ALU/INI GAZETTE of the Clege of William and Mary

An Interview with the Executive Vice-President

Vliet Outlines Society Progress

Q. What, in your estimation, is the role today of the Society of the Alumni? A. Ever since its inception in 1842 the Society has existed to serve the College and the alumni. The many programs of the Society have, I suppose, as their ultimate objective stronger support, personal as well as financial, for the College. The Society has moved in various ways to provide assistance that, for instrance, is not provided by State funding.

Q. Can you give some general examples? A. Earlier this century the Society established William and Mary's first modern endowment program. It was the means by which some of the classroom buildings of the 1930's were built without State capital outlay appropriations. For nearly 40 years, it has provided the only regular medium of communication and information for the College among its alumni, parents and friends: the Alumni Gazette. The Society established the first funds for faculty summer research grants, and continues to support that program. The first funds provided to publish Their Majestie's Royall Colledge were those put forward by the Society. We are very proud that this book was financed by an alumnus, authored by an alumnus, and produced by an alumnus.

Until 1972 the Society's William and Mary Fund was the sole effort to raise funds to assist non-athletic activities at the College, to supplement State appropriations and tuitions. It was a primary source of non-designated funds to provide the extra things that lift the College a step above. In all of these and many more ways, the Society has served the College well. It has also worked strenously to bring alumni together as a way of perpetuating their common bonds. Our efforts in that direction have never been stronger and more successful than recently.

Q. What do you mean by that?

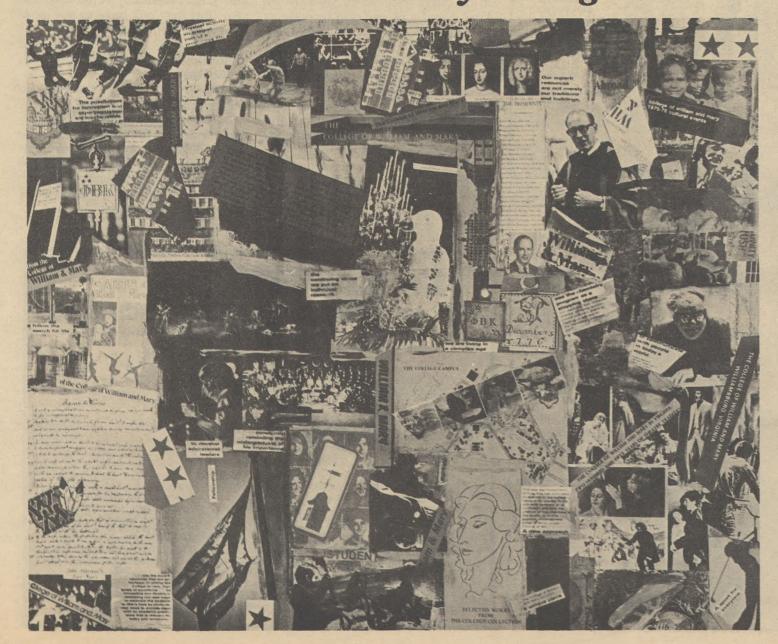

A. Now that the College has established a fund raising staff, the Society's resources have been put to fruitful use by enlarging the alumni service functions of its mission, doing public relations work for the College among the alumni. A greater understanding will slightly the size of its freshmen class this fall and lower the number of transfer students it can take.

The Admissions Office has mailed letters of acceptance for the 1020 freshman and 86 transfer places available this fall.

These figures indicate a slight drop in the size of the freshman class from last year. There were 1059 freshman enrolled; the number of transfers was

According to Robert P. Hunt, Dean of Admissions, requests for admission continue to be far in excess of capacity. To date, his office has received 4,790 applications for the freshman class and 674 requests from transfer students for admittance in September, 1976. Requests for enrollment at both the freshman and transfer levels are substantially the same as they were last year.

The slight reduction in the 1976 entering freshman class and the William and Mary will reduce smaller number of transfer students bring its total undergraduate enrollprojections approved by the State Council of Higher Education.

George R. Healy, Vice President mains strong and the College wishes for Academic Affairs, said that in recent years the College enrolled considerably more students than it projected, in order to be "as responsive as possible to sustained heavy demand for admission." He noted, however, that the budget bill passed by the 1976 General Assembly tends to penalize colleges and universities which enroll beyond previously approved projections, by withholding from institutional use the revenues generated by the additional tuitions.

The reductions planned in the number of freshman and transfer students next year will not be large enough to bring the College's total enrollments down to the size projected and funded, said Healy.

To accomplish that in one year, he are the result of the College's effort to said, would require a dramatic decrease in the 1976 class, a virtual ments more nearly in line with prohibition of transfer students. He said this would be undesirable, both because demand for admission re-to remain as responsive to it as funding allows; and because a single seriously disproportionately sized class would present difficult curricular and staffing problems that would take years to work out.

Tuition Stable; Board, Room Up

The cost of board and room will go up at William and Mary next fall but the College will not raise tuition.

Room rent will increase an average of 8.1 per cent from the present range of $245 to $375 per semester to a range of $295 to $395 per semester. This increases the average rent per semester from $330 to $357.

Board will increase approximately 10 per cent -- an increase of $35 per semester, from $348 to $383

The General Fee, calculated into a lump sum called Tuition and General Fee, will increase by $7 per semester. Six dollars of the increase will be used exclusively for men's and women's non-revenue sports and $1 will be used for the student activities program.

The applied music fee will be lowered by $10, from $100 to

*There have been 19 per cent more job interviews this year.

*There had been a 60 per cent increase over last year in the number of job offers received by students by April 1 and a 58 per cent increase in the number of students who have accepted jobs.

*There has been a 25-35 per cent increase in the number of announcements of job openings coming into Brown's office.

*The number of employers who cancelled interviews dropped from 21 last year to four this year.

*More students have received requests for second interviews.

Despite the statistics, Brown says that not all students will have jobs by June, but still it will be much improved over 1975, the "worst year" Brown has seen in the eight years since he assumed placement duties at

William and Mary.
Brown said the biggest demands this year are for students with accounting and computer science backgrounds. The sciences, he noted, have "held up pretty well." Liberal arts majors are doing better than last year, but they still have to put more effort into their searches.

In terms of groups, women and minorities are in the biggest demand, Brown says.

William and Mary students do better in their job searches than the national norm for college and university students, Brown said, because the College is "more selective in its admissions and students tend to be well-rounded individuals with high academic achievements and active extracurricular activities."

Bicentennial Debate Captures Alumni Attention

David Taylor and Joan Harrigan from William and Mary have debated the question at alumni chapter meetings in cities across the country.

Taylor, dressed in the garb of a colonial landowner, uses a sharp wit to argue that the colonies should have stayed a part of the British Empire. Harrigan, on the other hand, champions the cause of indepen dence.

There's a good deal of wit and humor on both sides. Taylor takes a biased look at some of England's long-standing traditions and champions such English institutions as parliament, cricket, Scotland Yard and four o'clock tea.

In her rebuttal, Harrigan looks at and Mary under the Draper's schothe initiative of America's founding fathers--including Thomas Jefferson, who also happens to be an alumnus of the College of William and Mary.

Both Taylor and Harrigan are experienced debaters particularly suited for their respective roles. Taylor is a senior exchange student from Nottingham, England. For the last three years, he's been a student at William dent debater. Originally from Wyck- ety of opinions of both British and

Although the debaters spent hours researching the topic of the Bicentennial Debate and introduce a variAmerican scholars, the main thrust of the debates is humor.

"It's supposed to be funny," says Harrigan, "and we both argue some things we really don't believe in just to get some laughs."

Just the same, when all is said and done, one of the two debaters will be named the winner. The audience will vote to decide whether America did indeed make the correct decision when she decided to give King George III his walking papers. Needless to say, the Englishman is the decided underdog.

Randolph said the U.S. Military Academy had offered him a contract "I couldn't refuse." It reportedly included a higher salary, more security, free housing, 30-days leave annually, an attractive recruiting budget and no teaching duties.

A former W&M standout quartermiler and an ex-Marine, Randolph will assume the head coaching post at Army on July 1, replacing interim coach Mel Pender.

"Their program has been a little down for a few years," says Randolph, "but I know they want to have a great program and the potential is there. They have outstanding facilities, too."

In addition to his outstanding coaching record, Randolph has seen - and has been partly responsible for a vast improvement in facilities at William and Mary. It was as a result of his personal fund-raising efforts that William and Mary was able to install a tartan track in Cary Field. The new track enabled the College to attract some of the nation's outstanding athletes to meets at the College.

Raschi Enters Hall of Fame

ber of the Virginia Sports Hall of Fame is Vic Raschi '49, the former New York Yankee hurler who pitched the Indians to the State baseball championship in the spring of 1941.

Raschi, who was inducted into the Hall of Fame in April, had the best winning percentage of any Yankee pitcher in history. In some 10 seasons, he won 161 games, lost only 59, struck out nearly a thousand batters, and rang up an earned run average of 3.60.

Raschi entered William and Mary in 1938 and played baseball and basketball in his freshman year. He had his best season in 1941 when he lost only two games, to Wake Forest and Maryland, and defeated Virginia in the state championship game. A native of Springfield, Mass.,

lead to greater participation and greater support. The Alumni Gazette has moved from a quarterly magazine to a monthly newspaper, which is larger, much more current, distributed to a greater number of people, and goes to all alumni at no charge. We have established the Alumni House which is a local "home away from home" for visiting alumni, and provides a badly needed facility for receptions and meetings on the College campus. We are also utilizing the Paschall Library to collect books by and about alumni, to collect memorabilia of the College that is of more personal than archival interest. The Homecoming program has been greatly enlarged, and it is one of the bigger and better ones along the East Coast. In addition, there are: the travel program; the Alumni College, our newest venture; and our chapter program which has been greatly expanded.

Q. What do you mean by an Alumni College and what purpose will it serve?

A. The Alumni College program is not a concept that began here, but we think that William and Mary is uniquely suited to do a better than average job in this type of continuing education program. Everyone wants to visit Williamsburg, particularly this year, when our theme is Colonial America. We have put together an outstanding staff from Colonial Williamsburg and the College faculty. A person's learning experience shouldn't stop with graduation. We hope people will want to come back, to have a revitalizing intellectual experience, and to enjoy the campus and Williamsburg at an unbeatable price.

Q. Regarding the Alumni Chapters, how successful has this program become?

A. The numbers tell the story. In 1972 there were 18 active chapters of the Society. In 1976, as of this time, there are 27 active chapters and 14 nucleus groups which should develop into active chapters in the near future.

"William and Mary is one of America's most prestigious colleges, one of the best-known, most visible. . .The alumni, friends, and others, with their private gifts, provide the margin of excellence . . ."

Q. Why are Chapters important, and what does it take to keep one going?

A. Society chapters are possibly the best way to bring alumni into contact with each other and with their Alma Mater. Members find each others' company enjoyable, cutting across age groups, and they do like to keep up-to-date on William and Mary. It takes a few interested people in a community to begin a Chapter. The Society arranges for guidance, mailings and programs including speakers from the campus to meet the Chapter's interests. We have developed one of the best Chapter Handbooks in the business to help chapters get started and to keep growing.

Q. What kind of speakers do you send out to Chapters?

A. One speaker in great demand is, of course, President Tom Graves. He has visited and addressed more alumni groups in more cities than any president in the College's history. He draws the biggest crowds, and he enjoys meeting with alumni.

Various other administrators are available, and so are a number of the faculty members in various fields of expertise. We have a speakers bureau of faculty, and their subjects are both classroom and avocational oriented. There has been a growing number of faculty speakers at alumni chapter functions and they are universally well-received. You would, perhaps, be surprised at the high interest they develop in the College's uniquely high quality programs. We have an outstanding faculty and we like to show them off.

Q. What about the much-advertised travel program?

A. Through this program, we offer alumni five or six trips a year at very economical rates to a variety of locations throughout the world. They are not luxury excursions for the most part, but alumni enjoy them, and we have a growing list of repeaters on every trip. I would estimate that more than 1,500 alumni and families have taken part in them in the last three years. As another type of continuing education, the Society manages these as a service, not for its own profit.

Q. What is the purpose of the merchandising program, the Botetourt Boutique?

A. The merchandising program gets a momento of William and Mary into homes and offices. Whenever individuals buy one of the items, they are reinforcing their association with the College. We try to be selective in the things we offer. Profit, if any, goes towards responding to many campus requests for supporting funds. Examples of this type of support would be contributing to the Washington Program; having funds to send Drs. Von Baeyer and McKnight to England to research and purchase 18th Century scientific apparatus; the purchase of warning devices for coeds two years ago; many student activities that need front-end expenses on worthy projects for which there are no monies available through the College because of the budget restrictions.

Q. Other than the public relations functions and service functions of the Society, does the office provide any other significant service? A. From its headquarters in the Alumni House, the Society keeps records on its nearly 30,000 alumni. These records are the backbone of all alumni related activities including the regional alumni clubs, class activities, and many activities and programs of the College. It is part of our business to know as much as possible about as many alumni, to have the information available to be used, and to exercise some control over how it is used. It is a big responsibility and one that we take very seriously. We are the people who should in fact know the alumni.

Q. Alumni raised the money to create the Alumni House. Is there any plan to expand it?

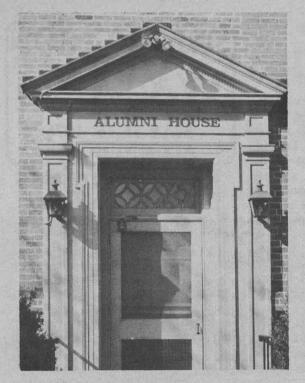

A. Not at the present time. We are, however, trying to locate funds to complete the renovations including the basement. The meeting rooms are in constant demand, by alumni and by college groups, for various receptions, meetings and the like. One of the major uses is for receptions following weddings in the Wren Chapel. It is truly a new experience for William and Mary to have this kind of facility available. More space would be helpful but we simply haven't the funds. It would be nice to patio the rear area of the house, it would be nice to have a larger type of general meeting room; and as our programs grow, we will need more staff space.

Q. About money. What is the current situation on private giving to a State-supported College?

A. Many people still believe that William and Mary should get all of its money from the State and from tuitions and fees; that private contributions are really meant for private colleges. That is no longer true, if it ever was. Private giving to public colleges and universities continues to climb to new heights around the nation. State governments have become less willing to support more than the basic essentials of education, especially in Virginia, where there is great demand for each tax dollar. William and Mary is one of America's most prestigious colleges, one of the best-known, most visible, and certainly a high-quality institution. The alumni, friends, and others, with their private gifts, provide the margin of excellence. Your degree is, as they say, worth more now than it ever was, and it is based not only on the alumni who have graduated and established a reputation, but it is also based on the calibre of the current students. We want that to continue to be the case. Private gifts in support of the academic and student programs are more essential than ever before. They are allocated by the College to meet the areas of need, especially in student assistance and faculty development. The State encourages this kind of giving, and makes no requirements on how gift income is used.

"One speaker in great demand is . . . President Graves. He has visited and addressed more alumni groups in more cities than any president in the College's history."

Q. How do you feel fund-raising has progressed since it was centralized under the Office of College Development?

A. I think the annual fund-raising has progressed very well under the able leadership of Len Meyer, the Director of Annual Funds in the Development Office. Len has established excellent rapport with Alumni who have responded by raising their level of support to the College. In addition, he has been primarily responsible for expanding the annual fund concept to other areas such as the Law School, the Parents, the Friends of the College, the undergraduate seniors, and the third year law students. Under consideration now are programs for the Graduate School of Business and the Graduate School of Education.

Q. What does the Society do in support of the educational program and the faculty?

A. As I noted earlier the Society started the Summer Research Grant Program, and approximately five faculty members a year are given these grants. On the occasion of the 275th Anniversary of the granting of the charter the Society instituted a new program called Alumni Fellows. This designation is given to five outstanding younger members of the faculty who are deemed to be outstanding "teachers." This carries with it a stipend of $500. In addition, I think the use of the Alumni House as a meeting place for the faculty club has done a great deal to increase attendance in their social functions. Faculty groups meet at the Alumni House, and the House is the scene of numerous departmental socials, dinners, and receptions for visiting speakers. There are a number of undergraduate scholarships, which the Society established under President Chandler.

The majority of the funds in the Endowment Association providing scholarsips, faculty salary supplements, and research funds were contributed by or through alumni. Alumni are the major contributors to the Athletic Educational Foundation, a separate entity providing scholarship assistance to student athletes. Alumni support of the educational program takes many forms such as guest lecturing, providing equipment and source material, summer employment, career counseling, etc.

Q. Talk a bit about the age level of the alumni body, and how it affects your programs. A. A number of colleges have special and different programs for young alumni. We have not gone to this device as we find that we have more young alumni attending chapter meetings than ever before. In many chapters they are holding major offices, and in some, all of the major offices. Some chapters do have parties that are designed to attract more of the younger alumni as a part of their overall activity programming. The middle of our alumni population is now about the Class of 1961, which does make us a younger college that our age would perhaps like to admit. We are trying to plan alumni programs which will appeal to all alumni, and not on a graduation class basis. William and Mary is still a very small institution by national standards, and it is a close knit school. We would like the alumni program to help endorse that "family" feeling, rather than fractionalize it.

Q. What do you see in the future; where is the Society going in terms of service and its relationship with the College?

A. I am hoping that at the next meeting of the Alumni Board of Directors we might begin addressing this question. Some years ago the Board had a committee called "Operation Visibility," and it projected needs and image, and the Alumni House was the result. It is now time to again set some goals and go after them.

We will be doing more with our merchandising program, moving into new areas, and hopefully we will be able to acquire more discretionary income to assist the College through its monetary problems, to assist chapters to do more, and to work more closely with the current student body to help meet some of their needs.

The Society can continue to be a leadership development program as alumni move through chapter leadership roles to the Alumni Board, and on to the Board of Visitors. 14 of 17 members on the Board of Visitors are alumni. Three of the last four Rectors of the Board also served as President of the Society.

It is my hope that we will be able to expand the Alumni College concept not only on campus, but to major metropolitan areas for continuing education weekends. I would like to see more student and alumni interactions to develop an even stronger feeling of unity and pride.

As the needs of the College increase, so will the opportunities for the Society to be of service. As the Society has changed its priorities to meet new challenges, its initial mission, its fundamental purpose, to serve the better good of the College, has never wavered, and I certainly do not see that changing

After 134 years, we still think the best years are out there ahead of us.

College Observes Jefferson Birthday

The other William and Mary group in Washington that day was the caravan of students and administrators who were taking part in the second Washington

Program.

The group, led by Dean of Students W. Samuel Sadler, started Tuesday by meeting for more than one hour with former Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey on Capitol Hill. Its day of seminars concluded with a session led by Milton Friedman, a special assistant and speechwriter for the President. Friedman, who attended William and Mary's former Norfolk Division (now Old Dominion University) following World War II, was the author of Ford's Williamsburg address and had just completed a three-day stay in Williamsburg as a guest of Dr. and Mrs. Graves.

Friedman described for the students how the Presidential staff operates, how speeches and statements are developed, and how Ford arrives at policy decisions. He moved the group to the Roosevelt Room of the White House, to join Counsel Robert Hartmann for additional background. After another 45 minutes, President Ford strode into the room, spoke briefly to the students and invited the entourage to attend his Rose Garden press conference which was to start in a few moments.

Dr. Graves took advantage of the moment to make a brief, formal presentation to Ford of a copy of the collector's leatherbound edition of "Their Majesties' Royall Colledge," the recently published history of William and Mary's early years. He called special attention to the sections referring to Jefferson's experiences at William and Mary, and Ford responded by recalling his previous visits to Williamsburg including as College Commencement speaker in 1968.

Earlier in the day, Graves had made a similar presentation to Secretary Kleppe.

In addition, on Jefferson's birthday, a copy of the book was presented by Graves and William and Mary Rector John R. L. Johnson, Jr. of Chadds Ford, Pa., to Senator Harry F. Byrd, Jr. in his office. An inscription in the book called Byrd "a distinguished son of Virginia and public servant who exemplifies the character, ideals and tradition of Thomas Jefferson."

For President Ford's part, he commented to the students that the Washington Program "perpetuates the best of the William and Mary tradition." Later, to aides, he expressed surprise at seeing William and Mary groups twice the same day.

The students also had a lengthy seminar with James Reston, the New York Times' columnist and Washington Bureau chief, and with other commentators and Washington opinion leaders.

President and Mrs. Graves and the Society of the Alumni were host for a special reception for the Washington Program participants and others the night before Jefferson's birthday. The reception was held in the Presidential Suite at the Watergate.

Reynolds President Named Chairman of Sponsors Board

George M. Walters, president of Reynolds Metal Company of Richmond, has been named chairman of the Sponsors Board of the School of Business Administration.

The Business School Sponsors, Inc., was established in 1970 through the joint efforts of the School and several leading businessmen as a means of expanding and strengthening the relationship of the School with the business community. It is a chartered non-stock Virginia corporation.

Since it was organized, the Sponsors organization has expanded its role to include providing financial support to the School for needs for which the State funds are not allocated or for which limited allocations are made. These needs include faculty research, financial assistance to graduate students, attraction of faculty, and increased faculty and student participation in special seminars and conferences.

The new chairman joined Reynolds in 1965 as controller, was elected financial vice president and member of the board of directors in 1971 and in 1973 was elected executive vice president and a member of the executive committee of the board of directors. He was elected president in 1975.

Students Dial for Dollars

Students at William and Mary were recently "dialing for dollars."

They called William and Mary parents--not just their own--across the entire nation to solicit donations for the 1976 Parents' Fund. The student volunteers in three nights telephoned about 1,400 parents and collected 425 pledges totaling nearly $15,000.

The Parents' Phonathon, according to Leonard A. Meyer, director for annual giving, ran 20 percent ahead of last year's pace.

The students called parents in almost every state in the union, but avoided telephoning parents who live in foreign countries. Not only would the cost of the call be extremely high, said Meyer, but "we were afraid of waking someone up at three in the morning.

Kathy Hirschi of Richmond, a freshman volunteer, said she "never knew what to expect" from the assortment of parents she called. "One man in Florida said that he just couldn't believe he was talking with a student who'd called him all the way from Williamsburg," she said.

Many parents commended the students for volunteering their time to "personalize" fund-raising. Often they wanted to know what was going on at the campus, and whether the student callers were prepared for the trials and tribulations of the approaching exam period.

Because approximately 70 percent of William and Mary's undergraduate enrollment is from Virginia, most calls were placed on the state's SCATS lines.

Additional pledges, combined with the results of several direct mail campaigns, should boost the annual Parents' Fund to over $50,000. Meyer said that the College allocates the funds received through the solicitation of parents for purposes for which the state does not appropriate money or for which supplementary money is required. Funds are used for instructional equipment and materials, faculty and student research, financial support for students, and programs for cultural enrichment.

The College and the Nation Celebrate Together

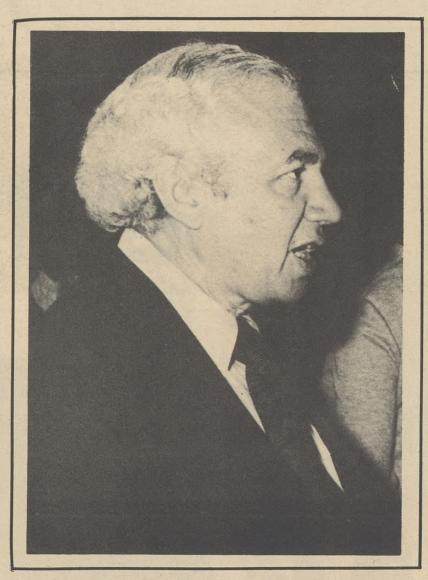

A delegation from the College that included the William and Mary Choir, 20 students participating in the Washington Program, and President Graves traveled to the nation's capital in April to take part in a variety of activities. variety of activities.

The choir, which sang during a ceremony at the Jefferson Memorial, received a personal word of approval from the ceremony's special guest speaker--President Gerald Ford. President Graves and a group of alumni were also on hand to present a copy of "Their Majesties' Royall Colledge" to Secretary of the Interior Thomas F. Kleppe. Later in the day, Graves joined participants in the Washington Program at the White House, where he again made a presentation of Jack Morpurgo's new history of the College, this time to the President of the United States.

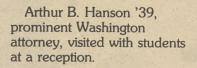

President Ford Pays Tribute to Thomas Jefferson and Graves Presents New Morpurgo History

Milton Friedman, a W&M alumnus and now a special assistant and speech writer to President Ford conducted one of the seminars connected with The Washington Program.

President Graves

President Ford, surrounded by a host of Congressmen, signs a bill declaring April 13 as "Thomas Jefferson Day." The table used for the signing is the same table where Jefferson sat to sign the Declaration of Independence almost 200 years ago. Among the congressmen on hand were Representative Thomas Downing, far left, and Senator Harry F. Byrd, Jr., directly behind President Ford.

Humphrey and Reston Offer Insights On "American Presidential Leadership"

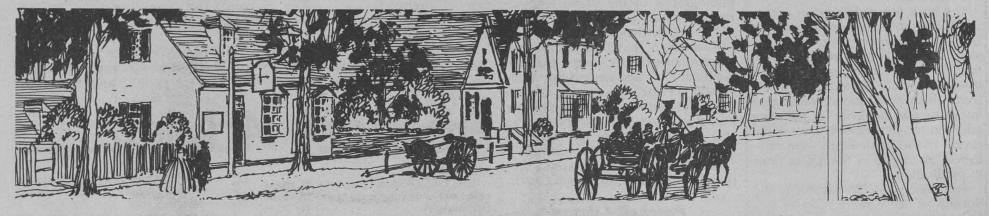

Before President Graves presented Senator Byrd with the history, Board of Visitors Rector John R.L. Johnson Jr. gave Virginia's senior senator a specially-folded dollar bill. A Japanese folding expert had shrunk the dollar bill to about the size Johnson said it was worth in today's marketplace. Byrd said he would give the dollar to someone who'd be sure to appreciate Johnson's point--Secretary of the Treasury William Simon.

Rosbotham '71 Publishes Book

Lyle Rosbotham '71 has produced a pictorial journey through Jamestown Island in Virginia as the colonists might have seen it when they landed in 1607.

Rosbotham's book is titled Jamestown Island. Printed by Josten's/ American Yearbook Company, it sells for $5 in shops around Williamsburg and Jamestown.

Three years of photography have gone into the book which is comprised of a collection of stunning color photographs of the island, supplemented by quotations from writings of the first settlers. Rosbotham, a Williamsburg freelance photographer, notes that the National Park Service and the Association for the Preservation of Virginia Antiquities have allowed the island to revert to its natural state so that it now "closely resembles its appearance of almost 400 years ago."

Rosbotham's photographs frequently appear in the Alumni Gazette.

The Class of '25 salutes Dr. R. Wayne Kernodle who recently had conferred upon him the honor of Thirteenth Recipient of the Thomas Jefferson Award. This honor recognizes Dr. Kernodle for his "significant service through his personal activities, his influence and his leadership at William and Mary". Dr. Kernodle, who taught Sociology at the College thirty-one years, has served as Chairman of the Department of Sociology and Anthropology for twenty years of that period and during that time earned the gratitude of the College, the community and the academic profession. In receiving this award he "was cited for exemplifying through his life, his character and his influence the principles and ideals of Thomas Jefferson". It was my good fortune the summer of 1951, to have a class under Dr. Kernodle. My daughter who was a student at Hollins at the time wished to take some courses at the College which she could not work into her Hollins' schedule so she and I commuted daily - she taking three classes - I two and an hour in the library - It was one of the happiest experiences in my life! And is Dr. Kernodle an excellent Prof! He is the best -- an hour seemed like fifteen minutes -- He knew so well how to capture and hold our attention. Yes, he so richly deserved that Thomas Jefferson Award. We of the Class of '25 extend our sincere congratulations to you, Dr. Ker-

Did you know that the Admissions Office has recently mailed 1,020 letters of acceptance to potential Freshmen, and 86 transfer places. Our College has really grown since 1925. I don't know about you but I'm kinda glad I was a student "way back when" - and all of the students knew each other and the Faculty knew all of us - just one big happy family! We were seldom in a rush but would stroll casually across the campus unless we overslept and had to run to make that "first class" before Doc Billups "pulled the cord". I always did hate to get up early - still do - and many was the time I'd dash up the steps for that "first class" and dear ole Doc would say, "Hurry up Miss Smith --I'll hold the bell 'til you get in your classroom" - and so he did.

By the way, I had some correspondence from Carl Andrews recently which I appreciated so very much. Ouote -"Thank you and Suzanne for the picture of old "Dammit" who was the favorite of everyone. The name was acquired when someone kicked him and yelled, "Get out of the way, damn it!" I recall he lived mostly in the Deanery with the Kappa's. He was a collie-dachshund mix and always amicable". Thanks, Carl, for sharing this information with us in case some may have forgotten. Several have written mentioning "Dammit" and how good it was to see the "little ole fella" again. Thanks, Suzanne. Thanks, Marjorie.

By the way, aren't you thrilled with your copy of "Their Majesties" Royall Colledge" in the Seventeenth and Eighteenth Centuries! It is indeed "a comprehensive history of the early years of William and Mary". You do know that the author was a student at the College and Dr. Swem prophesied he would write the history of the College. He was Class of '38. If you haven't ordered a copy, by all means do so. It is a delightful piece of literature and I highly compliment Jack Morpurgo on the excellent research involved and what a great contribution he has made. We feel deeply indebted and extremely proud that an alumnus can be credited for so great a contribution.

Have any alumni chapter meetings been held near you? The Alumni Office reported twelve which have been held between February 19th and 29th. Our Gordon Vliet presented the programs in several places and in San Diego he presented the chapter with its official charter. Two of our classmates were in attendance in Tampa in February, Dot and Red Campbell. They report that it was a very good meeting with about 80 in attendance. It was conducted by our own Joan Harrigan of the Alumni Office and by the Royal Scholar, David Taylor, from London. The majority present were from 1940 - '55 classes

Dot and Red have had a great event, their Golden Wedding Anniversary! They dolled up and went out for dinner. As they entered the dining room they were greeted by their children and their mates. Wasn't that a great surprise! It really was a great celebration. I bet the tears flowed, don't you -- But they soon turned into laughter and a big evening transpired -- one never to be forgotten. Congratulations to you both from the Class of '25 -- and may we live to read about that Diamond Celebration! They were planning to leave for home on March 28, at the time of their writing. Dot concluded with, "Expect to have a house full of company for the Masters Golf Tournament the first part of April Well, this is that time -- first of April -- so I can just picture you two busy little beavers.
Frances Sanders Ennis writes she really has no news this time but I can tell you she isn't sitting at home twiddling her thumbs. She did say that John loves his work new work - is busy every day and doing a good job. To my knowledge they haven't had the flu, and in my book, that is a real achievement these days.

Mary Gilliam Hughes writes, "No news from the Hughes Ranch", but she did write that she plans to enter The Eye Hospital in Richmond on March 30, and that she anticipates being there approximately two weeks. With the good old high kicking spirit of hers she concludes, "Then just watch it! I'll be seeing things from all directions and on the move again." Good Gal, keep those spirits high and just know we are all wishing you a speedy recovery.

Swanson, I was sorry I did not have any information on hand I could send you, but I hope you followed my suggestion and the College complied. It's always good to hear from you and Jessie whether or not you send news - just to see that "Swanson" signature. Be sure to keep notes on your activities from

The average age of museum directors is 52, said Ms. Stitt, and the average museum worker is much younger. Most professionals hired by history museums in the past two years have an average age of 35 years, she said, to emphasize the fact that the field, while not offering many jobs, also cannot be counted upon to offer the beginner much hope of attrition by retirements. She did add, however, that museums don't pay very well and many people leave for more lucrative occupations. Museum jobs, she said, tend to have larger titles than pay envelopes. A museum with a budget of $50,000 or less, she said, would probably be paying heating and light bills and the salary of one administrator to show the size of museum needed to afford a selection of jobs.

now until the end of July - I am confident much will be going on.

The Marion Reynolds, writing from St. Petersburg, tell us they are really living a retiree's life that one can hardly fail to envy. He participated in February in a National Rogue Club Tournament in Bartlett Park - 32 members from the U.S. and 1 from Canada. Also, there are baseball, basketball, shuffleboard, lawn bowling and tennis courts. Then to add to all this activity they are planning a 35-day cruise, leaving on May 15, covering the Caribbean and through the canal to Acapulco, Mazatlan, Los Angeles and return. When they return they will dash to Long Island to attend the wedding of the oldest granddaughter on June 26. What busy, busy people you two Retirees are. Keep it up! Anyone can stay

So good to hear from you, Garrett Dalton, from Naples, Fla. You and Madeline truly have had a most pleasant winter there I am confident, including that delightful eleven-day cruise with friends to the Caribbean and in between times a short visit back in Virginia. He writes, "We have seen many old friends here, some William and Mary including three of my fraternity brothers, Dr. Wes Wesson from Montclair, N.J., Mr. John Lee Johnson, Chadds Ford, Pa., and Dr. Lomax Wells from Washington, D.C. who is now a resident here and consequently I see frequently". Isn't it thrilling and satisfying to travel and find classmates, and better yet, frat brothers! The world is really so very small. Garrett and Madeline plan to return to Virginia in May, to attend the Board of Visitors of William and Mary meeting May 13-15, and to attend Commencement on the 16th. He concludes with, "I am looking forward to seeing all my old William and Mary friends, then." You will, Garrett, and enjoy each moment! Vernon Nunn writes that he and Liz left Williamsburg on January 12, arriving at Jekyll Island on the 15th after one stop-over in Savannah, Ga., for a little sightseeing. He writes, "Everything went well until the 26th when I was admitted to the Brunswick Hospital as an emergency patient and underwent surgery." He left the hospital February 2, and had delightful trips around the immediate area -- then -- desirous of more attention (you see he had gotten spoiled) he spilled hot grease on his hand while cooking breakfast. However, his doctor was of "the very best" and his hospital care was excellent. Their friends have been wonderful to Liz and they are supervising his daily activities in an effort to see that he does not overdo. Such a nice compliment he paid Liz, "Liz has been wonderful through it all". Liz is a great gal, Vernon. Now their two and one-half months vacation is over, and I am confident that by now they are enjoying "Springtime in Virginia". . and especially in dear old Williamsburg. Vernon, we are indeed sorry to learn of your surgery and horrible burns. It shouldn't happen to such a nice person as you. Do take care of that hand and may your trip back next year bring no mishaps, only much pleasure.

She continues - "I have the flu and need a cheerful word from you - I'd be thrilled to hear what you are doing. I'm still a poet. People have been so wonderful to honor my efforts. I have just received a Diploma from the International Register of Profiles and also a Bronze Plaque for distinguished achievement as recorded in the International Register of Profiles - a book limited to 1,000 Americans and which will be off press this spring. I wish you all everything wonderful". How about sending copies of some of your works? I would love to read your poems. I am confident other classmates would feel just as I do. We are indeed proud of your achievements, Alice, and start now making notes until the end of July and then share your successes, good times and achievements with us. We hope you are fully recovered from the flu and enjoying this beautiful weather. Alice's address is: 109 Saddletree Road, San Antonio, Tex.

Tony Everett, since yours was the last news received, I have saved it for last to share. No-that is not the reason at all. The real reason is you always write as if life is one enjoyable event after the other - a happy vein - and that is the way life should be - especially in our later years. Tony was at Nags Head, N.C., the first week in March. I loved his description - "I had a beautiful weekend at Nags Head. I love that place - so much is yet unspoiled and the sky, the sand and the ocean - all have a very soothing effect". A few weeks ago he attended his cousin's Golden Wedding Anniversary in Richmond - "A beautiful dinner. Saw some old friends, spent the weekend. Went up to Washington, D.C., on Sunday with an opera group to hear the opera, "Othello" at Kennedy Center. Had a chartered bus for 38 and we had a great time. This took an entire day. We plan to do it again in April for the opera "Thais". He goes on to tell us that on April 28th he plans to attend the Bicentennial Gala Ballet performance at Chrysler Hall. This is a part of Norfolk's Annual Azalea Festival. At that time President Ford's daughter, Susan, will be honored, Queen Azalea XXIII. A formal reception will be given by the Board of Directors of the Norfolk Civic Ballet. His plans are laid for Easter Sunday at which time he will have brunch at the Princess Anne Country Club, Virginia Beach and that evening attend a party at the Beach. Shortly much of Tony's time will be given over to gardening. He says, "I always look forward to that and I go off the deep end buying geraniums, petunias, etc. In between all of this we have our Barter Theatre, Little Theatre, Symphony and our Opera, "Barber of Seveille" coming up. On Palm Sunday he plans to be in Kilmarnock for worship at the Methodist Church, later to luncheon for several guest at Indian River Club. Now, Tony, when you say "Kilmar-nock" and "Indian River Club" you truly are speaking my language, for I love visiting friends there and the delicious food at the Well - seems like that is all, Classmates Have a summer filled with pleasant days, warm friendships and challenging events! 'Til August keep our Class of '25 column in mind and I shall keep you in my heart.

Joe Muscarelle of Maywood, N.J., is in the building and real estate development busi-He recently built and donated to Fairleigh Dickinson University in Teaneck a three-story Center for Building Construction Studies building at a cost of $1,400,000. He and his wife Margaret have three children, all married - each of them has five children . . . so he is a grandfather fifteen times.

M. Carl Andrews of Roanoke, Va., wrote that he realized something must be done to stir interest leading to our 50th reunion in 1977, and had considered taking on that burden in addition to everything else. However, a coronary laid him low in November, putting him in the hospital three weeks. He has been at home since recuperating. Carl was a heartless editor and wholeheartedly chopped copy poor writers (such as I) submitted; it is inconceivable that this heart should fail him even so momentarily as he says it has. I hope it recoups its active blue pencil and continues to delete poor performance, even its own, in a heartless manner. May he healthily proceed toward our 50th Reunion when we may meet. He writes, "Since I do correspond with some classmates and see others at Homecoming and elsewhere, maybe I can help you a bit." Carl sent in the following information.

Lee Todd was hit by a coronary (less severe than mine) just a month to the day before mine. He rebounded well, is now walking three miles a day, and resumed his medical practice on reduced scale the first of January As you know, he took over the OWI presidency from me on that date. Now I can concentrate on helping people at other universities organize OWJ Chapters.

Art Matsu is still engaged in the real estate business in Phoenix.

Ed Wilshin, a new OWJ member, worked for Bob Wallace in the Pocahontas Tea Room for three years. He spent the winter with his wife at Dana Pt., Calif., near LA. He lives in Baltimore but cultivates his garden down at Irvington, Va.

Tiny Grove, who always seems to be a center of attraction at Homecoming and OWJ dinners, is a retired school superintendent at Hamilton, Va., and keeps busy with civic activities. He is still the same old good natured, loveable fellow.

Ray Simmons, who also lives in Baltimore, founded his own business after leaving IBM. One of his sons took over but Ray still goes to the office two or three times a week, he writes Cotton Rawls of Darien, Conn., is still active as a surgeon at Stamford, Conn., and recently was named to the Stamford Hospital Board of Trustees, one of the first doctors so appointed. He has been Head Surgeon for years. He is also a director of two banks.

Kitty Marshall is as pretty as in student days (I see her in Newport News) quite chipper and much devoted to her children, grandchildren and church work.

Cotton writes me that Fax Griffith now lives just 30 miles away and they frequently get together and discuss those wonderful days at the College. He says she looks great.

Among those always present at Homecoming and OWJ affairs is Quinby (Hoss) Hines. It's always good to see him and his wife, Liz Jennings, who, like Kitty, continues to look

Miller is Kansan of the Year. Nyle H. Miller, Executive Secretary of the Kansas Historical Society, is "Mr. Kansas" for 1976. The honor conferred by the Native Sons and Daughters of Kansas comes in the last year of Miller's 45-year career in Kansas history. He is going to retire at the end of 1976 - he says. It is hard to think of the Kansas Historical Society without thinking of Nyle Miller. He's been Executive Secretary since 1951, and was a staff member for 20 years before that. It's been a long time. State Senator John Crofoot, President of the Native Sons, summed up Miller's gift to his state very well: "Few people have served their native state as well as has Nyle H. Miller. If, in this bicentennial year, anyone deserves to be called 'Mr. Kansas', then that person certainly is he, for no one has done more to preserve the history of our state". Miller was born in 1907 in Anthony. He has written several books, all on one facet or another of Kansas. Naturally! As Kansan of the Year for 1976, Miller joins two former Misses America, Debbie Bryant and Debbie Barnes, track star Jim Ryun, Dr. Karl A. Menninger, Lyle E. Yost, President of Hesston Corporation, Heston, and Edward T. McNally, President of McNally Pittsburg Mfg. Corp., Pittsburg. It's an illustrious company. Miller's motto, if he had one over his desk, probably would read simply: "Service". The word has been a keynote of his career. Anytime requested data from the Historical Society's amazing resources was not forthcoming, it was because the information simply was not there. Miller's efficient staff would have found it if it were. The attitude is inspired by the staff's admiration for the man. He doesn't push his workers. He leads them. When he hangs up his spurs after 45 years, he'll leave a big vacancy. The Kansan of the Year honor is well deserved. His address is Kansas State Historical Society, 10th and Jackson Streets, Topeka, Kan. 66612.

Hi, everyone! As you read this, I suspect you will be making plans for summer. Why not visit Williamsburg to see the changes in the town and the College?

The Reverend Morris F. Elliot has retired as rector of Emmanuel Episcopal Church, San Angelo, Tex., as of May 1974. He is now Rector Emeritus. Another retiree is The Honorable Joseph N. Cridlin of Jonesville, Va. He has retired as Judge of the 30th Judicial Circuit, Commonwealth of Va., on July 15, 1975. Jean Matlock Hull who for 32 years worked with the State of California Employment Service, and served as manager of Youth Opportunity Center in San Jose, Calif., has now retired and returned to her hometown of Rushville, Ind. May these three have many new and happy adventures during their retirement years.

Alice Herzberg Galea has changed her address in Austrailia. She taught English language and literature in Malta, Malaysia, and the capital of Australia for 26 years. Now she has moved across the continent to a suburb of Perth where her two daughters and their families live. Her new address is 90 Milne Street, Bayswater, W.A., Austrailia, 6053. Best of luck to you, Al Danzig who is a native of Schenectady, N.Y., and married to the former Lois Blanchard of Ticonderoga, has been made Vice President of Colonie Affiliates, an auto merchandising, insurance & real estate organization. Al also serves on the Board of the Albany Chapter, American Red Cross and the Board of Multiple Sclerosis Society, and works for the United Fund, Cerebral Palsy, Muscular Dystrophy, and other community projects. He is also an accomplished speaker, and travels throughout the state talking on a wide variety of subjects.

John W. Yeaman of Martinsville, Va., sent me a very interesting article from the Martinsville Bulletin. It seems that Johnny has had an interesting and varied life. Here are a few of the highlights from the paper. Quoting, "the born salesman takes his customers with him wherever he may go". He is now a car salesman, however, he was a stockbroker from 1941-1966, and sold real estate prior to that. He is an avid golfer who has won many trophies, and belongs or has belonged to many of the golf clubs in the area. He won the President's Cup at Sedgefield. While playing at the Greenbrier in West Virginia, one year in his foursome was Sid Luft who was then Judy Garland's husband. John and his wife also met the Duke of Windsor and his wife, as the Duke was in the foursome ahead of them. Johnny also likes to fish, even just to see if they are still running. His wife is the former Christine Pannill. They have three children, a married daughter in Chapel Hill, N.C., a son who lives at home, and another in New Mexico "exercising his painting talent".

What fun to hear from you! Let's plan to meet in Williamsburg for Homecoming this fall, and turn back the clock 43 years. (Briefly, at least) Be sure to sign the roster at the Alumni House, then we know who is there and where each is staying.

Mrs. J. Paul Kent (Eleanor Martin) 616 Campbell Avenue Altavista, Va. 24517

Nostalgia time! Spring in Williamsburg lazy strolls, sunburns at Yorktown, rain, gazing out classroom windows, walking the length of Duke of Gloucester Street, marvelous cokes, Saturday night dances, romance, bull sessions, deep philosophical talks - and more talks, etc., etc., etc. Great times, eh? And there's still that special Williamsburg and campus atmosphere to enjoy - in different ways, of course, such as Homecoming.

Marion Beavers writes from Tallahassee, Fla. "We had a great time at Homecoming and love you all. Ken keeps busy with his job and jewelry work. Marion enjoys her church, home, and drum." No dull moments for Marion and Ken, what with all their activities and children and grandchildren.

Ann Pharr Goodykoontz of Louisville, Ky., missed the big reunion in '74 because she was visiting her daughter and husband, then based with the Air Force in Italy. She reported that they had returned stateside and that the Goodykoontz family (all four children and families) were looking forward to a fine Christmas (1975).

Betsy Richardson Popof praises Prescott, Az., as the retirement place par excellence. She and husband are busy and happy there but one ingredient is lacking - more William and Mary alumni to join the fun.

Ray Dudley has retired from his position as peanut broker for the Jack Cockey Brokerage Company. He lives in Suffolk, Va.

Henry V. Strand of Silver Spring, Md., advises that he too has retired.

The next issue in which our class news will be entered will be published in the fall. That means more time for gathering news of the '39 troops. Keep us informed. It's not too early to start planning for the usual brilliant 1939 class reunion activities. Get out your B. Goodman and H. Kemp records, practice a few steps, rest awhile, try again - and then you'll be ready for the dance. Or, just sit and listen to all that great music, which is making a comeback (Don't write 'em like that anymore, do they?). Have a happy summer.

If you noticed the skimpy news in your last column, send mental sympathy: I burned my writing paw! No writing or typing for a month. Meanwhile, back at the old typing machine, holiday cards brought some news: B.B. Rollins Blandford wrote that she expected the family for a visit; from Atlanta Pet and Pete Marlatt came thru saying son Dave is looking at colleges, son Andy's a freshman and looking for better grades, son Doug is looking into the new world of CB radios, Pete has been looking into the countries South of the Border, while Mom is looking for peace and order. Let me hear an amen for peace and order. Jay and Buck Hayle should be settled in a new domicile in St. Louis, Mo. Would you believe a natural Tarheel native is ensconced in her mountain home in West Va.? Pat Dancy Hall says she really enjoys her work as Chief of Social Work Dept. at the VA Hosp.; daughter Bly is working for Social Security in Greensboro and son Steve is a freshman at Louisburg College .

. .also she sez we should be making reunion plans . . . years get by too fast when we run into the half-century mark. Mary Daffron Cheap has been making ripples in the academic pond; she's been a grad assist. since getting her master's in June '74 at the Inst. of Community Devel. at the U. of Louisville--in charge of special programs. Congrats.

MYSTERY CARD--Thanks to the Riddle family? Betty Cutshall Allman says they managed a quick European trip--after all the politicians leave 'em alone in Manchester, N.H., she and Lee are hoping to find familiar faces on the Lucerne excurion in June.

Talk about romantic? Would you believe a 25th wedding anniv. in Istanbul? Jane Heller Frieden and her husband planned it. They also enjoyed the W&M London tour in '74. Jane is teaching a new course of Art for teachers of Special Ed. at U. Va. ext. in Norfolk.

A first in Va. . . Congrats. Edie Horn, you blew it—the deadline has descended and your letter didn't. Nice to hear that Tina Carr made the alum reception in D.C., for the W&M-GW game. The alum meeting in Nov. was a great wine and cheese party in Hawaii, in the home of Andy and Barbara Egseth in Honolulu. The Atlanta get-together for Ga. alums as held at the home of Lesley Winingder in December. '76 has started off as a bad scene with mucho sickness of older family members, but in my case its mental . . . mis-read or mis-filed all notes for this literary gem. . .Hardening of the arteries having set in, we will move right along. Keep those cards and letters coming in, folks.

Finally, a most unusual letter: "Dear Mr. C: Remember me? I was with the group from Botetourt High School. You rented us the 4th floor of Bryan Hall for a month before they found out. You might be interested to know that Steve "Swing Thing" Abramson is now a media personality in Tidewater. Just the other night I was watching channel 10 and there he was doing a Polident commercial. In D.C., Bruce Hockman is still zooming about in his Jaguar and living in a townhouse on the outskirts of Georgetown. He is employed as a Transport Coordinator" for Bekins Van Lines. Bruce told me that Kinney Valz is now a certified "govamint" major. Besides his hobby of leaving brown envelopes in phone booths, Kinney is studying Elementary Ed. at Va. Wesleyan, running a political newspaper in Va. Beach, and working for various candidates while he waits for George Grayson's presidential bid. I still think of you every time I hear the Carpenters sing "Superstar". Love for-ever, Hilda Mae."

As for yours truly, I'm enjoying the hectic schedule of three jobs: I do news reporting, commercial production, and dabble in DJ-ing for WFMD and WFRE in Frederick, Md.; I'm a waiter at the Williamsburg-style Sir Walter Raleigh Inn (complete with a full-length mural of D.O.G. St.) in Georgetown; and I sing in the Washington Cathedral Choir of Men and Boys. Right now my main interest is organiz-"Town Crier Radio News," a radio news feed service which will provide coverage of the political conventions for southern and midwestern state radio networks (such as the North Carolina News Network). I'm looking forward to an exciting summer here in D.C. and at the conventions. Hope yours is enjoyable, too. And please take time to write of your experiences, travel, and friends.

WILLIAMSBURG, VIRGINIA 23185

W&M Joins Jefferson Observance

President Graves gives President Ford copy of "Their Majesties' Royall Colledge."

President Ford met groups from William and Mary twice the same day on the Bicentennial birthday commemoration of Thomas Jefferson, the College's distinguished alumnus.

Neither encounter was expected when college officials began making plans for sending the two groups April 13 to Washington.

The William and Mary Choir had accepted the invitation of the Department of Interior to sing during a ceremony on Jefferson's birthday at the Thomas Jefferson Memorial. Thomas Kleppe, Secretary of the Interior, had planned to be the speaker on the occasion, and William and Mary President Thomas A. Graves, Jr. was invited to comment on the Choir and William and Mary's role in the education of the author of the Declaration of Independence.

Two days before the ceremony was to take place, however, President Ford agreed to Kleppe's early request to appear at the ceremony. He became the speaker for the program--pre-empting both Kleppe and Graves, but not the 50-voice Choir.

Following his remarks, Ford strode over the Choir to chat with Director Frank Lendrim and the students. He recalled having met them on January 31, in Williamsburg, when Colonial Williamsburg arranged for the Choir to perform at a black-time dinner in honor of Ford's appearance at the General Assembly commemorative session in the Capitol. In January, Ford delayed his departure by 15 minutes in order to greet each Choir member and provide autographs.
