambering up a tiny passageway of 300 steps to the king's tomb in the 4,500-year-old Great Pyramid (and the only way to get down again was to back down), while Mr. Copland was seen pondering the size of former King Farouk's massive bathtub in the flamboyant summer palace at Alexandria.

Memories persisting for the Egyptian travelers will be: the 5:15 a.m. services broadcast by a P.A. system from the corner mosque; if anybody managed to sleep past that, the donkeys were outside the hotel windows at 6 a.m., braying their morning greetings; lemon juice for breakfast; a light rain one day (but it NEVER rains in Egypt in January!); the clever bargaining by Peggy Johnson, '37, East Orange, N.J., and Fred Schmidt, '35, Newport News; fried goat or goatburger at meals, new taste thrills; the sight of Cary McMurran, director of the Peninsula Symphony of Virginia, bedopping around on camelback; the power blackouts at the Atlas House; the friendliness of Egyptians; the view of the Nile River from the air -- just like the National Geographic maps, with a narrow green area on each side, then harsh brown desert stretching away into infinity; the soldiers with bayoneted guns at all airports; the generation gap between Egyptian mothers in black robes and their young daughters in pantsuits.

W&M tourers found it wonderful to see the Pyramids, Sphinx, Saladin's Citadel, gold relics from King Tutankhamon's tomb, Sakkara, belly dancers, the beautiful fruit and vegetables at street stands, full-sailed feluccas on the Nile, world's longest river; the fertile fields of Nileside farms; and cold Stella beer. Those who flew south to Luxor, Abu Simbel, and Aswan told tall tales about the remarkable tombs and temples and dams they had seen. And who could forget the camel ride (for the sum of one American dollar) up the hill to the Great Pyramid?

Well, it was all very interesting, very educational, and although some travelers fell victim to Farouk's Revenge, or dust-induced colds and influenza, this has to be rated as one of the most 'different' trips in the history of W&M Alumni tours. It will remain memorable a long time -even as tour-goers will remember the jolly French steward who joined the TWA plane's crew change in Paris.

"What does the W&M stand for," he queried, after seeing so many of the lapel buttons on passengers, "Women and Men?"

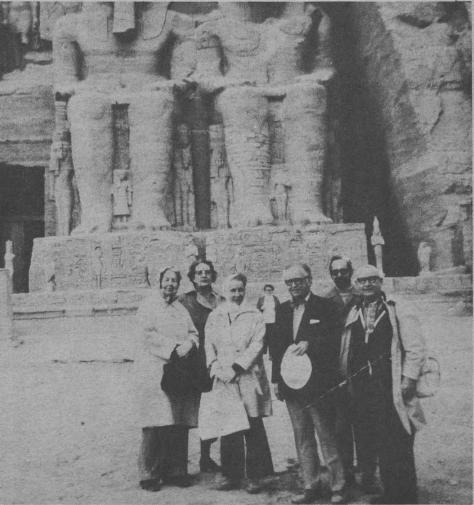

Yep. Women and men on the go.

If you want it, you have to bargain for it.
Three American dollars? One Egyptian pound? Dr. Jennings E. Dorman '49, Williamsburg, right, buys a Sphinx carving from a Cairo entrepreneur.

On camel taxis are (in foreground) Cary McMurran, Newport News; left to right Mrs. J.E. Vaiden '51, Williamsburg; Mrs. Cary McMurran '37, and Keith McMurran.

At Abu Simbel's 3,200-year-old figures of Pharoah Ramesses II and his queen are: left to right, Jean B. Etheridge '39, Williamsburg; Virginia Jones, Mrs. Cary McMurran, Cary McMurran, Gerald Cohn, and Mrs. Fred W. Schmidt '35, Newport News.

"It is through a liberal education that a young person can hold on to the idealism of youth, a quality that can be our salvation when all else fails."

"We are faced as a country with the prospect of economic stagnation, and as a people with the leveling off

of the American dream."

Cont. from P. 1

reminded us that a hopeless state cancels out all energy. Without mental and physical energy it is difficult to face the future. Hope is vital to survival.

The Russian physicist, Andrei Sakharov, who was awarded the Nobel Peace Prize in 1975, vividly described in 1973 the dilemma with which we are confronted: "There is a need to create ideals even when you can't see any route by which to achieve them, because if there are no ideals there can be no hope, and then one would be completely in the dark, in a hopeless blind alley."

We have within our colleges, here assembled, the means to help a new generation find light in the present gloom, find hope in the present cynicism and confusion, find and renew the strength and purpose to face once again the future with confidence.

I am not suggesting that we try to return to the glory years of 1776. As Eric Sloane said in his thought-provoking little book, The Spirits of '76, "The truth is that 1776 belongs to 1776. We cannot hope to recapture the old ways easily, partly because we have so destroyed our past but also because we ourselves have become different."

We can reaffirm to ourselves and our students that the addressing of moral and spiritual questions is not an outworn and out-moded anachronism that has no part in our sophisticated colleges and the societies that they mirror. Dr. T. Edward Temple, President of Virginia Commonwealth University, recently stated the opportunity before us better than I can: "No university worth its salt can allow itself to be uninvolved in moral and spiritual issues. . .It must take a position that is rooted in the vestiges of morality and ethical insights that have kept us, thus far, from blowing our planet to pieces."

These vestiges are found in a liberal education, to which our colleges are committed. For the sake of our students, let us reaffirm our belief in its strength and relevance today. Let us encourage the young men and women who are our students to read and write and discuss again. Let us put renewed emphasis on "learning to learn" which Robert A. Goldwin calls "one of the highest liberal skills." Let us have the confidence that our young people, in being encouraged to analyze and experiment, to think and to imagine, will come up with a set of values by which they can face an uncertain future

Liberal education is under attack in some quarters today. It is suspect in many others. It is said that it is not relevant, that it is a luxury that young people cannot afford in a time when jobs are scarce; that a college degree based on thoughts rather than things may not be especially useful in today's world. Some of us find ourselves on the defensive with our state legislatures, with our parents and with our students. We are criticized for not offering enough courses and programs that will help our graduates get jobs in a shrinking job market. Even worse, we are often under attack for daring to insist on high standards of thinking, of expression and of inquiry; for clearly differentiating between performances that are shoddy or pedestrian, and those that stretch the mind and raise the horizons. We are told that, in Goldwin's terms, "liberal studies of human nature and the nature of things in general" are

Let us not fall into the trap of going on the defensive. Institutions which have been offering a liberal education for as long as ours have a record of contribution and service, in the lives of their alumni, that speaks directly to the point of relevance and usefulness. The satisfactions that come from the capacity to think, to analyze, to write clearly; to appreciate art, theatre, music, and our environment; to reach beyond our own limits for new ideas in self-renewal; cannot be measured in material ways. They become a broadening and integral part of the lives of our students.

luxuries that we cannot afford.

It is through a liberal education that a young person can hold on to the idealism of youth, a quality that can be our salvation when all else fails. Albert Schweitzer wrote in Memoirs of Childhood and Youth in 1949, "it is through the idealism of youth than man catches sight of truth and in that idealism he possesses a wealth which he must never exchange for anything else. We must all be prepared to find that life tries to take from us our belief in the good and the true, and our enthusiasm for them, but we need not surrender them."

If we become defensive about what we believe, we are on our way toward surrendering something precious. President Peter Magrath of the University of Minnesota emphasized this past fall that, "it is critical that we do not tuck in our tails and run away from the assertion that learning about life -- and about the people, ideas, values, and events that shape our lives -- is an innately important and valuable endeavor."

My one simple plea on this Founders Day of The College of Charleston in the Bicentennial Year is for each of us to reaffirm the mission of his college in the year of its founding, articulate again the values of a liberal education. In doing so we do not need to make a sharp distinction between cultural and practical education. We need rather to distinguish between education which is superficial or narrow, and education which is rounded and thorough. The latter is our mission, and in carrying it out we can and should prepare our students both to live and to make a living.

In the process we shall renew in our colleges an atmosphere of excitement and imagination, purpose and commitment. We shall again see the kind of special magic that is found when teachers and students together are sharing in an academic adventure.

So let us do all we can, in each of our colleges, to encourage our students, at the undergraduate level, to embrace the fundamentals of a liberal education. Help them to experience the joy and wonder of reading. Encourage them in their writing to communicate in the unlimited arena of ideas, with imagination and creativity running free. Help them to accept the wisdom of the ages and of the great discipline of the mind. Urge them to become informed of our history; as a universe, a world, and a country, and to use this knowledge to build their future. Encourage them toward a better understanding of themselves, their cultures, and their gods. Educate the whole man and woman. Help them to appreciate the wonder of laughter, and the beauty and the infinite joy of all that is good in our lives and in our country.

It is a liberal education that leads us to art galleries and to the moon, to the heart of the atom and to the opera. An appreciation of history compels us toward forays in ancient Greece and in Historic Charleston; a love of reading takes us from the Great Books to this year's Pulitzer Prize novel. These are the adventures of the mind and of the spirit that prepare us for whatever the future holds.

Education should be an experience that fosters a love of learning, a respect for truth, an insatiable curiosity and the beginning of wisdom -- to be nurtured throughout one's life. It should be an adventure that leads to a life of opportunity and fulfillment, that goes beyond the material, to things of the spirit. Such a life should provide the satisfactions which come from making a contribution.

Most of the students at our colleges will go on to careers in the professions of medicine, business, and the law, into the advanced disciplines of the arts and sciences, into careers in the home, and into teaching. But however they end up, as they go about the business of living and making a living, won't they do a little better, feel a little better about themselves and their world, be more responsive to the pressures and problems which inevitably they must confront, if they can read and write? Won't they be better men and women if they have the opportunity to reach the greatest potential of their minds and spirits, wherever their lives take them? Don't we owe this to our students, especially as they face the kind of world that I have described? Are not the colleges gathered here today, to celebrate the 206th anniversary of the founding of The College of Charleston, perhaps better equipped, than any institutions in our country, to help our students find their beacon to light the darkness?

What I am proposing today is not new. The young Reverend Timothy Dwight, later to become one of Yale's great Presidents, spoke in more theological terms, with a glimpse of immortality, in a Valedictory Address to the young gentlemen who commenced the bachelor of arts program at Yale College on July 25, 1776: "Your wishes, your designs, your labours are not to be confined by the narrow bounds of the present age, but are to comprehend succeeding generations, and to be pointed to immortality.

"Let the transitory vanities, the visionary enjoyments of time tleet by you unnoticed. Point all your views to the elevated scenes of an immortal existence, and remember that this life is but the dawn of your being. Encounter trouble with maganimity; enjoy prosperity with moderation. Exert every faculty, employ every moment, to advance the glory of your Maker, and the sum of human happiness."

These words seem somewhat old-fashioned to us two hundred years later. But the urgency of the message was very real then, and is just as immediate today. Robert Goldwin urges us to think of liberal studies not as "luxuries for us, but matters of life and death, and certainly a matter of our political liberty, which should be as dear to us as our lives."

Earlier civilizations and cultures have become overly dependent on material things and the transitory values on which they are based. Throughout history, as dependence on continuing affluence and increasing luxuries has led to the insidious embracing of hedonistic values, moral and spiritual values have inevitably declined. Then, when economies have turned sour, when the material surpluses have turned to deficits, and when once great powers have first felt their own weakness, all that has remained has been a dreary emptiness, in which has echoed the sad decline of a country or a people. It may well be, for us, a matter of life and death.

The values of a liberal education, which are our common heritage and the original source of the vitality of our colleges, are those through which our ancestors found liberty. They are the substance of our joy in helping The College of Charleston celebrates its Founders Day. They are the values of the mind and the spirit that can keep our students and their children free.

J.A.C. Chandler W&M'S Master Builder

The career of William and Mary's 19th President was a whirlwind of rapid advancement that comes to the capable and energetic.

By Russell T. Smith

The Williamsburg morning was hot and humid on that festive July 3, 1891. Yet the temperature was almost comfortable for those assembled within the cool, thick walls of the ancient William and Mary College Chapel. Gathered there was an excited throng of students, faculty, parents, Visitors, alumni, and townspeople who had come to celebrate William and Mary's 198th commencement.

Foremost in this graduating class was a short, dumpy boy of eighteen named Julian Alvin Carroll Chandler. He came from Caroline County, a rich tobacco growing area where his family had been distinguished for generations as planters, clergymen, and physicians. All the students stood in awe of his superior grades in every course. They had known him on campus by his flat top derby and the red volume of Caesar which he carried under his arm.

On Commencement day two coveted awards came to J.A.C. Chandler along with his degree. These were the Soutter Scholarship and a teaching assistantship under professor of English and History, J. Lesslie Hall, a gifted young Ph.D. from Johns Hopkins University. At the time there were only four scholarships and two teaching assistantships available, and it was a rare occasion for any one student to garner two at the same time. But J.A.C. Chandler was a rare type of student. He had taken honors in every department except education, in which he had never enrolled. Much of Chandler's life story came from this same script. Honors and advancement came naturally because of his keen intelligence and his zealous application to the task at hand.

When J.A.C. Chandler stepped onto the platform to receive his degree from President Lyon G. Tyler that graduation day, he had a sudden premonition. He imagined for an instant that he would one day be president of William and Mary. Little did any of the assembled notables realize that J.A.C. Chandler would indeed become one of the strongest presidents the College ever had.

In 1891 William and Mary was a small Tidewater college distinguished primarily by fond memories of its illustrious past. The remarkable contributions of Jefferson and his classmates to the founding of the new nation had come a century before. And certainly the last really thriving period in the life of the College had come under the dynamic presidency of Thomas R. Dew (1836 - 1846), the Southern intellectual who devised the most persuasive defense of slavery and Southern economics.

In spite of its limited size and finances, the College in 1891 was just beginning to enter a new period of great vitality and usefulness. There were only five buildings, seven professors, 130 students, and about $11,000 in the annual budget. Yet the small body of professors, a group traditionally called "the Seven Wise Men," constituted a faculty of extraordinary capabilities and dedication. Their advanced degrees, their integrity, their ability as teachers, and their manifold public services made William and Mary a better school than hundreds of others with the same limited budget.

Chandler delivers his inaugural address in 1921.

Chandler

In addition, William and Mary's new function--that of serving as the chief teacher's college in Virginia--endowed the school with a new sense of purpose and mission. The public school system that Jefferson had dreamed of years before was finally beginning to emerge. Most of the counties had elementary schools and the more progressive counties were beginning to think about high schools. The state was depending on William and Mary to oversee the completion of the public school system. From the College would come the principals, the superintendents, and the high school teachers so needed in the Old Dominion.

The scholarship and teaching assistantship brought J.A.C. Chandler back to the College for the Master of Arts degree in the year 1891 - 1892. Although he had not studied education, he made the critical decision to go into teaching sometime during that year. At that time, when so many Virginia teachers worked without the blessing of even a high school diploma, a master's degree was an impressive credential for school work. Thus he launched his career the next fall, at age nineteen, as principal of the county high school at Halifax, a Virginia border town near the center of the North Carolina line.

Chandler's career was a whirlwind of the preferment and rapid advancement that comes to the capable and energetic. After a single year in the fastnesses of rural Virginia, he went to Johns Hopkins University, then the leading graduate school in America, to take his Ph.D. There he worked at a fierce pace, financing his studies by being professor and dean of Morgan College and editor for Silver-Burdett publishers. It was a killing schedule of overwork, which he felt compelled to follow all of his life and which finally carried him off, physically spent but still in harness, at the age of sixty-two.

The new degree brought Dr. Chandler a most providential invitation, at age twenty-three, to become professor of history and literature and acting president of Richmond Woman's College. For it was there that he met his wife, professor Lenore Burton Duke. She proved to be an ideal wife by her power to please him personally, to inspire him professionally, and to entertain his friends and associates. According to later tradition, there were only two great loves in the life of Dr. Chandler: his wife and the College of William and Mary.

During the early 1900's, Chandler found advancement in a rapid change of jobs. Over a five-year period he was in succession Dean of Richmond Academy, editor for Silver-Burdett, director of Virginia's historical pavilion at the celebrated 1907 Jamestown Exposition, and

Key Men During Chandler's Administration

Robert M. Hughes A Chandler Supporter

Kremer J. Hoke Chandler's Right-Hand Man

James Hardy Dillard Chandler's Board Rector

W.A.R. Goodwin
Chandler's Development Man

finally superintendent of Schools in Richmond. All the while he was writing school history texts noted for their simple and captivating language and for their idealistic interpretation.

The superintendency in Richmond was the best school job in Virginia. The office sought the man because of his widely respected reputation as an efficient educational executive and as a practical problem solver who could get the job done. It was the milestone, therefore, which marks Chandler's real arrival at a position of power, prestige, and importance equal to his ability.

Chandler was superintendent in Richmond from 1909 to 1918. His solid and far-reaching achievements in that office bear great similarity to his accomplishments at William and Mary. His whole approach to the improvement of the Richmond schools prefigured the spectacular style and character of the development he would bring to the College. Thus the superintendency in Richmond was, seen from one angle, a dress rehearsal for the presidency at William and Mary.

He spent the first year and a half settling into the superintendent's office, establishing his power, and surveying the situation. It was not until 1911 that he enunciated the program that would bring far-reaching improvement to the Richmond schools. The heart of the program came in these three items: (1) a staggering $600,000 in new construction; (2) a substantial upgrading of teaching training; and (3) heavy curriculum revision to make the coursework more practical.

New construction was a basic necessity in 1911 because the plant was too small and physically and architecturally antiquated, considering that the student population was increasing at a rate of about ten percent a year. Because of his great persuasiveness and tact, Chandler surpassed his own developmental goals and left Richmond with the best school buildings in its history.

Teacher improvement was a more painful adjustment. Since the teaching staff was clearly undereducated, Chandler required more inservice sessions, more teachers in summer school, and more classroom supervisors. These new and unwanted burdens, however, led to a teacher revolt in March of 1912. Vocal elements did not hesitate to air their wounded sensibilities in the press and before the city countil. As a counter measure, Chandler wrote firm rules against the disorderly expression of teacher opinion and required teachers to sign their compliance before issuing new contracts. At the same time, he used the city council's blue ribbon investigation of the dispute to show the public just how much improvement the schools really did need. And at the end of the next school year, he further strengthened the faculty by purging the inefficient teachers from the system.

Basic curriculum revision was at the core of the challenge facing progressive educators in the early twentieth century. Forward-looking leaders everywhere saw the need to modify the old classical curriculum in favor of more practical courses. In Richmond, Superintendent Chandler was the guiding light of the movement to fit education to the actual needs of the people

Shortly after defusing the teachers' revolt, he proposed that the city countil form a select committee to study the needs of stores, factories, and machine shops. Thus the school board could gear public school education to commercial enterprise in Richmond. Although the city council failed to act, Chandler succeeded in launching a pilot program in vocational education in 1913. It included only concrete work, cabinet making, and general construction. But the heavy industrial demands of World War I made expansion inevitable.

Several factors besides his own iron will and determination explain Chandler's success in Richmond. He was an impressive speaker, he had a favorable press, and he had the strong backing of the school board. (He would later receive even more positive support from the Board of Visitors at William and Mary.)

In 1918 Chandler went on leave of absence from the School Board to organize the Department for the Rehabilitation of Disabled Soldiers. During that year, Rector Robert M. Hughes of William and Mary's Board of Visitors began giving serious consideration to selecting a successor for retiring President Lyon G. Tyler.

Rector Hughes, Virginia's leading scholar and practitioner of maritime law, had helped guide the College's affairs on the highest level for most of Tyler's administration. In a letter to a friend, Hughes listed the ideal qualifications for William and Mary's new president: He should be a southerner, preferably a Virginian. ("We do not want any Northern standards to supersede ours, or any Northern fads to demoralize our conservative ideas of education.") He should be thoroughly versed in Virginia history, as well as northern educational methods. The president should be in touch with foundation money. He should be a fair speaker and presiding officer. He should be a Christian by profession and practice. The president should be affable and ready to allow for the exuberance of youth. And he should be a good businessman

Out of a handful of likely candidates, Hughes favored J.A.C. Chandler. He met the Rector's criteria and was "very popular with the alumni and could carry through with plans for development which have thus far miscarried." The Board agreed wholeheartedly and elected J.A.C. Chandler as the nineteenth president in 1919. The selection could not have been more fortunate. For Chandler was to bring more money to the development of the College than all the presidents in the past put together.

all the presidents in the past put together. When J.A.C. Chandler moved into the President's House, the College was "a small but vigorous institution" ready for the dynamic leadership that he would offer. He immediately began building and expanding at the daring pace which was to be the trademark of his administration. By the end of his first year he had renovated the buildings; started construction on Jefferson dormitory; opened extension branches in Richmond, Newport News, and Norfolk; added five professors; and made substantial progress on a one million dollar endowment campaign. Such audacious achievements brought Chandler a resounding vote of "congratulations" from the Visitors "on the splendid work done by him in behalf of the institution for the year now closing, which work has resulted in advancement of the Institution to a degree scarcely hoped for and never expected."

Such sentiments were typical of Chandler's entire administration. The Board backed him like a gambler and went into debt to bet on a sure winner. In fact his program of expansion was so costly, and his leadership was so essential to its success, that the Board insured his life for $150,000.

Chandler waited two years for his formal inauguration. And it was one of the most impressive celebrations since colonial and Indian dignitaries gathered for the first commencement in 1700. President Warren G. Harding and Governor Westmoreland Davis led the academic procession, which included representatives from all the major Eastern Colleges.

Continued on P. 10

When Chandler moved into the President's House, the College was a "small but vigorous institution" ready for the dynamic leadership that he would offer. He immediately began building and expanding at the daring pace that was to be the trademark of his administration.

The breadth of Chandler's achievements is illustrated by this aerial photo of what is known as the modern campus. Chandler had a hand in the construction or expansion of all of the buildings as well as the football stadium (top left), which was still under construction when the photo was taken. Other buildings Chandler's administration built or expanded included Taliaferro Hall and Trinkle Hall across Jamestown Road.

Continued from P. 9

Such an august assembly of notables shows how far the College had come since the "silent years" of the 1880's. It was certainly appropriate for the launching of a new era in College history.

Chandler's inaugural address was an ambitious announcement of the grand design and specific goals of his administration. He dreamed of William and Mary as a greatly strengthened liberal arts college. But he would modify the curriculum to serve the needs of business. "I love to think of the old Virginia gentleman and his gentle wife," he said, "with their knowledge of the classics, Shakespeare, the Bible and other good literature, of politics and history . . . . I shall, therefore, never be satisfied unless this college maintains a high standard in the old Bachelor of Arts degree. However, I recognize the demand of the business world, the many opportunities in business administration and industrial organization, and the college should maintain and enlarge the courses now offered in business administration and economics, including with them a number of old type college courses, so that one who takes his degree in the field of business administration will have at least fifty percent of his work in cultural subjects.'

The address also projected a huge "bricks and mortar" program for $1.5 million in plant development. The emphasis on teacher training would continue. William and Mary would not become a professional school but would offer pre-medical and pre-engineering courses. And the law school would be reestablished, thus refurbishing the College's historic identity.

Upgrading the faculty and strengthening the staff was critical to the accomplishment of Chandler's program. He consequently began raising salaries immediately to make William and Mary competitive with other Virginia colleges. This brought the faculty large raises in his first years, amounting to as much as a twenty percent increase for the year 1921 - 1922.

And his program of general expansion required additional personnel each year until the onset of the depression.

Those who knew Dr. Chandler recognized his unusual gift for managing his people wisely. He hired well and generally got efficient service from his personnel. But he did not hesitate to terminate unsatisfactory employees. The stories of his firings became a legend in his own time. And some Williamburgers still talk about the coach he fired fifteen times in one year and the unfortunate professor he asked to excuse himself from his class only to be fired in the

Dr. Chandler brought in several invaluable administrators. One of these was Earl Gregg Swem. From his post as librarian he became the leading authority on the bibliography of Virginia history. Another was John G. Pollard, an outstanding scholar of Virginia law, who reorganized the law school between 1922 and 1925. Pollard left the College in 1930 to succeed Harry F. Byrd, Sr. as governor. Chandler's most fortunate appointment was, however, the Reverend Dr. W.A.R. Goodwin, selected to be professor of religion and director of College development in 1923.

Dr. Goodwin was a mover of great enterprises. He had a natural gift as a developer in his elevated character and winning personality. To him must go much of the credit for the spectacular capital development of the Chandler administration.

Dr. Goodwin's lifetime dream was to restore Colonial Williamsburg. The opportunity to realize that dream came through the College. In 1926 President Chandler was to address a meeting of Phi Beta Kappa in New York to raise funds to build Phi Beta Kappa Hall. At the last minute he had to send Dr. Goodwin in his stead. At the meeting, Dr. Goodwin met John D. Rockefeller, Jr. and invited him to visit Williamsburg. Our of their conversations in Williamsburg came the Rockefeller financing which built Colonial Williamsburg. Unfortunately for the College, Dr. Goodwin gradually transferred his attentions from the College to Colonial Williamsburg in the late 1920's when the work of restoration got under way.

Just as Chandler met with opposition from the Richmond teachers, he faced student unrest at William and Mary between 1931 and 1933. Although it was minor by present day standards, the administration found it disquieting to have a student strike, the library sacked with flour, and the students demanding a threesevenths voice in the discipline council. With his usual expedition Chandler solved the problem by timely letters to parents, a few expulsions, and talks with the students. It is possible that this wave of disorder occurred because of the privations of the depression, coupled with Chandler's personality and outmoded rules. In his zeal to expand the College, he sometimes overrode opposition, and the school still enforced such rules as no smoking in the dorms and no marriage permitted until graduation.

A bare recital of the facts and figures alone-will reveal the true magnitude of Chandler's achievements at William and Mary. He built $4.5 million in Georgian buildings. This included Jefferson, Barrett, Chandler, nine sorority houses, Monroe, Old Dominion, old Phi Beta Kappa, Washington, Rogers, Blow, a dining hall, an infirmary, a laundry, a conservatory, and the brick walls. He increased the annual budget from $84,000 to nearly a million dollars. This supported an increase in enrollment from 189 in 1919 to 3,758 including branch schools in 1933. And of his branch schools, the one in Norfolk grew into Old Dominion University, while the Richmond school is today's Virginia Commonwealth University.

How could one man do so much in fifteen years? The most important factors were his determination, his intelligence, and his tact. The strong backing he always received from the Visitors helped pave the way for the excellent relations he had with the Virginia governors. And even the times were right. The 1920's was a time of cultural renaissance in Virginia, and the legislature was ready to spend money on education. As his advisor who assisted in the launching of Old Dominion University said, "Dr. Chandler was the best executive I have ever known. I make no exception." Many who knew him well shared this same opinion.

By the spring of 1933 Dr. Chandler's health had begun to deteriorate seriously after all the years of dedicated work. It was not an auspicious moment, therefore, when the state auditors released the infamous Downs Report in June of that year. The report criticized Chandler for overexpanding the College, for failure to maintain an adequate accounting system, and for making unilateral budget transfers. It strongly recommended retrenchment at the College, and that is exactly what happened for the next twenty years.

President Chandler's health continued to decline, and the Board urged him to take an extended rest in January of 1934. He refused, saying "I have at best only a short time here, and I will be happier if I spend that period in carrying forward my heart's desire, which is the welfare of William and Mary." Working almost until the end, he died in May of 1934 on the eve of his fifteenth anniversary at the College. The faculty could not have been more accurate when they resolved that his "able, devoted, and courageous administration will remain one of the most notable periods in the history of the College." Just as the motto on the Chandler family crest reads he had been Ad Mortem Fidelis.

Four Faculty Receive Fellowships

Carlson and Herbst Named Sloan Fellows

Two William and Mary scientists have been chosen Sloan Research Fellows for 1976-77, the only Virginia faculty members to be selected for the prestigious grants.

The Alfred P. Sloan Foundation announced that it has selected Carl E. Carlson, assistant professor of physics, and Eric Herbst, assistant pro-fessor of chemistry, "from among hundreds of nominees on the basis of their potential to make creative contributions to scientific knowledge in the early stages of their careers."

President Graves said the selection of two faculty members from the College "emphasizes the underlying strength of William and Mary in the

"It is especially noteworthy," said Graves, "that almost all of the other Sloan Fellows are from the nation's largest major research universities."

Sloan Fellowships totaling $1,550,900 are being awarded to scientists in 46 colleges, universities and research institutions. The Foundation began the program in 1955 as a way of stimulating advances in fundamental research by young faculty in the sciences. Candidates for fellowships are nominated by senior scientists who are familiar with their abilities. Fellows are free to use their research awards at their discretion.

In 1972 Carlson, in collaboration with Peter Freund at the University of Chicago's Enrico Fermi Institute, wrote a paper calculating some of the properties of a then undiscovered particle, Psi/J. They were convinced that the particle should exist, even though it had not been experimentally found.

They calculated some of its properties, and when the particle was found in the fall of 1974 by experimental scientists, the calculated predictions of Carlson and Freund were found to be "pretty close." Carlson received his Ph.D. from Columbia University in 1968 and was a research associate at Stanford University and the University of Chicago before joining the William and Mary faculty in 1972.

Herbst has developed schemes for the genesis of some of the complex molecules in dense clouds in interstellar space, and has published widely and lectured both here and abroad. A graduate of Harvard University, Herbst joined the William and Mary faculty in 1974, coming to Williamsburg from the Joint Institute for Laboratory Astrophysics in Boulder, Colo. Herbst has given invited lectures at major universities across the country and for the Canadian Association of Physicists in Toronto and at the Observatoire de Meudon, Meudon, France.

Herbst was a National Science Foundation Pre-doctoral Fellow, 1966-71, and a Woodrow Wilson Fellow in 1966.

Fuchs Named Humanities Fellow

Alan E. Fuchs, associate professor of philosophy, has been named a Fellow of the National Humanities Institute for 1976-77 to study ethics and the law at Yale University.

As an adjunct member of the Yale faculty he will explore such questions as the relationship between a legal system and underlying ethical concerns and what is a reasonable guiding principle for making a moral

The purpose of the grant to Fuchs is two-fold: to support his research project entitled "The Limits of Liberty: a Philosophical-Legal Study" and to enable him to develop a new interdisciplinary course on ethics and law. His research is aimed at formulating a standard to use in determining the proper extent of first amendment rights such as freedom of speech and freedom of the press. The new course will study the interrelationships between ethics and the law, e.g. the problem of the extent to which the law should legislate mora-

Herbst

Fuchs

O'Connell

Three New Offerings Alumni Publish Books

Three recent books by William and Congress. Mary alumni are the latest in a growing list of works produced by writers and authors associated with the College.

Presidential Spending Power, by Louis Fisher '46, has been the subject of major reviews in the New York Times, Washington Post and a host of other periodicals.

The book, published by the Princeton University Press, is the first thorough account of how the President of the United States spends billions of dollars a year for purposes not intended by Congress. Neither Congress nor the public is systematically informed on these discretionary expenditures.

Fisher's thorough analysis and recommendations for Congressional control over Presidential spending has won acclaim from such leaders as Senators Proxmire, Muskie and Humphrey.

Fisher is a Specialist in the Government Division of the Congressional Research Library at the Library of

F. Clyde Bedsaul '24 is the author of Spring Valley, published by the Commonwealth Press Inc. of Rad-

It is a book of reminiscences about the Reverend and Mrs. T. C. Vaughan of Spring Valley in Grayson County. Dr. Bedsaul, a physician, is married to their granddaughter. He has previously written a number of essays, poems, and feature articles for newspapers and religious magazines, as well as guest editorials for medical journals.

The third recent book, by Annette Carter '42 of Rose Valley, Pa., is called Exploring--From Chesapeake Bay to the Poconos, published by J.B. Lippincott Co. It is an updated and expanded version of her book published in 1971, which has gone through four printings. Her husband, Judson Laird, collaborated by photographing a number of the scenes along the way of her suggested itineraries for touring dozens of places in the middle Atlantic area.

Fuchs will pursue his goals in both independent study and in informal seminars with various small groups of Fellows participating. The NHI is funded by the National Endowment for the Humanities, a Federal agency. He undertook preparatory work last summer under a Fellowship from the National Endowment at the University of Michigan at Ann Arbor. "My concern in the area of ethics and the law," explained Fuchs, "is based on the theoretical concern that everyone who studies philosophy and law is concerned about and that is: What is the relationship between a legal system and our underlying ethical concerns? Is the legal system merely a formalized codification of morality? Should the laws be written in the form of moral principles so that if a law is not moral it should automatically be changed, or are there different standards of practicality or prudential concern, or - as you hear a lot these days - you shouldn't legislate morality? Some people feel morality is in some sense so private and so personal and so subjective that laws should be based on good solid objective criteria and morality left to the individual."

Fuchs, a graduate of Massachusetts Institute of Technology and Harvard, joined the faculty of the College in 1969. In 1973 he was selected to receive the Richard M. Griffith Memorial Award of the Southern Society for Philosophy and Psychology. His award winning paper, "Aristotle's Concept of Pleasure," was presented before the Society during its annual meeting in Knox-ville, Tenn. The award is a citation for general excellence, awarded annually.

O'Connell Receives Ayres Fellowship

Dr. William E. O'Connell, Jr., associate professor of business administration, is one of five faculty in the nation to receive the Ayres Fellowship to attend the Stonier & Graduate School of Banking in 1976.

Dr. O'Connell, who is Associate Dean of the School of Business Administration in charge of the graduate program, will attend the Stonier School's program in June at Rutgers University. It is conducted by the American Bankers Association in cooperation with Rutgers.

The Ayres Fellowship program, established in honor of the late Leonard P. Ayres, a former Cleveland banking official and Stonier faculty member, is 11 years old. The four other 1976 fellowships were awarded to faculty at Purdue, Oregon State, University of Kentucky and University of North Carolina.

The program gives faculty members the chance to acquire practical banking knowledge useful in their teaching. Their curriculum is tailored to their individual teaching specialties and interests.

Dr. O'Connell, a member of William and Mary's faculty since 1968, formerly taught at the University of Connecticut. An alumnus of Manhattan College, he has the M.B.A. from Columbia University and the D.B.A. from Indiana University.

91-year-old Alumnus Still Helps W&M

STEPHEN A. MACDONALD

By Kay Tucker McGraw '70

(Editor's Note: The following article from the Norfolk Ledger-Star is adapted with permission. Ms. Mc-Graw is the Education Writer for the Ledger-Star. The photograph is by Mort Fryman.)

One of two surviving members of the Class of 1908 is still active on behalf of William and Mary. Although at the age of 91 he has slowed down a bit, last fall he walked two miles through Norfolk to call on an alumnus he was asked to contact as a volunteer for the Silver Anniversary William and Mary Fund.

Stephen A. MacDonald was one of the 12 members of that class, and a member of the 13-man varsity football squad. Since graduating, he has been one of the College's most loyal followers--and in 1932, he was made an honorary member of Phi Beta Kappa. Three years later, he received the Alumni Medallion during the second year that the award was bestowed on outstanding alumni.

Known affectionately at "Mr. Mac" or "Cap'n Mac," he retired from the Norfolk school system 23 years ago. His friends still remember his quiet good deeds, his special touch with problem students and his love for all children.

Stephen A. MacDonald

That love has lingered through MacDonald's 91 years.

As soon as he ushers you into his home, MacDonald will proudly point out pictures of his four grandchildren and his 6-month-old granddaughter in albums, cubes and frames in the front room where he spends his days.

He tells you he's known as the "chew gum man" because of his offerings to small fry in his Larchmont neighborhood.

"They're just three of them now," he says with a touch of sadness. "After they start to school, they seldom come."

Principal at Ruffner Junior High School from 1922 until 1951, MacDonald, a widower, lives alone in the 1100 block of Cambridge Crescent in a rambling white house that has aged with its

In the corner of the front room is a desk, a teacher's desk, piled high with books-one an historical look at MacDonald's alma mater, one on the Gospel according to St. John, another a notebook bulging with MacDonald's own fami-

Two yellowed documents hang in frames above the desk. One is from the Cosmopolitan Club citing MacDonald as Norfolk's "First Citizen" for 1949. The other is a similar citation from the Norfolk Education Association. Above the chair hangs a portrait of Jesus Christ.

A modern digital clock sits in the front window sill. In the other window sits a small china Christmas tree, slightly tilted.

A faintly sweet smell emanates from the tray of golden delicious apples sitting by the doorway to the kitchen.

As MacDonald eases his tall thin frame into his favorite maroon chair, he begins talking about his childhood, his love of "school work," his own theories of child psychology and his opinions of education today.

"Children aren't getting what they should. Education isn't what it was," he says.

'I think there are a good many reasons. One of the big reasons is there isn't and discipline anymore. You just can't teach without discipline. You can put the best teacher in the world in a classroom and she can't to save her life do anything if she doesn't have discipline.

"I really think folks in authority are really afraid of children," he says.

And children themselves have changed over the years, MacDonald says.

"But, you know, I really think the change has come about by the home changing," he says. "Then of course, radio and television. Those things have had their influence."

The changes disturb the quiet and unassuming man who has spent half his life in the schools. For a while after his retirement he used to visit schools where his former Ruffner teachers were working. No more. Now they tell him, "You'd better have your life insured before you come to school."

Not that MacDonald didn't have his prob-

He laughs and recalls two small boys who would "play hooky in spite of thunder." Teachers gave up on one of the boys and turned him over to MacDonald. MacDonald simply told the lad, "The next time you want to play hooky, come tell me the day before. If I can let

That's how they boy ended up in Mac-Donald's office explaining his desire to see the Yankees' baseball game. He went to the game and the next day told his principal all about it.

"That was the happiest boy I ever saw," MacDonald says. "I never did have another minute's trouble with him."

When that boy graduated from high school, he won the good citizenship medal.

MacDonald did not leave student problems behind the schoolhouse doors. Some nights he couldn't sleep for worrying about a student. Often he went to student's homes to learn about the atmosphere there. "Well, I think you've got to know the home if you're going to help a kid that's trouble," he says. "My teachers and I went into hundreds of homes just to learn about the children."

In his 45 years in education, MacDonald says he never once expelled a child.

"I suspended a lot," he admits, "but I suspended them to get their mothers and fathers to come to school."

The kindness MacDonald showed toward his students often extended to their families. When he was named First Citizen, many noted that he had found them cold and hungry and had bought coal and food for their families with his own money.

MacDonald says little about his own generosity."In the Ruffner area there were people that weren't too well off," he says. "What I did mostly-except during the Depression-was to buy things to help the children stay ir school-bus fares, gym suits and clothes."

During the Depression, he says, he told the cafeteria workers to make more soup than the school needed. "I would tell people to come and get it," MacDonald says. Born in 1884 in Fauquier County, MacDonald says he's one of two surviving members of William and Mary's Class of 1908. A member of W&M's 13-man varsity football squad, Mac-Donald played tackle, guard and fullback in the days of the drop kick, flying wedge and 5-yard first down.

MacDonald got his mater's degree from Columbia University in 1922 and in 1932 was made an honorary member of Phi Beta Kappa by his alma mater.

"When a young man came out of college, if he wasn't going to be a doctor or lawyer, he went into teaching," MacDonald remembers. "That's

After serving as supervising principal at Rocky Mount High School in Franklin County from 1908 to 1911, MacDonald was ready to give up teaching. A friend in the State Department of Education in Richmond, however, persuaded him to become principal at Woodlawn High in Carroll County.

"They gave me a good salary," MacDonald says. "I got $1,000 a year. I didn't get but $60 a month the other place and that was for nine Once he took that second assignment, Mac-Donald said he never looked back. "I was just crazy about school work," he says.

He served as principal of Deep Creek High in old Norfolk County from 1913 to 1918, Brambleton Elementary in Norfolk from 1918 to 1922 and Ruffner Junior High from 1922 to 1951 when Ruffner was turned into a black school. MacDonald was principal of Ocean View when he retired in 1953 at the age of 68.

MacDonald cleans house once a week, does his own cooking, watches the six o'clock news and "The Waltons" on television, walks to visit friends when the weather's nice and takes a cab every Sunday to Lafayette Presbyterian Church were he has been an elder since 1922.

He says his life's goal is "to live a good life. That's the most that I live for—and to help other people."

Much of his mail, he says, is from "folks who want you to make a contribution." "I don't know how in the world my name got to all these places," MacDonald says shaking

"Mr. Mac" may be the only one who doesn't

W&M Fund Ahead by 33 Per cent

With three months remaining in the current Silver Anniversary effort, cash gifts to the William and Mary Fund are up 33% as compared to this time last year.

Just as important, according to a report by Len Meyer, Director of Annual Giving, is the fact that the number of donors has already surpassed prior records for any given year. As of March 25, 5,352 gifts and pledges has been made to the William and Mary Fund. Among these were 1,043 contributions from new don-

Gifts and pledges to the Fund, which is the annual support program among alumni, had reached $241,902.27. As of March 25, $229,801.77 in cash had been received by the College.

Meyer reported the average gift to the Fund was $45.20 and that 22% of solicited alumni had made contributions.

The William and Mary Fund was not the only annual giving effort which showed dramatic increases as of March 25 over the same time a year ago, according to Meyer's report.

Cash receipts to the Law School Association drive were up 20%; for a total of $20,439.85; to the Friends of the College program, up 36% for a total of $55,258.70; and to the School of Business Fund, up 33% for a total of $27,285.00. The Parents Fund, which was started ahead of last year's schedule, showed a 125% increase to $10,719.50.

In all, cash receipts to the annual giving programs totaled $343,504.82, up 34% from the same date a year ago.

Coach Root

Quarterback Rozantz

Enthusiam and Experience Spring Brightens Tribe Outlook

Coach Jim Root describes it as the at William and Mary. "We have the enthusiasm of youth, tempered by experience," says the Tribe mentor who will lead his charges into the annual Spring Game on April 17 at 1:30 p.m. at Cary Field.

Root is particularly impressed by his offense, and well he should be. In the skilled positions, he has both depth and quality, and up front, he has back the entire offensive line that played against Richmond in that sterling season victory finale.

Defense is another question. There, says Root, he has "quality but not quantity," and he looks to a fine new crop of freshmen to add some

The Indians have another thing going for the them this year. For the first time in recent memory, they open at home -- against Virginia Military Institute Sept. 11. And three of their first five games are at home; the first six are in Virginia or nearby, and for the first time in many years, the Tribe will play five home games. Says Root in an understatement: "It's a much more realistic schedule than in the past."

Root showers praise on his offense, which is young yet experienced, having played together as freshmen through most of last season. At quarterback, he has Tommy Rozantz who promises to be one of the best signal callers in William and Mary history. Root refuses to confirm Rozantz has the job locked up, however, saying that junior Preston Green and sophomore Kevin Odor, a 6-6 giant, are pressing Rozantz. That may indicate his depth at that posi-

The situation is equally promising best spring practice in his five years at tailback, where little Lou Biondi has taken the lead over last year's late-blooming Jimmy Kruis and Tommy Smith. Keith Fimian is back at fullback - at 212 pounds, 14 pounds heavier than last fall. But he is being pressed for his starting position by Scott Goodrich, Peter Lysher, and Jeff Vanderbeek.

At tight end, Root has two upcoming sophomores at 6-4 and 230 pounds (Bob Muscalus and Bruce McFarland), but neither one is a starter yet. That honor belongs to another freshman from last year, Ken

At wide receiver, the Tribe has four outstanding returnees - Joe Manderfield, Steve Trimbley, Mike Burgess, and Tom Butler, who held the starting position until he broke his hip in the Pitt game last year.

On defense, the outlook is not so promising. Although Root has some quality, he lacks depth. One area he will emphasize is the defensive secondary where the Tribe was hurt by the long pass last year. "We've got to get a lot better there," says Root.

So far, the coaching staff has signed 24 incoming freshmen. Coach Root says at least four or five should help immediately.

1976 FOOTBALL RECRUITS

Eric Barnes, 6-2, 175, QB, DB, Colonial Heights, Va.; Mike Brown, 6-2, 195, LB, FB, State College, Pa.; Dan Burnick, 6-4, 260, DT, Lakewood, N.J.; John Cerminara, 5-11, 225, OT, Pittsburgh, Pa.; Cliff Connery, 6-3, 215, DE-DT, Centerport, L.I.; Joe Czerkawski, 6-3, 195, QB, 200, QB, Alexandria, Va.; Dennis Fitzpatrick, 6-2, 225, DT, Brooklyn, N.Y.; Clarence Gaines, 6-1, 195, FB, Winston-Salem, N.C.; Jeff Hargrave, 6-2, 225, DT, Piscataway, N.J.; John Kelley, 6-1, 195, LB, Harrisburg, Pa.; Paul Kent, 6-1, 230, MG, Levittown, Pa.; Alvis Lang, 5-10, 190, TB, Highland Springs, Va.

Rick Leonard, 6-0, 170, DB, Winchester, Va.; Melvin Martin**, 6-0, 205, DE, Matinsville, Va.; John Payne, 6-3, 215, OT, Newport News, Va.; Scott Riddle, 6-2, 215, LB, DE, Bethel, Park, Pa.; William Scott, 6-2, 235, OT, Arlington, Va.; Steve Shull, 6-1, 195, LB, Levittown, Pa.; Dave Snarr, 6-3, 195, TE, DE, Winchester, Va.; Bob Stone, 6-2, 210, DE, Philadelphia; Al Tafro, 5-11, 175, TB, Little Falls, N.J.; Fred Wallach, 6-4, 225, DT, Codarhurst, L.I.; Mike Zupan, 6-2, 210, TE, Johnstown, Pa.

**Transfer

Gymnastics Team 3rd in Region

William and Mary's gymnastics team placed third in the NCAA Southern Region Championship in Athens, Georgia, behind Louisiana State University and the University of Georgia.

Individually, Mason Tokarz, a freshman from Richmond, led the Indians with a fourth-place overall finish. He qualified for the Nationals with a third-place finish in the vaulting competition.

Last year, not a single member of the Tribe advanced to the finals in the regionals. This year, Coach Cliff Gauthier had at least one competitor Old Tappan, N.J.; Al Drewer, 6-2, in the finals of every event but one.

You Have Until May 1, 1976

to purchase a Williamsburg Bicentennial Collector's Item Struck by the Franklin Mint

Alumni Gazette readers who purchase this distinctive Medallion will help support the new William and Mary Washington Program

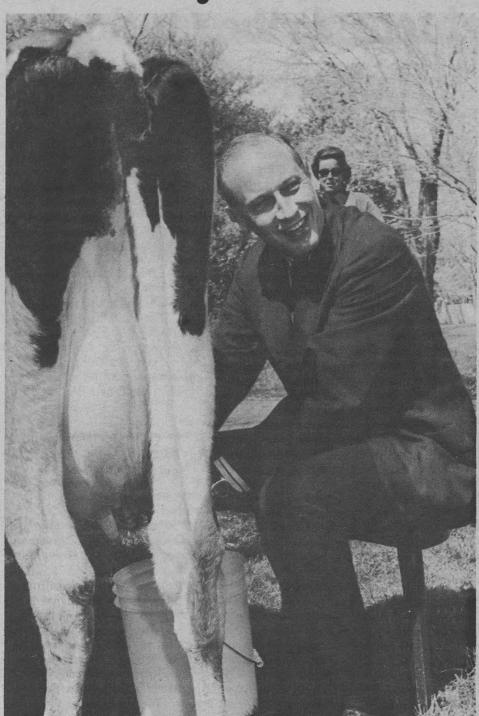

The official Williamsburg-James City County Bicentennial Medallion symbolizes the College's historic importance to the Virginia Colony and the American Revolution. Based on a design for the Bicentennial by Dr. Carl Roseberg, noted sculptor and professor of fine arts at William and Mary, and The Franklin Mint has been authorized to strike it by the Williamsburg-James City County Bicentennial Committee.

The obverse depicts patriot Edmund Pendleton, author of the Virginia Resolution for Independence issued on May 15, 1776, instructing Virginians at the Continental Congress to support American independence. The reverse shows the Wren Building; the former First Baptist Church, founded in 1776 as the South's first black congregation; the Courthouse of 1770 serving the county and city, and the Tower of the 1639 church at Jamestown.

This truly important and distinctive Medallion is being struck by The Franklin Mint as a beautiful sterling silver proof presentation, only in the quantity ordered by May 1, 1976. To purchase this collector's item, and benefit the new William and Mary Washington Program, send your check for $40 plus $1.60, for each Medallion ordered, to William and Mary Bicentennial, P.O. Box 1777, Williamsburg, Va. 23185 not later than May 1. Please allow six to eight weeks for delivery from the mint. Do not order directly from The Franklin Mint, as orders will not be accepted there.

The Day the Cows Returned To Campus

Dr. Graves tries but not a squirt would come.

OLD HOMEWEEK

It was like old homeweek for the individuals in the two pictures at the right during two recent occasions in Williamsburg. In March during the annual Newcomen Society dinner, which this year honored William and Mary and President Graves, four former rectors of the Board of Visitors gathered to compare notes. From left to right, top photo, are R. Harvey Chappell Jr. '48 (1972-76), Richmond; Ernest W. Goodrich '35 (1970-72), Surry; Walter G. Mason (1968-70), Lynchburg; and W. Brooks George '32 (1966-

In April, S. Warne Robinson '37, (second from right) Pitts-burgh, returned to Williamsburg as chairman of the board of G.C. Murphy Co. to open a new Murphy's Mart store. There to greet him were two of his old mentors at William and Mary, J. Wilfred Lambert '28, former Vice President for Student Affairs, and Dr. Harold L. Fowler, former Dean of the Faculty of Arts and Sciences. Also present was President Graves.

About 200 years ago when William and Mary was one of only a handful of colleges in America, the front yard of the Sir Christopher Wren Building served a much more practical purpose than it does today--it was used as a grazing area for hungry Williamsburg cows.

To commemorate the day when a friendly cow was a commonplace sight on campus, the College staged its own salute to yesteryear by returning cows to campus for an unusual April Fool's Day. The special guest "dairyman" for the occasion was Earl Shiflett, Virginia's Secretary of Commerce and Natural Resources, and chieftain of state agriculture.

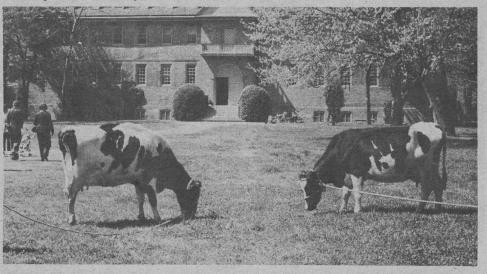

Two milk cows were transported to the lawn in from of the Wren Building from the Gospel Spreading Church Farm near Jamestown, and Shiflett soon began giving milking lessons to a novice at the profession, President Thomas A. Graves Jr. As students, tourists and newspaper reporters snapped pictures from every angle, Shiflett squeezed more than a gallon of milk from one of the cows. A "farmboy" from Augusta County milk-country, Shiflett was

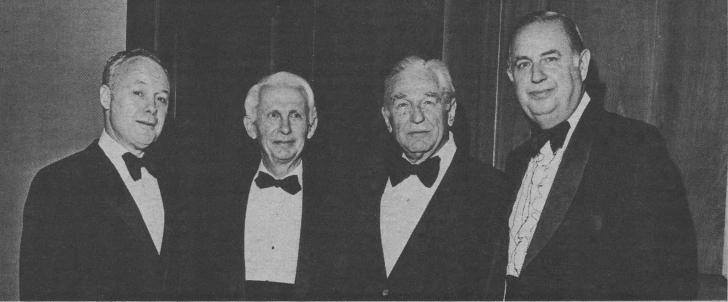

About 200 years ago when William amazingly adept at the procedure, despite the fact that he hadn't milked a cow for nearly 30 years.

By the time Shiflett vacated the milking stool and allowed the President to try his hand at milking, the cow was virtually dry. Pull as he might, Graves could only produce a single trickle of milk.

Later in the afternoon, after both cows had their fill of fresh green grass, Parke Rouse Jr. dropped by to pay his regards. Rouse, director of the Jamestown Foundation and the Virginia Independence Bicentennial Commission, is the author of the popular Cows on the Campus, a book about the affairs of Williamsburg and the College from the moving of the capital to Richmond in 1780 until John D. Rockerfeller Jr. arrived to restore the lustre of colonial times in 1926.

The scene of two large cows grazing in the Wren Yard is almost identical to the earliest known water-color of the campus created before the Civil War by Thomas Millington, son of a William and Mary professor. It's the same print that was adapted for use on the cover of Rouse's book.

Gifts Typify Wide Variety of Donations Friends Give Chairs, Silver Baskets.

John Marshall household, were recently donated to the art collection of the College of William and Mary.

These gifts typify the wide variety of donations from friends and alumni of the College which include paintings, sculpture, prints, ceramics and porcelains from Western Europe, and the Orient.

The Chinese chairs of the 16th or 17th century, which have their original caned seats, are a gift to the College by Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Lamberson of New York. Mr. Lamberson has also donated to the College Collection several paints and lithographs by contemporary Israeli artist Nissan Engel and an ancient Islamic bowl.

The gift of John Marshall silver, which also includes a small silver candlestick, was made by the estate of Mrs. Ruth M. Hogue. Mrs. Hogue was the wife of Andrew O'Beirne Hogue, a great great grandson of John Marshall. Mrs. Hogue a native of Athens, Ga., but lived all of her adult life in West Virginia where her husband was in the coal business.

The beautifully carved Chinese chairs and the antique silver are on display in the President's House.

Three pieces of sculpture from the Lonas collection, another recent gift to the college, are on display in Andrews Hall. Joseph Lonas, an alumnus who is an outstanding American artist in Berlin Germany where he has made his home for the past 20 years, has given the College sculptures, models, drawings and photographs valued at over $150,000.

Also on display in Andrews is another recent acquisition, a still life in oils by Morgan Russell (1886-1953), the gift of another artist, Mrs.

Two finely carved Chinese audi- Gertrude Perrin of New York City. ence chairs and a pair of silver Mrs.Perrinwill have a showing of her baskets, once the property of the own work in Andrews Hall beginning April 20. Other gifts by Mrs. Perrin include two works by the contemporary Japanese artist Hidetaka Ohno, a smoked burlap collage on canvas and an abstract watercolor. To complement the works, Mrs. Perrin has also given the College a limited autographed edition of a book of poem entitled "Clocked Stone," by Cid Corman, illustrated with reproductions of Ohno paint-

> Three engravings "Burial of St. Petronilla," after a painting by Guercino; "Vision of St. Romuald," after a painting by A Sacchi and a portrait of Sir Nicholas Bacon, were given by to the college. Don S. Lewis of the Auslew Gallery in Norfolk are now part of the print collection housed in Andrews Hall.

An early 18th century portrait of Queen Mary II of England has been presented to the College by Allan Denny Ivie III of Richmond, a 1954 alumnus, and James Lowry Cogar of Harrodsburg, Ky. Cogar, now retired, was curator at Colonial Williamsburg from 1931-48 and had an antique shop in Williamsburg for many years. He also was a lecturer in the College's history department.

Mrs. Winifred Moorhead, widow of Dwight Moorhead, a Newport News Shipbuilding and Drydock vice president and an artist, has donated a selection of her husband's etchings

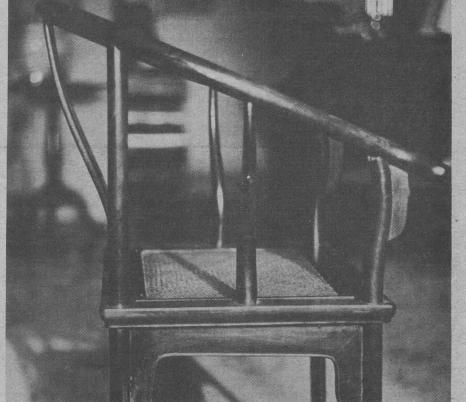

Mrs. Willard P. Smith of Chappaqua, N.Y., a member of the class of 1940, has given the College an early edition of the familiar Millington view of the Wren Yard, popularly known as "Cows on the Campus."

An engraving of "The Marriage of Pocahontas," by John C. McRae after a painting by Henry Brueckner was given to the College by Miss Miriam R. LeVin of Westchester, Pa., who has also given several books to the College's Swem Library.

Books are also among the gifts William D. Eppes, of New York, an alumnus, has made to the College. A regular contributor to the Peter Chapin Collection of dog books in Swem Library, Eppes' most recent gift was an antique table for display at Ash Lawn, the Monroe estate near Monticello which was bequeathed to the College by Jay W. Johns of Charlottesville. Two other gifts from Eppes, an early nineteenth century English Sheraton knife box and a seventeenth century Chinese cloisonne covered bucket, are also displayed at Ash Lawn.

A special Bicentennial gift for the College art collection was made by Mrs. Victor Iturralde of Williamsburg, a needlepoint wall hanging which features George Washington's coat of arms. George Washington was Chancellor of the College 1788-1799 and received his surveyor's license from William and Mary

All gifts to the Colleges Collection are carefully catalogued. A picture and full description of each item is kept on file. Whenever possible art is displayed on campus for the college community and visitors. Because of limited display area and no permanent exhibition building to house the collection, much remains in storage but is displayed on a rotating basis.

Lamberson Gift to College

Owned by Florenz Ziegfeld

.And Grand Piano to William and Mary

A special grand piano, made in the 1920's for legendary showman Florenz Ziegfeld, has been given to the

Mr. and Mrs. Loren P. Guy of Williamsburg have donated the pi-ano which Ziegfeld ordered for his actress wife Billie Burke. Styled in the fashion of a parlor grand of the the stock market crash. period with elaborate decorative carfrom 1907-30 and a flamboyant personality.

The piano was acquired by Mrs. Guy around 1938 from a shop in New York. During their residence in New York, Dr. and Mrs. Guy found that the piano was a favorite of their many show-business guests, including popular songwriter Freddie Coots of "Santa Claus is Coming to Town" fame.

When Dr. and Mrs. Guy moved south about 10 years ago, the piano was moved into storage, where it remained until it was given to the College. The piano is now in the parlor of the President's House until the music department can determine the band conductor a $100 bill to keep where best to place the piano. It is to the same song playing for almost 30 be made available for music students. minutes.

Dr. Guy said that the elaborate piano specially ordered by Ziegfeld was on sale just a few years after his death. "Ziegfeld was up one minute and down the next, and I believe he passed away more or less broke," he explained. In fact, Ziegfeld died in 1932 after losing almost everything in Ziegfeld was known throughout ving, the piano was a special gift his highly publicized career as the from Ziegfeld, the producer of the most extravagant of New York pro-Ziegfeld Follies. He was known as ducers. His "Follies", which featured the star maker during the period dozens of the biggest names of the period, cost thousands to stage. But Ziegfeld's reputation as a creative genius bent upon producing the best show possible--no matter what the cost--made him one of the most popular of showmen. Humorist Will Rogers once said that "he was great, he was wonderful--we would be nothing without him."

> Eddie Cantor, one of the period's greatest comedians, wrote that Ziegfeld had "a reputation of being irresistable to women." Billie Burke, a young aspiring actress, was literally swept off her feet by Ziegfeld in 1913--he grabbed her hand, waltzed her onto the dance floor, and slipped

President Graves and Dr. and Mrs. Loren P. Guy look on as Mrs. Graves plays the piano once owned by the flamboyant Florenz Ziegfeld and his wife Billie Burke. The Guys have donated the baby grand to the College.

ROGER MUDD VISITS

CBS News Correspondent Roger Mudd visited William and Mary for two days in late March as the College's first "Journalist-in-Residence." Invited to address the annual awards banquet of the Society for Collegiate Journalists, Mudd not only accepted that invitation but graciously offered to talk with students in classes and on an informal basis. Mudd's wife, the former Emma Jeanne Spears, is a 1947 alumna of the College.

Chapter

ST. LOUIS: Area alumni will meet at the Cheshire Inn, 6300 Clayton Road at 8:00 p.m. on April 2 for a cash bar social hour. The program will be provided by Joan Harrigan '75, Director of the Alumni Chapter Program, who will show slides of William and Mary and discuss current happenings on campus. A $3.00 per person cover charge will help defray the cost of hors d'oeuvres and room rental. For reservations, contact Ken Kranzberg '59, St. Louis Alumni Coordinator, 135 North Forsyth Blvd., St. Louis 63105.

AMES, IOWA: The first chapter meeting ever for Iowa alumni will be held April 4 in the Regency Room of the Memorial Union at Iowa State University, Ames, at 7:30 p.m. A cover charge of $1.25 per person will defray the cost of hot hors d'oeuvres, will show slides of campus life in Williamsburg. For reservations, contact Bill Harpine '73, Iowa Alumni Coordinator, 2317 Knapp #2, Ames 50010.

MINNEAPOLIS: The Kahler Motel, 41 North 10th Street, Minneapolis, will be the setting for the first meeting of Minnesota William and Mary Alumni. The meeting will be held on April 6, and the program will be provided by Joan Harrigan '75 of the Alumni Office, who will bring a slide show from Williamsburg. There will also be a cash bar social hour, beginning at 7:30 p.m., and a $2.00 cover charge will be collected at the door to help defray the cost of the room and snacks.

DETROIT: Watch for a mailing on the April 7 meeting at the Dearborn Inn, Dearborn. The meeting will begin at 7:30 p.m., and the program will be provided by Joan Harrigan of the Alumni Office, who will show slides of William and Mary. For further information, contact Harvey Shuler '39, Chapter Coordinator, 1235 North Glenhurst, Birmingham 48009.

ROANOKE: President Graves and Gordon Vliet will be the guests of honor at the spring meeting of Roanoke area alumni on April 8 at 8 p.m. The meeting will be held in the Jefferson Club on the top floor of the new First National Exchange Bank Building in downtown Roanoke. Light hors d'oeuvres will be served, and a cash bar will be available. A $2.00 per person cover charge will be charged, and reservations may be and a cash bar will be available. Joan made with Marshall Gates '65, 3854 Harrigan '75 of the Alumni Office Hyde Park Drive, Roanoke 24018. Phone: 703-774-9450.

CHICAGO: Dr. Robert Bloom of the School of Education will speak to area alumni about William and Mary's special education programs at the April 9 meeting in the American Mart, 666 Lake Shore Drive. A cash bar social hour from 6-7 p.m. will be followed by a dinner catered by Jacques. Joan Harrigan '75 of the Alumni Office will also be present at the meeting. The cost of the dinner is $11.00 per person, and reservations may be made with Mrs. Mary Helmantoler, 247 East Chestnut Street #2301, Chicago 60611.

CHARLOTTESVILLE: Watch for a mailing soon for the second annual birthday party for James Monroe at his home, Ash Lawn, on April 28.

Paschall Library Receives Gifts

from the generosity of alumni in recent weeks. J. Rawls Byrd, '18, former Superintendent of Williamsburg-James City County Public Association in Washington, D.C., at Schools, visited the Alumni House recently and brought a copy of his er. Other Flight Club mementos book, History of Public Schools in came from Fred Eilers, '33, who sent Williamsburg. Another visitor was Caroline Baytop Sinclair, '24, who Church, A Chronology of its History 1650-1970; and Movement of the Young Child, Ages Two to Six. Hensley C. Woodbridge, '43, now living in Illinois, sent to the library a copy of his bibliography of the Latin American poet, Ruben Dario.

Other new additions to the Paschall Library are Infernal Machines, The Story of Confederate Submarine and Mine Warfare, by Milton F. Perry, '50; The Glorious Hour of Lt. Monroe, by Richard Hanser; and three books on current issues in higher education by Dyckman Vermilye, '43.

Julia C. Coleman, '31, from Richmond, very kindly sent to the library two books written by John Lesslie Hall, an early professor of English and History and one of the Seven Wise Men of William and Mary. The books are Judas, published in 1894, and Old English Idyls, published in

The Society is grateful for gifts of memorabilia received in recent weeks. G. Louis Carner, '34, visited the Alumni House in February and presented to the Society his William Office.

The Paschall Library has benefited and Mary Flight Club Pin. Mr. Carner was president of the Club in 1933 and the pin was presented at a banquet of the National Aeronautics which Amelia Earhardt was a speakphotos taken in 1931.

Dorothy Wallace, '31, visited the gave the library three of her books: Alumni House and brought an Stories of Old Gloucester; Abingdon orange and black William and Mary pennant, an orange and black William and Mary pillow cover, and other memorabilia. She was accompanied by Marion Sargent Lane, '31, who was on a visit from her new home in Pennsylvania, and who also gave the Society memorabilia from her student days.

Harper Anderson, '40, gave the Paschall Library a photograph of the 1897 football team, of which his father, Alfred Scott Anderson, '01, was quarterback.

The Society appreciates these gifts. Other alumni who have written books or who wish to share remembrances are encouraged to contact the Paschall Library, Society of the Alumni, Post Office Box GO, Williamsburg, Virginia 23185.

1950 Class Ring

The Alumni Office has received notification from Victor Senior High School in Victor, New York that they have in their possession a William and Mary woman's ring, Class of 1950, BFA, with, apparently, initials GMG. Please contact the Alumni

Freshest Advice.

William H. Deierhoi of Richmond, Va., is a recipient of the National Retired Teachers Association Award - 1972 Retired Teacher of the Year for the State of Virginia - May 1975 - Elected by City Council to the Richmond Senior Citizen Hall of Fame, one of the first three chosen.

Jesse Choate Phillips 4213 Orchard Hill Road Harrisburg, Penn. 17110

Mr. and Mrs. Johnson C. Moss (Elizabeth Smith) 1007 Malvern Avenue Richmond, Va. 23221

Smoke Signals from this Richmond Reservation have to be few at this writing. Squaw Moss has undergone several eye operations since mid-November. Big Chief Moss has had his hands full keeping the family Teepee and business both running smoothly.

We are so pleased with our first edition copy of "Their Majesties' Royall Colledge" and will thoroughly read it when time and eyesight permit.

Do hope that all of you have received the information about the 50th Anniversary of our class, which is to be held May 14 through 16. If not, write to The Society of the Alumni, Box GO, Williamsburg, Virginia 23185.

Since the last communication, we have heard directly, or indirectly, from: Cooper D. Ponton has retired and is living in Southburg, Conn.

Elizabeth White Allport lives in Richmond.

She, Helen Moore, Lucy Hodges Shepherd and Isabelle Steger Allen are planning to attend the reunion and hope to see all of you there. Lucille Bell Richards lives in Norfolk and keeps in touch with Esther Thomas Kurani.

Won't it be great to renew our friendship with all the folks? Make your plans now and let's have a big 1926 Pow-wow in May! Our best to all,

Liz and Johnny

William B. Bolton 1103 Princess Anne Street Fredericksburg, Va. 22401

Millwood, Va. 24162

Lois Lacy McGee has taken an out-of-country trip almost every year. Recently it was a cruise to Greece, Egypt, Turkey and Israel. She lives in Palm Beach, Fla., is selling real estate, and would be happy to help some of our class-mates settle there.

Mildred Moore Nixon attended the 50th anniversary of her Atlantic City, N.J. High School class at the Marlborough Blenheim Hotel this past May. December was a high point in her life. One of her grandsons sang the part of Amahl in "Amahl and the Night Visitors" produced by the College of Fine Arts of Jacksonville University, accompanied by the J.U. Orchestra and A Capella Choir. The next day the Dean of St. John's Cathedral, Jacksonville, dedicated a gold chalice and paten in her husband's memory for use in the Cathedral where he served as Canon Residentary for six years (1954-1960). It sounds like an exciting

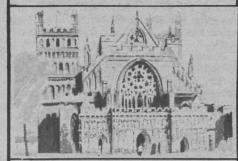

Robert Ernest Doyle dissolved his retail business and retired in 1972. He won two sales contests sponsored by General Electric, during his business life, and he and his wife, Florence Dabney Doyle were given trips to San Francisco and Bermuda. He has just retired as mayor of McKenney, Va., having served 32 consecutive years on the town council. He is now an officer in the local bank, Methodist Church, and a member of the planning board. Florence is an officer in the Episcopal Church group and Woman's Club. She also serves as aide in Red Cross and other civic activities. Their son, Robert E. Doyle Jr., his wife and two children live in Charlottesville, Va., where he is a fire insurance underwriter with State Farm.

We hope that Louis Phillips Craig of Hampton, Va., will accept our apology for incorrectly reporting in the 1975 Re-Echo that she was President of the State, National and International AAUW. The correction is that she is a member of those organizations.

Mrs. Thomas C. Bradshaw (Josephine M. Habel) 131 North Main Street Blackstone, Va. 23824

THE SOCIETY OF THE ALUMNI PRESENTS ALUMNI TRAVEL TOURS

(For members & their immediate families)

May 11 - May 19 $482.00

RHINE RIVER CRUISE

Switzerland - Rhine River boat trip - Amsterdam - Deluxe tour

> June 11-21 $835.00 Waiting List Only

LONDON

Aug. 9-17 $367.00

All prices subject to fuel surcharges and possible dollar fluctuations

DULLES DEPARTURES!

For further information and/or reservation coupon, contact; Society of the Alumni P.O. Box G.O., Williamsburg, Va. 23185 PHONE: (804) 229-7545

Helen R. Stamper of St. Petersburg, Fla., writes that she is retiring in June after 20 years of teaching in Northeast High School in St. Petersburg.

A nice letter came from "Speedy" Britton of Orlanda, Fla., telling of the many points of interest he and Swea are planning to visit. They have recently returned from a trip to South America and at present plan to travel around the world stopping in Hawaii, Japan, Singapore, Hong Kong, Sidney and Auchland, then a long visit with Sweas' relatives in Marjorie Moon of Stockton, Calif., writes that she meets with Anne Messick in San Francisco occasionally. Marjorie hasn't been too well and is undecided about returning to Washington, Elizabeth Hope Urban has recently moved from Mechanicsburg, Penn, to 48 Sherwood Drive, Tuscaloosa, Ala.

A Christmas Card from Mary Solliday Welty says she is enjoying living in California where she moved to be near her son.

Elizabeth Flick of Johnstown, Penn., has

William R. Renn '32 and Alleen Barclay Renn '37 of Virginia Beach are on their way to Hawaii for a 35th Anniversary trip. William has retired from the Naval Reserve in 1971 with Rank of Commander and from Civil Service - Electrical Engineer in 1973.

Polly Weihe Newton of Madison, Ga., was named Citizen of the Month for 20 years' direction of the Red Cross, including more than 45 visits of the Bloodmobile.

Best wishes to all of you and many thanks for sending messages.

Bernard B. Brugh 6130 Osborne Road Landover, Md. 20785

LCdr. Jasper L. Kranke 3100 SE 41st Avenue Ocala, Fla. 32670

Mrs. Margaret Heatwole Lockwood Box 526 Williamsburg, Va. 23185

Again, I'd like to remind all of you in the upper Peninsula area that a social gathering is planned by your Society of the Alumni as part of an effort to organize an area alumni chapter.

Watch for notification soon!

Heard from Horace Dyer in Martinsville, Va., offering to help round up some news of us in that section. Thank you Horace.

We wonder what is happening with Dot Kincaid Portz now that this is such a political year. The last we heard of her she was running for some political office in Ohio. Send us some of your campaign literature, Dot.

I'm still not getting the letters I had hoped for. We are due a reunion pretty soon so that should shake you up.

Mrs. Franklin D. Henderson (Barbara Clawson) Box 17 Irvington, Va. 22480

News is scarce this time. Stanley Ebb wrote that he enjoyed so much returning to his "true love," The College, for his 35th reunion and it was a pleasure renewing old college friendships. Ditto for that, Stan. It was great seeing you!

Milton Kaplan retired from the Library of Congress in December '74. Two new editions of his books have been published - The Story of the Declaration of Independence (Oxford University Press, 1975) and The Ungentlemenly Art (The Mamillan Company, 1975)

Leah and T. Waller of Richmond are vacationing in Puerto Rico. We missed them at an Oyster Roast we had here recently. Merritt and Mary Foster and Jack and Ann Garrett were with us for the occasion and we had a ball.

Do keep me posted on your doings for with nothing coming in, I don't have anything to pass along.

Dr. Paul H. Gantt 4450 South Park Avenue #1008 Chevy Chase, Md. 20015

This was fast service. Tommy Crane's address is 68 Van Reyen Street, Jersey City, N.J. 07306. He'll be back for Homecoming 1976, and bring the whole bunch (Mel, that is, Bill West and Bobby Taylor "with wives" along).

Stanley A. Tompson is Superintendent of School, Island Lakes, Mich. In a few years he and Kay will retire to their home on the Indian

William Fleming Way of DuBois, Pa., writes that he is a first-time Grandpa. Daughter Joy had a little boy. Grandma and Grandpa feeling fine and living right on Interstate Route 80 in Northwest Pennsylvania.

Louise Wallace Richards visited Williamsburg in late summer 1975. She had a guided tour of the new Chemistry Building. What a contrast to old Rogers Hall, she says. She continues to teach Math at Rolling Hills High School in Rancho Palos Verdes in California. She has one son who is a senior at the University of California. The younger son is a junior in high

She sees Juanice Campbell Ford occasionally and Ann Johnson Tompkinson frequently since she is librarian at Rolling Hills High. With apologies to the Class Reporters of '41 and 46, respectively.

Mildred Sheffield Stanger has a fast paced schedule of work, travel and social commitments. She went to Spain and Mexico during 1975. Her husband, Russell, is Music Director of the Norfolk Symphony and naturally, guest conducted orchestras in Spain and Mexico! Mildred is active in promoting symphony functions in Norfolk and surrounding cities which include Williamsburg. In addition she has her own busy office, Mildred Sheffield, Interior Designs.

Mrs. David Edmunds (Dorothy Agurk) 709 Harbor Island Clearwater, Fla. 33515

Sorry to have missed writing the February newsletter. As it happens to all of us occasionally, time got away from me.

William and Mary alumni are "stirring" a little in the Tampa Bay area. Thirty three of us met in Tampa on February 20th, and our program was a delightful debate between the Royal Scholar, David Taylor, and Miss Joan Harrigan, Director of Chapters in the Office of the Alumni, debating: "RESOLVED: That the Colonies should rightfully have remained subject to the Crown." If this program comes to your area, we all highly recommend it to you--and take your family and friends, you'll have a wonderful and witty evening. Nancy Blandford '48 and husband George '43 of Tampa, Annis McLean Fluharty '48 of St. Petersburg, Evelyn Gardner King '51 (Clearwater) and I called over 150 area alumni for the meeting, most of whom expressed an interest in attending future meetings which we hope to hold annually. If there are any of you in the area we didn't reach, do contact us--especially 44ers whose news I would love to pass on via the Gazette.

John Paul Carter of The Plains, Va., is now President of the Alumni Society of the Virginia Theological Seminary and a member of the Board of Trustees. His wife, Joan Worstell '45, is Treasurer of the Waterford Weavers' Guild.

Busy though they are, they were able to get away to enjoy a "fine month in Guanajuato and San Miguel de Allende, Mexico."

Margaret Horn Booth is proud of her three grandsons ranging in age from eight to 'almost one"--one each for her two daughters and her son. She lives in Kensington, Conn.

Iver M. Brook, Coral Gables, Fla., is now a Post-Doctoral Fellow at the School of Marine Science of the University of Miami and is doing private ecological consulting work in South Florida. Son John is a freshman this

From Rochester, Minn., Anne Smith Goldston, M.D., reports that husband, Ed, is still consultant at Mayo Clinic Preventive Medicine Section, and that she is still practicing pediatrics at the Austin Clinic and Rochester Health Department. Son Ed Jr. attends University of Miami in Coral Gables (Iver Brook, please note), and daughter, Maryann is a busy 17-year-old at Mayo High. 13-year-old Georgieanne is busy with her horses. Anne is active with a newly built and organized home for retarded children, but despite her busy schedule managed a visit recently to the Washington, D.C. area with her "ole roommate, Maryanne Holm Olsen '43." Busy people always seem to have time for at least two more things!

Speaking of busy people, Eleanor Rheuby Volonte of Madison, N.J., has had to mend her ways a little. She said she "found herself too involved but loved every minute of it, and then . . . payment came due!" Eleanor had a coronary December 11, and spent Christmas in the hospital, but says "with a great family and many friends, it hasn't been all bad." What great spirit! We wish her continued improvement. For those of you who might like to drop her a cheery note, the address is 3 Colonial Way, (07940).

Susan Whitehead Byars came to our meeting in Tampa. She is now a Career Education Intern, employed by our Pinellas County School system, and very busy. Jerry Clay, now a Tampa resident by virtue of her husband's transfer there (he's a G.E. vice president), was also at the meeting and reported having had a wonderful time in Williamsburg last month attending the annual Antiques Seminar.

Eleanor Ramsdell Van Scherpe of Foster City, Calif., writes that their second daughter, Ginger, was married in Southern California in December.

Our youngest daughter, Susan, was home from Florence, Italy for the holidays, and went back January 10th for four more months of intensive study in art. Linda, our married daughter, works for Florida Congressman Bill Young on Capitol Hill while her husband Jack attends the International School of Law in they too were home for Christmas week. With Linda in Washington, I hope to be visiting Virginia more frequently in the future. We hope to get to Williamsburg in May. David and I had six wonderful weeks in Europe last Fall, and haven't "stayed put" very long since our return November 1st.

Surely with all the people visiting Florida this year some of you '44ers must get down this way. If so, do call me and come by to see us. As for the rest of you, how about a postcard with your news?

Mrs. George R. Holladay (Catharine G. Mitchell) 350 South Market Street Selinsgrove, Pa. 17870

Can't you just picture Williamsburg right is minute? Redbuds--daffodils--warm breezes. I wish the grackles who are still walking and muttering in our Pennsylvania backyard would get the message soon -- that spring has indeed come, and that they should go away. It's time for that sort of thing.

Speaking of which . . . Have you sent in your filled-out questionnaire for the Re-Echo, which is being prepared for us for our Reunion in the fall? Hope so. They're fun. In the meantime, here's news from our classmates:

On Sept. 29, 1975, the Rev. Robert H. Walters marked his Twenty-Fifth Anniversary of Ordination to the Priesthood in the Episcopal Church with quite a solemn celebration at the Church of St. Francis of Assisi in Levittown, N.Y., where he has served for the last 13 years. Two years ago the Bishop instituted him as first rector since they became a parish in 1973. Currently, he serves on the diocesan Commission on Ministry and is Chairman of the Diocesan Liturgical Commission. In Bob's parish are two other William and Mary Alumni. They are Colin MacDonald, '48 and Edith Sherman MacDonald, '49. Bob says he was unable to attend our 25th Homecoming, but is hoping to make it down to Williamsburg this fall for our Reunion then.

Keith Anne Gamble Duncan and husband, Tom plan to be in Williamsburg for our Reunion, too! They will have the added leasure of being with their son, Thomas G., who graduated from William and Mary, Class of '74, and is now a student at the U. of Va. Law School. Keith Anne and Tom live in Pittsburgh, which they like and find friendly. Betty Cutshall Allman and her entire family-

Ed and Betty, Steve and Gail--enjoyed a combined business and vacation trip to Italy, Switzerland, and France. They loved driving through the Alps and France, particularly the Loire Valley. Betty lives in Manchester, N.H.

Joy Allen Raulfs and her optometrist hus-band, George, have moved to a new home with a spectacular view of a 95-acre lake. It's located in Mill Quarter Plantation, Powatan, Va. Both their children are Juniors in college. Twenty-two-year old Glenn is studying Industrial Arts Education at VPI and S.U. Ann, 20, is in the Physical Therapy School at MCV-VCU

If anybody knows where the missing members of our class are (as listed in the Reunion letter), please send the information to the College. Wonder where they are. Maybe, they will turn up, en masse, at Homecoming, shouting "Surprise! Surprise!"

Let's be there to greet them--just in case!

Mrs. Donald R. Rutter (Mary A. Keeney). 1001 Pontiac Lafayette, Ind. 47905

Mrs. Robert R. Morrison (Phyllis Reardon) 912 Jamaica Way Bakersfield, Calif. 93309

I want to thank you all for sending so much news for this issue. If you want to have a column, please send me something to put in it. J.W. Hornsby, Jr. was elected President of the Newport News Bar Association. Harry Kostel was elected vice president. I had a letter from Janet Pierce Waller, we are expecting a visit from them in March. If you don't send me some news, the column will be even shorter next issue.

Mrs. Harvey D. Sanford (Janet Dickerson) 529 Franklyn Avenue Indialantic, Fla. 32903

This month seems to be women in the news. Elaine Diehm Guilfoyle lives in Port Washington, N.Y. She returned to work after a 15-year period for Bob Maye Associates. This firm is concerned with product packaging and de-

Joyce Carrigan Walsh is Program Director for a Law School Programs and an Educational Testing Service in Princeton, N.J. She lives in Yardley, Pa., beautiful Bucks County, and has two children in college. "This is it, kids. I'm taking off the apron", said Caroline Jones Wiley when she turned 40. She is currently Advertising Director and Public Relations representative for Virginia Mutual Savings and Loan, headquartered in Petersburg. After leaving the College in 1950 to marry Ash Wiley, Caroline finished at Richmond Professional Institute with a degree in distributive education. Her job is one which in years past was a man's, but she has felt no discrimination working in this field. Caroline is responsible for sales promotions, advertising lay-out, TV and radio scripts, seminars for realtors and was the creator of the firm's new logo. Wiley, Jr., is a junior at Radford College and Margaret is a junior at Virginia Commonwealth Univ.

Nancy Barker Squire and Peter live in Emporia where he has a Family Practice in Medicine. They have four sons, two at Hampden Sydney, one at Louisburg College in N.C., and one a junior at Brunswick Academy in Lawrenceville. Four boys must keep life lively!

Ann Beattie Recknor received her Master's degree from Johns Hopkins Univ. in 1973 and teaches Social Studies at Notre Dame Preparatory School in Towson, Md. She is President of the Baltimore KD's, belongs to Phi Delta Gamma at Johns Hopkins and enjoys her Great Books Discussion Group. Phil commutes daily to Arlington where he is with the Bureau of Hearings and Appeals for Social Security. Their older daughter is a junior at Towson State. In their spare time they like to bike and jog. Jog? Does anyone really like to Jack Custer and Lucy Humphries were among those who attended the Atlanta chapter Christmas cocktail party. Jack lives just outside Atlanta in Tucker, Ga.

I head Marvin West's home was in a recent Better Homes and Gardens Plan Book. He is a dentist in Williamsburg and I hope all of you saw his picture in a recent Gazette featuring major contributors to the College. You look the same as in '52, Doo Miriam Dickens Wall and Bill live in Roanoke where she teaches high school math. She has her son Neal in her geometry class! He plans to enter U. Va. next Fall. Miriam toured London and the English countryside last summer with a friend who teaches with her.

Short notes: Bill Beverly has his own practice in Caparra, Puerto Rico. Parke Musselman is with Bethlehem Fabricators, Inc. in Bethlehem, Pa. Wendell Haynie's daughter Gayle is a freshman at the College. Nancy Noot Goldberger's son Tom has been named a Commended Scholar under the National Merit Programs

next Fall. She and Art live in Haven Beach,

From the beauty spot of America, Jackson Hole, Wyo., comes news from Fran Jewell Lange. Their son Gordon is a freshman at U. of Colorado at Boulder and is on the Nordic Ski Team. Helen Wesson Tucker and family visited them last summer from Norfolk. Helen's daughter Jane is at the College.

Richard Forbes is a minister at Faith Presbyterian Church in Newport News and Jean teaches first grade. They have three children. David is married and lives near Williamsburg, Beth is a junior at U.Va. in nursing, and Tom is a freshman at Bridgewater College

Robert James Stone is an Associate professor in the Dept. of Civil Engineering Technology at Temple Univ. Prior to that he was on the faculty for 15 years at Drexel University

Audrey Dixon Fawcett and Ken live in Falls Church. She is working on her Master's in Elementary Education while Ken, Jr. is a senior and Bill a junior in college.

A fun phone call from Sue Hines Davis and Randy ('50) in March as they visited relatives in Indialantic. What time and dedication these two have given with Randy serving four years as President of the Alumni Society! They have four children. Mallory is a senior at the College. Beth and Bill each live and work in Richmond. Randolph works for Randy in Suffolk, lives in Norfolk, and in his spare time coaches the JV Basketball team at Va. Wesleyan. At 6'7" he was on his way to a basketball career at the College; however an accident on farm machinery injured his hand.

It was a big surprise to learn Ed and Ginnie Gary Lupton have moved to nearby Cocoa Beach. Ed retired as a colonel last July and they travelled 4000 miles looking for just the right retirement spot. They have three children Gary, a senior and Debra, a junior, both at the U. of Florida. Karen is a sophomore in high school. Ed's been busier than ever building china cabinets and a boathouse for their new home overlooking the Banana River

It is always fun to locate a "lost" class member. Cynthia Edwards is Mrs. David Keppel, III, and lives in Lorton, Va. I'm also trying to locate Charlie Somerville, Henry Moughamian, Pat Reeves, and quite a few Pi Phi's from our Class. HELP! Certainly they too would like to be receiving The Alumni Gazette. If you know their whereabouts, how about dropping me a Alice Giden Levien has a son, Thomas, in Georgetown University. He is a freshman. Alice stays busy doing volunteer work at South Nassau Community Hospital and for Woodward Mental Health Center. The Leviens live in Rockville Centre, N.Y.

Carol Myers Mifflin is still involved in numerous activities; P.T.A., A.A.U.W. and teaching needlework. The Mifflins have a son in Southern Methodist. University and another son who will finish high school this year. They spent a little while in Williamsburg last summer with the younger two children.

Gil Parmele is still in the sports writing and producing game for the American Broadcasting Company. He wrote the highlights for the Prudential College Scoreboard Show. Son, Jack, fourteen years old, is a hockey player, and younger son, David, eight, is learning.

William Hilliard is Administrator of Amherst Hospital in Amherst, Ohio. He and his wife, Margaret, have two children, Beth, who is nine years old and John, who is seven.

The Dictionary of International Biography listed Henretta Trent Band in its pages. She was also listed in Who's Who in the United States and International Who's Who in Community Service.

Dr. Robert D. Gibbons 1008 Fourth Avenue armville, Va. 23901

The names of 3 classmates appeared in the last issue of the Gazette. These were the 3 "Where Are You?" people. To each of these classmates, I wrote a post card, informing them not only that their names would be appearing in the newspaper, but that I would like for them to respond. Of course, I did not tell them what they were supposed to respond to--only that they were to respond! Brad Tonkin wrote, asking me why his name would appear in the Gazette and what kind of response was he to give. Brad didn't realize he was one of the chosen 3--sorry, Brad, I didn't mean to get you all shook up. Höwever, I'm still waiting for some info from you, Brad, and also from Dolores Barker and Sam Cole. This article was due in Billsburg just a few days after the last issue was mailed, so I'll wait and report on these 3 next time--Don't forget to respond, you 3, or your phone will be ringing. The "Where Are You?" names for this time: Nelia Daggett Cunningham (Tennessee), Ralph S. Lane (Georgia), and Margaret Wilder Jeffrey (Ala-and plans to enter Williams College in Mass. bama). Let me know what you're doing--or your phones will be ringing, too.

Many of you wrote some news on the envelopes bearing your gifts to The William and Mary Fund. Heard from several Californians. Bob Swearingen lives in Sam Clemente, Ca., and reports that Jerry and Barbara Humphreys live there, too. How's your famous neighbor, Bob? Understand he doesn't get out very much, except maybe for a free trip overseas every so often. With three children (18, 17 and 10) Margaret Chapman Millhoff reports she is Project Leader for Financial Systems at IV Phase Systems, Inc. near her San Jose, Ca., home. A third Californian, Barbara Campbell Wenger, wrote to say she is the new coordinator for the Food Stamp Corrective Action Planning Committee for the Los Angeles County Welfare Department.

Most everyone in Minnesota must stay inside in the winter and write letters. Received info on 4 of our classmates living there. According to my records, only 5 56ers live in Minnesota. Who's missing?? Anyone going through Minnetonka, Mn. is invited to stop and see James M. Brown, wife Helen, and 3 children (15, 13, and 11). Jim has his own food brokerage company and has been in the Minneapolis area since 1963. If all goes well, Jim and family will be coming to the 20th reunion. Can you believe Caral Jacobs Heffernan has her family's reservations for the next reunion already! Carol also lives in Minneapo lis, loves it, and wishes all a Happy '76. (As crowded as Williamsburg is, you're smart to get reservations so soon. Would you believe Williamsburg was completely sold out on George Washington's birthday?--tis true). Another Minnesota resident is Joan Marsh Myers, who lives in Burnsville. Joan is active in her Homeowner's Association, New Sociables, and Gamma Phi Beta Alumni Association. Joan states she sees Caral Heffernan quite often. William Paper reports he is an investment broker with Dain, Kalman and Quail in St. Paul, Mn.

Lois Ludwig Foster and Sonya Warner Wolfe are both graduate students certifying to become teachers. Practicing medicine in Rockville Centre, N.Y. is Gary Joachim. Gary is Assistant Director of Medicine at South Nassau Communities Hospital, Assistant Professor of Clinical Medicine at the Stoneybrook University Medical School and is also involved in studying infectious diseases at the Nassau County Medical Center. What do you do with all that spare time you have, Gary?

I presume all of you received info about the Re-Echo. Lots of names but no addresses for several of our classmates. If you can help the Alumni Office, please do so. I see one of my former roommate's name on the list, but sorry say, I've lost track of him, too the state? Answer appears next time.

Maryland is in third place with 28 of our classmates. #4 is right next door to Maryland--

This is the last article that you'll receive until next fall, so may I wish all of you a happy July 4th. As we celebrate our Bicentennial, I would like to quote from Thomas Jefferson: "I like the dreams of the future better than the history of the past." So do I. Best wishes for a safe and happy summer. See you again in the fall.

Mrs. N. Davis Wrinkle, Jr. (Polly Stadel) 7741 Rockfalls Drive Richmond, Va. 23225

Edward John Love of Dover, N.J., writes that he is part-owner of a restaurant in his hometown. For the past two years however, e has been ill in a sanatorium in Seneca Falls, N.Y. He said that the news is about his wife who is a professional wrestler who competes under the name of Ann Cosey. Last October in Boston she defeated the U.S. Women's wrestling champion. Lillian Ellison to capture the title. She has been wrestling professionally for several years and is a contender for the Women's World Championship currently held by the fabulous Moolah.

It has got to be Spring! To all of you Northerners, "Williamsburg-type weather hit Virginia mighty early this year. Obviously, many thoughts have turned to those warm, lazy, "carefree" magnolia days as I am receiving more letters.

Dick Clay is living in Pulaski, N.Y., since 1970, where he is serving St. James Episcopal Church as rector. He is also teaching Philosophy, Ethics, and Religion at Jefferson Community College in Watertown, N.Y. Mary and Dick have three girls 11, 7, and 5.

Barbara Teagarden Thomason is currently enrolled at George Mason University to finish her Bachelor's degree and was recently chosen to join Alpha Chi National Honorary Society. She is now working for Fairfax County Government as a Data Processing Coordina-

Marion Hurd Linthurst writes that she is enjoying her fund-raising work for the March of Dimes. She is also playing tennis and bridge as sparetime hobbies. She was planning a trip to Bermuda at Christmas time. Marion is living in West Trenton, N.I.

Community planners for the National Capital Commission are Ellen Johnston Gilreath and her husband. They recently returned from an American Institute of Planners Conference in San Antonio, Texas.

Nicky Macy Pease wrote that her husband, Clem, passed away last November. Judy 14, Scott, 11 and Nicky will continue living at 255 River Bend Road, Berkeley Heights, N.J. 07922. On behalf of our class, Nicky, we extend our deepest sympathy to you and your

My old suitmate, Melissa Smith Fitzgerald writes that their three educational years in Chile are over. Melissa and all her men are happily returning to Washington for an assignment in February.

Our own Broadway star, Peter Neufeld, has recently produced his first play, Murder Among Friends. Now he is managing two more plays in New York. May through August, Peter will be in San Francisco and Los Angeles managing A Chorus Line which he says "is probably the finest musical to come out of Broadway in twenty years. If anyone can't get tickets to Chorus Line, I'm at The Curran in Frisco and the Shubert in L.A. The shows are selling out already but try me." Isn't it fun to have a Broadway classmate? I feel important just to receive his letterhead!

Mrs. Robert W. Squatriglia (Betty Lee Powell) 120 Poplar Drive Delmar, N.Y. 12054

Roger Roberts is a candidate for City Council in Larkspur, Calif. We hope he was successful.

Mrs. Judy Case Falkenrath c/o Major James Falkenrath 397 38 8364 FLD JUSMAG-K APO San Francisco 96259

Mrs. Paul S. Murphy (Joanne Arnett) 8 Beech Tree Lane Bronxville, N.Y. 10708

John Hazelgrove has been transferred from Richmond to northern Virginia and is manager of all northern Virginia operations for Virginia Tractor Caterpillar. He now resides in Warren-

As of October, 1974 Susan Stitt is the director of The Museums at Stony Brook, Stony Brook,

Charles W. Lucas Jr. (Bill) is now employed as a physicist by the Smithsonian Science Information Exchange, Inc., a non-profit arm of the Smithsonian Institution. Bill keeps track of government funded research in physics for SSIE, and he resides in Greenbelt, Md.

Arthur B. Cecil writes that daughters, Kristen, 5, and Karen, 3, are growing up fast and providing more enjoyment every week. He is still working for a Baltimore, Md. investment counsel firm, T. Rowe Price Associates, as a security analyst. He looks forward to seeing any classmate who might be passing through the Towson, Md., area

Judy Hall Anderson is teaching high school English. Her husband, Bill, works for Heublein Company, and their daughter Betsy is in kindergarten. The Andersons, who reside in Manchester, Ct., hope to attend Homecoming

Kay Bonner Drews is a welfare service specialist for protective service and foster care programs in the northern Virginia region for the Virginia Department of Welfare. Kay lives in Herndon, Va.

Charline Gurley Walsh moved from Sterling, Va., back to Reston, Va., in May, 1975, and is now a realtor associate with the firm of Long and Foster (Reston office). Charline writes that she loves selling houses. Her husband Barry is now working at the U.S. Postal Research Labs in Rockville, Md., and their daughter Valerie, 31/2, attends nursery school.

Charlie and Anne Piddington Weaver are living in Flemington, N.J., with their son David, 6. Charlie is an assistant principal and coach at Hunterdon Central High School, and Anne is a registered nurse at a local hospital.

Carol Anne Wylie Swagler and husband Roger '63, moved to Knoxville, Tenn., last July where Roger is teaching at the University of Tennessee. their third child, first boy, Karl Andrew Morrison was born July 6, 1975 in Des Moines, Iowa just before they moved.

Dan Root was married to Carol Mc Inerney in August in Chicago, Ill. Following a trip to the west coast, they moved into a house Dan had build in Crown Point, Ind. Carol is a teacher with the Chicago school system and she and Dan share interests in skiing, sailing, and tennis. Aside from Dan's work in the retail building supply/house building business, he is actively involved in the preservation of the 98-year-old courthouse in the downtown square of Crown Point.

Bert L. Anker moved to a new home in August, 1975, in Gaithersburg, Md.

Lee Ellison is living in Hartford, Conn., with his wife Ruth and two children, Lars and Kristin. Lee is in practice in cardiovascular surgery at Hartford Hospital.

Everett G. Topham retired from the United States Army as a colonel and has established a State Farm Insurance Company Agency in Havre, Mont. which is in the north central area of the state

Jay Rivest is still in Syracuse, N.Y., working on his master's degree full-time. He is also clearing the pine forest behind his home and enjoying his 16-month-old son, Seth Law-rence. His wife, Annie, is involved in missions

Thomas B. Elliott received his Ph.D. in Microbiology from George Washington University in August, 1974, and is currently a project co-ordinator for Hazelton Laboratories in Vienna, Va. Tom was married in 1968 and he and his wife, Toni, have two children: Stephanie, born Dec. 25, 1970, and Kevin, born Mar. 25, 1974.

It was good to hear from Jim Bennett after twelve years. His wife, Susie, Kansas University, '70, wrote that they are stationed at Fort Meade, Md., where Jim is finishing his residency in hospital administration. Upon completion of his Master's degree from Baylor University in June, Jim will be Chief of Supply and Services for the Army hospital at Fort Meade. He was promoted to the rank of major two years ago. The Bennetts have two daughters, Amy Lynn, 2, and Dawn Leigh, Harriet Nachman Storm was elected Vice President of the W&M Athletic Educational Foundation on Dec. 6 and is the only woman serving as a trustee of the Foundation. She is also serving on the Advisory Committee on Capital Resources, was reelected to the Society the Alumni Board; is secretary-treasurer; and served on the selection committee for the Thomas Jefferson awards for Charter Day. Harriet resides in Hampton, Va.

Mrs. Timothy J. Sullivan (Anne D. Klare) 110 Duer Drive Williamsburg, Va. 23185

Robert Brian Sigafoes of San Diego, Calif. was appointed last August as a Staff Dermatologist at the Naval Regional Medical Center where he spends half of his time teaching and the other half in clinical practice.

Patricia Patterson Westbrook of Richmond, Va. completed work for her Master's degree last August in Early Childhood Education at Virginia Commonwealth University. Bill, '67, has written three books, the latest being RURAL VIRGINIA. He started a new advertising agency in January '75 - Jacobs, Morgan & Westbrook.

Grace Guin Schiff of Yonkers, N.Y. writes that she has a new job working on Fifth Avenue in New York City for one of the City's most efficient space planners and environmental contract interior designers in all of Stanley Rothenberg of Richmond, Va. has been appointed a member of the Mayor's select Richmond Citizen's Crime Committee to study ways to reduce urban crime. Also, he was elected President of the Lower Fan Civic Association, which he organized a year ago.

Anne Purtill O'Connon of Glastonbury, Conn. and husband Chuck who is a DC-9 Captain with Allegheny Airlines have a twoyear-old daughter, Amy. They have finished restoring their 200-year-old home. Anne is kept busy haunting antique shops, sailing and traveling ("a busman's holiday for Chuck", she writes). She sees Jane Snead Ford a couple of times a year. Jane is searching history in Fork Union, Va.

Mrs. Fred L. Simmermon (Sandra Abicht) 1 Nansemond Street Leesburg, Va. 22075

Jo Carol Sale LaFleur invites all those vacationing near Salt Lake City, Utah to stop by for a visit. She's at the University of Utah Law School studying and out on the slopes of the Rockies skiing.

Jean Branham, a reading specialist in the Alexandria School system, sent a really newsy letter. The big news is her forthcoming marriage to C.J. Reid, a government and human relations teacher also in the Alexandria school system. The wedding is scheduled for April 9. Jean writes that Naomi Dankers is working for the Civil Service Commission and is attending law school at American Univer-sity. Linda Sorrell is married to Bernie Mc-Machon, a detective with the Alexandria Police Department. Linda works on Capitol Hill. Bob Foster worked this summer in Washington but is now back in Florida pursuing a doctorate in political science. Jean says that Hunter Swartz Ollice and Lew are living in Richmond with their two children, Cathy and Stephen, but they will soon move to North Carolina. Dave Davis is now in Savannah, Ga., on a new job assignment. Jean concludes with the news of Andy Geoghegan's marriage last fall in Kansas

Ken Irby and his wife, Angela moved to Powhatan Co., Va., in April, 1975. They're really enjoying "country livin". Ken is Assistant to the Director of Data Processing for Media General, Inc. of Richmond, Va.

After working as a social worker for one year in the Woman and Infants Hospital of Rhode Island, Anne Keating returned to Lexington, Ky., where she works at the University of Kentucky Medical Center.

Jack Tucker, a Captain in the U.S. Marines, is serving as a flight instructor at the Naval Air Training Command in Pensacola, Fla.

Also living in Florida are Douglas Jacobson and his wife, Jan. They recently moved to Tampa where Douglas is with Coopers and Lybrand, C.P.A's.

Iuliana Pendleton Moomaw is an instructor of Latin at Oklahoma State University and at Stillwater High School. She is completing work on an M.A. in history at O.S.U., and was just elected to Phi Kappa Phi honor society.

Sandra Rodden Akers is in the School Psychology Program at W&M and is enjoying her return to student life. Her husband attends Christopher Newport College at night. The Akers' two sons are in school, also.

Living in Gaithersburg, Md., are Nancy Allen Kurtz, her husband Jim, and their children. Jim is with the Montgomery County Department of Community Development. Nancy has enjoyed playing tennis and working with the Y.W.C.A.

George and Margie Randall Stohner live on Capitol Hill in Washington, D.C. George works for the U.S. Attorney's Office, and Margie works for a Community Mental Health Center.

Becky Sweet O'Connor is a Second Vice President of Chase Manhattan Bank servicing corporate business in the bank's southern Carl Wayne Hunsucker graduated with distinction from the University of Arizona's College of Architecture in the summer of 1965. He is now working for the firm of Gresham and Assoc. in Tucson, Ariz. Diana Biggs Hunsucker is returning for graduate courses to the University of Arizona. She is active in the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, the Pima Search and Rescue Team and the Tucson Gem and Mineral Society.

Paul M. Dainer passed the American Board of Internal Medicine Certifying Examination. He is serving in the Medical Corps of the Navy as a Lieutenant at the Portsmouth Naval Regional Medical Center.

Lee Vliet has joined the class of 1978 in Norfolk Virginia's Eastern Virginia Medical School

Marsha Jean Sater received a M.S.T. degree at Rutgers University's 1975 Commencement Exercises.

Mrs. T. Thomas Van Dam (Randy Lee Pearson) 474 Ottawa Ave. #23-C Hasbrouck Heights, N.J. 07604

News from Mary (Couper) Lischer . . . Living on Capitol Hill, Mary and Jeff announced the arrival of their son, David Bowden, last August 22. Jeff is currently with the General Counsel's Office of HUD as an

George Gadda, a teaching assistant at University of North Carolina, has passed his orals and is presently working on his dissertation for a doctorate in Medieval English.

In Alameda, Calif., Susan Swearingen and Denny Burke had their first child last fall. Having been accepted by the International Research and Exchanges Board to do dissertation research on Dostoevsky, Serge Gregory will be in Russia until August.

The end of January, I was fortunate to have a trip to Honolulu via Dallas, Tex. The best part of the trip being the Mexican dinner with Berie Gomez in Dallas Discovered the whereabouts of Guner Gery Burkhardt. She and husband, Robert, and son, Andrew, are living in Lancaster, Penn.

Recently transferred with the Burroughs Corporation to Winston-Salem, N.C., Peverell is District Product Manager for the Middle Atlantic District.

Greg Pence is a member of the Department of Philosophy at University of Alabama, Birmingham. He's especially happy with his teaching position. At the moment his main course is medical ethics for nurses. Greg wrote that Tom Hearn, formerly a professor at William and Mary, was chairman of the philosophy department until March, when he became Dean of the School of Humanities.

Marianne Lester, associate editor of The Times Magazine, recently had two cover stories in that magazine--one on rape cover-ups in the armed forces, and the other on the "Conversion of Colonel Bottomly" from a mad-bomber in Vietnam to a proseltzer for Jesus.

January, '75, brought Garland Barr and Allen Ford to Arlington, Va., from Birmingham. Allen manages and owns "World Bazaar" a retail store in Annandale specializing in rattan, brass, copper, stoneware, and furniture from around the world.

News of the Kappa Deltas. . . thank you Susan Burgess Johnson. Susan is with NASA and husband Stewart is an auditor with HEW. In San Francisco, Jan Graham Testa is with the Social Security Administration.

Carol Graham Fox and Jimmy ('72) are in Knoxville where Jimmy is earning a Ph.D. Douglas Densmore graduated from University of Toledo Law School cum laude and is associated with the firm of Gertner, Barkan and Robon, attorneys at law in Toledo. He and wife, Janet Broadley bought a forty-year-old brick house last summer.

Also practicing law, Carl Miller is in Doylestown, Penn.

During the week, Jim Cole works as Assistant Highway Design Engineer for the Arlington County Government. On weekends he leaves Arlington to be a farmer in Shenandoah County. As if that were not enough to keep one busy, Jim attends night school to obtain a degree in engineering!

Cathy Casey is a resident in Pediatrics at Children's Hospital of Philadelphia.

In Newport News, Bob and Lynn Ferryman

Ackerman bought a fifty-year-old house in the North End of the city. Lynn teaches biology at the new Phoebus High School, a $6 million dollar new school which is a modified open space school.

At Boston University, Cheryl Russell Scheid is finishing up work for a Ph.D. in Biology as husband, Rick, ('68), recently changed jobs and is a chemical engineer at Data General Corporation.

Martha Spalding Hollis is teaching operations research and statistics at Arizona State University. Martha is also a full-time professor at the American Graduate School of International Management.

Last December, Barbara Richardson Miller left the Colonial Williamsburg Foundation and headed West to Los Angeles, Calif.

Having completed the Post Graduate Associates Program in Biomedical Communications at the National Library of Medicine, Behtesda, Carolyn Niles Davis is an Audiovisual Cataloging Coordinator at the Library.

Cathy Wine Lunney's husband is on assignment with General Electric Ordnance Systems at Naval Surface Weapons Center in Dahlgren, Va. They moved to Falmouth, Va., last July from Lenox, Mass.

Bill Hendricks finished family practice residency at Baylor last June and he and wife, Lee Alderson and new baby are in Blacksburg, Va.

Barbara Pate and Bob Glacel had a bit of excitement on January 31. A daughter, Jennifer

A human resources administrator, Jim Saulton works with Consumers United Group, a mass marketing corporation based on communal principles

The corporation has succeeded in establishing a profitable economic institution while maximizing the "humaness" of the members of its community.

Joe Mays is a third-year law student at University of Richmond Law School and serves as editor-in-chief of the Richmond Law Review and is a member of the McNeil Law

January 10 was the arrival date for Gail Gates and Ben Womble's second child, Mark Benjamin.

Ragan Pulley and wife, Becca are in Winston-Salem where Ragan is a student at the Babcock Graduate School of Management at Wake Forest University. Becca is an interior decora-

Mrs. Kenneth E. Kontos (Elaine L. May) 5703 Dunster Court #170 Alexandria, Va. 22311

From California, Cindy Wieboldt Taylor writes that she and her husband Mike are now located in Los Angeles where Mike has been teaching as a member of the Religious Studies Department at Occidental College while Cindy works part-time for their Biology Department. Allen and Chris Grant are alive and well in Berkeley and send their good cheer to all their friends. Also in California are Doris Godwin and Frank Morgan at Fort Ord where Frank is stationed as a 1st lieutenant in the Army and

Doris is working for Data point Corporation. Jeannie Rice Glessing recently received her M.S. in Rehabilitation Counseling from St. Cloud State University and is now working for the State of Minnesota in Minneapolis as a vocational rehabilitation counselor. Mark Mathiensen has just graduated from Vanderbilt University Law School and is practicing law with the firm of Stewart, Black & Ayers in Madison, Tenn. His wife, Sandra Windsor graduated from Peabody College with a Master's Degree in Library Science and is a librarian at Harpeth Academy in Franklin,

Tenn. Joanne Todd Rawls wrote from Fort Worth, Tex., where she and husband, Loyd, have living since July of 1973. Loyd is a trainer-analyst with the Equitable General Insurance Co. He is involved with developing training courses for agencies in different states and then going about twice a month to the agencies and team teaching with other trainers. In their spare time they teach and promote the Bradley Method of Husband-Coached Childbirth, which Joanne describes as "the best method of natural childbirth to come John Onderdonk wrote the following from Finley N.S.W. Australia: "News from down under: Recent Fascist overthrow of elected government stop Please tell CIA to send assassination team stop Situation desperate: Carlton United Breweries on strike: School currently under seige by thousands of armed and desperate kangaroos.

Virginia Miller, now in Rockaway, N.Y. spent last summer and early fall working at Tent City" on Guam in the Marianas Islands inprocessing Vietnamese Refugees for Immigration. She then spent the next two months ouring Asia. Nancy Buhrer is an instructor at Glassboro St. College. Richard Corman is working on his Masters' of Divinity at Princeton Theological Seminary

Carol Christensen and Charlie Jackson '69 are living at Virginia Beach where they have opened up their own office selling and servicing microfilm reader-printers. They are reall enjoying the business and are doing quite

Minnie Reid Pope wrote from Hopewell to say that she and her husband have recently retired and she has two grand children now enrolled at W&M, one a sophomore and the other a Still working for the Baltimore City Department of Planning, Peggy Drake wrote to say she has learned one thing - to never start work on a downtown parking study. She's spent four months on it but is about to start a new position in Social Planning where she'll be working on the development of a social information system.

Also in Baltimore is Nancy Horrom who is a research assistant at the Maryland Psychiatric Center. Bill Housel has been made Assistant Administrative Director of the Joel T. Boone Clinic at the Naval Amphib Base at Little Creek, Norfolk. Linda Etheridge Baker spent a year as an eligibility worker in the paternity and non-support unit of the Norfolk Division of Social Services.

All in Richmond: Joanne Madden Deaton is teaching in Chesterfield County and husband John is working in a management training program at First and Merchants Bank; Bob Wooldridge is working for the Department of Corrections and also for the State Council on Higher Education as a Commonwealth Intern while wife Jackie Sivertsen is working in the Art Production Department of Thalheimers, Inc.; Anne Taylor Moorman is with Stringfellow, Inc.; Wayne Smith is working for the General Counsel Division of the State Corporation Commission after receiving his J.D. from U.Va. last spring; Rick Frykberg is attending MCV; Maria Obregon Woodlief is teaching in Chesterfield Co. Public Schools and husband Fred is a dental student at MCV; and Janice Brown Baskin, a taxpayer service representative for IRS and husband Bill, in law school at the U. of Richmond are renovating an old townhouse in between courses and exams.

And the latest from the D.C. area: Lane Pruett Jacobsen is working as a paralegal in a D.C. law firm and living with husband Tom, an economist, in Falls Church; Bob Byrne is working as a management consultant with a major CPA firm in Washington after receiving his Master's from U.Va. last spring; Frank Roche is working for the Smithsonian Institution; Phil Warren is an accountant for Arthur Andersen; Pat Heitman is reviewing and compiling scientific research on hazardous substances for the National Institute of Occupational Safety and Health (NIOSH) in Rockville; and Paul Renard is a senior systems analyst for First Data Corporation.

Earl A. MacKenzie 5850 Cameron Run Terrace #1507 Alexandria, Va. 22303

Bonnie Susan Thacher of Carrboro, N.C., writes that she is now in her second year of the Master's of Business Administration program at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. She received Business Foundation Fellowship. Bonnie worked this past summer as Marketing Assistant to Executive Vice President of Marketing at Washington Mills Co., Winston-Salem, N.C. She loves Chapel Hill!

Shelley Smith Sheppard of Williamsburg, Va., is the first woman officer in the history of the Williamsburg Police Department. She worked first as a dispatcher and became more and more interested in police work. She speaks four languages - English, French, Russian and Spanish.

Vital Statistics

To: Patricia Anne Stevens (Villareale), '60, a daughter, Alicia Renee, June 25, 1975. Fifth child, fourth daughter.

To: Stephen P. Hayes, III, '64, a daughter, Aimee Elizabeth. May 25. 1973.

To: Thomas J. McCullough, '64, a daughter, Eileen Francis, October 18, 1975. First child. To: Nancy Jane Ratz (Viets), '64, a daughter, Alexa Christine, December 20, 1974. Second child, first daughter.

To: Kermit Braxton Garriss, '65, a daughter, Elizabeth Ashley, November 30, 1975. First

To: Patricia Ann Alexander (Hatchett), '66, a son, Cabell Charles Henry, April 13, 1975. Second son.

To: Susan Donna Brand (Moutoux), '66, a son, Charles Anthony, June 9, 1975. First

To: Marjorie Anne Rankin (Peterson), '66, a daughter, Yvonne Jeannette, June 19, 1975. First child.

To: Ann Barringer Simonson Brooks (Gavin), '68, a son, Christopher Wyckoff, January 9. Second child, second son. (Also three sons and one daughter by adoption).

To: Mary Lou Jenkins (LoFrese), '68, and James John LoFrese, '66, a son, Stephen James, February 13. Second son. To: Robert Olin Johnston, '68, a daughter,

Laura Elizabeth, December 12, 1974. First

To: Colgate Woodward Jones (Kittelberger), '68, a daughter, Lindsey Marie, October 7, 1975. First child

To: Judith Kathleen O'Grady (McKeon), '68, a daughter, Sarah Linehan, February 1, 1963, and Kathleen Lewis, October 17, 1975

To: Stephen Edward Row, '68, a daughter, Sarah Elizabeth, November 7, 1975. First child. To: Frances Ann Self (Craig), '68, and Dee Wayne Craig, '68, a son, Morgan Self, November 22, 1974. First child.

To: Lawrence D. Whiting, III, '69, a daughter, Laura Mary, August 24, 1972, and Joy Anna, May 6, 1975. First and second child. To: Patricia Irvine Campbell (Jones), '71, and George Herman Jones, '66, a son, Taylor Campbell, December 4, 1975. First child.

and James Phillip Robison, '70, a daughter, Heather Anne, October 23, 1974. First child. To: JoAnne Peterson Todd (Rawls), '72, and Lloyd Dennis Rawls, '72, a son, Gordon Scott, April 24, 1975.

To: Frances Nelson Ridout (Robison), '71,

To: Penelope Jane Wilson (Anderson), '72, a daughter, Rachel, July 14, 1975. First daughter. To: Clarice Dorothy Livingston (Fink), Grad., a daughter, Theresa Colette, August 18, 1975. Fifth child, second daughter.

MARRIAGES

Hulda Lucy Dimmitt (Kennedy), '34, and John Francis Goldsmith, February 21.

David Alexander Speir, Jr., '47, and Pauline Blais, November 14, 1975. William Frederick Miller, '68, and Suzanne

Lee Christmas, December 21, 1975. William Douglas Elliott, '71, and Muriel

Katherine Moyer, December 27, 1975. Harriett Elizabeth Mays, '71, and Charles Wesley Curry, August 23, 1975. Olivia Lane Pruett, '72, and Thomas Roy Jacobsen, May 24, 1975. Penelope Anne Harper, '73, and Peter Marshall Meredith, Jr., May 10, 1975.

Lisa Clair Heeschen, '73, and Medford Dixon Hammon, August 30, 1975.

Ruth Ann Holdsworth, '73, and Charles F. Gaumond, June 14, 1975.

Susan Kay Vanderlinde, '73, and Gary Kelley Bove, August 23, 1975. Helene Martin Willis, '73, and James D

Haluska, November 29, 1975. Carol Marue Owen, '74, and Milton Arthur utten, '74, November 29, 197

Susanne Elizabeth Powell, '74, and Robert Benson Jones, II, June 30, 1975.

Elise Dorothy Walker, '74, and Harold Martin Carter, Jr., '74, August 31, 1975.
Donna Jo Waldron, '75, and Fred Dewey Duncan, Jr., October 4, 1975.

Earl Birges Chappell, Grad., and Mary Almentine Rainey, June 28, 1975. Clarence Detro Fleming, Jr., Grad., and

Maryellen Street, September 6, 1975. Pamela Stergios, Grad., and James Baxter

Berryhill, December 27, 1975.

DEATHS

Earl Benton Broadwater, '18 A.B., February 9, in Salem, Virginia.

Rob Roy Doss, '18, December 30, 1975, in Johns Island, South Carolina. Ramon Washington Andrews, '24 B.S., May 17, 1974, in Richmond, Virginia. Dr. Charles Y. Griffith, '27, February 11, in Mt. Holly, Virginia.

Mary Anna Carter (Pilcher), '29, December 24, 1975, in Richmond, Virginia.

please fill in below, t	ORESS! If it is incorrect in any way, hen tear out this entire block including o Box 1693, Williamsburg, Virgnia 23185.
Name
Street
City
State	Zip Code

ALUMNI GAZETTE of the Clege of William and Mary

VOL. 43 NO. 10

WILLIAMSBURG, VIRGINIA 23185

APRIL 1976

W&M's Faculty Fellows

Outstanding honors have come to four William and Mary faculty recently. Professors Carl E. Carlson and Eric Herbst have been named Sloan Fellows; Professor Alan E. Fuchs has been named a National Humanities Fellow, and Professor William E. O'Connell has been named an Ayres Fellow. See Page 11 for Details.

Philosophy National Humanities Fellow

William E. O'Connell Jr.

Business Administration Ayres Fellow

BOTETOURT BOUTIQUE

WILLIAM & MARY MERCHANDISE P.O. Box GO, Williamsburg, Va. 23185

Make checks payable to "SOCIETY OF THE ALUMNI"

William & Mary Medallion Chairs

Boston Rocker, all ebony	 $85.00
Armchair, all ebony	 $89.00
Armchair, cherry arms	 $89.00

William & Mary Coat of Arms Chairs

Boston Rocker, all ebony	5.00
Armchair, cherry arms$6	5.00
Straight chair	5.00
Cushion for Adult Chair$1	1.00

Other Merchandise

Blazer buttons	.$17.50
Blazer badges	.$15.00
Cipher pierced earrings*
Cipher necklace*
Cipher pin*
Cipher tie pin*
Coasters, set of 4
Crewel kit	$15.00
CIEWEI KIL	.013.00
Handbag, green and gold, w/W&M monogram	.$15.00
Handbag, green and gold, w/W&M monogram	.$15.00 .$15.00
Handbag, green and gold, w/W&M monogram  Morpurgo Book, American Excursion  W&M Handblown Glass Mug	.$15.00 .$15.00 $8.95
Handbag, green and gold, w/W&M monogram  Morpurgo Book, American Excursion  W&M Handblown Glass Mug  Needlepoint kit	.$15.00 .$15.00 .$8.95 .$20.00
Handbag, green and gold, w/W&M monogram  Morpurgo Book, American Excursion  W&M Handblown Glass Mug  Needlepoint kit  Pottery plate	.$15.00 .$15.00 $8.95 .$20.00 .$17.50
Handbag, green and gold, w/W&M monogram Morpurgo Book, American Excursion W&M Handblown Glass Mug Needlepoint kit Pottery plate William and Mary ties	.$15.00 .$15.00 $8.95 .$20.00 .$17.50 $9.50
Handbag, green and gold, w/W&M monogram  Morpurgo Book, American Excursion  W&M Handblown Glass Mug  Needlepoint kit  Pottery plate	.$15.00 .$15.00 .$8.95 .$20.00 .$17.50 .$9.50

Sales tax is included in the cost of each item.

All chairs picked up at the Alumni House are subject to a freight charge of $5.00.

All chairs to be shipped direct will be shipped freight collect.

Chairs ordered should be allowed ten to twelve weeks for delivery, except rockers, which will not be shipped before April as manufacturing schedules now stand.

*Profits from the sale of these items, handcrafted by Mike Stousland '41, are donated to the College. Mike provides the silver at his own expense.